

Mr. Booth Gone East—“The Force” Makes Prices

Booth Said “Clean ‘Em Up”

Summer Dresses Must Go

Every one of these chic little Mid-summer dresses must be closed out now. Mr. Booth has such authority to make prices and they are to be right. These are new and pretty, both in style and material. We are cutting the price to make sales.

Suits $5 and $10

Just a very few left and think of $5 and $10 for $20 to $35 suits.

$1.25 Ladies' White Skirts 75c

Mr. Booth has gone to New York and left us in full charge with authority to act on our judgement. He said “Get rid of summer stocks at any cost.” Now its up to us to make good. Our store has been increasing its business and it just wouldn't do for us to let it drop. We are going to show Mr. Booth when he gets home a nice record and a clean stock. We are proud of our store and we will make it grow.

“The Force”

Dress Goods Must Go

That was the order. The hot seas is still ahead and the prices we will make on these fabrics will move the economical shopper to buy while they are cheap. Crepes, Ratines, fancy weaves and fancy colors—staple ginghams, silks and dress embroideries are included in our price making. Determination that brings success is ours.

The northern part of the state is asking the southern part that it be given its share of representation on the supreme bench and that one of the nominees in the primaries be a North Idaho man. The North's claim is a just one. It is for an territorial judge to be removed and the voters of the south should remember that there is, however, another factor which should be taken into consideration in picking any man, and that is the qualifications of the aspirant for the position. The people of North Idaho should be in a position to know their own candidates and pick them, but under the present system there seems to be too many candidates from the North and the North is asking the whole state to do something which it should do for itself. That is, pick its candidate for the supreme bench, and elect it as it should. It looks as though in the process that the North would lose out altogether in the race which will really begin after the primaries.

The fact that Charles H. Burton is again a candidate for county commission from this, the second district, should be good news for the voters of the entire county. Mr. Burton has the ability and has the courage of his convictions, which is worth a lot in a county commissioner. His training as a civil engineer will be of untold value to the county in its road work and will be a great factor in settling the attention of the voters on his candidacy. The great amount of money which is foolishly expended on the highways of any county is not due to any graft on the part of officials who as a rule try to do their duties, but is more often due to the lack of technical knowledge as to the proper methods of building roads. Mr. Burton will be able to give just such technical skill to the county if elected. As a progressive member of the Republican party, Mr. Burton has ever favored measures which are demanded by the voters of this progressive county. He is strongly in favor of law and order, which means law and order for all classes of citizens.

The sad accident which snuffed out the life of the little boy has had Saturday should serve to arouse the activities of the city and county company officials to assist the question of responsibility at once. For eight years the ditch has proven a menace to the lives of children of this city and for eight years there has been constant agitation about having it properly covered. Yet eight years have elapsed and the question of who shall bear the expense of keeping the ditch open, as danger to the public. This should always be done on a local basis, but it seems that when there is active danger to the innocent lives of children, the question of financial responsibility should be set aside. In a word, the health agency ditch should be covered just as fast as the men can do the work and the city and county company stipulation, agree to stand the cost which the ever of the court decides the matter. The life of one child will justify all the expense connected with the matter. It may mean the lives of several while the supreme court under difficulties, amount on tardy local decisions. No amount of money can atone to the suffering parents of Saturday's victim, for the little life snuffed out because money was not in the way of proper protection of that child's life. Let's get down to business at once. Cut out dallying with danger and protect the children of our citizens. There is a way out, if the will of the officials is there to do things.

