IDAHO EXHIBIT NOT IN SIGHT

Beautiful Building Used Only by Care Taker

IDAHO VISITORS AT FAIR FIND LITTLE CHANCE TO BOOST

H. A. Barber, of Model Store, Gives a Few Facts Concerning State's Exhibit.

"A beautiful shell" is the fitting term to apply to the Idaho building at San Francisco, according to H. A. Barber, of the Model Store, who returned last week from a two month trip to the exposition cities. To the Times Mr. Barber stated that after entering the Idaho building full of pride about the good state, upon entering he looked hurriedly about and then threw his Idaho button out into the bay, ashamed to face the people with that emblem after seeing the farcical display from this state.

JURY FAILS TO AGREE

Second Trial of W. C. Janks Returns No Verdict.

Most of the time of the district court last week "water-tanking" was being done by W. C. Janks, who was charged with receiving stolen property. The case was given to the jury shortly after noon Friday and the jury retired to the jury room at midnight, when they informed Judge Halsebeck they were unable to agree. The judge then discharged them. This is the second trial of the case. The first trial resulted in a conviction, the case was then taken to the supreme court, that was returned to Twin Falls county for a new trial. The second trial is stated above. It is said that the jury stood seven for acquittal and five for conviction.

HILL CLIMBING CONTEST

Kind Accepts Challenge of Hubl Auto Agents.

Last Sunday E. H. Lind, of the truck agency, will take a number of his trucks to Utah to compete in a hill climbing contest with cars of other agencies. The contest is a result of a challenge made to Mr. Lind on the part of hubmen selling Overlands and Reos and which was accepted very readily by the former. The contest is set for two-thirty at a point west of Hubl, which is said to be a good hard test of any car's pulling power. Mr. Lind in turn has challenged any owners or agents of other makes to engage in a gasoline engine contest on the route from Hubl to Twin Falls after the hill climb. The motorists are looking forward with some interest to the test next Sunday over two much disputed points in comparative car values.

CONVICTED OF GRAND LARCENY

Zack Curtis and Cora Atkinson Must Serve Term in Penitentiary.

After a trial lasting most of the week, Zack Curtis and Cora Atkinson were found guilty early Thursday morning of killing cattle, the property of Mr. Latson, of Black Creek. The crime was said to have been committed on Cottonwood creek in the southern part of the county. The case was set for the jury Wednesday about noon, the jury retiring into court Thursday morning with their verdict. The two convicted parties will be sentenced by Judge Halsebeck Saturday afternoon.

Opportunity Of Idaho Towns to Divert Tourist Auto Travel

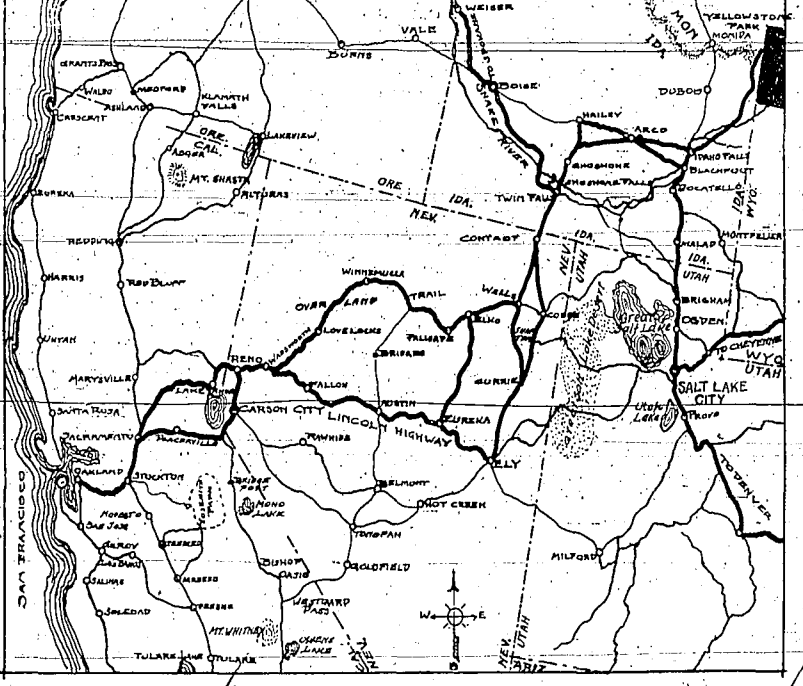

Good Roads, Fine Scenery, Easy Supply Points, Should Be Brought to Attention of Eastern Tourists Who Visit California.

Automobilists returning from the California expeditions via the Lincoln Highway can avoid the terrific desert of Ely, Nevada, all of the dusty, chunky roads, sand and alkali, pass over some splendid roads and see some of the real scenic wonders of the West if they will lead the road signs and warnings that will be placed for them at Ely, and if the automobilist journals of the East will give the matter publicity it deserves. Automobile publications in the East are boosting the Lincoln Highway as one of the routes for tourists with little idea of the roughness traversed.

Out of three routes are possible one "The Overland Trail" which is said to be one of the finest highways in the West from Wells, Nevada, to Prince. From Wells this route is marked either around the north end of the great Salt Lake to Ogden or the Yellowstone go from Idaho Falls or Blackfoot westward to Arco and the park through which automobilists over the Sawtooth Park Highway past the Ice Caves, Shoshone, Jerome, HIO-SIONE FALLS, TWIN FALLS, THIO-SANJO SPURNS and the City of Twin Falls. Then on south through Hollister, Hopson, Contact to Wells, where the Overland Highway is again taken up. Then west down the valley of the Humboldt river all the way to Reno.

