THIEVES CAPTURED

Sheriff Frank Kendall and P. O. Herriman Make Capture

SAID TO HAVE TAKEN HORSES
PROPERTY OF CHIDLEY BROS.

Are Now in the County Jail Waiting
Preliminary Hearing. Said to Have Changed the Brand.

Two alleged horse larceny men were arrested Tuesday by Sheriff Frank Kendall and Deputy P. O. Herriman. The arrested men are Bud Lewis and Orville Johnson, the former of which have been committed on House creek, in the western part of the county. The sheriff's office was notified last week that the crooked work going on in that part of the county and the sheriff and deputy left Saturday evening for House creek. The officers kept a hiding Sunday and until noon Tuesday, when they discovered Lewis and Johnson with two horses, said to be the property of Chidley Brothers, and the Lewis ranch. The officers then made the arrest, bringing prisoners to Twin Falls Tuesday evening. It is said that the prisoners would get horses and change the brands. It is claimed that horse stealing has been going on in House creek country for some time and the officers and stock men are determined to put a stop to the practice if possible.

MANY FEVER CASES

More Truulent This Season With More Fatalities Than Usual.

To date Dr. Mather reports nineteen cases of spotted fever, with three deaths as against the previous record of eight deaths out of 216 cases. The average of all cases is never this small.

"Major" Haper, whose case was reported by The Times three weeks ago, was the first victim this season. The man was a heavy stockman who was sick two days in camp before coming to town and died the second day after his arrival at the hospital. He was buried from the Catholic church here last Saturday, services being conducted by Rev. Father Arregui. The victim, Haper, was picked up on the street where he had fallen. He had been wandering about for days, no one calling him, and when he was found a stranger here and when it was realized that he could not live a search was made for his pockets for identification. Certificates were found for over four thousand dollars were found and, through the bank leaving the results, he was identified as Haper, a Shady, Minnesota, in which place the remains were shipped—Elmore county Times.

FAST BALL GAME SATURDAY

Buhl High to Cross Buhl With Twin Falls High School.

One of the fastest ball games of the season is promised for Saturday afternoon at the ball field when the Buhl high school team will cross bats with the Twin Falls high school team. A few days ago the Buhl team defeated Buhl and defeated that team by a score of three to two. The local team then went to Kimberly and met defeat by a score of seven to one. The Buhl team then in turn defeated the fast Kimberly team by a score of three to one, so it can be seen that the Twin Falls team will have to play ball to beat the Buhl team. The game will be called at three o'clock. The high school team, which has been playing well, will turn out for the fans as assured of one of the fastest games of the school season.

"Ultimate Brothers" are great acrobatic players and is a feature of the Orpheum theatre. The acts are fine, the first is a two-part comedy drama entitled "The Doctor's Wife"—very popular. "The Doctor's Wife" always plays in the news of the entire world. "Ambrose's Lot of Fun" is a fine comedy, and is one of the best of the year.

COUNTIES MUST ACT PROMPTLY

Note of Warning From State Highway Commission.

Counties in the state wishing to do state highway construction work on those portions of the state highway system within their respective counties should make the fact known immediately to the state highway commission and secure the appropriation to which they are entitled, for next year the balance of the fund may be reapportioned and the figures set aside for them will be different. The state highway commission now in session here with the secretary of state, and which let contracts today, is anxious to have the counties making use of the funds available and traffic to have the respective counties apply for it so that construction work can be done this year.

The commission let three contracts today for highway construction in various parts of the state for which bids were submitted. The Idaho construction company was awarded the contract for construction of that portion of the state highway from American Falls east to the Fort Hall Indian reservation line and another portion in Hanneau county from Lind east to the Shannock creek and on line. The third contract went to C. S. Commercial and is for construction of a portion of the state highway from American Falls east to the Power-Cassidy county line.

The state treasurer recently disposed of the $200,000 bond issue and now has the money ready to be sold. It was appropriated by the old state highway commission together with other funds among the respective counties. Under the terms of the law to secure their share of the appropriation, counties must raise two-thirds of the cost of construction of the highway in their boundaries and the state raises the other one-third. This fund, the total cost of construction work and makes construction possible. The commission having the funds, therefore, is anxious for the counties to make use of it—Capital News.

