The forces opposed to county division had the first meeting Tuesday evening of this week in the Commercial club room. A large number of citizens attended and entered eagerly into the discussion of the problem confronting the county. From nearly every county came the same feeling: that county division was the shortest folly and a most costly procedure for the county. It would be a waste of time to present any other view to the public and to the end, in order to line up the forces during the present month the following will be asked to put themselves on record through the press of county.

TODAY'S WAR NEWS IN BRIEF.

Complete silence maintained on the German side as to the progress of the fighting through Belgium and Luxemburg. Dispatches give evidence of the presence of German troops, pushing their way to the front, and holding an impenetrable screen of cavalry, whose duties in search of information as to the whereabouts of the allied troops have resulted in sharp clashes and heavy casualties. The commanders of the allied forces of French, British and Italian divisions will not permit anything about their positions to become public, and since the official note made known the presence of a large British expeditionary force on the continent, his movements have been hidden from the outside world.

I never took as much pleasure in buying them—such an array of new and pretty things—'twas baffling to decide and now they're arriving for you to pass your judgment on. I know they are attractive. The Times wishes to attain the satisfaction of the voters of this county in the choice of nominating John M. Haines as its primary. There is no question about it. Haines is the man who has already followed the nomination career. At no time has he shown any purpose of protecting the people who pay taxes. As a taxpayer he tried to be a joke. As an aid in corporation control of the state, John M. Haines is a menace to the welfare of the people and the oppressor of the state. Do not forget the sale of the state timber land to the lowest bidder in order to help certain interests in the City of Idaho. Do not forget that John Haines appointed the new public utilities commission which is striking a direct blow at the development of Twin Falls County. John Haines, if elected, will reappoint the ex-parte member of this commission to perpetuate a body which represents nothing but the corporation interests. If this state is not enough of local interests, just remember that John Haines has in the past two months practically deserted the office of the Salmon River settlers by not that where his whole policy. Also a Republican, remember that if Haines is nominated that the whole party is placed on the defensive through articles of which will be thoroughly aired by the Democrats in the general election campaign. The party by nominating Haines practically assures the Democrats of a state victory.

M. E. Lewis, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, comes from the Northern part of the state—and for that reason is little known in this section. For this reason the Times has been carefully looking up Lewis' record as a citizen in order to give his readers the truth of the matter. Mr. Lewis stands well in his own community as a citizen of integrity and morality. Nothing in his record can be brought up which will put the party on the defensive in a coming campaign. He is a thorough-going business man. His business interests being on a much larger scale than the mere business of a business concern. He has shown in his own affairs that he is competent. Mr. Lewis is also interested in the Southern Idaho, having more than a thousand acres of irrigated land in this section of the state. He is a man who wants to work and works for them not to get the vote, but for the people's sake. He has shown a wealth of such that party grafting jobs will have no attraction for him in order to get out a nomination. The people of Mexico are for Lewis. The Northern part of the state is for him in a portion of the state which plays politics all the year round, and he for his home. He is a good, strong, honest business man, whose honesty has been tested. The Times believes that M. E. Lewis will be a credit to the state, and that he will keep his word and every promise made concerning the state platform. In a word, Mr. Lewis is in the reform school. He has his heart in there and not because present political expediency shows him with reform.

WHY EUROPE IS AT WAR

The sudden transformation of Europe from a peaceful continent to a hot battle-field is something that so bewilders American public opinion that denunciations of a war so senseless, so insane, so utterly without cause, have been heard on every hand. But upon philosophical consideration by editorial writers of Europe's many political problems, of the events leading to hostilities, and of the inflammatory statements issuing from different European capitals has led to a clearer appreciation of the root causes. Two days after Austria's declaration of war against Serbia on July 28, Russia, France, Belgium and Great Britain were actually fighting Germany, while Italy, Holland, and the Balkan States were putting their forces on a war basis. Yet war, Serbia, says the New York Herald, did not bring about this catastrophe inevitable; it was merely the war on Serbia that supplied the spark which set in motion those irresistible forces which are dragging five of the greatest nations of the world into a war of annihilation. Several editors enumerate some of the factors. Europe, remarks the Springfield Republican, is full of racial rivalries, suppressed imperial and national ambitions, religious hate, economic pressure, trade jealousies, internal strifes, class stresses, and lines of cleavage which stretch across frontiers. But these conditions have long existed. What sank our peace, are responsible for better the Austro-Serbian crisis precipitate a European war? Many an editorial finger points at William II, of Germany, who is admitted to be the one overwhelming personality of the opening days of the war. Others divide the blame in varying degrees among the rulers at Berlin, Vienna and St. Petersburg. In this country the blame is laid with the course pursued by the Emperor and his governments. Yet, for that matter, by ultimatum, seizure, delay, address, or proclamation, each a warping posture, as the New York Times points out, proves to his own satisfaction that it is the injured party, the victim of aggression by another, and that it is forced to go to self-defense. This is continued:

"Germany proves to herself that she looks for peace, but that Russia's mobilization is an action which she could not ignore. Russia looks for peace, but finds Germany mobilizing and further delaying, the official notice of her mobilization," so that to hesitate longer would have been to court disaster. France longs for peace, but finds Germany's demands and further delaying, so harsh as to merit the recall of our Ambassador."

The racial problems involved in Austria's quarrel with Serbia have been fully treated in a previous issue, but the question may be asked, why did that quarrel involve "Europe"? "Pan-slavism" is the usual editorial explanation, or, in Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart's simple phrase in a New York Times article, "self-interest and sympathy with one of similar race and kind combine to urge Russia into the fight." "So have said 'old' sort of thing for seven years and a half," the Russian czar is said to have remarked to his minister at a conference on the Serbian crisis; "that is enough." In this, it notes the St. Louis Post Dispatch, Austria has forced an important national concession from Turkey, added Bosnia and Herzegovina, and interfered with the Balkan states, both direct and after their war against Turkey. "The fraternal sentiments of the Russian people for the Slavs" were awakened with perfect unanimity and extraordinary force," says the czar in a manifesto, "when Austria knowingly addressed to Serbia a demand unacceptable to Russia's benevolent intervention." As a "precautionary" measure, the Russian army and navy were put on a war footing, while negotiations looking toward a peaceful solution were carried on with both Austria and Germany. But Germany demanded the "immediate cessation" of the mobilization measures, and being rebuffed in this demand, Germany suddenly declared war on Russia.

