RUPERT MAN MURDERS

Kills Woman Who Refused to Marry Him.

Rupert—A double tragedy occurred Saturday night at Minidoka, a man who was named Rupert, who was a prominent and wealthy merchant of Rupert, shot and killed Mrs. Ned H. Pittenger, also of Rupert, afterwards turning the gun upon himself with fatal effect.

A coroner's jury will hold Sunday morning, the jury returning a verdict in accordance with the stipulation in the case. The principal witness at the inquest was Mrs. Edna Hunter, a sister of the murdered woman, who was present when the shooting was done.

At that time she had been drinking. "Are you going to marry me," she asked. "No," he replied. "I will not marry the best man that ever walked."

Nelson was about 82 years old and had large family of grown up children. He owned a large hardware and furniture store in Rupert and another at Paul Idaho. He was in business with two banks in Utah and other enterprises. He had always been regarded as a level headed business man.

DO NOT PAMPER FARM HORSES IN WINTER

English Shire Stallion.

(By J. M. DELL.) We are now in the midst of winter weather, and the daily care of the farm teams should be a matter of importance to their owners. This caring for them does not altogether consist in feeding and watering regularly, although these are the main essentials, but without good food and an abundance of pure drinking water, the work stock cannot remain in a thrifty condition.

The question of exercise is a most important one, and one that should never be neglected. I think it is a good plan to turn out all of the work horses every day that are not in actual use, especially on days when there is no "falling weather."

One of the greatest mistakes that a farmer can make is to leave his teams standing in the barn, day after day, and on full feed, as they are liable to suffer from attacks of indigestion, and any of the older stock is very liable to stock up from want of exercise. Then, again, all of them will be more subject to colds than where they are turned out to run around and play in the farmyard.

four big, strong horses running around and playing like so many colts, and even rolling in the snow, for we do have snow occasionally in "Old Virginia." Now, the writer does not remember ever cooling one of these horses with a cold or even a cough, all during the time they were on this Virginia farm.

Of course I am well aware that the climate in the North and West is much colder than that of Virginia, but where teams are accustomed to the winters of these other states, they can be turned out with impunity, I should think, and without any fear of "injuring them."

In connection with the idea of horses being turned out for exercise in the winter season, the writer calls to mind a paragraph that he recently read which stated that Secretary Wilson had been wintering a herd of horses out of doors, and for the last two years in the "low farm." These horses have access to a shed where they could find protection from the cold blasts, but it is said that they sought protection in a wooded ravine and would not go into the shed, even in the worst weather.

This herd of horses enjoy the best of health, and, being put in the pasture when between one and two years old, are kept there until they are taken out to be broken and sold in the spring.

Here is a practical illustration of the cold weather that will stand and thrive in, if they are turned loose, so that they can get the amount of exercise that they always stand in.

Two many stallions are pampered, and at the same time injured by keeping them shut up in close stalls, when they should have the run of a paddock every good day during the winter.

Just remember that it is almost impossible to hurt a horse of any class, or of any breed, by turning him out and letting him keep warm by moving around in the paddock, field or lot.

The same simple rule will apply equally well to brood-mares and colts.

SOWS FROM FALL LITTERS ARE BEST

Animals From Prolific Families Are Certain to Make the Best Mothers.

(By W. M. KELLEY.) In selecting breeding sows I prefer to select the pigs from fall litters when they arrive at the age that I prefer to have my sows when they drop their first litter and when allowed to obtain a large part of their growth and development in the pasture and forage crops the following summer they arrive at the very best period of development to breed for litters early the next spring.

I aim to select large, rosy sows, when we get a good sow that brings us large litters of good pigs we keep her as long as she will breed.

Eyes in Wet Weather. During wet weather no farmer will want to have the eyes of his cattle, sheep, hogs, the land and the eyes will be harmed if the animals run over the fields in the mud. A pen large enough for the purpose can be provided, and the eyes can be kept clear during rainy weather, and after there is no more rain to be picked out of the fields.

