HEARING ON FERRY RATES

Utilities Commission Investigates Shoshone Ferry.

COMMERCIAL CLUB URGES REDUCTION ON EXTRA PASSENGERS

Hearing for Brief on the Case Set for July Twenty-Fourth at Boise, at Which Time Decision Will be Made.

The public utilities commission as a body convened in this city Friday to investigate the complaint filed by the Twin Falls Commercial club against the high toll charges on the Shoshone falls ferry. All of the commissioners, Alex Hammett, A. A. Brechehafer and John W. Graham, were present together with H. H. Miller, auditor for the commission and has for some time previous investigated the expenses and profits of the ferry operating company.

The hearings were held in the Twin Falls county court house and were attended by a number of interested people. For the Commercial club, which made the complaint, the testimony of the managers of Owlsey and Riverside ferries showed that the receipts for each month were $150 with a yearly expense of less than $1000. The charges on these two ferries was about one-half that charged by the Shoshone falls, with expenses nearly as great and smaller traffic.

BUYS HORSES FOR FRENCH ARMY

Ex-Senator Dubois Becomes Purchaser of War Stock.

The following is from the Great Falls Tribune: On next Tuesday, former United States Senator, Dubois of Idaho will arrive in Great Falls to take up the work of buying horses for the French government for use in the war in Europe and will make his headquarters at Hotel Hamilton during his stay in this city. His financial affairs will be handled through the Central bank, which acts locally for the National City Bank of New York, the institution that is looking after the interests of the French government in buying the horses. The Shoshone City bank is the largest bank of the country and owners of horses to sell need have no fear about the money when the horses are bought because the money will be in Montana and at command for the use.

Senator Dubois has been buying at Kailup and four other points for the French government has been attending to pass upon the animals presented. According to the local bank for the past few days a number of animals have changed hands through the senator at Kailup and in the territory around Browning, Mont. and Great Falls. In fact he has been buying at Kailup and Browning. Senator Dubois is as well as a favorably known by Montana almost as in his home state of Idaho. He served in the United States senate with Senators Towser, Saunders, Carter, Mantle and Gibson. In fact he served with every senator Montana has had with the exception of the present senators, Meyers and Walsh, and he is a great friend of both of these senators. He was one of the leaders of the silver fight and on that issue left his party and withdrew from the convention with his entire delegation at the St. Louis convention in 1896.

HOLD WOOL SAYS GROWER

Protestant Sheepman Gives Out a Few Opinions.

Salt Lake, July 5.—A. J. Knoglin, vice president of the National Woolgrowers' association, arrived in Salt Lake last night on his return from a route to their home in Chicago after an extended visit to the Pacific coast. Mr. Knoglin is optimistic over the wool and lamb market and is confident that the wool and lamb markets are at their best in many years, with every indication of improvement. For this reason he is optimistic of a prosperous year. My advice to growers is to hold their wool for higher prices. The demand for wool in foreign markets is strong and the drought has weakened the influence of tariff, absence as affecting the price of wool in this country. Growers who have held their best grade of wool for higher prices will realize good prices before long. The heavy demand for coarse wools by the waring nations for the making of uniforms has cleared the United States of that grade of wool.—Pocatello Tribune.

INCREASE HEAT RATE

Power Company Applies to Commission for Raise in Present Contract

Will Affect Large Number of Patrons Buying Heat From Great Shoshone & Twin Falls Water Power Company

The patrons of the Great Shoshone & Twin Falls Waterpower Company were considerably stirred up over an item appearing in the Boise papers to the effect that the company had applied for a raise in its heating rates covering all of its territory including Twin Falls, where a large number of the people are using electric heat. The increase was not specified in the item but in the opinion of those who have followed the trend of power operation to mean that the company will try to discourage any more contracts for heat. While the number of contracts in operation in this city is hard to estimate there are enough to make the company's ordinary increase of rates very bitter. At present those who are using electric heat claim that the rate now is more than it would cost to heat the house by any other form of heating. There is no doubt but the increase will meet with much opposition by those who have paid for expensive electric equipment and who have at present no other method by which to heat their homes. In the early days the company made a low rate for heat and pushed the business claiming that the current used in irrigation in summer could be utilized for heat in winter. In a couple of years Twin Falls was known over the state as the electrical city and in a number of cases homes were built with no chimneys, the owners counting upon electric heat all together. But after the first low rate the history of the electrical heating has been one of steady rise at the expense of each contract until those who have had no longer figure the cheapness of electricity. A number each year have refused to stand for a higher contract and have cut off to use some other form. It is conceded by those interested that if the rates go into effect for which permission is now asked, that few of the consumers will renew contracts.