"If we like the German view, the history of these negotiations is different. To sum up the case as presented in statements from the Kaiser, the Imperial Chancellor, and other high officials sources, Germany vainly protested against warlike preparations in Russia. She even tried to mediate, but to quote the Chancellor's speech, while we, at Russia's request, mediated in Vienna, the Russian forces were raised on our almost equal frontier, and France, though she did not mediate, admits that she took military measures. The Kaiser, says the New York Herald, 'up to the very last moment almost went down on his knees to Russia to induce her to desist from mobilization.' The final result was that the Russian mobilization was a permanent war on the Russian frontier. On the French frontier, according to the official statements, French cavalry and cavalry patrols first violated the peace. The German government then felt compelled to act in self-defense. The invasion of Luxembourg and Belgium is justified as a military necessity to prevent a French invasion and to secure an easier entrance into France, though the wrong to be made good when the military object is achieved. Germany, says the Kaiser, 'went into the battle with a clear conscience.' The present situation he calls 'the result of ill will existing for years against the strength and prosperity of the German Empire.' A press statement by Prof. Hugo Munsterberg strongly supports the official German interpretation. "The world's Slav world and the German world" was inevitable. Russia was bound to help Serbia. She knew herself unequal in strength to the German nation, but knew also that she could rely on France's intent longing to revenge itself for Alsace and on England's grumbling jealousy of the great German rival in the world's markets. On the other hand, there is a widespread tendency on the part of the American press to hold Germany and her ruler very largely responsible for the war. We quote a typical editorial utterance from the New York Globe: "It is difficult to admit the German atrocities were menaced beyond reasonable tolerance, that Austria took a stand against her diminutive neighbor which was arbitrary in the extreme without full sanction of the Kaiser, or that there was any doubt in Wilhelm's mind that Austria's attack would compel a Russian mobilization to intervene. It is far truer to assume that American opinion is almost solidly arrayed against Germany as the aggressor, ruthlessly plunging Europe into what looks like the bloodiest of wars to satisfy the overwhelming ambition of the Emperor. Halted but a short year ago as the man of peace in Europe, he is now announced as the veriest firebrand of the continent." French official statements against the German government of forcing the war. And the French's sentence from an announcement by the French ambassador in London who is still different version of the negotiations already mentioned: "The German ambassador at St. Petersburg notified Russia of the declaration of war by his government when mobilization was pending between Austria-Hungary and Russia and at the very moment when Austria-Hungary had declared that she was prepared to consider the matter of the Austro-Serbian conflict with Serbia or Slav a neutral power on behalf of France." "France was asked to tell what she would do in case of war between Austria and Germany, and the German ambassador at Paris began to prepare everything for his departure from the French capital. "July 31, Germany called to the flag the last five classes of her reservists, and mobilization was going on in Germany. "In spite of this, France waited until August 1, at five o'clock in the afternoon, to order general mobilization. This was done for the purpose of making it clear that she was not the aggressor power, and also that she might be able to claim British support. England at first held a neutral position, only stating that if a German fleet were to descend on the French coast "we could not stand aside." Sir Edward Grey and Premier Asquith explained in notable speeches in the House of Commons that Germany had entered into negotiations on this point, and on the neutrality of Belgium to ensure England's neutrality. The English reply, according to Sir Edward Grey, was that "we could not barter our interest or our obligations." The final declaration of war was said to be "owing to the summary rejection by the German Government of the French ultimatum, and of the British ultimatum, that the neutrality of Belgium would be respected." All parties have rallied to the support of the government. John Haines gave assurance of the loyalty of Idaho. And public opinion, in England, as in Austria, Serbia, Russia, Germany, and France seems to be solidly in favor of war. Belgium was confronted with the alternative of letting German armies march through her territory to the French border, thereby humbling her neutrality, or of arming herself. She chose the latter course, in spite of the guarantees and indemnities offered by Germany. Said Sir Albert, on taking command of the army: "A neighbor, haughty in its strength, without the slightest provocation, has turned up the treaty bearing its slave-hand and violated the territory of our fathers because we refused to let them overtake us. It is our duty to swing the independence of the world, the nation, the French, and its children against the invader, rather than suffer in a sacred cause." Literary Digest.

PAY ROLL GROWS

Along with other departments that have been removed from various points in Utah, in order to facilitate the operations of the Short-Line from general western headquarters, the police department of the road has been changed from Salt Lake to Pocatello.

A Special Agent Joe Jones of the detective force of the road, this week took up his headquarters in the Gate City, and the offices of his department follow the main depot building. While his entire force of men will not be here at all times, there are seven or eight men under his jurisdiction and they will report to Special Agent Jones here.

Most of the important departments of the system have now taken up quarters in Pocatello and the consideration of the new station there will be a good many men on the local pay roll. Work is progressing in the banner on the new depot, and a good showing is being made in the foundation and other preliminary operations. -Pocatello Tribune.

This, then, is the idea behind our new model—an idea that we are convinced has real selling value, because it gives a large class of automobile buyers exactly what they want.

Purchasers of automobiles are growing more fastidious and exacting each year. There are thousands of people whose resources or preferences lead them to buy a small car of relatively low price and up-keep cost, and yet who want, in their little car, beauty of design and distinction in finish and appointments. There are thousands of others who have considered and bought medium priced cars in the past because the cheap car did not satisfy them. Then there are many others whose resources permit them to own big, high-priced cars; but who want, in addition a small, light, economical car for the many kinds of service which the big car does not perform so well, and yet who demand even in their little car the quality, comfort and refinement to which they have grown accustomed. To all of these, a very large and permanent class of buyers in the aggregate, the Oldsmobile Model 42 Four-Cylinder will appeal as precisely the car they have long wanted, waited and looked for. Couple with all this the fact that the name "OLDSMOBILE," since the beginning of the industry, has stood for high-grade excellency in automobile building, and it is easy to understand why we are convinced that the "HIGH-GRADE LITTLE CAR" is certain to take and hold a place all its own in the market.

As a replica on a smaller scale of the most distinctive and beautiful big car in the country to-day, its favorable reception and popularity are assured.