THE CONVICT PLEA FOR PROHIBITION

The dramatic appeal for state-wide prohibition addressed to the Pennsylvania legislature by 1,008 out of a total of 1,478 prisoners in the Eastern Penitentiary, at Philadelphia, because they describe their downfall to drink, is said by the Philadelphia North American to be “the strongest sociological argument ever made” against the liquor evil. More than that, press reports tell us that the example is being copied by other penal institutions, among them the Federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the inmates of which are to petition Congress for a national prohibition law. The Pennsylvania petition attracts wide editorial attention, especially as it occurs when the perennial question of prohibition is such to the fore, as discussed in national prohibition, as called for by the Hobson resolution in the House of Representatives in article and our editors are also interested in the fact that on July 1, West Virginia became the ninth prohibition state, with all indications that Idaho will be the tenth. Incidentally, as an exceptional specimen of editorial interest, it may be noted that the Eastern Penitentiary movement is the work of the convict editor of the Empire, the prison paper. He himself, is a victim of drink, which he names “a wife's woe, and a child's sorrow,” adding “that if a next manhood were his merit at the next legislature, he would be ended.” The text of the petition follows:

“To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met: “Your petitioners, representing the major portion of the Eastern State Penitentiary of Pennsylvania respectively say: “That they believe fully to our credit of crime within the state is directly attributable to the excessive use of intoxicating liquor; and that the sale of that many of them have a personal knowledge of its degrading influence as exemplified in their own lives; “That, believing if the sale of intoxicating liquor was prohibited by the enactment of laws by your honorable body, the effect would be to reduce crime at least 50 per cent. If not more, they therefore “Respectfully pray that you will favorably consider the introduction of any measure having for its object the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquor, and use the great power with which you are clothed to secure the passage of an act to prohibit the sale of such intoxicating liquor anywhere within the bounds of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. “We further pray that you will give due consideration to this petition, coming to you as a voluntary deed of body of earnest men and women, acting entirely on its own initiative, without suggestion from others.” It is a notable coincidence says the Philadelphia North American, that this petition was signed on Independence Day and the Sunday following and it adds: “A number of those who thus evidenced their stand on this vital question did so in the face of threats and intimidation which would have kept them from exercising their free will under ordinary circumstances. For while the circulation of the petition observed their instructions to use no newspapers, and avoid all controversy, certain members of the prison hierarchy organized a militant opposition movement.

“These liquor advocates preceded the clerks and did all they could to keep the men in the block from signing. They resorted to threats and warnings; but in spite of these tactics—the force of which can hardly be ascertained by persons not familiar with certain phases of prison life—only 20 per cent of those they sought to hold in line for rum were won over.” “This feature adds weight to the result, which greatly exceeded the expectations of the prison officials and those outside who had heard of the project. One prison officer had predicted it would be impossible to get 500 names to such a petition.”

“Human documents” in the procedure appeared in the form of letters to the Empire, some of which are reprinted by the North American. One writer says: “I have been reading The Empire and particularly the articles aimed at the liquor traffic. For fifteen years I worked as a tradesman and managed a family. I not bad company and began to drink. One night while intoxicated, I went home. My good wife remonstrated with me, and in a moment of anger I killed her. I am here for life. My children will be dying, and I hear the siren of my wrong-doing. In the name of God, do what you can toward checking the evil. Good luck to you, comrades. I may never live to face this prison again. I will, however, while I am alive, try to do my share toward giving an end to the curse.” The North American falls into this vast “sarcophagus measure,” and Dr. Samuel Zane Hatten says in the New York National Advocate (Prohib.) that it is an appeal in behalf of the many who will be benefited by the same and end-of-the-liquor traffic continues. The action of these men, thinks the New York American issue (Prohib.) “will put the next Pennsylvania legislature in a position where it will either have to act against the liquor traffic or place its public approval upon crime.” Then, replying to those who look askance at petitions from convicts, it argues: “A prisoner in a penitentiary is still a human being and a member of a society, and as such has a right to have his thoughts and convictions covered, however much his liberty of action may be restricted.” “This contention is fully supported by correspondence of the New York Sun, who says that a convict is recognized as an enemy to society, and society doesn't generally listen to, or ask advice from, its enemies.” Then, too, he points out that in many cases inmates of jails—

