The statement of Chairman Randall of the public utilities commission, regarding the attitude of that body toward competition indicates a return to sound reasoning and a renunciation of the arbitrary use of its powers. It is easy to argue that natural monopolies should be controlled as to rates and given a clear field. There is much good sense in such argument provided conditions in the field warrant such elimination of competition.

Under competition rates were purely the lowest available for that body of work. It is desirable that such level be established so which any corporation can do business with profit. The Times contends that such basis for rates cannot be secured through any other means or by arbitrarily fixing rates by any body of men. Two factors prevent just compiling of rates by any commission or any body of men. First the ease with which any corporation can justify its expense figures when presenting their side of the case. Second, the refusal to place equipment and plants at the highest state of efficiency which will cut maintenance expense. Constant repairs on a half-bull system will add largely to the expenses and will not add to the books of the corporation.

Expense accounts are often juggled to show more than even the cost will justify. It is hard to detect by any commission not familiar with the territory covered. As to the second in a poorly built system delays and breaks while costly to the utility company are more costly to the consumer who must make a profit. It is hard to detect by any commission not familiar with the territory covered. As to the second in a poorly built system delays and breaks while costly to the utility company are more costly to the consumer who must make a profit.

There is no question in the mind of any thinking man that the public will eventually get competition. For that reason the argument is falsely used in arguing against the benefits of competition. We will concede that competition can become destructive to the competitors for a time being until they face the final cutting off of profit. When that point is reached competition quickly comes to their senses and consolidate and if allowed, raise rates for the public where the common pays dearly for the consolidation. Here, where the utility commission can do its best work and then fix prices which are fair and just to the company and to the public. By taxing the lowest rates given during the competitive period, the commission then has approximately the cost of production and can fix a fair rate.

The Times contends that under any other system, the public does not get the best deal in the fixing by any commission. Experts employ by the big corporations can cleverly deceive any body of men not expert in the use and cost of production. A fair illustration of the above can be readily seen when the utility rates in Idaho (with competition) were fixed at a lower rate than in this city and Portland, where one company fixed the bill and simply argued his costs and expenses before the commission. Both Twin Falls and Boise are within 100 miles nearer the source of supply than the city of Boise and much easier transportation available. Just why they do not profit by a rate ruling on rates just for the reason that competition had revealed a lower cost of production which prevented the power producers from presenting false arguments. The Times has no antecedent for any power concern in presenting this argument, but believes that the utility rates in Idaho are section is rightful and paramount. They are entitled to the lowest profitable rates which any power company can give them, based on sound statistics and arguments.

MR. ROOSEVELT AND REPUBLICAN

When Colonel Roosevelt returns from Spain to "take up his abode in the patient situation," as he says he will do, what will be his attitude toward the "turning movement" for Republican-Progressive unification or fusion, can interested citizens of all political faiths. One leading Washington correspondent who has talked with the

Colonel is assured that he will first of all "rally and rebuild the Progressive party" but the Washington Herald is convinced that he is quite aware of a "lack of leadership" in the Republican ranks and that "his program is to demonstrate his own Republicanism by denouncing Democracy, when the political change next November is recorded, to assume the credit for the Republican victory and declare that under his banner the united Republicans and Progressives can once more take possession of the Government." Roosevelt's followers and the Republican party, "with a common point of attack," "think that the New York State publications," "think that the New York State publications," "will inevitably soon find themselves cooperating politically." Undoubtedly, says the Buffalo Express (Rep.), "what Roosevelt and his farthest-reaching followers are studying just now is the most honorable and dignified way to wind up their existence as a separate political entity."

But the Baltimore Sun (Ind.) takes issue with these prophets of a friendly union. "Colonel Roosevelt must rein the old Republican party beyond repair before either the Progressive party can triumph or the G-O-P be given into his hands. Therefore his main struggle however much he may rave against the President and Congress, is with the Old Guard."

There is undoubtedly an element in the Progressive party whose program is expressed by the Standard Leader (Ind.), a strong Roosevelt organ in 1912, which quotes these words from a program said to have been developed upon by Colonel Roosevelt and other Progressive leaders: "Insistence on policies rather than party names," and an endeavor "to consolidate in every state the voters who approve of the Progressive party." As the Standard Leader adds: "The program of the Progressive Republicans of the country, under the Republican name, in specific places where certain definite circumstances make the need of such action apparent beyond dispute."

