THE tree shines with the
candle glow,
The tinkets glitter jewel-
wise,
And we would that our souls
might know
The joy told in the children's eyes.
Such sheer delight as this of theirs—
A wondrous happiness
it is!
And every word the message bears.
This is the children's day
—and His!

LET us come, as the Wise
Men came
Those nineteen centuries
agone,

Led by the Star's eternal flame
That bade them rise and hasten on.

They brought rare frankin-
cense and myrrh,
They brought rich gems
and graven gold,
They knelt, adoring, near to
Hie,

And all their marvelings
they told.

A YE, as those Men of long ago,
Today we, too, may see
the Star,

May see its mystic heavenly glow

Flash-out o'er Childland
fair and far;

And from our hands now fall
the gifts

And we know why the Wise Men smiled

With gratefulness, and each heart lit

Its chant of worship of the Child.

"But the mystery is this, Mems-

we are thus strangely overcome by sleep. Solve this riddle for us and my master will pay you well."

A merchant went home to supper one night and noticed a new silver coffee percolator on the table. He asked his wife where she got it and she said: "Why, dear, I picked it up out of Smith's catalogue and it cost me $1.50 and express." At once the husband was in a most unpleasant mood. "Why, in the deuce didn't you tell me you wanted that thing. I have lots of them at the store and they only cost 75 cents. How has he been fooling you like this? Well, John, if you would advertise once in a while, the people would know you were still in business, maybe you wouldn't send away for so much stuff!"

The great idea of the Federal court regarding the Stannan River complaint to live up to its contract with regard to the water right is a signal victory for the settlers, and should be hailed toward the river as the stamp of the lifetime on the part of the father, instead of the company. The Times' sympathies have been with the settlers for the reason that the point had been made against a law of corporation has very little chance of carrying in the way through the courts. The Stannan River settlers were meted out to this country through the same advertising campaign promoter, who were possible to live in good faith a part of their point. The settlement and the assurance of the rate were made possible by the contract which was signed by the company. The contract declared that the company would pay annually that the other party, the company, would furnish a given amount of water. It promised a continuous flow that would be every settler who by his signing showed his good faith. The company would not have given one inch in its demands if the rate had been reversed. Corporations, as a rule, pay very strict regard to laws which work in their favor. But when the company found by actual trial that there was not water enough to go around, due to their own laziness in investigating the source of supply, they immediately began the process of routing the water and by so doing departed from the letter of their contract. The water could not be delivered at the time advertised and the settlers, who came out and tried to extract a precarious living from the land, had no other recourse but to fight to prevent the violation of interest on the water right, which was called for in the contract. For the company in the hands of a bunch of bondholders attempted to shift the system to the settlers, reasoning that once out of it the water shortage would be the settlers' own fault. It was this plan which the settlers sought to defeat in their suit in the federal court in settling the water company to deliver the amount of acre feet of water called for in the contract. The company, because it was wrong, is now, worthily for the reason that for the past two years the settlers have been demanding that the state land board, the supervisor of the water contract, has repeatedly refused to take action which would end the contract, and has made no concession to the company which were not in accordance with the contractual rights of the settlers. From the results of this case the settlers of all irrigation projects should take heart because at last justice at last is being done. The Times believe that the company has no doubt no more a fortune in the project and with the possible cutting down of the acreage stands to lose a large amount. But it is one of the business hazards which any investor has to take. Any excessive profit made on the projects would not have been returned to the settlers had the company been allowed to stay. There is no reason why the settlers' setting in good faith should be penalized by the company, which, by the way, should be equally binding upon the settlers. There is a little bit of law and equity about the litigation, which was unjust, and a bit of similar business with which the capitalist is forced to public sentiment his way at the expense of the innocent purchaser."