RIM-TO-RIM BRIDGE

Estimate From Reputable Bridge Firm Brings Cost Down.

The flight of reason, experience and absolute technical knowledge has been applied on the matter of the Hansen rim-to-rim bridge by a company of unquestioned ability and impartiality. The Twin Falls Times last week published a guaranteed estimate of the cost of the Hansen bridge given by the Missouri Valley Bridge and Iron Company, which has built some of the largest bridges in the west and is recognized as one of the most competent and responsible companies in this territory. The estimate given for a bridge which will carry safely a fifteen ton tractor, which is ample for any use that may arise. This estimate guaranteed to give a bid for less than $500,000 on this bridge, and when it is submitted to competitor bids will probably be reduced to $300,000. This figure is what those who have kept in touch with the situation have claimed all along. At the public hearing on the Hansen bridge last year Engineer Horace B. Stoney, Salt Lake City, a consulting engineer and specialist on suspension bridges, made an estimate at the home office returned an estimate of $500,000. At this time and with this estimate the support of the Hansen bridge was unanimous for the people of the city. The Hansen bridge is a sound business necessity and investment. Later on the chief engineer of the Missouri Valley Bridge and Iron Company, E. J. Creighton, was in town and visited the site of the bridge. He also made the statement that his company would furnish a guarantee of $500,000. He explained that this estimate could not be absolutely accurate unless they were working by double standards and specifications. He took with him the measurements of the site, and after working up the data with his corps of assistants at the home office returned an estimate of $300,000. CONVICTS TO BUILD STATE ROAD

Scenic Road to Shoshone Falls Will be Built by State.

Steps were taken by the state highway commission at its meeting Friday toward the carrying out of the act of the Thirtieth session which provided for the employment of convicts in the building of state highways. The state highway engineer was instructed to confer with the warden of the state penitentiary with regard to the using of convicts on the grade at Shoshone falls. Shoshone falls is one of the state's greatest scenic points and the state highway system touches it. North of Snake river, at the falls is a steep grade which must be cut down to be incorporated in the state highway system. The commission proposed that the work be done with convict labor. While the warden of the penitentiary has been instructed to outline a plan whereby the convict labor can be used, it is unlikely that work will be done there before September 1.

Nation's Revered Relic Attracts Crowd In Capital.

Twenty Thousand People Pass Bell in One Hour

Boise and vicinity turned out this morning 20,000 strong and witnessed the patriotic and inspiring sight of the old Liberty Bell, with its gazing crack. As the people gazed upon the sacred relic of American history, which rang out the freedom of a nation, the multitude was thrilled with the same fire of patriotism which their forefathers felt in the days of the Revolution. Even before the bells of the city pealed forth announcing the coming of the old bell, half the populace of Boise was out. Later ones were awakened and hastened forth to greet the emblem of freedom as it was brought into Boise on the special train on the last day of the journey to the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco.

KILLING WILD HORSES

Great Herds Being Exterminated in Nevada.

From Ely comes a report that more than 200 wild horses had been shot and killed during the past few days. Great roving bands of these animals, a picturesque feature of Nevada life, are being exterminated by the state to the ranchers and cattlemen of the state and they have determined that the best method of extermination is by the most powerful stallion, as many as 75 horses roam in one band, breaking down fences, eating domestic animals from the range and committing very other depredations. They are very wild and the most expert squatters seldom able to capture one of the herd. The Bureau has demanded for horses has lately prompted a number of cowboys to organize an expedition in an attempt to capture some of the herd. The new attitude of the editor of the Twin Falls Chronicle on questions of the proper expenditure of county money can be very easily explained if the records of the county warrants for the past five years are searched. A life size ledger regarding some of those expenditures can be seen at a glance. It will pay the editor of the Chronicle to emulate the claim.

The election of Evan Evans, of Grangeville, to succeed George Day as chairman of the Republican state central committee is a happy choice and one that pleases all sections of the state. Mr. Evans is one of the conservative members of the party and a man of broad-gauge business experience. He has been identified with Idaho politics for many years and understands the situation as well or better than most any other party leader. With Mr. Evans at the head of the organization a better spirit will no doubt prevail among all sections of the state, thus making a clear-cut party victory possible next year.

