Superintendent of Schools Blue was acting chairman of the meeting and in a few well chosen remarks bearing upon the subject of the evening, introduced Dr. Brannon, as president of the Municipal League.

With his opening remarks Dr. Brannon explained that he came to Twin Falls not as a reformer, looking to unseat the present form of city government or to bring about an upheaval in the splendid management that surely had characterized the growth and advancement of a city whose wonderful progress was so plainly evident on every hand.

It will be interesting to note just how many days and hours Governor Alexander has put in at the Capitol since his inauguration. It will not total a big amount. It would seem that the duties of his office would prevent some of the continuous vaudeville trips about the state supposedly in the interest of the people, but in reality in behalf of Moses and his coming campaign.

The Idaho Republicans will have plenty of material to work on this year if they desire to give Alexander the publicity he craves. The promises of Moses and the fulfillment are two distinct stories and rather conflicting. The big million dollar saving which will be shown when the taxes are due will take a lot of nerve and talk to put up to the people on the part of Idaho's governor. Most governor's need press agents but the crying need of Idaho's shining mark is a guardian and a dark closet.

A BETTER HALLOWEEN SPIRIT

The people of Twin Falls are creating a better idea of the true Halloween spirit among the young people, by their efforts to direct the youthful ones along the safe channels of pretty parties and innocent amusement. The result was very apparent last Saturday night when the usual devilry and wanton destruction of property was conspicuous by its absence. Numerous children's parties kept a great many children amused and at the same time gave them the real idea of the Halloween.

This was not true of all the children, however, and the editor of the Times wonders just what the parents of a large group of fourteen and sixteen year old boys were doing while the boys were wandering around the streets last Saturday night after one-thirty. The place for any gathering boy after nine o'clock at night is under the parental eyes and supervision. The one night of freedom to do as they please off times leads to habits of midnight prowling to an extent never dreamed of by the parents.

THE ENGLISH CABINET CRISIS AND THE BALKAN SITUATION

Though it seems that the endangered Asquith Cabinet will recover from the first shocks and remain in power, the crisis must keep on until a decision has been reached. Formally the cabinet crisis may be ascribed to the English failure in the Dardanelles, but the real causes are much deeper ones.

Because of the successful German campaign in the East and because of the ecstasies of the various Balkan nations, the Balkan governments are no longer controlled by the Entente powers. Bulgaria has openly gone over to the side of the Teutonic allies. Roumania has decided to continue the policy of neutrality and Greece has refused up till now to come to the aid of the allies in Serbia and thus to the help of the allies at large.

This alarming Balkan situation has aroused the English people and caused the present cabinet crisis. So long as the political situation in the Balkans does not take a turn more favorable to the allies, the crisis in England will continue. But it seems that there are still bright prospects for such a turn of events.

There can be no doubt about the sympathies of the Greek people for the allies. But the Greek people are not controlled by feelings and sentiments but by material interests. The government of Greece has not seen its way to come to the help of the allies, because in all probability it does not believe that such a help would bring good results to Greece.

The allies are anxious to conquer Constantinople, with the object of turning it over to Russia; Italy wants to conquer Albania; but can England band over Constantinople to Russia, and Avlona and Durazzo to Italy without keeping Saloniki for herself? Can she hand over the Dardanelles to Russia without being herself near the Dardanelles? These questions are asked by Greek statesmen and answered in the negative. If Russia gets hold of Constantinople and if Italy is master of the Albanian coast, England must keep Saloniki in one form or another. Now, what can the future of Greece be if her most vital interests are jeopardized by such three mighty powers?

Helping the allies by declaring war on the Teutons and their allies would mean for Greece contributing to her own ruin. But the Greek people on the other hand are in sympathy with the allies' cause. Thus the conflict between interest and sympathy is evident. Of course, nobody can predict which of those two factors will triumph in the end.

For the present Greece is determined not to abandon her policy of neutrality, though England offers her the island of Cyprus as a compensation for joining the Entente powers. But as long as Greece continues to observe a formal neutrality, she must either resist the landing of allied troops in Saloniki or come in conflict with the Teutonic allies. Furthermore, as long as Greece sticks to her present untenable position, those allied troops already landed in Saloniki are being paralyzed in their movements, because the Greek government must declare sooner or later that it will prohibit a further landing of troops and thus cut off the present allied armies in Saloniki from their supplies and from their possibility of getting reinforcements.