Information will miss some mighty thing scenery, a chance to visit the park through which automobilists will be allowed to go for the first time) and will select a route that for miles takes them through asparagus with no towns, with no chance of getting supplies and repairs. The Lincoln Highway, from Ely, Nevada, around the lower end of the great Salt Lake, is no paradise for automobilists even before the roads became full of chuck holes and piles of dirt, for the reason that water is scarce. Scenery is scarcer and human habitation the scarcest. For three hundred miles there is nothing to justify such a trip except the desire to get home and company that a still larger number wanting the glowing write-ups given the Lincoln highway, will take that route homeward and unless given the right

GOULDS RETIRE FROM RAILWAY

Famous Systems Pass From Their Control.

INTERESTS PLACATED IN MOVEMENT TO FLOAT DEBT

Inflation of Financial Blood Means the Revitalization of Their Western Lines.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain Railway system, nucleus of the so-called Gould lines, passed Tuesday from control of the Gould family.

An election of officers and directors which accomplished this carried with it, financiers generally conceded, control of the connecting and subordinate Rio Grande-Western Pacific system by which descendants of Jay Gould, the great railway financier, linked the middle west to the coast, reaching Pacific tidewater through the Sierra, with scarcely a change in proxy.

Instead of the Goulds, a group consisting of the three Goulds and E. T. Jeffery & Co., and the Guarantee Trust company of New York, controlled Tuesday's election, at which 53 per cent of the stock was voted.

How complete was the change was indicated in part by the removal of the three Goulds and E. T. Jeffery of New York, a long-time Gould executive, from the boards. B. P. Bush, who succeeded Jeffery some time ago as chairman of the directors of the Missouri Pacific and the S. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern railways, and his election presently to the same position with the Rio Grande-Western Pacific system was conceded to be probably a matter of course.

The reorganization of the Gould system of railways which was effected in St. Louis, Mo. today, is fraught with great possibilities for the Iron Mountain country, and especially northern Idaho. Particularly is this true with respect to the Western Pacific which, as the new plans for readjustment of continental railroads indicate, has suffered from lack of branch lines and feeders. This weakness was recognized by Charles D. P. Bush, who was naturally non-committal regarding the object of his trip at the time, as the reorganization plans were then in prospect at least, but official announcements regarding plans adopted at (Continued on Page 10.)

NEED MAJOR REED.

The reports concerning the condition of the Idaho building at the San Francisco exposition, should cause an outbreak of righteous indignation all over the state. Governor Alexander may have thought he was doing the right thing politically when Major Reed was taken off the job, but those who have witnessed the humiliating position in which the whole state is placed before the whole nation will not appreciate the change which has set well-established plans awry. The Idaho building, pretensions as to exterior, may well be called the tomb of Idaho's buried hopes unless speedy action is taken to remedy the trouble. There is nothing on the inside to speak for the Idaho building. The interior shows that some of his exhibits have been pulled out. In their place is absolutely nothing save promises. It is, respectively of partisan politics Major Reed should have been in charge. It is too late now to get his secretary, but Governor Alexander as executive must be held responsible and should get busy and make his appearance, not to work or get off the job.

TIME TO WAKE UP

It should appear to every business man in Twin Falls that a little more time energy applied along the right lines, might do a world of good not only to this city but to the Twin Falls country. The opportunities are here for making things better this year than ever one of the three-year-old theory is shaken off. There is not the slightest question but what from ten to fifteen thousand tourists will visit this section during the month of the big fair in California. It is up to the people of this city and tract to see that these tourists are duly impressed with the great advantages of this section. The condition of the highways, the cost and the private property should be watched. The establishment of additional electric lights could be made possible under the active competition of the power companies. Such a lighting contract would be a fair prize for the successful company. The paving which has caused in could be regarded within a short time if the idea once gained the sanction of the public. The present has a chance to add a little in the way of publicity in a very small road by being the tourist at the fair may be turned this way. The opportunities are abundant. All that is needed is an awakening for the sleeping community. Twin Falls is just as much a live proposition today as it ever was. Perhaps it is the viewpoint of a number of the business which has caused one of the depression. It won't hurt to try a little dose of optimism on the whole populace.

UNCLE SAM AS A "PERIL"

"Uncle Sam is a peril," says Senator Santiago Perez Triana, a well known South American publicist, in a letter to the President of Colombia. Senator Triana argues that Colombia, the lead of the capital Pan-American congress, in the formation of a Latin American alliance to oppose any tendency toward aggression by European powers or by the United States. In commenting upon this proposal the Maracaibo Publisher shows a distinct fear that the United States may eventually design upon South America the return of Mexico.

The logical development of the Monroe Doctrine, while it excluded European aggression, did not prevent Colombia being violently despoiled of Panama. However, in the utterance of President Wilson we see the dawn of a different policy toward Latin America on the part of the United States, one that may render impossible any future aggression like that of Panama.

of Sonor Triana, which holds that Latin American safety lies in a Spanish-American, rather than a Pan-American alliance, but refuses to accept assurances from the White House at their face value.

"Optimism is also seen in the declaration of President Wilson, and the assurance that he has given from time to time of a change in the policy of the White House toward the Republics of South America. We must, however, await the development of events, for we are convinced that in that quarter there is sometimes a great difference between words and deeds."

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 1.—Stopping The Leaks. "Savings is foolish, to the fool and a nuisance to the careless, but to the man who thinks of the perils of poverty, economy is the first and greatest virtue. If you are too weak or too indifferent to save, put yourself in a position where you will be FORCED to save.—Los Angeles "Examiner."

It is said that $30,000,000 worth of waste paper is burned in the United States every year. A great many householders and business firms put out money to have it burned away when they might turn it into cash if they would take the trouble to investigate the market for this material, which is said to be worth 20 cents a hundred pounds.

A Massachusetts industrial concern has saved an average of 192 jobs in a month to each man through the work of its medical department. The department is a success story. It is estimated that it has saved 25 cents an hour. By allowing the company to keep him in a healthy physical condition, and a more contented frame of mind, he is enabled to work nearly an hour more each day; his earnings are increased $1.85 per month, or $22.00 per year.

