A threatened strike of the employees of the Western railroads for a raise in wages looks like pretty serious business for the people of the west who are usual sufferers from most disputes between capital and labor.

The awful accident on the St. Lawrence river which caused the loss of nearly a thousand lives when the liner Empress of Ireland was cut in two by a collision is another monument to the character of all transportation companies on land and sea.

From all indications the two oldest parties in this state will not go far to record favoring state wide prohibition as great has become the popular demand in dry sections for such measure.

The visit of the Salt Lake business men to this city and the cordial attitude toward our business men here will on first analysis stand to be corrected by their purely selfish business interests.

CANADIAN BUSINESS MAY WORK TWO WAYS

Some of those carelessness persons and corporation managers, now apparently so over-scrupulous over the propriety of this nation's keeping its promises relative to the Panama canal.

The Stars and Stripes float over most of the ships passing through the Canadian canal, yet the ships carrying the United States flag do not have to pay toll.

One of the two canals there is owned by Canada and the other by the United States. Our waterway is entirely inadequate to handle the American business and much more of our traffic passes in our ships through the Canadian canal than through the United States canal.

One of the two canals there is owned by Canada and the other by the United States. Our waterway is entirely inadequate to handle the American business and much more of our traffic passes in our ships through the Canadian canal than through the United States canal.

Experts declare that the traffic passing through the Welland locks alone in United States ships on terms of exact equality with British ships equals the coastwise American trade that will pass through the Panama canal.

The American coastwise traffic that experts estimate will pass through the Panama canal will amount to only one-third-fifth of the American coastwise traffic passing through the " Soo."

Unqualified condemnation of President Wilson and his secretary of state is dealt out by almost all of the leading papers of Berlin and the German industrial centers.

"The wide old proverb has again spoken true, that we men can forgive how the theory he is adopting will turn out." The Wilson theory of managing Huerta has become thoroughly exposed in its falsity and certainly failed in moral success.

of Germans living in Mexico, and next for our commercial interests. We demand that the companies made at The Hague and at London with regard to the rights of neutrals in war by land and sea be observed." The writer proceeds to remark that as in the case of Benton these rights have been violated, "which is not to be wondered at when weakness and incompetence hold the helm." And the Frankfurter Zeitung declares:

nothing but affix a moral stigma on the peoples who refuse to do everything. That England—and the United States—behold. While we may have little sympathy with Mexico, no one can band with enthusiasm the policy of banishment pursued by the United States, whose sole aim is the possession of Mexico's oilwells." Buffalo Bill and Sells-Floto Shows, Monday.

TOLLS ARBITRATION APPROVED

Next Monday there will sound the blaring of happy music of many bands. There will come the trotting of horses on the circus bands—and it will be a big one too—go on riding and howling down the street. There will come also the rousing of wild animals. There will come happiness and pink lemonade and peanuts for the elephants—and a few for yourself. For Monday, the Sells-Floto circus and Buffalo Bill himself will be here—and it will be a circus worth going to see.

Senate Committee Provides for Arbitration.

Washington, June 13.—The senate foreign relations committee by a vote of 8 to 6 today adopted the Sutherland resolution directing the President to open negotiations with Great Britain for a special arbitration of the Panama toll dispute. The resolution now goes to the senate.

Buffalo Bill, his riders, his rovers, his Indians, his cowboys and rangers appear at every performance and they, with the addition of all the other new circus acts that have been added within the last year, now make the Sells-Floto-Buffalo Bill—the biggest in the world. And yet the price remains just the same as ever, a general admission of twenty-five cents.

Senator Johnson was not present when the vote was taken but later notified Chairman Sutherland that he wished to vote against the resolution.

When the opportunity to step right into a better position, with doubled salary comes, you'll be in line for it if you watch the classified ads.

And if there is any doubt as to the enlargement of the show within the last year, just take a look at the parade when the circus comes to town. Two miles long it will be, with two columns, with Buffalo Bill at the head of it, with the cages open and all the nine bands playing. It is to come at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning and will include a sample of everything in the circus.

If you are in need of anything, a Times Want Ad will fill your want.

THE EXPRESS IS IN THIS TOWN AND IN TO STAY

FOR seventy-five years—three-quarters of a century—the express has been the right-hand of the shippers of commercial America. The Express came to Twin Falls in 1904 and it came to stay. For 10 years it has been the right-hand of commercial Twin Falls.