The allied governments must take such a possibility in consideration. Of course, the Teutonic allies will bring pressure to bear upon Greece either to stick to the rules of neutrality or to declare a state of war, and the Greek government might prefer to remain neutral than to go to war. The Teutonic allies will certainly say to Greece: You cannot be neutral and at war at the same time. If you are neutral, you must not permit the passage of our enemies through your territory, and if you continue to do so, you are at war with us. But as the Teutonic allies are conducting their victorious march through the Balkans with the object of relieving Constantinople, and as Greece has not the certainty of emerging victoriously from a war against the Teutons, she might lose Saloniki to the Bulgarians if she takes issue with them.

As a matter of fact the Greco-Balkan Staff is of the opinion that the whole Greek army, if put against the Teutons, Bulgarians and Turks, could in the best case stop their march for a while and prolong the war, but it could not stop the march definitely. The Serbian army is probably outnumbered four to one and is already badly beaten at many points. If it still continues a stubborn defense, it is only possible because of the mountainous nature of the territory that favors the Serbians and it is only a temporary obstacle to the Teutons and Bulgarians.

With the modern technique of warfare such difficulties of territory even in the long run be surmounted, and then the big Teutonic army, the whole Bulgarian army, the most powerful of the Balkans, and a good part of the Turkish army will face the Greek army and several army corps of ally troops. So there is not much chance for the Greeks to be victorious if they openly side with the Entente powers. A defeat for Greece at the hands of the Teutonic allies would mean at least the loss of territories acquired after the second Balkan war.

Such is the most difficult and precarious position of Greece today. Should this untenable position be prolonged only for a couple of weeks, the Bulgarians and the Teutons will already have met and formed a junction to open the roads to Constantinople and to Egypt.

GREAT BRITAIN'S PART IN THE WAR DEFENDED

The German taunt that Britain would hold out to the last Frenchman has produced some little searching of heart among the English papers, whose editors are asking whether Great Britain has contributed her fair share to the conduct of the war. The Manchester Guardian takes up the subject and, after reproaching those editors who have assumed a consistent pessimistic tone, illustrates in detail the feats of arms performed by the forces of the United Kingdom. In paying tribute to the efforts of the Allies the Guardian thinks Britain's share is not unequal:

"Russia has done services to the Allied cause which it would be difficult to overestimate, beginning with the rash invasion of East Prussia, for which she paid so heavily, and continuing through the strain of heavy fighting all through the winter up to the present battles, which are perhaps the most momentous of the war up to now.

"France has also been splendidly loyal and has shown also a steadfastness and power of endurance with which she was not generally credited. Her work last autumn and winter in reorganizing her military forces was one of the finest recoveries ever made by any nation in war-time. Let all things be admitted and decorated with our sincerest admiration. But why depreciate what this country has done? The recovery of France in the winter was only possible through the work of the fleet. Nor is it boasting but the sober fact that the condition of the success of the allies is our naval supremacy."

Turning to the achievements of the army, The Guardian emphasizes the fact that Great Britain has never been a military nation, but—

"After all, some credit for the successful retreat of the Allies and for the Battle of the Marne, must be given to the British army. It was Sir John French, again, who conceived the Flanders campaign and so defeated the second German attempt at enveloping the French Army, and the larger half of the defense of Flanders fell upon his army. No British Army ever did as much. In addition, we are engaged in two first-rate campaigns against Turkey, besides taking the chief part in the war on the German colonies. And the military work that we are prepared to do is just only beginning to develop."

Despite all the anxiety of the English press, it must be admitted that her Allies have not complained that Britain has done less than her share. Indeed, from time to time the French and Italian Journals pay handsome tributes to their Northern partner. For example, Mr. Gustave Hervé writes in the Paris Guerre Sociale:

"The greatest stroke of luck that has befallen us in the war is to have had Britain as an ally. What would have become of us, even after the Battle of the Marne, if the German fleet had driven us from the sea and blockaded us? ...

"Britain goes to war, and immediately the German fleet is forced to confine itself to its own territorial waters. Germany is blockaded and cut off from the whole world, from commodities which supply her with cotton, metals and munitions of all sorts. ... Our Army is re-inforced by an army which is being developed slowly but surely."

Similar sentiments are expressed by the Paris Journal Des Debats, which says:

"We in France know what Great Britain has done, and done well. A year of collaboration, continued in days of success as well as of trial, with mutual confidence and common suffering, with the same spirit of devotion, sacrifice and indomitable force, and the same obstinate will and resolve to win, has knit the Allies together the ties that bind us. Never in France since the war began has there been a period when the Allied armies were more closely united by a spirit of camaraderie than at present; never has the confidence in ultimate victory been greater than it is today."