Dr. Brady, who writes medical advice for the readers of newspapers, says: "It means the cheaper ones are just as satisfying and just as palatable in every way as the more expensive ones. The immediate of familiar never think of buying anything cheaper than a 'strife' or a job done or chop of some other extravagant cut. Fish is a very good and nutritious food, and often more digestible. But a lot of people for some foolish reason fancy that you can't sustain working strength. We eat too much meat every day."

The Country Gentleman has prepared this table showing the advantages of buying certain vegetables in quantities.

Table with 2 columns: Vegetable and Price. Includes Potatoes, Turnips, Onions, Cabbages, Celery, and Beans.

There is no waste in America which is so serious as that of meat in the average home. Not one-half of that ordered by the guests is consumed. Where the old American plan prevails it is a familiar and sad thing to see a person order enough to feed a family and then eat only a fraction of each portion.

Waste of ink was thus prevented by the employe of a large corporation. Noting the rapid evaporation in his pen-inkwell, he figured that the company was wasting 3,000 ounces of ink a week. The installation of a new form of inkwell, which prevented evaporation, resulted in a gain of $1,200 a year.

Consider the leaks and possible leaks in your own home, office, shop, factory, farm, or in your own personal finances, and you will be taking the first step to prevent them. The money spent unnecessarily might just as well be going into your bank account as that of somebody else's. Have you ever thought seriously of this matter?—T. B. MacGREGGILL. Take that busted hole in Gloydson's trousers, they'll fix it. Mar. 9, 1915.

with the aid of its Automobile Association, in by presenting the above map, endeavoring to show a feasible route, branching off the Lincoln Highway at Bly, that will avoid this desert fate, and give the tourists something worth while for their long homeward trip. Beside relief for another milestone passed to the east. From Bly, while not used by the majority of motorists, there is a splendid road northward toward Wells, Nevada, that takes the tourist out of the worst of the Lincoln highway trip, and sends him northward by the MOST DIRECT ROUTE to the Yellowstone-National park and the Geysers. It marks one of the most interesting sights in the West. Not only does it include these features, but gives the motorist the knowledge that at least every ten miles or so of the route is human habitation with the chance to obtain help in case of trouble with his car, that are always passable and fit for travel is another advantage that will accrue to the motorist who takes the Shoshone falls-Yellowstone route. The route passes Wells, Contact, Twin Falls tract, Bho-shone falls and the Sawtooth Park Highway, through Shoshone, Halley, to the mouth of the Snake River. Every part of the road is good, the scenery is interesting at all times and for all of the route stretches northward to the most interesting sights in the West. The Route is Detail.

Leaving the Lincoln Highway at Bly, Nevada, just about with motorist stretches out for miles of a surface that will allow forty miles an hour with perfect safety. Reaching Wells the route stretches northward through a winding highway composed of disintegrated granite, which offers one of the best natural roads in the world. Ten miles out of Wells, the motorist reaching the rise, views the valley below and the hills dotted around with patches of green fields. The easy ascent for twenty miles the roadway takes the natural course of the valley until the top of the watershed is reached, where the road is less than twenty feet apart send their water north and south. There signs the Salmon river which irrigates some of the beautiful acres of the Park. Every Falls-Salmon river irrigation project. From this divide for thirty miles the road runs along the mountain, into good water and some good trout fishing.

Contact, a copper mining camp, with a big future, just about with motorist of copper ore, will supply the labor man for a square meal on a night's lodging and fill the gas tank and at reasonable prices. Ten miles northward the tourist comes to the headquarters of the Vineyard Land and Livestock country, ready for irrigation system on the Salmon river. Thirty-five miles from Twin Falls city and forty from the Great Shoshone falls is the mouth of the Park. Every Twin Falls-Salmon river project is an object of curiosity together with the canyon below.

The Shoshone tract with its ditches of sparkling water feeding the green fields, yields to the larger Twin Falls tract, both with a multitude of farms, excellent hotels and garages.

Five miles from Twin Falls city, nothing in a section of crum, having been built, Shoshone falls, outside of the Indian, the wonder of the first white people and really one of the most beautiful water falls in the United States is found. Bursting upon the sight of the tourist, only when the sight of the rapids, with the earth is reached, calls forth admiration from the eyes of the tourist. The water, falling water, and for the setting, that nature has chosen for one of her most beautiful wonders. Niagara may yield the palm to Shoshone falls in the verdict of those who have seen both.

Leaving the falls, the tourist reaches Shoshone city, over one of the best highways in the country. Northward still the route takes the tourist through irrigation systems, sage brush plains and gives plenty of chance for making camp enroute along one of the best trout streams in Idaho, the Wood River. Halley, a mining camp and stock yard, situated in the folds of an all embracing Sawtooth mountains, gives entrance into the most beautiful country that Idaho can show. The blue crested mountains, under towering mountain streams and mirrored lakes until the grandeur of the whole awes the mind of the motorist.

From Halley to Arco, the same can be said of the route, perfect roads and wonderful scenery. A dash from here into the mountains into another privileged section of the mighty Snake River Valley around Idaho Falls.

From Idaho Falls still northward, the route winding constantly up by easy grades, brings the traveler to the Island park region, the front door to Teton-Sage, a great park of a thousand wonders.

Not a single drawback to this route will be encountered save the lack of knowledge concerning it, the part of the thousands of tourists who will visit the California exposition in automobiles. The spreading of this knowledge is the purpose of the map and campaign, which will be started at once by every live booster along the route.

ZUDORA

In the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery

By Harold MacGrath

SYNOPSIS—Zudora, heiress to $30,000,000, is placed in the guardianship of her uncle, Hansam All, a myopic Hissam All is determined to secure the girl's fortune for himself and when he becomes of age he makes every effort to bring about her death. Zudora is in love with a young lawyer, John Storm, and she seeks permission of her miserly uncle to marry him. Hansam All promises to grant her wish provided she shall solve twenty of his cases. Zudora solves nine of the cases when her uncle dies, and she is released from her pledge.

