CHAUTAQUA BUSINESS FORCE

Merchants' Trade Journal Gives View in Impartial Way.

The following extracts are from a comprehensive article to business men by a business man—the editor of the Merchants' Trade Journal, of Des Moines, an authority in his field: "Any business man is glad to be able to say 'We have a good Chautauqua in our town' because the word Chautauqua is recognized as a symbol of culture, high ideals and broad thinking. There are things for any community to be proud of. But few people appreciate the Chautauqua as a business force, as most of them have never thought of it as such.

"Formerly it was thought that for one to gain an education it was necessary for him to drop his everyday work and go away to some great institution of learning. No one thought of having culture and training brought to the community, and while of course we fully appreciate the fact that for one to receive a liberal technical or professional education he must still go to the institutions of learning offering special courses of study along the lines that he wishes to follow. It is at the same time true that the possibility of hundreds and hundreds of communities throughout this country have been educated to a considerable degree and fitted to a higher place of thinking and living through the influence of this great education movement.

"Go into any community where a force of this kind has been at work for a number of years and you will find that the whole appearance of the community has been changed. We might see you town after town that we have watched personally and we could tell you of some of the splendid achievements of these towns which of which can be traced to this source.

"But the point we wish to make in this article should be of direct and special interest to every small merchant, man whose business success depends largely upon their community development. The Journal is glad to note that there is a tendency throughout the country to consider the subject of business and commerce from the Chautauqua platform. It is fitting to have the business man's professional business in, after all, the chief aim of a majority of our people. We mean business in the larger sense and not in the narrow sense of barter and trade, as the term is often misunderstood.

"Just how the question, 'How can we keep the young man at home?' is a question receiving not only the attention of parents but of educators and business men everywhere. But we want to say to our readers that in our opinion nothing can be done that will have a greater tendency toward causing more young men to stay at home in the smaller towns and rural communities, where they should be, than to give them the right kind of business teaching, just such teaching as they have a right to expect from this great forum, the Chautauqua; just, such teaching as they have a right to expect right in our own community. This great movement, the Chautauqua, is demonstrating every day the fact that the community can be bettered by giving the people thought and ideas that uplift and broaden them. Then if it is true that this thing is having a tendency to benefit the communities in a business way it is only good business.

MOTOR TOPICS

Honeycomb Trip Made Possible by Moon Cars.

The romantic marriage of William H. Lampert, wealthy mine owner of Salt Lake, Utah, to his childhood sweetheart in St. Louis several weeks ago has as a sequel an equally romantic honeymoon. The couple is now taking in a Moon roadster. They left St. Louis this week on their 2,000 mile overland journey to Julian, Cal., where they will make the famous trip. The honeymoon trip will be interspersed with hunting, camping and fishing. The roadster was especially fitted up by the Moon Motor Car company with special trunk on the rear, two tool boxes and a trunk on the rear to carry the sink, all the necessary camping equipment. Two roadsters and two tool boxes completed their equipment. Lampert and his bride were stopping at the Buchanan Annex in St. Louis, after their marriage and were planning to go to California by rail. An advertisement of Moon cars mentioned the trip by automobile. A ride in the Moon Six-40 roadster convinced them and the arrangements for the trip were immediately made. The Lamper's expect to journey on their new home by easy stages, taking about six weeks for their trip.

SILAGE BULLETIN

Reasons—Why—You—Should—Buy—n—Silos.

