TWIN FALLS WEEKLY NEWS

Established 1903

Twin Falls News Publishing Company,
Lda., Publishers.DISTANCE LENDS ENCHANT-
MENT

A certain jurist appearing here lately on the Chautauqua platform stopped just short of logical and ultimate conclusions in his argument for the doctrine of non-resistance. He argued for removal of restrictions upon immigration, abolition of deportations and of the military and naval forces. If he had declared also for abolition of the police and judiciary system he would have carried his argument to its logical conclusion; his audience would have been enabled better to discern the trend of the whole tenor of his observations and undoubtedly would have been more sparing in its demonstrations of approval.

But the speaker was canny enough to avoid bringing the discussion to a plane where his audience would be directly affected. It was another case of where distance lends enchantment.

SPENDING AS THEY EARN

The soviet government of Russia has put into practice many freakish innovations, so that anything undertaken no longer causes surprise. The latest experiment reported for that of issuing currency notes good only for the month of issue, a different color being provided for each month. It is presumed the dominant idea is to cause holders of the notes to spend their money from day to day and to make impossible any accumulation for the future. If such is the principle on which the government is acting it should be successful.

Spending today, let the morrow take care of itself, is the plan on which many individuals act, but such never become of great importance in the world. Primitive races that had not developed to the point where they realized the value of storing for the future followed that plan. They gorged themselves when food was plentiful and starved when it was scarce because they either had not learned to save in times of plenty for periods of scarcity or had no facilities for storing.

If the accumulation of money is forbidden as a means to prevent the accumulation of wealth the laying away of a surplus of goods would logically come under the same ban, for the products of the soil, the output of the mills and mines constitute wealth, while currency is merely a medium of exchange. If the soviet government wishes to bar absolutely the accumulation of wealth it would be necessary to cease producing more than is consumed from month to month. Applying the plan to currency alone will not fulfill the design.

By means of barter one may accumulate wealth without the use of currency at all. Spending as they go and consuming as they produce will not restore Russia to a condition of prosperity. The Bolshevik leaders in their efforts to establish a purely social state, if such really is their purpose, evidently have not advanced to the primary grade in the principles of economy.

THE MAN AND THE JOB

Notwithstanding that employers are clamoring for help, there still are occasional complaints from individuals of inability to find jobs. It is probably true that the common jobs, the jobs that pay a moderate wage, are the ones that may be obtained the most easily. The ones that require the least training and ability appear to be those in which vacancies occur most frequently.

Positions that pay big money, that require skill and judgment in the holders, are not proclaimed by a card in the window nor are they hawked about. But that many jobs are open is evidenced by advertisements in the newspapers. That any one who wants work should be unable to get it seems improbable. The real trouble in such cases, probably, not so much in inability to get a job as in inability to get the kind of a job one wants. A man may have a fine education, and excellent mental equipment yet if his training is along a line for which there is little demand he will have difficulty in placing himself in a remunerative position.

The only alternative for one who finds little demand for his particular talents is to adapt himself to something else, even though it offers less financial return than he would like. It is true that one succeeds best in that line of work which he likes best. There are instances, though rare in which the pleasure derived from the work done constitutes so small part of the compensation. However, it appears to be the tendency of the age to count financial remuneration as the only compensation worth considering. The joy of doing good work appears to be a waning quality, if we do not misjudge the trend.

We can readily comprehend how one well equipped for responsible duties might find his particular field congested, but for one to admit himself down and out because of such a condition is also an admission of lack of persistence and adaptability. No man is entirely down and out unless he wants to be. He may be moneyless and hungry, but if an unconquerable spirit survives there is hope for him. He will grab the first opportunity, no matter what it offers, and then look for something better. Today there is no necessity for any man possessing health, no matter what his education, to be out of work. He can get some kind of employment if he wants it.

ALLIES' DUTY TO SUPPORT
GREEKES

The allies are faced with defiance of no mean order in the near east. The revolt of Mustafa Kemal's Turkish nationalist forces brings the premier face to face with decision whether they shall compel compliance with the treaty or shall yield. Compromise with the rebels would be disgusting because of the ingility and insolence of the Ottoman, and dangerous because of its invitation to Austria and Germany to take the victors' conviction. Treaty enforcement against military demonstration, however, demands military measures, and to supply these neither the people of France, nor England, nor Italy have shown any eagerness. They have had enough of war, for a time.

