TO HELP MEXICO SAVE HERSELF.

His decision that "watchful waiting" must give way to "helpful action" was President Wilson's approval of even the most outspoken journalistic critics of his Mexican policy. "Considerations of humanity, the relief of a famished and broken people, indignation with the hawking guerrilla chiefs who fight for their own land, anger for the wrongs suffered by our undefeated citizens in Mexico, the enormous interests or ruined American exporters in Mexico—all these," declares the New York State...

Yet the New York Tribune and Chicago Tribune, those of the standing and prestige of a situation calls for action, argue strongly and at length to the effect that the call is no more urgent than it has been for months, that action which should have been taken earlier might well have been deferred at this time on account of the more serious issue with Germany, and that there is all the more reason to get the army and navy into a better state of preparedness in order to be able to make our words good in both directions. That his own "watchful waiting" policy, too, is largely responsible for the Mexican situation which President Wilson would not end in the opinion of several critics, including the Albany Knickerbocker Press, New York Journal of Commerce, Brooklyn Standard Union, Philadelphia Inquirer, Baltimore American, Washington Times, Detroit Free Press, and St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Hill, the attorney at law of the Lincoln creamery company, was in policy. In his his countrymen may well take pride. In his statement of June 2, addressed to the American people and evidently intended also for cure before the His Orange, President Wilson points out that "Mexico is apparently no nearer a solution of her tragical troubles than she was when the revolution was first kindled." Meanwhile, "she has been swept by civil war as if by fire," and, in short, "its streets and without a government." In these circumstances, says the president, we can not stand idly by. And he feels it his duty to "publicly and very solemnly call upon the leaders of factions in Mexico to act together and to act promptly for the relief and redemption of their prostrate country. I feel it to be my duty to tell them that if they can not accommodate their differences and unite for the relief of their country within a very short time, this government will be constrained to decide what means should be employed by the United States in order to help Mexico save herself and serve her people."

President Wilson's decision is held by the editors and Washington correspondents to be due in large part to recent Red-Cross and consular bulletins and the reports of special agents. The problem as relief in Mexico, as said by Red Cross workers to be more difficult than that encountered in the relief of San Francisco, the Messina earthquake, or Belgium. Red-Cross bulletins based upon state department reports told of frightful conditions, constantly growing worse, in cities like Monterey, Tampico, Jalisco, and Acapulco the people are on the verge of wholesale starvation. In Mexico City, 100,000 people were reported suffering from hunger on long days as starch. Such food as there is brings fabulous prices. There have been serious riots and epidemics of smallpox and typhus.

Many who editors predict armed intervention as the only way the president can carry out his purpose in Mexico, a New York Sun correspondent hears that he will first observe for a few weeks the effect of his statement on the Mexican leaders. He fears that that there are no evidences of a disposition on the part of the factions to get together for the common good of the country, an embargo will be placed on the shipment of arms to Mexico. Meantime the administration will try to locate a strong group of men to take hold in Mexico during the period of reconstruction.

In default of early statements from revolutionary leaders, "an interesting indication of Mexican opinion," says the president, "is the declaration that 'our people will never stand for any government inspired by foreigners, no matter how humanitarian or noble the motives of such foreign nation appear to be.'" An Associated Press correspondent points out that the assumption that the Mexican people would unite against intervention "is combated by those in sympathy with the president's purpose." "Only a small proportion of the population is approximately 15,000,000 have taken up arms, and the intervention is advanced that the great majority, plucked by hunger and suffering from other deprivations, would welcome intervention by the United States."—Literary Digest.

THE REED AND THE BUTTERFLY

An Allegory in Verse, Whose Meaning is Understood by Those Who Know
Touching upon the transient friendships made in the 'Columbia' and summer watering places.

By W. H. Head, Alhambra, California.

A Rush went forth from the river-bank,
And walked the wide world through,
He was lonely and sad for he felt behind
Fair mates that were good and true;
But a duty he had a burden strong,
The he bore with him day by day—
"I want to help and to ease the world of folk
That he roamed from his home away."
From the ooze of the brine, and the dump of the slime,
He had formed a crystalline pearl,
"And to tell of the birth mid its beauty slow,"
Were to quiet the world's mad swirl;
And so though he went for his duty's sake,
He was brave, nor complained with a sigh;
His story he told, and his song he sang,
With ever a humph and

But across his path a butterfly flew,
And she rested herself on his strength,
And her presence a gleam of sunshine cast
On the gathering shadows' length.
On the life of that reel and the gentle hum
Of her wings of silver and blue,
Made his heart beat strong with a future hope,
Of a friendship helpful and true.

