BLIND FIGHT GAME GIVES FANS DELIGHT SUNDAY

North Side Team Proves Worthy of Consideration and Loss by Narrow Margin.

Lavillo's pitching and a batting rally in the 8th, which netted three runs, proved Jerome's undoing.

After Jerome scored in the 1st on an error, the game was close and exciting until the faultless close in the 8th.

One of the best written and enlightening articles on the Panama tolls question and the interpretation of the Hay-Panncotele treaty was printed in the Saturday Evening Post the past week by David Jayne Hill. The elusive and misleading parts of the two distinct treaties are given in full and give light on the subject that changes radically the popular conception of the position assumed by this country. It should be read by every person desiring full information on the subject. The editor of the Times has upheld the president's position as the only honorable course for this nation and still believes that his position is the higher one which will eventually work out the best for this nation. However the article referred to shows that the subject is a debatable one and that the congressmen opposing the president may be conscientious in their attitude.

The citizens of Twin Falls should listen with attention to the proposition to build the electric line from Hagerman valley to this city which is put up to them by local men. It means added territory from which the Twin Falls business men can draw trade. It means increasing the attractiveness of this section to rancher home builders because of the added convenience. It means that this city will expand to the degree that its business and citizens make use of their opportunities. Every encouragement should be given the men who are willing to stake their money on the future of this fertile valley in building the proposed railroad. Twin Falls can well afford to pay and pay well if assured that she can be the center of a future network of interurban lines. Not one enterprising citizen can afford to throw up his hands on a chance to make this city grow.

The action of the bondholders' representative of the Twin Falls-Salt Lake investigation project in asking for restraining order for settlers concerning purposes and another. Now comes the legal department of the company and asks for restraining order in federal court to prevent the settlers from making a perfectly proper legal test of their rights. If such can be said to be complete then all recourse to law to gain justice must come under that head. The settlers attempted to make a peaceful settlement with the bondholders' representative while still outstanding for some vital points. The asking for a restraining order was the final action after all other means had failed and would seem to be far removed from the charge of conspiracy. It will be eagerly watched the argument before Judge Dietrich for the restraining order on a conspiracy charge. The Times believes that the settlers have for the most part acted with moderation and that the whole matter could have been settled had some moderation been manifested by the other side.

Critics of the President are asking if an administration that has so often refused to recognize Huerta's blood-stained dictatorship will not make a virtual ally of the no less sanguinary Villa. This question has been running of late through all discussions of the Mexican problem, and now the sweeping Constitutional victory at Tampico makes it clear that the answer can not be far off. Those who regard Villa as Mexico's man of destiny lay stress on his military conquests, his immense popularity with the Mexican people, his loyalty to the Madero program of restoring the land to the people, his professions of friendship towards the United States and his action in preventing both Carranza and Zapata from joining forces with Huerta against us after our retreat of Vera Cruz. Those, on the other hand, who see in him only a shrewd, blood-stained adventurer eager to make his entrapment of the United States, point to his early record as a bandit, the many crimes of violence charged against him and his tricky and evasive dealings with us in connection with the Huerta case. In all these discussions it seems to us to be assumed that while Carranza may remain the nominal head of the Constitutionalists, Villa will be the actual power behind the throne. In one of the recent Washington dispatches to the New York Sun (and) we read:

"Information obtained here tonight indicates that the United States officials are already looking forward to a plan of action on the part of the government when Huerta falls and Carranza, with the Constitutionalists, is in control of Mexico City. "There is good reason to believe that President Wilson intends to do everything possible when the Constitutionalists have once gained Mexico City, to assist them in the pacification of the entire Republic. Persons familiar with the President's views expect to see him propose the Joint Policing of Mexico by United States and Constitutional forces if he receives any encouragement from Carranza. "The fear expressed here is that Carranza, with his pronounced views against an American invasion of Mexico will be inclined to resent any suggestion of this character. It is certain that President Wilson, if the Constitutionalists are successful, will not be satisfied with any solution of the difficulty that fails to establish law and order throughout the Republic and falls short of relieving the United States of the harassing conditions that have existed for the last two or three years.

