LAST GERMAN COLONY
TAKEN BY THE BRITISHGerman East Africa at Length Conquered by Lion-Eight Hundred Thousand Men in Death
Grip-at Cambrai-Reinforcements for Both Sides-Lull Falls on Fight in Italy

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Germany stands today short of every inch of her colonial possessions. All of the German troops fighting in German East Africa, the only place where Germany was still making a stand in her colonies, have been conquered by the British, it was announced in dispatches from Capetown today.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Prince Rupprecht, the German commander in chief was unable to renew his infantry attacks along the Cambrai salient during the night but the German artillery was active, the war office announced at noon.

British positions at Mouveaux and Bourlon were heavily shelled, but there were no infantry actions.

Mouveaux and Bourlon lie west of Cambrai, on the northern side of the salient.

The southern side was assaulted all day Monday and the increase in the cannonading to the north indicated that the Germans were getting ready to resume their attacks in that district.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—Forty divisions of British and German troops, or 800,000 men, supported by formidable arrays of artillery on both sides, are at grips on the 18 mile Cambrai front between Mouveaux and Vendhuile.

The fiery ideas of battle which have been surging back and forth across this field since the British drive opened two weeks ago today have claimed an enormous number of dead and the ground is still covered with the bodies of men that fell in the early stages of the fighting. So intense has been the artillery and machine gun fire by day and by night that the burial squads could not venture forth.

The Germans have continued to pound both sides of the Cambrai salient, but with the exception of a slight dent made on the southern side in the Marcoling-La Vacquerie sector the British lines have remained intact during the past 24 hours.

The Germans fighting with great fury continue to hold their position and the importance they attach to this part of their front is shown by the fact that Field Marshal von Hindenburg, chief of staff of the German army has gone to western headquarters to give personal direction to the counter offensive.

Prisoners taken by the British in this battle show that Germany is calling for more men. Some of the prisoners are more boys. Some of the prisoners are members of the 1919 class, who were called to the colors two years in advance of their regular schedule. The captives said that the 1920 class is being called up and are being trained for service during the winter.

The two indications that Germany may take advantage of the fighting at Cambrai to try for a decisive stroke, Germany has been making her regular attacks. That is proved by the fact that the German high command was holding cavalry in readiness for fighting in the open.

Both the direct drive with which General Sir Julian Byng opened the action on November 20 and the counter drive of the Germans ten days later were begun with surprise attacks.

First the British took the Germans by surprise by launching a "tank offensive" without artillery preparation. Then the Germans suddenly began an encircling movement which caught the British off their guard.

Fresh troops are being thrown into moving up reinforcements of troops from the rear. Already there is an immense number of cannon in action, the number running into the thousands. Their roar is incessant along the front.

ROME, Dec. 4.—The great battle of the Piave, which began three weeks ago today and by which the Germans hoped to crush the Italian armistice and create all of northern Italy, has developed into an absolute deadlock.

Even a lull has settled down upon the intense artillery-duelling in some sectors. It was stated in dispatches from the front today.

Considerable activity was reported from the Delta of the Piave river, where it flows into the Adriatic. In addition to the reciprocal cannonading there was some vague fighting between the German and Italian armies along the front. British monitors lying in the Gulf of Venice are keeping the Austro-German positions under constant fire. The accuracy of the British gunfire has proved very destructive. Three bridges which the Austrians were using for the transport of supplies across the delta were destroyed by direct hits at 18,000 yards.

REPORTED KILLED IN ACCIDENT

A report is current in this city this week that Mr. and Mrs. M. Gant were in an auto accident in California, which resulted in the death of Mr. Gant and the serious injury of his wife.

BOLSHIEVSKI REPORTS SUCCESS

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4.—Eugene Krylenko, the Bolshievski commander in chief, reported to the war office from Vitebsk today that the officers of the government army, who had been reported by his authority have surrendered. Fighting has been reported from Vitebsk.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4.—Negotiations for the release of all German and Austro-Hungarian prisoners of war in Russia are being concluded and they will soon be ordered released by the Bolshievski premier, Lenin, according to the newspaper Vostochny Vestnik today.

Foreign Minister Trotsky has issued a decree dismissing all of the Russian diplomatic and consular representatives in foreign countries that fail to recognize the Bolshievski as the legal central government of Russia.

Cablegrams last week said that representatives of the German general staff had arrived in Petrograd to negotiate for the release of Toulon war prisoners.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 4.—Commanders of Russian armies on the southern and on the eastern fronts have notified the war office in Petrograd that they will refuse to recognize any protocol or armistice that may be drawn up at Brest-Litovsk, according to information received today from the Russian capital.

Eugene Krylenko, the Bolshievski commander in chief is openly fighting these loyal commanders.

Germany and Austria are making fresh withdrawals of troops from the front. The Bolshievski control the Russian soldiers. Some of these are being sent to Italy and others into Belgium and France.

Berlin reports that an armistice already exists in Volhynia and northern Galicia and that negotiations for a "general armistice" are still under way.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Ambassador Boris Bakmeteff and the other members of the Russian embassy here decline to be fired.

TARTAR REPUBLIC ESTABLISHED

PETROGRAD, Dec. 4.—A Tartar republic has been established in Crimea, with the capital at Sebastopol, it was announced today.

MARKET REPORTS DELAYED

Market reports were delayed today on account of the necessity of running the message of President Wilson over the wires.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Washington today is joyful to the extreme because of the great work done by the engineers, coming from what was intended to be a semi-non-combatant body—the railway workers organized as engineers. These men, caught in the drive of the Germans against Byng's men in northern France, dropped their railway tools to take rifles and do their bit with the British. And that they did it well is shown by the enthusiastic advice coming from both France and British army headquarters. It was pointed out by army officers here today that all of these men are far beyond the draft age and that many of them were veterans of the Spanish American war. They were engaged in the fighting for the purpose of rebuilding and operating the railway behind the western battle front. But from the very moment they got on the job they have insisted on getting right up to the front line and they have pushed the railway far closer to the front trenches than any of the other engineer forces of the French and British ever tried. It was in the nature of an experiment made on the suggestion of General Pershing officers say, but the experiment of carrying the railway far into the shell swept zone already has proven one of the greatest benefits of the many innovations of the war.

Officials here are anxiously awaiting a report on this fighting from General Pershing. The press dispatches indicate that the railroad men suffered severe casualties. But no word has yet come to the front line where killed or wounded. It is hoped that a complete report from General Pershing may be received within a day or so.

STOCKHOLDERS

CTORS UNDER THE NEW
DISPENSATIONSurface Indications Are

Nominations Made at the Forenoon Session Without a Glash or Friction.

The meeting of the stockholders of the Twin Falls South Side Canal company for the purpose of electing three directors, under the articles of incorporation and by-laws as amended at the October meeting, and for such other business as might properly come before it, was called to order at 9:45 this forenoon by Mr. C. J. Wurz, temporary chairman, Mr. E. N. Day acting as secretary. On motion Dr. White temporary organization was made permanent.

Motion was made and carried that none but those legally entitled to vote should participate in the proceedings, and this was followed by an order for segregation—in obedience to which the chair invited all voting members to take front seats and all others to go back among the guests and posted doorkeepers to direct newcomers in the way they should go.

Pending the seating arrangement and pursuant to motion, however, the chair appointed Messrs Ben McPherson, Miller and Denton committee on order of business.

While the committee was out, tellers were chosen, upon nomination from the floor, as follows: B. F. McPherson, C. F. Leopold, J. L. Barnes, and Leonard E. Pringle. E. V. Souner—Dr. White's suggestion that the Farm Bureau name three having been ignored as being undemocratic.

The committee on order of business made a report which, after some amendment, was adopted; and under which, the reading minutes of previous meeting having been dispensed with, nominations for one director from each district were declared in order and resulted as follows:

West district—J. H. Barker (330) and Charles E. Pringle (160).
East district—Thos. Irwin (160) and

NEW WATER SYSTEM PLAN
LAID BEFORE THE COUNCILBurns and McDonnell Outline Complete Method of Furnishing Water to the City—Will Cost $372,000—Meeting to be Held Later at the Lav-ering Where Idea Will be Illustrated by Slides and Explanation Made to the Voters.

A complete water system for the city of Twin Falls to be constructed at a cost of $372,000, and capable of extension without the discarding of any of the money spent in its construction, is the purpose of the plan laid before the city council last night by Burns & McDonnell, consulting engineers. It is estimated that as planned it would supply a city of 15,000 inhabitants.

