

SUPREME COURT HITS RAILROADS Step Toward Placing Systems Under One Master

SHOULD HAVE SOUGHT RELIEF OF BOARD INSTEAD OF COURTS.

Upholds Interstate Commerce Commission's Right to Strike Down Discriminatory Tariffs.

Washington—A long step toward placing railroads under "one master instead of many," was taken Monday by the supreme court when it upheld the power of the interstate commerce commission to strike down state rates which discriminate against interstate commerce.

The court said in substance that the Missouri and other recent state rate cases, in which the railroads lost, might have been decided differently had the roads gone to the commission for relief instead of the courts.

The decision was announced by Chief Justice Hughes, in a dissenting opinion. The decision was made by a majority of five to four.

The court first decided that congress had power to control interstate commerce to the extent necessary to prevent injurious discriminations against interstate commerce.

The court then held that congress had conferred this power upon the interstate commerce commission.

THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

Troop No. 2 Now Has Membership of Over Fifty.

Troop No. 2, organized less than a year ago, has numbered over 50 in its membership, most of whom are still in good standing. The Scoutmaster, Dr. Shephard, has out of the rush of a busy life, given to the development of these boys along clean, noble, instructive and honorable lines, all he can.

The boys are responding splendidly and the future is full of promise. The "adults" have their "leaders" their clubs, their social gatherings, but who thinks of the youth and their needs along similar lines? The "Every Day Good Turn," the "League Scout Law," which fit for life, and the untold learning and work of scoutcraft will be advanced greatly by the eight days camping on Good River, near Troutman, Aug. 3-10. A royal-time in games, fishing, lunting, swimming and nature study is expected, but the smallest of discipline and work will not be neglected. Boys of a certain age, because of the prevalence of pranks and "prank" chickens, will be allowed to carry guns, under restrictions imposed by the scoutmaster that no gun shall be brought into the camp, and no hunter shall carry a gun.

BANKERS' COSE UNSTABLE SESSION

Banquet Tuesday Evening Proves Enjoyable

The three day session of the state bankers' drew to a close Wednesday afternoon after a gathering which a great many important matters were treated by experts with national fame.

Tuesday afternoon the visitors were taken for a drive through the hills and Sucker Flat country and were delighted with the growing fields and the prosperous farm scenes passed by on the route.

Tuesday night together with about fifty local people, the bankers enjoyed an elaborate banquet served by the local school authorities.

The decorations of beautiful cut flowers which enhanced the beauty of the banquet, were the work of the wives of the local bankers and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Addressed by Col. Farnsworth, President Thomson, of the state association, who represented the wealth of the state and a number of others were an inspiration to the people of this city who attended.

The attitude of the men who represent the wealth of the state and the west was refreshing regarding financial conditions and also regarding this tract, which came in for hearty approval by the architects and was very jolly crowd which reluctantly left the banquet hall.

Wednesday, the last day of the session, was begun with a beautifully rendered solo by Mrs. C. O. Longley, which was heartily enjoyed after the musical rendering of the orchestra and was very jolly crowd which reluctantly left the banquet hall.

OLD SOLDIER PASSES

William Gates Gilbert Passes to Great Beyond Friday

On Friday last week death called another old soldier of the Civil war, when William Gates Gilbert answered to the last roll call. Mr. Gilbert at the time of his death was 71 years, 11 months and 15 days of age. He was born in the state of New York, where he went to sea—landed in this country about five years ago and lived here in this city since.

The funeral was held from the Grossman chapel Sunday afternoon and was attended by the members of Dan McCook Post, Grand Army of the Republic. At the grave a firing squad from Company D, Idaho National Guard, paid the last honors to the departed soldier. The services were conducted at the chapel by Rev. Mr. Frazier, pastor of the First Methodist church.

Mr. Gilbert had his interesting civil war experiences was for a number of years a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and successfully managed several large companies. His life has been a most interesting one.

