Talks With the Business Man

By NELS DARLING

Merchandise well bought is only half sold. Your stock represents money and it is money that is tied up. Make this money work for you as much as possible—and advertising is the key to the situation.

You have certain fixed expenses that cannot be materially reduced. Better sell 50 articles at a gross profit of 30 cents each, than sell 30 articles at a gross profit of 50 cents each, then you have to spend two dollars in advertising in order to sell the fifty articles.

The large department stores and the mail order houses are sending out tons of advertising matter into the short crop sections of the country.

With the big merchants of the country advertising is an asset, not a liability, and you can make your advertising one of the most successful features of your business.

The Times notes with pleasure the number of towns and cities in the Twin Falls country that are going to hold fairs and agricultural exhibits with the objective of exploiting the resources of the country...

The Times believes that the immense crowds which thronged the stores Wednesday evening for the fashion show is indicative not only of the success of the motive...

Twin Falls stores without exception are trying every year and do keep pace with cities of four and five times the population...

The free port would offer great opportunity for financial operations, now made possible by the recent currency act. It would stimulate international banking and would tend to shift the financial center of the world to this country...

The most important gain is the direct gain to America. It will cheapen commodities by bringing great quantities of goods to our doors for importation or export...

deed, and two Macon papers which do not defend it, but which doubt if the perpetrators will ever be brought to justice, the Georgia press seem to be a unit in denouncing investigation and punishment...

"It is Georgia, Georgia law and justice, that were hanged upon that Cobb county tree."

"Georgia owes it to herself and to her future to go to the bottom of this tragedy and not to rest until she erases that stain, in so far as it is possible for official effort to wipe it out."

Yet, despite this editorial condemnation and the frequent assertion that the best citizenship of Georgia can not be held responsible, we find the lynching defended, or at least partially justified, by both newspapers and editors of the State.

"Looking at the question solely from the standpoint of the German interests, why should the Imperial Government desire a break with the United States? What would Germany gain that is commensurate with the inevitable losses?"

GERMANY'S GOOD INTENTIONS The sinking of the Arabe was taken as Germany's answer to our Lusitania note by so large a portion of the American press and the demand for sharp action, perhaps the breaking of diplomatic relations, was so widely voiced that the friendly statements of the German Imperial Chancellor and Ambassador Von Bernsdorff came as something of a surprise. This surprise may not have in all cases been accompanied by that "great delight" which one German-American editor said he experienced...

"Little basis for such hope is, however, discerned by the New York Tribune, which observes that whatever defense the Germans may build up for the sinking of the Arabe, the real danger will remain in that settled policy which is the cause of the German-American difficulties."

"The World further admits that the previous attitude of the German government 'unavoidably raises doubts as to the sincerity of the Berlin office in asking for time and consideration in dealing with the Arabe case.'"

"During six months of submarine warfare Germany has sunk three British passenger-ships carrying American passengers. One of these ships was transporting an infinitesimal amount of ammunition. The others had no ammunition. What military advantage did Germany gain by the destruction of these ships?"

The conditions at peace are all contained in the President's notes, and they are not onerous. They involve no sacrifice of German honor or German rights. They involve no sacrifice of German military interests.

There are, as several papers take pains to point out, several facts which should be clearly determined with the help, perhaps, of German explanations based on the reports of the submarine commander. For instance, asks the Philadelphia Record, 'did the Arabe resist arrest, either actively or passively, by an attempt to ram the challenging German submarine or by an attempt at flight?'

Mr. McNeil of Twin Falls, was in town yesterday in his new car.

W. J. Sargent arrived in the city yesterday to remain until next spring.

Mrs. Bance, mother of William Bance, returned to her home in Missouri yesterday.

A boy of standard weight was born on the 16th to Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Hurst.

Rev. Mr. Finley and family spent Sunday in Marquette, visiting relatives and friends.

County Surveyor Dykes was in the city this week making grades and doing other surveying.

Prof. Howwater, who will be principal of our school the coming year, arrived in Elmer yesterday.

Frank Taylor left last Sunday for the golden west. Just how long he will remain is problematic.

F. W. Schwabusk returned from Blue Island, Nebraska, to look after his farming interests on the tract.

A surprise party was given last night to Carl Murry by his mother. A large number of his young friends were present.

Mrs. Barker, mother of Norman, will visit Elmer for a few weeks. His sister expects to come on a visit in a couple of weeks later.