In his days' round turn, and the nights' lone time,
The hum of thought that was high,
She inspired in him, in his darkest hours,
Were a dew and stars sky.
But one even as the sun went his westward way,
She flew, and the orb was set,
Away from his life to a far away clime,
And she said, "I shall not forget."

And so strong had she been in her quest,
To lift him to heights sublime,
That he thought, "It may truly be for friendship help."
From now till the end of time,
But he said, "These butterflies come from afar,
They pause for sip and are gone,
They are butterflies, mere, and their art is to please,
And forget as soon as their own."

But this butterfly seems a different thing,
And she shows such firm and strong,
That to suspect she'll forget, and cease to help,
Is to do her infinite wrong.
She will not forget, but this friendship pearl
Will endure as long as time;
In exchange of hope and mutual thought,
We will help in life's task sublime.

But alack! alas! 'twas the same old tale:
A butterfly still was she;
She forgot, she forgot her friendship song,
And the way lay long and lone,
Now, the reed is back in his river home,
Along with his true mates fair,
But he wonders why such friendship songs,
Must ever melt into vicarious air.

ROAD MODELS

Many Kinds of Roads Illustrated by Models.

The exhibit of road models shown for the first time in 1909 by the office of public roads of the department at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition has been in such a way that hundreds of thousands of people have seen these models at a dozen or more of the big agricultural exhibitions, and they have traveled much of the length and breadth of the United States on demonstration trips. A comprehensive exhibit now being made at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, Cal., people who have seen these miniature model roads not only appreciate the benefits of such improved roads but at the same time understand the methods of their construction. In fact, these models may have a still greater usefulness, they have been photographed and form the basis of illustrations of the new United States road model of agriculture bulletin No. 220, "Road Models."

The models as a rule, are constructed on a scale of 1 inch to 100 feet so that each model is one twentieth the length of the actual road which it represents. An ordinary road is built and graded, the brick, concrete, asphalt, block, macadam, sand clay, gravel and earth roads. Still other models show the processes of maintenance, regrading and bituminous macadam construction by the mixing and penetration methods. Recent additions to the exhibit illustrate road location and roadside treatment, drainage, strengthening, and suitable foundations, etc.

The history of road construction, including with the early methods employed in Italy and France, is followed with discussions and illustrations of the most modern ways of road building. With the widely varying conditions in the United States the scope of road building is necessarily large, and in many cases roads must be constructed largely of the material at hand. The bulletin Road Models, is applicable to a wide range of conditions.

In the section dealing with earth roads the subject of the split-log drain is treated as follows: A suitable drain can be made from a log 4 or 8 inches in diameter and from 6 to 8 feet long. It should be carefully split and the ends, with the flat sides vertical and facing to the front, connected by stakes. The halves, though of some length, are joined on that one end of the rear half is from 16 to 20 inches nearer the center of the road than the corresponding end of the front half. An ordinary road is built and graded, the brick, concrete, asphalt, block, macadam, sand clay, gravel and earth roads. Still other models show the processes of maintenance, regrading and bituminous macadam construction by the mixing and penetration methods. Recent additions to the exhibit illustrate road location and roadside treatment, drainage, strengthening, and suitable foundations, etc.

be lifted by one man. The best material is dry red cedar, though red elm, and walnut are excellent, while box elder, soft maple, elm, or willow are superior to oak, hickory, or ash. A plank is usually placed on the crown of the road to strengthen the drag and furnish a place for the driver to stand. After a little practice a man can learn how best to shift his weight so as to make the drag cut, spread, and pack the earth properly.

Filling the ruts by dragging up one side of the road and down the other is all that should be undertaken the first time, but this should be repeated by plowing the rut. As a mile of road can be dragged in a few hours, this method of maintenance is simple and inexpensive. If the drag is used for grading with the road machine, fairly good earth roads can be built at a small expense. Dragging is done for 50 cents per mile in some parts of the country. At this rate a mile of earth road can be dragged once a month for 60 annually. Some remarkable results have been accomplished with the drag without the aid of the road machine. Farmers' bulletin 537, "The Road Drag and How to Use It," should be read by all interested in this publication will be sent free to persons applying to the editor and chief of the division of publications, U. S. department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as the department's supply lasts.

