Reverse in Poland Believed to Be Temporary

GERMANS REPORTED TO BE RETREATING.

Belgian forces now assembling in Belgium for another assault on the Allied lines.

London—Decline news from the Polish battlefield is expected hourly. A thorough victory either Russian or German would finally settle the course of the winter campaign both in the east and the west, but there is no assurance that they will not be defeated, although Petragrad messages declare that the Russians have inflicted a least temporary reverse upon the Germans in the sector between the Vistula and Warta rivers.

On All of Your Printed Matter, It Guarantees Good Workmanlike, Good Values, and Good Conditions.

The favorable mention given Senator Borah as a presidential possibility is increasing every day and strange to say, it is coming for the most part from the hidebound and conservative East. The West will appreciate Senator Borah's "good workmanlike, good values, and good conditions."

The building of railroads upon paper is one of the easiest jobs in the world. All that is needed is a good map and a better imagination than Spaulding had. Without any taking, should be located over the renewed attention it is getting from the Gould system officials.

SHOULD FIX GRADERS From the increasing number of accidents on both sides of the Shoshone grade it would seem highly advisable to do considerable work that will in order to cut down the steep pitches which make the grade both difficult and dangerous.

RUSSIA'S PART IN THE WAR The Russian War-tide, after a period of ebbs that carried it back to low ebb, has been steadily rising in the dispatches as sweeping forward with a momentum that, for a time at least, overwhelms the German and Austrian offensive and closes Russian territory of the Russian for-

The interrupted invasions of East Prussia and Galicia have been resumed with increased strength, and for the first time Russian troops have crossed the boundary into the province of Posen, within 200 miles of Berlin. By these achievements, many observers agree, Russia pre-empt the center of the stage in Europe's theatre of war; the broad and rapid developments in the eastern field between the checking of the German advance about the middle of October and the receding of Jaroslaw on November 5 affording a vivid contrast to the Titanic deadlock in France and Belgium. Operating on a battle line aggregating hundreds of miles, the Russian armies have driven back an invading force estimated at 1,000,000 men, the retreat being forced at a rate of fourteen miles a day.

The same writer, who analyzed each day's war news for the Evening Post's readers, finds in this result "more than fair justification for the exultant Russian claim voiced in a telegram from the Grand Duke Nicholas to General Joffre that the Russians had secured the greatest victory since the beginning of the war." This claim we are told, refers to the conflict which began near Warsaw on October 11 and ended, for the moment, with the occupation of Jaroslaw. We read further:

During these three weeks of fighting the Russians have beaten at least three great armies. The German, which advanced through central Poland against Warsaw; the Austrian army which advanced through southern Poland against Lvov, and the Austrian army, or more than one army, which had advanced in Galicia against the River San, driving the Russians from Jaroslaw, virtually compelled the abandonment of the siege of Przemyel, and at one time seemed to threaten the evacuation of Lemberg from the Russians in the course of the first month of the war. The Austro-Germans thus defeated must have numbered a million men. Taking the events of the last three weeks as representing a single operation, we can hardly have found since the beginning of the war on either front, add to this the fact that on the East Prussian frontier the Russians have been driving forward all they are now capable of, and the completeness of the victory furnished quite by the full round of the German successes in France and Belgium during the third week of August.

Now we are told that Russia presents an unbroken battle-line from the Baltic to the Dniester, and "for the first time since the beginning of the war, the way lies open to a formidable Russian thrust along the line." To quote the Evening Post's expert once more: "Taking the situation in Poland in conjunction with the attention in the west the fourth week of the war closes ominously for the Kaiser. At the beginning of the war it was assumed that the Allies in the west must play the devil to the Russian hammer. Both functions have been reversed—the French and English by their own tactics, the Russians by lightning bludge.