It is here to stay. The other day when reports went out that the express companies might retire from business, a protest went up. From within this protest—the express companies? Not the merchants of the country—shippers everywhere—petitioned Congress that no action be taken that might have the effect of forcing the express companies to retire. Commercial organizations all over the land have joined in this appeal to Washington.

For seventy-five years in the past and for a good many more years in the future Express Service will mean.

GOOD ROADS

SURFACE DRAINAGE OF ROADS

Crown of a Road Should be Sufficient to Shed Water Rapidly.—Recommendation From Iowa.

Prof. J. J. DAVIDSON, Iowa State Agricultural College.

The roads should be provided with surface drainage. The cross section should be of such a shape as to shed all rain at once to the side ditches. To do this, the road must be oval or have a crown, must be smooth. The first of these is a matter of construction, and the latter of maintenance. The side drainage system should be called upon to carry as much water as possible. Water cannot be carried away by the tile drains until the water has sunk through the soil and softened it.

The crown of a road should be sufficient to shed the water readily. If the road is to be maintained and kept free from ruts and holes, less crown will do than if the road is to be neglected. The Iowa Highway commission recommended a slope one inch to one foot for a crown in the traveled way. This is sufficient for most conditions. The road should not be too great. A steep crown causes the travel to be concentrated at the center, where ruts will be worn and racking results. Again, there is some difficulty in ruts passing. On the side of the crown the wheels of the vehicles have tendency to grind the road down. The tops of the wheels are nearer the gutter than the bottoms. This action, together with the sweeping or flow action of the lower part of the wheel, has a very marked effect.

The steeper the slope of the road the more important the crown, for there is a tendency for the wheel to run down the track rather than to the side. If water once begins to run down the center of the roadway it is but a short time until the road is gullied out.

The Man of Iron was not of the stout that is easily frightened—else he would not have been the Man of Iron. He was taken unawares and rendered powerless—no who would not have been—but he was first to recover himself. His voice rang out with an authoritative command that the casket be removed.

"The intruder, with one hand still lying lightly at an end of the handsome casket, the other still holding his watch, calmly interposed: "Just a moment—if you please, I have only to press a trifling spring upon this bit of ornament and the explosion will be precipitated. I trust for your sakes; I don't care so much for myself—that will not force me to such an extreme."

"If there are some here prepared for any turn," if my right eye were to be recognized, then it is a matter of indifference to me whether I destroy myself along with the rest of you. I prefer not to do that of course, but I give you my word, at the first movement of opposition I shall terminate this unpleasant scene."

An impulsive movement of Theodore Van Veelton's was followed by a gasp of horror; for the strange man's self-possession and determined that nobody doubted his dispassionate declaration. It was only too obvious that he would do to the last extreme act which he had threatened.

The Man of Iron's face suddenly clenched, and he took a step toward the speaker. The man's magnetic eyes turned upon him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

Theodore Van Veelton—the quiet voice went on. "It favors the high feeling of respect and admiration which I entertain for your genius to see you assume the role of fool now."

"Theodore Van Veelton once more started toward the speaker, but a dozen hands stayed him. "You suddenly cried," he cried. "I shall give you a taste of flesh, but so help me God, you'll regret this night!"

"Heaven knows, I have regretted the necessity," responded Willard dryly. "With one single undulating movement of his powerful form, the tall, lithe man sprang from the casket, his hands held aloft in a gesture of defiance.

"Get that dynamite out of here!" he roared. Max Willard quietly corrected him: "I do not want you mean. Stepping over the back of the casket, he produced a handkerchief over the soft cushions while he seemed to consider. Presently he continued: "This does not affect me, there is no explosion here—nor any other explosive."

Like a stung lion, Theodore Van Veelton turned upon him. "What do you mean by that?" he demanded. "Simply that I have sat in at your own game—and won. The great American game of bluff, Theodore; you were pretty good at it years ago at Harvard. I have not forgotten."

manner unchanged, he said to Willard: "Stop that thing!" "You certainly returned Willard, hastily feeling with deft fingers among the padded cushions. His hands found a certain position and hovered in a certain of readiness. The narrowing circle of light on the wall behind him "That you win," announced the Man of Iron, shortly. The clockwork ceased like a period to this utterance. Mr. Van Veelton returned to his place at the table head.

It was characteristic of the regard in which the Man of Iron was universally held that Max Willard asked for no further assurance. He might take any advantage of you in which he was pleased to regard as striking of the nature of open warfare; but his word once passed, and he was bound irrevocably.