An Open Letter to the People of Idaho

(By C. A. Elmer)

The announcement of the candidacy of Ex-Governor F. R. Gooding, for United States Senator, presents an opportunity for those who know and appreciate the sterling worth of Mr. Gooding, to give public expression to their esteem for the man and confidence in his fitness for public office. My own intimate connection with Mr. Gooding during his four years as governor of Idaho, enables me to speak with authority in regard to the man as citizen and official.

Frank H. Gooding is a self made man in the best sense of the word. In 1881, a boy of 21, without friends, influence or means, he has made his home in this state for nearly 55 years, and has steadily grown in position and influence. It can be truthfully said that each year has found him enjoying in a greater degree the esteem and confidence of the people with whom he came in contact, and better fitted for his task—whether that task was the conduct of his own affairs, or the exercise of his state and its people. He has from the beginning been a growing man, and his friends know that to the last he will continue to strive for greater efficiency.

Mr. Gooding first settled in Ketchikan then one of the principal mining camps of the west. He made his home there for more than ten years, active in mining and allied interests. It there he made his first money, and then he came to Idaho, bringing with him the experience and energy of a man who had been in the mining industry for more than a decade. He was a successful miner, and his success was due to his own initiative, energy and hard work. He was a man of high character, and his success was due to his own initiative, energy and hard work.

Mr. Gooding's first public service was as a member of the State Senate during the 18th session, when he was elected president pro tem of that body and was elected to the office of speaker of the house. He was a man of high character, and his success was due to his own initiative, energy and hard work.

to the avowed trial. There has been no attempt to stifle his efforts to secure legislative legislation, but he has not neglected any opportunity to advance legislation for the honest conduct of corporate interests in this state. He is not an opponent of capital, but its champion, and has done as much as any other man to induce the investment of Western capital in the development of the resources of Idaho.

Mr. Gooding has for many years been one of the principal woodworkers of the state. He was the first president of the Idaho Woodworkers' association, called in to existence largely through his efforts to meet the crisis in the wool industry by placing wool on the free list. By succeeding in securing a reduction in wool freight rates from $2.50 to $1.50 a hundred, this success in saving to Idaho and state wool growers of several million dollars. He was for two years president of the National Woodworkers' association. A recent decision of the Interstate commerce commission in the suit instituted and prosecuted by him, provides for a reduction in rates on wool which will save over an million dollars a year on wool produced in the western range states.

It is impossible by written words to give a correct idea of what Mr. Gooding has meant to the life of Idaho. As a citizen and business whose activities have been widespread, his influence has always been on the side of advancement. He has been a developer of new ideas—a thinker of new lines of power for good alone in combination with others. His integrity is unassailable and his charity has been ready in the relief of distress and poverty. His courage—his ability in defense of right and justice. He has been ready to accept untimely and unpopular the truth, and to stand for it. He has been ready to clear the clouds of suspicion away. That which he has accomplished in his life is the result of his own initiative, energy and hard work.

NELL GWYNNE'S OLD HOUSE

Famous Residence in Fall Mall, London, is Being Torn Down—Prince Regent Lived There.

London—House "breakers" are at work on the last remains of a house in Fall Mall place which once was the residence of Nell Gwynne, and was the home of the Prince Regent just a century ago while his magnificent palace, Carlton house, was being built on the other side of the way.

The original frontage in Fall Mall was about many years ago, and has now again been pulled down, but the gallery, the entrance of which is a court, is one of the original reception rooms of the house.

For many years past the building has been used for a picture gallery.

Nell Gwynne's House.

The Nell Gwynne room, with its magnificent ceiling, remained perfectly intact after the house breakers took possession.

The house in Fall Mall chiefly associated with King Charles' favorite lair, No. 7, since rebuilt and now occupied by an insurance company. It was here that the diarist Evelyn saw and heard a very familiar discourse between the King and Mrs. Nellie.

They called an impudent comedian, who looking out of his garden on the terrace at the foot of the wall and king "standing on the green bench."

"Who was waiting for the completion of Carlton house the Prince Regent lived in Nell Gwynne's old house in Fall Mall place and he used to watch the extravagant magnificence of his splendid place rising over the way. It was pulled down in 1827 and the last of the house, facing Fall Mall were used in the facade of the present National gallery and are familiar objects of that frontage.