Some men use various methods for dodging pointed questions when in public office. Probably Commissioner Carlson believes that muddling of his subsidized newspaper will divert people from the real issue. Why does Commissioner Carlson fail to explain his action with regard to the Shoshone falls grade? Will he please explain why several thousand dollars of the highway bond issue was used for ordinary road expenses before a single stretch of the state highway was touched. Forty thousand dollars bond fund had shrunk to twenty-three thousand last year. It was used to pay road work elsewhere than the place where it was intended to be used.

Will Mr. Carlson's subsidized muddling organ please explain (if there is no blazer in the woodpile) why after cutting for bids to complete the Shoshone falls grade according to the survey of the state highway commission, the bids were turned down and the state highway survey ignored? Will he explain why a chance is being taken on losing some two thousand dollars of state aid on that grade in order to follow the ideas of the pet fox?

The attack on J. Pfeifort Morgan by the crazed Holt and the subsequent suicide of the assassin is only a straw showing the way that sentiment among certain people is drifting in this country. It shows that underneath the seeming national prosperity is an undercurrent of unrest which may prove dangerous. The idea which is prevalent among the poor, that men like Morgan, Rockefeller, Carnegie are enemies of the common people is not without foundation of fact. Executive profits have built up colossal fortunes, which now these men are allowing some to come back in donations for this and that charity. But the fact is that at all times the excessive profits from exploitation of the common necessities of life by these men is keeping pinching poverty ever at the heels of many people. The idea that the government exists to foster and protect the monopoly has been growing. It will continue to grow until the outcry is either heeded or a violent outbreak comes as it has in every country of the globe. It cannot be dubbed Socialism in a way because it is prevalent in the minds of countless people who deride Socialism and Socialistic tendencies, yet who are honestly alarmed by the increasing balance of power in the hands of men of wealth. Holt did no good to the cause for which he gave his life and yet every such attempt marks a wide change in the ideas of American liberty, which start such crazed acts of protest.

IN THE INDIANA BELFRY Pursuit of the "higher-ups" responsible for election crookedness in Indianapolis and Marion county, even though the trail leads to the topmost rung of the ladder, up to the belfry where the big bell-ringers dwell, was promised by Alvah J. Rucker before his election as county prosecutor last fall. Now, declares the Indianapolis News (Ind.), he "has kept the faith" by securing the indictment of 128 officeholders and politicians for conspiracy to violate state election laws. At the head of the list are Thomas Taggart, Democratic national commissioner for Indiana, Mayor Joseph E. Bell, of Indianapolis, and Samuel V. Parrott, chief of police; there follow members of city boards, minor officials, and, to the Toledo Blade's phrase, "political hawkers and hucksters of varying degrees of prominence and importance." It is charged in the indictment that the conspiracy began before the primary in May and extended through the election held in November, 1914. The indicting of Mr. Taggart—who says he has done nothing wrong, and, in fact has "been a regular angel"—appeals to the outside press as an attempt to fix some of the responsibility for corruption upon a recognized state boss. The appearance of the name of Mayor Don M. Roberts, now serving a term in Leavenworth prison for his share in the Terre Haute election frauds, links the two cases in many editorial minds. Indiana, says the New York Tribune, "is to be scourged of her superabundance of corrupt officials in the manner of ancient Egypt when swept by the plague which picked off her first born sons and helped to set the child-herd of God free. And the New York Evening Post sees now at hand the 'evidence' of a almost state-wide machinery for the corruption of municipal elections in Indiana." "Two months ago the Mayor of Terre Haute, and certain associates, were sent to prison for frauds in the same election of November 3, 1914; in Goshen and Elkhart, city officials have just been indicted for various offenses; in Rockville a court has been sitting upon election frauds in Vigo county; and it is predicted that the present investigation, centering in Indianapolis, will reveal trails leading to Evansville and Gary. It has already been established that repeaters and other 'workers' were exchanged last fall between the capital and Terre Haute. "In all this it is hard to hold any one responsible for the indictments have included Democrats, Republicans, and Progressives. Interpartisan combinations, however, have doubtless been made easy by the existence of corrupt party organizations, and it is pleasing to see the investigation reach leaders in the Taggart and Fairbanks ranks. If it is pushed to completion it may show the ramifications of an intricate web of political intrigue, and deliver the state from iniquities that have been admitted but unpunished for decades. The Terre Haute prosecution was vigorously pushed by Federal authorities; in conducting that at Indianapolis the state officers have an opportunity to exhibit equal zeal. In Indianapolis The News (Ind.) has no doubt the existence of a "corrupt and rotten system," though it remembers that an indictment is one thing and a conviction another. It says: "Recent elections in Indianapolis have seen many of the rotten practices that finally brought Terre Haute to the verge of anarchy. Terre Haute repeaters have been brought to Indianapolis to teach how primaries could be controlled. More votes have been cast at times for machine candidates in some precincts than the total number of the party's voters, living and dead, in the precinct. In some precincts nearly every vote cast has been counted for the favored candidate, notwithstanding it was known that other candidates had been voted for. The rotten conditions have existed so long that feeling was growing up here that everything or anything, to win was permissible. It had come to be such a matter of course that many men did not realize that they were committing crimes. Nothing but a landslide could defeat the machine. To correct such a condition and to save the city from utter political degeneracy was the problem. "Every one knows that there has been crookedness. The only questions are, Who are the men guilty of it, and whether the men indicted are guilty." According to the Indianapolis Star (Prog.), however, it is well known that these indictments have been long and ardently craved by certain influences to which Taggart and Bell have refused to bow the knee, that this stigma upon their names was coveted for the publicity that might be made of it." And readers of this paper are reminded of the legal assumption "that even an indicted man is innocent until the guilt is proved."

