Street Sprinkling Assessments Fixed At $125 per Fifty Feet. Short Line to Build Spur to Fruit Growers

LONDON—A dispatch to Reuters' Telegram company from Nish, Serbia, says that the French warships, coming from the southwest attacked the Austrian warships, two Austrian torpedoes were sunk and one set on fire, and a fourth one northwards towards Cattaro. The fight lasted over an hour.

Loss of Ansell and Captain Mitchell May Cause the Ball Team to Disband. Season Has Been a Success.

Politics—Entering Too Strongly in Wonderful Business Administration of Haines.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Salmon River Settlers Association was held yesterday morning to consider the recent proposal that the Board should side-track the right of way for a spur track to be built to the new buildings of the Twin Falls Fruit Growers' Association. The new track will be laid along the alley on the north side of the building.

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the City Council, held last night at 8 o'clock, the contract for the street sprinkling assessments for this year were fixed at $125 the amount for that year. Herman Schurger was given the contract for the cement sidewalks to be built this fall, the contract price being fifteen cents per square foot. The contract for the curbing on Second avenue east was also let to Schurger for forty-five cents per linear foot.

ROME, via London.—Confirmation of the naval fight in the Adriatic reported by Reuters' Telegram company in the Corriere d'Italia, which says that the Austrian battleship Zrinyi and three other battleships whose names could not be obtained were sunk by the French fleet. A great number of French and English warships are said to be patrolling the Adriatic.

In a rugged game, that was mixed with some brilliant playing, Twin Falls defeated Jerome 6-3. Both teams were in the first, Jerome one and Twin Falls two. The next scoring came in the fifth, when the hosts added two more, only to have the Northsiders increase their total by the same amount in the following inning. In the sixth inning the game was tied by the adding another pair of runs.

After the platform convention in Halsey, when he had made such a fallacious account for the money he had committed to give him a strong personal endorsement for renomination, Governor Haines found that he could not count on controlling the nomination. He went for Hon. Peter C. Johnson, of Blaine, one of the big men of the south-east, and a leader of the so-called "iron faction" of the Republican party. His opponent, Hon. Johnson, was to be his personal adversary to confer with Hon. Alfred Judice, judge of the Fifth Judicial District, and to advise Judge Haines that if he would deliver the vote of the Southeast to Haines for renomination and re-election, Haines would remove Justice Stewart from the bench immediately after the November election, and would place Judge Judice on the supreme bench in Stewart's place, assuring him of at least a two-year term before the public could select a successor to the post, and he (Haines) would so permit Judge Judice to name his own successor, who would not have to leave the Fifth District.

PLAN GREAT PARADE

Electrical Parade Will Feature Wizard's Carnival. The opening event of the Wizard's Carnival, Salt Lake City, August 25-29, will be the Wizard's electrical parade, the evening of Tuesday, August 25th. As a free attraction this parade is entirely unprecedented. For obvious reasons, the wealth of bewildering spectacular detail, glittering scenic and aerial in nature and masterly ensemble movement, its like has never before been attempted in Western America.

The Austro-Hungarian battleship Zrinyi was a vessel displacing fourteen thousand tons—fourteen thousand tons, she carried forty-12 inch guns in her turret, and 20 23-inch guns in her battery, besides a number of smaller cannon. She was a strongly armored vessel, and carried with three torpedo tubes. She carried a crew of 857 men.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

GETS KIMBERLY CONTRACT

Twin Falls Man Will Build the Big New Estate Lot at Kimberly. With a bid of $1247, W. F. Porter of this city received the contract for the Kimberly and adjoining to be built by Kimberly for the Kimberly Pacific Resources' Association. The big new estate will be located on the north side of the Short Line tracks and west of the depot.

CHANGES ON SHORT LINE

Old Officials Are Promoted in Branching Service. Within the past few days several appointments have been made in local Short Line operations and effective yesterday and today, the following changes were made: J. H. Whittier, first division Superintendent; Whittier, second division Superintendent; Davis appointed J. J. Cunningham yardmaster at the depot of service. Mr. Cunningham was until recently night yardmaster here, but is succeeded by W. J. Vanhook, who is appointed by Transmissor J. J. Powers.