It is understood that this Government is particularly desirous of extending the mediation proceedings until the Constitutionalists have gained the ascendancy in Mexico City. The President will then have an avenue through which he might readily approach Carranza with suggestions as to the cooperation of the United States in pacifying the entire Republic."

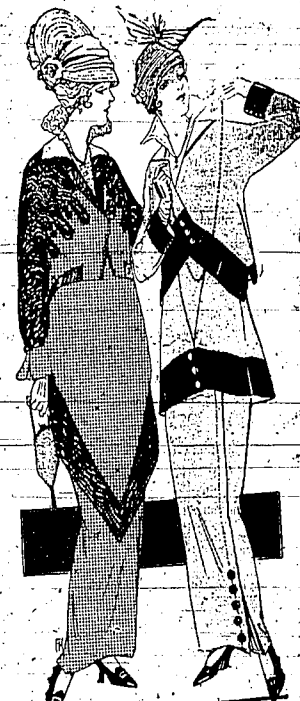

Some papers remind us that Carranza "renewed" our occupation of Vera Cruz, but that his expression of this resentment ceased abruptly after a visit from Villa. And they also recall Villa's reply when General Maas believed him to make common cause with Huerta that we may all march together against the invading Yankees." In rejecting this suggestion Villa directly accuses the Federalists of deserting and provoking the coming of the Americans in order that, by involving Mexico in a foreign war, they might save themselves from disaster. "With the pretext of a foreign war," he declares, "you seek to arm Mexicans whose sympathies are not with you but whose patriotism you exploit." He then, moreover, from the American staff correspondent of the New York World (Dom) with Gen. Panfili's green, that it was Villa's special envoy, Col. Pablo de la Garza, who persuaded Zapata to turn a deaf ear to Huerta's commissioner's preaching "a holy war against the Gringos." And more recently Villa has announced through the Associated Press his desire that "all Americans connected with industries in Mexico" "suspend their business and take up their arms" and that they shall "give nothing to the Gringos" and "not to be over come to war between Mexico and the United States." In the same Green it is pointed out that the "political embargo on arms" "is not the U. S. strategic policy" and is "intended seriously with the plans of the Constitutionalists." At this point many of his earlier victories were due to the filling of the embargo, he goes on to say:

"Mexico must be unified and should be united quickly. My career will be ended quickly while we suffer from lack of ammunition. We can continue the struggle for better social and economic conditions by capturing our ammunition from the enemy, but such method would necessarily end the war over a long period. Every humankind's consideration argues for the lifting of the embargo."

"We have gone down to Mexico to serve Huerta. If we can find that the Gringos and President Wilson at the same ceremony in the Brooklyn Navy Yard for my finances and salaries paid by Vera Cruz, and the efforts pointed out that strange instrument that Villa have been used in the service of mankind. This point of view is strongly stated by Congressman Kent (Rep.) of California, who knows Mexico at first hand and has large interests there. He says:

"Now between us and a general war in Mexico there seems to be but one thing, and that is the fact that there is one man in Mexico, one strong man—Villa, hands to be sure, a child of ignorant Indian parents, who has an outlaw career because he was robber, assassin, and abductor, started out on the hypothesis that he must make war against Mexican society in accordance with the only code he knew, and that code justified his various machinations. With the little education he had he proved himself to be a great leader of men. That man has been continually growing, not alone in power, but in the knowledge of what the civilized world demands of him and in knowledge of the needs of his country. The testimony I have received from private sources is that he is a brave man who keeps his word. He has, in a crucial time, had the courage of his convictions, and the enlightenment to hold fast to his convictions, to believe our protestations of disinterestedness, and seems to possess such a marvelous power of leadership as to hold his people in the leash. We have now before us the choice of whether, in view of all the facts, we are willing to recognize this man as, in a measure, our ally, whether we are willing to accept his point of view in recognition with the great republic of South America, or whether we feel it incumbent on us to go into Mexico, and to declare war on the Mexican people, 15,000,000 in number, cannot understand us any more than we can understand them, and to fight through a war to its indefinitely distant conclusion."—Literary Digest.