"What a word of evasion Max Willard may have felt, it was not betrayed by any sign. A slow movement of one hand swept back a lock of white hair from his forehead, and again he addressed the Man of Iron, who was watching him narrowly.

"For Miss Carew's sake," he said, "a word or two of explanation is necessary. This young lady, fully conversant with all the circumstances, will be coming of age at her marriage, and my daughter and I had been wronged, has not only been in full sympathy with my plans, but has lent me an active, material support."

"I do not, however, believe," he had taken an unfair advantage of her trust and confidence. "But when I am through, gentlemen, I want you to remember how desperate were my chances—that I had to sink or swim—no matter what the odds."

"For the first time he showed a spark of emotion, and the last expression was uttered in a burst of eloquence that made manifest the intense feeling lying beneath his calm exterior."

"He consented to disappear for a time," Willard said. "I am sure you could find it in your own mind to make this demand; but she did not deem that she was to appear in a role so false. He pointed to the mantelpiece form, and for a moment regarded it tenderly. "But by the aid of a light, harmless narcotic, the effects of which I can handle in a moment, I brought her here to play this unbecoming part."

Theodore Van Veelton once more started toward the speaker, but a dozen hands stayed him. "You suddenly cried," he cried. "I shall give you a taste of flesh, but so help me God, you'll regret this night!"

"Heaven knows, I have regretted the necessity," responded Willard dryly. "With one single undulating movement of his powerful form, the tall, lithe man sprang from the casket, his hands held aloft in a gesture of defiance."

Every Week—More and More Sick People are Taking My Chiropractic Adjustments and are Being Restored to Perfect Health by Nature

They have faith in the science of Chiropractic, because it has been explained to them, because they have learned how logical its conclusions are, because they have taken a few adjustments and have seen immediately how this wonderful science DOES REMOVE THE CAUSE of disease. It has now been proven that disease is not sent by providence or a result of fate or chance but that it is a definite EFFECT following a definite CAUSE; and that disease can be prevented.

Remember, I do not ask you your troubles. I analyze your spine and tell you what your trouble is.

which she had played so conspicuous a part, he had kept to himself, knowing that nothing co-operation could not be expected.

Through thralldom, Palgo had kept in touch with her uncle and her cousin and it was the uncle's account of Rudolph's condition that had not satisfied her on the night she went to the Clarendon accompanied by Phil Mercer.

The intelligent girl, Palgo, had brought back to Jesse, already re-estimated of her, and she had driven the girl distracted.

When Palgo's purse was mislaid after the flight from Number 1313, Jesse had volunteered to return and retrieve it, so possible, as being the one least likely to attract attention.

He interfered with Calla, who had been annoying her with his attentions, and whose headstrong, ruthless nature had all along been a source of trouble to her.

The death of Jim O'Neill, and Tom Phinney's subsequent accidental injury at Rocky Cove—where the conspirators had fled—had finally cleared them all but one name. There had been the only one to keep her head, and she, after recognizing Tom, had resolved the difficulty in the most practical manner.

It was Jesse whom Van Veelton had seen and seen at the Silent House, Sunday, in a taxi-cab.

The death of O'Neill was the first of a sequence of accidents that plunged Max Willard into hot water almost at the moment when he was accepted for his undertaking. O'Neill had answered the advertisement blindly; but as soon as he stepped across the threshold of Number 1313 he had been recognized as the traitorous employer of Willard.

Willard, who had surreptitiously sold the time-lock drawings and their formulae to Theodore Van Veelton, in the night that followed, called struck a blow from which O'Neill, only a few minutes later, had never recovered consciousness. It being his last required temple, and thus rendered his death wound.

Tom had drawn Palgo off to the courtyard out of the library's curtain by window.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" the girl remonstrated in astonishment. "You are as rough as a shark."

"You did not know," she even was, "but I was brightly and in-breathingly beautiful."

"Historically," he explained in a whisper, "he could not resist his excitement."

Miss Willard, it now, she and Mrs. Devereaux came with us from the Kolliner. "Hang it all! Don't make so much noise! I want you to hear what they are saying."

Jesse looked a little frightened. She and the detective were standing by one of the big tables. It was hanging in one hand a pocket memorandum book, and talking in his quiet way.

Palgo, with her head close to Tom's, peered through the curtains. They heard Mr. Flint say: "I am not out of control by impulses, Miss Willard, but at the time it struck me that the occasion might come when this would form a rather interesting document."

