Now that the election is over and the nation saved it is about time for some one to start another railroad.

The result of the election with the defeat of Haines should be encouraging to the voters who believe in good government and a lesson to the party leaders who have sought to submerge public welfare to the desire for party victory and party spoils.

The federal authorities are making investigations against a number of the trusts under the Sherman anti-trust act and are causing a great many of the monopolists to look toward the tall timber with anxious eyes. For years the Sherman law has been a sort of sleeping dog under the larger trusts because of the lack of severe penalties. A law was written and was sold while the trust was flourishing just how much it would add to the profits in order to take care of a little additional expense in the way of payment for a government say to the demands of the masses. When any criminal act was discovered, some paid employe took the blame and the punishment, being told for the sacrifice. The real offenders, known by the non-vulgar term of "malfeasors of great wealth," have heretofore escaped punishment. With the laws properly placed in the Sherman law, the government is now seeking to place the punishment where the blame has rested, with the active heads of the directorate, whose masterly minds have evaded all the so-called financial crimes. William Rockefeller wearing stripes for a year would startle the financial world and yet all the men indicted have been the prima causes of much of the crime of the so-called criminal treatment of the based and oppressed for the enrichment of the money kings, coffers. One sentence of a year's imprisonment to any one of the financial leaders will do more toward making good trusts out of bad ones, than any other process, legal or legislative.

THE HOER DISAFFECTION.

The threatened divider in the Union of South Africa—"the other U. S. A."—has come as a shock to Great Britain. It is noted, at the very hour when her pride in the unquestioned and unanimous support of colony, dependency, and dominion had reached its height. Everywhere throughout the Empire, apparently, the call to arms against the Double Alliance had been the voice of private citizens. In England, Canada, India, Australia, and Africa the individual grievance was laid aside and official assistance was given of loyal support to the mother country. Indeed, as the Baltimore News and other papers point out, the attitude of South Africa was especially conspicuous. The public sentiment, moved by Premier Botha that the government of the Union would definitely side with England came as a crowning proof that England's generous treatment of the Colonies since the Boer War had not been in vain. But England's satisfaction has been short-lived, for the open revolt of Colonel Maritz, the apparent implication of German Southwest Africa, and the uncertainty as to the proportion of British soldiers with Botha or Maritz, place England, and several others, in a position fraught with more danger than is immediately apparent.

In the first place, the expulsion of British from Africa, with German interests in Europe, the Washington Times explains, would threaten her whole Empire. Dislocation would be inevitable, for "Boer" would be demanded by Turkey, and Turkey, with the backing of a victorious Germany, might take it back. That would mean a German Suez; that in turn, German domination of the route to India. And this, in contrast to a possible Anglo-French Africa, with Britain in possession of territory extending a thousand miles east and west and north and south from the Cape to Cairo, is to the British unthinkable.

As men's eyes grow wiser, and independent of the European situation, is pointed out by other editors, "The revolt itself may not be serious," says the New York Evening Post, but "its main importance at present, is more symptomatic than military." In similar vein the Baltimore News explains: "The danger lies not so much in whatever annoyance Maritz may cause the Colonial Government, but in the precedent and the exaggerated rumors of it are likely to spread to other sections of the Empire where there is perhaps more real disaffection. It requires no strain upon the imagination to picture the Straits Great Britain would be in should her Mohammedan subjects rise. It has been Germany's hope to see them rise, and there can be no question but that once Gellings reached them of England's inability to control one of her colonies, the fever of insurrection would spread. History furnishes many an example of heterogeneity empire gone to pieces in just that manner."

The Post dwells upon the contagious quality of such a disaffection and asserts that "the nerves of the Empire will be set quiver. . . . May not the Egyptian Nationalists think now their opportunity in England's crisis? Despite all that Indian princes and rajahs have said may not the Yenne India movement show its head menacingly?" And the Post is sure that "sober Englishmen are vastly considering the possibilities."

England's chance of avoiding all serious difficulty, others point out, lies in the confidence which it has already won in South Africa, and the fact that the Boers of the Union have grown to believe that British means to respect their nationality. Botha's own words were: "The many here in the past have been hostile to the British flag, they would today ten times rather be under the British than the German flag."—definitely indicates the tremendous change in the Boer's attitude in the last few years. "This change has come about," explains the New York Times, "as a result of an act of statesmanship not often equaled in breadth of spirit and in courage."