At the death of her uncle, Zudora has another suitor for her hand—Jim Hatred, a man who has been playing at double to Hansam All, but who, through sinister loss of the girl's riches of the false life and goes back to his work as a newspaper reporter.

At the death of her uncle, Hansam All's cases Zudora now confronts the greatest mystery of all, which is the mystery of her own life and the ambition to secure the vast fortune of $30,000,000 left her. On looking through her uncle's papers she also finds that her father left her an interest in a diamond mine and Storm and Hatred both lend assistance in trying to regain for her possession of this estate which is being appropriated by rogues.

Intent on getting Zudora out of the way the rogues under the leadership of Mike Du Val, have the girl spirited away to a private insane asylum, in the same institution they force as an inmate, Howard, the mine superintendent, who wishes to be loyal to Zudora's interests.

CHAPTER XIII. A HAND ON A MADHOUSE

When John Storm recalled that Zudora was gone, abducted in her night gown, with only a comfort to shield her from the cold, he was stunned. And he had laughed at her forebodings, her talk about evil stars. Who could have done it? Where could they have taken her? What fortune had the people back of it? Was this move intended to frighten Zudora or really make away with her? He was in a state of collapse, and of half a mind to start out and just hunt for the woman he loved, having neither direction nor plan of action. He only knew that he would find her and that he would bring her back to her.

Then his gaze happened to fall to the floor, where it rested upon a envelope. Absent mindingly he stooped and picked it up, but without glancing at the superscription. They might be

Must feel the pinch to take a risk like that! Hunt read the letter. "Hi! This man Howard seems to be a white neck. He probably 'hacked' when he handed out 'you bored him up somewhere. And I should not be surprised if Zudora was next door.' Just keep your eyes peeled for him, and you will hurt her in any case. They won't dare until they know they are safe. Cheer up, Storm. We'll get him soon. Do you know what I'm going to do?"

"What?"

"I'll send Jim Hatred to Africa to look over the whole business, old documents and the output, past and present, all the loose ends of the game. He'll growl around for Zudora. Who's ever they have put her, you can take my word for it, they'll be mighty cautious. I'll keep him on my toes in all directions. Now, I know what you want to do. You want me to go and direct Bruce. No, thank you. I want you to go and see if you can't get the fair captive a making out, and then we'll learn something. I know it's a tough job to have to sit still when the woman you love is in disgraceful villainy, but I feel sure you'll do it. You might be fatal. These people are desperate. I've begun to get a glimmer of that fact."

"How long will we have to wait?"

"That's up to the air, my boy. You can't rush out and do the work in ten months. But in the end we'll come out on top. But I'm going to ask you on your oath not to make any more without consulting me first."

"I promise," said Storm, reluctantly. "My business is catching crooks, just as yours is sending them over the rocks. I look at this as a long game, to be played with the utmost care. Now we'll go and visit Hatred. You'll say his expressions with a fat lip, and he'll get a good Sunday special, as he calls them."

In Madame Du Val's salon there was rather an animated scene. It appeared that Zudora was not easily to be frightened by threats. At the mention of her name, two nurses had hurried Zudora another look for the stones. If any one enters, about. Don't feel any quiver about, and about to kill."

"I may not shoot straight, but I'll shoot."

"When Storm entered Hunt's office he found that individual calmly flung away at a key. He said no attention to Storm until he had noticed the key to his satisfaction.

"What?"

"Zudora's been abducted!"

"I thought maybe she would be."

"And you made no effort to prevent it?"

"My boy, could I tell just where they start the game? Howard is also a gambler. They're no fools, we are dealing with. At the start they get the owner of the mine and the superintendent of the mine, and what's that you've got in your hand?"

"A letter I found on the floor in Zudora's room. Moreover it's addressed to I. W. Bruce and signed Henry Howard."

"That's something like it. So Howard himself was mixed up in it, he

The Stores That Win

There was a time when merchants sold their wares on a basis of how much profits such goods would stand--and many people thought they had to have these goods probably because they were marked good and high. Then again--there are those people with but a modest income who think they have to buy inferior merchandise in order to live within their means. No man should live beyond his means, no more than he should pay more for goods than they are legitimately worth, and no more than he should buy unserviceable merchandise because of its cheapness.

the gems elsewhere.

"You never can tell!" laughed Hatred.

"We haven't got the gems yet," said Storm.

"Africa!" cried Hatred, when Hunt outlined his plans. "That's a long way from home. A ten weeks' job at least."

"It's a necessary job, my boy. Fifty a week and all your expenses, and if everything turns out all right, a handsome bonus. And look at the story, you'll be able to get over."

"I'll go. When do I start?"

"Tomorrow at noon, Liverpool. You will be there one day, then you sail for Cape Town. First boat. A week or ten days will be sufficient to cover the work. Then take home."

"Tomorrow's noon. You're the limit of the speed limit, Hunt. All right. I'll be at the dock tomorrow noon. You bring along the tickets and making the time for any letter of credit. I've always wanted to go to Africa, anyway."

"That's the kind of talk. Get your things. Storm here will furnish you with papers of authority. You will leave London through the Agency on a consular. Now, you, Storm, take a photograph of Zudora to police headquarters. Not that I expect anything from that quarter; but they'll come in handy when we start our search. I'm going to take a look at our friend Bruce."

The following day Hatred sailed away; and Storm and Hunt settled down to the grim business of watching two men. But these two men were not to be taken for granted. Hatred was a cunning man. He had passed the day before, and upon investigation he was given the holding (three of the diamonds), they shifted her diet to bread and water for a day. They dared not go to the office. As it happened, the accident, they had set about to starve him gradually. They were not particular as to how he died or not under the treatment.

Days passed, days became weeks. Storm and Hunt worked with exterior care, but the hidden work of the Agency had selected for Zudora's case was not to be found. Hunt had seen Hatred the stranger, no more for some time, and upon investigation he was given the name of Bruce had also gone to Africa. Word was received that if they ran across Hatred, they should be careful. Hatred had the advantage of being first on the spot.

