ENTERPRISING JOURNALISM.

In the hurry of modern scientific methods the gatherers of news have proven that the profession is thoroughly alive to its opportunities. As an example of such thoroughness the Boston Journal bids fair to exert all that force in news gathering, in its scoop in connection with the recent big confabulation in Salem, Mass.

While the smoke was still rising from the ruins of the big manufacturing center, the Boston paper's photographer secured an aeroplane, made some splendid pictures of the scenes and had the front page of the daily feature, the "fit" in less than thirty-eight hours from the time the first alarm was turned in to the fire department.

Huerta is now looking for a soft place to land after running one of the strongest fleets which any one has ever had on a world power, and strange as it may seem, does not appear to fear this country as much as the small but determined forces of Villa. Being a civilized nation some times has its drawbacks when dealing with an arch-marsh like Mexico's present dictator, it prevents quick but just punishment.

The contention in the platform conventions over the state wide prohibition platform did not sugar well for the placing of that plank in the platform, but it came hereafter of the parties. The putting of the question up to the people while a political dodge gives the people the opening desired, and there is no question but what the amendment to the state constitution will carry by a heavy majority. The great opposition appearing in the convention must be clearly analyzed to get at the real situation. In the first place, the bulk of the delegates to the conventions of all parties are from the cities and naturally the wet sentiment is stronger there than in rural communities because of the greater problem in law enforcement. Dolan, city controller, and Curtis, justice controls his county. Pontella controls its own equity delegation. As a result, wet sentiment represented by the convention is strong while not representing actual sentiment in any country as far as the voters are concerned.

MORE FEDERAL POWER OVER THE RAILROADS.

Washington people who wish to travel into Virginia sometimes cross the Potomac by boat or bridge and buy tickets there to get the benefit of the State two-cent fare law instead of buying their tickets from Washington and paying the three-cent rate allowed in interstate travel. The same situation, the New York Sun's Washington correspondent continues, exists in many other parts of the country, and it often happens that a man can thus get a local ticket at a cheaper rate than a man can who buys a through ticket. Again, the New York Commercial reminds us, State authorities sometimes prescribe such rates for sections of interstate railroads as to give shippers within the state an unfair advantage over those without its boundaries. Rates are adjusted to make a city within the state the distributing center of given territory rather than a better located place across the border. And if the practice were to go unchecked, every state as the Philadelphia Public Ledger observes, could artificially build up its own port and cities, to the detriment of the business of the country as a whole. But the era of these things is at an end, if the editors have properly forecast the effect of the Supreme Court's decision in the Shreveport case. Furthermore, the Court has taken another step toward imposing complete Federal control on the transportation systems of the country. The decision strikes a nail deep and hard into the coffin of state rights, says one New York editor. And while the railroads get one master instead of many, as it is remarked on every hand, some note that this master now controls everything except the operation of the roads, with the next step being government ownership.

The Supreme Court asserted unequivocally, that "wherever the interstate and intrastate transportation of carriers are so related that government of one involves the control of the other," Congress acting through its agent, the Interstate Commerce Commission, is entitled to prescribe the final and dominant rule." In other words, the Interstate Commerce Commission may regulate State regulations dealing with interstate traffic within the State or territory, if such regulations establish interstate rates, so long as they do not discriminate against interstate traffic. The importance of this decision in establishing railroad control upon a national basis is acknowledged by the press everywhere and most of the editors had it as a boon for the railroads. Railroad opposition may be represented by this statement from President L. D. Underwood, of the B. & O. "It isn't the greatest decision that has ever been handed down, but it is a great decision. It does not enhance our railroad income, but it simplifies matters. It lets us settle with confidence, experienced tribunals, and against a mass of politicians and legislators that set into State and Congressional a rule."