STRAY BULLET HITS FARMER

Fred Lindauer, of Rupert, Victim of Peculiar Accident.

Fred Lindauer was the victim of a peculiar accident last Saturday evening along the road in front of the J. E. Douglas residence. When the car of the Douglas family entered his right shoulder and ranged toward the spinal column, indicating that it came from the southwest. The Douglas family, however, could not be located and Sunday morning Mr. Lindauer was taken to the hospital at Twin Falls, where his injuries were taken and they failed to show the bullet.

The wound is healing nicely and while it is very painful, the bullet is not able to move around, but will not be able to work for some time.

It is not thought that the bullet was fired from a rifle, but that it is a shrapnel of the results of a premature shooting of which there is entirely too much—Rupert Record.

SALMON SETTLERS
FIGHT CHOLERA

Dr. W. A. Sullivan Organizes
District to Prevent Disease.

TRACT HAS BEEN FORMED INTO DISTRICTS

Work Will be in Charge of a Leader and Surveymen in Each of the Districts.

An Anti-Hog Cholera organization has just been completed by the settlers within the Salmon River tract. Meetings were held at various points within the territory and were fully explained by Dr. W. A. Sullivan, inspector in charge of hog cholera control work.

At these meetings a leader for all school districts was selected and also surveymen for every four sections, within each school district. The duties of all surveymen is to make a canvass of the sections assigned to them and have a survey card properly filled out by every occupant of a farm within his territory. The surveymen were instructed by Dr. Sullivan to fully explain to every occupant of a farm, at the time the card was filled out, that the Bureau of Animal Industry desires every farm to have a "C" card, and same will be kept on file in the government office at Twin Falls. Surveymen were further instructed to inform all farmers that the government work was free and no expense attached whatever, and to promptly report hog cholera if named in the hope of their protection, so that a prompt investigation could be made by government veterinarians and free serum administered. The purpose of the prompt report will greatly reduce the loss in the herd and greatly prevent the spread of the disease to neighboring herds.

The following list of school districts (affiliated leaders of same, also the surveymen appointed, giving the number of sections in which they canvass):

School district No. 54, Superior, A. N. Bailey, leader; H. B. A WISE MOVE.

Mayor-elect E. M. Sweeney has had in emphatic terms that he has no intention of disturbing the fire department of the city. He stated that the fire department was a strictly business administration and that to replace through efficient men trained in the work with green firemen might result disastrously to the people of the city in a big fire. For this reason there will be no change. The Times believes that Mr. Sweeney is taking a broad gauge view of the matter and should be commended for taking the fire department out of politics.

SHOULD BE GOOD LOSERS

The city election probably did not go to the satisfaction of all citizens and there may be some "sore spots" among the disappointed. Nevertheless, every man, whether elected or defeated, is still a citizen of Twin Falls and a part of its activities and government. Not a single effort should be made to evade responsibility for a certain part in the success of the city's affairs. Neither should any obstacles be thrown in the way of those who will take over the reins of government next week, because any parties feeling "Twin Falls first, last and all the time," should be the aim of every loyal citizen. For no matter who is in charge of the municipal affairs, each one has to bear his part in the expense and it is to that extent interested in making Twin Falls force to the front. To oppose measures for public good because of malice is unworthy. There are issues coming up that will take intelligent co-operation on the part of all good citizens with the city council and the mayor. Let's each do his part in the work. Twin Falls will be the home of a good many of us for years. We should do our part toward making it a good home for all by mutual toleration of the inherent rights of all to a voice in the government. Both sides in the recent election should be able to subscribe to such a creed.