"By the South Africa act of 1909, the colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River were united in a legislative union as the Union of South Africa. The popular body of the legislature, the House of Assembly, is elected by the whole people on a broad franchise; and from the start the Dutch Boer members, known as the Nationalists and led by General Botha, have outnumbered all other political factions combined. The English and Dutch languages are both official and are both used in the schools. The Governor-General is appointed by the king, but the English turned over the popular control of the Union to the Dutch, whom they had been fighting eight years before. Now we see the result. These Dutchmen would ten times rather be under British than the German flag? It is a splendid triumph for the bold and broad statesmanship of the British Empire."

Writing in a German paper, the Gannan, who has spent ten years in the Transvaal, discusses quite frankly the situation in South Africa and emphasizes the fact that the Boers are "clinging to the idea of retaining their race and national ideals under the British flag." In addition, he sees no "real of the blood" between the Boer and German. In his opinion, the Boer still recalls Germany's failure to answer that call and give him expected support during the Boer War. The German professor foregoes an revolution at the time that he wrote, September 25, but rather an open conflict between the Boers and the German.

Such opinions as this indicate that England's fears over the "revolt" may be exaggerated. It has been stated that German Southwest Africa has not men nor the wealth to aid the Maritz faction against the Union, unless a vast number of the Union Boers go over to the German standard. There is in addition, another consideration that may weigh heavily with the sympathizers of Maritz, and that is the action of Portugal in siding definitely with England. And the New York World reminds us that "in that quarter of the world the little Republic has power by no means to be despised."—Literary Digest.

That the furnishings of a home, that is, pictures, statuary, etc., should be in line with the molding of a child's taste and character, were ideas advanced by the speaker, who also showed many small pictures which to her mind, would have an elevating influence, if hung on the walls in the homes. ## LARGE ENGLISH BLACK PIG

While There Are Few Specimens of the breed in the United States, it is widely known in Europe.

(By J. DUNLAP, Secretary of Large Black Pig Club of America.)
The big black pig is the most widely known of all in the United States, and more of this breed are shown than of other breeds. They are known in England as the greatest of all bacon breeds.

There are only a few in the United States. They are described as the long-bodied hog with drooping ears. They are not prepossessing in appearance, but their fecundity recommends them to the corn belt farmers as well as to the bacon breeders. It is claimed for the big blacks that they are the fastest growing pigs known, and put on more pounds to the amount of feed than any other breed.

My attention was first called to this breed by farmers who wanted a bacon type breed to cross on their large hogs and to increase their litters.

I investigated all the bacon breeds and in the large black I found a hog that is a hardy and fast grower, and one that crosses extremely well with the Poland-China, Duroc and Berkshire. The shaggy black coats of the animals are pleasing to all, and their quiet disposition commends them to all who have raised other bacon breeds. A yearling black that weighed over 500 pounds dressed out more meat than any hog I ever butchered, and I never saw in any other bacon breed as fine bacon and as much lean meat all over the carcass. The large drooping ears make them easily handled if treated kindly, and they ate very motherly. I have a sow that has suckled 18 pigs besides her own litter, instead of drying up when her pigs were taken from her. She continued to give milk and I have put in runt pigs and pigs where other sows had more than they could raise until she has suckled 18 extra pigs and is not dry yet. I give below extracts from the book "Swine Raising," gotten out by the Dominion, of Canada.

"Both in Ireland and England much was heard in favor of the large blacks. Wherever these sires and their grades were seen by the commission, they made a favorable impression. Advantages were therefore taken at the first opportunity to visit a prominent grower of this breed. The same visit was that of Mr. C. F. Martineau, in the county of Suffolk, that has in recent years won a large number of championships."--at all length shows. There was found a large herd of broad sows and a few stock hogs that individually and collectively rank high among the herds of sows of England for the production of pigs for bacon requirements. In earlier years the large black was a bit rougher on the shoulder, short in the hind quarter and light in the hams. For years Mr. Martineau has given special attention to these points until his present herd, which is uniform in type and ducty in vigor, shows none of these defects. Many of the breeding animals were of great stature which of itself seemed to be sufficient to maintain the stock in good breeding form. The heartiness of these pigs was another point in favor when the members of the commission are satisfied that the claim is well founded. Mr. Martineau claims that the narrow range of vision of the large blacks, due to the large ears, is conducive to safety and thrift can be used summer or winter, but scrubbing, grading, culvert repairing and draining ought to be done in June, July, August and September. Earlier in the year the mud will prevent any real work being completed. Later in the fall the rains will turn the freshly graded roads into a hobble of clay water.