Morning, Hatred arrived at the mine. As he entered the office, he was given the name of Bruce. It was all very word and interesting to the fact underlying to Hansam All. He had always loved order. He had planned the half-million of a last minute, and when his books were made up, he found the balance of the mine. In fact, it was done. One day he saw what is really done. He had the feeling of a big step. The kind that had made him a millionaire. He had the feeling of a big step. He had the feeling of a big step. He had the feeling of a big step.

When Hatred was permitted to see the mine, and his eyes it did not seem possible that his dull crystal was of that precious type which sparkled and scintillated around woman's throats and fingers.

Then, came Bruce, and Hatred recognized him at once. What was he doing here, in the office? Bruce was in fact his traveling companion, and he had already gone. The clerk was a good chap. Evidently he was an unflinching friend to the presence of Mr. Bruce.

When the latter heard of the big stone, he called Hatred to the office. Hatred called Hatred to the office. He called Hatred to the office. He called Hatred to the office. He called Hatred to the office.

"That night Bruce went to the trouble of hiding the find. All the while Hatred's eyes were at the window--other words, the mine. He was in danger of being snatched. Hatred, having ascertained the exact hiding place of the precious lump of crystal, got to his feet and, after a moment's delay, got to the mine, and, carrying out his horse and carriage, went to the nearest railroad, where he waited for the train, which was near him, having been retreating with whitey 'peas' that night. Hatred knew all about hiding windows; he had been taught in his first school. He entered Bruce's room, took the diamond from the hiding place, and stumbled against a chair. Bruce awoke. He saw the diamond and picked it up. He saw the diamond and picked it up. He saw the diamond and picked it up.

Two days later Bruce looked for home on the same boat with Hatred, and he found him on the promenade seat near him in the dining salon, exchanging ideas about the weather in the slightest suggestion that this peasant had been in the mine. He entered the mine the first time the year had come quite calm. And every night when he retired in his bunk, Hatred lay so close to him that he was sure to see him in the dark. Hatred was sure to see him in the dark. Hatred was sure to see him in the dark.

It was in the end of the year that Hatred's eyes were at the window--other words, the mine. He was in danger of being snatched. Hatred, having ascertained the exact hiding place of the precious lump of crystal, got to his feet and, after a moment's delay, got to the mine, and, carrying out his horse and carriage, went to the nearest railroad, where he waited for the train, which was near him, having been retreating with whitey 'peas' that night. Hatred knew all about hiding windows; he had been taught in his first school. He entered Bruce's room, took the diamond from the hiding place, and stumbled against a chair. Bruce awoke. He saw the diamond and picked it up. He saw the diamond and picked it up. He saw the diamond and picked it up.

They heard the "splitter of a motor" Bruce lying back to town again, but they gave it no heed. Upstairs they ran.

"Hill!" Hatred murmured, his heart throbbing in leap from his breast.

"That voice!" murmured Storm, his heart throbbing in leap from his breast.

They came to the door, snatched it, and a pale, hungry girl collapsed as Storm's arms flew around her. Hunt found Henry Howard; but the latter's countenance was beyond help. They had really starved him to death; and he died in Hunt's arms while vainly trying to tell his story. Hatred was not yet in sight.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES MEETING

Report of Winter's Activities Will be Given Friday Evening.

On Friday evening at 7:30 P. M. there will be a meeting of the Associated Charities in St. Blue's office in the high school building. It is hoped that all those who are interested in this work will be present to hear a report of what has been done and plan for the coming year.

At this season when warm clothing is about to be discarded, please don't lay away garments which you will not wear again. Instead, call Mrs. E. A. Baker by telephone and she will send for them. Then when the cold weather returns they will be ready for distribution at once.

The chief need of the winter has been the employment of men. In this Twin Falls has not been none. All cities in the country have faced this problem, and found no solution. If, for instance, a straw board factory, or one for making of denatured alcohol could be established under municipal ownership, to be run during the cold months, it would take care of nearly all the poverty in town, and doubtless be self-supporting after the first year.

It would also mean that it is time that the County Farm, east of town, should be used for its original purpose, rather than remain rented. During the dull season, buildings could be erected and other work necessary for the complete equipment begun, men being paid wages for their work, rather than given coal and provisions which they have no money to buy for their families.

Sometimes it has been found that people are in distress because they refused work in the summer season, and so were penniless to meet their own needs in severe weather. If names of men who decline work and prefer standing on the streets to laboring on the farms could be reported to the secretary of the Commercial club, it would at least help to throw light on the reasons for poverty.

These are insistent questions to those who have come closest to the troubles of the winter. They must draw him to her home. Here the he answered, if at all, before the acute stranger-discoverer that Tillie's suffering of another season is upon her as a hand-bred. With threats and when that time comes and children are cold and hungry, it is too late to inquire closely into causes. All except their first step is at a rehearsal, must be used in meeting the emergency of the hour. Now is the time to weigh these causes and discuss mental and constructive plans for the alleviation and final removal of conditions which do not necessarily exist in a country as abundant and the character, as abundant and the citizenry so generous.

G. S. SEAVEN, Secretary Associated Charities.

TILLIE'S PUNCTURED ROMANCE

The Biggest Comic Film Produced, at the LSL.

Tillie, a country maiden, was showing blocks of wool for her dog to fetch to her. Charlie, a city chap, wanders into range and receives an unusually large block in the middle of his face. Tillie, seeing the stranger in distress, draws him to her home. Here the stranger-discoverer that Tillie's father is suffering from a heart ailment and promises, he induces her to get the money and go to the city with him. Their first stop is at a restaurant where Tillie takes the first drink of liquor of the hour. Now is the time to weigh these causes and discuss mental and constructive plans for the alleviation and final removal of conditions which do not necessarily exist in a country as abundant and the citizenry so generous.

and find out that she is his niece, whom he has never seen. She is escorted to her uncle's beautiful mansion and here creates such a sensation that her uncle disowns her and orders her from the house. No place to go, she looks for a job and secures one as a waitress.