You need a silo because you wish to make more money out of your farm. You need it because you can't afford to be without it, as the silo is now a necessity, and to compete with the man who has one you must have one, too. The silo will reduce the cost of producing beef, pork, mutton and eggs. It will permit of keeping three times more stock on your farm than you now have. If you use a summer silo you will need less pasture and will therefore have more land for cultivation. It will "hold up" your soil and increase the value of your land. A silo saves labor, as with it you can feed more stock in much less time than by any other means and it can be done easier. Not only does the silo decrease the cost of production, but it increases the animals' production and the quality of the product. Times Are Right for the Silos. Conditions have changed in this country during the past few years and the silo has now become a necessity. Years ago when corn was worth from 10 to 15 cents a bushel, and hay from $4 to $5 per ton, who was a profitable farmer, but now with high priced grains and forage the silo is a necessity. The grain question forces the keepers of live stock to look for lower cost of production. The silo will do this, and it is now as much in necessity with the stock keeper and feeder as the self binder or combine is to the grain raiser. Silos is Not an Experiment. The silo is not an experiment. Twenty-five years ago it was found to be a good economic method of preserving stock food. If the silo is now a good thing, why don't we have more of them? It is due in part to the fact that silage has no market quotation. It certainly is a happy thought to know that here is a farm product that cannot be cornered. If the great markets of the country bought and sold ensilage as they do wheat and corn, we are sure there would be more silos on the farm than there are, today. Value of Corn Ensilage. Comparing ensilage with hay, grain roots and pasture, and basing them on their present market value, corn ensilage is worth between $6 and $7 per ton. There are many other silage crops, however, we must consider value, feeding the value of corn fodder, and while these are true and important factors they are hard to fix in figures. They may be termed as Succulency, Aid to Digestion, Convenience in Feeding, Soil Fertility, Economy of Storage Space, Stock Carrying Capacity of Land and Keeping Quality of the Forage. Like Pasture. Pasture grass when analyzed shows no marked abundance of nutriment, and yet we know the beneficial results in stock when they have a supply of this food. The cooling, appetizing, effect of ensilage on the animal's digestion when fed moderately will offset the dangers of overfeeding and will tend to keep the stock in a thrifty condition. Silo Labor-Saving. The silo is a labor-saving device in feeding stock, and to illustrate this we wish to quote some figures on the time required to feed forty cows at the Nebraska Experiment Station. One man went up into the silo, threw down the ensilage put it into the feed carrier, and fed forty cows in thirty-five minutes. To feed the same forty cow fodder resulted two men and a team—one and one-quarter hours where they had to go out in the field and get the forage from the stack, haul it in, and throw it into the yard or rack. When we consider the 180 days of hand feeding, this is a large item. Silage Cheapest to Store. The economy of storage for fodder is seldom considered but at this time of high cost of building it is of no small importance. A ton of corn ensilage in a thirty-foot silo requires about fifty cubic feet of space, while a ton of hay in a more regular silo requires about four hundred cubic feet. This means that hay requires eight times as much space for storage as corn silage. To cut, cure and put tame hay into the barn costs about $1.50 per ton, while to put corn ensilage into the silo costs about 75 cents per ton. Keeping Quality of Silage. The keeping quality of corn silage in another factor which adds to its value, for experiments have shown that it is good for several years after being stored. The Indiana Experimental Station found corn silage good at the end of six years. Mr. Gurler of DeKalb, Illinois, who kept fifty cows and produced milk which sold in Chicago for 12 cents per quart, found old silage better than new. When we consider all the merits of corn silage and the present prices of feedstuffs it is safe to place its value at 37 per cent.

SILOS AND STAGE

The most common method of preserving forage for use during the winter is to dry them out, or "cure" them, as they are called. Dry forage, however, is not the best.

The silo is an airtight structure used for the preservation of silage. It is a cylindrical structure with a conical bottom.

The advantages of the silo are: (1) It keeps the silage in any kind of weather. (2) It is near at hand and does not have to be hauled.

The location of the silo is very important. The silage is fed every day throughout the winter.

The size of the silo will depend on the number of animals to be fed and the amount of silage to be stored.

Sufficient silage should be provided to each acre of corn crop. The silage should be stored in a silo.

The economy of storage depends upon the capacity of the silo. The silage should be stored in a silo.

The most suitable silage is made from corn. The silage should be stored in a silo.

The importance of movement. The 2,000 miles of public roads in the United States only about 200,000 miles have been given a hard surface.

NOTES ON CHAUTAUQUA

The Lewistown, Chautauqua has the permanent backing of the Commercial Union of Lewistown.

Ashtland and Gladstone Chautauqua at Oregon City, Oregon, are the oldest of the West.

The assembly at Red Bluff, Cal., is the only one within sight of the only active volcano on the American continent.

Chittelo will carry 21 people with his hand this year. Last season there were 12.

Richard A. Nichols, who will lecture at Chautauqua here, is full of humor and good stories and is an orator second to none.