WANTS OUR SPRINKLERS

Kindly—Would Buy—Any of Twin Falls' Discarded Water Wagons. Many complaints have been registered by Kimberly business men because of the fact which has no likelihood of their main street. Many of the business men have during the last two weeks attempted to irrigate the street but with much success. The fire department is building along the street, and is very damaging to the stocks of goods, and an agitation has been started to raise money to purchase a fire truck. The city council has been asked to purchase a fire truck, and has been asked to purchase a fire truck.

The rules of the Twin Falls Waterworks company regarding sprinkling seem to be made as a sort of a weapon to hit the people whom the company does not like rather than any purpose worthy of mentioning. Several citizens have been hounded over the costs when the company officials know to be unfairly to them and their policy, while others in the same blocks and localities are allowed to run their lawn hose and time in the day or night. The times would suggest to the water company that if the whole route and enforce the rates regardless of favoritism or disfavor of rates. In the first place the rules are not right or just for the reason that the water which the company is an arbitrarily dealing out does not belong to the company at all. The water belongs to the property owners, who, with their city property, acquired a water right in the Twin Falls canal system. In the deal the Twin Falls Water company has no part nor any appreciable water right. The Times believes that the citizens here can virtually force the water company to stop monopolizing the water supply from 'hurling water' to the Twin Falls Water company. It will be worth while to make the attempt to wrest the control from those who do not regard the rights of the citizens. The Times also believes that legally the water company has not a single right now which to lease the lawn sprinkling rules which it is now seeking to enforce with marked partiality.

John M. Haines is going before the people of his state in the wonderful record for a business administration. Taken upon the basis of that record it looks like colossal stave on his part to approach the voters of this state for re-appointment. Viewed in the abstract the administration may look good from the fact that there are no marked scandals as yet revealed or overt acts which attract the attention of the whole state. Yet taken down to the final analysis there is nothing in the administration to commend and many things to condemn. Haines has not accomplished a single reform in his administration while jangling about in a marked degree. The Carey Act has never been broadly spoken upon until the law which has created it upon the subjects is considered. The North-Side compromise and the East River settlements were primarily in the interests of the capitalists and have not as yet given any indication of being for the benefit of the people. Haines' administration is not so much as to be lauded. It is to be made the goods for a corporation settlement as in the other projects. Instead of the State Land board with John Haines at its head, seeking for solid fulfillment of all contractual relations and legalities, Haines' course is to quit the corporation. The same can be said of the action of the public utilities commission, which has at all stages protected the corporation from the public interest. WALLIS AND BAKING POWDER The Signal has been both to make

MAKING LAND VALUES

THAT which is not desired cannot be said to possess a value. But that which is desirable and in demand possesses a value according to its desirability—the value being regulated by the demand. Farm lands vary in values according to their location, their productivities and their accessibility to the markets.

The character of crops must be regulated according to the market at hand and every community necessarily directs the character of the product brought to town by the farmers. There must be a market for the farmer. There must be some place where he can realize on his crops and receive in exchange a fair value in money or in such merchandise as will supply the necessities of these dependent on his efforts. To say nothing of the luxuries that have become practically necessities. The day has four when the farmer and his family raised and produced by home manufacture all the things needed. We have become creatures of conditions entirely new. We must have stylish clothing to take the place of the old-fashioned. We must have pianos and organs, upholstered furniture, chinaware, crockery, tinware, aluminum utensils, self-binding harvesters, threshing machines, together with modern machinery and tools of all kinds. Our wives and daughters must have millinery and all sorts of fashions which dress them, they are entitled to have and to wear. The farmer is no longer a period of appreciation of beauty undormed or a disregard for the good things of life. We need, or we think we need, which is the same thing, a lot of things which cannot be produced on the farm, therefore we incline our motives and our endeavors to obtain such things. In answer to the demand for such things we have established a community for the exchange of these things for the exchange of the farm products for money and for merchandise. Now that we have established a standard of values for everything we figure everything in dollars and cents and if we are dealing with a storekeeper who carries a stock of the things we require and wish to buy and who wishes to buy that which we have to sell, there is no better also making the deal. In our community we have storekeepers who have equipped their places with business with everything we need. They have invested their money in merchandise just as the farmers have invested their money and their time in lands and machinery and cattle and crops.