As to the sea, England has nothing to her credit there, despite great sacrifices. Another Constantinople paper, the Iblan, points out a Russian's dream of the occupation of Stamboul and of seeing the great mosque of St. Sophia as a Christian temple once more. It remarks: "This Russian dream is no new thing; it is a plan carefully concocted years ago. While the best way to treat or subvert a Turk is to be irritated by it. Yet we need not worry ourselves about Russia's designs. Turkey, relying on the shield of God, on the strength of her army and navy, on the devotion and self sacrifice of all her people, will render impossible the realization of any such dream." The Iblan, despite its confidence, seems to have some doubts about the attitude of the Armenians and makes a strong bid for their sympathy on the ground that they have, under Turkish rule, far greater opportunities of preserving their national character than would be allowed by Russia, who would seek to absorb and Russinize them. "Even if Russia were to take our eastern provinces, it would not be to make them autonomous, under Armenian rule, but merely to add them to the Russian Empire. They will make the Armenians just a catspaw for their own designs, and for this there is ample evidence." Translations made for the Literary Digest.

THE MERRY OF MODERN WAR

If the great war reveals an advance in the science of killing, it is also an advance in the art of being killed. The Paris Journal des Debats, for great progress in the treatment of the combatants who have the lesser ill luck to be merely wounded. In proof of this contention he offers as the record of a surgical hospital at Vichy, where, in one month, out of a total of 1,000 operations, about twenty per cent less than ten amputations were found necessary. Those that were made, moreover, were minor operations, involving the loss of a finger or so. The writer admits having seen more serious operations, as, for instance, the amputation of a leg, an arm, a hand; but he asserts that they are very few in comparison with the records of war forty to fifty years ago. The number will remain small, too, he says, because, happily for our wounded, amputations are no longer the fashion. The reason for this, he explains, is "getting a Paris medical authority to follow: 'Amputation should be the rule of treatment in cases of bullet wounds, but in modern warfare, where bullets are sure to follow, no matter which way is best or how bad.' A similar doctrine was proposed, the writer tells us, by another medical authority as the result of experience in the Balkan war. He adds: "With wounds from modern projectiles, especially the bullet, which remains the most effective of all, being the cause of death or injury in 80 per cent out of 100 in 1870 and 85 in the Russo-Japanese war, a great and most favorable change is to be noted. The region of the wound is smaller and more localized. As to some amputees they are small and numerous, while leg ones are infrequently found. The first impression is that the case is very serious, but the limb is lost. No other thought occurs to surgeons, a hundred years ago, who were responsible then for the amputation of a limb, and the loss of bone splinters to a wound." The writer then cites authorities as stating that amputation is justifiable only when the mutilation of the extremity is in itself fatal. In fact, "amputation is permissible only in case of gangrene, or when the patient shows signs of lethal infection without infection or a lack of resistance against the bacilli conditions resulting from the wound." Literary Digest.

The GIFT CIGARS

WIEBUR D. NESBIT

DON'T laugh! But save me a cigar. I selected the things by their color— They came out in one of those boxes. I think they were called the "Maud Miller". You read all these effusive jokes. I know I must read them hereafter. Please wait for the place for the laughter.

Don't smile! But she brought them here. I know how she talked to the dealer— She looked at each box on the shelf. And spoke of the wrapper as "prettier."

O beautiful-looking were they— I think they were called the "Maud Miller". O surely you think me of hay. Oh yes, I was, you are diller. Don't grin! I know you got red hands. And really looked quite artistic. She says that she now understands why smoking has charms that are "artistic". She says that it's cheating to say "How much an ounce?" Why, then, I shall see what I can do when I go. Then came out in one of those boxes— And, honestly, now, they were splendid!

Now, wait! Well, I couldn't and smoke! She placed the box first on the table. I chuckled and softly I began— "Maud Miller," you know, was the label. Well, talk of your jokes on cigars! I shall see what I can do when I go. Then came out in one of those boxes— And, honestly, now, they were splendid!

Couldn't have. "Think! I bet you didn't have a good time at your Christmas party yesterday," taunted Billy. "I bet I did," answered little Eddie. "Aw, go way. Why ain't you sick today, if you did?"