From now on until the first snow and freezes the dirt road can be shaped and graded. The last of the opinion that the plan of angulating some one farmer as overseer of "road boys" and having the rest of the neighborhood work under this inexperienced man is a mistake. The time will come when all road work will be done under the supervision of a man who does nothing but plan and build and possibly maintain roads. He will know grading and leveling, and can look after their condition, drainage and repair intelligently. It is mostly a bit of miss proportion now.

high among the herds of sows of England for the production of pigs for bacon requirements. In earlier years the large black was a bit rougher on the shoulder, short in the hind quarter and light in the hams. For years Mr. Martineau has given special attention to these points until his present herd, which is uniform in type and ducty in vigor, shows none of these defects. Many of the breeding animals were of great stature which of itself seemed to be sufficient to maintain the stock in good breeding form. The heartiness of these pigs was another point in favor when the members of the commission are satisfied that the claim is well founded. Mr. Martineau claims that the narrow range of vision of the large blacks, due to the large ears, is conducive to safety and thrift

WORK ON ROADS IN SUMMER

Building and Maintaining Highways Is More Kindly Thought of by Many of the Users.

Gradually the farmers in practically every country are beginning to take personal interest in the matter of making the roads they are forced to use better and more fit for general travel all the year round.

In those states where the road work is done by farmers and their teams it is hard to get the labor done when the weather conditions are best, as a writer in Farm Progress, They will not leave their fields to put in four or five days grading and leveling the public highways unless they are practically forced to do so.

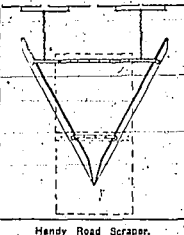

But there are signs of better times in the matter of country road building. I drove 20 miles and back a few weeks ago over roads that used to be impassable at that time of year for anything except a good automobile and a good wagon. Soft clay, soft soil and mud holes of infinite variety were its old-time characteristics.

I made the trip in a very ordinary, four-year-old motor car, and drove the road trip in about three hours.

Under the old arrangement it would have taken all of one day and possibly most of the night.

The road drags, just the ordinary old road drags made from split logs, made the difference. Something, and I believe it was the necessity of making them most possible for the rural free delivery wagons, has made a big difference along the old road. We saw several road drags along the way, two or three of them in use, and the roads where they were passing were as smooth as a turnpike.

Summer is the time to do really constructive road work. The drags can be used summer or winter, but scrubbing, grading, culvert repairing and draining ought to be done in June, July, August and September. Earlier in the year the mud will prevent any real work being completed. Later in the fall the rains will turn the freshly graded roads into a hobble of clay water.

From now on until the first snow and freezes the dirt road can be shaped and graded. The last of the opinion that the plan of angulating some one farmer as overseer of "road boys" and having the rest of the neighborhood work under this inexperienced man is a mistake. The time will come when all road work will be done under the supervision of a man who does nothing but plan and build and possibly maintain roads. He will know grading and leveling, and can look after their condition, drainage and repair intelligently. It is mostly a bit of miss proportion now.

ways of a bad road thief forces farmer to haul small loads, drive slowly and occasions many expensive delays.

The bad road thief forces you to haul small loads, drive slowly, wrench and twist the life out of your horse, harness and vehicle, often breaking and damaging the latter until great and expensive repairs are necessary. It robs you of your opportunity to do any work on your farm when you wish to do it, for no man will pay as much for a large load of grain as he will for a small load, and he will not buy a farm at all when the road system is poor. The loss of time and money when the above named conditions exist make it imperative that you open all the drain ditches along the road, and drag this silt, notorious thief, to death with the King drag-bar.

Through Traffic Problem. There is a phase of the road question which is state-wide in its application. That relates to the through traffic which, when it occurs, necessitates through traffic. To leave the construction and care of these roads in the hands of local authorities must result in uneven and unharmonious plans, and the result is a general failure of such roads for a standard of their utility.