The value of the service rendered to the Allies by the British fleet is extolled by the Milan Secolo, which considers that, without the participation of Great Britain, Germany would have been the victor after six months of war. The Secolo continues:

"The last word in this war will be spoken by the English. Let the reader justice to their achievements. In freeing the seas of the Germans they have won the greatest victory for the Allied cause. They have seized territories from the enemy; the possession of which will mean much when peace is discussed. They have contributed an unprecedented land force and millions of money to their allies and most of all, they first raised the banner of peace against militarism and principle of nationality as against imperialism."

On the German side the conviction remains that, whatever the British navy may have done on the seas, they are inferior and reluctant performers on land. These views receive confirmation from the observations of a Roumanian military commission which visited France to purchase explosives. The Berlin Vossische Zeitung publishes a long summary from the report of this commission, which runs in part:

"While the French troops are bleeding to death in incessant attacks, they are hardly supported at all by the English, whose numbers the commission estimates at 500,000 white and 100,000 colored troops. Only the 100,000 colored Englishmen fight in the front ranks and remain in the trenches while the white Englishmen spend their time at tennis, football and other amusements, and they take great pains to keep themselves in sporting condition. Between them and the front the roads are choked with masses of field kitchens, bathing equipment, and so on. The commission also observed that the construction of defense works and the digging of trenches were done by lightly paid contractors brought from England and the colonies, as the British soldier considers himself too good for such work."—Literary Digest.

NEW INSECTICIDE

Arsenate of Calcium Effective Against Chewing Insects on Fruit Trees.

As a result of extensive tests during 1912, 1913 and 1914 with different insecticides, the entomologists of the department have found that calcium arsenate, a new insecticide, gives very promising results in the control of certain insects that do damage by chewing on fruit trees. Among the chewing insects against which the arsenate of calcium proved effective, in laboratory and field tests conducted at Benton Harbor, Mich., are the codling moth, the fall webworm, the tent caterpillar, and the leaf-miner moth. The details of the various experiments are published in the department bulletin No. 278, "Miscellaneous Insecticide Investigation."

In these tests the effects of arsenate of calcium, both alone and combined with lime-sulphur solution, were tested in comparison with arsenate of lead alone and in combination with lime-sulphur. The arsenate of calcium, as was the arsenate of lead, was used at the rate of 2 pounds of each to 50 gallons of water. In all the experiments the arsenate of calcium gave very satisfactory results in killing the larvae without burning the foliage. In a number of cases its killing action was somewhat slower than, but compared favorably with, the arsenate of lead. In some cases it produced more cheaply than the lead arsenate it would appear to have distinct value, although it has not been sufficiently tested to recommend its using it unreservedly for general use. Where arsenate of calcium was combined with lime-sulphur it was, as a rule, more effective as a poisoning agent than when used alone and did not lessen the value of the latter as a fungicide. When these compounds are combined the amount of foliage consumed by the larvae is less than where the arsenate of calcium is used alone. In tests in 1914 a commercial arsenate of calcium (paste), arsenic acid 18.2 per cent, with lime-sulphur solution gave very excellent control of the codling moth in comparison with arsenate of lead and with unsprayed plots. Where arsenate of calcium was used, 98.79 per cent of the apples were sound; arsenate of lead 96.79 per cent, and arsenic acid, while in the unsprayed test plots only 58.71 per cent of the apples were free from damages.

The following is a list of the amount of a convenient way of making homemade arsenate of calcium:

Stone lime (50 per cent CaO), 55 lbs.; commercial arsenate of calcium (paste), arsenic acid 18.2 per cent, 100 lbs.; water, 25 gallons.

Place the stone lime in a wooden container and add small amount of water, just enough to start slacking. When slacking is well under way, pour in the sodium arsenate, which should be dissolved in a small amount of hot water. Keep stirring until the lime has thoroughly slacked. Sufficient water should be added from time to time to prevent burning.

The resulting arsenate of calcium should contain about 18 per cent of arsenic acid. In making this compound it will of course be necessary to know approximately the calcium oxide content of the materials employed and to vary the formula accordingly. The by-product is largely sodium hydroxide which should be decanted if the insecticide is to be used on tender foliage.

BEAR KILLED BY HUNTER

Salt Lake Man Tells of Experiences in Wilds of Idaho.