The Right Christmas Attitude

BEWARE of uttering pessimistic and cynical remarks about Christmas and Christmas joys. If only from motives of vanity, abstain from grumbling during the festive season, for nothing so surely fires a person's age as disagreeable remarks about the utter futility and absurdity of keeping Christmas. However well preserved, however free from gray hair, wrinkles and other distressing marks of devouring time, be quite sure that your Christmas attitude will not give you away. "Heigho for the holly! This life is most jolly!" is the correct attitude. It is the attitude of the child, and at Christmas time the immortal child which lurks in every human being wakes to life if we do not flout it and allow it to creep back to its hiding place for want of encouragement. Grumpy, disagreeable people naturally do not like Christmas, because it shows them up.

KINDHEARTED.

"Are you going to hang up your stockings on Christmas eve?" asked the boy's uncle, patronizingly. "I suppose so," answered the boy, still more patronizingly. "Father and mother seem to expect that sort of thing, and it would be a pity to disappoint them."

FESTIVAL FOR THE YOUNG

Opportunity of Christmas of Bringing Happiness to Children Should Not Be Passed By.

Christmas, the celebration of the birthday of the Divine Child, is particularly the children's festival. And while it cannot, too, but be a time of special rejoicing among grown-ups, we realize after all, that it has for other charm to compare with the pleasure to take in some kid's delight over the doll or drum or picture book or our special Santa Claus has brought him.

This opportunity of making some child's Christmas so surpassing joy, of which he will carry a gracious and ennobling memory into after life, years, it may be, after our direct influence for good or evil will be ceased forever—this opportunity of giving pleasure to one of the best that life has to offer us. And perhaps the greatest opportunity is his who in place of home fires, has the wide, gray world of homeless, homeless, unhappy childhood from which to choose the most needy recipient of his Christmas giving. The chances of giving happiness in this way are so many, the means so simple, and the reward so worthy, that no one of us should let the season pass unimproved.

For it is good to be children sometimes, and never better than at Christmas, when its mighty founder was a child himself.

—Charles DeWitt

WISE AND JUST.

There was a man in our town, And he was wondrous wise. He said all plants were mischievous To his discerning eyes.

Whenever beneath a sprig of green, From holly down to fern, He found a snake's young and fair, He then and there killed her.

And when the snake's offspring, He did perceive it there, And saw it hiss and hiss, And hiss and hiss and hiss, And hiss and hiss and hiss.

Satisfied. He was a poor man but a contented one. Santa Claus came to him and said:

"What do you want, my friend?"

"Nothing," he replied, with becoming modesty, which he found would be rewarded.

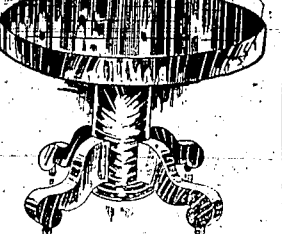

And Santa Claus was so pleased that he gave it him and passed on.

Papa's Suggestion. Mrs. Fossilick (who is self-willed) "I wish I knew what to give dear Charles for a Christmas gift."

"Pardon me," answered the boy, "Charles"—give him a wide berth.

NO DEPUTY TREASURER NEEDED

E. H. Dewey Would Run State Office Without Help

The duties of a treasurer of the state of Idaho are no so difficult for numerous that he could be appointed a deputy, for he has already a time to perform both the duties of state treasurer and deputy state treasurer himself. This is the belief of State Treasurer E. H. Dewey and in a report filed today with the board of examiners as required by law he recommends that no appropriation be made by the next legislature for a deputy treasurer and thereby the state will recognize to the extent of $5000 for the fiscal year.

State Treasurer Dewey succeeded O. V. Allen, former treasurer, by appointment from Governor John M. Haines. The present state treasurer has been in his treasury department long enough to come to the definite conclusion that the elected treasurer of this state can very well afford to dispense with the services of a deputy in his department and do the work. State Treasurer Dewey finds that since he has been in the office as the official head, the present deputy state treasurer has done most of the work which had then not been a deputy, he would have had time enough to do himself, for he finds that he has plenty of time on his hands.