While the water is for the present to be drawn from the lowline canal, steps are to be taken at once to protect the city in case of need by deep wells. Arrangements for the sinking of one of such wells have been made, the well to be put in on the city ground north of the reservoir. A complete filtering plant is planned, which will also provide for the use of chlorine as a further protection against micro-organisms which may get through the filter. The proposition to vote bonds will be submitted to the people and before election a mass meeting will be held at the Lavering at which the system will be explained by means of slides. The mayor and council declare that they expect to invite the most thorough discussion and searching criticism. If necessary the plan can be extended to 10,000,000 gallons capacity. The following excerpts from the report sufficiently explain the proposed system to give a general idea of the plan:

In order to deliver to the city a clean sparkling water at all times that would be absolutely safe from any disease producing bacteria coming from any chance contamination or pollution, a modern filtering plant should be built to filter all the water from the canal supply. On account of there not being any reserve storage available, the plant should be of capacity to supply the maximum demand at all times and provide for a future increase in consumption. For a population of 15,000, for fire protection the system should be capable of delivering ten (10) fire streams of 250 gallons per minute at a rate of 1.5 million gallons per day. The normal consumption for 15,000 with the leakage loss

CAPITOL, WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The United States intends to win the war. It will utilize all of its power and resources—men, money and materials—to that end.

It must at once declare war on Austria Hungary because that nation now is a "vassal state of Germany." It need not do so at this time so far as Turkey and Bulgaria are concerned because they now are negligible quantities.

Those who desire to bring about a peace before that purpose is achieved can go elsewhere.

This was the message which President Wilson brought to the joint session of the congress today. His address was probably the greatest of his state documents to date. It carried with it a complete answer to the recent letter of Lord Lansdowne. Farther than this it replied in detail to the specific element in the United States who have been demanding that this country outbid the war aims.

When the president delivered his address today it was at once apparent that much secrecy had surrounded its preparation. It explained why it was that the allied conference in Paris failed to re-state as had been expected, the war aims of the United States. This, as was the case in the reply made to the pope's peace proposal, plainly had been left to the president.

Today's utterances re-stated completely the objects for which the United States is fighting. Again Germany was told the terms on which it can have peace. These terms will be liberal—very liberal—but only when the battles are over and democracy is triumphant over autocracy.

Significant in the extreme was the declaration by the president that there will be no compromise with German autocracy and German brutality. He took the Prussian declaration of peace without annexations and indemnities and turned the argument on the German military caste. And he repeated anew his belief that a complete and lasting peace will be made only after autocracy is crushed and the nations allow the people to rule themselves. And in this program a place in the sun for all peoples and the freedom of the seas, as outlined by President Wilson in his message to the senate prior to the United States entry into war, again was given a most prominent part.

The greatest applause came when he declared that the war would be won only when the German people say they themselves want peace. Every senator and representative with the exception of Senator La Follette rose and cheered the sentiment. The next marked applause followed the appeal for an immediate declaration of war upon Austria, although a number of senators and representatives, joined Senator La Follette and remained in their seats at this time, did not arise and cheer. Much of the applause at the telling points in the speech was started by Chief Justice White, who sat with the members of the supreme court on the floor.

The members of the senate went in a body to the house chamber shortly before 12:30, headed by Vice President Marshall and Sergeant at Arms Higgins. The front row of benches in the house chamber had been reserved for the senators.

Vice President Marshall designated Senator Martin, the majority leader, and Senator Gallinger, the minority leader, to represent the senate in welcoming the president and in escorting him to the speaker's desk.

The president arrived at 12:23 and was given a tremendous ovation. Seven minutes later he began his address.

Older Boy's Meet
Arousing Interest

Will Be Held Here December 14, 15 and 16—Has Important Bearing On The War.

Much interest is being manifested here in the forthcoming Older Boys' conference which will be held in this city for three days, beginning on Friday, December 14. The following statement of the conference's purpose and importance has been furnished for publication:

"Older boys are in the army and navy. Idaho boys are in high school. It has been no small task for the Interstate Executive Committee of the Y. M. C. A. to give full attention to each group. This state knows well what is being done by the Y. M. C. A. for its soldier boys 'wherever they are.' But it perhaps does not realize the things that are being planned by the Y. M. C. A. for 'the boys at home' who are more or less patiently waiting and preparing to do their bit.

The Older Boys' conference to be held at Twin Falls, December 14, 15, and 16, is one of three such conferences under the direction of the Interstate Y. M. C. A. committee which is to be held during the middle of December. The other two are scheduled for LaGrande and Eugene, Oregon.

The conference last year at Pocatello registered over one hundred. The leaders feel that with the importance to come up this year, and the splendid co-operation being given by other state organizations the registration will be well over 200. It will be one hundred and fifty and may go to two hundred.

GERMANY IS WRONG SAYS GREAT WRITER

Celebrated Swedish Author Tells Why the Teuton Should Lose—Cause of Allies Shown to be Right in Burning Words.

K. G. Oleson Nilsson, the famous Swedish author has written a work on the great war, the translation of which is now being published in the Svenska Amerikanska Posten (Swedish American Post). The author handles without gloves the pretensions of Germany that she had right on her side when she entered the struggle. The book is divided into five chapters, the first of which, entitled "Germany is Wrong," reads as follows:

Germany is wrong—let that be said straight out and emphatically. The contrary has so long been preached by the party represented by the Aftonbladet, and neutrality, in certain newspapers, has so long meant the same as todaying to Germany, that truth really need not sit any longer abashed and dumb.

In Sweden are so soft-hearted, well-meaning and lukewarm—who worship truth and justice—such in everyday life, the voices of oppression, injustice and lying alone make themselves heard. We are so "neutral" at heart, we who, nevertheless, believe that there is a distinction between right and wrong, light and darkness, black and white. We are so punctiliously reticent, so niggardly scrupulous, so anxiously solicitous about the veriest particle of humanity that exists even in a scoundrel—that whilst we are weighing and reweighing it, the scoundrel accomplishes his work and innocence is trampled on. We shun passing sentence even in the case if the case is clear and obvious. And when we do pass sentence, it is done with a scolding—to the plaintiff, whom the sentence cannot strike down.

In these days one has heard till one is sick of it the hushing up of inequities and injustices such as "There are faults on both sides," "It's nobody's fault when two fall out." I wonder how long these cheap "wise saws" will hold good in the "real squabbles of our citizens, and if one of these philosophers—now so high-minded where the grievances of others are concerned—would, in a lawsuit of his own, be satisfied with a Book of Proverbs instead of the Swedish code.

Sweden, like Europe in general, has during the past year sorely lacked strong, authoritative voices that might have compelled attention to her verdict.

Tolstoy is no more—and he would, I suppose, have been expected to take part in the case. Thesen and Björnsen are gone. Strindberg is dead. It is uncertain, perhaps, what their verdict would have been, these old men whom a long life had linked together. Maybe these alone would have pronounced the right verdict.

Among the great ones still living, Denmark's Brandes and Sweden's Ellen Key are the two who have pronounced their opinion—the former in a manner that reminds us that he is a Dane and the enemy of Russia, but quite forgets he is a European, and Ellen Key in a manner exactly such as might be expected of her, but not as I, for my part, had hoped. In the long run, that she, whose courage and will no one ever in question, would have pronounced judgment.

She, too, has envisaged the situation too narrowly to be able to pronounce judgment where judgment must be pronounced. It is not enough to blame all the parties in dispute, to find this fault in the one and that fault in the other; not enough to assert that the injured party was to blame in days gone by or else in planning revenge in the future. In short, what ought to be decided in this case is, who is right and who is wrong?

Suppose we throw the chief blame on France's thoughts of revenge or England's colonization, yet even then we are not so profound or so historical as we fancy ourselves to be; for previous to France's thirst for revenge (if it then existed) occurred Russia's mutilation of Poland in 1870. Before this mutilation was that of 1814-1815—prior to that the attack on Germany during the first years of the Revolution. Before this attack, and, instead of listening to the voices for peace, seemed only to be farthing their claws, as usual, to strike at the moment the least favorable to her neighbors.

Such a Germany, through her moral support, encouraged her ally Austria, for an insignificant act, to attack Serbia, a small state, and, as a measure of precaution, actually mobilized against Russia. When Russia answered this mobilization by a similar step against Austria, and after discovering Germany's secret mobilization, which was only prematurely betrayed by the German Press—also by a defensive mobilization on the German Press—also by a defensive mobilization on the German frontier, Germany, greedy for war, found in this the excuse she craved. Under ambiguous forms she evaded responding to or meeting the peace negotiations, who, day and night, proceeded between England, Russia, Austria, Serbia, and allied and desert Germany. Germany did not want peace, she wanted war, and believed a sudden attack on unprepared neighbors might rob them of some province or other and a few million of money.