GROWING GERMAN BITTERNESS AGAINST AMERICA

The hate for England, felt by the whole German nation, is spreading, we are told, and the American people will soon be as cordially disliked as are the citizens of those countries actually in arms against the Fatherland. For some months past the German papers have been showing considerable irritation over the policy of our government, and this irritation is now being characterized as a branch of neutrality, while the tone of recent notes sent from Washington to London has roused the German press to set out very pointedly their views upon the President's and Mr. Bryan's sentiments. The attitude of the newspapers has been supported, we are told by every section of the general public, and finally culminates in a formal note from Berlin to Washington protesting against our export of munitions of war, complaining that we tamely submitted to the blockading policy of the allies and have been remiss in our efforts to supply Germany with foodstuffs. Newspaper comment on our policy has been more vigorous than polite, and it is worthy of notice that such forcible expression of opinion is by no means limited to sensational or obscure journals, we may be seen which such a powerful organ as the world-renowned Kolische Zeitung given voice to the following:

"Mr. Bryan has made himself the mouthpiece of the brutal British standpoint, which is based on force. * * * American neutrality is only a thin veil, behind which is concealed eagerness to do England a good turn. Knowing this, we will be guided by our knowledge. If America respects brute force only, then we will give full play to brute force." Another influential paper, the Frankfurter Zeitung, in engaged at the "want of backbone" shown by Washington, and remarks:

"President Wilson's note to England does not deserve the name of a protest. It is quite feeble, like his entire policy toward England no far has been. The Washington people for relations with England is to wash their face but not to wet her. Washington, however, appears to have quite another recipe for Germany."

"Count von Reventlow, in the Berlin Deutsche Tageszeitung, suggests that the time will come when Germany will make reprisals on America."

"Some day the United States will find herself at war with Japan; when the repetition of the exportation of arms by states that would then be in the position of neutrals will be very inconvenient for America."

Similar sentiments are expressed by the Berlin Voelische Zeitung, which sends a long article, gradually growing more contemptuous in tone by remarking: "It is a matter of complete indifference to us whether America depends on strict neutrality or not." It is significant, however, that these and similar articles in the German press have produced a tendency in the Fatherland to make the disapproval of American policies a personal matter. This was first shown when the American toys sent on the Christmas ship were returned by the committee in Saxony. This move was endorsed by the Dortmunder Zeitung, which says: "To be sure, we do not hold the doll-sending babies of America responsible for the shabby conduct of their hypocritical Fatherland. But we do blame the fathers, uncles and big brothers of the charming little donors. They make their smart business deals at the expense of the life and health of our brothers and sons. They think, these smart business men, that they have done their duty before heaven if, out of the millions made in this traffic in blood, they pass a few thousands through the hands of their little ones into those of the orphans of German men mangled by American guns."

A pointed semi-official communication appeared recently in the Kolische Zeitung pointing out how American citizens have been fouled on the street and in restaurants because they have spoken English, and warning the people to cease from such demonstration. It continues: "As for Americans who are living in Germany we may be convinced that they are Germanophil and belong to the constantly increasing group of Americans, both here and in America, who are endeavoring to strengthen the opposition to the delivery of munitions of war to our enemies."

The London Daily Mail prints an interview with an American banker who has left Berlin after many years' residence, who intimates that Americans are becoming personally more and more unpopular. He says:

"There is genuine uneasiness in the large American colonies in Berlin, Hamburg, Bremen, Munich, and other German cities, in consequence of the undoubtedly rising tide of popular ill-will against the Washington government."

"A few weeks ago the newspapers, including the government controlled Lokal Anzeiger and the popular Berliner Zeitung am Mittag, launched a systematic campaign of vituperation against the 'money-grubbing Yankee.' The campaign was apparently checked by the government, for the newspaper attacks ceased as suddenly as they began, but the abuse in private increased correspondingly. Americans nowadays can hardly meet German friends without being targets for the most violent tirades."

"The Germans are convinced that the allies are holding out to America in furnishing them with shot and shell. Whenever the big ship sets in and the Germans begin to realize, as I think they will have to, that the game is up, I believe America will get the lion's share of the blame. They will say: 'You did it, we had them killed till you grasping Yankees came along and insisted on helping them. Then it will be just straw America.'"

TALKS ON THRIFT

No. 2.—A PRACTICAL PROFIT SHARING PLAN

"Spend your money after you have earned it, never before." Dr. Lyman Abbott.