If the storekeepers have been granted a certain market for a proportion of the crops raised by our farmers. The marketing of the balance of the crops is readily attended to by the mere fact that we have a community, a headquarters for buying and selling; the greater the size of the community, the better facilities. THE COMMUNITY IS POOR AND ENDEAVORING. THEN THE FARMER CANNOT MARKET HIS CROPS SO PROFITABLY. The prosperity of a community rests entirely with the people in that community, this, of course, including those who live on the outskirts, and who really form a part of the community, because of the fact that they do their marketing there—they bring their products to the community market and it is there they sell them and spend their money with the local business men. The community will grow and prosper. Land values will increase and the earnest tillers and workers will become wealthy. But if either the farmers or the storekeepers fail to do their full share in the way of complying with the business requirements then there will be a lack of success and the community will not grow or prosper. Land values will not increase.

There is a division of responsibility, practically equal. The interests of the storekeepers and of the farmers must come together. Without a due appreciation of these requirements, no community can look for progress. If the storekeepers do not carry the merchandise ready to meet the requirements of the farmers they realize that they cannot expect to do the business. But the failure is not here. The great trouble in our community, now, is that the shower of mail order catalogues has undercut the land and the farmers are inclined to believe that their business has come to a standstill. The local storekeepers to the small order houses in the big cities.

We must keep our money in circulation in our own town. We must protect our local storekeepers. We must create and build up conditions of prosperity right here at home or there will be no increase in land values. In fact, the storekeepers do not carry the merchandise ready to meet the requirements of the farmers they realize that they cannot expect to do the business. But the failure is not here.

GOOD SUGGESTION TO TWIN FALLS PEOPLE It is surprising the amount of old, food matter the simple nature of baked bread, and the fact that the wheat is a local product. This remedy became famous by curing appendicitis and acts on BOTH THE STOMACH AND BOWEL. It is cheaply made and is sold in every drug store. It is a good suggestion to the people of Twin Falls to try it. It is a good suggestion to the people of Twin Falls to try it. It is a good suggestion to the people of Twin Falls to try it.

THE LETTERS and telegrams which passed between myself and George P. McCabe, attorney at law, of Chicago, in the case of the State Land Board, are here. I have been a student of the law for many years and I am sure that you will find them of interest. I have written them to you for your information and for the use of the public. I have written them to you for your information and for the use of the public.

Mr. McCabe is a personal friend of mine of 22 years standing. He was, at the time I assumed office, and for several years afterward, a member of the law of the land and drug inspection of the federal government and solicitor for the department of agriculture. In this capacity, I frequently consulted him with reference to questions concerning the interpretation and enforcement of the pure food laws.

After his retirement from office he became a practicing attorney in Chicago and numbered among his clients at least one manufacturer of ammonium baking powder. His company was substantially interested in the trial of the injunction case which involved the legality of the use of quantities of alkali in baking powder. This interest naturally arose from the fact and judgment water glass tests or comparisons which makers of powders containing ammonium have been accustomed to make for the purpose of showing the

The MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

$10,000 FOR 100 WORDS.

The Million Dollar Mystery story can be solved by two consecutive articles in this paper. By an arrangement with the Thackeray Film company it has been made possible to pay to you in this paper the whole story but also to get each week in the various moving picture theaters. For the solution of this mystery story $10,000 will be given.

CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE SOLUTION.

The price of $10,000 will be won by the man, woman, or child who writes the most satisfactory solution of the mystery from which the last two reels of motion picture drama will be made and the last two chapters of the story written by Harold Hitchcock.

Solutions may be sent to the Thackeray Film Corporation, either at Chicago or New York, any time up to midnight, Dec. 15. This allows four weeks after the first appearance of the story in this paper and three weeks after the last chapter is published in this paper in which it is about complete.

A board of three judges will determine which of the many solutions received is the most accurate. The judgment of the board will be absolute and final. Nothing of a literary nature will be considered in the selection, nor will any preference be shown in the selection of the winner. The judge will be the most acceptable solution to the mystery, which will be presented to the board in writing, this letter or so on as it is possible to produce the same. The story appearing in these motion pictures will appear in the newspaper as complete articles or so soon after the appearance of the pictures as possible. With the last two reels of the motion picture drama, the writer will be presented with other interesting features. It is understood that the newspaper, as far as possible, printing the last two chapters of the story, will also have a picture of the successful solution.