“clearly fallible their downfall to the curse of drink, not to abnormal traits nor to the weakness or defects of their moral nature, because the alleged victim of drink or drugs' excessive pity and sympathy not usually accorded to the delinquent criminal.” “It is a well-known fact that many burglars, gamblers, and gunmen are total abstemious, enjoying themselves the use of tobacco in order, to their way of thinking, and the nerves required in the exercise of their calling may be kept keyed up to the highest efficiency.” The writer summons to his support in this assertion the “confessions” of Al J. Jennings, the former bandit, who is now seeking to be a candidate for the governorship of Oklahoma, and quotes from the Saturday Evening Post, as follows: “Part of my duty was to interrogate convict prisoners concerning their private lives and enter the answers on the proper blanks. There and there I had light on prison statistics. One of the questions ran: ‘What do you attribute your downfall?’ In nine cases out of ten the experienced prisoner answered, ‘Drink.’ Men who never tasted liquor, because they did not like it, returned that answer just the same. To begin with, it was a good, steady, conventional reason, which invited further questioning, and then it gave the burglar, the murderer, and the counterfeiter an excuse to work up sympathy.”

Daily papers like the New York Tribune, Providence Journal, and Springfield Republican, admit that the convict's petition is a touching one, but argue that it does not affect the working of prohibition legislation, which “doesn't prohibit.”—Literary Digest.

NOTICE FOR BIDS.

For construction of sidewalks in the City of Twin Falls is hereby given, and sealed bids will be received by the City Council of the City of Twin Falls up to the seventeenth day of August, 1914, at eight o'clock, P. M., for the furnishing of all materials and labor necessary in the building and construction of concrete sidewalks to be built by the owners of lots fronting and abutting thereon, by resolution of the City Council adopted July 28, 1914.

Sealed bids are to be made at 8 o'clock per square foot. Each bid shall be accompanied by a certified check in the sum of Ten Dollars as an evidence of the good faith of the bidder, same to be forfeited to the City on failure of the successful bidder to enter into a contract in accordance with his bid.

Payment for the construction of the sidewalks will be made by warrants drawn on the fund to be created by special assessments against abutting property for payment of said sidewalks provided for in and by Ordinance No. 12 of said City. The successful bidder will be required to enter into bond with the City of Twin Falls in an amount equal to sixty per cent of the amount of the contract, conditioned upon the faithful performance of the said contract. The City Council reserves the right to reject any and all bids. Dated this twenty-first day of July, 1914.

STUART H. TAYLOR, City Clerk. July 21-25 August.

NOTICE TO CANDIDATES.

It will be the declared intention of The Times to make every candidate drawn for any announcement run in the direct of his issues. Owing to the space primary law statements of candidates positions can be made a part of the political campaign expenses. All notices run in this paper must be complete. Each candidate's worth or space will be rated to candidates until the cash is paid. It takes some time to set up a legal system, but The Times prides herself that only gratified notices here that any man pays for services rendered.

IN A LITERARY BROTHERHOOD

Men of Great Literary Attainments—Whose Friendship Has Been Made a Matter of History.

It was Rosetti, the great friend, who described Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, the famous poet, novelist and critic as a hero of friendship.

For many years they were never separated. They lived together at the Pines, Putney, took their summer holidays in company, and practically spent every working hour together, discussing literary matters and affairs.

Watts-Dunton's papers were left to Mr. Rosetti, and he has since hoped that he would write the famous poet's biography.

Like many other literary men, Watts-Dunton cared little for society, although occasionally he was "lured" out to play the "low" at his receptions.

"My dear sir," said Mr. Watts-Dunton, "I never knew Adam."

It is said that this was the only occasion when Mr. Watts-Dunton perpetrated a joke. At the same time he was one of the kindest of men, and unlike other recluses, took the greatest interest in the affairs of the world.

The novelist, by the way, was a great believer in hard work. All his hours of rest he devoted to his work.

Snake Around His Waist. Escaping from a crate of pineapples, a long black snake crawled along the track and was seen to crawl around the waist of Arnold Thomas, a colored stevedore, of Baltimore.

As soon as he felt the clammy reptile against his skin the colored man dropped his truck and ran into the street, crying loudly for help.

Heads of perspiration trickled down Thomas' face as he tried to rid himself of his live bracelet.