At the distance of Toledo from Indianapolis, The Blade finds it indeed "impossible to tell whether the action of the grand jury represents an earnest and bonafide endeavor to clean up election crimes and abuses in Indiana or merely a phase of the old feud between the Fairbanks crowd and the Taggart outfit." But in either case, it opines, "the string ought to be good for Indiana politics, and that whether or not a single manipulator goes to jail." Of course, says The Tribune, of South Bend, Indiana, the state must suffer by reason of the notoriety; "that can not be avoided." Yet it adds: "It is distinctly to the credit rather than to the discredit of Indiana that it is cleaning house thoroughly and vigorously. When the job is done this will be the most wholesome state politically in the Union. This is, providing the work is done well, completely and without regard to anything but the law and the evidence." Outside of Indiana many papers naturally comment upon the more general implications of the Indianapolis indictment. Perhaps, observes the Philadelphia Public Ledger, R. justifies the hope that "after all, the national

CHAPTER I.

A Heritage of Hate.

It is June in Virginia, June in the year of our Lord 1882. The fields are green, the early blossoming of the huckleberry gives a fragrance to the air. At such a time, in such a scene, and such surroundings, two horsemen meet. Both are men of striking appearance and proud presence and are in the maturity of their middle autumn. They are Stanley, cousin in blood. The one on the bay hunter, Judge Lamar Stanley, is smooth of face, that is marked with a cruel and heavy line. His face is harsh and set, and the grim lines of his countenance set the grimace at the approach of his kinsman, Colonel Arthur Stanley. The latter rides his chestnut saddle like a soldier. Judge Stanley's seat is that of a huntsman. Even as they ride they differ. Colonel Stanley's face is kinder. A white mustache and imperial add to his soldierly appearance.

In Richmond during the war Judge Lamar Stanley had been high in the confidence of the cabinet of President Jefferson Davis. In the field his cousin, Arthur Stanley, followed the fortunes of the Confederate arms as a member of the staff of General Lee. Crossing each other in love, crossing each other in mutual enmity and social ambitions, their mutual hatred grew with their growing years. There were deep causes for all this in the thwarted social ambitions of the judge. As the son of the elder branch of the American Stanley, springing from their common ancestor, Sir Arthur Stanley, a gentleman adventurer, who came to America in 1615; Colonel Stanley held possession of the precious family heirloom, the diamond from the sky.

The family tradition ran that this great gem had fallen in a blazing meteor at the feet of Sir Arthur Stanley three centuries ago just as he was about to be burned at the stake by the Indians, whom he had in some way affronted and aroused.

The legend was that the Indians had deemed the falling meteor an omen from the Great Spirit that the white man about to be tortured was under the favor of his protection. This legend further stated that Sir Arthur Stanley himself had accepted the diamond from the sky as a token of supernatural favor, especially as the Indians had called it "the falling star" and as "The Falling Star" Sir Arthur Stanley himself had been called after his banishment from the court of King James of England for some wild escapade gallantly when he was but turned of twenty-two.