Unsuccessful Poultryman. No man who does not care for a hen, and who feels like kicking her or shooting her away whenever it comes near, will ever succeed as poultryman.

PLAN TO INTEREST FARMER IN DAIRY

While Indifference is Manifested, No Improvement in Material is Expected.

The person who could succeed in getting up some scheme of interesting the average farmer in the dairy business would be entitled to have his name enrolled among the benefactors of the human race.

While this may seem to be an extravagant statement it is not as much as it might seem before it is examined into more closely.

The average farmer today is a dairyman just because he happens to be. He did not go into it promiscuously, but he has made it out of himself with a few cows and a little more milk and cream on hand than his family could consume and he sold it, and he probably gave no thought to whether it was a good product or not.

As long as the average farmer is as indifferent as this, we can look for but little difference in the character of the raw material that is coming to the creameries.

Just what is going to be necessary to interest the average farmer in dairying is pretty hard to tell. One thing is certain; he cannot be driven into it. It also seems that he cannot be persuaded into it.

One Corn Variety. There can be no doubt as to the advisability of a community growing on a variety and every corn grower raising it. This variety should be the one found best by the actual experience of one grower, and his experiment of other varieties, if such have been made. Such a step should tend to increase the amount of corn grown and make a uniform product which is more marketable.

HARD TIMES IN THE '60S

People Learned to Practice Economy in the Period Following the Civil War.

The mother who had five little children to look after during the hard times that followed the Civil War, was talking about the high prices which the European conflict is causing.

"People will weather it in some way," she said. "We did in the Civil war days, and prices aren't anything new to what they were then."

"How did we do it? Why, in every possible way. I remember I utilized salt bags to make underclothes for my girls. The salt bags in those days were of regular, better material than they are today, and, as I'd always been thrifty and saved 'em all, they came in pretty handy, I can tell you. The girls were not fond of sitting down when they had their salt-bag undergarments on, for they said there were so many seams that it hurt 'em all down."

"I made my own skirts for them all—three of them—out of my own white alkalis. They were pretty full in those days. I found I could get along with one, and the rest I cut over for the girls."

"The boys wore 'hard-time suits,' made of the cheapest, almost shoddy material—and they looked just as cheap and shabby as they were. But the boys didn't mind—it made no difference whether they minded or not. It was all most people could afford."

"We women wore 'calico dresses' a lot. We didn't need a 'waist a cotton gown' to get us started in that direction. There was no other direction for us to go."

"But somehow no one seemed to whine or complain much. We were all in the same boat, and we laughed and made the best of it."

MOTORIST TELLS IN YERSE OF HILL CLIMB.

Thirty-five or 80 automobile enthusiasts gathered round Buick hill, near Bridgeport, Neb., many Sunday's ago to see a Michigan make car climb up on the Buick, according to the North Platte News.

The story is told in synthetic form, and fits thus we will repeat it was awful neat, but it didn't clear-crowds saw the Buick hot it.

Not a sound was heard All was still as death; And the waiting multitude Held its breath.

The saphyrs were hushed, And the Buick stood still; While Buick Lavelle Buried the hill.

Twain a noble bill, From crown to base-- Doc. Palmer started To see the race.

The Buick climbed To the summit high And the driver winked And to the great, brackish night.

The humbles humbled, In the sun's bright glow While the doctor bowed To the crowd below.

And then he smiled, A smile most bland, As he gazed at the hill And the rocks and the sand.

The horns were tooted From the road; Charlie Clavson flopped His wings and crowed;

And then Lavelle With spirits light, Slowly started Up to the height.

But he reached a point Where he had to stop And he and his car Never reached the top;

It was dollars to doughnuts, The crowd all knew, He had bitten off more 'Than he could chew.

Lavelle, he struggled And fumed and raged But he had to stop The place he was at--

He was there at the finish In the tracks Buick made, He could go on at the bottom, But not on the grade.

HOME-TRADE NEEDED IN WEST

Co-Operation Between the Seller and Buyer.

As I have stated before the average western town depends upon its retail stores for life. It is primarily a trading point. Cripple the retail business and you cripple the community. Destroy the stores, you destroy the town.