Joe Strumpf, the butcher, has put in a splendid sanitary counter with ice box in the ends. It is the latest in the butcher's furniture and is a dandy for its general purposes.

Complimentary to her sister, Miss Crossman, of Missoula, Mont., Mrs. Inman entertained at the luncheon Tuesday evening. A very pleasant evening resulted. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Shearer, Pierce, Costello, Schumann, Jones, Penner, Norman Barker, Miss Crossman leaves today for her home in Montana.

M. G. Hopley was a Filer business visitor last Monday morning.

W. W. Taylor now drives a Highas which he traded for last week.

A. B. Wood drove over from Eden in his Overland last Saturday.

Wm. Thompson entertained the M. E. choir at his home Tuesday evening. All Old Fellows are reminded of the picnic next Sunday in Whitney's grove.

Ex. County Commissioner Sherman of Buhl, was looking over this end of the tract last Friday.

L. M. Smith, Geo. Pratt, Rev. Goodpasture and the Harding Bros. attended the Old Fellows picnic in Water's grove last Thursday.

Mr. Hughes, of Gooding, who has the heating contract at the school house, came on the job Monday and will push the work all day Tuesday.

R. A. Reynolds returned Sunday from Boise where he went to secure a Dakland demonstrator. The car is a fine one, every particular and will doubtless become very popular here.

Mrs. Clara Costello entertained Saturday evening in honor of Miss Crossman, of Missoula, Mont., sister of Mrs. Dunn. The evening was spent in playing 500. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, Jones, Costello, of Missoula, Penner, Barker, Shearer, Crossman and Norman Barker.

Harvey Carter had the misfortune to nearly lose a finger last Tuesday by getting it cut on an improvised threshing machine his brother had rigged up to thresh sweet clover seed. It was by the time that a local surgeon sewed it back on and hopes to make it stick long enough to grow back on again.

Hudson Bros. have just completed a nice 4 room hangar on Yakima avenue for Grover Beem, and are now out at Sam Taylor's ranch west of Filer building a modern hangar for Sam on the 80 he bought last fall. Sam will make a cattle ranch out of this 80.

He has sold his home 40 adjoining the bank, for $25,000, and an acre to Mrs. Richmond, who owns the Hopley acre in the south part of town. Earl Murray the new real estate dealer, handled the deal.

The farmers around Filer are getting ready for the time when the water will be shut off of the canal, hence are digging wells. A Filer household struck a good flow at 55 feet and W. J. Breckenridge at 95. In that neighborhood B. A. McCoy, H. L. Heamer, R. Anderson, Sam Whitely, Earl Cummings, Alworth and Judge Leonard have all contracted for wells which will be sunk as fast as the well diggers get to them. The canal company is doing the work and charging the owners of land $1 per foot for the digging.

Dr. Hack is home from the Idaho Falls Round-Up. He reports that the affair was a huge success from every viewpoint. Whitney's horse won some races and was jockeyed out of the windings in others. Matters were arranged for the Irwin Bros. to "get the money" and as they had a big show it was probably all right for them to get it. The next biggest thing in the "Broncho busting" line will be seen in Filer Field Day. These who were prevented from seeing the Idaho Falls show can console themselves until September 25th.

BECOMES VALUABLE

Sweet Clover Seed Now in Great Demand.
 For many years the sweet clover has been looked upon in this section as a weed and is generally considered a nuisance and in many instances the stalks grow to six, eight and ten feet in height. It has been found almost impossible to thresh it and, until very recently, no one ever thought of doing such a thing. But this year the seed of the sweet clover is now a plant very much in demand. It has found its place in the middle west it is considered a great forage plant and is grown to fatten hogs and increase the milk supply. There it only grows from 12 to 18 inches and its stalks are tender and succulent. It makes very good hay when cured young.
 And in this section it is now welcomed as a fertilizer. In a couple of years it transforms a very poor tract of land into fine soil for raising grain. It is sown upon our poorer soil, and well watered, it soon attains rank growth. This is plowed under and the following year the soil, only a short while before little better than useless, grows a fine stand of splendid grain. This makes the seed in great demand.
 As a result everybody that knows about it is gathering the seed which brings $8.00 a hundred pounds. The stalks are cut down and wheat dried the seed is shaken out of it upon a sheet or canvas, run through a fan and sold. In the last few days men have realized more than an dollar an hour for their labor in gathering the

To be an economical heater, a furnace must have a large amount of radiating surface in comparison with the size of the fire pot, and this surface must be arranged so that the air in passing upward must come in close contact with every part of it.
 It will be observed that the FRONT RANK STEEL FURNACE is built on STRAIGHT VERTICAL lines, thus causing the air in its ascent to pass directly over its entire surface.
 Call and let us show you this furnace.