Two towns in Southern California are so close to the immense orange grove of the Lewistown Chautauqua that it is from Los Angeles that it is from Lewistown.

A Chautauqua will likely be held in Lewistown in the heart of their Lewistown park, that wonderful and beautiful frequented region in the north-west corner of Montana.

Upland will be the first town to have a Chautauqua. The Lewistown Chautauqua will be the first to be visited while in Palo Alto.

Chautauqua has been the most successful of any other town in the Lewistown territory.

CULTIVATION NECESSARY FOR THE ONION

Using One-Horse Cultivator for Cultivating Onions and Turnips.

(By R. B. HIRSHING.) Cultivation is necessary for three purposes, namely: To prevent the growth of weeds, or to destroy those which have already started; to form a loose surface which prevents evaporation and also allows the free development of the bulb's adventitious roots, thus promoting the chemical and other changes that prepare the plant foods for assimilation.

Early in the spring when the ground is not wet the cultivator and wheel hoe must be started but not until the ground is in good condition. The soil must be stirred frequently. Until the bulbs are well-grown, cultivating can hardly be overdone. It is always desirable to stir the soil as soon as possible after a rain to prevent the formation of a crust on the surface.

There are two classes of attachments to wheel hoes, those cutting horizontally and those cutting vertically. The former are the best for cultivating when small, because they throw the soil away from rather than to the plants. When the bulbs begin to bottom, vertical cutting attachments may be used, being careful not to run deep enough to injure the tops.

When onions are grown in large quantities it is necessary to plant them about twenty-four or thirty inches apart to admit of horse cultivation, otherwise if only for family use, they may be planted about eighteen inches apart and can be worked by hand.

They should be harvested promptly at maturity. Harvesting should be begun when most of the necks have turned yellow and are considerably withered. Although there is generally still quite a number of green tops when the main crop is ready for marketing, the bulbs of those that thoroughly ripen plant along with the others. It is not safe to delay the harvesting on account of a few green tops. If left too long in the ground

COMFORT IS CASH IN DAIRY BUSINESS

Easy to Figure Out How Much Noise and Confusion Will Cost in Milk Pail.

In the dairy business there is money in quietness. One may figure out very closely how much noise and confusion cost. Weigh the milk for a day when the cows are quiet and take a test of them on another day when the weather conditions are about the same, but stir the cows up and get them excited. You will be surprised to see how much less milk you will get when the cows are all worked up than you get when they were still. Not only that, but the milk taken under unfavorable conditions will not be as rich as you took before.

On stormy days it helps to get the cows down to the barn and shelter them. To be out in a heavy rainstorm, especially if it is cold, will cost much milk. Nor will the milk that is given be as good as that taken on a warm pleasant day. It costs a little for feed and grain to take the herd in the barn but it doesn't cost as much as doing the loss of milk, which results from having the herd out in a storm. Cold, raw winds are quite as bad as a rainstorm. A steady hard wind is a drain on a cow's vitality, more so than one who had never felt the matter such attention might think.

Feeding Western Lambs. If a man has shelter and clover or alfalfa hay and corn and a little pumpkins as a stockman, he may safely undertake the feeding of a few western lambs. It is a business that pays fair profits, takes one year with another, and the certainty of making the land better adds zest to the business.

COLLEGE TRAINING WORKED A MIRACLE

Pennsylvania Woman Well Paid for Trouble in Educating Her Farm Hand.

A woman who had sent her farm hand to state college got the expense money back in one year. She tells me that his knowledge of cows has worked a small miracle. He tells me that milk makes a formula for the feed each cow should have and weights and measures results in a fashion that fairly astounded the neighbors.

Once a cow was a cow, but now a poor cow very quickly becomes best when his knowledge of cows has worked a small miracle. VETERINARIANS IGNORE IDAHO

Nebraska and Iowa Officials Positively Decline to Accept Them.

Reports are still coming of the serious condition of the swine industry and many of the graduate veterinarians are anticipating an unwarranted sale of hog carcasses in the near future. The disease has already been reported. According to these authorities, it has been the cause of the disease that if precautionary measures are not immediately taken to stamp out the infection it spreads rapidly and further outbreaks may be expected from these districts, and it usually takes from 10 to 15 days for the disease to develop.