How a well known Salt Lake attorney killed a ravenous bear and probably saved his own life and that of his guide at great personal risk by coolness and accurate rifle shooting is a thrilling story told of Frank Gustin, by three other Salt Lake men who were near him in the wild of the Sawtooth mountains in Custer county, Idaho, when Mr. Gustin was performing a feat last week, says the Salt Lake Tribune.

The story is told by Lewis B. McCordick, Fred the most dramatic of the party, who also brought back a remarkable photograph of the incident taken after the bear had been stopped and shot by Mr. Gustin, who was discharging the final shot which ended the bear's life.

Mr. Gustin's friends say the affair caused wide local comment, even in that remote region where encounters with wild animals are frequent, and the Salt Lake man was extensively complimented by the natives for his skill and courage.

As the story was related to others of the party by "Beardsman" Falkenberg, a noted guide of the region, who was with Mr. Gustin at the time, the two men had been following a trail through the mountains and indicated the immediate presence of a large bear. It was finally traced to a thicket with no signs of leading out, but Mr. Gustin was not far from a nearer from down-wind. Falkenberg peered into the deep shadows of the underbrush as Mr. Gustin, rifle ready, stood low and in a crouch to one side. For several nerve-racking moments there was absolute silence then, without warning, the huge animal sprang out and leaping aside, sudden and vicious that Falkenberg, a courageous and experienced big game hunter saved himself only by dropping his rifle and leaping aside, where he stumbled and fell, leaving Mr. Gustin alone to meet the snarling bear. Mr. Gustin remained calm and, taking aim, secured the animal's head a high-power rifle ball through the bear's lungs, checking its onset. An instant later, Falkenberg, having regained his feet and his composure, adjusted a camera he was carrying for one of the party, and made the photograph, which shows Mr. Gustin as he was firing his final shot. Mr. Gustin is expected to come in a few days with the skin of his latest trophy.

KEEPING YOUNG

Old Age is Not Fixed by Any Number of Years.

There is no scientific evidence to show that late youth and middle age are the periods of commencing decrepitude and "old age." Man grows old because he is injured; because his body cells are poisoned and not because he has lived just so many years. There is no reliable law determining when a man shall grow old. The tradition "three score years and ten" are condition mainly on the innateness of the man and on natural law. But man has it in his power to modify these conditions either for better or worse.

Probably greatest luxury of living which is not balanced by proper physical exercises is a primary condition to be reckoned with. But temperance at all times of the life—in eating, drinking, working, playing and even in resting, has been suggested as a wise principle to hold to. This avoids the possibility of resting out on "the one hand or of wearing out on the other."

Yet there is another way and a more worthy means for retaining youth and deferring old age—cultivate health for the love and pleasure of it. The monthly letter of the Life Extension Institute says of this suggestion: "It is not a fear of illness or of death that we should encourage, but a love of health, a sense of responsibility for the maintenance of the body, a desire for bodily endurance and efficiency and full achievement. If the mind is fixed on these ideals and the already known means of maintaining them are utilized, heart disease, kidney trouble, and the needless ailments that enfeeble the lives of so many may be kept at bay for the rest of their lives. It is not so much necessary to fight disease as to cultivate health for the happiness, contentment and moral gain that it brings."

SHORT LINE SHOWS GAIN

Business an Increase for Idaho's Own Railroad.

The report of operation, expenses and income of the Oregon Short Line for the nine months ending September 30 has been sent to the heads of various departments of the system, says the Herald-Republican. While the general income of the company has decreased, the operating expenses have decreased in proportion, and it is asserted by those who have been with the railroad for a number of years that the operating expenses of the road are now the lowest of any railroad in the United States. This is considered all the more remarkable since the railroad crosses the mountainous country.

The operating expenses for the first nine months of the year have been less than 34 per cent of the gross income of the road. One year the Oregon Short Line operating expenses were only 28 per cent of the gross income.

The tables show that the passenger business of the Oregon Short Line increased to such an extent during the summer months that the revenue of this department shows a gain of $6,000,000 for the nine months of the year over the corresponding period of 1914. In the freight department there has been a decrease of revenue compared with the first nine months of 1914, but it is asserted by those who are acquainted with the conditions that the freight decrease will have been made up by the first of the new year and it may be that the 1915 earnings of the road will exceed the 1914 earnings as the crop from the Idaho wheat belt and from the potato sections were not moving at the time the report was compiled.