SUN IN ECLIPSE AUGUST 21

Total in Portions of Europe, But Only Partial in the United States.

Washington, D. C., May 21.—The eclipse of the sun on August 21 will be total in part of Europe and Asia and partial in northeastern America—in the great republic of South America, or whether we feel it incumbent on us to go into Mexico, and to declare war on the Mexican people, 15,000,000 in number, cannot understand us any more than we can understand them, and to fight through a war to its indefinitely distant conclusion."—Literary Digest.

On August 21, 1914, the moon will pass exactly between the earth and the sun, and there will be a total solar eclipse. It will not be observed in America, except in a small partial eclipse at San Juan in the northern states and Canada; but in Fergana, Russia and Scandinavia the full effect will be seen.

Although the moon looks about the same size as the sun, it is very much smaller and nearer. The sun is 865,000 miles in diameter and 93,000,000 miles away; while the moon is 2,163 miles in diameter and 239,000 miles away. On account of the moon's small size compared to the sun, the shadow cast by the moon is a cone, and the point of this cone just barely reaches the earth.

In the August eclipse the diameter of the cone at the earth's surface is only about 85 miles; so that the eclipse is visible as total only in a belt about 85 miles wide, stretching over the continent's main slope. The important cities of St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Chicago, St. Paul, and St. Louis are in the center of this belt. It passes about a hundred miles north of St. Paul and St. Louis. The eclipse will be seen as partial over a very wide area, including northeastern America, Greenland, Europe, half of Asia and half of Africa. Within this region only a portion of the sun's disk will be visible to the moon.

There will be total eclipses visible in the United States on June 8, 1913, September 10, 1923, and January 2, 1915.

EXTENSION FOR NORTH SIDE

Final Proposition Presented by the Bondholders.

Yesterday, we believe, marked an epoch in the history of the North Side tract which means progress and prosperity from this time on.

The above proposition is called forth by a visit here from Mr. H. W. Shepherd, representative of the bondholders, who are now in possession of the tract, and who presented a proposition that cannot help but be the instrument of putting the tract on a firm financial basis, and a relief to the settlers on the same.

A hurried meeting of the directors of the Canal Finance Association was called at the telephone instance of Mr. Shepherd, who was in Boise, where he presented his plans to the directors, asking for their approval of an amended contract which had been prepared for the consideration of the settlers on the north side tract. This was approved by them. The proposition, as submitted to the directors is along about the same lines as has heretofore been discussed in these columns, namely, "to compute the amount to be advanced to the company on all indebtedness due the company as of March 1st, 1914, including back payments, interest and maintenance, the same to be included into one general obligation, the new principal to draw interest at the rate of 6 per cent to be payable annually, no payment to be made until 1919, when 2 per cent of the same shall become due, six per cent in 1920, etc., last payment to be made in 1929. The conditions of the proposition provide that the company shall go ahead with the completion of this system, and in order to ascertain what work is necessary for its completion, the settlers are asked to name an engineer, the company to name an engineer who, in company with the state engineer, shall carefully investigate the system, that a definite under-estimation may be arrived at as to the work that should be done at once, and what should be deferred. Mr. Shepherd also advised the board that the work on the Jackson Lake reservoir was now proceeding apace, and would be carried forward to completion as fast as practical; the money for the same having been advanced to the government by the bondholders. The board of directors of the new North Side Canal Co. is composed of nine members and it is the desire of Mr. Shepherd, which is embodied in the proposition, that the settlers on the tract nominate two of their members who will be elected as members of the board of directors. In 1914, the settlers will elect four members, and in 1916, they will elect six members, while the rest of them in control of the board. Relative to the maintenance charge for 1914, it will remain at 35 cents per acre until November next, after which time it will be under cultivation, an application to the government to purchase the tract shall be made, and the actual cost thereof, including administration, operation, repairs, etc., which amount shall be determined by the board of directors, upon which the settlers are represented by two members. We should be pleased to give space on general petioles if you wish to be volunuous to attempt it this week. While there may be some questions subject to argument, it must be the desire of the government to purchase these lands in units as fast as they are properly relinquished, and the desire of the government to purchase them in a hard matter to obtain a system of the same. There are many inter-stink details connected with this new arrangement which would give us pleasure to chronicle, but there is a limit, and here we discuss the matter in future issues. But more that matters have assumed a tangible shape, and the settlers here have been given an open declaration of what the new management expects to do, there is no longer any need of holding back but it is the duty of everyone who has interests here to put their shoulders to the wheel and push a good thing along—Jerome Times.

