

NURSERY STOCK

Land must be cleared, trees must be sold. I have a nice lot of nursery stock that is home grown. The following are some of my varieties: Apples, Yellow Transparent, Red June, Wealthy, Gravenstein, McIntosh Red, Jonathan, Wagner, Winesap, Grimes Golden, White Winter, Paragon, Y. T. Pippin, York Imperial, Delicious, Home Beauty, Arkansas Black, Snow Apple, King David, etc. Grapes, Concord, Florence, Transient, Early Richmond, Cherry, Apriots, Apples, Plums, Prunes, Maple, Elm, Boxelder, Ash, Hickory, etc. by the 1000 for planting for your fence posts and wagon-tongues, and all purposes that good hard wood is used for. Every farmer should at least plant an acre and we can furnish and not by contract and insure a growth.

SOIL MULCH OF IMPORTANCE
Dry Farmer Must Remember That His Success Depends Upon Degree to Which He Prevents Waste.
So vitally important is a permanent soil mulch for the conservation for plant use of the water stored in the soil that many attempts have been made to devise means for the efficient cultivation of land on which small grains and grasses are growing. In many places plants have been grown in rows so far apart that a man with a hoe could pass between the rows. So the field has been cultivated by the use of a large spring-tooth cultivator with teeth so spaced as to strike between the rows of wheat. It is yet doubtful whether, under average conditions, such careful cultivation, at least of grain crops, is justified by the returns. Under conditions of high aridity or where the store of soil moisture is low, such treatment frequently stands between crop success and failure, and it is not unlikely that methods will be devised which will permit of the cheap and rapid cultivation between the rows of growing wheat. Meanwhile, the dry farmer must always remember that the marks under which he works is small, and that his success depends upon the degree to which he prevents small wastes.
The conservation of soil-moisture depends upon the vigorous, unrelenting, continuous stirring of the topsoil (cultivation) and more cultivation! must be the war cry of the dry farmer who battles against the water thieves of an arid climate.

EXCESSIVE BLOWING OF SOIL
Subject of Vital Importance to Many Farmers—Moving Dirt Acts Much Like an Anger in Action.
It is only where there is excessive blowing of the soil that damage occurs. It is a well-known fact that if one can prevent the soil from starting on the windward side, the problem has been solved. When once the wind begins to move the soil from the windward side of the field, the moving dirt acts much like an anger, working and twisting, blowing and heaving the soil in front of it, until the wind sweeps freely through or across the field, taking the loosened soil and leaving the exposed roots to wither and die.
The movement of soil is natural, and wind and water serve as vehicles for the continual carrying of dirt from place to place. It would be quite impossible to prevent absolutely the movement of soils, but it is by no means an impossibility to prevent dangerous movement.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE

Written By Charles Goddard

SYNOPSIS

Stanford Marvin, wealthy manufacturer of automobiles, has worn himself out by overwork. His son Harry, and his adopted daughter, Pauline, love each other, but she wants to see two years of thrilling adventures before marrying. Her reason is that she is ambitious to be a writer. Old Mr. Marvin asks to see what she has written. While Pauline and Harry are in search of a magazine containing her first story, Mr. Marvin opens the case of a mummy just received from Egypt. Raymond Owen, his rascally private secretary, helps lift off the front of the case; but leaves old Mr. Marvin to remove the mummy's bandages alone. Marvin during a fainting spell, sees the half-exposed mummy come to life, step out of her case, take a bracelet from her wrist and try to force it into his hands, while her lips reveal a strange message from the remote past. Restored to consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the old man believes it all a dream, until, later, he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He pronounces Pauline one year to see life and places her in the guardianship of Pauline. A final attack occurs when just time to write on the doctor's prescription pad a very brief and simple will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's vast estate if something should happen to her before she marries. He tells a rascally man, and Owen conspires to kill Pauline. The preceding chapters have dealt with the many efforts of the two to accomplish this.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"Well prove it," said Harry. "Show me that you mean it."

"Why, Harry, what a woman says she ALWAYS means to do."

"Always means to do?"

"You are as much of a brute as usual; but, Harry, really I'm going to do good this time," pleaded Pauline.

They were emerging from the gate of the Marvin mansion to the avenue. As Harry turned to Pauline with a skeptical frown on his lips, the approach of a young man of military bearing caused him to hesitate.