To Baby's Mother

Yes, we agree with you; a baby is the greatest thing in the world. Some of the finest poems ever written pay tribute to the mystery of a baby. Some of the most beautiful songs of the ages express the sweetness of a baby. Some of the most wonderful paintings from the hands of masters were inspired by a baby.

But was a baby ever before so lovely and precious as yours? Your reason says yes but your heart answers no. And everyone is glad that you think your baby the brightest and best.

Of course you must have pictures of the baby. The modern baby must have a baby book filled with engaging little portraits. Engaging little portraits—that's the kind we make; the satisfying kind—the treasured kind—dimpling, natural pictures—just Baby, that's all.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley, ever since the latter, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an accident. Although the diamond was Stanley's earliest in England may come as an American. When a daughter is born to the cousin and the mother dies, the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this design, sends the child, being reared in secret, and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has already come to the attention of the colonel, and a document with the Stanley secret. When Esther is grown a beautiful young woman, the gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with her, Dr. Lee, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, who, with Esther, had demanded that Lamar turn over to him the diamond from the sky. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and she does his companion and coach. Blair Stanley, rightful heir of Hagar, in stealing the diamond from the sky, causes the death of the doctor. Outside in Arthur's rooming house, Blair, resembling, infers that he has left Esther's room. Arthur finds him to fight a duel in which Blair is only stunned. He tries, with the aid of his mother, to place the blame for the murder on Hagar, who is now his uncle. The sheriff attempts to take Arthur, but he eludes his pursuers and hides in Hagar's place. He sends his letter and unloads him for his wild life. Seeking money, he joins the circus and is murdered. Blair is in Richmond, and he, too, is forced to visit the paymaster. At a ball, at which a supposed New York belle is the guest of honor, they are introduced and the diamond on the visitor. She is an adventurer who has borrowed the money. Blair is telling her of his fortune. Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond and to avoid detection, drops it into a trap. Blair tries to arrest Arthur on the murder charge. He escapes from Richmond on a freight train, but is followed by a mail bag, picked up by Quabba, organ grinder. Quabba's monkey steals the diamond and drops it into a trap.

Arthur seeks work at a farm. Hagar sends Esther to live at Stanley Hall. An Arab, Hagar, who is the father of Arthur, is found in disguise, proves himself the best knight, defeating Blak, but is betrayed by the latter to Hagar, who produces finger prints proving Blair guilty of the death of Dr. Lee. Hagar promises alliance to Blair, and Blair agrees to help Hagar. Esther's being revealed in Fairfax station Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the diamond. Quabba's monkey drops it into a trap. The diamond is found by a negro boy and is taken by a tramp. The latter is murdered by a snake. He is stolen by a stinking party, enters Hung Liu's den. Hagar, mentally unbalanced by Blair's blow, again with Esther among the gypsies. Marquand Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. Learning that Blair is a fugitive he seeks Blair instead of Dr. Lee. Blair strikes the diamond, later married by Hagar and having for a wife, Arthur tries in vain to warn their train of impending robbery. Luke revolts against Hagar and is driven from camp. He leads traps, against the camp, and Quabba, to save Esther and Hagar, loses an eye in the camp.

CHAPTER XIX.

Old Post With New Faces.
A FLICTED as he was with his deformity, Quabba, the hunchback—be of the sunny face and happy heart—was as agile and snifty as the monkey Clarence, his companion on his way through the world. But now the hunchback, in neither sunny face nor happy heart, a wild tremor of fear, anxiety and remorse shakes him in an agony of terror and confusion.

Sending the rocking stone, piled from the perch where it had served for centuries, had only meant death for all below, thought Quabba.

Instead of saving his young and old mistress and his gypsy friends from the end of desperate traps laid by Luke Lovell, Quabba now fears that he had destroyed those he had loved, as well as their enemies.

But as he ran pattering down the mountain side Quabba saw that some of the gypsies, warned by the clatter and roar of the landing of the massive bounding, loosened rocking stone had started, had fled to safety.