What is more natural, under the circumstances, than to look with favor upon the proposal to loose the Greek armistice against the Turk? In prospect, a Greek campaign may seem an easy solution of the problem, but it is likely to prove a desperate chance unless the Greeks are given vigorous backing by their powerful sponsors and allies. The premier have had bitter evidence of the futility of weak-kneed military ventures in their wailing campaign toward Russia. Campaign after campaign directed against the Bolsheviks had failed mainly because it was not backed adequately with men and materials.

It would be pitiful to permit the Greeks to waste themselves against the fanatic armies of Mustafa Kemal. If we must have a campaign against the Turk the world will be happier for making it aggressive and decisive. There is little reason to suppose that Greece, alone, can wage such a war.

ANOTHER KING FALLS IN TEST

For all the fine phrases about "putting country before love," King Alexander of Greece has been guilty, in abandoning his wife, of plain desertion, an offense which in this country often lands a man in jail. Scant sympathy will be met from Americans. And Premier Venizelos is likely to fall in the esteem of the people of this country for insisting that the young monarch give up his wife.

The only objection that has been raised to the marriage is that it was too hasty; that the bride was not of an equal rank with Alexander. Had she been a member of a present or former reigning family of Europe no matter how decadent mentally or morally, there would have been no disapproval of the wedding. The possession of royal blood would have made up for all shortcomings, and nothing, it appears, can atone for the lack of it.

Morganatic marriages are recognized as valid binding by the country, and the children are legitimate, and no other marriage can take place during the lives of the contracting parties. "Owing to her inferiority of birth, however, Alexander's wife could not be recognized as queen, and if they had children they would have no right to succession to the throne or the entailed property of the father. Hence Alexander must desert his bride and, in due course, divorce her so that he may be a free man to marry a princess whose children are legitimate and no other marriage can take place during the lives of the contracting parties.

He would cut a much more manly figure if he would abdicate rather than give up his wife. And all the heroics about putting "country before love" are likely to prove of no avail after all; for the days of kings are numbered and Alexander may find himself being long without a crown as well as without his wife.

The aging spectacle is but another illustration of the decadence of the "royal strains" of Europe which belong to an ancient age and are being "scrapped" by one nation after another on the continent.

Suffered Intense Pain

"A few years ago when visiting relatives in Michigan something I had eaten brought on an attack of cholera morbus," writes Mrs. Mabel McMillan, Marion, Mo. "I suffered intense pain and had to go to bed. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy and one dose relieved the pain. I only took two or three more and I was all right. I don't know how many others have suffered from cholera morbus but they did the same."

ATTORNEY GENERAL SENDS OUT
PRIMARY ELECTION LAW OPINION

Interesting and Informative Instructions are Compiled by Roy I. Black with Relation to Mass Functioning for the Nomination of Candidates to Make Official Race

Following is a memorandum and explanatory opinions given out from the office of the state attorney general concerning primary election laws. Copies have been received by the county auditor, for information and convenience.

1. The provision of the general election law requiring the registrar to place the voters' names in the hands of the proper judges or election is not applicable to primary elections. The names should be retained by the registrar until the general election.

2. The registrar should deliver the register to the judges of the election at primary elections and in cases where there are more than one set of judges acting on the same day, it will be necessary to prepare an additional register for each set of judges.

3. Poll books in which clerks of election in numerous counties should be furnished at primary elections, also a check or poll list showing the registered voters of each precinct.

4. The laws providing for absent voters are applicable under the new primary law.

5. The primary election in 1920 is held on the first Tuesday of August to-wit: August 3.

6. The candidate for a district, county or precinct office to be voted for at a primary election must supply the statute form of nomination by delegates to the county convention, the name of the candidate to what office he becomes a candidate for.

7. The words, "the _____ election, held at _____ A. D. _____" should be printed on the nomination paper in section 543, compiled statutes as a clerical error, and corrected.

8. Delegates to the county convention, under the law, required to be nominated as provided for the nomination of delegates to the county convention under the provisions of sec. 543, and their names are to be printed on the official ballot for the primary election held at the county convention.