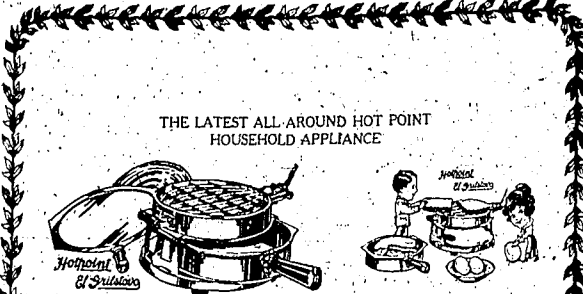

One of the large Minneapolis flour milling companies early in the winter gave every one of its 25 employees a check for $25 with instructions to take it to a savings bank and deposit it, the check being valuable otherwise.

The object of these gifts was to foster thrift among the employees. In order that the saving habit, once started by the opening of the account, may be kept up, an additional incentive to save part of their earnings has been made to the company's officers.

This is embodied in a letter which reads in part as follows:

"If 'You continue in our employ until November 1, 1915, bring your savings bank book to us. We will then give you a check for half the net increase in your bank balance in excess of the original $25."

In other words, if your bank book shows $45 on deposit November 1, 1915, we will add $10 to your savings. If your book shows $75 on deposit on November 1, 1915, we will add $25 to your savings, etc."

"In no case will the amount paid under the arrangement exceed $25." One of the remarkable features was that a large number took to the bank in addition to their gift check, savings that never had been deposited. One man brought $300 and a large number added to the check enough to insure the payment of a $25 check November 1, 1915.

Several of the employees had savings accounts already and merely added the check to their savings. Two hundred and seventy-four opened savings accounts the day the company issued the check.

This is really a practical form of profit sharing, and it helps people to help themselves and encourages the formation of a permanent habit of systematic economy.—T. D. MacGREGOR.

CIRICILLO'S BAND COMING

Wonderful Attraction—Billed for Twin Falls, Chautauque This Year.

According to the press agent the biggest thing that will be heard here this season will be the concerts of Ciricillo's band. The demand for their return was unanimous, and Ciricillo comes back with a still larger and better organization. The government will mark the biggest day of the assembly. Another group of high class musical talent will be on the programs of the same afternoon and evening and this is the H. Travert Grand Opera Singers. Each of these are true stars and only on account of the discrimination caused by the war are such voices as theirs available in the summer season, as they would otherwise be singing in Europe at prices that are prohibitive to small cities.

No finer band than Ciricillo's has ever come to the chautauque, and no band is more popular or more admired in the east than this one. Several other excellent musical organizations will appear here. Chautauque week, it is announced, with a total of thirty entertainments of various kinds.

THE PERILS OF PAULINE

Written By Charles Goddard

SYNOPSIS

Stanford Marvin, wealthy manufacturer of automobiles, has been himself out by overwork. His son Harry, and his adopted daughter, Pauline, love each other, but she wants to see two years of thrilling adventures before marrying. Her reason is that she is ambitious to be a writer.

Old Mr. Marvin asks to see what she has written. While Pauline and Harry are in search of a magazine containing her first story, Mr. Marvin opens the case of a mummy just received from Egypt. Raymond Owen, his rascally private secretary, helps lift off the front of the case, but leaves old Mr. Marvin to remove the mummy's bandages alone. Marvin during a fainting spell, sees the half-exposed mummy come to life, step out of her case, take a bracelet from her wrist and try to force it into his hands, while Pauline, who receives a strange message from the remote past.

Restored to consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the old man believes it all a dream. Until, later, he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life and action in the land of the pharaohs.

A final heart attack gives him just time to write on the doctor's prescription and a very brief and simple will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's vast estate if something should happen to her before she marries. Hicks, a race-track man, and Owen conspire to kill Pauline. The preceding chapters have done the many efforts of the two to accomplish this.