HEALTH AND HYGIENE

Hot weather is the time of danger for the babies. The record of the state for 1914 was better than ever before, but even four years had died during the four summer months in Idaho, nearly half of them from summer diarrhoea. One-half the deaths of babies from this cause would have been given proper food.

The only perfect food for a baby is mother's milk. Few babies get babies die from one end of the breast. Breast fed babies seldom have the trouble which is so fatal to bottle fed babies during hot weather. There are very few mothers who can nurse their babies if they try to do so under the direction of a competent physician and breast feeding is the one great thing which can prevent the loss of thousands of babies.

When it is for any reason impossible to secure mother's milk for a baby, fresh cow's milk which is properly modified and pasteurized, is the best substitute. Milk may be pasteurized by placing the bottles in a double boiler and putting in a thermometer and heating until the water is 150 degrees. The mother should then be allowed to suck at the breast for the first 24 hours as to keep the temperature between 140 and 150 degrees for thirty minutes. This is necessary to kill the harmful germs which may get into even the best milk.

The same result can be reached almost as well if you have not properly modified and pasteurized, the best substitute. Milk may be pasteurized by placing the bottles in a double boiler and putting in a thermometer and heating until the water is 150 degrees. The mother should then be allowed to suck at the breast for the first 24 hours as to keep the temperature between 140 and 150 degrees for thirty minutes. WATER SITUATION ON SALMON

Only Irrigation Tract Gets Commenced Last Week.

Early this week the huge gates at the dam were swung open and the waters which have been impounded there this spring and previous springs, started on their way to bring relief to the burning crops on the Salmon tract.
The grasses are not suffering alone now, for filing has appeared in numerous fields of grain, to such an extent that the injury is already very marked. Particularly is this true of fields of grain which were sowed early in the spring on land with comparatively shallow soil. In such instances, where the early growth has been rapid, the grain has not withstood the enforced drought as well as some of the smaller grains or the grain on lands with deeper soil. That this condition is more serious than many realize, is the opinion of some farmers, for they point out in justification of their belief, the fact that unless the situation is relieved with more rain, it will be a week or ten days yet before the farmers had reached all parts of their grain with water, and that the drought will have done irreparable damage to parts of the fields by that time.
Although the water company has announced that it will divide the available water into two runs, of about twelve days' or two weeks' duration each, it is thought probable that this plan will be abandoned. Such an arrangement, it was thought would allow the application of the first run of water to the grasses, and the second to the grains. It is apparent, however, that the grain crops cannot be held over longer without water. It is probable that the supply of water in the reservoir will be exhausted by July 10th, and it is possible that water will not again flow in the canals of the Salmon river system until late next fall when the fall rains may raise the water above the tunnel to an extent sufficient to allow of a delivery of water for domestic purposes.

As near as can be ascertained, the first cutting of alfalfa is running, on many farms no attempt is being made to get a first cutting at all. The prospect for a profitable crop of grass seed is the feature of the present situation that is the most encouraging at this time. Many of the grain crops will prove profitable while other crops of grain will no doubt perish completely with only the one run of water for them.
The canal company issued a "Notice to Water Users" early in the week, signed by E. B. Darlington, watermaster, and G. S. Hall, president of the canal company, which follows:
"Notice is hereby given that water for irrigation will be turned into the Salmon River Canal system on or about June 14. The increase in crop this season is approximately 35,000 acres and it is estimated the delivery over the measuring weirs will be about 9 inches per acre.

It is planned to divide the available water into two runs or periods; the first for grasses and such grains as now need water, the second for maturing grains and other crops.
The weather and conditions of crops and the wishes of the majority of users. The endeavor will be to furnish every acre entitled to water with its proportionate allotment, within the period governed by average irrigation requirements.
"Irrigation heads will be limited to the capacity of the system and the ability of the user to take care of the water efficiently, and as far as possible reasonable requests will be complied with, on the usual two days' notice. Irrigation from one tract to another will be permitted within reasonable limits. Measurements of water used will be made at frequent intervals and amounts computed at end of each week. A memorandum of the quantity used will then be issued to each water user, and when the full allotment is drawn upon any entry of the water for that entry will be shut off. Users are asked to give as much notice as possible in advance of their requirements, thereby enabling us to better regulate delivery and prevent waste shortage.
"It is urged that water users have their ditches cleaned and regulating devices in good order, and their land well prepared to receive water. It is every important that diligence be used in handling water and every effort made to avoid waste.
"The co-operation of all is asked in the careful and intelligent application of water in order the most beneficial results may be obtained from its use.
"All users are urged to remember that the run off into the reservoir this season is less than twenty-five per cent of the average, and had to call for their allotment of this year's limited supply until their crops are in actual need of water."
The small run-off of the Salmon river this year will reduce the yearly average flow of the river considerably. Using the government's figures on the flow of the river for the years during which measurements were taken, an average for that time of 12,500 acre-feet per year, the average will be reduced by this year's small run-off to approximately 10,000 acre feet, assuming the company's statement to be correct, that this year's run-off is less than twenty-five per cent of the average for former years.
Of the some 4,200 acre feet of water in the reservoir available the first of the week, over thirty per cent or between thirteen and fourteen thousand acre feet was held over from last year.—Hollister Herald.