"By Jove, isn't that—the duce in it?" "Why, Henry Summers?"

The young man was hastening past them without recognition. He had gone by when Harry called sharply: "Hello, Ben!"

"Harry—Harry Marvin! By the coin of Gossius, is it really you?"

"No," said Harry, grasping his hand, "not the 'you' you used to know. I have been driven into young old age by caring for a militant sister. This is Pauline, the daughter of the navy. PLEASE promise me that you won't get him into danger, because he's a good fellow. I haven't seen him since he was anything more dangerous than a submarine and shoot torpedoes out of it in a field of mines."

"A submarine? Torpedoes?" cried Pauline. "Isn't that beautiful?"

"But, Henry, how are you? What have you been doing? I haven't seen you in a thousand years," cried Harry with cordial enthusiasm.

"I'm still at it, and I've GOT it, Harry. I give you my word, I have."

"Got what?"

"The torpedo—I mean THE torpedo, in capital letters and italics with a line under the word. I've invented one that would blow—well, I've GOT it."

"Congratulations, congratulations, laudatory remarks and enthusiasm," said Harry. "Without having the slightest idea what a torpedo is, I reject with you. Come on back to the house and tell us about it."

"I'm sorry, I can't, Harry, now. I'm engaged for a conference with the Naval Board, and I'm late already. But will you and Miss Marvin come to luncheon with me tomorrow?"

"Why not you with us; we saw you first."

Summers laughed. "Well, for this reason, I want you to meet Miss De Longueon, who will preside at this particular luncheon, and who is."

The crimson flush that came suddenly to the cheeks of the young officer brought involuntary laughter from Harry and Pauline.

"I take that as an acceptance—the Kermoreau, East Fifty-sixth street," he called as he fled.

But at the gate of the Marvin house he came upon Raymond Owen. There was a hasty clasp of hands and "You're to come, too," cried Summers, continuing his flight.

"Where am I to come?" asked Owen as he approached Harry and Pauline.

"To luncheon with Ensign Summers tomorrow. Isn't he a dear? I love men who blush. They seem so innocent."

Ensign Summers had gained a position beyond his titular rank in the navy. A natural bent toward science and a patriotic bent toward the use of science as a means of national defense had inspired him to experiments which had resulted in success amazing even to himself.

He had been allowed, during the year preceding the meeting with Harry and Pauline, a leave of absence. In that time he had visited Italy, France, England and Germany and had studied under masters of naval knowledge. He had come back home with his own little idea undiminished in its importance to his own mind, and he had proceeded with youthful enthusiasm and alacrity to prove its importance to the highest of his commanders.

The tests now about to be made—tests of a new torpedo gun and new torpedoes—had been ordered by the minister in the land.

Triumphant in his discovery and wealthy in his own right, Summers was the happiest of men.

It was in Paris that he had met Miss De Longueon. Extremely beautiful, of the alert and languorous type, quick of wit, delicate of tact, she had completely fascinated the young officer.

He had vowed his adoration of her almost before he knew her. His

INTEREST INCREASES

More Merchants Each Year Join the Movement for Home Industry.

The observance of Home Industry Week started in promptly Monday. Several of the merchants say that inquiries begin to come in that day for "home industry goods" and sales of these lines are quickening. Some window displays were in place Monday and a number were put up Tuesday. By the middle of the week there will be special window displays in the majority of the store windows.

The Sterling Dairy Products company is setting a good example of intelligent compliance with the governor's proclamation. Invitations have been sent broadcast to everybody who wishes to visit the creamery and have a sample dish of ice cream "on the house." A journey through the plant is also a part of the program. All the school children have a special invitation to come and learn how Sterling butter is made. There are invited in relays, one grade going at a time.

The window display at Chase bank store has the original proclamation issued by Governor Haines and Governor Alexander and letters of commendation from Governor McMillan, of Oregon and Governor Lister, of Washington. The New Year resolution signed by the club women of four states is shown on cards, each card representing a club, so that the total represents several thousand women who have pledged themselves to buy western manufactured products. A sample page of type from The New West Magazine and a sheet of the magazine as it came from the press affords an educational sidelight to those who have never seen the workings of a printing office. A United States flag with the legend "Made in the U. S. A." forms a fitting background for the display.