In the last installment, Pauline overhears Mike De Longone, an international spy, plotting to secure the plans of a new torpedo which Ensign Summers, of the United States Navy, has invented. Pauline, who is not, however, that the conspirators have decided to order Summers' yacht, also a spy, to sink the submarine which the ensign commands, after stealing and forwarding the correct plans. Pauline decides to go down in the submarine with Summers, to foil the theft. Her intruderous rescue by being blown out through the torpedo tube was told last week.

In the chapter which preceded today's, Pauline just misses death in one of the most cruel and fantastic plots which has yet been laid for her. She escapes from the villainous wrenches when their speeding motor car is wrecked only to fall into the clutches of a ferocious gorilla which has escaped from a circus menagerie. The boat carries her to the top of a cliff and she is finally saved from the most horrible of fates by the bravery of a policeman.

CHAPTER XL

"By George, I believe we'd better not after her. She's been out of sight for an hour."

Harry Marvin was nervously pacing the deck of the yacht as it lay at anchor in the bay. He had just lowered his glasses for the fiftieth time since Pauline's departure in the motorboat and had turned to Owen with a look of alarm.

"I really don't believe that there is any cause for worry, Mr. Marvin," said the secretary blandly.

"No cause to worry—with a helpless girl, who can't even handle a motorboat alone in one of the most powerful craft ever built? I think there is cause."

"She is very capable in all such matters; she handles an automobile perfectly."

"Pardon me, but," yelled Harry, "I believe I'll order the anchor up and go after her."

"But in that way we are more likely to lose track of her than by staying here."

"That's so," Harry admitted. "But I WOULD like to know what is keeping her out so long. Why it's nearly time for us to sail."

"You didn't want to let her go out alone in the motorboat, so now who is going to worry you for revenge?"

"There go the battlehips," said Harry, as the far boom of a heavy gun announced the beginning of the target practice.

The "aah" that Pauline had sighed from the shaking motorboat and toward which she now drove desperately, was not a sail as she discovered, on closer view. It was a great white sheet of canvas stretched between two masts and uprights that were fixed on an old canal boat. Pauline was trying to puzzle out the meaning of the strange craft and its peculiar rig when suddenly her attention was gripped with a graver problem.

The engine of the motorboat had stopped.

The water which now half-filled the little vessel had found its way at last through the protection walls around the motor. Without preparation, at the head of the boat swung slowly around and, within a hundred feet of the girl she sought Pauline felt herself baffled anew.

Pauline seized an oar and pried it with all her strength. She managed to swing the boat again, and standing almost knee-deep in water, paddling now on one side, now on the other, she fought on toward the sheeted hulk.

It was only a question of time now. The water continued to flow in through the subtle leak that Raymond Owen had cut in the bottom of the boat. Pauline could feel the rise of the water; she could feel the increasing weight of the craft as the paddling became more and more difficult.

On the seat behind her with his paws still set patiently upon the useless wheel, the little bull terrier waited and watched without a whimper.

"It is a canal boat," Pauline said to herself, as she forced the sinking boat past the stern of the hulk. "And it is anchored; there are the chains. I wonder what in the world it is for?"

She began to call again, hoping that there might be someone aboard the vessel; but no answer came. There was not the slightest sign of life on the deck in the low-set cabin.

A sudden, guttural groan—and Pauline felt the motorboat quiver from stem to stern.

Two more desperate paddle strokes and she was within reach of the fore-chains of the hulk. She stepped back caught Cyrus under her arm and then, just as the water-filled launch was mucked into the air from beneath her feet, she grasped the chains and swung herself to the side of the mysterious barge.

In spite of the weird loneliness, the puzzling surroundings, the fearful uncertainty that still at her heart, she reached the lock with a prayer of thanks on her lips. Here was safety at least for a time. Here were solid planks under her feet. Here was probably a kind of shelter—if not her. She moved toward the door of the cabin to find it locked. The door of her, sniffing suspiciously at every corner. But she made no sign of fear, and Pauline stepped down the rickety steps into the dim cabin without fear.

There was not a sign of human habitation, save a small pine table, two tottering chairs and the wreck of an old desk—furnishings so weak from age and wear that seemed to have been abandoned as part of the useless hulk.