"What is it?" demanded Jesse.

"You frighten me."

"If I have your permission, I will read you something of it. First, he fixed his attention upon the memorandum book, and continued: "Nothing to the world could be more absurd than to imagine the girl I saw being engaged in anything criminal, or even in anything as reprehensible as that she may be surrounded by a criminal atmosphere. She is young; she is beautiful, she is refined and gentle; the stamp of purity and adoration of right deeds is unmistakable in her countenance. Whatever centers of your investigation, you will find to be unaccountably true all that I now assert concerning her."

He ethetically closed the book, and snugged the rubber in around it, and returned it to his pocket, while Jesse stared at him in blank amazement.

"That," Mr. Flint pursued, his eyes directed in a mist. "Is what Mr. Rudolph Van Veelton told me at a time when I honestly believed you to be a crook."

After reciting the circumstances, he went on: "You see, I hadn't Mr. Van Veelton's faith. I had never seen you, and

TREES GO WITH GOOD ROADS

Washington School Teacher Contributes to Striking Appeal in Federal Bulletin...

Good roads and their relation to the welfare of humanity, and the relation of trees to good roads, are the subjects with which Miss Susan B. Reasons for planting trees by the roadside are given by Miss Sipe: "One has only to pass from the glare of the dust and heat of the long stretch of unshaded road on a hot summer day to the relief afforded by trees...

J. M. STEVENS FOR GOVERNOR.

In announcing myself as a candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, I promise the people of Idaho if nominated and elected, that I will apply modern business methods to the handling of the affairs of the state and its resources.

While there will be many questions for discussion during the campaign, the one which seems to be uppermost in the minds of the people at this time is the reduction of taxes. I have long realized how I propose to improve conditions in this regard. I realize that while a material reduction could at once be made by the elimination of unnecessary expenditures in the way of commissions and impersonal, the real solution to my mind lies in the proper and businesslike management of the resources of the state.

Requirements of almost incalculable value are being piled upon the taxpayers as paying bills. After much thought I am convinced that the solution of this question is to be found in the sale of the national lands from the state (timber lands); the sale of the the burden is heavy.

The policy of the state in handling its lands is like that of a man who buys an automobile and refuses to do anything with it except to let it idle and pay taxes on it and each year the state is paying out large amounts to protect this natural treasure from fire and devastation and almost every year the state suffers heavy loss from such fires. The unworked timber from these lands could be sold and as soon as it is reproduced of sufficient size, it could be again disposed of, thus making it a continued revenue producer. There has been much said, and that justly, about the laws and the necessary expense of the conduct of the courts. I suggest that, before giving your consideration, it costs approximately $100,000 a day to conduct the District Court with a jury and a large percentage of the business is handled from the Justice Court involving very small amounts. These appeals often find their way to the Supreme Court and in the end a $500,000 burden upon two million Idahoans cause the taxpayers several hundred dollars.

I would recommend that in all cases where the amount involved is less than state lands and the investment of the money derived thereon. This money could be loaned to the farmers and citizens of Idaho at a very low rate of interest and the people allowed to improve their farms and homes increasing the taxation valuation and shifting the burden of government from the shoulders of the few to the many. Even this increase, however, on four per cent basis, in a few years the state and the public schools could be run and the public highways built without one cent of direct taxation.

From official figures it appears that at the present rate it will take more than one hundred and fifty years to dispose of Idaho's land holdings and my plan is to sell those lands as rapidly as possible at not less than the present minimum price, and more people, more farmers and more homes. What we need in Idaho is more people and more industries. With a population of 100,000, we have adopted all the modern luxuries of the most wealthy and populous states and of course

BORAH WILL FILIBUSTER

Wants Public Land Laws for Settlers of West.

Washington, D. C., June 2--Senator Borah pleads in favor of a bill for public land legislation for the west before the adjournment of congress. He said the west needed a grazing land law and a reforestation law. He stated the senate would not require much time, as only a few hours was needed. He urged the passage of a bill for retention by settlers of early payments on reclamation projects.

"Four or five years may be a short time for us to pass legislation, but it is a long time to the settler who is being closed out. If this session closes it will be an act of injustice and injury to thousands of projects," Borah said.

The senator favors filibustering to get such reclamation legislation, and that and Borah added there probably would be no river and harbor bill unless a reclamation bill was added to it.—Pocahontas Tribune.