The situation giving rise to the Shreveport case is this, sketched by the New York Evening Post: "Shreveport, a town in northwestern Louisiana, forty miles east of the Texas border, conducted with interior Texas cities, such as Dallas and Houston, for the trade of the intervening Texas territory. The Interstate Commerce Commission had fixed the rate for such shipments from Shreveport into Texas; whereupon the Texas State Railway Commission had reduced the rate from the above named Texas cities to the competitive Texas territory, to a level which made the Texas shippers pay less than the Texas shippers pay for an exactly equivalent service as was paid by the Shreveport merchants." Complaint was made to the Interstate Commerce Commission which saw that the issue was to use "The Evening Post's" words, "indirect imposition of a protective tariff against a neighbor State." It appeared, for example, that at a rate of 99 cents first-class freight could be carried 160 miles eastward from Dallas, but only 55 miles into Texas from Shreveport. So the commission directed the Texas and this discrimination and establish equal rates for equal distances. This would have involved disobedience to the State authorities of Texas, and the order was made the basis of a suit which finally came to the Supreme Court. Justices Lurion and Pitney dissenting, the Court decided to uphold the Interstate Commerce Commission. The opinion was read by Mr. Justice Hughes, contained these paragraphs explaining the Court's position:

"The Commission was dealing with the relation of rates injuriously affecting, through an unreasonable discrimination, traffic that was interstate. The question was thus not simply one of transportation that was 'wholly within one State.' "Whereas the Interstate Commerce Commission's action is so related that the government of one involves the control of the other, it is Congress, and not the State, that is entitled to prescribe the final dominant rule, for otherwise Congress would be denied the exercise of its constitutional authority, and the State and not the nation would be the supreme within the national field.

"It is immaterial, so far as the protecting power of Congress is concerned, that the discrimination arises from historic rates as compared with interstate rates. The use of the instrument of interstate commerce in an abnormally undue way is to be left for the State to regulate, or some other—therefore, furnishes an abundant ground for Federal intervention. Nor can the attempted exercise of State authority alter the matter where Congress has acted, for a State may not authorize a carrier to do that which Congress is entitled to forbid and has forbidden. The Interstate Commerce Commission's action has not added to its argument in support of the Commission's order—that the power to deal with the relation between the two kinds of rates, as a relation, lies exclusively with Congress. It is manifest that the State cannot be the regulator of the carrier's interstate and interstate charges without directly interfering with the former, unless it simply follows the standard set by Federal authorities."

"This decision will give additional confidence in the sound common sense of the Supreme Court." The Philadelphia Public Ledger thinks, and the New York Evening Sun calls it "fundamental," but notes that it "affords no invariable test for finding when interstate commerce shall have been balked by State regulation." Yet, according to the Wall Street Journal, its importance in the ultimate solution of our rate problems can hardly be overestimated. "It is 'grand' popularly," said the New York Herald-Tribune. "It is the nation-wide and epoch-making," for "it puts the railroad business of the whole country on a national basis." There is no room now, observes the New York Tribune, "for the attempted Western revival of State rights as applicable to railroad regulation." "Fifty-seven varieties of State regulation controlling a single Federal regulation," remarks the Washington Times, "could produce nothing but interstate chaos." And the Federal Government, in the Boston Herald, "has long needed a final way to assert a better measure of authority in such cases." The New York Commercial is moved to make this comment:

"This case will apply to passenger-rates as well as to freight-rates and it will put an end to the attempt of the individual States to force railroads to give lower rates than the Interstate Commerce Commission approves, even though the passenger business is wholly within the boundaries of the State in which it is done. It is so far as the present effect that the maddening conflict of laws existing between the various states of the Union and between Congress and the State legislatures, it will be received with great satisfaction by the law-abiding people of the United States."

"On the other hand we find the New York Sun doubting whether there is really so much prohibition against Federal action as is claimed. 'The above-quoted opinion seems to think. And it thus presents the other side of the case.' "The exchange of the Interstate Commerce Commission's Federal fire is a substantial gain for the railroads under the national policy toward the carriers is going to be informed with a more intelligent determination and vigor than has been displayed in recent years. Making due allowance for the political fury excited by the mistakes and abuses of which railroad management has been guilty, it may be submitted that national political programs toward the railroads have obviously been dictated less by a well-considered intent to safeguard the future than by a destructive desire to punish and avenge the past."