But was it abandoned? Was it useless? Pauline asked herself again as she explored a small cupboard in the wall. Surely there must be some object in the outcropping of even such a battered ruin out at sea. Surely someone must have rigged up the strange hall as a sort of a signal. And that someone—Pauline trusted and prayed—would come and find her and take her back to Harry.

She sat down on one of the quaking chairs and began to wring the water from the bottom of the dress. Cyrus came back from his tour of inspection apparently satisfied that all was safe. He met her before she had time to report with his confident eyes.

"Oh, you prelate, puppy! What would I do now if you were not with me?" cried Pauline, suddenly catching him in her arms.

He barked joyously, quivering, he tore himself free and dashed out of the cabin yelping wildly.

Pauline, too, had felt and heard strange things. The hulk had suddenly trembled with a peculiar rattle, and, at motion, and then, as if by magic, the sea had risen up to the seaward side, sounded the mighty splash of some huge missile flung into the waves.

Pauline breathlessly followed Cyrus to the dock. She found the dog standing under it and barking. Through the cloth there was a hole as large around as the body of a man. Pauline gazed in wonder but her bewilderment was brief. Before she had time to search her mind for possibilities, the mystery was clearly and alarmingly solved for her.

There was a weird whistling sound, a crash that seemed to turn the hulk over on its side, and the aft section of the little cabin was torn to splinters by a bulletproof projectile. The huge messenger of destruction drove its way through the outer side of the cabin below the water line. The instant "boom" of the gun followed it.

There was no longer any doubt in the mind of Pauline. All finished city now—the little boat in which young officers the day before, their errand of buying a barge for a naval target. What a fool she had been not to have thought of that the moment she saw the sail! But what else could she have done but seek refuge here anyway? There was no other place. It was only the pity, the helplessness, the hopelessness of exchanging one form of death for another—of finding now, just where she had hoped to have found shelter and ultimate rescue—that harrowed her now.

She tried to make her way down into the cabin. She found the way clear. But inside there was havoc. Nothing was left but the old desk and one of the chairs. The roof of the cabin had crumpled in over the place where the hull had gone through. The place was

AN OPEN LETTER

To the House Wife:—

How many retail butchers try to educate their customers? How many are afraid to speak their minds?—Today when the high cost of living is the continual cry—does the housewife ever stop to figure that she could reduce this cost? Unquestionably she could, with a small effort—for instance, if she would do her marketing personally, see what she is getting and where it comes from; whether the market is clean, odorless; and otherwise attractive, and get meats of a superior class from which the cheaper cuts are possessed of all the nutritive qualities that the more expensive cuts possess.

In our first class hotels and cafes, where we go for an occasional dinner, do we select porterhouse steak, prime roast, or plain roast? No—we select from the menu dishes of a foreign name—a la that and lamb? They are really delicious, we never stop to realize that they come from a portion of the animal seldom used in the home.

These large hotels and restaurants do not pay their chefs fancy salaries for simply roasting beef or lamb, or boiling them, any cook can do that, but because of their ability to take the cheaper cuts of meat, and compound them into tempting and delicious dishes. If the housewife understood better the real value of the cheaper cuts of meats, there would be less talk about the high prices.

Prices are bound to be high as long as the demand is for the choice cuts in steaks and roasts, while the balance of the carcass practically goes begging.

If the market man could have the privilege of meeting the customer and explaining the different cuts of meat, a big saving could be made for both.

Here are three thoughts worth while:

FIRST—Economy does not mean vulgarity.

SECOND—Economy does not mean the surrender of the nutritive elements of the food—for nutrition is fundamental and essential. And last but not least—That the cheaper cuts have in them all the nutritive qualities that the more expensive cuts possess.

THE FOLLOWING PRICES WILL MAKE AN ATTRACTIVE SAVING IN YOUR MEAT BILL AND ARE WORTH YOUR CAREFUL CONSIDERATION.

THE BIG ANIMAL CIRCUS

Well Known Attraction Has All of the Circus Features With Animals.