A silt properly built of limestone will be a success.

COMPETITION--DO YOU WANT IT?

Until The Jensen Creamery Co. opened a plant on Twin Falls did you ever receive a specimen of one per cent per pound on butter fat in rich cream? Were you able to get cash for your cream? Did you have a permanent cash market for your cream? Is competition of this sort worth anything to you? ADV. FRED S. HALE, Manager.

Lucid Directions.

The directions that an automobilist get on Long Island, when he asked a small boy the way to Ancker Bay, are almost worthy of a place beside the famous reply that "Uncle Bobo made to his father when the old man inquired of him the way to Master Jew's. The boy looked thoughtful, saying the NEW YORK Evening Post, and then replied: "Go straight up there, and you'll pass where the watermelon field was three years ago; then go on straight, and you'll pass where the corn was two years ago. Turn to your left, and turn to your right after that, and you'll turn to your right again, and you'll pass the place where a man was killed by an automobile last year. You'll go along about a mile, you'll come to where Mr. Jones lived before he moved over to Fort Washington; then turn to your left and you'll see Ancker Bay."

Had Made Something. "Did yiz ever make yiz money back in 'barres, Mulligan?" "Sure, I'd made a hundred dollars wance." "How did yiz do it?" "I looked him down dead, an' saw this word 'Y' mark for havin' 'iz dure open."

RAISE APPLES FOR HOME AND MARKET

Devices for Heading a Barrel. (Prepared by the United States Depart- ment of Agriculture.)

Every farmer, however small his possessions may be, who lives within the apple-growing districts of the United States, should possess apple orchard, the product of which should be found on his table in some form every day in the year." recommends the United States department of agricul- ture. Perhaps thousands of the southern portion of the country in more or less adapted to the production of apples. The apple is pre-eminently useful in the household economy and as a culinary fruit, none excels it. It grows throughout a greater variety of forms than any other and as a desert fruit, few are its equal and none its superior. Its juice, when ex- tracted, makes an excellent, whol- some beverage and for disease it has no rival. As a market fruit, it is one of the easiest and least expensive to handle and usually finds a ready sale if well grown and handled with care. Among the many ways in which the apple is used, the manufacture of jellies and preserves is one of grow- ing importance. The numerous fact- ories for the manufacture of these foods have not only created a demand for sweet and tart grades of apples, but also for by-products resulting from drying and evaporating the fruit. Apple butter of the real, rich, old- time farm variety fills an important place in the household economy and always finds a ready sale at good prices. Good sweet cider made from sound apples, not from half-decayed, wormy fruit, is one of the most health- ful products of the orchard. It can be kept sweet and unfermented by heating it to a temperature of 160° F., and holding it there for 30 minutes; then scaling it up tight in bottles of cork and storing in a cool place. Baked cider made in the good old- fashioned way by reheating to one-fifth by boiling, and then canned, makes an excellent article for culinary purposes. While the aim and purpose of the farmer should be to supply an abun- dance of fruit for his own family, he should also be able to sell a little surplus. The crop of summer and autumn apples requires an immediate disposition either by sale in the market, by evaporation, or manufacture into cider. The crop of winter varieties can be handled more profitably as they are not so perishable. A gentle exposure to the sun, or a slope, as a rule, is the most desirable for an orchard site, but this may vary in different apple sections. Soils such as are found in timber regions afford the best results, but outside of such districts clayey soils having few surface and subsoil drain- age are best. Well-rotted barnyard manure is the most valuable for apple orchards. The next best fertilizer is crop of red.

Vase Form of Top.

to receive the tree with its roots in a natural position, fill in the dirt among them well and tramp down, leaving the top of the tree to the surface. Thorough tillage with a cultivator during the growing season and plow- ing the land each spring, turning it each alternate year toward the trees, are recommended. Prune each year by cutting off the most tender sprouts of the year's growth, and thinning all cross branches, and thinning out where too densely grown, so as to balance the tops and afford free air circulation and admit sunlight to all parts of the trees. All classes, summer, autumn, and winter apples, must be carefully picked without loosening the stems from the fruit; handled carefully to avoid bruise or breaking of the skin, and placed under protection from sun and wind until full disposition is made of them. Apples for home use should be stored in some place where the temperature is kept as low as possible without danger of frost.