Germany insistently alleged all sorts of reasons for war that were nothing but excuses; the excuses the world made before he fell on the lamb. This is about the French writers dropping bombs over Germany. The significant of the lameness of the charges brought against Germany's neighbors. Before Germany's declaration of war, her neighbors had fallen, partly over the railway lines of Nuremberg-Klassengen, and Nuremberg-Ansbach. This story was one of the charges trumped up in the declaration of war delivered by Von Schöen, the ambassador in Paris. This charge has found blind belief even in Sweden, while, naturally, France's protests were disregarded. Now, I can on the 18th day of May, 1916—consequently nearly two years ago—Professor Deutsche Medizinische Wochen-schrift ("German Medical Weekly") admits this reason for war was an alarming report, destitute of foundation, an invention from beginning to end, unknown to the magistracy of Nuremberg and the military authorities stationed there—in other words, was a lie—which now, for the first time, has been unmasked by the fact itself. He has even the face to brag of this trait of German love for the truth.

The outbreak itself of the war was Germany's work, and it is wrong to attack without serious challenge, and with an evident purpose to plunder, then, from the very instant that war was declared, she was in the wrong—a mistake which the history will brand-mark, and which would have covered with shame and infamy the greatest victories, the greatest triumphs, the greatest and proudest results. For Germany's untimely declared confidence that success decides the question of right and wrong. But this is not so. There is a higher morality than success, and if Germany has not yet learned it.

The wrong Germany committed in breaking the peace treaty has been a crime, a crime which has no unexampled in history, by a cowardly crushing of small states, such as Belgium, Luxembourg, Serbia and Montenegro, by massing a powerful population, by thinking of peace as a sinner's without warning, mercy or humanity; by carrying into captivity civilians and harmless folk; by forcing Belgium and the Netherlands to fight and work in the German ranks; by employing those same methods of fighting, e. g., poison gas, and so on. For the sake of a few fetters and a few scraps of strutting with stolen feathers—colonies, etc.—Germany has made encroachment such as not the most valid and most ancient laws could justify.

Now, could any African colony compensate for treasures such as the mediaeval buildings of Belgium and Northern France, or the library and collection of manuscripts in Leiden? Could anything excuse this impious violation of ancient monuments and national shrines? Is there a socialist who could pretend to clear the Germans from the reproach of barbarism, which they so hypocritically try to repudiate? To what extent has Germany been developed and refined since the days since the German soldiers dragged the palings from round a grave over fallen Danish soldiers from a churchyard in Slewick to a barracks in Berlin?

And in the face of the massacres in Belgium; in the face of the misdeeds and plunderings in France—in the face of all these crimes on the city population of France, is it not explainable and natural that the Germans should ally themselves with the Turks, who, at the outbreak of the war, through their hordes of Kurdish soldiers, could torture and murder hundred and fifty thousand Syrian Christians, inhabitants and fellow-citizens of Turkey?

In her warfare, which generally contrasts sharply with that of those who have overthrown, Germany has, moreover, emphasized all that is most primitive and barbarous in her machinery, her vaunted learning and her military drill, she is a child in a struggle for culture; a naughty child that breaks to pieces what is precious, and destroys everything that makes toys of them. Germany must go back to the nursery, there to learn, by education and reflection, a higher morality than that of success, and obtrusiveness.

But Germany is in the wrong; and we Swedes must, in time, come to acknowledge it. We have as a matter of fact, on the whole, complied with the demands of neutrality, but even in act we must obey our conscience. We must not urge anybody to attack least of all one who is a good scrapper. But on the other hand, naturally, we must not support the party that is in the wrong, help him to carry out his policy, and we must, in the end, lay down our arms in the South, or with economic measures such as the far too eager exportation of foodstuffs from a country which is hoarding it for war. It is wrong of us to prolong the war by furnishing with provisions the authors of the war, albeit under correct forms.

Our "neutrality" in this respect may meet with due retribution. "Honesty is the best policy" is the Englishman's motto. Whatever is right is likewise prudent. The tendency to Germany on the part of certain "neutral" camps may soon enough be deservedly punished. It looks more and more as if Germany will get a taste of her own philosophy. If success in the war is wrong, right, up to now success has disappointed Germany's expectations. In this war success follows those who are right, namely, those who have been attacked, those who have been vanquished. The entente grows more powerful; Germany grows weaker. Consequently Germany's motto should be altered to run as follows: "Defeat makes right (and even wrong) wrong"—in which case Germany, out of the very mouth of fate, has a speedy answer to her riddle. Even now, this answer is Germany in the wrong.

Why should we Swedes always side with a monarchial state as against a Republic? Why take the part of a sick man against a healthy man? Why with a rough brutal soldier machine as against civilization, freedom and progress? Why with the slaughter of the Armenians as against modern states? With our worst rival as against England and France, our friends for ages past?

At all events we are unfortunate.

Hobbs Gives His Reason for Acts

Says He Was Misled By Statements of Dr. White—Declares Latter Played Loose With Word.

Possibly it may be of interest to some of the stockholders of the Twin Falls Cattle Company to learn why proceedings were brought to declare invalid the work of the special meeting on October 9, in which the by-laws of the company were supposed to have been amended, and as I have taken up my part in discussing these proceedings, I will state my individual reasons for participating in this movement.

While I have favored for years some of the proposed amendments, I was very much opposed to that part of them that would enable one of the other tract to choose a director for the other tract, and another candidate a designated majority faction to obtain a deep pocket away, and perpetuate itself by absolutely excluding a minority faction, even though composing as much as one-third of the total of the votes, from even a representative on the board; yet I like to see fair play even with my opponents, and when in the special meeting on October 9, I was elected to the board, I was very much inclined to believe that the meeting might be illegal, because the call for the meeting included only the initiation and not the adoption of amendments, and Judge Bethwell stated that in his opinion it would be necessary to have another meeting to adopt them, and Dr. White exclaimed in answer to this question, "This is damnable." I naturally inferred that the board of directors had deliberately planned to hinder and delay proceedings by inserting the word initiate, and that the amendments, which I voted against the amendments, and such a thing as a contest to declare the meeting illegal could not consist for a moment for I do not believe in taking advantage of technicalities to gain a point, if it can be corrected without causing difficulty.

However, in the meeting held in the commercial club rooms on the evening of November 25, at which Dr. White was present, and when confronted by the members of the board, and under severe questions, he admitted that it was understood between himself and the board of directors at a meeting of the board called to arrange for the special meeting on October 9, that the special meeting would only propose by-laws and that it would require another meeting to adopt them; and when Dr. White admitted that he had failed to inform even his local chairman of this fact, thus proving that the doctor is either subject to spells of memory, or else concluded that he could ignore the arrangements understood between himself and the board of directors and finish the work in one meeting, and when I pointed out to me that instead of the board trying to take an unfair advantage of Dr. White and his followers, that he had deliberately taken advantage of the stockholders in railroadings his plans through a meeting which he admits was practically under his own control, and forcing his by-laws upon the stockholders without opposition, then I began to see that we had been deliberately misled, and the injustice and tyranny of the whole affair could not be denied.

I could to help secure an order from the court to prevent the proceedings of the special meeting from becoming effective, and give the stockholders a chance to vote on the amendments, but I have decided to take the "hard headed, slow thinking farmer" a chance to carefully consider such important matters as amendments to the by-laws of the company, and in addition to clearing up a tangled web of legal questions that sooner,

Spud Men Warned to Obey the Law

Heavy Penalties For Buying Offering For Sale Or Storing Defective Potatoes.

Spud growers as well as dealers are warned by the government not to present for sale or storage potatoes which are practically free from the effects of frost and disease. The penalties for violations run as high as a fine of $5000 and three years imprisonment. The following table, received this week from the headquarters of the Boyle Commission company, by R. H. Boyle, its local agent, is self-explanatory.

U. S. Food Administration Rules—The following letter has been sent by Mr. E. P. Miller, of Albert Miller & Company, to all their leading stations in Wisconsin and Minnesota. Mr. Miller is head of the Potato Distribution for the food administration, and we believe he knows whereof he is speaking, so that these instructions will apply to all of our offices:

"Potatoes must not be shipped which are not practically free of rot, frost, scab, sunburn, etc."

"This means you must use much more care than in the past."