Suddenly the reptile uncoiled itself, dropped to the street, and wriggled through a crevice in the wharf.

A young man had decided to join the Episcopal church, but his family were all Baptists, so he thought he would go on going to the Episcopal church he made a request for such a baptism.

The pastor minister, on hearing this, was quite delighted and readily agreed to baptize and take the young man into the church the following Sunday morning, but said the rector: "Don't just want you to baptize him, but to let him go to join the church."

The good Baptist minister, after being so pleased by saying: "We do our own washing, but we don't take in other people's washing."—Exchange.

A little girl of six, looking thoughtfully out the window of her room the other day. Her mother asked the cause of her seriousness.

"Oh, she replied, "I was just thinking that when I grow up to be a big girl, I'll get my 'fat' married and have three children."

The parent was surprised and amused, and said: "Well, you will be very fortunate, indeed," she said.

Then the little girl slipped into thought. Finally she said: "But you can't get 'fat' married. I might marry a bachelor."

Hagar or Flight. Hagar, who in Hebrew means "stranger," was the handmaid of Sarah and mother of Ishmael's eldest son, Ishmael. She was of Egyptian origin. Her flight, as recorded in Genesis 16 and her expulsion, chapter 21, are from the Jewish and Ebraic sources respectively, and presenting interesting points of comparison.

WOOLING AT RISK OF LIFE

Excellent Reasons Why the Lot of a Male Spider Can Not Be Called Happy.

There are the spiders, who live and die in the shade. A unique web which declares that the female shall be so in all things stunner and wiser than the male. It is impossible to find anywhere in nature such an astoundingly sex relation, for it is the chief object of the male spider's life to be laid devious by the lady spider to whom he has elected to surrender his heart. His whole structure is designed to aid and abet him in this perfidious undertaking. It is a small-injured someone minute—strong of limb, agile, wary to an extreme. As a natural result, his personality is not prepossessing. He is no export life.

He goes his way through life, he discovers the silken trails of a female, and observing it, he hastily and foudly meditates. In this he is not alone; for others, too, have obeyed her silent summons—have come from far places to group themselves disreputably about her. There is the suit-or, perhaps, possessed of great valor—even so, for days his courage fails him; but at last, valiantly, this troubadour advances and twangs one of the strands of her web. By this he strives to secure her for a partner. To discern her mood. At last, overcome by his own femerity, he stands up and goes up her silken ladder, straddling over her own multifarious legs, so great is his eagerness to be with her.

She watches him, immobile, a tiny phlox made of velvet; then there is a sudden rush, a fatal wrapping of the entangling mesh—and an ogre drops dead the body of a gallant knight, sucked dry. It was not so long ago that the inventor of his mellow pillow may meet a like fate before one succeeds in soothing her. No, the lot of a spider is not a happy one. C. William Beebe, in "The Atlantic."

NOT GIVEN MEED OF PRAISE. Inventors and Promoters of Appliances Which Have Enriched the World Too Frequently Overlooked.

History bristles with the names of doughty warriors and rulers, describes at length their struggles and achievements, but rarely mentions the inventors and promoters of the great agencies which have made modern civilization possible, with hardly, if any, mention.

The invention of printing has had more influence upon the development of the race than any act or any ruler that the world has ever known, and more than half of those who read this book would not know the inventor's name.

The men who invented and developed the steam engine did more to lighten human toil and to make possible to each of the dwellers upon earth a larger meed of comfort and enjoyment than all the generals who ever pitched men against their fellows. Hunt for their names in the indexes of your histories.

Art and literature have been broad highways to fame. The high school scholar can tell you who wrote what, and when he wrote it, but he knows him and built the first railroad in America, when he was a boy. The magnificent Albert Memorial is covered with the names of authors and painters and sculptors, but Michael Angelo in there because he was a painter, and not because he was an engineer.

Canada's Influence on Crockett. The late S. R. Crockett had struggled in his early life as many other poets and authors did. He began to work on the farm at an early age, at the age of five, and by the time he was at the age of six, he had a household. He was up at five o'clock; and all through his life he continued to rise at that hour, for early rising was a habit with him.