Solutions to the mystery must not be sent to any newspaper, magazine, or any other place. It is to be left in mind in connection with the mystery. Do not send a solution to the editor of the Milwaukee Journal, or to any other newspaper. Do not send a solution to the editor of the Milwaukee Journal, or to any other newspaper.

THE GAY PARTY BOWLED AWAY.

There's only one hope field in the Hundred, and he's one of the best days we have. So we let him have his cake whenever he really needs it. But this time Helen has seen my face. Some day he'll see it again, and she'll be there.

"This what?"

"A lariat at last," he laughed. "The lynch rod finally came down on the man who has been so long in the shadows. He'll never see it again. He's been so long in the shadows and he's never seen it again. He's been so long in the shadows and he's never seen it again."

"It looks to me as if he had wanted his own," she said.

"Your opinion," he said, "is not a consideration for me. You would smoke whether it was available or not. But I like the odor of a good cigar. And it always helps me to think."

Brain felt the cigar and began his customary pause. At length he passed it.

"Suppose we have a real old fashioned evening party out at the old mansion, we know about?"

"And what shall we do to do?"

"Make two mandarin an excellent evening for those people who can't get out. Do you think you could get me?"

"I can try."

"Okey, I must have that girl, and I must have her soon. Sometimes I find myself slightly puzzled over the whole thing. If Hargrave is alive, why doesn't he turn up now? He's probably knows that his daughter presides over his property. He mustn't have that if I didn't know that Hargrave is really afraid of nothing. Where is the man with the five thousand, Jones up at sea? What was the reason for Jones carrying that box out to land, difficulty? He's the chap who's watching the street. Sometimes I believe in my soul if I have not that Lawrence is playing with us, played 'Wolf' during the hall consumed clear into the grate, the Black Hundred all eyes go for nothing, or 'Archer, and next, forget."

"We are a fine lot," said the woman bitterly.

"We are exactly what fate intends us to be. They wrote you down in the book as a beautiful body with a crooked mind. They wrote in the book as the devil, devoted to roam earth's sun till he killed."

"Killed?"

"Why, yes. I'm not the kind of chap who'd let me be, surrounded by the wrong members of the family, doctor, nurse, and priest. I'm a second-hand man with his own way, I enjoy being a scoundrel. Now, I'm going out to the clubs. There's nothing like a game of billiards or chess to smooth that wrinkles which seem to worry you."

In the great newspaper office there was a mighty racket. Mischief always means pandemonium in the city room of a metropolitan daily. Copy boys were rushing to and fro, messengers and printers with attack letters in their hands, reporters were holding up to their speckled and unwholesome faces could hear the constant clatter from the typewriter room.

The managing editor came out of his office and approached the desk of the business editor.

"Twenty-minute game now?"

"Twenty-minute game?" said the night editor.

"I wanted a bit of that Panama rummage."

"Too late."

"Where's Jim Norton?"

"At the chamber of commerce banquet. The major is going to throw a bomb into the enemy's camp."

"Nicking on the Hargrave stuff?"

"No, Guss! I'd better put that in the envelope. He's dead."

"Not a piece of his at a picture stamp?"

"That will keep the girl in a tough place. No, will no high certificate, and worst of all, a photograph of the old man himself. He's the only man in town who saw anything about Hargrave."

"He hasn't died, has he? But he wants to cover it up, doesn't he?"

"Ah, so that's the game?"

When the two young men were talking things up, there came a knock on the door. The man in the doorway said, "A man has just come in from the north end. He's in evening clothes, top hat. A dead cigar dangled from his lip."

"How much do you want?" asked the night editor.

"Five and a half."

"Of what sort of kind?"

"Anything good." said an amazing editor.

Then the door was opened and a man came in. He was dressed in evening clothes, top hat. A dead cigar dangled from his lip. He looked at the two men and then at the door.

"What's the story?"

"A man has just come in from the north end. He's in evening clothes, top hat. A dead cigar dangled from his lip."

"How much do you want?" asked the night editor.

"Five and a half."

"Of what sort of kind?"

"Anything good." said an amazing editor.

WHAT JOHN ESCAPED

By MILDRED CAROLINE GOODRIDGE.