9. No fees are required to be paid upon the filing of nomination papers for delegates to the county convention, committee members, justices of the peace, and constables.

10. Names may be written in on the primary ballot for any officer, delegate, precinct officer or committeeman and be counted the same as if printed on the ballot.

11. Time for filing nominations for the primary election for 1920 closes on the night of the 3rd of July.

12. Nomination papers have to be filed for precinct officers, e. g., justice of the peace and constable.

13. If no primary election is held in a county, the county central committee has now power to appoint delegates for that precinct nor has anyone else, and the precinct has no representative in the county convention.

14. Following are the dates of the various elections and conventions: Primary election, August 3. County convention, August 17. State convention, August 24. General election, November 2.

15. Proxies cannot be used at either state or county elections.

16. Where no nominations are filed within the time limited by law, prior to a primary election, the county central committee may call for a nomination for that office prior to the holding of the primary, but may fill a vacancy on the ticket after the primary.

17. Where there is a vacancy on the ticket for the office of county commissioner, the vacancy is filled by the county central committee and not by the governor.

18. A person duly qualified may be a candidate for and hold the office of county central committee and not by the governor.

19. A person duly qualified may be a candidate for and hold the office of county central committee and not by the governor.

20. A person duly qualified may be a candidate for and hold the office of county central committee and not by the governor.

HULIT LOSES MANAGEMENT

Change is Ordered at Bickel Game Ranch by Directors of Breeders' Association

Andrew B. Hulit has lost his position as general manager of the Bickel game breeding farm in the Hagerman valley, the Boise statesman says in a general resume of affairs connected with the management of the Idaho Game Breeders' association.

Mr. Hulit has not been satisfactory as a manager of the association's affairs, according to inference derived from the Statesman's announcement, and his resignation was requested at a meeting of the board of directors last week. At this meeting L. T. Wright of Twin Falls, was named vice president of the association, with Adam Schubert of Gooding, president.

Following is the account carried by the Boise paper:

Andrew B. Hulit, general manager of the Idaho Game Breeders' association, was asked to resign at a meeting of the board of directors held in Boise Thursday night. Mr. Hulit was asked to resign because the directors deemed that the services of a general manager were not necessary, that Mr. Hulit's ideas of business management were not in accord with those of the directors, and that his agitation against the fish and game laws of the state was a hindrance to the welfare of the association, according to Paul S. Bickel of Boise, who is a member of the board of directors.

Mr. Hulit has served as general manager since March. Adam Schubert of Gooding was made president of the association at Thursday's meeting. Other members of the association are L. T. Wright of Twin Falls, vice president; H. L. Streeter of Boise, treasurer; and Miss Belle Silvernail of Boise, secretary.

M. D. Sooley of Fairfield was made superintendent of the association's farm in Hagerman valley, near Wendell and also a member of the board of directors. Members of the board of directors are Ray T. Blomquist of Nampa, M. D. Sooley of Fairfield, Colonel L. V. Catron of Boise, Paul S. Bickel of Boise, Adam Schubert of Gooding, L. T. Wright of Twin Falls, H. L. Streeter of Boise, and Miss Belle Silvernail of Boise.

Mr. Blomquist is to have sole charge of the sale of stock, while Mr. Sooley will be superintendent and in charge of the farm at Wendell. Miss Silvernail who is also assistant treasurer, will be located on the game breeders' farm.

The association is to be governed entirely by the game laws of the state," said Mr. Bickel Friday. "We expect to go forward following the reorganization of the association, with the game laws extensively in the fall."

"We want to co-operate with the state game department, and were were pleased to have Mr. Sooley as superintendent. Mr. Hulit's services were retained," was Mr. Bickel's statement in regard to the forced resignation.

AUTHORITIES OPPOSE
CANNING POWDER USE

In some communities there is a widespread use of canning powder. Both boric and salicylic acid are bought from druggists for this purpose. Large quantities of these acids are also sold at high prices under fanciful canning compound names.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a warning against the use of any preserving powder or canning compound. Their use encourages careless and uncleanly work, and their excessive use may be attended with serious effects upon digestion and health. It is entirely practicable to "put up" fruits and vegetables so that they will keep indefinitely by preserving the products with heat. There is no reason for taking the risk of using canning powder.