CHIGGERS, OR RED BUGS

Attack the Skin of Humans and Cause Severe Itching and Inflammation.

Throughout portions of the South, East and the Central states the chigger, or red bug, scientifically known as the harvest mite, and which is microscopic in size, often attacks a person when walking through long grass or other vegetation. They do not do any particular harm to the body, but attack the exposed portions first. Thus the forehead has in many parts of the South and East has become a particularly sore spot. They enter the large sweat tubes or pores of the skin, where their progress is necessarily slow, and a few hours later the spot where they entered becomes very painful or causes intense itching.
Chiggers are most abundant and troublesome in the Tropics, but are generally distributed in the Gulf states up to the Mississippi river to Missouri and Illinois, and through the Atlantic coast states to northern New Jersey. Farmers' bulletin No. 671 by the United States department of agriculture, harvest mites or "chiggers," states that these pests are most bothersome between the months of June and October.
The large infested spots which the presence of the mites, but are layers of skin cases are often disclosed as bites, nettle rash, urticaria, or "chiggers" and closely resemble "hives" of fresh run of some mosquitoes. A characteristic of the harvest mite attack is that on the second or third day a minute water blister usually develops in the middle of the infested area.
To walk among blackberry or other shrubbery, or to come in contact with grasses or similar herbage along streams or pools or ponds on edge of marshes, or under trees near such places, the mites infest, is to invite an attack. It is obvious, therefore, that the best preventive is to avoid exposure. If a bath in hot water, or water containing salt or strong soap, however, is taken within a few hours after exposure, all ill effects will be relieved.
Sulphur is the best preventive for chiggers. It has been found, nevertheless, that a solution of a weak walking through vegetation is attacked mostly from the knees downward, and into the shoes and stockings, these parts are obliterated to a great extent. Naphthalene is also successfully used in the same manner, and is a safeguard against several other forms of interesting tropical insect pests.

After a person has become exposed to an attack of the harvest mites, an application to the affected parts of a moderate amount of a solution of ammonia is possibly the best counter-irritant. Because the poison secreted by the mites is acid, other counter-irritants such as bicarbonate of soda, or common cooking soda or saleratus, may be substituted in saturated solution. The following is a good formula: A mixture of iodine or collodion should be lightly applied.
Ridding Fields of Mites.
Where a large area is to be rid of mites it is recommended by the bulletin that the grass be closely cut, weeds eliminated, and useless herbage mowed as closely as possible, so as to expose the mites to the sun. It may be practical to spray the grass and other plants after cutting, with flowers of sulphate or a dilute spray of kerosene emulsion in which sulphur has been mixed.

Where a large area is to be treated, dust blowers such as are used in covering concrete with incense powder can be used for distributing flowers of sulphur. Some of the large blowers throw a fan-shaped discharge about 8 feet and effect an area of 100 square feet. The dust of sulphur is not great. The dusters will run at 150 to 200.
The harvest mite belongs to the class of spiders, ticks and the like. This mite feeds on aphids, small caterpillars, and, in the case of one species, on the eggs of grass-hoppers or locusts. One species hibernates in the soil or other sheltered locations, and in the spring deposits its eggs, there being but one generation produced in a year. The eggs are usually brown and spindle-shaped and laid in the ground, the larva microscopic in size, blood red, and shaped somewhat like a common tick and hatches into a small mite with three pairs of legs, tipped with two of three prominent claws. When the larva has become attached to its insect host, it grows rapidly, and when full fed seeks a convenient shelter to change its shape without molting. Within a few weeks it emerges as a full-grown chigger or mite, of eight legs instead of six found on the larva.