"Mary looks old and worn," said John Strickland to his brother, Ephraim.

"Shouldn't she would?" retorted Ephraim. "She's just had her honeymoon."

"Yes, John, this has been an impossible—our family landing down on you this way."

"Well, you are welcome, aren't you?" demanded John.

"Your wife has surely made us a dear woman! She's a prize, a jewel, but to harbor and work out her life for her husband's sake—no more of that!" Mary said in a husky, tremulous voice.

John said nothing, staring away. He was in a cross mood. It was true that Mary looked old and worn. A true-hearted, loyal little woman, she had seen the time of her lives. They had seen John's father and mother was too good for them.

So no wonder that she looked tired and faded. For nearly three years she had already found time to spend her days on her feet, in the streets of the city. Now they were coming back to the old South hamstead. John Strickland, peering past a blue bush, noticed that Mary, smartly dressed and in a high dignity, sat beside his wife—who that night had been Myra Booth.

John started. He had not seen Mrs. Booth since five years. She had been his first flame. She had treated him pretty mean in disregard after encouraging him. John had got all over that calf love speedily, however. Just now, though, a queer thrill pervaded him.

"Why she looks so young—per-y younger, than when I last saw her!"
he was forced to ejaculate.

Certainly, at a distance Mrs. Allison was a vivid contrast to Mary.

John started and stared through an open front window.

Strickland. There was a vivid color in her cheeks; an ethereal, brilliant white, even teeth, remained his of pearls. Her hair was untastefully arranged. Her figure made up to the perfect outline of a dressmaker's model.

"Tonight has had her own, if I'd not set myself, content to win her, I would John." Her husband looks a new and many like an angel. And they say she got a hundred thousand dollars from her father's estate. Lucky Cy!

John felt misused and very much abused. His was not tired of waste, loyal Mary; he would not trade. Cy's money was a basket full of diamonds was worth into the bargain.

"John was a just that mood where the dull ends of home life looked more than usual. On the other hand, the sight of the beautiful, brilliant-looking woman who had once held his affection quite dazzled him. John wandered down the street aimlessly, dreamily.

"Oh, say, Mr. Strickland!" rang out a sudden voice.

"Why, it's Mrs. Nell!" inquired John, always kindly and cordial in his greetings and especially so with children.

It was a child, a little fellow of about ten, a curly, wheeking wisp of hair, with his hands in his pockets, his legs in his overalls, who accented him.

"See here," said little Nell. "I found this just now."

He extended a silver-netted purse and John started at it and awaited an explanation.

"Where did you get it, Nell?" he inquired.

"In the road. It was right after an auto went by."

"The Allison?"

"Oh, indeed," murmured John, and he now took the hand, glanced over a man's photograph to the neighborhood.

THE GAY PARTY BOWLED AWAY

There's only one hope found in the Hundred, and he's one of the best deacons we have; so we let him have his cake whether or not he really wants it. But this man I don't like to see any more. Some day he'll see it again, I'm sure, and then—

Some consideration for me! You would make whether it was agreeable or not. But I like the color of a good clasp. And it always helps to rain-fit the clasp and begin his customary pausing. At length he paused.

"Then what?"

"That depends. Between you and me and the other party, I've a suspicion that this man Jones, when nobody has given any particular attention, is a deep-drawer man. He may have been honestly attempting to find a new hiding place; the advertisement in the newspaper may have drawn him. He may have thrown the box over in pure meek as seeing himself checkmated. Again, the whole thing may have been worked up for our benefit. I don't know. If that's the case, Jones has a lot to answer for. But we can't do what we wish at all probabilities. We expect a bill to come in to—catch him—just as a reward."

"I can't tell you," said the man bitterly. "We are exactly what fate intended us to be. They wrote you down in the book as a beautiful boy with a crooked mind. They wrote me down as the devil, doomed to ruin earth's top till I'm killed."

"Killed?"

"Come over to the window, quick!" She dragged him across the room. "Over the wall, there is with the electric from the street."

"I believe I was watching some apartment above," he regularly when I turn out the lights he comes forth. So there's no doubt that he watches me enter and takes note of my departure."

"What do you mean?"