STORING EGGS IN WATER GLASS

Each year brings about interest in practical methods in storing eggs for winter use. Many experiments have been conducted that the very best methods could be determined with the least amount of expense and recommodation by the best.

To fifteen parts water that has been heated and then cooled to 100 degrees Fahrenheit, add one part water glass. Stir very thoroughly and the solution is ready for use.

Earthen ware is said to be the best containers but we have used five gallon kegs and found them to be equal in every respect. Any receptacle is good, but they must be clean and free from any odor that is likely to favor the eggs.

Fill the receptacle about one-third full with solution and place in a cool place, preferably a cool clean and well-ventilated basement. Eggs should be gathered at least every day and when the weather is very warm it would be much better if they were gathered at noon and night. The eggs should be placed in the solution as soon as gathered, only eggs that are known to be strictly fresh should be stored.

The shells should be separated from the liquid when eggs are to be stored. A month or two before the eggs are used, wash them with water which will keep very good if stored absolutely fresh, and be much better than the storage eggs.

When the eggs are used, they should be about two inches of the solution covering the top layer of the eggs.

Eggs stored in this manner will keep for many months but it must not be expected that the water glass solution will impart the quality of eggs that are fresh.

Compositions are stored in this solution after several months in the solution that they will be in a very bad condition. Store only fresh eggs and they will keep in perfect condition for many months.

COHN

A great many farmers of the state at this year planted corn either for sale or for a grain crop. Judging from the inquiries received relative to the crop and the number of orders for seed there is no doubt that they will take its place among the field crops of Idaho. There are sections in the state that can produce excellent corn as evidenced by Mr. E. W. Payne, taking sweetcorns in the western zone, at the National Corn Show at Dallas, Texas, a few months ago. Mr. Payne is cultivating sweetcorns single ear at the same place.

It is a growing which will stimulate the growing of this crop more than good yields at the local county fairs, the State and Interstate fairs, and the bringing together of the best at the Idaho Seed Growers association show. This show is to be held next at Twin Falls, December 1, 2 and 3, 1934. Here the final selection will be made for the Idaho exhibit at the Panama exposition.

The value to the state of a worthy exhibit at this exposition and especially of a crop which has been considered as belonging to the middle western states, cannot be overestimated. It will bring from the state a naturally look for corn and Idaho must be prepared to show him that she can produce it.

If every one who is growing corn will exhibit some of the fairs we can have a corn exhibit record to none.

PEAR AND CHERRY SCALE

Four white scale eggs deposited the eggs that stick to the thousands of albugo, small black eggs that stick to the leaves of pear and cherry trees. These have been found by carefully examining the leaves of pear and cherry trees. These eggs will be covered by small brown spots on these leaves and within each spot can be found an egg of the scale. The eggs are very hard to see, and the young scale are able to injure the foliage in a surprisingly short time. Great progress is being made to keep the leaves of the pear and cherry trees for the presence of these scale and as soon as they are detected, remove them, and if a large amount of scale of two pounds of arsenate of lead to fifty gallons of water. In case the cherries are infested with scale, use one pound of the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of water. This must be fresh and free from adulteration, and when it can be obtained will give even better results than the arsenate of lead.

Cherry and pear scales are very easily killed and much less injury is done by their death than by their living on the trees. There are two generations during the season, and two generations in South Idaho, the first generation is the most injurious to the trees. Timely spraying to kill the first generation of scale will avoid injury to the leaves of these trees in July and August.

DATA ON THE TOXICITY THEORY OF SOIL FERTILITY

Only a short time ago some soil investigators in the United States said that the theory that the presence of toxic substances in the soil reduces the deficiency of plant food, and the lack of fertility in most soils is due to the presence of toxic substances from soils and their effect in water solution was shown. This does not mean that these substances are entirely all preventable. However, to determine whether they are or not experiments have just been completed at the Idaho Experiment Station. Two of the substances most toxic in water solution were shown synthetically and put into soil of soil upon which wheat plants were grown and also in soil upon which wheat which toxic substances were shown.