It, remarks the New York Times (Dem.), "the thick-and-thin Progressives have not been frequently heard from." "And what a sort of force will go up from the Bull Moose all over the Union if the Colonel makes it his business to have a party which has been already evoked in New York." And in the west he met Henry J. Allen's Wichita Beacon (Prog.) telling "Progressives who allow themselves to be deceived to run for office as Progressives on the Republican ticket" that they "will find that they have turned themselves over to the standpatners and the standpatners will have just what to do with them." Progressives say the Grand Rapids Press (Ind.), "will not vote with the Republicans unless the old-time which three get out of the road and let the Progressive band-wagon have the right of way." And on the other hand, The Press notes who "the different was the powerful Roosevelt sentiment in the recent Republican National State conference" and the admission of the standard leader from Washington that the Colonel is essentially the white horse of the party." And the Atlanta Constitution (Dem.), considering the attitude in both parties, says that "if there is to be any unification between the Progressive Bull Moose and the G. O. P. elephant, it will be the elephant that is amalgamated." In the Atlanta party's opinion, "speech of the old-time Republicans will go over to the new party and the Republican ticket in the next fall's election."

The only definite, official announcement from the Colonel was issued on the day he sailed for Spain. He said in part: "I intend, to the utmost of my ability, to do all that I can for the principles for which I have contended and for the men throughout the country who have stood so valiantly in its fight and that all right-minded people ought to act together without regard to their ordinary party divisions in a determined effort to accomplish the best result to destroy the rotten and hateful influence of both the Republican and the Murphy machine in this state."

An for New York state, the Albany Knickerbocker Press (Prog.) agrees with the Colonel that "there should be a house-cleaning." The duty of the public, says the New York Herald (Rep.), is to select a candidate of unimpeachable morality and unmistakable progressivism. Then the Progressives "would have no reason for not endorsing and electing such a Republican." If such a program is carried out, says the Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.), "fusion is likely to assume formidable proportions." But the New York World (Dem.) is inclined to scoff. "Fusion it admits, would give Mr. Roosevelt a chance to get back into the Republican party through the side-door." "In my opinion," says the World, "the only way to clean house in this state is for the voters themselves to clean house at the primaries."

While the New York Progressive await their leaders' return there is talk of candidates. District Attorney Whitman is thought to have a good chance to secure the Republican nomination for Governor. There is strong sentiment for an incumbent endorsing him, and call is still heard that Mr. Roosevelt himself run for Governor. From high Progressive sources comes the information that an anti-Barnes Republican candidate would be very likely to get a Progressive endorsement, but if a machine man were put up the Progressive would "go it alone." On the Republican side, the leaders are yet saying little for publication.

There is no question in the mind of any thinking man that the public will eventually get competition. For that reason the argument is falsely used in arguing against the benefits of competition. We will concede that competition can become destructive to the competitors for a time being until they face the final cutting off of profit. When that point is reached competition quickly comes to their senses and consolidate and if allowed, raise rates for the public where the common pays dearly for the consolidation. Here, where the utility commission can do its best work and then fix prices which are fair and just to the company and to the public. NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

Mr. French introduced this bill at the request of the National Food and Drug Organization, and similar legislation has been enacted in various states.

No Rural Credit Law This Session. Washington, D. C., June 23.—(Notwithstanding the promises made by the dominant party leaders in Congress who have been making a "rural credit bill" would be enacted this session, if the currency bill was supported, it is considered certain that the bill will not be enacted.) "I voted against the currency bill because it contained no provision, that by my opinion, would benefit farmers, the class that most needs relief and most deserves it." If the cost of living is to be reduced we must have more cornucopia of food products, and be less concerned about the middlemen.

"I cannot understand why the farmers should be asked to increase their taxes when one of our who can be trained into a business man. He is the creator of wealth, and if given the aid of a loan, he will have a time at a low rate of interest, so that he could equip his farm with machinery and livestock, all the people would be more prosperous and the cost of living would be reduced."