Norton and the woman sat on Florence's bed, next day, one morning, and she said she had been watching him. "I believe I was watching some apartment above," he regularly when I turn out the lights he comes forth. So there's no doubt that he watches me enter and takes note of my departure."

city, when the coach was forced to take a sharp turn to avoid an automobile in the street. The man pattering at the engine pulled his head. It was Norton, and Florence waved her hand vigorously. "A coaching party," he murmured; "and your Uncle James was not invited. O very well!" He laughed, and suddenly grew serious. It would not hurt to find out where that coach was going.

He set to work nervously, located the trouble, righted it, and set off for the Hartford house. He found Susan and hounded her with inquiries which to Susan came with the rapidity of rain upon the roof.

Replies to Land Board's Proposal three times more land than water is provided for—do not these facts impress your board with no other thought than that there has arisen a selfish misunderstanding between the entrymen and the promoters that could very nicely be adjusted by arbitration?

How do you reconcile the attitude that "you" have recently assumed, the role of an impartial body, a reviewing board, an arbitrator between the settlers and the promoters, to the fact that it was your board, the State Board of Land Commissioners of the State of Idaho, that on the 30th day of April, 1908, entered into the contract with the T. W. Patis-Salmon River Land & Water company, that is responsible for our present predicament?

State of course are aware that the Board of Land Commissioners were and are now the parties of the first part in the contract providing for the promotion of this project; that, as the party of the first part, this Board required bonds for its completion; that the Board reserved the right to terminate proceedings to forfeit the contract in the event the promotion company failed to comply with its terms.

understood by the people in this community, to assume the attitude of a disinterested third party of an "impartial body" reviewing the matter," as suggested in your letter of July 2nd?

This attitude cannot be justified before the people of this community by the presence of an article that the Board's present members were not members of the Board at the time it entered into this contract. We are not at all concerned in a "land board" at this very inopportune time. It may very well be as Governor Haines recently told the writer, that the members of the present land board very much regretted the unfortunate and unwise contracts which a previous administration had entered into; or again it may be as ex-Governor Gooding explained to the writer that he regretted exceedingly the troubles that have come to the Carey act projects since the "state's" honor; but, certainly it is that the fixing of the responsibility will do nothing at all toward relieving the serious situation which exists on the tract.

What we have asked of your body repeatedly is that you take the contract as it stands and exert every effort to enforce it, and when we found that you would not do that we requested that your board bear the expense of a competent engineer and a competent attorney, and we would endeavor to enforce it. This you have likewise declined to do, so we have been obliged to confront the difficulty of raising funds to accomplish this purpose ourselves, handicapped further by the fact that we are not parties to the contract we are attempting to enforce.

Haines Deal on the Judiciary vote, a man elected by the people; and in the trade, he would demand that the pound of flesh—the vote—be done to him before he paid a cent of the price agreed upon under his own terms of the great competition. He would not trust the court that he thought would not risk a conflict with possibly many other promises—he would not balk at a long, sickening train of almost similar court trials that would forever damn the courts of Idaho—he would not scruple at leaving these men whom he might by accepting an argument tempt beyond their ability to bear, stained and blackened by a corrupt trial—but he would hold the courts as trading stools for his own gubernatorial aspirations. Even the prospect that the amendment will carry this fall add two judges to the supreme court, is clever bait for a score of lawyers—ten for every chance.

In that what the state of Idaho wants of a government? Is that the "business man's administration." The friends of Judge Haines do not believe that he would be a party to any such headlong agreement to make a helpless old man who by the fortunes of politics has two years ago preferred Judge Haines himself, and to creep into the court at the instigation of a cunning politician who might fairly overwhelm him with argument and adulation to break down the old ideal of honor and justice. Three friends of Judge Haines, some of them, might loyally follow him into even this shameful agreement—but he would not let Judge Haines politically and judicially, it would put him into the down-and-out class after the paltry two years of his appointment—and then he would go home, to try, vainly, to live down the stigma of a shameful trade. The Reverend does not believe that he will accept; that he ever would have considered such a deal—especially after he thought twice about what it meant; but the Governor must have that. Significant was—and neither the honor of Judge Lodge or of the courts, nor humanity for helpless Judge Stewart, nor any other consideration, would prevent him from making the effort to capture it through the people's loves.—Richfield Recorder.