In the meantime, Charlie has made use of the bank roll by doling up Mabel and himself off they are taking life easy. He and Mabel one day wander into the restaurant where Tillie is working and Tillie, meeting the owner in the course of their downward fall, faints. Charlie and Mabel make their escape, and sitting down in the park to rest, Charlie buys a newspaper, which tells him of the hunt that is on for the missing heiress. Tillie Banks. He immediately sneaks away from Mabel and goes back to the restaurant and explains matters to Tillie's satisfaction and draws her off to a minister where they are married. Here they entertain lavishly until a few days later give a grand ball. This ended in a frightful fracas, through the machinations of Mabel, who has managed to secure a position as maid in the household. In the midst of the fracas she was found to be only slightly injured, returns and finds the whole party thrown out into the street. Charlie-discovering that Tillie has nothing in the way of worldly goods, renounces her and grabbing Mabel's hand, off they go pursued by the police of the city. Charlie, in the excitement that causes the police of the city are called out, as well as the river police, as Tillie has pursued the recreants to the water front, and there in the midst of all the excitement, Tillie is struck by an automobile, loaded with policemen, and she, exhausted and had drop into the river below. Here Tillie is finally rescued and Mabel, seeing the destruction that the conscienceless Charlie has wrought, falls into Tillie's arms imploring her forgiveness, and they finally renounce Charlie, as he is dragged away by the police. At the last Wednesday, March 17.

Aggressive use of the classified collection will rent good properties, in or out of season, and practically cut out landlords from revenue.

Prize Winning Solution of

"The Million Dollar Mystery"

BY IDA DAMON

A physician has been summoned and it is learned that Irlane lives, Irlane Olga and Vrona are taken to the Siberian mines, to send their lives. Irlane Olga, who has been acting as the butler for Florence's protection, reveals his identity and embraces his daughter. Then he tells the heads of Florence and Norton, after which he takes them to Florence's room where he turns the portrait of himself and presents a button, the lack of the portrait Irlane opens and he places the head of the million dollars. Thereafter follows the marriage of Florence and Norton and all is happiness. (Copyright, 1915, by Harold MacGrath.)

CHAPTER XXIII. THE SECRET OF THE MILLION. It will be remembered that the Countess Olga had darted up the stairs during the struggle between Irlane and his captors. The police who had followed her were recalled to pursue one of the lesser rogues. This left Olga free for a moment. She stooped and snatched as far as the landing. Serovkin, the Russian agent, stood waiting for the taxi to roll up to the porte cochere for himself, Irlane and Vrona. Norton had taken Florence by the hand, ostensibly to conduct her to the millinery. Suddenly Irlane made a dash for liberty. Norton rushed after him. Just as he reached Irlane, a shot was heard. Irlane whirled upon his heels and crashed in the door.

Olga, intent upon saving Irlane to Norton, whom she regarded equally with Irlane as having brought about the downfall, had hit her lover instead. With a cry of despair she dashed back into Florence's room quite ready to end it all. She raised the revolver to her temple, shouldered and lowered the weapon, so tentatively as to elude the life.

Both they were all stunned by the suddenness of the shot. Instantly they sought the fallen man's side, and a hasty examination gave them the opinion that the man was dead. Happily a doctor was on the way. Serovkin hav-

"Yes, sir; I saw his hands move. It's a good thing we sent for a doctor. He ought to be along here about now." Even as he spoke the bell rang and they rushed to the hall, forgetting about the million for the moment. Olga hadn't killed the man, then? The doctor knelt beside the stricken man and examined him. He shrugged.

"My kind father," said Florence, as if she could read his thoughts. "I had a hard time of it, my child. It was difficult to play the better up above. She had loved not wisely but too well. Far better for her if she had put an end to life. She would not live a year in the God forsaken mines of Siberia."

"That poor weak woman upstairs!" she murmured. "Can't they let her go?" "No, dear. She has lost and loses by the stakes. That's life. Norton, you know who I was all the time didn't you?"

"I did, Mr. Hargrave. There was a scar on the lobe of your left ear. I had often wondered at the likeness between you and the real Jones. When I caught a glimpse of that ear then I knew what the game was. And I'll add that yours were necessary."

"And do you think that you can lead Florence to the million?" asked Hargrave, smiling. "For one thing, it is in her room and has always been there. It never was in the chest."

"Not had, not had," murmured the father. "But perhaps, after all, it will be better if you show her the million yourself."

"I'm a little uncertain," flied the millionaire. "Absolutely certain. I will whisper to you some fantastic old-time story. Norton called forward as Hargrave bent intently.

"How's his it," said the millionaire. "But how in the world did you guess because it was the last place anyone would look for it. I judged it the start that you'd hide it in just

The man she loved was dead below, killed by her hand. She felt as though she was treading air in some fantastic old-time story. She could not go forward or backward, and her heels were always within reach of her pursuers. "So this was the end of things? The disease she had had of coming away with Irlane to other cities, the happiness she had pictured, all mere chimeras? A sudden rain swept over her. She would escape, she would continue to play the game to the end. She could show them that she had her own man's name, not his plant lot? She raised the window and it slipped the policeman who had pulled her out. Irlane was at her side, she placed the revolver at her temple. A quick clutch and the policeman had her by the wrist. She made one terrific effort to free herself and scintillated that she surrounded. "I don't want to hurt you, miss," said the policeman. "But if you make any attempt to escape I'll put the handcuffs on you." "I'll go quietly. What are you going to do with me?" "Turn you over to the Russian agent. He has extradition papers, and I guess it's Siberia." "For me?" She laughed scornfully. "Do I look like a woman who would go to Siberia?" She laughed again. "It did not have a pleasant sound in the officer's ears. He had heard women, suicidal bent, laugh like that. "I'll ask you for that ring on your finger." "Do you think there is poison in it?" "I shouldn't be surprised," he admitted. She pulled the ring on her finger and gave it to him. "There is poison in it, so be careful how you handle it," she said. The policeman accepted it gingerly and dropped it into his capacious pocket. It tinkled as it fell against the cuffs. "Before you take me away I want you to let me see—my man." "I can do that." At that moment the other policeman broke in the door. "All right, Dolan," said Irlane up the stairs. "She didn't kill the man after all,"

Prize Winning Solution OF THE Million Dollar Mystery

Final Episode Number 23, Also Announcing the Winner of the $10,000 Prize

Miss Lily Damon, winner of the $10,000 prize offered by the Thanhouser Film Corporation for a solution of its great photoplay, THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY, has received her money from the hand of the mayor of St. Louis, her native city. The unexpected fortune just won by one of its fair daughters was celebrated in a spirit of civic pride by half the population of the famous "show me" metropolis, and the theatre in which the capital prize was awarded was thronged hours before the appearance of the lucky girl.

When the Twenty-Third Episode, containing the solution of the famous photoplay, was thrown on the screen, the crowd cheered wildly and insisted for the author. Soon a commotion at the rear of the house bespoke the arrival of the winner and every neck was craned in an effort to get the first glimpse of the fortunate solver of the MYSTERY, which has been the source of such wide speculation for so long. Miss Damon, leaning on the arm of her aged father, and surrounded by a cordon of police, was seen entering, and amid a torrent of cheering and hand-clapping, shortly made her way to the mayor and other officials who were awaiting her coming. The party then assembled before the audience where the mayor, after paying a grateful tribute to the girlhood of St. Louis, presented Miss Damon with the certified check, which will make her independent for life.

GROWING FRUIT ON DRY LAND

Important Point to Remember is to Plant All Fruit Plants Farther Apart Than Custom.

(By JOHN ROBERTSON, Hort. Specialist, S. D.)

In growing fruit without irrigation, all trees and small fruit plants must be planted farther apart than is the custom. This is a very important point to remember. Where there is little rain, the soil is usually either tree or plant must have enough individual surface surrounding it to draw moisture from, according to its size and nature of growth. We cannot get something for nothing, nor can we grow plants without moisture, and they must have enough to do their best.

Those who are planting apple trees 16 feet apart each way on dry subsoil land cannot succeed. This is just as certain as that two given numbers make a certain sum is a mathematical problem. Apple trees should not be planted closer than 30 feet apart each way. They will not need all the moisture between them at this distance apart until ten or twelve years old, and small fruits or other crops may be grown between them till about this age, but one must use care and judgment as to how much or how long to crop between the trees. It is better to make the mistake of cropping too little than too much. Trees planted 30 feet apart will grow as well as those 30 feet apart for the first ten years, if there is nothing planted between them, but after about that time there will not be moisture enough to supply the increasing drain made as they grow larger. Even if three-fourths of the trees were dug out, nothing would have been gained, for the orchard would only be starting to bear paying crops of fruit; while if the rows are 30 feet apart, and one row of small fruit plants are set between each two rows of trees, by the time the trees need all the moisture, the small fruits will have done their best, and one can dig them up, feeling he has been well repaid. It is important, too, that the outside row of any kind of trees or plants be planted not closer than 15 feet from a prairie grass, growing border. There is little moisture under a prairie sod after a long dry spell.

The land should be to thorough cultivation before trees are planted, and the last plowing should be made deep because it is not going to be plowed again and should be in condition to take in a heavy rainfall. No expensive tools are required; simply a strong, 12-inch plow set to run deep and a good team to pull it.

MUCH IMPROVED DIRT ROADS

Intelligent Use of Drag Will Benefit Roadway, No Matter What the Nature of the Soil Is.

The dirt road can be very much improved by the intelligent use of the road drag. This has been proved beyond a doubt in the states that have legislated in favor of road dragging. No matter what the soil, the intelligent use of the drag will improve the roadway. Mind you, I used the word intelligent, says a writer in Successful Farming.

A sandy soil is hard to handle. Where gravel is available—a gravel containing considerable clay—a surfacing of six or eight inches with this material will greatly benefit a sandy road.

The first thing essential in road improvement is good drainage. You first get the water away from the sides of the road so the deep-seated roadbed can dry out and harden. When the side drainage is perfect, then the next essential is to crown the road so that surface drainage of the road is perfect. Even a dirt road cannot get very muddy if the water has no chance to stand in the wheel tracks. When surface water channels and ditch water taken care of, the roadbed cannot soften very much.

Every highway, whatever its construction, should be patrolled by a man who is on the lookout for clogged ditches and the breaking of the road surface. A shovel in the hands of a road walker will do more to make good roads than the most elaborate outfit used only when roads become impassable.

TIME FOR PLANTING ALFALFA

Best Results Secured by Doing Work in Wettest Season of the Year—Avoid Crust on Soil.

It is very important when planting the seed that no crust should form above it, therefore it is advisable when using a press drill to plant only when the top inch is dry. The drill with chain drags should be used in clay soil or in moist weather. Half an inch to an inch is the best depth to plant it in sandy soil, but in clay loam even less is better. The best time to plant alfalfa is the wettest season of the year. The seed is small, it cannot be put in very deep, and it sprouts and then dries out before the next rain comes it is gone. For this reason, we do not recommend fall planting.

Some have been successful with late planting and recommend it to their neighbors, but taking it by and large we find that only about 40 per cent obtain a stand, while spring planting gives over 75, when the plowing and other work has been properly done.

A gate doesn't seem important enough to make much fuss about.

Still—if you had overheard the remark as we did,—"By golly, that's a good gate—that farmer's up to scratch—but he has a good farm"—then you would probably look around and see in what shape your own gates were.