There are millions of dollars in the savings banks and post offices in the east which could be loaned to the farmers on favorable terms, if the government would give its attention, and while the currency law is being by its supporters to furnish ample money for all legitimate purposes, I feel the farmers will find that they will have a time at a low rate of interest, so that he could equip his farm with machinery and livestock, all the people would be more prosperous and the cost of living would be reduced."

A WONDER OF NATURE. Gooding People Explore the Famous Ice Cave. A party of Gooding people paid a visit last Sunday to one of nature's greatest wonders in southern Idaho, the famous "Ice Cave" located in the lava about thirty-five miles north-east of Gooding. A good many people have regarded this cave as something of a fable as the stories circulated regarding it would seem to be incredible, but according to the reports brought back by Sunday's explorers, the cave has not been told. The explorer, Ingham G. W. Wedgewood and family, the Major T. L. and Rod, who are visiting the Wedgewood and Cannon's, W. H. Cannon, and A. F. Jones, and they made the trip in two autos. The route that access to the cave was through a small and tortuous opening, through which they were forced to crawl. They descended by inclined passages to three successive levels, letting themselves down by the aid of ropes. The ice cave is on the lower level and is as large as a good sized room being fully fifteen feet high. The walls of this cave are of solid ice and it has not been determined how far back the ice extends. The guide who conducted the party stated that the ice melts along the lower edges early in the year and freezes again in the summer. Still ice in the hole indicates that the freezing has commenced for this season. It is presumed that this body of ice has existed in that lava fissure for centuries, but no scientific assurance has yet "been" an examination of the whence or the wherefore--Gooding Leader. TWIN FALLS COUNTY BY AUTO

Soldier Editor Tells of Southside Road.

In company with his wives, P. C. Muffley and the editor left Soldier Saturday for Twin Falls by auto. In going, Gooding by way of the Cotton ranch was selected, and while the roads on this end are fair after the summer is reached, they are nothing to boast of. With this one exception the roads are perfect, and the return trip it was rather humiliating to find the poorest roads on the trip right on the valley. The worst of the roads was never so forcibly impressed upon us, and the visitor who comes from sections where good roads are the rule and there are fewer sections with poor roads each year—will look at a country and give it more careful consideration when the car is on the road.

The wonderful North and South Side tracts have good roads, and this fact alone has meant a great deal in their development and they have learned that good roads are not an expense for any one, but are one of the best and most profitable investments that a country or town can make.

We will not take second place in this wonderful region as far as natural resources are concerned, but we do take off our hats to a bunch of stick-together boosters who have built towns and converted a desert into a paradise. We are sorry that Cassa Prairie is lacking somewhat in this spirit and we hope that the time will come when united the rancher, the business man and the politician will work and stand together only for the upbuilding of Cassa Prairie, but the settlement of all differences and hearty co-operation in all matters.—Cassa Prairie Courier.

REFRESHMENT FOR ONE

By CLARA POEHLMAN. "Mother, wants to know if she can have—" began small Clara, trotting into Mrs. Brown's back hall. Then she smiled.

"Um-I guess I smell fudge!" she exclaimed, sniffing slowly but surely toward the kitchen door. "I haven't had any fudge for the longest time."

"It isn't fudge? Well, I'm sure it smells like fudge. What is it? Chocolate. Well, I like that, too."

"Oh, yes, it is. I'm sure. I like it. I'm hungry, but I don't think I'd better take any, chocolate. Well, I would like a cup, maybe. It smells like fudge and chocolate soda. I had a chocolate cream right."

"What's that in the little pan? It's such a cunning little pan. Eggs? Why don't you just boil them in the teakettle? I don't see why it wouldn't be clean. I'm sure my mother does. Anyway, she would if she thought of it."

"Oh, yes, I see. You scrub the dip of them. That's nice. I just hate to had sand on my baked potatoes."

"But I think the toothbrush for the vegetables is fine. Is it yours or Mr. Brown's?"

"Oh, I thought it was just a worn out one you were using up out here. You know, sometimes the bottles get old and fall out and stick into you, but they wouldn't hurt the vegetables, would they?—I think it is a very good way to use up your old bottles."