He saw some half score of gypsy men and women tottering rapidly up the opposite slope of the valley from the deserted gypsy camp. Through the dust that was settling in a "cloud-oozer" the debris, and rubble where the camp had stood, the straining eyes of Quabba could mark the rugged forms of some of the assaulting tramps flinging away from the scene of destruction, as boot-les as they had come.

Then as he peered the scene the obscured Quabba could mark that the fleeing gypsies had passed halfway up the opposite slope and had served themselves to return to their submerged, annihilated camp. With an aching heart and a great burning sense of reproach for his rash deed that had worked such ill, when he had meant but good, Quabba could see that Esther and Hagar were not among the vertical gypsies returning to the scene of destruction.

When Quabba reached the heaps of stone and wreckage that had been the camp site he found the gypsies already gathered in a group where the van of Hagar lay overturned and half covered by a mass of rocks and earth. Then his heart beat again with joy as he heard the voice of Esther, tremulous, yet brave for all that, long from beneath the van. "If you are friends, save us," was Esther's cry. Strong and willing hands tore at the heaped up rock and rubble, and strained and lifted at the van.

Soon the van was raised from over the cavity. Its very overturning had made. There was Esther, gnat Hagar, trembling but unhurt save for a few minor scratches and bruises, but in the bottom of the cavity lay the bulky form of Luke Lovell, stark and still.

Kindly hands drew Hagar and Esther out and Quabba fell at their feet, uttering incoherent self accusations mingled with equally incoherent thanksgivings. A kindly hand threw a coat across the hunched face and form of the gypsy outcast.

Then comely succeeded tragedy. The shrill, chattering cries of Clarence, the monkey, were heard voicing his animosity and indignation from within the van.

The mercenary gypsies turned from sighs to laughter, and even the wails of Esther were wreathed in a smile as Quabba cried excitedly, "I am comely, Clarence, my son!" and so saying, he wrangled open the shattered window of the van and the frightened monkey leaped to his master's arms and began chattering his thanks and joy.

The saving of gypsy lives was due to the providential fact that the onslaught of the marauding tramps led by Lovell had driven the gypsies from the danger zone where the wreckage of stones and earth had struck the camp.

How many of the invaders lay buried beneath the settled landslide the philosophical gypsies neither cared nor sought to ascertain. It was later found that Luke Lovell certainly had been only stunned and not killed, as was at first supposed. For when the gypsies returned, after making rude shelter tents away from the rubble of the landslide for Esther, Hagar and their children and women folk, no trace of Lovell could be found.

He had recovered consciousness, it was evident, and had stolen away, fearful of the vengeance of his former Romanay associates.

Quabba deemed it best to keep secret the fact that he had been the genius of the landslide. It had been a fatal success. He affected the philosophy of the gypsies in the matter and agreed with them that somehow good had come out of the general destruction, even if it were only the addition of the unscrupulous Luke Lovell and his ruffian rabble, the tramps.

Acknowledged as their princess and reigning over them as regent for the ailing Hagar, Esther appointed a head man from the gypsies in the place of the departed and banished Lovell and returned with Hagar and Quabba to Stanley hall, which was gari's strong box. Luke Lovell recalled at last the source of the dead Matt Harding's gypsy wealth that now was Hagar's, and which since Hagar's sudden affliction no one knew the hidden place of.

One thing Lovell felt sure of was that this wealth had not disappeared under Hagar's stewardship while sane. Wherever the treasure was it was not to Hagar's brass bound chest. Only documents were in that chest, but they were treasures of themselves.

For one of these old papers especially had set forth minutely the fact that Hagar's long dead husband, the greedy Matt Harding, had trafficked with the great folks of Fairfax in his own flesh and blood. "There was a fortune to be obtained by himself, as it had been obtained by Matt Harding, Luke Lovell thought. And he turned away, unseen from the destroyed gypsy camp and trudged resolutely to Fairfax, some eight or ten miles away.

"If you have any secret to sell take it to some other market"

There was no one at Stanley hall to pay him for keeping or telling the Stanley secret, but Luke Lovell knew enough of the Stanley and their feud to realize his best market would be with Blair Stanley's mother. If Arthur Stanley, so called, was Hagar's son, a gypsy child, then Blair Stanley was the real heir to the Stanley estate, to which, according to the old family tradition, the heir was committed to carry the diamond from the sky.

But at the perusal of the house of Blair Stanley's mother the proud, cold blood would hold no traffic with the sinister gypsy who clamored at her threshold with a secret to sell. She ordered him to be gone and professed no interest in the war he hinted he had for sale.