HIGH PRICES KILLED
The General says:
 When we started the field the price of good roofing was too high. With our new mill, enormous output and efficient management we were able to sell our roofing at a reasonable price. This has been done 15 such a great extent that high prices have been killed. Now you get the highest quality at a reasonable price when you buy

Certain-teed Roofing

But there is another great danger. Unknown goods with unknown brands and unguaranteed quality are being offered at prices that are too cheap for safety. It is a long time before you will know when you buy these cheap goods. A few elements of cheap prices are at high prices. Know that the company whose name appears on the goods has the ability to make a good quality roofing at a reasonable price, and that it is guaranteed by them to be the best roofing possible to make that the company does not sell anything at a higher price, and that the price at which it is guaranteed is a reasonable, but a cheap price.

 Notice is hereby given that J. Jesse Jones was found guilty of the crime of grand larceny, on the 12th day of July, 1914, in the district court of the fourth judicial district, in and for Twin Falls County, State of Idaho. I sentenced to the state penitentiary a term of 1 to 5 years, will make application to the honorable state judge at the next regular sitting of said court for the reduction of said sentence to a term not exceeding 30 days. badly damaged, and outside of a few Junior braves the men escaped injury.

After it to have two new churches this season that is new church building. The first will be the new church building condition as bad a condition as that of the church buildings playing to empty houses. When churches build on the idea of not serving a particular denomination will be saved and that crosses are the whole business then the devil gets in his work and makes money business out of the whole bunch. What the world needs is practical religion—good men and good women. Men and women who are practical Christians act instead of a lot of fool things in commemoration of some event that took place a good many years ago. The church will throw no obstacle in any man's religion, nor will care if a hundred churches are built, but if they are poorly attended then let it be re-located, or because there are not enough people of a religious turn to fill them.

BUICK EXCURSION TO CONTACT

Twin Falls Boosters, headed by E. L. Lind, spend day in Mammoth.

Sunday was "Buick" day in Contact, and there were little Buicks, big Buicks and Buicks of every kind and description, harked on the town's main street. It was the annual outing of these machines, and Mr. Lind, who is Twin Falls agent for this auto, led the charge of the run.

Leaving Twin Falls at 8:30 o'clock, about 30 machines, bearing in the neighborhood of 200 people, headed for Contact by way of the Salmon river dam, where an hour or more was spent in showing the dam itself and visiting other points of interest. At 1:30 p. m. the first machine reached Contact, closely followed by others, with a truck bringing up the rear.

Every machine carried the name of "Buick," and Mr. Lind bore a happy smile when he found that all had made the run without mishap of any kind, and it was a happy party that camped on Main street.

The autoists brought their own lunches and the Contact Commercial club supplied a large tank of steam heat coffee. Their appetites appeared good, many of the machines were used on the run to the hotel and properties of the Nevada Copper Mining, Milling & Power company, while others took to the hills, in and about town.

At the Mammoth the autoists were shown every courtesy by the men in charge, showing the big compressor in operation and seeing the actual work of mining with power driven machines.

For many of the party, it was the first time they had ever had an opportunity to see actual mining, and with others it was their first trip to a mining camp. Much interest was expressed on all sides, and while all had heard of Contact, the expression of interest was not a blank to the district to fully appreciate it.

HOTEL TO STAY CLOSED

Portello man in bad with local opinion.

According to the decision handed down yesterday by the state supreme court the Hannock hotel must remain closed. Some weeks ago, following the arrest of W. F. Kaska and Dick Jones, who were charged with the operation of a bar in the hotel, Judge Guheen of the district court issued an injunction closing the entire hotel, and the two men are charged with twelve counts for alleged violation of the liquor law. The well known hotel was locked and the keys placed in the hands of Sheriff Cooper. Following the injunction, the attorneys for W. F. Kaska and Dick Jones, who are in the supreme court, and yesterday that body rendered a decision, which was appealed, and sustained the action of the lower court. Hence the hotel, which must remain closed until final disposition of the case against W. F. Kaska and Dick Jones.

The supreme court held that Judge Guheen's injunction does not violate the rights guaranteed the defendant under the Fourteenth amendment to the constitution, and is not an unreasonable exercise of the police power of the state.

The hotel proprietor had not up to the conclusion that his constitutional rights had been violated because his entire establishment had been closed. In that connection the supreme court said:

"If the guests in a hotel in a prohibition district are to be given the views of a salaried because of their registering at or patronizing the hotel, then the hotel is not a cloak to hide the illegal sale of liquor, but it is a means to an end, an instrumentally inseparable connected with a part of the business of selling liquor. In this view it becomes as much a common nuisance as the room in which the liquor is kept and from whence it is sold."