Similarly, a financial writer on the New York Journal of Commerce here in the held in some quarters that "it only justifies the view that the Federal authorities to regulate or control, so far as the railroads are concerned, is the power to control their operation." And "in the same breath it is said that this last power to effect complete control by the Federal Government over the railroads is not what is really all authorities, non-agree to change of hand in this country—namely, government ownership of the roads.

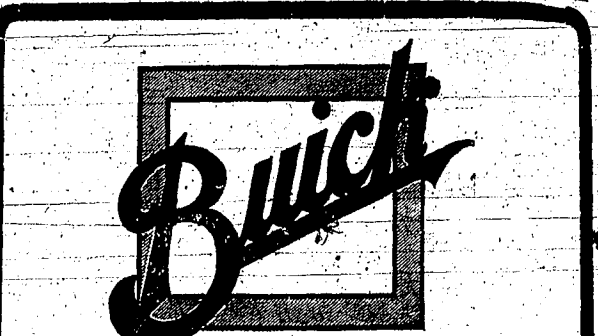

Another dissatisfied authority is Mr. Francis Lynde Stetson. This prominent railroad attorney is sorry to see such an increase in the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission, "a broadening of the central power of the nation," never contemplated by the masters of the constitution. "The decision," he says, "is a blow to the nation's welfare, in fact, is a blow to the welfare of the country, which it had been in favor of the state."

FOURTH OF JULY WOUNDS

Furnished by the State Board of Health. "The particular danger of Fourth of July wounds is tetanus, the 'lockjaw' Wounds from blank-cartridge, pistols, toy-cannons, fire crackers and other noise-making devices are not uncommonly followed by this frightful and fatal affection. But tetanus can be avoided. Most every case is chargeable to neglect of the necessary precautions, especially in this time of season-following weather which have been looked upon as straggling."

All Fourth of July wounds, no matter how slight, should be attended by a physician, as evident from the following necessary procedure: Without exception, all wounds—no matter how fully open under local or preferably formal—antiseptic, and all tetanus material must be removed or badly injured tissue removed. After thoroughly cleansing the wound, wash it out with a very strong solution of carbolic acid and immediately follow with a washing with 95 per cent alcohol to prevent further action of the acid. Then wash the wound with a 1-1000 or 1-2000 solution of bichloride of mercury and pick it with clean wool in a saturated solution of alkaline solution of the acid, applying a narrow, wet and immediately follow with the dressing of the same solution. The wound must never be closed; healing must be by granulation. Renew the

WALDORF KEY FAR AFIELD

Small Boy Found It While Picking Flowers in a Vacant Lot at Hot Springs, Ark.

The whole office force of the Waldorf in space time a few days ago was speculating on the nature of the wanderings of a key which was returned in the morning after an absence of about 24 hours. Only "Old" and "Little" earlier in the day. Chicago man who had just got back from Europe had expressed his pleasure to Louis Parsons, the room clerk, that he had got back to New York, because he could go ahead and lose his room key and not be charged for it. Whereas at a hotel in Paris he had done that and found himself charged with 90 cents on his bill. Then when little Robert Callee of Cleveland, who had come on the New York with his mother, handed over to "Hap" Parson's a key on the morning walk, a mate to 1372, which is a suite, and told where he had got it, everybody began to wonder how the key got there.

Robert, who appeared to be about two weeks years old, said that about two weeks ago he was with his mother in Hot Springs, Ark., and they had gone out into a vacant lot to pick flowers. A dark metallic object lying on the ground attracted his attention. It was a key with a tag on it. Scraping off the dirt he found the tag to bear a legend just like that of the key he was accustomed to see at the Waldorf-Astoria. He was far from 1000 feet from his mother told him soon that he could not deliver it in person.