By the age stained family archives kept in the strong box at Stanley hall, the great mansion home of Colonel Stanley, there was the will of the wild Sir Arthur, and at its end there was a strange prophetic clause. This clause read that when the noble line of Stanleys became extinct in England and an heir of the old Stanley earldom was sought among the older sons of the ancient family of Stanleys in Virginia, the diamond from the sky, the heritage of the older son of this elder branch, should be borne and worn back to England by the American war when he became the Earl of Richmond.

At the time we write—that is, in June, 1882—the last of the earls of Stanley was a bachelor invalid and recluse, without hope or desire of an heir.

Colonel Stanley had no son to succeed to the earldom in England. He was married to a fair young wife, who expected shortly to become a mother and a bitter triumph over those who hate the most means to you, Sir.

"Well, better fortune than that to the child you expect," said the colonel with a kindly smile. "And here is $20 to buy christening clothes and found the fortune of my expected namesake—if he is a boy."

"It will be a boy, and you will be aware of him," said the gypsy woman, and again she closed her eyes and shivered as in great pain, not noticing the money.

"Take it, you fool woman, when the kind gentleman offers it!" snarled the man.

Seeing the colonel still offering the money, the gypsy woman muttered her thanks and took the money reluctantly, and the gypsy, loud in his protestations of gratitude, drove his caravan to the cope.

Arriving at the gateway of Stanley hall, the grand old mansion built by a great-grandson of the original forbear of the family in America, the colonel entered his home up the splendid wide driveway. There on the lawn his flower faced young wife, Ethel, in a garden chair, awaited in alken shawls and carefully attended by her old colored nurse, Mammy Lucy, greeted him.

The old negro man servant, neat, chief factotum and butler of the establishment, appeared on the piazza and called loudly to a half grown colored lad to take the master's horse.

The colonel and the old nurse gently supported the flower faced young wife from the lawn to the portals of the great mansion.

It must not be thought that any overwhelming desire for title or exalted position for themselves or for their expected child actuated Colonel Stanley and his fair young wife. In fact, the colonel was yet only contented but proud in his position as head of the Stanley family in America and master of Stanley hall. It was only the grasping snobbery of his cousin that had led the colonel to encourage the hope that his wife might bear a son to cement his kinsman's toe of his lapses.

For the proud elder branch of the Stanleys—the Lords Stanley of Warwickshire, England—only survived in the person of a very old bachelor invalid. The next of kin and in direct line for the earldom of Stanley was Colonel Stanley of Virginia, and, failing his surviving or having a son, the earldom would go to his cousin, Judge Stanley or the judge's son, Blair, now a child of three.

It was a sore point with the last Lord Stanley that he had always hated women after a love disappointment in early manhood and had never married, and now the succession would go to what he denominated as his " Yankee relatives."

But the diamond from the sky was a comforting thought in a measure to

"What do I care what all your wretched wife!" snarled the judge. "Drive your horse off my land and get out. It is my judge in this country."

"Mammy you are president of the United States, too," grumbled the judge. "Do you think you own the horse because the gentleman that just rode by knocked you off your horse on the road?"

Roused to a burst of fury, the judge drove his horse at the gypsy and lashed him cruelly with the heavy riding whip he always carried. A wan but handsome gypsy woman, clutching her infant in her arms, sprang out from the van as though to protect the gypsy from the sheer brutality of the horseman. Stanley struck the gypsy woman across the face, leaving a livid welt. To his surprise she never flinched but turned to the judge and said: "The bitterest disappointment of your life and a death that will be a husband's feast for you for that blow," she said tenderly, a light of prophecy in her compassionate eyes.

The judge faltered and wheeled his horse, but turned to the gypsy man he cursed him again and bid him be off his land. Then he rode on.

Meanwhile Colonel Stanley had ridden to the village of Fairfax and had halted his horse at the gate of a pretty cottage, a sign by the gate bore the words, "Dr. Henry Lee."

The doctor was an amiable man of some sixty years, inclined to corpulence, a kinsman of General Robert E. Lee. The doctor had been a surgeon in the Confederate army. Some fifteen years older than the colonel, he had been the guardian of the other. During the war the colonel had saved the doctor's life by carrying him when wounded back to the Confederate lines under a gathering fire.