"An unfair practice is sufficient cause for revocation of a license. Be very sure you do not follow any unfair practice."

"The grades as established by the United States Food Administration are all round varieties minimum diameter 1 7/8 inches, long varieties 3 1/4 inches in diameter. U. S. grade No. 2 minimum diameter 1 1/2 inches. If you have not proper screens and are served notice by the food administration, you must not ship or buy until you can grade. These instructions are positive and binding and those of you who are not at present in this position, because you have not the screens, will understand from the above that we are at a standstill so far as doing business is concerned until they arrive."

"Some of our loaders seem to have the impression that there is some way of evading rules, but we have been served notice by the food administration that evasions will not be tolerated and we are threatened with revocation of our license, if we now go on doing business in this way. You positively must not take in your warehouse, nor can you ship them out."

Twin Falls Rises to Patriotic Height

Splendid Response to Request For The Boys—Beautiful and Useful

When the Red Cross here announced that it would like to have 100 packages to send to the boys for Christmas it thought it would get them. It did. Dainty, Dandy pretty ones, with the air of Ulster about them and all filled with things that will conserve to the comfort of the men behind the guns. And not merely 100, but 575 of them, the contents costing all the way from $1.50 to more than $5.00. The Red Cross thinks that there is a thing wrong with Twin Falls and it is confidently believed by all that the boys who have gone to serve their country will not forget the manner in which their friends at home have shown evidence that they are still in their hearts and minds.

Neddo-Discontinuation: Many subscribers prefer not to have their subscriptions interrupted in case they fail to remit before expiration. Notwithstanding this, it is not assumed that continuous service is desired; still, subscribers are expected to notify us with reasonable promptness to stop if the paper is no longer desired.

Entered at the Twin Falls postoffice as second class matter, as a twice-a-week publication, October 15, 1913.

Figures loom large now-a-days. On Monday the cash balance on hand in your Uncle Samuel's money drawer was two billions five hundred and fifteen millions four hundred and seventy-one thousand four, hundred and seven dollars ($2,515,471,407). Does any one have any practical idea as to how much money that is? At all events, it is the biggest cash balance in the history of the country.

Washington dispatches indicated a more or less serious clash between fuel director Garfield and food director Hoover over the question of priority in the use of railway transportation. Hoover contended that the need to move food was paramount, while Garfield had already secured a first call on cars for coal. This raises a peculiar question, the answer to which probably would depend, in each individual case, upon whether the affiant was the more cold or hungry at the moment.

HURRAH FOR TWIN FALLS BOYS

The victory over the Nampa team, which has given the Twin Falls team the state football championship, is another sign of the Twin Falls spirit that will help put the city still more on the map, to use an expression which is not quite original, especially as applied to this city. Even if this city may go to sleep at the switch on the road bonds proposition, it is there with the punch and the goods most of the time. The younger generation that is coming up is ready to take the place of the older ones and will run right over it and kick goal if it does not bump itself.

STOCKHOLDERS CANAL MEETING

Center district—L. G. Lincoln (230) and Frank DeKlotz ($18).

It was understood that the nominee first named in each district would be supported by those opposed to the program; and the figures after the name of each nominee were given on request to indicate his holding in the corporation by acre.

The voting it was explained by the chair would be at a booth tent, in front of the theatre; and at 11:45 the polls were declared open, ballots to be received until 8 p. m. Adjournment was then had until 1:15.

The suit noted in the TIMES as having been filed Saturday by D. B. Moorman and T. F. Warner to test the legality of the changes made in the constitution and by-laws at the meeting of October 9, is still pending. Notices of such action were served on the canal board and on its attorney, Judge J. R. Bothwell, Saturday. No time for hearing has been set but it is understood it will be taken up on the return of Judge W. A. Babcock from Gooding, where he is holding court. Should the contention of the board be upheld, the canal board will be null and void and a regular meeting will be held January to elect five directors as provided under the old by-laws.

PRESIDENT ASKS WAR BE.

icism and the clamor of the noisy thoughtless and troublesome. I also see the men here and there fling themselves in impotent disloyalty against the calm, indomitable power of the nation. I hear men debate peace who understand neither its nature nor the way in which we obtain it with uplifted eyes and unbroken spirits. But I know that none of these speak for the nation. They do not touch the heart of anything. They may safely be left to strut their uneasy hour and be forgotten.

"But from another point of view I believe that it is necessary to say plainly that we here at this place of action consider what part we mean to play in the settlement of its searching issues. We are the spokesmen of the American people and they have a right to know whether their purpose is ours. They desire peace by the overcoming of evil, by the defeat once for all the sinister forces that interrupt peace and render it impossible and they wish to know how closely our thought runs with theirs and what action we propose. They are impatient with those who desire peace by any sort of compromise—deeply and indignantly impatient—but they will be equally impatient with us if we do not make it plain to them what our objectives are and what we are planning for in seeking to make conquest of peace by arms.

"I believe that I speak for them when I say two things: First, that this intolerable THING of which the masters of Germany have shown us the ugly face, this menace of combined intrigue and force that we now see so clearly as the German power, a THING without conscience or honor or capacity for covenanted peace must be crushed and if it be not utterly brought to an end, at least shut out from the friendly intercourse of the nations and, second, that when this THING and its power are indeed defeated and the time comes that we can dispense peace—when the German people have spoken whose words we can believe and when these spokesmen are ready in the name of their people to accept the common judgment of the nations as to what shall henceforth be the bases of law and of covenant for the life of the world—we shall be willing and glad to pay the full price for peace, and pay it ungrudgingly. We know what that price will be. It will be full, impartial justice—justice done at every point and to every nation that the final settlement must affect, our enemies as well as our friends.

"You catch, with me, the voices of humanity that are in the air. They grow daily more audible, more articulate, more persuasive, and they come from the hearts of men everywhere. They insist that the war shall not end in vindictive action of any kind; that no nation or people shall be robbed or punished because the irresponsible rulers of a single country have themselves done deep and abominable wrong. It is this thought that has been expressed in the formula, 'no annexations, no contributions, no punitive indemnities.' Just because this crude formula expresses the instinctive judgment as to right of plain men everywhere, it has been made diligent use of by the masters of German intrigue to lead the people of Russia astray—and the people of every country their agents could reach in order that a premature peace might be brought about before autocracy has been taught its final and convincing lesson, and the people of the world put in control of their own destinies.

But the fact that a wrong use has been made of a just idea is no reason why a right use should not be made of it. It ought to be brought under the patronage of its real friends. Let it be said again that autocracy must first be shown the utter futility of its claims to power or leadership in the modern world. It is impossible to apply any standard of justice so long as such forces are unchecked and undefeated as the present masters of Germany command. Not until this has been done can right be set up as arbiter and peace maker among the nations.

LOCAL BREVITIES

Yields Birthday Home—Millicent Judge Eldridge, aged three days, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Eldridge, in this city.

Phyllis Sisters Meet—Phyllis Sisters will have election of officers on Thursday afternoon, December 6. All members requested to be present.

Elks Program Fine—All the features of the Elks memorial program Sunday proved of great interest to the large audience, which enjoyed standing the rather unsatisfactory weather. The address of Brother P. Monese Smock, of Boise, proved eloquent, feeling and appropriate.

Twin Falls Lady Weds—An Illinois paper notes the marriage at Springfield on November 15, of Mrs. Sadie J. Wilcox, formerly of this city, and Mr. J. Wilson. The contracting parties first met in California last winter with the result indicated. Mr. Wilson is president of the Farmers & Merchants Bank at Christianburg, Illinois, where the newly wed couple will make their home for the present.

Beckley Announces Sale—W. M. Beckley, who lives a mile due north of this city has announced an auction sale for Tuesday, December 11, at which seven horses, twenty-three calves, ten Poland China chickens, sixty tons of hay and a lot of farm implements will be offered to the highest and best bidder. There will be a free lunch at noon, the sale starting immediately after. H. B. Lue is the auctioneer.

Fletcher Sale Tomorrow—Twenty head of cattle, two sheep, farm implements too numerous to mention, with thirty-five tons of alfalfa hay, will be sold at the C. E. Fletcher ranch, three and a half miles east on Anderson avenue, and thirty and a half miles northwest of Kimberly tomorrow. Col. H. B. Lue will have charge of the sale which begins immediately after a free lunch at noon. Fletcher and Irwin are owners.