Nebraska and Iowa are the latest states to refuse the inspection certificates of State Veterinarian Hodge, a graduate.

Not far from... The Illinois state veterinarian of Iowa writes the governor to the effect that the state of Idaho would not under any circumstances accept certificates from non-graduate veterinarians. A part of the letter reads: "I take the liberty of writing you to ask if the state of Iowa cannot accept shipments of livestock from your state inspected by or under a non-graduate state veterinarian, nor do I think the states of Nebraska and Iowa will accept your livestock under the existing circumstances."

I can also inform that all commercial and private veterinarians, graduate, which makes it difficult for the work it possibly could be done.

Nebraska Firm... Lawrence C. Klein, state veterinarian of Nebraska, has written to the effect that Nebraska will accept no certificates issued by non-graduates from your state or any other, if we know it.

Such work, coupled with inclosures, has got other states in a bad fix and possibly may not recognize Idaho for interstate shipments of livestock.

SILCO BULLETINS

Suggestions on Feeding Corn Silage.

Corn ensilage is a food which has been termed "grass for the cow." It can be used very much as pasture in the feeding of domestic animals. The analysis of good corn silage, however, will show it to be richer than a great many of the pasture grasses and therefore will go farther in feeding.

As soon as the silo is fitted the feeding operation may start and though it be in the feeding process, it is best not to give any food until the animal is well settled. Corn silage is a food which has been termed "grass for the cow." It can be used very much as pasture in the feeding of domestic animals. The analysis of good corn silage, however, will show it to be richer than a great many of the pasture grasses and therefore will go farther in feeding.

Corn silage may be fed out of doors in banks, in the stall, or in fact any place where animals can eat it without waste. It is best to feed silage inside, as some will freeze and will be hard for the stock to masticate, although the silage need not be frozen. Feeding silage in the stall is the best method of feeding silage. It will not injure the animals, but frozen food is not easy for them to consume.

In feeding silage to a very young calf, it is best to mix it with some of the other food. It may be given twice a day in rations from 10 to 15 pounds at a feeding of 20 to 25 cents per day. Some large animals will take as high as 40 to 20 pounds of silage per day and make good use of it. In feeding fattening calves, silage may be given twice a day in smaller rations ranging from 10 to 15 pounds at a feeding of 20 to 25 cents per day. Some large animals will take as high as 40 to 20 pounds of silage per day and make good use of it.

Feed the silage so that the animal will eat it up quickly and it spoils or freezes when exposed to the air for several days.

Since Doesn't Taint Milk... It is advisable to feed silage to cows when the milk is used for condensed milk and all other uses are obtained to the milk. It is best to feed silage to cows when the milk is used for condensed milk and all other uses are obtained to the milk.

The blood tends to draw off the impurities of the milk and the milk becomes affected when an abnormal condition exists.

by many unfortunates, unappreciated feeders... A dairyman became more educated in the method of storing and feeding of silage packing well around and edges while filling, and feeding about two inches off the top, keeping the surface level, the American Colony method of restricting on the feeding of silage to cows from which their milk was obtained, until there is no restriction imposed by them upon the feeding of silage, with the possible exception of a few localities where silage is not judiciously fed.

RAIN MEANS MUCH TO IDAHO

Rains Will Bring Thousands of Dollars Into Pockets of Farmers.

The recent rains meant many a dollar in the pockets of fruit growers and farmers of Idaho, and State Horticultural Inspector Gray Graham, yesterday following a trip through the fruit section of the state, said: "Nothing happens now to injure the fruit, which is not likely to be injured by a very large crop—probably the largest in the history of the state."

Over in the western part of the state, the "topping" crop is being harvested, and it is being reported that the crop is unusually large and of good quality.

SPARE INSECT-EATING BIRDS

Dr. Isaac Must-Be Taken to Save Quail, Ground and Pheasants from Complete Annihilation.

The time has come when every sportsman should get away with a gun for five years at least. Col. G. O. Shields during a recent lecture on "Birds and Animals of America."

Colonel Shields argued that drastic measures must be put into effect if quail, grouse, pheasants and prairie chickens are to be saved from extinction. The annihilation of these birds, he said, would mean untold poverty resulting from the scarcity of game, which would be eaten by insects.