JANKS GETS NEW TRIAL

Supreme Court Reverses District Court on Faulty Instructions

W. C. Janka, through his attorneys, W. J. Guthrie and Judge J. C. Rogers, received word last Thursday from Boise, that he had been granted a new trial in the case of the state versus Janka, on the charge of receiving stolen property. The defendant, found guilty in the district court for the same crime, appealed from the verdict on the ground of erroneous and misleading instruction of the court. It was on the instructions that the appellate court found fault in order to grant a new trial. The case attracted a great amount of attention because of the prominence of the defendant and the efforts made to convict by the state and by the county, who employed special counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney. Janka, although sentenced by the court to a term in prison, was released on bail pending the appeal for a new trial. The prosecuting attorney who did the work on the case will, the first of January, retire and if the case comes up again will be unable to assist in preparing for the new trial. Attorney Guthrie and Rogers, while claiming that a new trial would be granted, are greatly pleased with the confirmation by the court. In the first trial the defense offered no evidence, believing that the state had failed to make out its case. The syllabus of the supreme court decision follows:

In returning the case for trial, the supreme court says that the instructions given by Judge Stockeager were prejudicial in that they stated that the value of such property and consequently the fact that such property was stolen may be proven by the unsworn possession of recently stolen property. In the first place, says the court, the use of the phrase "recently stolen" as applied to the property mentioned in the instructions is by the evidence and even if it was it was not proper for the court to decide this matter.

Also in the matter of whether the property was stolen or not, the court comments as follows: "We may say that the initial and final point in order to convict the defendant is mainly that the property was stolen. His plea of acquittal is not supported by the evidence." It comments upon the fact that the men who sold the stock to the packing company did not act as if he had stolen the cattle and that he had never been prosecuted for theft. Further, there is no distinct testimony bearing out the fact that the theft was recent, one and as there were only two head of stock sold says "a number of ways may readily be suggested to a court for them being withheld from the market or not on the part of Dolan."

Justice Trull is the author of the opinion. Chief Justice Sullivan concurs. Justice Trull was not on the bench at the time the case was heard.

HAS SOLVED ROAD PROBLEMS

Utilizing Brick as Road Bed With Marked Success

The road problem for heavy traffic roads has been solved in Ohio, according to Engineer John Lay, who presented the Ohio railway department here today on the progress of the American Road Builders' Congress.

Laylin discussed the topic of brick rural highways and pointed to Cuyahoga county, Ohio, with its 409 miles of brick country roads as a county that was first to reach a satisfactory solution. The state highway department has in the order of $25 million of road in the last three years, at an average cost approximating $1,200 per mile for each foot in width, which includes drainage, grading, culverts and bridges. While he urged the use of concrete foundations, he cited a number of roads in northern Ohio where bricks had been laid directly on a well drained sub-grade and had given excellent service at a great saving in cost. Physical and drainage conditions of the brick.

For many improved roads that he has not stood so much the strain of heavy traffic, Laylin suggested the addition of a brick surface as the best means of getting a dependable road and saving the existing investment.

THE FAME of Archie Graham's Scotch Shortbread is not alone local—from far-off Omaha comes an order for this seasonable, and delicious product of the baker's art, so dear to the heart of every man with even a trace of the Scotch about him.

But it is not alone to the Scotch that Archie Graham's Shortbread and the host of other good things in breads and pastries appeals, but to everyone who has ever given the Rogerson Bakery a trial and who is guided in a selection of foodstuffs by flavor, purity and general all around wholesomeness.

Bread and pastry making in the Graham way has come to mean something above and beyond the ordinary product of the baker's shop. Sanitary surroundings mean purity of product and ability in any line of business is largely a matter of experience.

Archie Graham has been a baker all his life. Here is the letter of the Omaha man:
