

FILER ROBBER CAUGHT IN OGDEN

Frank Wilson Makes Clean-up at Mathews Pool Hall

GOT AS FAR AS OGDEN AND HE PROCEEDED TO GET DRUNK

Stolen Goods Found in His Possession. Wilson Arrested by the Ogdan Police Authorities.

Deputy Sheriff W. G. Thompson returned Thursday from Ogdan, Utah, bringing with him Frank Wilson who is wanted in this county for robbing the Mathews pool hall at Filer last Thursday.

Mr. Mathews, the owner of the establishment, has occasion to be absent from Filer for several days, leaving Wilson in charge of the place. It is supposed that Wilson thought it was a good time to make a clean-up, and so departed with a suit of clothes belonging to Mr. Mathews, a diamond ring, cigars and other articles of value.

Wilson got as far as Ogdan, with the stolen goods, where he proceeded to get drunk and was arrested by the Ogdan police, on the charge of drunkenness.

About this time the sheriff's office in this city was busy sending out descriptions of Wilson to the different cities and towns in Idaho and Utah, and one of these descriptions was sent to the chief of police at Ogdan, arriving about the same time that Wilson was arrested.

A part of the stolen property was found on Wilson, and the sheriff's office here was notified by the Ogdan authorities. Deputy Sheriff Thompson went after the prisoner, who expressed his willingness to come back without extradition papers. It is said that Wilson has confessed to taking the goods.

ENVOIN SALE OF STOCK

Action For Permanent Order Asked by Landowners.

An action was filed in the district court last week by the owners of land under the Twin Falls Canal company, asking that a restraining order be issued by the court restraining the company from selling a part of all of the lands under the canal, and that the plaintiffs be allowed to set aside the claim that by selling the stock, there will be sold water rights in excess of the appropriation made for the Twin Falls tract and in excess to the carrying capacity of the canal system. The plaintiffs claim that they and other owners of stock and land under the system will lose money by the sale of the value of their stock and land devaluing in value.

The plaintiffs in the case are W. H. Edrington, Frank D. Brown, W. R. Lewis, Carl J. Hahn, George E. Bryant, W. S. Starr and George E. Harlan. Their attorneys is George Herriott.

PROF. H. W. JONES RETAINED

Offered Two Year Contract at Walla Walla, Washington.

H. W. Jones, for the past year principal of the Walla Walla high school, has been tendered a contract to continue in his present position for a period of two years, according to the announcement made by members of the school board. An increase in salary and the option of accepting the position for a period of either one or two years has been offered Mr. Jones.

According to statements made by members of the school board, the salary specified in this new contract is $2500 for the first year and $2600 for the second year of the contract. This is a substantial increase over the amount now paid the high school principal.

Mr. Jones has announced that he will resign the offer for a period of one year only, retaining the option of signing a two-year contract. His decision assures his remaining at the head of the high school during the 1915-1916 school year. Members of the board today stated that the work of Mr. Jones during the year that has been at the head of the affairs of the high school has been eminently satisfactory and that the board considered itself fortunate in being able to retain him for the coming year. Mr. Jones came to Walla Walla high school from the Twin Falls, Idaho high school—Walla Walla, Washington.

NINE IMMIGRANT CARS ARRIVE

Yler Receives Number of New Settlers for Surrounding Farms.

Last Saturday evening nine immigrant cars arrived from Nebraska, containing goods for families that are settling on the High Line and Farm's tracks lying south of here. They contain the goods of H. TWIN FALLS NOW A SUB-CENTRAL

Organization of Fruit Growers Completed

BUILT MAN NAMED AS PRESIDENT OF NEW UNIT

Sub-Central Will Embrace all of the Fruit Growers in the Twin Falls County.

At a meeting held in Moose hall Tuesday afternoon the fruit men of this section took the necessary steps to organize a sub-central under the North Pacific Distributors association and thereby gained the right to push the high grade products of this tract undiminished by any connection with Payette. At the meeting which was held in the evening at the home of the growers from Bull, Filer, Kimberly, Hazen and Twin Falls, the following officers were elected:

President—E. C. Marquandson, of Bull. Vice President—W. H. Spencer, of Kimberly. Secretary—W. S. Starr, of Kimberly. Directors to serve with the above officers: George A. Lincoln, of Twin Falls, and Alton H. Stradley, of Bull.

These directors will select a man to manage the business of the sub-central. The plan will allow the box loads to be sent to the Twin Falls, Bull, Kimberly, or any other section of the sub-central district in large lots, so that proper credit goes where it is rightly due.

Financial support for the venture has been pledged by the Twin Falls banks in handling the business, as these banks are sure to be favored by the local banks and not allowed to accumulate as heretofore in Payette for the benefit of local growers but to place the money directly in circulation in the various communities with the attendant advantage.

REPORTS ON THE RAILROAD

Senator Sweeley Returns From Eastern Trip.

TWIN FALLS-WELLS ROAD RECEIVES FAVORABLE MENTION

Object of Visit—The Castledale Line—Brings Out Much on the Larger Project.

As the result of three weeks spent in various Eastern money centers, Attorney M. J. Sweeley returned home last week much encouraged over the prospects for the railroad connection with the Western Pacific at Wells. With the object of Mr. Sweeley's visit was entirely different—that of financing the building of the Twin Falls Castledale railway—he was able to obtain much information regarding the Western Pacific, Visalia to Payette, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit and Minneapolis brought out the fact that Eastern banks (all of money which is not available for any speculation, but for safe edging) had been on the other hand, found that money could be raised from private capital to float speculative projects.

Three different private brokers at Philadelphia, Cleveland and Detroit were confident that money could be obtained to build the Castledale line, provided that upon their inspection, it looked good to them. Each made no offer to come out if expenses were paid and look over the project. The problem will be the raising of about $250,000 to $300,000 dollars.

But the good business men, who the Twin Falls brought a motto to the fact of the Twin Falls booster, was the evident eagerness with which the topic of the Twin Falls-Wells route was taken up by all of them interviewed. In every case, it was intimated to Sweeley in strong terms, that if the opening of the line was made certain, so as to pay a fair interest on the bond issue, that the construction work could be made very attractive to investors in general. The fact that the Twin Falls was a covered point with the head of the field, Idaho, while this region is about the center of the good-road and reconstruction by financial expectations. The fact that the Twin Falls was a covered point to get the overall work done up to a major construction.

The report of Attorney M. J. Sweeney upon the railroad situation after extensive investigations of conditions in the state which are not particularly encouraging for the branch line in Cascade, does show that the line to Wells, Nevada, is regarded as not only feasible, but also with a little work by the board, here. The fact that the line can be built parallel to the operation of the main line, is one upon which the board of this section can make a good strong fight to interest the Western Pacific. President Bush wants better lines. He has no money with which to build, but can obtain rolling stock for operating such lines. Twin Falls does not care how the matter is brought about so that it is accomplished. Now is the time to get behind a good solid movement to bring the operator and the contractor together. This should be the aim of the five ones in this section. It can be done if the people will put up the same united front that was the rule when Twin Falls was built in a night. It is time to do away with bickering and backbiting and get down to work that means the salvation of this country. It ought to be evident to all that this city cannot be pushed to the front without any sacrifices on the part of its residents. Everyone must be ready to do his part in any move that looks toward bringing any prospects to this country. Let's get in and show that we can still put things over in Twin Falls.

The creation of a sub-central in the Pacific Distributors' Association for this tract in the beginning of a move that will eventually place the fruit growing independent of all other colling sources. The Times has concluded that the former organization was too unworkable to give satisfactory results to the individual grower and that the overhead charges for selling produce are prohibitive. The fact that three years has confirmed this idea in the minds of many of the growers. The demand for a sub-central is moving the business of the fruit of making the Twin Falls, California, an independent territory, which is now selling, now shipping and now storing. The business will soon be large enough so that the individual cost will be down to the minimum. It will cost but slightly more to maintain rolling stock for ten thousand cars than for a thousand and the cost will be divided over ten times the number of products, and will allow a good margin of profit to all. It must be frankly stated upon the minds of most of the local growers that unless better prices can be obtained that the present form of selling must be abandoned. The establishment of a sub-central with carrying off of the Pacific coast, is a movement, directly about this line. But the Times maintains that until the whole is brought down to the ultimately workable point where the overhead expense is less than the gross, there will be little satisfaction and the cooperation of the whole body of growers will be left off until that day.

JAPANESE TROOPS FOR THE ALPES

In spite of the consistently vigorous opposition of many influential newspapers in the Mikado's land, certain classes of Japanese seem to be engaged in a movement to organize an army of volunteers to aid the Allies in the European field of battle. Among such Japanese are members of the House of Representatives, lawyers, retired army officers, and others. Mr. S. Kuroki, publisher of the popular Tokyo daily, the Yoruichi, seems to be the moving spirit in this propaganda. In a mass meeting recently held in Tokyo, Kuroki, delivered a fiery speech calling upon his countrymen to rally under the standard and help hasten the movement. Nor is the propaganda supported solely by sensational newspaper editors, or dilettante amateurs, for Dr. N. Ariga, the learned editor of the Gakko Jih, a Tokyo semi-monthly devoted to the review of diplomatic affairs, has taken up his pen and written an impassioned appeal for the furtherance of the movement. Under the somewhat sensational heading, "Alas! Gold, Rice, and Meat," Dr. Ariga, will recently lead a letter to the Chinese government, endeavor to explain that it is not impossible to send an army to Europe. The main obstacles which the opponents of the proposed European expedition consider insurmountable, says Dr. Ariga, are lack of funds, the difficulty of supplying Japanese troops at the front with rice, and unfamiliarity with European geography on the part of non-commissioned officers. To him, however, such obstacles can be overcome. "The European expedition would cost $150,000,000, a sum which we are ill prepared to expend at this time. And yet if our military aid is really needed by the Allies, is not each one of our 20,000,000 compatriots local enough to contribute $2.50? To talk of sending an army to Europe on money advanced by the Allies is nonsense. If we are to undertake this expedition we must find some way to defray the cost from our own resources.

It is not easy to supply our troops in Europe with rations to which they are accustomed at home. But we can readily purchase the rice in Saigon and India, where we have adequate facilities of transportation to Europe.

Our non-commissioned officers can find maps of Europe printed in English or French. This is not a serious obstacle. But we can easily procure European maps from our own letters, etc., regarding geographical names.

If the scheme of the Japanese propagandist materializes, the army of volunteers which they will send will number, he is told, at 24 battalions of infantry, 21 companies of artillery, six about 100 field and heavy guns, six companies of cavalry, and 2 companies of sappers. To this must be added the commissariat, ammunition and other necessary equipment. To transport all these, at least 30 vessels of 5000 tons each will be needed. It will take fifty days to reach Marseilles.

The Tokyo Chin condemn the movement as disgraceful and absurd, while the Tokyo Koshun regards it as sheer nonsense. They even doubt if the promoters of the scheme are sincere, for they must know that the Japanese government does not and will never favor the scheme, and that without the government's approval and assistance it will never be carried out.—Literary Digest.

FINN AND HILL, with the destruction of George J. Gould, which, he said, was based upon the opposition to get dividends at any cost. The Wash, Wheeling & Lake Erie and the Missouri Pacific, and Hendrick, exhibited full samples of the Gould system of general mismanagement. And now we see the Western Pacific in the hands of receivers because the Denver and Rio Grande, another Gould line, could no longer afford the strain on its resources to meet the heaviest obligations of the new Interstate railroad. Through it all, however, there is a gleam of hope—a hope that the Western Pacific will emerge from its difficulties throughly reconstituted.

There is a fair indication that James J. Hill, of the Burlington and Great Northern systems will annex the Western Pacific as an outlet for Burlington traffic through Denver to the coast. If Hill throws his electric emphasis into the Western Pacific, the conclusion is foregone and this line will take its place among the great trunk lines of the continent.

Hill, for some time, according to railroad rumor, has had his eyes on the Denver & Salt Lake line, commenced by the late Denver leader, David H. Moffat, and completed from Denver far west as Steamboat Springs, Colorado. The completion of this line into Salt Lake City will form a most important link between the Burlington and Western Pacific, and would develop into a short line between Chicago and San Francisco. The people of Denver saw the great advantage of extending the Denver & Salt Lake to the Mormon capital when they voted bonds two years ago for the construction of a five mile tunnel under the main grades of the Rocky mountains to eliminate the heavy grades on the line. The Colorado supreme court invalidated the bonds, but a man with Hill's energy would never allow a matter of five miles to stand in his way, and him and his prize. The construction of the Denver & Salt Lake to Salt Lake City will shorten the distance between Denver and the coast at least 150 miles. It has been ascertained by engineers.—Elko Free Press.

TALKS ON THRIFT

13.—INTEREST—THE MAGIC MULTIPLIER

"My first bank account was $3.20 at the age of nine. I have saved ever since. I would be just as unhappy in not saving money every month as I would be in losing my chance for three months a day. In fact, I should eat only two meals a day if it came to that deprivation to save money.—Wm. H. Compton, St. Louis.

Events of the year 1884 are yet in the minds of many who are still young. If you had saved from that time $5 a week at a 4 per cent compound interest, you could now enjoy an income equal to $5 a week and still keep your principal intact.

For an abundant productivity, and safety the owner of a modest sum of money can find few so many investments equivalent to a saving account. An instance at Lowell, Mass., demonstrates the truth of the statement.

On September 18, 1858, some persons deposited $100 in the bank and on July 15, 1858, another 100. These are the only deposits ever made. On October 17, 1888, the account, let alone for 30 years, had grown, through interest, to $1,400.

The depositor then drew $100 and a week later 200 more. He then took out twice as much as he ever put in and still had $1,000 on deposit in his bank.

This sum was allowed to remain undisturbed by November of 1911 it had become $1,555. In June of 1912, the account was finally closed and the amount drawn was $1,621. The depositor had put in only $200, but he received it back and nearly $1,500.

His money always was ready for him. It could any day be paid in full. It was at work for its owner day and night, month after month, year after year, and growing for nearly two generations. Without risk worth mentioning it had multiplied itself over nine times. The rate of increase at first was slow, but in the end nothing grows much faster than interest compounded.

ZUDORA

In the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery
By Harold MacGrath

SYNOPSIS
Zudora, heiress to $20,000,000, is placed in the guardianship of her uncle, Hassan Ali, a mystic. Hassan Ali is determined to secure for her fortune, for himself and when she becomes of age he makes every effort to bring about her death. Zudora is in love with a young lawyer, John Sturm, and she seeks permission of her miserly uncle to marry him. Hassan Ali promises to grant her wish provided she shall solve twenty of his cases. Zudora solves nine of the cases when her uncle dies, and she is released from her pledge.

At the death of her uncle, Zudora has another "uncle" for her hand—Jim Baird, a man who has been playing as double to Hassan Ali, but who, through sincere love of the girl, gives up the false life and goes back to his work as a newspaper reporter.

No longer obliged to solve Hassan Ali's cases Zudora now confronts the greatest mystery of all which is the mystery of her own life and the ambition to secure the vast fortune of $20,000,000 left her. On looking through her uncle's papers she also finds that her father left her an interest in a diamond mine and Sturm and Baird both lend assistance in trying to locate the mine.

Hassan and Baird had at least found out where the Zudora mine was, but the rightful ownership still hung in the air. Hunt also declared that the false claimants had been consistent tered to announce that guests were arriving. He then hastily replaced in the safe those trifles she could not use and shut the door. But in her hurry she left on the dresser a little book which contained the combination numbers.

"The moment she was gone the maid pounced upon the book and thumbed it over. She had seen this little book many times, but until now she had never been able to see her hands on it. She knew it contained the combination to the wall safe. She turned her apron over and jotted down the numbers on the linen. She replaced the book in the identical spot she had found it and left the room.

Baird was glad to see Zudora and Sturm. He chatted with them until the dancing began, then he wandered out among the smokers.

Capt. Radcliffe and Bruce presently drew together.

"Did you see that fellow, Baird?" asked Bruce.

"Yes, and he has his eye on me. But I don't think he'll molest me. The man he was seen on the road to the Zudora mines."

"Well, I want to keep out of his door and out the rear. I'm certain of it," said the diamond smuggler.

"What if he has placed you? He knows anything like that?"

"I'll save me to go into Mr. Mann's front door and out the rear. I'm certain of it."

"If he had been certain you'd be heard from him long before this. Take my word for it. Now, come along. I'm going to quietly stir up the place. This house looks like good hunting one of these days."

"You would rob Copeland?" whispered Bruce.

"I would make take pennies off a dead man's eye if I needed them. Come on."

The two worthies mounted the stairs cautiously, but once in the upper hall they became alert.

"I'll try this room here," said Radcliffe. "It looks as if it might be Mrs. Copeland's bedroom. Suppose any one comes to sight."

Radcliffe slipped into Mrs. Copeland's bedroom and glanced about with the skilled eye of a man who finds it necessary to observe all things. He saw the safe in the wall and examined it. The man's face turned pale and that collar set of diamonds would repose in your safe. But it would be a hard nut to crack.

His glance swept over the top of the dresser and rested on the little book. Such things were generally valuable in a moment he was thumping it. When he came across the combination he was delighted. "He quietly stored it in a slip of paper, tumbled it away and started for the door just as Bruce coughed his warning. He was safely in the hall by the time the maid came along.

"The gentleman's coat room?" he asked.

"The door opposite, sir."

"Thank you, sir," said Radcliffe.

He and Bruce entered the coat room as a matter of precaution, then went downstairs again. Radcliffe would have been greatly astonished could he have glanced into Mrs. Copeland's boudoir ten minutes later. The butler, having ideas of his own, was at that moment carrying down the combination of the wall safe from the little book the mistress had forgotten in her hurry.

Zudora and Sturm, however, enjoyed themselves thoroughly. What with the music and the dancing and the pleasure they found in each other's company the rest of the world seemed very well lost. On the way home, however, Zudora expressed her dislike for Capt. Radcliffe. She was quite positive that she had seen him before under unfavorable circumstances. She wondered if Copeland knew anything about the man.

"Where do you think you have seen him?" asked Sturm curiously.

"That's the last time I saw of it. I know that I have seen him, but beyond that things are hazy. I don't like him. I'm certain of that much."

"It was you would marry me straightly off and let me take you away where you'd forget all these unhappy affairs."

"Ah, John, my father was a sportsman. He never gave up a fight, and neither shall I. It isn't the money, though, that's always handy; it's the thought of dishonest people feeling the benefit of what is mine—until I've won or lost, I prefer to remain as I am. I've earned you enough trouble, John, my father. So one has any equity for you, it is I."

"Well, I guess I'll hang around," said John, hesitatingly, though he did not experience any particular pleasure at that moment.

"You might change your mind, you know, and when you do, I want to be at hand."

"You're very good to me, John?"

"Millions and millions of money," he murmured. "And I'm beginning to hate it."

"So am I. So let's say no more about it."

The following day, at Mrs. Du Val's plans were formed for the robbing of the Copeland wall safe. Bruce and Radcliffe agreed that the attempt should be made that night, as the Copeland had spoken of going into the city for a night at the opera. They sent two lesser crooks to watch the premises.

And while they watched they saw Radcliffe and the curtains of Mrs. Copeland's room. At first they believed that the Copeland had not gone into town, but a minute or two later one of the slanders was raised up, revealing the butler and the maid.

Mr. Hook had been better in the evening hours for about six weeks. He had been highly recommended by Marie, the maid, who had served her mistress with apparent loyalty for two years. All for the purpose that she was now being enacted. Hook was merely her partner in crime and both were wanted by the police in other cities.

The butler went directly to the safe in the wall, thrust the knob the specified number of times and swung open the door.

There they are, Marie. This is the last job. We'll like across the road and live in comfort for the rest of our days. I've got credit for about six weeks. He had been highly recommended by Marie, the maid, who had served her mistress with apparent loyalty for two years. All for the purpose that she was now being enacted. Hook was merely her partner in crime and both were wanted by the police in other cities.

"I'll have to carry that under my coat. Now, don't, given me a kiss and be by to the door about six weeks. We'll have to split the swag three ways, but we'll pull down a clear $20,000, or I don't know our Uncle Dudley."

"Hurry! I'll follow just as soon as I can."

"Right-o! Now to make it look real and Hellock, I'll drop out of the window here. Now a pair of the matter's shoes on, and that'll thank the butler until we can make a getaway."

He dropped, alighting into the hands of the two men watching him. But he was too tight and quick for them. He was of like a shot. They gave chase heartily enough, rather certain that Capt. Radcliffe would miss his hand if he did not catch the silver thief.

Hook, by doubling and doubling, succeeded in eluding them. He had in mind to hide the jewels and return some other night for them. He was anxious to have them fall into the hands of absolute strangers. That they were in the same deal as himself he had no doubts.

He drew out his handkerchief to wipe around the receptacle, and in doing the necessary thing a card fell from his pocket. Mr. Hook was not wholly fortunate in his adventure this night. As he scolded the card he dropped down the other side of it he dropped into Bruce's arms.

Bruce had heard the tramping of feet and was ready. In the struggle the corner fell to the ground and the mighty jerk Hook managed to free himself and he took to his heels, glad to get away from the scene.

Bruce had a keen ear, and during the struggle he heard something fall. Immediately he began searching, and finally caught the corner. On the other side of the wall, somewhere, lurked his amiable confederate, Capt. Radcliffe. Should he halt him and make known his find? Indeed no. There is honor among thieves in books, but rarely in life. Bruce stole off the scene, perfectly satisfied with his share of the loot.

But Capt. Radcliffe found something. It was the card the crooked-butler had dropped during the struggle with Bruce. Did Capt. Radcliffe call aloud for his friend, Bruce? No. He was stirred by the same sense. This session in Kansas avenue was doubtless some kind of a fence, and he at once decided to investigate.

On several thoughts the mind concluded not to fit at present, but to announce the robbery the moment the Copeland returned. For a while at least they would not suspect her of complicity. Nor did they. The maid went. The butler was evidently guilty, and she had trusted him. He was very positive to marry him—He was a thief. It was all so very well done that the Copeland believed her innocent.

Meanwhile Bruce weighed his way quickly to a home he knew of. It was a warehouse of his own, and Runyon is a confidential man in the library over the mantel hung the pair of suiters.

He covered a hole in the brick chimney and into this hole Bruce deposited the robe corner. He would wait now until the whole affair had blown over. On one of his European trips he had discovered a little safe far more than he could safely get in America. He was well satisfied with himself.

The next day Detective Hunt learned of the robbery, but as he had not yet been approached in regard to it he made no disclosure of the matter. The officers of the case. He hurried himself with several photographs and selected one of them. Later he would use this as a disguise.

"I'm sure the man in the library over the mantel hung the pair of suiters."

"You've assumed me to be the Copeland robber," he announced. "What do you think of it?"

"I guess the butler is the man."

"I'll see that a room on this street will hold my pay envelope with a safe."

Last Saturday night the high school auditorium was a scene of much excitement when the history class, No. 2, entertained the history class, No. 1, with an excellent party. Patrick's day was played by the young people followed by refreshments. Miss Morse was assisted by Miss Eganon.

Last Saturday night, it being his sixteenth birthday, George Hythe was happily surprised by fourteen of his young friends, who came to help him celebrate. Games of various nature occupied the evening until a late hour, when the guests were seated around a table laden with all good things to eat. The effect was very pretty with decorations of green and white, these colors also being introduced in the refreshments. Numerous tiny green hats, pipes, ashtrays and in fact, everything symbolic of St. Patrick's day used for decorations and favors.

On last Thursday evening friends and neighbors surprised Mr. William Hammons at his home on Addison avenue east. The evening was spent in a game of cards and other refreshments were served. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Crater, Mr. and Mrs. J. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Dally, P. C. WEBER.

ANNOUNCEMENT to Users of Electrical Energy in Twin Falls

The Idaho Power & Light Company will open its offices and sales room in the city of Twin Falls on Saturday, March 20th, on which date it will be ready to serve the public with all forms of Electrical service and sell the very latest and best in electrical appliances and equipment. Our new quarters at 137 Shoshone Street North will be open to the public on and after the above date and the people of the Twin Falls tract are invited to visit us at any time. We will be pleased to show the modern methods in electrical housekeeping.

We take great pride in stating that we have one of the most modern hydro power plants in the West and enough electric energy to supply the whole of Southern Idaho. This plant is built with all the latest equipment for giving satisfactory and permanent service. Every effort will be made to give that service the year around and allow nothing to interrupt pleasant relationship with our patrons.

In offering Electrical apparatus and equipment to the people of Twin Falls we fully believe that we can furnish the highest grade apparatus, cheaper than anyone else because of heavier buying for our many branch offices. We are prepared to give this advantage to our customers in right prices.

In entering the Twin Falls field, we desire to make a record for co-operative work with the people of this city. We can not hope to succeed unless the people are given service and a share in the success of the Idaho Power and Light Company. To this end we must create not only field for our electrical energy but must become a part of the community. We want your patronage and your friendship in making Twin Falls grow.

"You're a queer card, Baird. You've got the stuff in you. You once lived like a prince and yet you're willing to work hard for an honest living. Well, if the Coplands came to me I'll take you in on it."

"Any news on the other business?" "Nothing you can put your hand on. I have a lot of suspects but I'm not going to tell you what they are. I wish I'd been at Copeland's the other night. There might have been a face there I could have placed."

"The clerk came in. Lady and gentleman to see you, sir." "Name?" "Copeland."

"Send them in," said Hunt, smiling. "I've an idea that one of them brought sent them here. Don't do any talking. All right," laughed Baird.

"The apoth of the visit resulted in Hunt accepting the case. He went up to the house at once and went over the ground thoroughly. He quizzed the newlywed husband and his wife in perfect in the part. She fooled and alarmed him completely; but he took careful notice of her features and her height and color. There were traces all over the lawn, so many in fact, that he could learn nothing in this direction."

"That afternoon Mr. Hunt entered the grasp of Mr. Hodon, greeted the barkeeper cordially, and proceeded upstairs to the room he had previously assigned. There he met the maid Marie and they laughed over the successful mission in which the detective had been foiled."

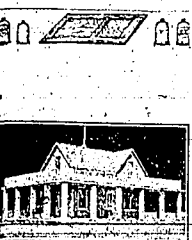

"Downstairs Capt. Radcliffe entered the bar, sat down by a window and ordered a drink, pretending to be interested in that morning's paper. Sooner or later he expected to encounter Mr. Hodon. The captain had a good deal of patience when necessity required it."

"Now one thing that Detective Hunt did find, and that was Hodon's own memorandum book. In that book he learned that the butler's 'hangout' was Hodon's son-in-law Herman Avenue. So at the same time that Radcliffe read his state newspaper Hook filled with the maid upstairs, Hunt and Radcliffe stepped on the opposite side of the street and eyed the name on the saloon windows."

"This is the shop, save enough," declared Hunt. "Suppose we stroll over and see what we can find." Radcliffe chanced to look out of a clear spot in the window and saw them. He was in a quandary for a moment. But he had his worry for nothing. The detective and the reporter immediately sought the stairs; and Capt. Radcliffe, as he went out, closed the door, raised himself for not going up the stairs."

"There's always a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," Mr. Marie hadn't wanted a certain branch which she addressed among the Copland collection; and if her husband had been so foolish as to surrender it, they would not have quarrelled, but their wives would not have risen to Hunt's ears. Quick he selected a fly from his bunch of skeletons, whipped it into the book gave a twist and shouldered into the room, followed by Baird."

"Hook, without waiting to enquire the visitor's names and business, plunged into a room and closed the door. Baird followed him fearfully. Hunt turned upon the maid suddenly. "I thought I'd find you here!" He scoured up the stolen jewels. "Where is the ruby coronet?" "I don't know," whimpered Marie. "I don't know," he said, "the wife of the robbery."

Talking about the value of plenty of porch room, here's an Idahoan who evidently has firm convictions on this point.

We'll venture that the medicine cabinet is just that much the smaller.

The more porch and the more it's used, sleeping and awake, the better for health and happiness.

And the cost of adding a porch is not excessive.