TIME TO CUT SWEET CLOVER

Much Depends on Whether Crop Is in First or Second Year—Avoid Coarse and Woolly Stems.

The time to cut sweet clover for hay will depend largely upon whether the crop is in the first or second year of growth. Generally speaking, only one crop can be obtained the first year, and this should not be cut until the crown sprouts begin to show. This cutting may be close, as the plant will have sufficient time to obtain a certain amount of growth ere the cold weather arrives and thus be able to withstand the winter.

During the second year of growth two or three crops of hay may be obtained if the proper precautions are exercised. The first cutting should be made just previous to the time that the plant begins to bloom and should be done so as to leave a few branches and leaves on each plant. It cut close at this time the majority of the cut plants will be killed. The second cut- ting should be done in exactly the same manner as the first, while the third and last cutting may be made close to the ground.

It is somewhat difficult to say just when the second and third cuttings should be made, owing to the variation in the plant growth, but as a rule the crop should be cut sufficiently early in order to avoid coarse and woolly stems.

Hog Cholera.

Hog cholera is a disease which seems to be stopped to a degree by the fronts of winter, although frost cannot be said to stop a case after it has taken hold of its victim. However, it seems to prevent the rapid spread of the disease. The result is that in spring the infection is, as a rule, at its lowest ebb, but increases rapidly from that time until fall.

Unprofitable Cows.

Cows are not always to blame for being unprofitable. We should never sell a cow to a butcher unless we can look her squarely in the eye and say, "Well, old girl, I've done my part to make you profitable."

A NEW TYPE OF PLAYS

Shepherd of the Hills Defies Southern Mountain Life at Its Best.
"The Shepherd of the Hills" is the dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's novel, which holds the record for the largest sales of any American book of fiction, which has been made by Mr. Wright with the assistance of Elsbury W. Reynolds, given its first complete run at the Loring theatre, Saturday evening, Nov. 7.
The scenes of the play are laid among the Ozark mountains of Missouri. It is a story of the hills and the simple life, yet it has plenty of excitement and an air of mystery that will hold the auditor from beginning to end.

The story has to do with the father of an artist, who, tired of city life, goes into the Ozarks for peace and solitude. The heirs of a revolution are committed by his son, whom he mourns as dead. The son had visited the hills some years before, when he fell in love with a simple country girl. He painted her picture and when he went back to the city desiring the girl, he carried funds because of the canvas. The girl deserted and broken hearted, dies, leaving behind her a half-witted son.
It is in the home of this dead and wronged girl that the father of the artist comes, and here he is employed to write the play. "It was to show the country and its people, and to and the half-witted boy, Pete, become friends. Then there is a love story running through the play that adds to its attractiveness. It is the love of a young artist of the hills, for "Sammy Lane," a girl of unusual qualities.
There are several characters whose quiet humor is a decided novelty. Taken as a whole, the play promises to prove a refreshing change from the usual run of dramatic attractions this season.

Meats, Quail and MacVitty, the producers, are said to have given the play an elaborate mounting, the mountains of the Ozark affording an opportunity for some fine peculiarities of the scenic painter's art. The cast has been selected for their peculiar fitness for each type.

IF WE ONLY HAD THE NERVE

Eastern Editor Has Rich War Time Pipe Dream.

Last week we received an invitation to buy a half of cotton. Say, Willard, the way things are going we'll be lucky if we can buy a suit of cotton. Gee; if we only had the nerve! What we couldn't do had we been born with the red of some people we have known, here's what you would find on these pages from week to week. "On account of the European war, the subscription price of this paper has been raised to $5 per year, cash in advance."
"On account of the loss from Europe duties, advertising rates will be increased 50 cents per inch. Effective at once."
"We are again to announce that owing to the almost complete suspension of the importation of chemicals, ordinary notices will cost you 10 cents a line hereafter."
"It is being impossible to export prizes to Przemysl, notices of such prizes will be charged for at the rate of $2 each and two tickets to the line hereafter."
"Resulting from the suspension of regular shipping facilities between New York and New Orleans, all shipments, regular, fast, or slow, to New York, etc. applied to this office under the pretext of exhibition to the public, will be accepted as contraband of war."