The A. G. Barnes big 3-ring Wild Animal Circus will exhibit in Twin Falls on Wednesday, May 12th, giving performances at 2 and 8 p. m.

Much can be claimed for the originality and genuine merit of this big circus. There is all the pomp and splendor of the circus we have known in the past. All the glittering trappings, sawdust rings, inspiring music and grand entrance of stately horses, ponies, elephants, performers and clowns. Prudent and pink lemonade vendors cry their wares and add to the general good spirit, yet when the performance starts, one instantly recognizes a wide departure from the conventional, stereotyped routine which has prevailed since the earliest days of tented entertainment.

Instead of the usual, one sees the very unusual in the Barnes presentation. The principal acts are done by educated wild and domestic animals in two rings and a big steel-barred arena. These animal actions number and are trained to an amazing degree of proficiency. Such vim and dash do they put into their work that not a dull moment is experienced from the grand cavalcade entry until the final group of man-eating lions are driven to their cages.

There are acrobats, jugglers, aerial performers, high divers, bare back riders and all other forms of circus entertainment, but instead of people appearing in the acts, wild and domestic animals take their places. Lions, leopards, panthers, and bears ride galloping horses; sea lions juggle balls and other articles; dogs and monkeys jump from the top of the tent into nets; elephants act as clowns and do many other comical things; high school horses and beautiful ponies appear in brilliant dances and military drills, in fact almost every species of animal is shown as an actor.

Twenty-four, man-eating lions are introduced in one act, the most sensational animal act ever seen. Sixty tigers, leopards, panthers, jaguars and bears are presented by a coterie of young women trainers.

A great array of clean, clever comedy permeates the entire program, provided by fifty comely elephants, dogs, goats, monkeys, ponies, zebras and kangaroos. Dynamite--mules.

Glittering, mile-long street parade in which four bands take part is presented to the public at 10:30.

Big Merger Planned

and the Electric Bond & Share company to the Idaho public utilities commission is for Mr. Dahl to go before the commission and give a detailed explanation of the proposed merger.

When he takes the stand on Monday he will present the reasons for the proposed merger and will tell of the causes leading up to the important operations of many power companies in Idaho, which is the basis for the present merger.

Mr. Hawley advised him to tell everything he knew, including the Idaho-Oregon Light & Power company affair, wherein the bondholders are attempting to block the merger until they are paid in full for their investments.

In order to keep the merged companies from being designated as a part of the "power trust" a plan was evolved whereby the Electric Bond & Share company or the National Securities company would not be known in the Idaho merger and would not operate the merged companies as far as possible from the Electric Bond & Share plan was to have L. L. Nunn form an operating company, of which he was to be president and general manager. This company was to be the operating company for the National Securities company in Idaho.

After thrashing out the matter for two days the representatives of the power companies present at the Hotel Utah decided that the plan would not be feasible in that it would be a matter of common knowledge that the National Securities company was behind the merger and for the furtherance of the merger the operating expenses and fixed charges of a second operating company doing business for the National Securities company would cut into the profits of the power merger. For this reason the officers and attorneys of the National Securities company refused to sanction the formation of a new operating company and decided to place all the companies involved in the merger under the Electric Bond & Share.

Incidentally there was some trouble over the selection of an attorney to

Opens Saturday Morning, May 1, CONTINUES FOR JUST ONE WEEK

This May Sale will long be remembered by the people of this community. It's the first sale of its kind ever launched in this store. It comes at a time when most stores are getting regular prices for their goods and it presents buying economies that are seldom evident at the very beginning of the big selling season of the year.

Every effort has been put forth to eclipse all past selling events here in point of better values and a greater business. Prices have dropped to such a degree that buying will be an irresistible economy to you.

"Why this sale," you ask? It is the result of an over stock condition, principally in departments of imported goods, table linens, towelings, piece goods and silks. But to increase the interest in this event, we have involved all departments in the store, each of which offers a multitude of exceptional attractive values in seasonable and staple merchandise of finest quality. The prices quoted tell the story in a most convincing way. Don't miss an item.