WAYS-OF-THE-SOUBRETTE

Young Fellow From Hurley Got Mash on the Girls.

Doubtless by this time Van Pelt, that eight-year-old boy of Hurley, this state, figures that the "fast" nature of the footlights is all the better effect of pretty makeup is a delusion and a snare, calculated to lead many tender affections, and causing one to wander from his own free will. It has happened ere now, and still might, older men than Van Pelt. It appears that Van saw a slinky and tender bit of femininity with a traveling show at Hurley, and his long "Shoofly" was attracted and attracted on the trail of the object of his affections, following her to Paradise, where he found in many "chickens" that he became rather confused and landed in the clutches of the police. His fate however was not in a regular path, it appears. He was given several days on the industrial equal to work his fever out of his system. In the meantime, water families from his way from Hurley to lead home the product, and to gently inform him that such business as checking a sourette is unbecomingly and expensive, and quite unbecoming the years of any individual, but the head of the house or other more experienced person—Paradise Tribune.

But this year there has been a change for the better. For this year, the circus has added to its attraction Buffalo Bill himself with all the rings, ropers, the Indians, the ranch girls, the cowboys and other features that formed the chief attractions of his Wild West Show in former years, and now the circus instead of being the old name, carries the title of the Sells-Floto circus and Buffalo Bill (himself).

CHAPTER IX.
A Disappearance.

It was Curlew who planned to over-whelm Capt. Tom Phinney with momentary but discursive, she must have been eminently well pleased with the result; in point of fact she made no effort to conceal her amusement; but in a moment a change came over him that first startled her, and then dis-ayed her for something had hap-pened that she had not foreseen and could not comprehend now.

First of all it occurred to him, that if this was Miss Curlew, the smiling adulator had suggested to her, be-cause there was no hinting the fact that she was a free agent; there could be, therefore, no clash of interests, or else—if the alternative were true—she was allied with Max Willard and against her uncle and guardian, and "summer" her coming to see him, but by degrees he assumed a certain dignity that was new to the girl, and it promptly dampened her sunny humor.

"God! How I Do Love You!"

"Captain Phinney—Tom!" she ex-claimed. "What is it? What have I done?"

He smiled a bit wistfully.

"You? Nothing. All that has hap-pened is that I have a doubt as to the de-termined foot of myself—and I un-derstand who women are concerned."

She stared at him blankly, uncom-prehensibly.

"Honor bright," she presently de-clared, "I do not understand I cannot see why you should be so affected."

He reached forward with a quick, impulsive motion—and caught one of her hands.

"I express it means nothing to you that I have learned to love you. I suppose it means nothing to you that you are the niece of my best friend, and that I must give you up. I sup-pose it means nothing to you that I will keep right on loving you because I can't help myself, but must put on a grin to hide it from him—from every-body—God!—How I do love you!"

She was silent for a moment, a my-riad of thoughts racing through her mind. Her regard had remained steadfast-ly locked with his throughout this im-promptu drama, nor did it waver now. Quietly she told him:

"You are hurting me, Tom."

"In a swift revulsion of feeling, he dropped her hand.

"Positive me?" he begged. "I am be-lievable myself. A fellow can't get used to a thing like this all at once—minutely. But, believe me, Miss Curlew, I'll never bother you again. He'll be the second I start hear you when I stand blindfolded before you, unless you come to me where I lay, head down, and say, 'I did not see you!'—then I'll let you go."

"I don't want to see you!" she said, still blindfolded; when we came face to face, I would not know you."