Little things like that certainly do a lot toward making a place look shabby or up-to-date. The farmer doesn't cost much—and buys the right kind—makes a good substantial job.

hens, what Titan could stand beside it? None that I know of. Florence, that is all yours, to do with you please, to spend when and how you will. Share it with your husband to be. He is a brave and gallant young man and is fortunate in finding a young woman equally brave and gallant. For the rest of my days I expect peace. Perhaps something comes here and I will talk pter the strange things that have happened; but we'll do that only when we haven't you folks to talk to. After your week's journey, you will return home. While I live this shall be your home. I demand that much. Free! No more looking over my shoulder when I walk the streets; no more testing of windows and doors. I am myself again. I take up the thread I laid down eleven years ago. I have feet in either braide nor Olga will ever return. Russia has a grip of steel.

Three weeks later, Severan, the Russian agent, left for Russia with his three charges—Olga, Bralno and Vrona. It was a long journey they went upon, sometimes by rail, sometimes by sea, sometimes by land, sometimes by water. Making or sleeping they knew no rest from espionage. From Berlin to Berlin, from Berlin to Petrograd, then known as St. Petersburg; and then began the cruel journey over the mighty steppes of that barbaric wilderness to the Siberian mines. The way of the transgressor is hard.

Of the same day that Olga, Bralno and Vrona made their first descent into the deadly mines Florence and Norton were married. After the storm the sunshine, and who shall deny their happiness?

Immediately after the ceremony the two sailed for Europe on their honeymoon, and it is needless to say that some of the million went with them, but there was no mystery about it. (The End.)

Hill Climbing Contest Overland Challenge Accepted

As per challenge issued to us in public on March 3rd, at Buhl, Idaho, by Dr. R. Tillery, Overland agent at said place, we have accepted the same, this as per terms stated and further as per article appearing in the Buhl Pioneer of March 3rd, on page seven.

It was agreed that we were to set the time and place, and we have set the following place because of its convenience to the people living in Buhl.

1st. Said contest to be held on hill one mile west and about a quarter mile north of the northwest corner of the Buhl townsite. This hill is an section line running north and south on the east side of Ross W. Alfred's farm and is just north of his farm buildings. The present road makes a detour to the west to avoid this hill and the hill itself is covered with some sage brush and rock which will be removed before the contest.

2d. Said contest to take place Sunday afternoon, March 14, 1915, providing roads and weather are favorable. Contestants to leave Buhl at 2:30 P. M. Contest to take place immediately after contesting cars arrive at hill.

3rd. Nothing but regular stock cars to be used, and no car to be changed in gear ratio or any other respect. Cars to be exactly the same as regularly shipped by the manufacturer and delivered to purchaser.

4th. All the gasoline tanks of contesting cars to be drained and refilled out of the same tank at the Buhl Auto Co's garage immediately before leaving for the contest. All gasoline tanks to be sealed immediately after filled. Said cars all to be at said garage at 2:00 P. M. For the above purpose.

5th. Cars to be classified according to list prices P. O. B. Factory.
Class One—All cars listed for $300.00 or less.
Class Two—All cars listed at $1000.00 or less.
Class Three—All cars listed at $1400.00 or less.
Class Four—All cars listed at $1900.00 or less.

We wish to include all makes of cars in this contest in their respective class. Just bring your cars and try them out, it's free for everybody.

6th. The lore and stroke of the engine as well as gear ratio to be announced immediately before each car makes its pull.

In order to make this contest still more interesting and to further show our faith in our cars, we hereby challenge all other car agents to disprove our claim that our Buick Model C-37 will go from the Buhl Hotel at Buhl, Idaho, to the Perrine Hotel at Twin Falls, Idaho, immediately after the pulling contest loaded with five passengers on less gasoline per pound load than any other car made. Ordinary rules governing similar contests to be observed.

This challenge was issued to us in public. We have accepted, the same to show our good faith. If our competitors fail to show up or take part in this contest it is self-evident that they acknowledge their cars to be inferior to ours.

Remember we will be there with our cars to show the public what our cars will do whether our competitors show up or not.

The organization meeting of the new board, which was called immediately after the annual meeting in St. Louis today, March 9, indicates that Mr. Bush's trip across country to Boise was not made solely for pleasure. Eight new members were taken into the new board of which Mr. Bush is the head. These members represent various units of the Gould system and the financial interests affiliated therewith.

By the consolidation of the office of chairman and president, Mr. Bush has become the head of the entire system. The new president is therefore in possession of information regarding feeders which he obtained personally and will not be dependent upon knowledge presented through subordinates.

The Wall Street Journal announced on March 2 that there was no hitch in the plans outlined for enlargement of the Denver & Rio Grande railway to the Pacific coast. With respect to the latter, the Journal state $25,000,000 new first mortgage bonds would be issued for the building of branch lines and feeders, of which sum $10,000,000 would be made available in the near future. Consequently, it is apparent that the first feeder the Western Pacific requires is one which will bring in cattle from Idaho. At present the route is the Southern Pacific across Nevada. It is obvious, even to a layman that there would be little or no incentive to build south across the Southern Idaho into territory already built by last road.

Maib's Field Inviting

The first inviting field west of Utah is the Inviting field and the fact that Mr. Bush drove over the reconnaissance survey line through this field, at which time the trip was nothing but a pleasure, indicates that he wished to satisfy himself regarding the merits of the territory before plans were formulated for extension. Competitive territory, such as California and Oregon offer, are not usually sought by the Western Pacific, and the fact that Mr. Bush in times of financial stringency, consequently it is reasonable to suppose that the bond issue for feeders for the Western Pacific, was one of the results of Mr. Bush's tour through northern Nevada and southern Idaho. The report in the Wall Street Journal states that the Western Pacific bonds will be issued under carefully guarded restrictions only for purposes which "can demonstrate a satisfactory earning capacity, before the extension, supposing that they will be built into productive and non-competitive territory such as southern Idaho offers." Gould Approves Plans. George J. Gould has announced unequivocally that there will be no opposition to the extension and reorganization plan on his part and the unanimity with which the plans have been approved naturally leads to the belief that they will be carried out in the same spirit.