The Twin Falls Grocery & Mercantile Co. has an appetizing display of Pierce's pork and beans, Twin Peaks tomatoes, McDonald's chocolate, Queen Tarts macaroni, all fresh products. Varney, the candy man, has a unique display of candies made from Harley sugar, and it is claimed the sugar was made from beets grown at Harney. The First Premium bakery has bread and cakes, with a sack of Idaho flour to show that Idaho wheat is good to eat.

Wolfe's grocery shows Crescent baking powder and Mapleine, both Seattle made.

The Consolidated Wagon & Machine company has washing machines and Hughes electric ranges at labor-saving prices for the home.

The Great Shoolin & Twin Falls Water Power company has numerous electrical labor-saving devices, and a special treat will be offered Saturday afternoon, when some of the household electric department girls of the Twin Falls high school will have a display of a Copeman electric range, serving them to all camera with Golden Butter and Twin Falls country honey.

Edridge's has an attractive display of Schol-Wil caps for high school boys and others. These are Seattle-manufacture. Auto robes from Provo also form an attractive display.

The Alco clothes shop shows ladies-made overalls.

Hickler's displays "Nampa" trousers and Utah-made house dresses.

The First National bank has a booklet of 42 gold pieces and silver dollars "grown in Idaho."

The Twin Falls Hardware Co. has a display of Bennett's paint, made in Salt Lake City.

The Shoshone grocery has Payette canned peas on display.

The City Marketing house has a window of Idaho, Utah and Oregon goods.

The grocery department of the I. D. store has Payette peas and Utah-made goods. All the grocers have Utah cheese.

The Modern Packing Co. has a fine display of the Great brand of Idaho lamb and, on Friday will offer Idaho fish from Lake Pund d'Arille.

The Parrott Optical Co. has an interesting display of lenses "ground in Idaho."

The Rogersen bakery shows home industry from the ground up. It has Idaho wheat, Idaho flour and Twin Falls-baked bread.

The City Pharmacy will serve McDonald's Don't-kill-cats and chocolate ice cream.

Chief Justice Smith offers a superb display of Idaho animals "taxidermied" and on Saturday afternoon will demonstrate his Olston electric range by baking hot rolls, the baking to be done by household science girls. Cakes baked by the girls of this department will be offered for sale at the power company's office Saturday afternoon.

The bread baking contest, which is of particular interest to the housewives of the tract, will be held Saturday, and contestants must display their bread at the City Pharmacy by half past two o'clock. The prize--Idaho flour--will be awarded at 4 o'clock.

The dry goods stores are having home industry sales.

The displays mentioned are only a part. Others will be in place in a day or so, and altogether Home Industry Week bids fair to be a carnival week in Twin Falls.

According to newspaper reports received from Boise, Nampa, Caldwell, Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Malad and other neighboring towns, the observance of the week will be general.

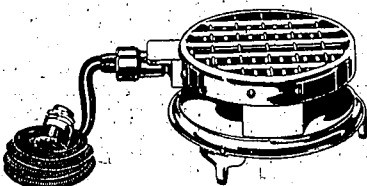

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

Notice is hereby given that the regular meeting of the stockholders of the Twin Falls Shoshone Canal Co. will be held at 504 2nd avenue east, Twin Falls, Idaho, at 2 p. m., May 2nd, 1915.

MAD COYOTES IN NEVADA

Several Have Been Killed in State of Nevada.

Sherriff-Inn of Humboldt county, Nevada, letter from Assessor, Baker Tuesday stating that two rabid coyotes had been killed since Saturday at the old military post near McArthur.

The letter said that the situation was assuming a serious aspect around McArthur and that the rabies seem to be spreading rapidly among coyotes and animals which have been bitten.

In Oregon, the Humboldt Star says, the legislature has recognized the situation by increasing the bounty on coyotes to $3 apiece. The Nevada legislature also passed a bill to increase the bounty on these animals, but the governor vetoed the bill because it provided that the bounties were to be paid by the state instead of by the county--Edna Free Press.

To be courteous; to sell by reason rather than by sale; to anticipate your requirements; to discuss with you freely and fully each and every point of Hudson and Maxwell cars--but to under-stand--rather than over-estimate--these points and advantages; to place in your hands--instead of just an "automobile"--the means to years of profit and enjoyment for yourself and your family.