falling back is probably for the purpose of taking up defensive positions of their own choosing. If this is the case, he says, "The Russian advance must soon slow up in order to give them time to bring up their heavy artillery and to make the many other preparations that will be needed to enable them to exert their full force against the new German defensive position." The Springfield Republican notes that "Russian reports of great victories all along the line consist of reports from the western field of large German reinforcements to press the attack in Flanders." It goes on to suggest that probably "the awe-inspiring Russian victory is simply a successful advance against a line somewhat weakened and retiring in reasonably good order to a prepared defensive position, as after the battle of the Marne." The Springfield paper adds, however, that while the German forces opposing Russia appear to be somewhat weakened, the Russian armies will hardly reach their maximum before January. The Brooklyn Eagle is convinced that "Berlin and Vienna are in no immediate danger." According to Gao theory, said to be of official German origin, the German retreat in Poland was part of a deep-laid scheme on the part of General von Hindenburg to draw the Russians away from their base. Berlin dispatches quote Major Horn, military correspondent of the Tageblatt, as denying the possibility of an effective Russian invasion. "The German forces in the East," he declares, "are more than strong enough to prevent the Russians from gaining a foothold on Russian territory." A Copenhagen dispatch to the London Times says: "It is asserted in Berlin that Germany and Austria-Hungary now have concentrated about 3,000,000 soldiers on the line from Thorn to Krakow, and this is considered sufficient to crush the Russian forces."

A Petrograd correspondent adds the information that "Germans have been digging trenches and erecting barb wire entanglements along the whole Russian-German frontier," although "their main plan is to retire on the fortresses of Kolnberg, Loeben, Grandenz, Bromberg, Posen, Glogau, Breslau and Nisnee." "Hoody and terrible checks," agrees the editor of the New York Evening Sun, "are the natural thing to expect now that Russia is on the margin of Germany's nerve." But "judging by the results of a hundred days of war, it goes on to say: "In the end it is no longer to be wondered that there is a real, efficient, powerful Russian army, well equipped effectively led. The Russia that the Kaiser has to deal with is comparable with the Slav State which lost Port Arthur, or even which" faltered before Plevna—had failed at Sebastopol. Rather it is the Russia that fought Napoleon at Borodino and Pruthi at Zorich. It is a force bound to give capable of enduring terrific blows. Peculiarly ominous for Austria, according to the same authority, are the recent Russian successes. "It is perfectly plain," he says, "that Austrian conditions, after brief amelioration, have again become well high desperate. And in proof of this he cites an official statement from Vienna conceding the return of Russian troops to Bukovina and Western Galicia. We read:

"This admission means that two Austrian provinces have been for a second time almost completely evacuated. Save for the invested fortress of Przemyel, the passes of the Carpathians, and the immediate environs of Krakow, Galicia and Bukovina remain in the hands of the Zar." The Russian population is estimated at three times that of Belgium; the aggregate population 9,000,000 against 7,500,000 for Belgium, and perhaps 1,500,000 for the districts in France now occupied by the Germans. "But neither population nor territory measures the extent of that disaster to Francis Joseph incident to the conquest of his Eastern provinces. In the various operations his army has three times suffered terrible defeat; at Lemberg, in the opening days; at Iwankow, Jaroslaw, Tomaszow in the later days, and now finally before Ivanograd and along the San." "Moreover, at the end of four months Serbia, far from being crushed, seems to be keeping the field in full strength. In a Balkan winter now begun there is little prospect of a successful invasion of the Serbian mountains. On the Danube and the Vistula Austria has failed."—Literary Digest.

AUTO LICENSE LAW IS NULL

Judge Davis Holds That the Automobile License Law is Unconstitutional.

The automobile license law enacted by the legislature two years ago is unconstitutional and therefore null and void, according to the decision of Judge Carl A. Davis of the Third judicial district who today ordered Harry S. Jones, who had submitted to "artist" for the purpose of testing the law, to be discharged. This is the second time constitutionality of the law has been passed upon by Judge Davis. In the first decision made a little over a year ago, he held the law to be unconstitutional. Appeal was taken from his decision in that case, but his decision was affirmed by the supreme court which, however, held that the issue raised in the present case was not properly before the court. On this decision the supreme court divided, Justice Allison dissenting from the majority decision which was written by Judge Hulse of the Fifth judicial district, who had been called in to sit with the other justices.

MONSTER KRUPP GUN

Mortars With Which Forts of Liege Were Smashed.