There is no record at the hotel which would indicate who took away the key and let it or when it disappeared. Hundreds of keys are taken away from the hotel by visitors, some of which find their way back by mail, but the most of which have to be replaced. This is the first case on record at the hotel where the key of a 1372 suite was found in a field in Arkansas.

CLOTHES SAVED HIS LIFE

Man, "Innocent Bystander" in Street Duel, So Dressed Up That Bullet Can't Kill Him

Two young men met on Sixteenth street and Ninth avenue, New York, and engaged in a heated argument. Persons who passed heard them mention the name of a girl.

The employees of the National Biscuit company, of whom there are close to 1,000—a majority girls—can't see the "big picture" that a "black" way the men began to fight with their fists. Then they got positions on each side of the street, drew revolvers, and began to shoot. After each had emptied his pistol they ran in different directions and escaped.

As the men fled, one of them threw up his hands and fell. Policemen came and found he had been shot in the left breast. In this hospital he described himself as Philip Moretti, 453-broth, of 211 Chatham street. He wore an overcoat, an undervest, white waistcoat, a shirt, and two suits of underwear. The bullet had not been able to do him much harm after going through such a mass of clothing.

Early Aids for Colds

An ordinary cold can often be checked in the first stages by inducing a good perspiration, says "Sister Josephine Goodley" in "Common Sense Aids in Health." A glass of very hot milk, drunk after you are in bed, or the juice of a lemon added to a tumbler of boiling water, will often accomplish this. A hot bath with a little ammonia has been added is another method.

A teaspoonful of ammoniated tincture of gaulthar taken three times a day helps to throw off a cold. A cough caused by a tickling throat can generally be stopped by drinking a teaspoonful of "Eucalypt" added to a wineglassful of water.

The fumes of burnt camphor fubled will dry up a running cold. I.e. place a piece of camphor in a saucer, set fire to it, after an minute or two breathe the fumes.

Difficult to Measure Altitude

It is even more difficult to estimate height than distance, and when one reads how once again the high record has been broken by some daring aviator, one is puzzled how to realize what the figures of his record really mean. Well, at any rate, we have the birds on a standard constant record. "Commander" Wm. H. Byrham's recent 15,000 feet, the common birds of England are more grounded, for generally they fly at no greater height than 300 feet. When migrating, however, they may rise higher than even the wild geese, the loftiest of which seldom reaches 5,000 feet. The highest flyer in the world is the great audiver, who sometimes rises five miles.

American Money in Armenia

Hundreds of heavy emigration from Armenia to this country are parties, many returnable in Armenian villages, where the remaining residents are principally women, children, old men, and a small number of younger men. Frequently these are not known here, left in the village to cultivate the surrounding fields. If no money came from the absent ones, the conditions and suffering would be a constant condition, but the inflow of money is as regular and constant as the outflow of breadstuffs has been continuous. It is estimated that the factor returns to Hagrap and nearby places receive at least $50,000 per month from Armenia.

WILLED HOUSE TO WIDOWS

Good Reason Why Gaston de Janais' Paris Property is Always Occupied

For six centuries eight widows have lived at a certain number in the street now known as Rue Saint-Sauveur, in this city, says a Paris letter to the New York Sun. Not the last of women all these years, of course, but always widows and always eight of them. Gaston de Janais, who was lord of the suite of Charles VII, was seriously injured at the battle of Cravein, in the fifteenth century. Eight widows of Auxerre attended him and nursed him back to health. When he returned to Paris De Janais returned the building which he owned to the Rue Saint-Sauveur—it was known by another name then—sent for his eight angels of mercy, and installed them there for life.

Then De Janais set aside a trust fund and drew up a legal instrument stipulating that always eight widows should live there. That was in 1423. The original building was torn down long ago and its successor in turn gave way to another and that one to a third, but each house occupying the original site has been the home of eight widows who, otherwise, might have been public charges.