One of his cousins was a farmer-plantation who had been to Canada and acquired larger ideas than the rest of the family—and, finding in the boy an unusual play of mind, he used to bring him into the field before the day's labors began, and would talk to him of the things of the world.

Profanity His Undoing. The ostentatious expression of anger at finding nothing in it that he heard three other men had just cracked resulted in the arrest at New York of Joseph Wilson, homeless by his own inscription.

Fingerprint Proof Disproved. Wilson's assertion that he had never been arrested before, and a term in the Ebraic reformatory for grand larceny in 1912 was found in his record.

ARE QUICK TO LEARN

BUGLE CALLS BECOME FAMILIAR TO ARTILLERY HORSES.

Respond to the Marital Common as Rapidly as Could Their Riders—Evidence of Their Intelligence on Record.

"Horses chosen for the military service," said an old artilleryman, "show marvelous intelligence and quickness in adapting themselves to their equipments. Every artilleryman knows that they learn the bugle calls and drum volutions sooner, as a rule, than the average recruit."

"They quickly acquire a uniform gait, which is about the same as the route-step or marching step. If the horses do not fall habitually into the same gait as the infantry there would be paying distances between the different arms of the service. In the drills in the artillery service the horses will preserve their alignment as well as the infantry ranks."

"It is remarkable how quickly the army horse learns the bugle calls and their significance. Let the first note of the feed or water call be sounded, and the horse will be snuffing, kicking, and snorting among the horses, impatient for that call to be answered."

"Once during a storm at night in our camp our horses were soled with such a heavy rain that the battery battery broke loose and scattering about in their flight. The morning there was a wild rush by the artillerymen to capture horses for use."

"It was excitement, and the soldiers were shouting and shouting. An officer ordered the bugler to sound the feed call. He gave the call, and instantly horses from every direction came dashing in to that battery camp. The equine discipline was so accurate that they were back in their stalls in a few minutes."

"When I could see the line of the trained army horse seems to know everything that is going on and the reason for it and does his duty nobly. It is not that they are so bright like his human comrades."

"A horse in one of our batteries during the Murrenboro fight was hit by a piece of shell which split his skull. The driver turned him loose, but he would not run. He was a shot and watched the firing, and when the shot was fired would follow it with his gaze, as if to note its effect on the battery. When a shell would burst, he would turn his head and look at it."

"When he saw the team he had been working with up to the time of his wound driven back for a renewal of ammunition for the battery he ran to the front and walked around with the rest. When an officer pushed him aside he gave at the new horse with a sorrowful expression in his eyes. Then he began to utter that cry of his which was so much to be pitied, and he would walk away and lay down and die. The men declared that it was a broken heart, not his wound, that killed him."

"During a fierce charge of Confederates at the battle of Gettysburg an officer was among the killed in the charge and the cavalry was driven back. The horse of the officer had ridden a magnificent animal, and he had been taught to run to the front and look back at the bayonet. The man was killed, the sight of him was so suddenly and so suddenly."

"His nostrils were extended wide, his eyes fixed on the bayonet, and he would walk away and lay down and die. The men declared that it was a broken heart, not his wound, that killed him."

A Clever Answer Turneth a Prize Your Way

Some of our best patrons are in a keen competition for the prize exhibited in our Show Window this week.

It is such a beautiful bookcase that naturally the one who sees it covets its possession.

Further, this contest is developing such clever and witty titles that before the prize is finally awarded, we expect a greater portion of the population will have deposited their ballots.

You do not have to be a customer of the store, nor even make a purchase at the store to secure a ballot on which to write your answer to the question.

WHAT DOES BABY SAY? The contest closes August 15, and all answers must be in the hands of the Answer Editor not later than that date.

The prize winner will be announced a week later.

Canada's Influence on Crockett. The late S. R. Crockett had struggled in his early life as many other poets and authors did. He began to work on the farm at an early age, at the age of five, and by the time he was at the age of six, he had a household. He was up at five o'clock; and all through his life he continued to rise at that hour, for early rising was a habit with him.