Between them, if others were needed, was the mutual hatred they bore to Judge Lamar Stanley, who through some legal chicanery had impoverished the doctor in his old age, a breach of confidence he got not rest, "My doctor, come at once. My wife will need you tonight," said the colonel.

As the colonel neared his estates and was within sight of the broad lawn of his colonial mansion, Stanley hall, a landmark of the countryside, he saw a gypsy van approaching. On the driving seat were two figures, a man and a woman. The man was bellowing hoarse curses at a disappearing horseman, whom even at the distance the colonel recognized as his hated cousin, the judge.

As he neared the approaching gypsy outfit the colonel noticed the woman had fainted from pain and weariness. He had just time to wheel his horse close to her and to catch her as she was falling from the seat.

In a few words the gypsy man explained their miserable situation. The kindly heart of the colonel was touched. The fainting woman had now revived and was feeling better. "So Judge Stanley has ordered you off the earth?" remarked the colonel. "Well, my good man, that little cove of words right over there, not far from my house, belongs to me. Camp there and wait for me. I will see your sick wife gets every attention. She expects a child, you say? Ah, the curse of Eve falls alike in hut and mansion. We expect this same momentous event at my house. You are doubly welcome. I will send Dr. Lee, our family physician, to attend your wife."

The gypsy woman now spoke for the first time. "For your kind heart I read your fortune." A bitter disappointment

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY

As the colonel bent over to kiss it. The old nurse softly hustled to the door and admitted the doctor.

"In the copse of woods, hardly farther than a stone's throw from the mansion, night was falling darkly with the mutterings of an approaching storm. Over a smoldering fire crouched Matt Harding, the gypsy, and at his short black pipe a cry of pain from the weather-stained tent near by roused the man, and he arose and suddenly walked over and entered the shabby shelter.

In a few moments he emerged and hurriedly in the direction of Stanley Hall.

As he rapped at the great door of the mansion Ned, the colored butler, opened it, throwing a glare of yellow light upon the sinister face of the gypsy.

"You can't see nobody in this house, Mr. Man," said Ned.

"But I tell you Colonel Stanley promised me his doctor would be here tonight and that he would attend my wife. She needs the doctor now, it's a matter of life and death. And it's not a matter of life and death without being attended by the gypsy, is it?"

"Do colonel's alms don't foolish kindnesses for poor white trash," grumbled the dorky as he shut the door on the strange caller and went reluctantly to bear his message.

But the good physician was positive that no harm would come from his absence for an hour or so and hastened away on his errand of mercy.

At the little station of Fairfax meanwhile the now frightened London lawyer was wondering whether he should be the alpha and the omega of the had provided himself and fortified himself behind his luggage. As the best of horse hoofs drew near the English lawyer rose with leveled rifle and cried:

"Halt! Who goes there, friend or foe?"

The approaching horseman, Judge Langford, called out: "It's a friend! Don't shoot!" And then he rode up to the platform and introduced himself to the Englishman and explained matters to the latter's satisfaction.

Then the judge fastened the luggage of his visitor to the two saddle horses, and they rode off together.

In the copse of wood the pattering night rain fell upon the gypsy tent. The storm passed as quickly as it had come, and the moon shone out regrettably. The flap of the tent opened, and the bulky form of the good doctor was seen in the moonlight. He held a small swaddled object in his arms.

"Matt Harding," said Dr. Lee impressively, "the storm has passed with the miracle of birth; and you may say, as was said of old, 'Unto us a child is born; unto us a son is given.'"

"Them's fine words for rich folk," grumbled the gypsy gruffly. "To me it don't mean nothing but another mouth to feed."

The doctor, regarding the man with such a look of sternness that the gypsy took the child from the doctor and entered the tent with it after promising the physician to take good care of it and its mother.

The good doctor hurried back to Stanley hall, where all were impatiently awaiting him. He smiled reassuringly at the colonel's wife, the colonel and the nurse.

"A fine boy has been born to the gypsy woman," he said. "It seems an omen of like good luck to Stanley hall. We may expect a little cart to be born here this night," he added gaily.

"The colonel's flower face" wife shook her head and smiled back at the old doctor, and the colonel spoke quickly, "I have no ambitions for any little for a son of mine," he said. "But I wish a boy if bit to thwart my cousin, Lamar Stanley."

A bitter expression crept into the face of the negro woman at the mention of Judge Stanley's name.