"Mr. Brown has such big teeth that he must use up lots of them. Oh, yes, I forgot; you did say this was a new one. But I think when I tell mother she'll use old ones, for we've got so many around."

"Once I brushed my teeth—that's how I know about the tooth brushes. I don't know whose brush it was, but it was the nicest looking one in the bathroom, so I took some of mother's new face cream and put it on it and then brushed the baby's teeth. He made such a fuss that I just brushed my own to show him it was all right—of course, I didn't use face cream on my teeth—I could tell from the way the baby acted that it did, taste as good as it smelled. But the bristles came out all over my mouth—"

CHEERING UP OF PATSY

By L. MERRIFIELD. "You don't know how I feel, mother, dear, about going up home and leaving her—"

"Do—do you know any friend of Cora's at Edgemore named Patsy, Rex?" asked Mrs. Clues, looking up from her letter.

"Must be Patricia Boyd, mother. Cora's got same for her, hasn't she. Why?" Rex moved lazily from the sun parlor into the breakfast room.

"Patsy has been through some terrible grief—the past summer that the rest of us can only guess at. She never got by the same again, mother, never. You know how nice girls take things to heart, and Patsy is wounded to the quick. I will tell you more later, but you can guess what a class. MAM! I think, I think as a class, they are absolutely respectable and with good faith or real sentiment. I don't see how you ever found father, for he is, of course, an exception."

"Don't laugh, Rex," reproved Mrs. Clues, smiling herself. "Cora is in earnest, really. We had better ask Patsy here and try to cheer her up. How many of the Dartmouth boys did you get?"

"Four. The other two fellows, I wanted went up home to Vermont. I'm glad the Abbotts' coming."

"A week later Cora arrived with Patricia Boyd. Patsy, an everyone called her was well, she had a mass of red gold hair, eyes brown and soft as a moth's wing, and a drooping mouth—that pleased for sympathy. In her dark green traveling suit, she had a charming face, but a charming trouble when he lifted her out of the tonneau bodily."

Later he stopped his sister on the way downstairs, for she mysteriously hid the small writing room next the library, and closed the door.

"What's the matter with Patsy?" he asked.

"Rex, I think you're positively brutal," Cora said, hotly. "You tell father if you don't open that door." "Cora, I'm overboard, swimming for life, and you hold a life preserver in your grasp to rescue your own dear brother. I'm in love with Patsy."

HEALTH AND HYGIENE

Tarred By the Idaho-Health-Board of Health.

Few mothers really know much about the proper care of babies. Many mothers rely almost entirely upon the advice and superstitions of neighbors, hood grandmothers, midwives, and nursemaids. That is all wrong. Learn something about your own baby.

At the end of this article you can learn more about the proper care of babies.

Food—Mother's milk is the best food known for babies. A baby should gain steadily in weight. When he fails to do this or if he gets sick don't try to do anything. It is probably indigestion due to improper feeding.

Air—Fresh, pure outdoor air, day and night. Protect the baby from cold draughts, direct sunlight and dust. But never keep a baby confined in a closed room, particularly a crowded room or a closed bedroom.

Water that has been boiled five minutes and served tepid, never ice cold. Spoon, cups and nipples for baby should also be boiled out just before using.

Sleep—Undisturbed by people, noise or strong light. Give baby a bed of his own. Never rock the baby to sleep.

Regular habits of nursing, sleeping, bowel movement, bathing and exercising. Persist in this from the beginning and regular habits will soon be formed.

Bathing in lukewarm water daily, a quick bath before going to bed often prevents a restless night.

Clothing that is light and cool in summer and light and warm in winter. If there is heat rash, replace the linen lingerie with a woolen one. Clothing must be light and bath in water having a tablespoon of ordinary baking soda to each gallon of water. Should the woolen underwear line with a piece of old toweling, or sheet with powder.

For the first six months give the baby nothing but mother's milk and water. Give plenty of water, particularly in hot weather. Freshness is frequently one of the indications of throat.

Every mother should nurse her baby, if possible, because breastfeeding increases a baby's chance of living tenfold.