One of his cousins was a farmer-plantation who had been to Canada and acquired larger ideas than the rest of the family—and, finding in the boy an unusual play of mind, he used to bring him into the field before the day's labors began, and would talk to him of the things of the world.

Profanity His Undoing. The ostentatious expression of anger at finding nothing in it that he heard three other men had just cracked resulted in the arrest at New York of Joseph Wilson, homeless by his own inscription.

Fingerprint Proof Disproved. Wilson's assertion that he had never been arrested before, and a term in the Ebraic reformatory for grand larceny in 1912 was found in his record.

Shipping Hogs in Tanns

By This Means Animals Reach Market in Good Condition.

It is no small chore to move a train of fat hogs across the red hot desert of southern Nevada at this time of the year, an Harry Pike will tell you. He has done it. Mr. Pike is shipping out about a train a week from southern Idaho and most of the hogs go to Los Angeles over the San Pedro road and across southern Nevada. Down in that country there is a valley called Mound Valley, where it is not that the thermometer boils over.

In order to transport the hogs safely at this season, Mr. Pike uses specially fitted cars, so arranged that the hogs stand on sand or "lay" in water to the depth of five inches. In the cool night the water is drawn off and the hogs fed, and fresh water tanks is turned in from the water tanks along the line. By following this method Mr. Pike is able to land his hogs on the Los Angeles market in first class condition and without material shrinkage, notwithstanding the extreme heat—Gooding Leader.

PIONEER OF IDAHO

F. N. Uhlirah of Riverside, in Black Hopskins Is Early Rider.

F. N. Uhlirah of Riverside, between Hangerman and Buhl, was in the city yesterday afternoon. He is company with Mr. and Mrs. G. Thompson, on a camping trip to Wood River points.

Mr. Uhlirah is a former pioneer of this section. He was a member of the cattle company of Uhlirah & Henkleman, who in the early sixties raised their stock on Camas prairie in the summer and on the Snake River desert in the winter, making Halley their headquarters for the summer and Shoshone in the winter.

He is now the owner of the beautiful and well-known ranch near farm. Besides the fruit raising business he owns and conducts the River Side hotel and a ferry across Snake river.

Mr. Uhlirah says that while the heavy frost in June injured many crops, he escaped. He has planted his entire crop of early peaches and apples, which was later on the market in their disposing of them. He will have a large crop of the market and other late crops for the market—Halley News-Miner.

Mrs. Robert McCubbin, who forty-five years ago saw the drizzle of the golden apple on the first transcontinental railroad, is visiting at 158 Eighth street, Oakland. Mrs. McCubbin's youngest son, who was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, and her visit recalls that of her husband in the Chamber of Commerce a year ago to interest the west cities in building a connecting link on the Western Pacific between Wyo., Nev., and Twin Falls. Mrs. McCubbin was a partner on the Coast Mountain route from the Coast to Boston—San Francisco Chronicle.

The most elaborate affair of last week was the luncheon given by Mrs. Stuart Taylor in honor of Mrs. Chas. Hill, who is visiting here from Boise. The table had an artistic centerpiece. The California poppies arranged in the table were being joined by large bowls of ribbon. Covers were laid for fourteen and the luncheon was assisted by Mrs. H. J. Wall and Mrs. Boyd Taylor. The guests included the great of the hour—Messrs. Medeson, Bryant, Louck, F. H. Smith, Sweet, Wilson, MacCallister, Young, Alken, Parkard, Wall, Boyd Taylor, Conner, and Madson, Nelson.

Mrs. Joseph Balke, who is soon to leave the city, was the honored guest on Saturday afternoon, when the Parliamentary and Cities department of the Twentieth Century club gave her a pleasant surprise at the Cookery house. The house was a bower of summer flowers and in the dining room, where Mrs. Sweet's refreshments were used in profusion. Several interesting talks were given, and Mrs. Sweet's refreshments were given. The affair was a most successful one and a great success by Mrs. Balke.