"I have been thinking of you all the time," she said, "but I don't want to forget a single detail of my dream. Now, I am awake."

"She suggested that with an abrupt cut of tongue, she turned away with a stamp of one foot—her eyes were snapping.

"Tom Phinney! Stop that sort of talk. You make me tired!"

"I have nothing more to say to you," she said. "Well, I have. All at once her voice broke. "You are the stupidest, most exasperating man I ever knew. And I—I—don't know whether to laugh or cry!" And doing both, she darted suddenly from the room.

Miss Curlew had not been gone a minute before the stranger he had ac-cepted the previous day appeared in the doorway.

"Can I have a word with you, cap-tain?" said the man.

Tom's impatient of any interrup-tion at this juncture. He looked the intruder with a scowl and bluntly asked him what he wanted.

"The man stepped inside and closed the door.

"I have learned," said he, "that no one is allowed to go ashore; I don't particularly mind about that; but I may say rather bluntly, and I would like to send a message to my people. Would there be any objection to that?"

"The fellow's manner was further and fainter, and Tom was a bit puzzled. Before he could reply, the other drew a sealed envelope from his pocket and laid it on the table, and upon this he laid a too-teller bill.

"Wouldn't you like that letter ashore?" said the man, "and find a trustworthy messenger who will deliver it absolutely away, can you not reply, the man?"

"I'll never get picked up for an hour's easy work every day, but it's worth something to keep one's folks from worrying."

"Sleeping aside the bill, Tom mechanically picked up the envelope and glanced at it.

He did not start or betray by any sign that the address gave him a distinct shock of surprise; his suscepti-bilities were become enlivened to any fresh sensations of this nature; but nevertheless he was amazed to see that the name upon the envelope was one other than Mr. Phinney Flint, so-called names—when I can't not identify was police headquarters.

"My-uncle," explained the man, rilly.

"Very carefully Tom replaced the en-velopes and upon top of it the bill; then he leaned back and fixed the bill with a look.

"See here," he demanded with abrupt authority, "just how do you come to be on this yacht, anyhow?"

"The man's countenance expressed astonishment. "Honest Mr. Willard told you?" he asked.

"It makes no difference what Mr. Willard has told me," he asked you."

"This abrupt manner left the man un-dressed.

"Why, it was this way," he said rately. "My-uncle learned Thursday night that Mr. Willard was in town, looking for a young man to take the place of somebody that had been hired, I was wanting a job, had he put me wise to it. Mr. Willard was in something of a hurry, and it didn't take us long to strike a bargain."

"This explanation was illuminating. It required but a second's reflection to array the whole thing clear to Tom's mind and at the same time definitely fix the man's status.

Flint at that had struck Willard's trail; the latter's urgent need to find a man to take Collie's place had in some manner come to the detective's ears, and he had been quick to take advantage of it. Just now, in a gen-eral way what Willard wanted, and had hastily picked a Central office man that would fill the requirements. Manifestly there had been no time to post him, he was expected to commu-nicate with Flint as soon as the quarry was located—hence the letter.

"Tom was guided to a speedy de-cision by several considerations. To begin with, he had been no time to un-guessing the man might mean the upsetting of Willard's plans at the very moment of their fulfillment; to retain his good will would leave a rep-resentation of the advantage of the man; the man who could replace Willard if the latter's schemes really went to interfere. It would be the de-lete, it's role to wait and watch, and as John Collie's substitute he would be given excellent opportunities to learn what was going on.

"Sit down," said Tom sternly. "The man obeyed, he stood up and thrusting his hands into his jacket pockets, coolly surveyed the other.

"If I'm wrong," he went on, "what I know your uncle pretty well says it. The man gave him a quick, sharp glance, but said nothing. "I would advise you not to attempt to send that letter ashore. It's my opinion that you can serve Flint's ends better by doing just what Willard has employed you to do, and by trying not to excite Wil-lard's suspicions. You will earn a handsome dollar, won't you?"

"So Willard promised?" returned the man.

"You may depend on it," Tom as-sured him. "I have known for some time that Flint was looking for Wil-lard—and more especially for John Collie."