Secret of Terrible Explosive in Shell Closely Guarded—Results of Eight Years of Quiet Work by Inventor

Chicago. — Raymond E. Swing, calling to the Chicago News from Berlin, has this to say of the great Krupp mortar:
"If Germany won the war it will not have been might but science that conquered; it will have been the science of warfare, such as other nations have known and practiced, though not so well, but above all it will have been the science of artillery, for the plan of German warfare was science in the 42 centimeter (16.6 inch) Krupp mortar, the most miraculous and powerful weapon designed in the history of war."
Mentioned by thousands, the Krupp mortar is known only by a few. The gun was invented eight years ago, but only through the confidence of the Krupp's know who the inventor is.
"For eight years the Krupp's worked at the secret while guarding it with most rigorous attention. This year they perfected it. This mortar fires the largest and most dangerous projectile ever shot from a weapon. In making it no single workman worked on more than one small piece, and no vital part of the machinery was made in Austria."
Even the artillery subcommittee of the board of war was not informed this year. It was merely asked to hold debate on the artillery situation, as something "extraordinary" was being provided. That something extraordinary was first seen when the Liege forts, which could withstand any artillery fire known to Belgium, were smashed by the shells during thousands of the garrison, under the wreckage. At Namur the same story was repeated.
"So far as I can learn, what was done at Liege and Namur was this: As soon as the shells from the vast space were heard and a great mortar set in concrete bed occupying a circle with a radius of 100 feet. Behind the mortar and outside this circle was a tunnel leading to a subterranean chamber. The shells were fired, and the projectile was set in place and then the runners retired to their underground chamber. Here they pressed a button and the mighty shot was fired."
The explosion was terrible. Any thing within fifty feet of the gun at the time of the explosion would be killed. Even men in the neighboring armies complained of headache and toothache from the jar and the same complaints were made by the men in the forts where the projectiles exploded.
"The projectile pierced through one, two and three ordinary masonry walls and burst itself in a fourth. Here it lay silent many seconds, then exploded like a volcano, bringing to the ground in ruins every stone which had stood upon another."
A shell fired into the center of a fort buried itself deep in the ground and lay there as though gathering strength for its demoralizing explosion. Then, after twenty seconds, it exploded and raised the ground walls in Berlin.
Each shell cost $2,500. What it contains nobody but the Krupp's know. It is brought to the battle field in pieces and assembled by the highest paid and most trusted of the Krupp's engineers. It is assembled by them and not one member of the artillery corps in the Kaiser's army has anything to do with it. The slogan of these men is, "One shot for one fort."

THE RED CROSS NURSE

By SAMUEL M. BRICKNER.
Now is your mission come with war's disaster.
In fields adieu where Pesco should fold her wings;
For you shall wander where red Mars is master;
Where bullets hiss and shrieking shrapnel sings.
There with deft hands, you woman's tears withholding,
You'll soothe the ebbing of the patriot's life.
Or you may close his longing eyes, be holding
In you the angel of the hateful strife.
Now 'neath the tent-roof over which is flying
In solemn mockery, the flag that holds at bay
Bullet and shell—your very self deny ing—
You watch and work; and hope, and dumber pray.
You've slatched the tears that flow at his wailing;
You're now to still them at his early end;
You're, too, to catch the while the ranks are thinning.
Some you urge to nuptial, sweet heart, friend.
You have a mission while the care man lingers.
While his maddened vision there
Only the club he clutches in his fingers.
Only the stone to win his childish gains.

WARRIORS OF INDIA HITS THE BELGIANS

German Prince Charges Them With Many Shocking Crimes.

All Are Indomitable Fighters, the Method of the Former Especially Being Terrifying to European Troops.