"Don't you worry, honey," she said softly to her mistress, "an' don't you worry either, colonel. Do good. Lord don't intend no luck for Judge Lamar Stanley. I was a slave girl on his father's place when do Judge was a young man. He killed my brother like a dog, an' he had me bent insensible when I called him 'Gin'."

A girl child was born at Stanley hall at midnight. The colonel blanched at the news, but the flower faced mother smiled and called her husband to bring the diamond from the sky.

With trembling hands he brought the precious heirloom, and the mother with her own weak hands placed the chain and the locket that contained the jewel around the neck of her newborn daughter.

"She's heir to Stanley hall, at least," murmured the mother, "and until you die," she added, turning to the colonel, "she may wear it as a charm against harm," as the Stanleys of our branch have always done.

is idle for you to rave. I have told you, you have aneurism of the heart, and another attack like this may be your death. You cannot hope to live to marry a wife who may yet bear you a son."

"I will never marry again!" cried Colonel Stanley in anguish. "I have loved but one woman, could love but one woman, and she is dead! But, by heavens, I will cheat Lamar Stanley and all his brood! I have $5,000 in yonder safe. I will buy the male child born to the gypsy woman. I will hide away my own flesh and blood, my little daughter, and have her reared secretly, yet in secret. And the gypsy's hand at my death shall be the Earl of Stanley in England and possess the diamond from the sky. That will be fine for Lamar Stanley and his vermin offspring!" And he laughed and shook his hands in bitter rage.

"I mean it, you must help me. You hate Lamar Stanley, for he ruined you. Mammy Lucy hates him. He killed her twin brother in cold blood. Come!"

In the glow of his campfire Matt Harding gazed greedily at the wealth beyond his wildest dreams that gazed at Stanley had roused him from his fitful slumber to pour into his lap.

Hagar, roused from her fevered dreams, felt her babe being lifted from her bosom. The rural gypsy husband and father seized her by the throat as she wept and begged for mercy and bound her hastily as he might and emerged panting from the tent, carrying the swaddled babe which he handed to the colonel and the doctor.

"Does my wife object?" he asked to the doctor's question. "Say, governor, she would not every child she expects to have for half the money. We'll be twenty miles away by sunrise and fifty miles more by another day. We'll be gypsy kings and queens and you'll never hear of us again!"

Back at Stanley hall the doctor and the colonel entered secretly by the library window and bore the babe upstairs to the waiting nurse. Reluctantly and yet resolved like all the rest, the faithful colored nurse arrayed the gypsy child in fine linen and hung about its neck "the diamond from the sky," while the little daughter, born to Stanley hall, whimpered beside its fair dead mother.

In answer to the summons to Stanley hall came Judge Stanley, the kinsman enemy and the English barrister. It was a strange group that gathered in the colonel's library, the English barrister, the grim, bitterly disappointed judge, silently facing Dr. Lee and Colonel Stanley.

A pull at the bell rope and the weeping colored nurse entered the library bearing the black haired, dark eyed babe, a male child in Stanley hall, presumptively heir to an English earldom, and blazing on its breast was the diamond from the sky.

Over the gypsy campfire within the sound of a human call from Stanley hall, a bereft and frenzied mother tore herself loose from her bonds. Like a tigress, she threw herself upon her husband and demanded her child. When he told her of the bargain and showed her the money that came from it she cursed him and the gold and, seizing a jagged burning billet from the fire, she struck Matt Harding down and, leaving him prone on the ground, she rushed to Stanley hall to regather her forces.

"The gypsy roused himself from the stunning blow and hastened after her ere she could spoil all his greedy schemes. The great door of Stanley hall stood ajar. For a moment England swayed faintly at the portal. Then she staggered in and down the spacious hall to the door of the library, guided by the sound of men's voices and the cries of a child—her child! Her hands seized the babe and softly and silently she threw open the door just as her gypsy husband seized her from behind.

The backs of the judge, the English lawyer, the doctor and the nurse were to the door, but Colonel Stanley stood behind the library table facing the door.

"Yes," he was saying, "there is the newborn baby, a son, do you hear, a son!" And then his eyes opened wide with horror, for there, struggling at the open door, were the gypsy woman and her husband. The man's hand was over the woman's mouth, and with every effort he sought to strangle her to silence and closed the door.

Colonel Stanley cowered at his heart and fell senseless forward across the library table!