There are three classes of people given to patronizing the home merchant, only when necessary demands. There is the fellow who takes pride in saying that he is independent of the store. He holds mortgages on good farms and owns some bank stock. He buys most of his goods away from home and in the store. He has some other very in the town but is against every proposed progressive step, fearing that his taxes will be increased one-third of one per cent. He is tired and retired. The community will not have lost much when he is interfered.

There are those who see those people who buy most of their goods by mail because they have no time to do so, so they are displaying notable independence in their shopping habits.

There is still another class of mail-order buyers—folks who have a hard time to make both ends meet. They can make a small part of the time, think they do a part of the time, but deceiving themselves that they do all the time.

These latter folks are often made incurably catalogue buyers by some unscrupulous store keeper, by discouraging clerks, by coming in contact with merchants who are so business men. Every place has the dealer who will not compare his price and merchandise with those of the catalogue houses.

The mention of a catalogue house throws him into a tantrum. This sort of merchant is a "weak retailer."

Any dealer who holds his own with these mail order concerns, if he will but have sense enough to know that he must meet competition on quality, price and service.—Idaho Falls Register.

CHAPTER XXI

Pauline sat reading by the windowed library window. They had come to the country home this summer and the park of Castle Marvin had kindled to leave and she had to attend. It was like a flower kingdom in the land of Pauline, and as her eyes were lit with a glow now and then, she would look at the garden which she had seen in the garden which she had seen in the garden which she had seen in the garden.

"I have hired a new gardener who does not know his own name," he said. "The man shuffled his feet and looked sheepishly at the ground. Harry passed on with him and called the chauffeur, Farrell, who took the man to the garage."

Pauline turned back to the page of the newspaper. A picture in an article on the motor races caught her eye and held it for some reason. She did not at first understand it, but she had a feeling that it was a picture of a man who was a friend of her father's.

"I have hired a new gardener who does not know his own name," he said. "The man shuffled his feet and looked sheepishly at the ground. Harry passed on with him and called the chauffeur, Farrell, who took the man to the garage."

Pauline turned back to the page of the newspaper. A picture in an article on the motor races caught her eye and held it for some reason. She did not at first understand it, but she had a feeling that it was a picture of a man who was a friend of her father's.

BUTTER AND EGGS $81.00

Rockland Woman Shows What Mortgagee Litters Will Do.

Mrs. Antone Nelson of Rockland, in making good on the mortgage difference the cow and the hen. In January she marketed butter to the amount of $56, and eggs to the amount of $20. With-bay at $10 per ton and cows which $100 per acre, the feeding expenses are higher than usual, but they leave a substantial profit for industry netting $100. Mrs. Nelson is selling an estimate that should be generally followed. Butter and eggs are always ready cash. There is not a dry farm in all the country where could not feed a few good cows and keep a few chickens. Some who live at a distance might find it highly profitable to harvest about half of which they have an abundance—and market better rather than wheat.

The only complaint Mrs. Nelson has is that the stores will not take her

ENTER AND EGGS for cash. She cannot use $81 per month in trade. At present Blackburn's market takes all cash. The price of eggs is $1.00 per dozen for eggs outside the stores—American Poultry Press.

WENDELL SELLS BONDS

North Side (City Becomes Owner of Water System).

The Wendell water bonds have been sold to the James M. Wright Company, of Denver, and the city took over the water system. The bonds were sold at 100 percent interest, and only a few preliminary are now to be completed for the city to take over the system. Mr. Wendell says he and the city took the company will be ready to give possession one day this week, perhaps today.—Wendell Irrigator.

PROOF OF DISTINCTIVE GARB

Japanese Carpenters Wear Peculiar Coat Distinguished With the Name of Their Employer.

The advertisement of old Nippon—a walking-advertisement for his employer. At work he wears a long blue coat drenched with the shoulders with a huge white Japanese character denoting the name of the contractor for whom he works.

Down the front are figured in white other names of the contractor; whether or they may be called given names or Christian names is not said. At any rate, the name on the back is the one the contractor is known by to the world, like our Smith or Jones. Below this name is a rectangular design in white covering the entire skin of the coat.