It has been proposed at times to transfer the women to a public institution, but the authorities have seen to it that De Janais's stipulation has been followed to the letter.

RABBITS TRAINED TO WORK

Animals Eat Weeds, but Never Touch Cultivated Plants, Declares Their Owner

No longer need farmers rack their backs and get stooping shoulders by hoeing out weeds, according to a statement made by James R. Reed of Trumbull, N. Y.

By careful breeding and systematic training, Mr. Reed, so he claims, has produced rabbits which will go into a garden patch and devour all the weeds, but not touch a single cultivated plant.

During the last two years a special plot of ground has been devoted to the training of rabbits. They were kept without food for several days, and then released in the plot, which had been prepared by putting on the cultivated plants a chemical which would make the animals ill. After repeated trials the rabbits seemed to understand that they might only eat weeds with impunity, says Mr. Reed.

Now the rabbits are ready to be put to work, he says he starts his rabbits for several days, and then lets them into the garden, where they effectively do the work that formerly required hoeing.

BEYOND DOUBT A PATRIOT

Sympathy of Italian Very Plainly With America in Controversy With Mexico

He entered the rally with a box, which the conductor ordered him to leave outside. Very broad, very dark, with Italy written all over him. A drummer sat in the corner with a newspaper. The Italian sat by him. He was excited and had difficulty in composing himself. He tilted his hat and conducted the newspaper held by the drummer.

Finally he whispered eagerly, "How many?" The drummer was surprised, but he answered rather shortly, "If you mean Americans, four were killed." "How many?" he asked. "Four," he answered. "How many?" he asked. "Four," he answered. "How many?" he asked. "Four," he answered.

Germany Takes to Ragtime

Notwithstanding the prevalence of folk songs among the peasantry the dance music of the United States has been imported into Germany, and that it prevails all Italy records the introduction of American "ragtime" music which is making its way by slow degrees to that kingdom. In Germany, on the other hand, American music, especially ragtime, is very popular and has a good and ready sale, says a United States consular report.

A German music publishing firm in Berlin is now to copy the popular and catchy ragtime music of the United States to all parts of Germany; where are also translated and published by this firm, and some of these American songs are quite popular. Music dealers in St. Louis say the German firm referred to can sell the copied music more cheaply than the original can be imported from America.

Ball Gives Freedom

For the man who has little else there is the unending satisfaction of accomplishment. In his own garden he is a free being, independent of kings and of corporations. He is God's companion in making the earth to bring forth fruit. And when all agencies and he is compelled to retire from the activities of a lifetime, to leave his place in the ranks to be filled by a younger man, he is not only free, but he is free to do as he pleases, and he is free to do as he pleases, and he is free to do as he pleases.

Old Tower to Be Destroyed

Just outside the Syrian port of Tripoli, lying along the railway track, is a famous old fort known as the "Tower of the Virgin." It was built by Richard the Lion-Hearted of England. As a matter of fact, it is one of six such forts built by the Crusaders to protect the coast, only one in a very good condition. Some time ago it was to be demolished, to make room for the railway, much to the discomfiture of archeologists, who would like to see this old tower preserved as a relic of antiquity.

Nursing the Electors

The vigorous specifics of M. Jean Blaupied, the poet, as a candidate in the elections for the French Chamber of Deputies, are being given attention. You are not worthy of the name of elector," he tells the electors. "You are merely brutes! You are only dogs!"

He continues on by addressing his "honorable" future constituents, through the Press, as "wretches, mercenaries, jackals, savages, howling wild beasts!"

Christmas Feeling

"Oh, Christmas," he exclaimed, "soulfully, 'have you ever felt a distinctive sense of oppression as the new weight of life were a burden too heavy to be borne by the chained spirit, panting with psychic longing to be free?"

"I invariably have such a feeling at Christmas time," was the callous response, "but hitherto I have attributed it to pudding!"