By HERBERT TEMPLE, European Manager of the International News Service.
London.—The throwing by England of thousands of her Indian fighters into France to combat German, and the importation of French African troops into the field, have given an amazing aspect to the international war. Germany now daily by the loss of the Belgians, Hungarians, Hindus and Africans.
The remarkably stout time after the beginning of war in which the British Indian troops were seen crossing the Atlantic astonished the Germans. It indicated that the Asiatic soldiers were on their way about the same instant that war was formally declared by Great Britain.
England, if necessary, can pour into France from India 238,000 trained men, of whom 75,000 are trained British troops, including some of the crack regiments of the Royal army, the most famous being native Indian soldiers, the 1st Gurkhas on the fringe line of France, Greece and Spain.
According to the official figures, the strength of the Indian army already on its way to the front is: Infantry, 200,000; cavalry, 25,000; artillery, 10,000; engineers, etc., 6,000.
The main strength of the Indian army is its infantry. Brahmins, Rajputs, Jats, Sikhs, Punjabis, Dogras, Mahabars and Chauhans, of all castes and several religions, Mohammedan, Hindu, Jadhahis, all are warriors who have sworn their lives for the British and the dark-skinned regiments of the Indian army are a fighting force hard to stop.
Among the most interesting as well as the most formidable fighting outfits in the Indian army are the Gurkhas. They are the bravest of the Gurkhas. These little fighters, who come from the region of Nepal and trace their descent from the Rajputs, must fight their way out in appearance they are deceiving. They are a few, stocky little men, of somewhat the appearance of the Japanese, only a bit heavier. They wear perpetual grimaces on their faces and the grin do not come off when they go into a fight.
The Gurkhas are the Charka Gurkhas and his two-24 inch to his long curved knife, which he uses with telling effect. When charged by the Gurkhas stand up and fire at the horsemen until they come within close range. Then the natives stop to be quiet. As the cavalry presses over them, the little Indians are up and busy at work hamstringing the horses and eliciting to stupors, enabling the riders to fall.
The Gurkhas, like the Scotch Thibetians, use halberds and they carry their pipes with them when they go into battle. Once they are launched on a charge, they do not stop until they come to rest on the ground. No matter how many fall, the survivors do not retreat.

POLES QUIT AUSTRIAN ARMY

Petrograd Correspondent Says the Czar's Promise of Freedom is Winning Them Over.

Chicago. — Slowly but surely the Poles are siding with Russia against Germany and Austria, cables a correspondent of the Chicago News from Petrograd. "The czar's manifesto regarding the Austro-German blockade is bearing fruit, not only among the Poles, but among other Slavs in Germany and Austria."

CROWN PRINCE WAS FURIOUS

Broke Surrendered Sword of French Officer, Declaring Allies Used Dum-dum Bullets.

Berlin. — It is learned that after the surrender of Louvain the German crown prince had an interview with the French commander, during which the latter tendered his sword in token of defeat.
The crown prince was furious as he had been informed that the French had used dum-dum bullets, contrary to the rules of war.
His face was flushed with wrath as he grasped the sword and, contrary to all military custom, broke it over the knee.
"I must take your sword, but you fought us dishonestly," said the German commander wearily. "You did not use dum-dum bullets against us."
The French commander denied that his men had used such bullets, but the German officers are reported to have held some of those bullets among the munitions of the fort.

FIGHTING IN THE VOSGES

Wounded French Soldiers Describe Their Experiences in the Battles in That Region.

London.—A correspondent describes a visit among the French who were wounded in the battles of the Vosges and says he has learned that many of the wounded have been transported into hospitals.
"I talked with many of these wounded," he said. "Three men who fought with the 1st division.
"It is probably our own fault that we are here. Our maps fell at the first volley and then all the other officers at succeeding volleys. When we found ourselves in that position we were left with our rifles and bayonets at the front, rear or flank, did bayonets at 1200 yards and went at them singing from the trenches when we were downed."
"On an adjoining hill was a sturdy peasant who told me this story: 'At five o'clock I fell on my knees, kneeling and crawling face downward. I did not stir, expecting every moment to be blown to atoms. After what seemed a half hour, feeling that 'the shell had not exploded, I hunched up my shoulders and the shell killed me.' It was a pity it was so long as it should have brought me back as a trophy for my sweetheart."
"A wounded artilleryman contributed the following experience: 'I slipped on one barbed wire. The Germans were shooting from the deep trenches among which our artillery was doing terrible work. But as fast as a German dropped a fresh man took his place, until bodies of the Germans were on top of me with the surface of the earth-work.' At this moment a German battery was ordered to advance. The heavy shells came in the trenches but the driver furiously lashed their horses, and finally dragged the guns across the human bridge."

COMMISSION GIVES REPORT

People Have Been Saved Cost of Commission Many Times Over.

Justification for continuation of the public utilities commission in this state to regulate public utilities and common carriers will be shown by facts and figures contained in its first report covering the fiscal period that registration of the commission has been in existence. It is estimated that the commission has saved to the state during its brief existence several times the amount appropriated by the last legis. Iture to carry it through the biennial period. ED. B. The records of the public utilities commission show that in many instances, through the fact it existed and was active, work has been accomplished beneficial to shippers and growers that if it could be estimated in dollars and cents would more than justify its existence.