"The detective sharply interjected: "Ho on this yacht right now—dis-abled. That's why you happen to be here; you were hired to take his place. I'll see to it that he doesn't get away from you. Steer as you have oppor-tunities that old Flint would appre-ciate."

"The man no longer tried to dissem-ble.

"I see that you have no spotted all right. Cornelius is my name. What's the game? Phinney had no time to put me wise."

"He couldn't have told you as very much," replied Tom—"little more than I can myself. I am not in Willard's confidence, but I have the best of re-asons for knowing that whatever it is, he's up to it; it is strictly on the level."

"H'm-m-m." Cornelius mused, "that makes my position a bit difficult, doesn't it?"

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

What the Idaho Delegation is Doing in the Capital

(Special Correspondent)

Smith's Bill Referred.

Washington, D. C., May 29.—The Committee on Public Lands, of the House, has favorably considered the bill introduced by Representative Smith of Idaho, giving preference right of entry to prospective applicants applying for the designation of land for entry under the enlarged homestead act, and has authorized Representative French, who is a member of the committee, to make the report to the House.

This is one of the first bills introduced by Representative Smith at the opening of the present Congress and has been given the highest priority. In its favor. Under the existing law, those who seek out desirable location and make application to have the land designated for entry under the enlarged homestead act, have no assurance that they can enter the land in the event it is thrown open to entry, as a stranger who first reaches the land office could enter, although he may have expended no time or expense in having the land designated.

The proposed law does not disturb the present method of making application to have the land designated, but simply protects those who make the application, in giving the first chance to make an entry on the land selected.

French Will Not Abandon Race.

An Idaho story that Congressman French will abandon his race for United States Senator has just reached Washington and was promptly refuted by Mr. French. Mr. French said: "There is no truth in the silly talk of the slinkiest foundation for the story that I will not be a candidate for United States Senator. This story has doubtless been published here, but was probably started deliberately by the bureau that appears to be working overtime to misrepresent me before the people of Idaho."

"Since I made my announcement, the assurance of support from all over the state have been so overwhelming that I believe I shall be nominated for United States Senator."

Senator Brady Highly Honored.

When a committee of seven Senators was appointed last week from the United States Senate, to accompany President Wilson to New York to pay the nation's tribute of sympathy to the 19 marines and sailors who lost their lives at Vera Cruz, Idaho's junior senator had the distinction of being named a member of that committee. A like committee was appointed from the House by Representative French.

Senatorial Election Bill Passed.

The House has passed the Senate bill designed to furnish a temporary means of electing United States Senators by popular vote in those states whose legislatures have so far failed to put into effect the direct primary election law.

The bill is now ready for the signature of the president. The plan provided is similar to that utilized for the election of representatives at large in Congress.

French and other members of the Public Lands Committee reported yesterday a bill by the Chairman authorizing homesteaders and other Indian residents who may have purchased their lands, to make a second homestead entry, and the bill will be placed upon the house calendar at once.

OUR MUTUAL GIRL

The fascination of the personality of the Mutual Girl is getting more people interested every week. We wonder why so many people fall in love with the Mutual Girl. WHY once they see her, they come again and again. Here was the reason: It isn't what she does (though there's always great interest in that) or what she sees (though everybody is interested in that.) IT IS WHAT SHE IS—Her Personality.

The best people in our city make up parties to go and see her. The manager of the Mutual Film Exchange at Salt Lake City, tells us it's the same all over the country where our Mutual Girl series is being shown. For that reason, it is a feature—among other features—at our theatre. It must be, or so many of our patrons wouldn't be coming back every week to see this particular subject, which is shown every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

It Is One More Way to Make Time Fly

The Sign of the Winged Clock

In the front of our Theatre, means a show that will please nearly every theatre-goer. Our regular patrons come regular, because our attractions "please them." Some like the vaudeville best; some like the pictures; some like the Thanhouser dramas; some think Majestic Kay Beer or Domino is it, while a great many love those Keystone Comedies, where Roscoe Arbuckle, the fat guy, generally gets it in the neck. So you see, there's always something bound to please—a delightful combination.