Eldridge Front Praised—The Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothing magazine this month contains a fine picture of the Eldridge Clothing company store in this city under the heading "A store that's different." It says, "Not long ago the Eldridge Clothing company of Twin Falls, Idaho, put a new front on their store. You see it here in the picture. It is one of the store fronts in Twin Falls that you can't possibly miss; it stands out in an impressive way."

Anonymous Notice Posted—The TIMES yesterday morning found an anonymous notice posted on its window bearing the signature of a typewriter, "A Committee of Sixty Americans that are Loyal," and beginning with the words "Noticing the article of the Rev. John Gehring in the Times of the 29th inst. regarding the teaching in the schools we will say that while we are at war with Germany that this is no time to teach the German language." The TIMES has never published any article by Rev. John Gehring on any subject. If the signers of the notice on the window, or any one of them, will affix a signature to it, the TIMES will give it space.

ANN PENNINGTON IN "THE ANTICS OF ANN"

STAR OF FAMOUS "ZIEGFELD FOLLIES" AT IDAHO IN OLIVER COMEDY TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

ANN PENNINGTON

Pauline Frederick, for several seasons past the chief attraction at the "Ziegfeld Follies," is one of the world's foremost dancers and a remarkably pretty girl. In "The Antics of Ann," Miss Pennington runs the gamut of everything a harum-scarum school girl can do. She plays football-boy fashion, and she plays a famous dancer (this comes easy for Ann) rides on a freight train, does any number of other stunts, and finally elopes. Don't miss this rollicking story of girlish romance, tomboy pranks and riotous mirth. You'll chuckle for many days afterwards at "The Antics of Ann."

Vaudeville and special music on the program.

With the Film Folk

"Having assured myself that I was able to ramp, I made up my mind that never again would I attempt to lure young men to their ruin, and when I negotiated my present contract with Thomas H. Ince I stipulated that I should not be cast in any vulgar role, and that I should never again be known as the star of 'The Flame of the Yukon.' Mr. Ince merely laughed as he remarked: 'You bet you won't. You mean to say you covered it, but the camera is in the film, and you're going to be in film, too.'"

This Paid for 622 Packages of "Smokes" for Soldiers

A warm letter of thanks accompanied the acknowledgement of the draft representing the amount of The TIMES Smoke Fund up to Nov. 13. As hereinafter indicated, it has grown steadily ever since, and a new appeal is made to each individual to help make a duplicate check possible before Christmas.

You can do it easily—and in doing so you will not only have the pleasant experience, but you'll have the satisfaction of knowing that you've made the place somewhere in France seem more like home to him. So, we know you'll be glad to do what we are going to suggest. Our Tobacco Fund for the boys in France is growing every day; some send in twenty-five cents, some send a dollar, some send two-fifty and others fifty. For each $25 you send us we pack and send to some boy of the United States Army in France, a kit containing two packages of Lucky Strike cigarettes, 3 sacks of Bull Durham, plenty of papers and a tin of Tuxedo, the regular price of which is 65c if you bought the goods at retail. In each of these kits we inclose a stamped postal card with your name and address on it. And with it goes a request to the soldier boy to write a few words of acknowledgement on the card and mail it. In due time this card comes back to you and you know your contribution has done good to some appreciative fellow far from home. And now the Perrine force comes through for $13.00. No doubt they realize that there are two ways to please a man—particularly the one who is doing the nation's fighting—feeding him well and sending him smokes. Expert in answering to the needs of the inner man, the Perrine force of ten men is certainly doing its additional "bit" by "subscribing for postals from the front." This addition of $13.00 will mean that fifty-two cards of thanks will make their way back home and these fifty-two cards from the front will be a source of immense satisfaction and a tangible evidence that the heart of war isn't taking all the home instincts from our boys "over there." Previously acknowledged $130.50          Beale Lawrence 2.00          Mrs. Tiffany 2.00          Eva Shepherd 1.50          Nora Duree 1.00	             Margaret Sullivan 1.00              George Rydahl 1.00              Carl Vorrell 2.00              George Stoner 1.00              L. For Statutory Offense—Fred Sampson was arrested yesterday charged with a statutory offense.

Found Nothing But Work—Twin Falls county has been accumulating quite a colony from Dighton, Kansas. Those who first came wrote of the milk and honey, and others came to see. Some time last September two brothers from there decided to come west to Twin Falls, provided they found all that had been represented. So they loaded their furniture in a car and, with their families made the journey—planning to find houses and a good winter in a leisurely survey of the country and buy property in the spring if the situation invited. After ten days of unsuccessful search for houses, or a house in Twin Falls, a former neighbor back in Kansas came to their rescue by offering a shack on his place where a tenant had lived. As they could find no place to store the extra furniture, they bought a team and wagon and took it to the country. This was in the height of the threshing season and the demands for help came so thick and fast that they were kept working just the other day. "Well, I never saw a place like this. You can't find a house to live in, but you can find about three places to work for each day. I came out here intending to take it easy, and here I've been working as steady as ever. Why, back home a man has to work for his money, and even two or three jobs are all the time hunting him—and at sky wages!" Twin Falls county has undoubtedly secured two more permanent citizens.

Missionary Society—The Presbyterian Thursday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of Mrs. Will Johnson, 204 Ninth avenue east. Mrs. Johnson will be assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Baylor.

Shamrock Did Well—Last Friday night an entertainment and box supper was given at the Shamrock school. District No. 36. The management of the affair by the teacher, Miss Margaret Hewitt was pronounced pleasing. The sum of $34 was cleared and will be turned over to the Red Cross.

New Management—On the first instant the well known Rogerson hotel, in this city, passed under the management of Mr. Carl Sunz. An experienced hotel manager, he was formerly chief clerk at the Owyhee in Boise, and went from there to take the management of the Northside Hotel, where his success was so marked that Mr. Rogerson found difficulty in securing his services for Twin Falls. It may be of interest to the community, where his success was so marked that Mr. Rogerson found difficulty in securing his services for Twin Falls. Marion Thanksgiving—The Thanksgiving exercises at the Marion school house, were in every way satisfactory to those in charge. Many parents visited the school during the afternoon, at which time $2 was raised for the orphan's home. At night the house was packed. Eighteen dollars were contributed for the liberty bond. The school was given a very fine party. The teachers, J. M. Markel, Marietta Detwiler and Emily Mills, worked hard to make the affair the success which it is destined to have been.

The Knitting Record—Looking down Shoshone street one pleasant spring afternoon, a maiden lady of somewhat uncertain years said to her companion, who had just called attention to the usual quota of about ten baby cabs to the block so far as one could see, "Yes, I know, and I'm just ashamed to be seen on the street in this town with one." So, and even more so, it is at the present moment with regard to the "knitting work"—no well regulated woman of any age can be found without either a hat, a helmet, a sock or some other woollen article for soldier comfort in process of growth with her fingers as the motive power. The chimney-corner industry of our grandmothers has come to again with a vengeance. Not to know how to knit is a cardinal fault, if not a sin; and the few who must plead guilty are rapidly reforming. This rehearsal of well known facts, at least so far as the knitting is concerned, is about what Mrs. George Hisslop, a Chicago lady who has been here for some time, has been spending some months looking after property interests here. It is evident the knitting fever is also taking hold in this town without one. The chimney-corner industry of our grandmothers has come to again with a vengeance. Not to know how to knit is a cardinal fault, if not a sin; and the few who must plead guilty are rapidly reforming. This rehearsal of well known facts, at least so far as the knitting is concerned, is about what Mrs. George Hisslop, a Chicago lady who has been here for some time, has been spending some months looking after property interests here. It is evident the knitting fever is also taking hold in this town without one. So, and even more so, it is at the present moment with regard to the "knitting work"—no well regulated woman of any age can be found without either a hat, a helmet, a sock or some other woollen article for soldier comfort in process of growth with her fingers as the motive power. ## LETTERS FROM TWIN FALLS MAN IN PERSHING'S FIRST CONTINGENT

Lieut. Homer Youngs to His Parents

The First Review Described—The City Visit—Americans in the Trenches—Cold Rains Continuous—Letters and Socks Most Desired.

THE TIMES is permitted to publish extracts from a series of letters from Lieutenant Homer S. Youngs to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Youngs of this city, covering the period from the first review of American troops on French soil until after they went into the trenches. Lieutenant Youngs went from Moscow, where he was a member of the faculty of the state university. Having won a second lieutenant in the regular army upon examination, he was ordered to France immediately promoted, as his letters indicate. The "Frank" to whom he refers is his brother now waiting at Camp Mills for the rest of Company D, for a chance to cross the pond. "Geraldine" is the wife he left behind him; and it will add so much of personal interest that we cannot refrain from whirling to the TIMES readers that his special anxiety to hear from her is explained by the fact that he had been a father for some time before his last letter was written—neither of two cablegrams sent having been delivered to him. Lieut. Youngs is the official commander for his command and takes good care to keep within the limits, since each one of his official letters bears his "O. K." and official signature.