Saved Thousands to Shippers

A year ago when there was threatened a refrigerator car shortage in Idaho, the movement of cargo, in a state to eastern markets, which had been prevented to continue, would have caused a loss of thousands of dollars to shippers, the commission was able to get action on the common carriers and relieve the shortage to the benefit of the shipper. This year there has been an over-supply of cars instead of shortage, due to the activity of the railroads and the added fact that there have been very poor market conditions and while they are now improving it was difficult to sell produce at a reasonable price.

Freight Rate Reduction.

The freight rate reductions secured through the commission on the Richfield and Wood River branches as well as the reduction on passenger rates, have saved to shippers and travelers a great deal of money. This is also true with relation to the reduction on freight rates on hay over the Idaho Northern. In addition many shippers have received accommodations from the common carriers through the commission which they admit they would not have secured had the commission not existed. Principally the accommodations relate to stock yards. It is now said to be a fact that shippers are urged by common carriers to take up rather than present them to the commission, for the former are ready to proceed to satisfy them. In some instances where complaints have been made with reference to stock yard accommodations, the railroads have ordered the improvements made by telegraph.

Utah Wants Commission

The state of Utah, one of the two states in the union without a public utilities or railroad commission, now has a fight on its hands in the demand that has been made by the people for such a regulation commission. Many have said that the legislature in that state are positive themselves on the benefit derived by other states through their commissions and a number of them have written to the Idaho commission asking for information. Arranged against the proposed act

What Are You Driving?

If it isn't a Buick, you're spending more money than necessary for gasoline and upkeep. Spending more money than necessary for any article of purchase is bad business. What a Buick has done for Others, a Buick will do for you. Records of the past are best promises for the future. Below is a copy of one of the many affidavits we have regarding Buick economy.

State of Idaho, County of Twin Falls.

Twin Falls, Idaho, Oct. 24, 1914.

This is to certify that we, J. J. Patterson and R. C. McNitt, of Lewistown, Mifflin County, Penn., left said town on August 25, 1914. We came by way of Harrisburg, Reading and Allentown, into Philadelphia and spent several days there. Thence to New York City, where we stayed for some time. From there to Syracuse by way of Albany and thence to Buffalo and Niagara Falls and spent some time there. From there to Detroit, Mich., where we spent a week. Thence to Flint, Mich., where the car we are driving is made. We were all through the factory. Came to Chicago from there and spent a week. Thence to Des Moines, Ia., and from there to Omaha. From Omaha to Lincoln, Neb., and thence to Denver, Colo., came from Denver to Salt Lake City, Utah, by way of Laramie, Rock Springs and Green river. From Salt Lake City to Twin Falls, by way of Ogden, Mel and American Falls.

We are driving a Buick 36 runabout, 1914 model and it weighs as it stands ready for the road, 3340 lbs. We have traveled 6310 miles. Some people may doubt this mileage but when they consider we have been weeks on the road and using our engine every place we stopped, mileage will look different to them. A line about the Buick car we will say. The only trouble we have had is 6 punctures and two blowouts. Car has always been ready waiting. It has only used an average gallon of common gasoline to every twenty miles traveled and we feel it has not its equal in any other make for such a trip. We feel highly elated in recommending this car to the many who inquire how it is standing the trip and that if we were purchasing another only the Buick people could sell us.

One word about Buick agents and distributors. They have treated us with the greatest courtesy and have given us splendid service.

Our car traveled over three thousand miles before starting said trip and all who have seen it say it looks and sounds better than any other car they have seen making this trip. We have had had the front tires off on the entire trip and they are the same tires that were on the car when we bought it. We have bought two tires for the rear wheels.

J. H. MOREHOUSE,
Notary Public.

The above car is now enroute from Seattle, Wash., to San Francisco, and from there it goes to Los Angeles, and back to its starting point in Pennsylvania by what is known as the southern route.

Call and let us show you the Buick, let us show you why it goes further on a gallon of gasoline than any other car for its weight. Also why its engine delivers more power for its size than any other engine built.