THINK of it—an Oldsmobile at $1385! A car with every refinement; ample in power; exquisite in lines; fully equipped, including the best electric lighting and starting system that money can buy—the Delco system—built into the motor as a unit. And this Oldsmobile costing, so equipped, only $1385. This price marks an epoch in the history of high grade car production.

Remember, this new light Four is produced by the same organization that brought out America's Greatest Six at $1090 below the market.

Two years ago we determined to add a lower-priced model to our line. We recognized a growing public demand for an economical, truly high-grade automobile. We know there are thousands and thousands of customers waiting to buy this car—customers who have looked in vain among the light car builders for a high-grade quality automobile. We present it in the Oldsmobile Model 42. The production of the model 42 outlines a policy which has never before been attempted by a recognized high-grade car maker.

This car is not a guess. It has a carefully developed idea behind it—the idea, as stated above, that there are thousands of people in this country who want a small car at a relatively low price and economical of operation, yet possessing all of the distinction of power and superlative mechanical excellency.

The Oldsmobile Model 42 is such a car—the kind of a car that proclaims quality in every line; a car that a man can show his friends, and his wife can show her friends, with the assurance that it is an aristocrat of its class—the thoroughbred of little cars.

What is the most important news yet received in camp was imparted by Mrs. H. Smith, manager of the Gem State Lumber Co. Milling and Power company, when he returned to Contact last Saturday from Tacoma, Wash., after an extended conference with his associates and company directors. A logical solution of the difficulties under which the camp has been laboring for some time, at least, has now arrived at, and some lines previously laid down and advocated by the Contact Mill. The company represented by Mrs. Smith will begin the erection of a hundred-ton building plant with a crushing capacity of five hundred tons in a hour, which provides for the future needs of the mill plant to that capacity. The plant will be similar to the Hutto-Dobson plant now in successful operation in the Mountain camp, but with some modifications required by slight differences in some of the ores. As far as the preliminary plans now well advanced, the building will be a most reputable structure will be on the ground to determine the exact natural establishment and the economic value of the deposits of ore. Whether or not the plant will install a custom mill has not been fully determined.

Some things have been under way for some time for bringing in from the Snake River valley, the power required in the deposition of the copper and iron and other minerals of the district. Contact Mill.

It ought to make you tired --and it does make you tired --to hear a business institution pleading for patronage on the score that it pays taxes in the community and it makes little contributions to community enterprises.

We do these things, but we don't believe they deserve any particular commendation. Assuredly they don't constitute a legitimate plea for business. Such talk is childish. Genuinely useful service--actually being helpful to people--is all that really counts or that gives any right to profits.

"Dr. Clifford M. Cline, a physician of Idaho Falls, Idaho, who has been in Europe at a national medical congress, has reached Chicago his former home, after burying out of Europe an interview on the war preparations here. He gives the following interesting information in the Chicago Tribune:

"The arrangements for manning the German troops in Europe are being made in a hurry. They are the best drilled, best appearing troops in Europe. The German soldiers are all husky. They are much better looking than the French troops in their dirty red pants.

"The Germans were not concerned much about the navy operations, but they would go to the war by land. They think they can win both France and Russia. England doesn't worry them greatly.

"The resources of the Germans are all well calculated. We saw some of the Zepplins type of dirigibles manuevering while we were in Germany. The sight was impressive. We also saw the aeroplanes of France, the army German airship station of Johannsburg that we saw several airships ready to be taken over by the government.

"England did not seem very well prepared for it. The papers seemed worried over the situation. Soldiers were drilling in formation, the way from London to Liverpool, we saw soldiers entrained for the east coast. Long trains of flat cars carrying cannon and military equipment in loads toward the coast.

"The great naval review of British ships at Spithead occurred about a week before we left England. There were thirty-nine and fifty of ships, more than 200 war vessels. The day we left England we saw by a newspaper that the great fleet had been ordered to Holland. It would seem that the war was on.

The Democratic party should welcome additions from other parties, but why fill our offices with such renegades? After holding office for four years he is looking to be made State Senator. Fill the offices with Democrats from principle and the will Democrats for revenue only. KIMBERLY DEMOCRATS.