Somewhere in France.

October 15, 1917.

Dear Folks:
There has been a red letter day for the soldiers. Our first division, composed of the first troops to set foot on French soil, all seasoned, trained soldiers, passed in review for Marshal Joffre and General Pershing. Believe me, I am proud to belong to the first regiment of the first brigade, of the first division. We will be the first to go into action, and the first to show the world how Americans can fight.

Early this morning we formed in the company streets, and the regiment marched in full field equipment to a big plateau, where the other regiments formed one by one. Four regimental bands played the Marseillaise while General Joffre and General Pershing marched past us. Then the good old Star Spangled Banner was played, and every man, I am sure was filled plumb up to the throat with feeling. It would stir the blood of any real American. At the word "march" the troops swung into columns of companies, and marched past the reviewing post—each company saluting on arriving opposite General Joffre. There were a lot of machine guns in action, and I suppose you will see the pictures in the states before long. (We have). I don't suppose you will be anxious to meet me. I was in command of the second half company of the third battalion, immediately behind the colors of the 16th Infantry.

After we had all passed in review the officers fell out and we had the great honor of being personally presented to General Joffre. He shook hands with each of us, and spoke a few words of French to each. I shook hands with General Pershing also. Then General Joffre made a speech which was translated by an American officer. The marshal is a grand old man. The French polka call him Grandpère Joffre.

I have been very busy this last week. My company commander has been on leave of absence and I have been in command of "L" company for the past three days, but he returned today, and I took the responsibility off my shoulders.

The regimental judge advocate was taken sick last week, and due to a shortage of officers, the job fell to me. I tried two cases Saturday in the special court-martial, and one this afternoon after we returned from the review. A judge advocate corresponds to a prosecuting attorney in this country. The government's attorney holds up the government's case, and I have to study like the deuce on my cases.

I still another job, that of a battalion intelligence officer. As soon as we go into active service on the front lines I will be detached from the company and will be on the battalion staff, directing the work of Craig. The work will be very interesting, scouting, patrolling, observing, and obtaining information of the enemy in every possible manner. I will have a picked detachment of the very best and keenest non-commissioned officers and men under me.

Did I tell you that two of Roosevelt's sons are in this division? Teddy Jr. is a reserve major, and Archie is a reserve second lieutenant. I haven't seen Teddy but I see Archie often. He is a tall, slim, well-chap. I have heard that they are both good officers.

We have been having very bad weather, cold, dry. There has not been a day or night since we have moved to this town, that it hasn't kept so monotonous drizzle. The men are getting a little bored, however, and are quite contented with the way we are getting along. I hope you will let me specialize in that work, and

It has been three months since I heard from him. I think he owes me about three letters. I don't even know where he is now.

Geraldine wrote that she had heard from you. Why don't you write to me, too?

Promotion is very fast now. I am not far from the head of the list of first lieutenants, and in all probability will get my captaincy before the winter is over. I sure hope so for the increase in pay will come in very handy.

Well, if I am going to get up in time for reveille in the morning I will have to turn in.

Lots of love to all,
HOMER.

October 23, 1917.

Dear Folks:
Today is a sort of holiday for me and I'm taking a little rest. My company is on guard, and another officer is officer of the day, so there is nothing for me to do.

Last Saturday I got a day's leave of absence and went to a large city near here, to make some necessary purchases. I bought a trench coat, rubber boots, gloves, etc. But I can't get any good heavy wool socks.

It was quite an agreeable trip. I got a room in a good hotel, with a hot bath, and good French cooking. I went to a moving picture show, saw an American photoplay, and almost persuaded myself that I was back in the states. However, the windows in my hotel were covered with blankets to keep out the cold, since the glass had been shattered in a German air raid, of two days previous, and from my hotel I could see the ruins of several "Maisons," completely ruined by previous bombardments. Also one corner had been blown off the railroad station across the street by a recent raid.

I wish I could tell you more about my daily doings, and my plans, but the censorship regulations won't allow it.

We now have our full complement of officers in this company, and my work is much lighter. A bunch of officers have recently arrived from the American training camps, and are being assigned to the regiment. Officially, I am now a first lieutenant in the 53rd Infantry, attached to the 16th Infantry. I don't even know where the 53rd Infantry is, but suppose I will be ordered to join it at some future time.

Tell Ruth that I have adopted another sister, a little French girl, about ten years old who lives next door to me. Her father and brothers are at the front, one brother has been killed. Her mother makes a living by working for the soldiers. She has learned to talk a little English, and says she is going back to America with me after the war. Her name is quite romantic, Ferando l'Andre.

I saw a German plane being shelled on my visit to Saturday. It was a web sock, so high as to be almost invisible, with a little white puff of bursting shrapnel dotting the sky all around it. None of them touched it, however, and it went its way unmolested. I expect it probably met a French hero squadron before it got back to its own lines.

We have all the windows darkened at night, and to be very careful, so that German planes will not be able to locate us and drop bombs. The French have shutters and heavy curtains on all their windows.

There is a comparison of little drunkenness or disorderly conduct among our men, much less than is the case in time of peace in the states. Last pay day passed without a single arrest in my company. The men, most of them at least, realize why they are here and conduct themselves accordingly.

With lots of love,
HOMER.

France, Oct. 27, 1917.

Dear Folks:
I am stationed in another French village, with a platoon, guarding the billets of a battalion which has gone "up front." I suppose you have read in the papers where American troops are in the trenches. It came much sooner than we expected. I can't tell you anything about the movements of my regiment, as yet, but I'll let you know when the ban is lifted, I may be able to tell a little about trench life.

This is a tiresome job. All I have to do is sit in headquarters and answer the telephone, then go out and make the rounds of my sentinels. I make a couple of rounds in the morning, one in the afternoon and two at night, one before, and one after midnight.

I have an orderly who splits the wood, keeps the fire going and gets me my meals. I have read all the old magazines in the place, and read the best ones. Well I am to be relieved by another lieutenant at 5:00 o'clock, and will return to my quarters where things will be more interesting.

I wish you would send me my air mattress, if you have it, also a good American cut knife, and a pair of clip point blades. The French knives are a joke, made of tin. I turned the edge of mine, sharpening a pencil.

I haven't got a letter from the states for ages. I have been held up somewhere, probably will arrive in tons some of these days, that is unless the mail ships have been torpedoed.

Last night I crawled out of my blankets about one o'clock, put on my big sheepskin coat and a pair of hip boots, and made the rounds of the sentinels. I was surprised to find that the flakes coming down like feathers. This morning it has turned into the usual cold rain—I might almost say, the ever-present drizzle. I don't know why this country don't see any snow. I can't find any stationery, so I am writing this on pages from my note book.

When I go back I will have work much to my liking. I have picked several of the most likely men for the quick company, and the best training them in mapping, patrolling and scouting. I hope they will let me specialize in that work, and not put me on something else before I fairly get started.

I see a good many newspaper correspondents, and they seem to be of the opinion that the war is drawing to a close. Germany's morale is just about gone, she has been so consistently beaten by the French and English. I do hope the Italians will stand up against them. It is a favorite stunt with the Germans to take their troops who have been badly punished by the French and English, and have lost their morale, and let them win a few victories to bolster up their courage, then put them back in the lines, where the French and English have the same process to do over again. It is too bad that there is always a weak ally that the Germans can beat.

I am hoping that there will be some word for me when I get back tonight. I am just crazy to hear from Geraldine.

I am in hopes that our division, after its tour in the trenches will be taken out to act as instructors to the green troops coming in. If that is the case I might get to see Frank, but it is about looking for a needle in a haystack to try to find anyone you know around here.

I hope to have more news to write you next time.

At revoir,

Mrs. De Saulles to Remain for Present

Freed By Jury From Murder Charge She Remains With Her Little Son On Long Island.

(U. N. S. Leased Wire)

ROSLYN, L. I., Dec. 3.—In her beautiful home at "The Crossways," Mrs. Blanca de Saulles, freed of the charge of the murder of her former husband, Jack de Saulles, Broadway favorite and Yale athlete, played and romped today to her heart's content with her son, Jack de Saulles, Jr.

The fear that her boy was being estranged from her had disappeared, and the mother is again the cheery beauty of earlier days.