Regular feeding is of prime importance. For the first year nurse the baby as follows:

For the first three weeks nurse every 2 hours. Omit 1 nursing at night.

For the next 4 weeks nurse every 2 1/2 hours. 1 nursing at night.

Until six months old nurse every 3 hours. 1 nursing at night.

Before and after nursing the mother should carefully wash her hands and the baby's mouth with a saturated solution of boracic acid.

If baby vomits milk give less milk and more water. Sometimes vomit is due to overfeeding and to nursing too rapidly.

When baby is weaned, or if the mother cannot nurse him, use a substitute with his feeding. A good doctor should be consulted at such a time. Cow's milk is very different from mother's milk, and must be modified for a baby. To modify milk is a difficult task. Take no chances here.

Beware of patent foods. Sometimes they are satisfactory but a good doctor should be in charge when such foods are used. At best, they are but poor substitutes for breast-feeding and are likely to cause rickets and scurvy.

Prepared foods should be made up fresh for each feeding.

Cleanliness prevents scurvy, particularly in rickets babies.

Do protect your baby from measles, mumps, scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, and other contagious diseases.

Don't take chances with a subject, especially one as delicate as a baby.

Do keep baby's thumb out of his mouth.

Don't let that habit start. It may deform his mouth for life. It may quinine on baby's hand, or mite steeped in quinine.

Do let soothing syrups alone. They are dope. If there is something wrong with baby, have a doctor help you baby's nerves with dope.

Don't use baby for a plaything the first year. Diarrhea him only for feeding.

Don't expose baby or baby's food to flies. Why? Because one-third of all baby deaths are due to diarrheal diseases. These diseases are spread largely by flies. 88 per cent of all diarrheal diseases occur during the fly season.

Don't expose a baby to any contagious disease. Children's diseases (whooping cough, measles, diphtheria, etc.) are all dangerous. They never do a baby any good, and they frequently actually affect him for life. The older a child is the less danger there is in contagious diseases.

Don't let baby "catch cold." Guard against rhinitis and diphtheria.

Don't clothe baby for show. Clothe him for comfort.

Don't forget to have your baby's teeth registered. Official records of birth will be invaluable in a few years.

If you want to know more about babies write to the state board of health at Boise, for their bulletin on babies.

This board also has free literature on tuberculosis, smallpox, diphtheria, typhoid fever, sanitary wells, scarlet fever, mumps, whooping cough, measles, scarlet fever, and other contagious diseases.

SOLUTION OF DIFFICULTY

Work to Start or Lost Silver Project, Boon, It Is Solved.

The Big Lost river project is at last on the high road to success after its many tribulations. Every inch of the finest irrigation system in the state with at least 100,000 acres of the finest farming land and a water supply certain and adequate for all purposes says the Statesman.

At informal conferences in the office of Governor Haines on Saturday the slides were wonderfully cleared and at the close of the meetings all directly interested expressed themselves highly pleased with the situation.

Present at the conference were W. H. Watts, president of the Utah Construction company of Salt Lake; James E. Clinton, the former receiver for the Big Lost River Irrigation company; State Engineer King, Governor Haines, Secretary of State Clifford W. F. Rathburn, one of the active settlers on the project, Attorney General Peterson, and Frank C. Horn, a consulting engineer.

President Watts announced that his company was prepared to start work July 1st on the flow of the river would permit and to push work with a big force of men and the best equipment to be had in the west. All he asks is that he be allowed the support and co-operation of the state and the settlers on the project.

One thing that President Watts will demand is certain modifications in the old contract. This contract was carelessly drawn. It is ambiguous as to the amount of water the settlers are to get and in other important particulars. President Watts says his company is ready to enter into a sufficient agreement to furnish the water they need, but he thinks the amount of water should be determined by scientific investigation by experts.

In consideration of these changes President Watts is willing to acknowledge all payments made by the settlers, to give them longer time in which to complete their payments, and to assist them in every way possible to establish and maintain good homes on the land.

Governor Haines and the other state officials are highly pleased over the outlook and are confident the settlers will join heartily in pulling the enterprise through and making it a complete success.