CHANGING THE TRUST LAW TO SUIT LABOR

amount of trade under the anti-trust laws.

The second amendment to be added at the demand of labor will follow section 19 of the Clayton bill, which forbids the issuance of injunctions against "peaceful assemblage, picketing, any boycotting by the unions," referring to such acts, the amendment reads:

"No shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be construed or held to be unlawful."

Labor representatives in congress are satisfied with these concessions, according to the Washington correspondents, and will withdraw their threatened opposition to the administration's anti-trust program. But the same correspondents report that President Wilson denies any "surrender" to organized labor, maintaining that the proposed amendments will not exempt the unions from prosecution under the anti-trust law if they commit acts in violation of that law. The president's supporters in the house, he says from the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun, "have advised him that the language to be added to the Clayton bill will merely clarify that section which deals with labor organizations, and will not confer special privileges." As Representative Charles C. Martin of Virginia, a member of the house committee on the judiciary which framed the original Clayton bill, and a strong supporter of the president, states it:

"This will prevent a bill being filed on behalf of the government for the dissolution of labor organizations. It does not exempt labor from specific acts which would constitute a restraint of trade or a conspiracy in restraint of trade. It is a clear-cut, clean, statutory enactment of the provisions contained in the Baltimore platform."

The following explanation of the committee's amendments is given to the correspondents by Senator William Hughes, of New Jersey, a recognized labor representative:

"In the Danbury matters, the court laid down a principle which apparently made the Sherman anti-trust law broader in effect, as to the rights of labor than the common law. The common law made the existence of a labor organization illegal unless it was superseded by a specific statute. Under that law, one man might sue another for a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and such cases have been pointed out in New Jersey, among other states. It was evident, therefore, that the anti-trust law needed amending. The pending amendments recognize the right of labor organizations to exist legally and to operate for mutual help within the law. In section 18 the rights of labor are enumerated, including the right to strike as an organization and the right to picket. The right is also conferred on peaceful picketing of a strike, and there is no prohibition of the primary boycott. No mention is made of the secondary boycott, and it was not asked by labor. In my judgment, it is a matter which can not be reached by legislation, anyhow."

These amendments are condemned by the New York Tribune (Help) and Evening Post (Daily) for their ambiguity. "The language used," declares the Tribune, "is meant to cheat either the public or the labor unions." And the Post says:

"The real issue is what the labor unions are to be permitted to do. No fair-minded person would wish to have the organization of labor be under the law. It is necessary that labor should have the right to organize. But we have never believed that the Sherman law denied that right. The courts never have so construed it. They have held that it forbade certain acts of labor organizations which are injurious to the public interest in trade, but never that it forbade the formation of the organizations themselves."

"The labor leaders have sought to get the acts now under the law of the law located under the pretense of merely legalizing organization itself. The question is whether they are about to succeed in this through the agreement reached with the Democratic administration. Frankly, we do not know whether they are or not. No one can tell until the courts have passed upon the validity of some words into which the concession is cast."

In the Evening Post, which also confesses itself "unable to say whether the proposed amendments will be either whatever, or whether they will give the labor unions the whole of their most extreme demand," it reads:

"What that demand is, everybody knows. There is no secret about it: labor unions want a declaration that in the anti-trust law they shall apply to them. That the president is opposed to such a change in legislation, that he regards it an intolerable concession to various ways, and on various occasions. It has been given out that he would veto any bill that embodied such a provision, or a provision

COOKING IN ALUMINUM

In aluminum cooking vessels have a harmful effect on food? Tests have been made with all kinds of food stuffs including soups, fruits, fruit acids, tomatoes, Brussels sprouts with soda, orange and lemon marmalade, with the addition of salt, pepper and various other condiments. In some cases the aluminum was found in the food, but in the opinion of the investigators the amount was so small as to be negligible, except in the case of sodium carbonate and soda. A warning is given against the use of soda in aluminum, since its reaction with this metal is quite rapid. It is not so vigorous if used on iron or on other common cooking utensils. In the ordinary cooking operations, except with alkali, aluminum vessels slowly when cold. The largest amounts were dissolved by orange and lemon marmalade. It is advisable, then, to use aluminum vessels for cooking with aluminum food, but a fine, not to heat acid materials in it, only to prevent corrosion.

UNIVERSITY OF IDAHO CELEBRATES TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

May 26th was set aside as May Day in memory of the founding of the institution.

A feature of the day was the presence of Mr. Jones, who is getting into the Idaho exhibit for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Mr. Jones had with him a moving picture expert and a large equipment of cameras. These cameras made up the most complete outfit which by exhibits and floats typified the industries of Idaho and the work of the different departments of the state.

In addition many films were made of students at work in the different departments of the university. It was recognized that these films would be shown in our moving picture halls this fall before the exposition.

The day was spent in competitive field sports, and a variety of other sports. President Traill and others, the parent, May pole, exercises and dances and closed with a picnic supper on the campus.

CHLORIDE OF LIME IN WATER

At present chlorides in water is highly recommended for various sanitary purposes. It is also used for disinfecting drinking water in any vessel can be purified in a short time by adding this chloride of lime in small amounts.

Twelve pounds of the solution of water allowed to stand over night, or for several hours, destroys almost the entire number of bacteria. At this strength it is perfectly harmless and safe.

Pools covered in an uncooked state may be freed of such germs as are caused by the decay of the green vegetables into and allowed them to remain for a short time. In water containing chloride of lime.

A CREAMERY BY-PRODUCT

Cranberries do not throw out oil, sour skimmilk if there is an available market for chicken feed. By heating such skimmilk to 150 degrees Fahrenheit and will be prepared in an hour or so. This can be used for about three cents per pound, useful for the feeding of chickens.

The high protein and ash content of the skimmilk curd makes it a concentrated feed, it approximates the feed value of best alfalfa for chickens.

Twelve pounds of the curd and one-half cups whole egg. From this comparison, one can see the nutritive value of this simple prepared food for the use of chickens.

coming near to this. If he had given his approval to the proposed amendment, it must be with the expectation that it will not produce the effect which alone makes it acceptable to the labor-union men. We confess that we see no light of view from which this question is defensible. If the words meant nothing, the labor men would not take the trouble into thinking they mean something. Moreover, the matter can not end there. If they think they are getting, or may be getting, this time, they will demand next time as a matter of good faith."

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 42—Home Economy.

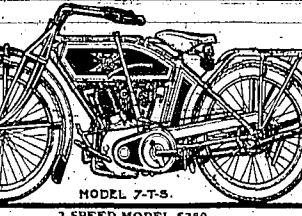

"One of the greatest curses of American civilization today is the fact that it is unashamedly to save and that the people are ashamed to waste. The people are ashamed to waste and are looked upon as signs of profligacy. Now probably this can in no other way be more distinctly shown than by the fact that our wives are not doing the preserving and pickling that our mothers used to do."

to the front. Investigate! We will be pleased to show the superior merits of the machine.

The truth of the statement made by the well known economist quoted above is borne out by the fact that great manufacturing firms producing pickles canned goods, soups, etc., have thrived enormously during the past ten years. These great factories, with their many varieties of products, are thriving on the business and unproductiveness of our wives and sisters. They could not have existed in the days of our mothers, who insisted on doing their own preserving and making their pickles, but our wives and children are too lazy to do these things and our mothers do not know enough. Therefore, in attempting to solve the problem of lazarized cost of living by means of the family garden, we not only must produce more, but we must save more; not only raise more vegetables, but more vegetables for winter use.

It is doubtful if an average sized kitchen garden can be made to pay unless the householder himself does most of the work in it. If you are under constant expense for labor the chances are that your garden will not show a profit.

But if you are living where you can have a garden and are so situated that members of your family can do most of the work in it, you will find it a genuine means of economy for you, even as thousands of others have found by experience.

Let your garden do that you will not only have plenty of fresh produce during the summer, but also so that you will have an ample supply of winter vegetables and plenty of stuff for preserving—such as tomatoes which are easy to cultivate and very valuable as food.

Entirely aside from the actual profit or saving from a garden, you must reckon as important asset the health and satisfaction it gives."