When the Japanese artisans first came to the exposition grounds to erect their national pavilion spectators thought they were some part of a pageant rather than carpenters, for their long coats are like the tabards worn by heralds in ancient times. The coat is a perquisite of the carpenter. Twice a year his employer has to give him a new one.

For the rest, the carpenter wears a pair of high-waisted, close-fitting, long blue tights with stocking feet, reinforced on the soles with his leather. Most remarkable of all, the stocking foot has a separate division for the great toe, like the thumb on a mitten. They carry a long staff, one of these carpenters for some time, hoping to see him pick up a nail or a hammer with his toes, but in vain. He says as I could see, the Japanese carpenter's foot is not a relation to Jungling—San Francisco Chronicle.

POULTRY HOUSE SITE

Convenience is Main Thing to Be Considered.

Locate the Structure So That the Strong Winds Will Be at Its Back.

With Windows in Front—Drainage of Importance.

The builder of a farm poultry house should carefully consider the available sites, and put it where the fowls will do best, and where it will be easiest to look after them.

Convenience is the main thing to be regarded on a farm where there is much work to be done either than taking care of the chickens. Put the house or houses close enough to the residence that it will be easy to look after the inmates.

At the same time, all natural advantage of location should be considered. If there is a sheltering hill near enough to be used as a wind-break, place the house so the strong winds from the west, southwest and north will be fended off by the high ground. Set the house so the wind will be at its back, and this means, in most localities, that the doors and the greater number of windows should be on the south, the southeast or the southwest.

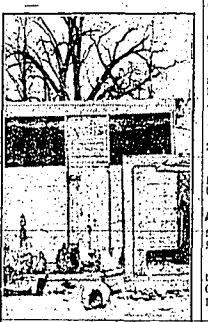

Where there is a windbreak of trees or even of buildings, take advantage of them if the site is suitable otherwise. These windbreaks will make a lot of difference in stormy, blustering weather. There are many cold days when the birds could very well stay outside if they were protected from high winds.

Another thing to watch is the problem of drainage. Damp, low ground, matter how well the hen house will be sheltered, is not suitable for a chicken shelter. There should be slope downward from the building to make certain that it will not be damp and clammy on the inside.

Through drainage should be assured even if it is necessary to lay a few rows of tiles. Where a sandy and naturally well drained site can be chosen, the drainage will take care of itself if nothing is done to hinder it. Never build a house in a hollow as it will be just about impossible to keep the chickens healthy in such a structure.

The building itself can be adapted to the pocketbook of the builder. Where the climate is not unreasonably cold in winter, unreasonably from the standpoint of poultry management, the house may be built very cheaply. It must turn the rain, shut out drafts and be dry under foot, but it need not be heavy, built of expensive material or very permanent in character.

In fixing on the site for the house care should be taken not to get the building or any part of it where it will be shadowed by other buildings or by a dense clump of trees. The sunlight should strike the building all day long. In summer it should shine at the east windows at sunrise. It should reach to the back of the building in winter when the sun is low at noon. The windows should be arranged to take every advantage of the sunlight all day long.

There is no getting the sunlight and it is far cheaper than anything that will ever be placed on the market.

IMPROVE OLD APPLE TREES

Carefully Remove All Dead and Cross Branches Pruning the Bark.

Destroys Many Insects.

All dead and cross branches should be removed. Make a clean cut close to the branch, cover the wound with grafting wax or shellac varnish. Scrub the dead bark and moss off the larger limbs and then scrub them with warm water and soft soap, using a stiff brush. This scrubbing will clean the bark and kill many worms and their larvae. Select a mid-day for this work. Such methods require considerable judgment in their application, but with proper care they are successful. Old apple trees given the above treatment will gradually increase the yield and quality of their fruit. It will take several years of careful culture to bring the trees into full bearing, but it will pay handsomely.

See to Ventilation. Is the barn well ventilated? Lack of fresh air means possible tuberculosis to your dairy herd.