The state of apathy disappeared, a hint of crimson mounts the unusual, pallid cheeks and the eyes flash the fire of youth, vigor and love-love for her boy.

Relatives of Jack de Saulles have abandoned all possible hope of going into court with the plan to prevent the mother from taking her son back to Chile or elsewhere to live. The verdict of acquittal makes the mother the child's guardian.

Mrs. de Saulles received representatives of the press yesterday. While discussing the trial and her own affairs, the boy was brought to his mother, and, she said, "my happiness is now complete."

"I have no immediate plans for the future," she told her guests. "I have no money left and I might have to go to work. No, I would not touch a cent of the money left him (Jack de Saulles). We might go back to Chile to live but for the present we will remain here."

MILK CHEAP FOOD

Is milk an expensive food? The department of animal industry the Utah Agricultural college thinks not. With milk at ten cents a quart it makes the following interesting comparisons to prove its point:

One quart of milk is equal in food value to eight eggs, worth 33 1/3 c.; to three-fourths of a pound of ham, worth 25 3/4 c.; to two pounds of chicken, worth 50 cents; to three-fourths pound of beefsteak, worth 15 3/4 c.; and to four-fifths of a pound of pork, worth 24 cents.

From further statistics collected by the department, it becomes clear that skim milk is also a food not only cheap but valuable. Skimming milk takes out nothing but the fat, and it leaves the product high in proteins and sugar, both essential foods. Two and one-half quarts of skim milk contains almost as much protein and yields about the same amount of energy as a pound of beef. Quoting the skim milk is high as four cents per quart, two and one-half quarts would cost but ten cents, or less than half the cost of the pound of beef.

THE HEALTH THAT BUTTERMILK BRINGS

Anything that is a Satisfying Food, a wholesome, refreshing Drink, and a Dependable Medicine—all at the same time—is certainly a Friend of the Family. Hand the Wreath to Buttermilk.

Buttermilk is liquid meat, with the fat trimmed off, for it contains all the ingredients of fresh milk, except the cream. It is partly digested, for the casein has been split up into fine and flocculent curds and the milk acidulated, saving the stomach this work.

Remember always to EAT BUTTERMILK—NOT DRINK IT. Each mouthful should be thoroughly mixed with the saliva, and swallowed a sip at a time, not taken in great gulps. We preserve pickles and meat in acid, why shouldn't a modification of the same process help preserve men and women?

Salmon Leaf
One can salmon, cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons butter, 2½ tablespoons flour, 1½ pints of milk. Make a dressing of two good tablespoons of melted butter, 2½ tablespoons of flour and 1½ pints of milk, boil until thick, finely mince one can of salmon, grease a baking dish, put in a thin layer of cracker crumbs, then a layer of salmon, then a layer of dressing and so on until the dish is full with dressing on top; sprinkle cracker crumbs on top, dot with butter and bake one hour and a half in moderate oven. In view of the high price of milk, butter and eggs this cake is as timely as it is good.

Oatmeal Soup
One and one-half cups tomatoes, five cups water, one-half large onion or one green pepper chopped, one and one-half teaspoons sugar, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup oatmeal. Boil the water. Add oatmeal and other ingredients. Boil together for three-quarters of an hour in a covered saucepan, frequently stirring. Strain for small children.

Bolled Rice With Milk
One cup of rice, one and one-half cups of milk, one-half ounce of butter substitute, one teaspoon of salt, two and one-half cups of water. The measurements of the articles of this recipe contain the following food value:
Rice.....544
Milk.....190
Butter substitute.....125

Cook in a double boiler until the rice is soft and has absorbed all the liquid.

Soup
Pot au Feu—Take two to four lbs. of plate ribs of beef (according to the size of family), cover with a quart of water to each pound of meat; let come to boil and skim well. Three medium sized carrots; one small white turnip, or piece of yellow turnip; one onion; two leeks; small piece of parsnip, a sprig parsley; one bay leaf; tiny pinch of thyme; half a teaspoon of whole black pepper; four cloves; a small piece of celery, if in season, or pinch of celery salt. Salt to taste. Boil gently six hours.
It is best to tip the meat in a compact flat piece. Red cabbage boiled and served with this is excellent. The meat served for dinner or meat course is delicious, as it has a beautiful flavor. Serve mustard pickle with it.

This soup is economical, as you have a delicious use of meat to serve for dinner and your soup stock as well. The soup must be well skimmed of fat.

Rice With Tomatoes
Wash and drain one-half cup of rice, cook in one tablespoon butter or dripping until brown, add one cup of boiling water, and steam until water is absorbed. Add one and three-fourths cups hot stewed tomatoes or canned tomato pulp, cook until rice is soft and season with salt and pepper.

Corn Muffins
To two tea cups sifted corn meal, add one-half pint milk; one dessert spoon sugar; two eggs, one scant teaspoon salt; two teaspoons baking powder. Whip into light batter and bake in muffin tin, well greased, for about twenty minutes; oven heat—serve immediately.

Baked Oatmeal Muffins
Three-fourths cup scalded milk, one-fourth cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth yeast cake, dissolved in one-fourth cup lukewarm milk, one cup cold cooked oatmeal, two and one-half cups flour.
Add sugar and salt to scalded milk when lukewarm and dissolved yeast cake. Work oatmeal into flour with time of fingers, and add to first mixture; beat thoroughly, cover, and let rise overnight. In the morning, fill tins from rim pans two-thirds full, let rise on back of stove; then pan may gradually heat and mixture to fill pan. Bake in moderate oven twenty-five to thirty minutes.

Corn Cake
To one and one-half cups sifted corn meal add one-half pint milk; one egg (white and yolk beaten separately); one scant teaspoon salt; one tablespoon sugar; one teaspoon baking powder. This makes a very thick batter. Fry on hot, well greased grid-iron. This quantity serves four people.

DO YOU LIKE POPCORN?
The December Woman's Home Companion prints this recipe:
Popcorn Cake
1 quart popped corn.
1 cup sugar.
¾ cup of corn syrup.
¼ cup of water.
2 tablespoons molasses.
1 tablespoon butter substitute.
1 teaspoon salt.
Pick over the popped corn, discarding all hard kernels, and finely chop the corn, or put through meat grinder, using a coarse knife. Put sugar, corn syrup, and water in saucepan, stir until it boils, and cook to 275 degrees F. or until it is very hard when tried in cold water. Add corn, stir until well mixed, return to fire a moment to loosen it, then pour on buttered slab or tray and roll with rolling pin as thin as possible. Cut in squares or break in small pieces. Molasses may be omitted.

New Teuton Drive in Italy Expected

ROME, Dec. 1.—A renewal of infantry fighting on a big scale was forecast today by the violent artillery duels reported from all parts of the front.

Articles from Verona, the Italian base, indicated that the Italians expect a drive in a new quarter.

For some time the Germans and Austro-Hungarians have been shifting troops along the Piave river and the Asiago plateau and military critics express the belief that the next assault by the invaders will be westward of the present arena of fighting.

Having failed to shake the Italian front on the Piave and the Asiago plateau the Germans may switch their main pressure to the sector between the Austro river and Lake Garda, hoping to break through in that district and cut southward on the extreme western edge of the Venetian plain.

THE FIGHTING TRAIL

AN EXTRAORDINARY PHOTOPLAY
Each chapter is a complete story in itself, and leads from one to the other without in the least destroying the sequence of the story. William Duncan and Carol Holloway in the stellar roles accomplish some death defying stunts. The tale in brief follows the adventures which befall the discoverer of a valuable ingredient for the making of a powerful explosive, and the efforts of a foreign enemy to get possession of the secret. The photoplay is unusually beautiful and artistic.

The marvelous adventure story of the great outdoors written by J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Lord.

The eyes of the Central Powers, not an enemy to an individual, but to a country—an international spy.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING EPISODE
John Gwyn, an American mining engineer, is working a western mine to furnish the United States with ingredients of an explosive essential to the manufacture of ammunition. He is fought by an agent of the Central Powers, whose outlaw band murders the owner of the mine, which reverts to the daughter. Gwyn marries her and after many narrow escapes from death at the hands of the gang, succeeds in reaching the mine. Gwyn and Nan, falling out, get the sheriff to round up the outlaws easy to serve the warrants themselves and to capture the leaders. They succeed, but on the way to town are in turn captured and thrown into a deserted cabin.