Taking that view the supreme court held that the entire hotel was a nuisance and could legally be closed pending the final outcome of the criminal case brought against the proprietor.

In handing down its decision the supreme court construed and upheld an act of the Eleventh session of the Idaho legislature which made any house used for the illegal dispensing of liquors, and every vessel, implement or article of furniture connected with the business of selling liquor. The law provided that when an action is brought against any person for maintaining a nuisance, an injunction might issue from the district court, temporarily or permanently enjoining

RATE CASE POSTPONED

Action on Petition of Consumers is Delayed.

Representatives of the various power companies in southern Idaho, and large delegation of power users from the district west of Caldwell, comprising the Idaho Electric Association, various irrigation plants, met before the public utilities commission this morning for the purpose of going into the hearing in relation to fixing power rates. It appeared to the commission on representations made by the power companies and the power users that a reasonable rate, and the desire to complete this data and gather statistics as shown by the season's operation so as to determine what should be a reasonable rate, that it would be necessary to postpone the hearing to some date that would enable all parties to work with the purpose in view of getting further data to aid the commission in their determination.

This agreement was the result of a conference held between the power companies and power users, and on the showing made was satisfactory to the commission that it would be to postpone the hearing until Oct. 11, the company in the meantime having agreed with the power users and having stipulated with the commission that the stipulation heretofore made in regard to the retroactive effect of rates as finally established should apply for the entire season. In other words, the power user will only have to pay the first half of his bill until the rate is finally fixed, and then on the determination of the commission of the rate that shall finally go into effect, and such rate shall govern for the entire season. It is in the desire of the power company, after it has gathered its data and put into effect as low a rate as possible consistent with their investment and that it will give a reasonable rate to them and at the same time permit the power company to operate at a reasonable cost. Just what this rate would be could not be arrived at or approximated at this time, but the consensus of opinion was in favor of a rate that would be satisfactory to both power producer and power consumer. Frank D. Ryan acted as spokesman for many of the last year and individual users. Mr. Richardson stated that the company which he represents, the Idaho Electric Association, operates many large power plants throughout the country, has never after taking charge of properties, raised rates, and that it is the desire of the association of the companies and with the full cooperation of the users that the adjustment of the rates will put them with the rest of the state who are called to use current for irrigation purposes. Power of any sort, light or household current, is not a luxury, but a necessity, the surplus of any light and power company was not dependent on the company but the consumer and the cooperation. It further appeared that the company and the power users association would co-operate and work together in the gathering and tabulating of data for the hearing before the commission, and that it was the hope of all concerned that all consumers would be all within their power to aid the companies and the association in the collection and compiling of the data.

The companies making appearance through representatives were Mr. Richardson for the National Securities Corporation, Mr. E. P. Hines for E. & S. Share, the Idaho-Oregon Light & Power, the Idaho-Oregon Light & Power, the Idaho Power & Light and the Utah Power & Light. Mr. Hines for the Great Shoshone & Southern Idaho, Mr. E. Hughes for the Idaho Electric Association, Mr. E. P. Hines for the Idaho Power & Light; Frank D. Ryan for the Lower Snake River Power Users' association which includes the Lower Snake River Power Users' association, Ontario, Payette, Now Plymouth, Parma, Nysa and Emmett—Capital News.

BERMUDA GRASS

Valuable Pasture Crop in the South, Planting and Control.

Bermuda grass, called in some localities wire grass is at the same time a valuable forage plant and a serious pest, depending upon the way it is growing. It is the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of the grass family, Bermuda being a most valuable forage plant, but when it becomes a pest, it is the most injurious to crops and is properly recognized as a weed. It is a native of the island of Bermuda, and is now spreading rapidly by rootstock in southern Idaho, and is becoming a pest in fields of cotton, alfalfa and other crops. It is difficult to control. In Southern California and in Arizona also it is becoming a pest. It is a most valuable plant of the highest value for pastures. Indeed their value for this purpose outweighs their had qualities as weeds.

Bermuda Grass as a Forage Plant. As a forage plant this grass is utilized in the southern states, and although it is cut for hay to some extent. It is resistant to heat, drought, and trampling by live stock, but is not so resistant to trampling by wild animals. It is a most valuable plant of the highest value for pastures. Indeed their value for this purpose outweighs their had qualities as weeds.