GUARD ON CARPET

Vigilant Attack on Commander-in-Chief May Call For Investigation.

The National Guard of Idaho, and Adjutant General Patch may be up against a "swift" re-education from the president because of certain criticism that is contained in the last official bulletin of the National Guard, issued in this state.

Men familiar with military affairs, who have read the carrying, criticisms of the commander-in-chief of the army of the United States and the publicity given to the criticism, are said to claim that the statement coming as it does, from the head of a military organization, is a subject to investigation and probable court-martial of the author or authors, while some of them even go so far as to declare that it is a matter of investigation on the part of the war department.

Following are some of the jobs made out of the commander-in-chief.

"President Wilson and his advisors may be right and may be wrong. . . . If he is wrong his name will go down in history as being either a political coward at heart or a tool of a bunch of office holders."

"By office-resigning, no doubt our president will say that the chief of our army is very satisfactory to the United States and he will then have orders issued withdrawing our forces from Mexico. Will the American people stand for such tactics? No."

"What have we gained and what are the likely to be lost by following the policy of 'watchful waiting'?"

"We have not got rid of the Hun, the accomplished object of our policy."

"We have not consolidated the Mexican of either party, but have added mere a settlement of conflict and element of peace. When his country has sent home to us the remains of 25 men, who, when they went to Vera Cruz, expected to go down there to see their families."

"It is sincerely hoped that the president will soon hear the voice of the people, and that he will adopt a policy entirely more aggressive than that of 'watchful waiting.'"—Pocatello Tribune.

ARMY EATS GERMAN SPUDS

Farmers of Texas Indignant and Fail to Understand Situation.

Texas farmers are indignant at the importation of potatoes from Germany which will be fed the United States soldiers stationed on the Mexican border. Texas is a potato-growing state. She has great quantities to sell, and her farmers are notified to find the market taken away from them merely because potatoes can be brought in from Europe at a cent or two less than the price of the home-grown product. For it is certain that American farmers pay a good portion of the cost of maintaining and feeding American soldiers. But it seems that our un-American administration orders otherwise. That is the administration which the Texas farmers hope to elect. Perhaps they will judge their letter better than to do that.

Referring to the increase of 250,000,000 in the importations of foodstuffs for the first four months of the year, the New York Herald says: "Underwood free tariff, a pain of 25 per cent, the New York Herald says: 'New foodstuffs are produced by farmers. So the gain in foodstuffs for the first four months of the year than they did last year, and the loss of the American farmer will be decreased by a corresponding amount.'—Idaho Falls Register.

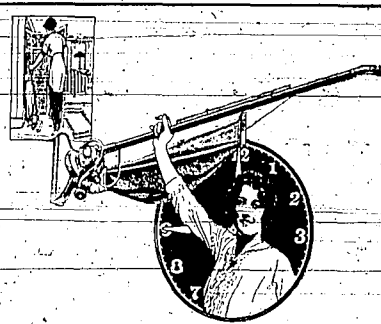

GOOD WORK BY PRISONERS

State's Experiment in the Gem District Satisfactory.

Prisoners taken to the Gem Irrigation district lands in Owyhee county under the direction of the land board and board of prison commissioners, are doing good work with the state. The state will have about 50 acres in crops this year while many more acres will be cleared, roads will be built and there will be more satisfied and much more useful to prisoners earning an honest living under the watchful eye of the state. This is the information that Warden John S. Sneek of the state penitentiary gave today.

Under the new policy of the state to employ prisoners of state work is meeting with excellent success so far and promises to continue so. At the present time the state has 16 convicts profitably employed outside the prison walls. They are divided between the Esklam ranch the state is farming on the Gem district, and the 10,000 acres of state land located in the heart of the Gem district. There are 12 men in the crew on the latter tract.

The first thing done before establishing the prisoners' camp was to sink a well. It was not over 200 feet and a flow of pure water struck. This water is being pumped 200 feet to the surface. The camp was laid out along the water line and competent guards placed in charge of the men. They are working to clear the land. A number of men are engaged daily upon the land preparing it for wood.