Nan, by a decoy note, is lured to the cabin. They manage to escape, but are pursued by the outlaws to a hanging bridge. Gwyn crosses and Nan is half way across when the outlaws come on the bridge, which gives way, plunging several of the gang to death. Gwyn, by superhuman effort, holds his end of the bridge, while Nan tries to climb up to him, closely followed by the remnants of the outlaw band.

CHAPTER 10
"I'm sorry," said the Commissioner, "but I can do nothing for you." The sheriff said him a significant glance, and he went on: "You see, they have the title deeds and have staked out a claim. Possession is nine points of the law. The Commissioner, a cringing soul to whom the petty clerkship meant the very means of existence. He owed that job to Gwyn, and now the end he saw of his honest convictions when the sheriff said the word. Nevertheless a look of mingled discomfiture and regret showed in his face as he watched Nan's plucky effort to restore her husband's courage.

Hogan drove up to the door as they emerged, the brave pilot of bunting in the rear of his suit flapping in the wind. The placard above it read: "For Sheriff—Square Deal Hogan."

It was Nan that saw the opportunity, not Gwyn. She pointed eagerly. "Look, dear. Half the voters in Lost Mine were at the wreck today. They saw a good example then of the Causey brand of justice, and now is our chance to show the people that he really is a scoundrel. I'm going to make a speech!"

Standing in the back of the bright red machine, one hand above her head and hair flying in the wind, she drew a picture that drew the sympathy of every man in the crowd. Swept away by the emotion of a great cause, eyes bright almost to tears, she told her story with the greatest of ease. Even the Commissioner, listening behind his closed door, could sense the rising enthusiasm. In it he read a significant message for himself.

"Who will vote for Hogan?" he cried, and the call was greeted with a gusty chorus of approval. Hate waved wildly as she stood looking down into the surging sea of faces about her impromptu platform.

"Good work, little girl!" called a big fellow over at the edge of the crowd. "Right! We're for you!" was the answering shout from another.

Nan raised her hand for silence, ready to continue her speech, but as the cheering subsided the distant rapping of rifle shots came to their ears. Mingled with the single shots came now and then what sounded like a sustained volley. The firing seemed to come from the direction of the mine.

When Von Bleck drove off he did so with a definite purpose. Now that he had the deed needed to put him in possession of the mine, he was the double claim of title and possession he knew there would be no danger of his plans hanging fire. But he must have both to be safe. He rushed to Brown's saloon he drove, and there in the rear room, gathered in a tense circle around the rolling dice, he found his hand waiting away the time at their accustomed parlor. They sprang up as he entered, eager at the prospect of another fight.

"Well," announced Von Bleck, "this afternoon we'll capture the mine, but the busy now. I want results this time. Have a drink on me and then get to work! I will join you later." Five minutes afterward the band was on its way to the attack, with Rawls in command.

Long" re-entered the car and drove to the station, where a long heavy box was taken aboard and carried out into the seclusion of the forest near the track.

Back at the mine Casey's men were preparing the midday meal. The two men who had been left as sentries came in from their posts, and shortly was settling down for a comfortable hour when Rawls' first shot knocked the kettle from its hook. Taken completely by surprise, Casey's men were so demoralized that instead of defending the engine house they took shelter behind an ore train outside.

"Take the engine house," shouted Rawls in command, and half a dozen of the band dashed in through the door and took position to defend the entrance.

Concluded next Tuesday
See this story in Photo Play form today—Tuesday and Wednesday matinee and night, at the Orpheum Theatre. Every chapter a complete story in itself. A jump can be made from one to the other without losing the trend of the story.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Rouch motored over to visit friends at Jerome last Saturday and were gone over Sunday.

Mrs. Stratton and daughter, of Twin Falls, are visitors at Ivan Lincoln's this week. Mr. Stratton is Mrs. Lincoln's mother.

Ansel Fish has had a crew pulling out his orchard, and has taken out about 1700 trees. There are more to come out yet. Mr. Fish has had all the orchard he wants and will raise something that our boys can eat over in France.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Holloway returned from their trip east last week of which they report a good time, but just could not stay away any longer.

Mrs. Fred Atkinson has been a visitor at Bull the past ten days.

W. W. Nichols has bought property in Twin Falls. He has rented his farm to Will and Walter and will move next spring.

The bazaar and chicken pie supper passed off as billed, and was a success in a social and financial way. About $150 was realized from the sale and supper.

R. M. Baird and Mrs. Hall are putting in new reservoirs on their respective places.

It has been reported that G. B. Lohr has sold his place but such is not the case. He is only going to sell some stock at the Kulp & Lohr sale next Wednesday.

CONTROL OF NOXIOUS WEEDS
The last session of the Idaho legislature enacted a Weed Control Act, which makes it possible for the farmers of the state to secure community effort for noxious weeds. The aim of the act is to produce clean seed rather than to depend on the unreliable and unsatisfactory method of trying to clean seed after producing it. It takes community effort to be successful.

under the control of the county commissioners, requires that all of the weeds designated as noxious by the commissioners must be destroyed on all agricultural lands, ditch banks, roadsides, and in all agricultural districts of the county. If the commissioners fail to force this act on their own initiative, ten resident freeholders of the county upon presenting their signed petition, can compel them to do so. Failure to comply with the orders of the commissioners regarding the control of noxious weeds, is defined as misdemeanor and is punishable by fine. Besides this, if any party fails to comply with these orders, the commissioners can hire the necessary help, and the itemized weeds, is charged against and collected from the owner of the land in the same manner as general taxes.

In this time of world need we will be unapologetic if we are content with less than the maximum production of all of our farm crops. Weeds are very responsible for great decreases in both yield and quality. The annual loss to the agricultural industry of the United States, due to weeds alone totals many millions. We know this to be a fact, and we know that use available moisture, plant food, and space, that should be devoted to production of economic crops. Now is the time we should get after the weeds.

See your county commissioners at once. Make sure that they are in control of the Weed Control Act. Get them busy at it. We know that your neighbors are informed. Get them interested. The Pure Seed Department of the Agricultural Extension Division will help you by suggestions and demonstrations as much as possible.

Write time extension division for assistance at any time.

SHEEP AND HOGS IN TWIN FALLS COUNTY.

In co-operation with the county agent, Mr. McLean, visits were made to a number of the small flock owners and hog men. The purpose of these visits was to make a survey of these industries with a view toward marketing the surplus in co-operation with the Farm Bureau. Notice was taken as to the number and condition of the animals represented.

In general the small flocks are in good condition. With few exceptions, however, the lambs are not as large or in as prime a condition as they should be this season of the year. A little more attention to the care and feeding of the lambs whether for the ram market or slaughter will be good economy. The lambs should be furnished extra pasture during the summer. By using the "creek" system this can easily be accomplished, thus giving the lambs the fresh pasture while the mature hogs can be maintained on the sloping pasture.

During this season of the year the flocks are subjected to considerable annoyance from the small fly that lays its eggs in the nose of the sheep. This trouble can be prevented by placing a small amount of pine tar on the nostrils of each sheep. This operation is not a great task with a small flock and you will find it will pay in nation production for time spent.

It is estimated that the farmers of Twin Falls County lose approximately one hundred thousand dollars annually by not utilizing their ditch banks and otherwise waste land. The out in this issue showing the method used by H. H. Schildman, Filer, should interest every farmer. This system if practiced generally would go a long way to solve the grasshopper problem, thus increasing the carrying capacity of the canals. Consider these points and see if they are adaptable to your own farm.

The matter of housing the flock should be of considerable consideration to every producer. You cannot expect maximum production of wool and of lambs except the flock be well taken care of during winter. The cut in this issue of the lambing shed owned by Mr. Sandmyer shows a very modern and efficient type. If you are interested in building a protection for your sheep, a visit to Mr. Sandmyer's place will be well worth your time. Suggestions and help will be rendered from this department to interested parties in Twin Falls.

The hog situation in Twin Falls is similar to other parts of the state. We are producing a very small per cent of our normal number. In general, however, the piglets in better condition than usual for this time of the year in this county. In spite of the high prices of grain most farmers realize the true economy of growing pigs with alfalfa pasture as the exclusive diet.

Mr. L. S. Otto, Filer is breeding a very fine class of Duroc Jersey hogs. His type and breeding is as good as there is in the state. We should encourage this class of live stock and the men who have such attitudes toward the hog industry of the county. We have several good hog men in the county and the interested parties consult them before securing their stock. The present prices of feed and the keen competition, make nothing but the best types profitable. With the present shortage of hogs and the possibility of the continuation of this war, we must do all we can to retain our breeding stock for our next year's production. If you have more sows than you care to keep let it be known through the Farm Bureau News.