Novellists May Exaggerate Facts, But It Is Truth That—There is Always Something Doing

"To the young man seeking legitimate adventure I could give no better advice than to get a moderate sized cat, a pair of overalls and a horse, and to strike out on the cow country," says the New York Herald. The author of cowboy life, "The Wing Bowler," has been announced. "It has done the nerve" with which I have endowed Bowler he will win out, if he hasn't he will get the adventures anyway. But he won't find the Arizona he has learned to expect from fiction. The good old days that Alfred Henry Lewis writes about in his "Wing Bowler," while representing a degree of the spirit of the early cowboy settlers, are of course not to be taken seriously as to his life, and even the stories of Stewart Edward White, and they come pretty straight from the cattle country, have a little realism about the western corner, which catches the best color and shows it up big. As for the unknown and struggling authors who put up the bulk of Arizona stories many of them have never enjoyed the privilege of a visit to the enchanted mesa, which conducts the best color often in ignorance than with intent to deceive, but even by the test of their stories there seem to be more fair travel and brave men in the territory than they would expect to find, in a specially selected group.

U. S. AFTER IDAHO MEN

Two Federal Commissioners Alleged To Have Committed Irregularities

SALT LAKE.—That Theodore Turner, mayor of Pocatello and United States commissioner, charged excessive fees to persons making final proof...

Details of the charges that the government will attempt to prove against Turner and also Henry Van Sloaten of Bonanza, another United States commissioner, were given out Tuesday at the Salt Lake office of the United States land office...

The charges against Turner and Van Sloaten in brief are that they attacked their seals to final proofs when such proofs were not taken before them and not signed by or read to or by dependents in their presence...

In addition to these charges against the two men, Turner is charged with having given "incorrect, misleading and pernicious advice" to parties contemplating acquisition of title or in directly loaning money to entrainers making final proof before him prior to the granting of the patents.

Turner in addition to being mayor of Pocatello, is deputy United States district clerk, presiding chairman of the state highway commission of Idaho and president of the Hannock Abstract, Deposit & Trust company.

Van Sloaten is president and cashier of the Bancroft-Slate bank as well as United States commissioner at Bonanza.

Declares Charges False Mayor Theodore Turner of Pocatello, in a statement issued in response to the charges against him in the above article, declares the charges were unfounded.

He charges made by field agents of the department of the interior that excessive fees had been collected by me are based upon the theory that they had paid to attorneys and land companies providing them with which have been aware to before me should be regarded as fees collected by me. I have never, at any time, collected any fees for services as United States commissioner in excess of those allowed me by law.

The charge of having improperly taken testimony in final proofs and certified as to such taking of testimony is disproven by the government's own witnesses. The charge of improper advice is not worthy of more serious attention than the other two charges, and no testimony can be produced to support such charges.

HIS DREADFUL SECRET TOLD

Severe Blow to Wife Who Loved Unfortunate Youth, But of Course It Was All Over.

"Don't ask me to tell you the reason," the young man begged. "But the beautiful girl replied, 'I can't tell you to let the matter drop without a full explanation. I have chosen my bridesmaids and told my friends of our engagement. They will not be inclined to be informed merely that you consider yourself unworthy of me. They will think that you don't care for me and have merely wanted an excuse for throwing me over.'"

"I know. You can tell them anything you like. Tell them it was you who threw me over." "They will want to know why." "You can say that you didn't love me."

"No, Clarence, I can't tell them that. I would be worthy. I have made a brave effort to keep myself free from the vices that drag so many young men down to destruction. I have told you all about my own past that there is to tell."

"Then I insist upon knowing why you wish to release me from my promise." "Please, darling, have mercy." "I must know the truth."

"I am sorry but I am sorry when I have told you that you have been so cruel. I have just found out that my father was once a chorus man in a musical comedy."

With a snicker she turned away, leaving the young man no hope but could have had such an origin.—Chicago Record-Herald.