Ellen Stanley was, in her austere way, as unscrupulous in her family ambition as even her husband, the grim, cold Judge Lamar Stanley, had been. But she would have no traffic with such a man. Luke Lovell, she realized, had too few wits that once sealed a creature had her in his power, even as a confidant, his dominion would be as it always the dominion of the ignorant, brutal and intolerable.

So Blair's mother dismissed the creature of the night with disdain. She would be no confederate and yet the victim of the exactions that she instinctively knew would follow any association with any secret with him.

"If you have any secret to sell take it to some other market," said the widow Stanley with cold hauteur. "Unless you leave my premises this instant I shall have you arrested and committed for attempted blackmail! Shout your secret from the rooftops if you please, I am not concerned!"

But Luke Lovell, thwarted and discouraged though he was in his first bold bid for the fortune he had believed was within his grasp, had no intention of shouting his secret from the rooftops. He realized his only value was in his keeping it, and being paid, and heavily, to keep it.

He must find some one who would pay—this some one would be Blair Stanley, he did not doubt.

But if Blair Stanley's mother had refused to traffic with the sinister gypsy she was shrewd enough to surmise the secret that had become a living thing again after lying dormant for eighteen years.

Why had her husband set off alone to meet his death in the mountains the day after Colonel Stanley had died, eighteen years ago? Why had Dr. Lee adopted the gypsy woman's daughter a few months since? Why had this gypsy woman returned after all these years, in the guise of a woman of means, and taken her to Fairfax?

Why had she come with proofs of Blair's guilt of the murder of Dr. Lee and proffered her silence in exchange for social recognition by the proud families of Fairfax for this girl?

And now that this gypsy woman was crazed and all fear of her son's guilt being known had vanished for the time being at least, Mrs. Stanley resolved to take advantage of these situations as she unperceived them. If this girl was the daughter of the man who had slain her husband, why had she been vague whispers for years, why not prepare for and fortify against any possible disgrace that might threaten through her son's rash and dreadful deed—the murder of Dr. Lee?

CHAPTER XX.

Wealth From the Desert.
MRS. STANLEY resolved to make friends with Hagar's supposed daughter. If Arthur Stanley, so called, was not her son, why did her mother-in-law let her go to Stanley and all that could be conserved and all be well if Blair might return and marry Esther.

Even though Hagar recovered her faculties, she must remain silent as to Blair's guilt were her mother-in-law, Mrs. Stanley, as for Arthur Stanley, so called, there was slight fear of his returning.

The shrewd mother of Blair Stanley guessed now the true cause of Arthur's flight and continued absence. It was because he also had learned the Stanley secret.

At Stanley Hall, Esther, made a woman and resulting in all the tragic occurrences that of late had befallen her, resolved it was her duty to continue further into the darkness in Hagar's behalf. Blair, Esther had endeavored vainly to lift the cloud from Hagar's mind by earnest inquiries and kindly beseechings. But Hagar would only moan, "My son, give me back my son, my little baby."

When Esther read the documents. The proof was plain. She was in her rightful place at Stanley Hall, for she was Esther Stanley. But she resolved through the love she bore for him she had known as Arthur Stanley, that she would take secret to the grave. She would spare Arthur the shame she knew his proud spirit would feel.

What to her were place and position here in Fairfax among a proud people who, so far as their women folk were concerned had ignored her? Yet when she was young we have our hopes and dreams. Esther's hope and dream was the return of Arthur, the sharing of the secret with him, and his love. Then all would be well. So plain was her thought, she was so plain, that when Blair Stanley's mother called at Stanley Hall and proffered her friendship and assistance.

There were no confidences exchanged between them. Esther suspected that Blair's mother vaguely knew, but in her loneliness and having no friend save the humble though devoted Quabba, Esther was glad to accept the proffered friendship of her austere kinswoman, though neither spoke of the fact.

Mrs. Stanley suggested that Hagar be taken to Richmond for treatment for her mental affliction. She also insisted that Esther should go to Richmond and be introduced into the best circles there by Mrs. Burton Richmond.

It may have been that Mrs. Burton Richmond stood in fear of her austere kinswoman, Mrs. Judge Stanley—fear that was augmented by the fact that Blair's mother knew the true character of Victoria Marston.

It may have been that the sweet nature and beauty of Esther and her gentle breeding appealed to Mrs. Hagar more than her feigns of Blair's mother. It always had been Mrs. Hagar's pet diversion to have a protegee.