"All persons found owning this paper more than a year's subscription will be shot no spies."—Dakka Review.

WOULDN'T BE BLUFFED

Maxwell Movie Man Does Spectacular Stunt in Chicago.

A Maxwell Movie man was driving one of the Maxwell cars down Michigan avenue, Chicago, with friend one afternoon in July, and as they passed the Logan monument, in Grant Park, opposite Sixth street, a traffic officer held them for a moment. The friend remarked: "Not many years ago an officer stopped the first motor car ever seen here, right at this spot. He arrested the driver and a fine was imposed for endangering human life and fostering a mob. Today a driver could drive up to Mr. Logan, up there on the monument, and get away with it, if there is a car made that has the power and the ability to stand the bumps."
That gave the Maxwell man a jolt in his pride, and he growled: "I don't care, but I'll bet you a dinner and the fine if you are pinched, that you cannot take the car up there."
Early the next morning the Maxwell man called at the studio of the Logan Film Company and their star camera operator got into the car. At 6:30 they went to the monument and the camera set up. An unusually clear picture resulted, and will be shown, together with a hundred other equally interesting scenes at the Isis theatre Friday evening, November 6. There will be no admission, complimentary tickets being obtainable from the local Maxwell dealer, Mr. E. Schomberg.

North Dakota—Governor Hans R. Houderman, re-elected.

Kansas—Curtiss, Republican, leads for senate; Capner, Republican, ahead for governor.

New Hampshire—Low, Cummins re-elected.
Massachusetts—Governor Walsh, Democrat, leads in gubernatorial race, but chance of Democratic ticket is probably defeated.
New York—Sweeping Republican gains throughout the country, which reached a climax in this state by the overwhelming victory of Charles S. Whitman for governor, and James W. Wadsworth to succeed Ellis Root in the United States senate, were indicated Tuesday night in early returns of the general election.

Heavy falling off of the Progressive vote in many states the return to congress of former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, decline Republican gains in New York and Illinois in the house membership and the overwhelming defeat of Representative A. Mitchell Palmer by Senator Helen Pengo in Pennsylvania were features of the early returns.

Heavy returns indicated that the Democrats would retain control of congress, with approximately no change in the senate majority, but by a decidedly reduced majority in the house. At a late hour results in Illinois, Indiana, California and Colorado as to the senatorship were in doubt. In Illinois Roger C. Sullivan, who had the indorsement of most of the administration leaders, Secretary of State Bryan excepted, defeated by a large plurality, Senator L. Y. Sherman, Republican, and Raymond Hobbs, Progressive, according to returns at midnight.

Senators re-elected as the result of hard battles were Frank Brandegee, Republican, of Connecticut, who was opposed by Governor Simon E. Baldwin; Albert B. Cummins, Republican of Iowa, who defeated Representative Maurice Connolly; John Walter Smith, Democrat, of Maryland; William J. Stone, Democrat, of Missouri; Jacob G. Gallinger, Republican, of New Hampshire, who was opposed by Representative P. H. Stevens.

Democratic senators in the south were re-elected without difficulty, new senators from southern states chosen being Representative Oscar W. Ferguson of Alabama, and Representative Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia. Former Governor J. C. W. Beckham, Democrat, of Kentucky, was chosen for the long term.

NEW YORK—District Attorney Charles S. Whitman, Republican, was elected governor of New York Tuesday by an estimated plurality of 110,000 over Martin H. Glynn, Democrat, the incumbent.
William Steyer, who was impeached and removed from office in the fall of 1913, running on the Prohibition and American tickets, finished third in Illinois, but secured the favor of incomplete returns slightly more than 100,000 votes. Frederick M. Davenport, Progressive, ran fourth with approximately 50,000 votes.
James W. Wadsworth, Republican, appears to have defeated James W. Gerard, Democrat, for the United States senatorship by about 36,000. Balabridge Colby, Progressive, was third with a vote that probably will not exceed 50,000.

In 4081 districts out of 5661 in the state, the votes for governor stood Whitman, 528,336; Glynn, 452,278; Steyer, 30,646; Democrat, 37,265.
In 1929 districts out of the total of 5661, the vote for senator stood Wadsworth, 254,897; Gerard, 237,742; Colby, 29,692.