BASIS FOR HAPPY MARRIAGE

Writer Gives Reasons for Assertion That Friendship Plays a Most Important Part.

That there should be such involved discussion, and so many eminently contradictory theories about the cause of the failure of marriage is surprising.

The plain fact is that marriage is always the seed of romance and the beginning of history. This is so true that Homer tells us the women of ancient Greece reckoned their ages, not from the birth date, but from the wedding day. A good many husbands in this twentieth century are good deal more certain about the number of years their wives have lived since marriage than about the summers and winters they have numbered before the became wives.

Love is the spark of life, but friendship is the nourishing food, without which the flame of love is extinguished. It is the only element which, by becoming a burden, the marriage which in all ages and no food soon gives one, or frequently both of the parties thereto acute indigestion.

LONG TERM IN PRISON

Supreme Court Denies Walter A. Grant's Appeal.

Walter A. Grant, the Pocatello bootlegger, convicted of arson in the attempted burglary of the home of C. D. Smith, the prosecuting attorney of Blaine county, in a spirit of revenge, and sentenced to a term of 25 to 30 years in the state penitentiary, met defeat in the Idaho supreme court, in a decision on his appeal handed down last week.

This opinion of the supreme court, written by Chief Justice Allshie, and concurred in by Justices Sullivan, reopens the case at considerable length and reaches the final conclusion that the judgment of Judge J. M. Stevens, the trial judge, must be affirmed.

The appeal of Grant was made largely on the claim that he was convicted largely on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice in his crime, and that the trial court erred in not granting a new trial to hear alleged new evidence.

Not So Great, After All!

St. Robert Hall, the famous English astronomer, whose discovery occurred a few months ago, used to tell a little story of an experience that he had when he was at the Danubius observatory.

"Surely you can," said Hall. "Come round tonight and I shall be very happy to let you see it through the telescope."

"I am sorry (that you cannot)," said the astronomer. "You will have to wait until night."

"Huh! Then your old telescope is not so great a thing as I thought it was," cried the man, relieved from his illusion. "I can see the moon at night without it."—Youth's Companion.

SHAKEUP ON O. S. E.

General Superintendent Walter C. Haines at Pocatello.

Tomorrow, July 1st, the new order of things goes into effect on the Salt Lake division and will mark a general reorganization of the local office staff.

A. F. Brewer, the new superintendent of the Salt Lake division, was here on arrival this morning, and was being shown through the office by Superintendent A. H. Stevens of the Idaho division.

In this connection it is a matter of extensive circulation that Mr. Stevens, in his remarks to the press, was being a rumor that he was to be transferred to Salt Lake. He will continue to be the same genial head of the Idaho division, and it would be hard to figure local operators without the presence of Stevens, who has long been associated with the company at this point.

The chemical Superintendent Stevens issued two orders indicating further changes that he effective to-day.

These transfers of E. Bookin, acting superintendent of the Blaine division, to Nampa, where he is advanced to the position of assistant superintendent of the local office, and branches, including the Blaine Electric yard. His headquarters will be at Nampa.

The office of Superintendent of Nampa is abolished, and J. F. Haines, who is detailed in that capacity, is transferred to Pocatello, where he is appointed to the position of transmitter of the local district, including the Blaine Electric yard.

H. J. Plimhoff is transferred to the north end and becomes transmitter of the Montana division.

Henry Haines, who is detailed to the first and second districts, Grant to Pocatello, not including the Blaine Electric yard, and the maintenance of way and engineering departments are now located in the depot building, while the district offices are in the north building, which will also be the office of General Superintendent.

Walter C. Haines, who is detailed to the first and second districts, Grant to Pocatello, not including the Blaine Electric yard, and the maintenance of way and engineering departments are now located in the depot building, while the district offices are in the north building, which will also be the office of General Superintendent.

It is expected that the successful bidder on the new depot project will also be announced within the next few days.—Pocatello Tribune.