At any rate, Mrs. Richmond made Esther a welcome guest and protegee and assisted Blair's mother in securing the healing abodes of Richmond to treat Hagar for her mental infirmity.

Quabba had been left behind at Stanley Hall, but Quabba suspected that Blair's mother was an old foe with a new face of friendship. As always, he resolved to carry Esther and her father to Richmond.

Mrs. Randolph had suggested to Blair's mother, when she found Mrs. Stanley decided his son's return, to consult with that astute private detective, Tom Blake, in settling the claims that were against the reckless Blair in Richmond.

Blake effected a conference between Blair's mother and Abe Bloom the gambling house keeper, who held the bad check for $2,000 he had cashed for Blair, and who was the most pressing claimant against him.

At this conference, although the accusation was not made, Mrs. Stanley surmised that Blair and Bloom knew of Blair's guilt of the murder of Dr. Lee. It was from Blake and Bloom, through the agency of theinky trash print on the bad check, that the guilt had been established, his mother advanced money on it and even if he had it the price for keeping my mouth shut," he added, "and I'll see that Blake here says nothing either."

"But the diamond has disappeared. We don't know where it is," said Mrs. Stanley coldly, though in her heart she regretted the presumption.

"I'll turn up—them big stones always do. It's one of the finest in the world, but that's my price!" retorted Mr. Abe Bloom. "If it ever turns up you Stanley can reprieve it. No one can dispute your title to it. There ain't another one like it in the world. But when you Stanley get it it comes to me! That's understood and agreed, eh, Blake?"

There was a strange, impenetrable gleam in the keen eyes of the detective, who had maintained his usual taciturnity during this strange conference, but he nodded his head and answered quietly, "Yes, that's understood and agreed."

Reaching Hildemuth, it had been no trouble for Quabba, at his old occupation of organ grinder, to find the house of Mrs. Burton Randolph, where he knew Eather was stopping in Richmond. He had just reached the house and had just been ordered to move on by a passing policeman when a taxi cab drove up and Blake and Bloom alighted and entered the Randolph residence.

his affectionate four-footed friend and knoloped after the train. At the top of the grade the ambushed robbers built up the express with an obstruction on the track two feet to be reached by the engineer, endeavoring to pass through it.

When Arthur arrived upon the scene two robbers were in the express car and two were going through the Pullman. Another man compelled the Bremen to uncouple the locomotive and covering the engineer, had made him drive the detached machine up the track some distance from the standing train.

Since knowing what he did, Arthur galloped by and mounting the engine at the end of the tender from his horse's back, grappled with the lone robber covering the engineer.

A desperate struggle followed by the furnace door. Seizing a large wrench, the engineer aimed a blow at the robber, struggling with Arthur, but the blow missed for aid his friend, and Arthur was stretched senseless on the flying board. The robber, with a curse, jumped from the engine and ran, rejoicing his companions.

In one of the Pullmans Vivian Marston, who was now Mrs. Blair Stanley—the twy traveling as "Mr. and Mrs. Guy Peyton"—were among those held at pistol's point. An evasive woman passenger to whom Vivian had shown the diamond from the sky had betrayed the fact she possessed it. Despite her pleadings, entreatments and even curses—curses that were chorused by the charged Blair—the chucking robber tore off the great gem with their other booty. Laden with a sack of valuables, and taking the $100,000 in bank notes from the express messenger, the robbers decamped.

Within a few hours the sheriff and his posse of deputies and railroad detectives were hot on the trail, and John Powell, when he heard, after being hunted a few brief moments, was back at his lonely occupation.

Vivian, despoiled of the jewel for which she would have risked her soul, reproached herself and her raging indignation that they did not die gloriously in defending it. In her bitter rage Vivian taunts Blair by telling him she only married him to gain the diamond, and now that it is gone, he must go and regain it or see her no more.

In vain he protests. She threatens to give him over to the police and deserts him at Los Angeles and writes to Abe Bloom in Richmond telling of the loss of the diamond and asking for funds.

The deserted and raging Blair pawns what possessions the train robbers have left him, and under his assumed name of Peyton hides in a moon hotel after writing to his relative, Mrs. Burton Randolph, to intercede for him with his mother.

Far off in the desert fastnesses the pursuit of the posse after the train robbers is hotly on. A shot and the rearmost saddle of the fleeing outlaws is empty. But as the outlaw falls the diamond from the sack that he has clamped out from the sky of valuables flies from his new necklace band and glitters but unnoticed by a clump of cacti as the posse thunders by.

Another shot goes home, and the foremost outlaw drops from his saddle. Another shot and his riderless steed gallops on. Favorable weather for haying and threshing. Again the settlers have had their chertens filled when the water was turned into the ditch from the stream. A live stream of water looks mighty good to us. SUNDAY FOR BUSINESS MEN

A Business Men's Sunday at the Episcopal Church 2nd Sunday in Oct.

In keeping with the idea and endeavor of a prominent business association, Ascension Episcopal church will hold a special business men's service the 2nd Sunday morning in October.

The business men of some of our more prominent and progressive communities and by the churches of these communities it has seemed a wise course and good thing to bring the business life of a city into closer touch with the churches, and these business men have thus launched a campaign for the adoption of the second Sunday in October of each year as a business men's Sunday.

The editor of a prominent business men's magazine has this to say about the idea:

"Appreciating the fact that the two most potent forces for good in every community, the church and the business men, are often pulling apart rather than together, to the detriment of the community welfare, such a movement as a nation-wide 'Business Men's Sunday' would certainly result in much good.

"Have you ever thought what your community would be like if it possessed no churches and no schools.

"They do help very much to make a place worth living in, don't they?"

"Why do you make property safer and worth more don't they?"

"They don't accomplish this by just being there."

"There must be somebody at work in these buildings promoting the things for which churches and schools everywhere stand."

"So, you are, you think but admit that your churches are doing much good for your city."

"Is there any logical reason why the business men of the community should not stand behind the schools, the churches, or any other force that is working to better local conditions?"

"Person! The morally cleaner community has the cleaner financial reputation and the highest average per capita bank deposits."

"You know plenty of families whose monthly bills are paid when they are presented, who would not care to live in a churchless community."

"These and many more being true, isn't it a good thing for you and your fellow merchants and professional men to stand behind the local churches."

"What has all this to do with business men's Sunday?"

"This much, we have launched a campaign for the adoption of the second Sunday in October each year for Business Men's Sunday."

DISEASE KILLS MOUNTAIN SHEEP

Famous Big Game of Idaho Threatened With Complete Extirpation.

Ogden, Sept. 2.—Inspectors of the United States forest service and trappers and officials of the forest service are puzzled over a disease heretofore unknown that has made its appearance among the sheep in the deep canyons of Custer county, Idaho, according to information made public at the local headquarters of the Fourth forest district. Alarms is felt among the stockmen over the prospect that the wild sheep may be exterminated and that the mule deer may succumb to the disease which has swept the entire region. In an effort to determine the cause of the disease and possible means of combating it, Dr. Murray, inspector in charge of the bureau of animal industry, and Supervisor Hanks of the Lemhi national forest, made a preliminary trip to the infested area to obtain information on which to base a more extensive investigation during the month of September.

The only information which could be gathered at this time was from men who had found sheep in diseased condition and killed them. These men were not able, however, to diagnose the symptoms or make any accurate statements as to the actual physical condition of the animals, except to agree that there was an apparent loss of hair around the head and ears and a general weakened condition which finally resulted in death. So far the infection seems to be confined to the main ridge of the Selkirk range and is extending approximately at the head of the east fork of Loon creek and extending south to the head of Challis creek. Hope is held that subsequent to the conclusions reached during the September trip an effort will be made to check the spread of the disease with a view to saving the small herd of mountain sheep and preventing the infection of domestic flocks.

DEAD FROM BEE STING

Teton Basin Man Meets Death in Pe-culiar Manner.

A very sad accident happened to J. Benjamin Moon last Sunday afternoon. While in the garden at his ranch on Egan bench, he was stung by a honey bee and before medical aid could be summoned, died from the effects of the sting—in fact did not live more than 10 minutes.

This comes as a great shock to the locality in which Mr. Moon has lived for many years and the Peak joins with the many friends and relatives in extending sympathy to the bereaved family. The funeral services were held over the remains Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the meeting house in Parker.

Mr. Moon was well and favorably known over the county and as one of the first settlers in the bench, helped to build up that prosperous district. He had accumulated a good supply of this world's goods and being in good health was prepared to enjoy the fruits of his hard labor when death called him.

Mr. and Mrs. Moon returned about two weeks ago from a 70-day trip by team through Utah and western Idaho.—Teton Peak-Chronicle.