Reports of business in Idaho which were built so that the country tapped might be developed and which have been operated at an expense to the company, show that during the first nine months of the year, several of them have passed into the paying class and the excess of operating expenses over the revenue of number of others was cut down. The Idaho Northern branch, the Driggs branch and the Rupert branch are among the latter. The upper Snake river valley loop, which was completed during the spring, is showing an excess of earnings over operating expenses.

The actual figures are not available for publication and will not be until they are released in New York.

PHOTOGRAPH METER RECORDS

A special camera for the use of men on meter-reading routes is described in the "New Apparatus" department of The Electric World (New York). By its aid the men are enabled to bring into the gas or electric office at the close of the day's work photographic evidence of the positions of the dial pointers on the meters of the customers visited.

"To take the reading, the meter man holds the camera opening against the meter dial-class and presses a lever which automatically opens the shutter for a definite period and by means of the light lens of the battery-operated lamp to illuminate the meter dial. After each exposure is made the shutter is advanced to the position for the next picture. The view can also be used as a hand-lamp in dark passageways by pressing the lever part of the way down without opening the shutter. The "film" on which the pictures are taken consists of an emulsion on opaque paper, which is backed up with a white coating that makes details of the developed film show up clearly although reversed right and left, mirror-fashion. This reversed film is then examined by mounting the plate in a special stand and reading the reflection in a mirror. As the customer's name and meter-number are marked on each dial, the photograph leaves no doubt of the identity of the reading. If the customer is "out," the meter man notes this fact on a card and photographs it for his film-record."

Charlotte Burton in the famous "Flying A" photograph "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

The Diamond from the Sky

Holds in store the greatest number of surprises ever committed to the screen. A story that is new and different, crammed full of thrilling adventures, Charlotte Burton leading adventures in this romantic production, plays the part of Vicinia Marston. She says herself that the role is one after her own heart. This character proves to be one of the most daring, vivid and fascinating portrayals in the realm of pictures. Miss Burton frankly enjoys pure devilry, to cross wires in the love plots, and make trouble is her specialty, as she becomes involved in the fate of the famous Diamond, there is no telling what may happen. Miss Burton is noted for her dark beauty. Her latest photograph, here reproduced, is a splendid likeness of this charming actress.

MRS. HARDIN, Neal Hardin, Annette Hington and Joe Welch are rescued by a U. S. Cruiser when the tramp steamer Princess goes down. Planned to Annetto's underclothing is a map showing the location of Lost Isle. Hernandez and Ponto, two evil soldiers of fortune know of the existence of Lost Isle, and seek the map.

The second episode opens eighteen years later. Neal is a clean cut, manly young American, while Joe is a sinking young man of bad habits. Hernandez and Ponto are drug smugglers and have, as their slave and boat of burden, a gigantic Boast-man, bereft of all reason. A young adventurer, Annetto, is in league with the smugglers and instructs himself into the Hardin household, to steal the map of Lost Isle. Hernandez, Ponto and their brute-man are apprehended in an attempt to land some drugs off the Support coast, and a running fight ensues. Mrs. Hardin explains to Annetto about her heritage of Lost Isle, and shows her the map. They are all alarmed by many shots outside and running toward the house. After Annetto is knocked down by Hernandez, he is pursued by the officers, capturing the two outlaws who are put in the town jail. Late that night the brute tears out the bars from their cell and frees them. Neal decides to try for Annetto.

NAVY PICTURES GREAT

Smallest Comedian in World in Vaudeville for First Three Nights.

For the first three nights of the week the Orpheum is putting on the usual good vaudeville and motion pictures. O'Hell, Hart and Hall, a trio of comedy, singing and aerobatic dancing. In this act the Twin Falls public is introduced to Major Hall, the smallest comedian in the world. The major is 29 years of age, thirty-nine inches high and only weighs 18 pounds. "King of Diamonds and the Queen of Hearts" is chapter 17 of the Diamond from the Sky. The balance of the program is up to the usual Orpheum standard of excellence.

Over Three Thousand See "Neal of the Navy" and Go Out Boasting.

Saturday night every seat was filled at the Lavering theatre at their unique complimentary show to introduce America's greatest serial drama, "Neal of the Navy." Hundreds of people saw the show Friday and Saturday matinee but on Saturday evening the theatre was taxed to its utmost capacity. Comment was heard on every side regarding the excellence of "Neal of the Navy." The photoplay was splendid, the acting great and the scenes of Navy life unique and interesting. This scene, showing the capture of 300 boats, were particularly interesting and awe inspiring. The second episode of this intensely interesting serial is entitled "The Yellow Packet" and will be shown next Friday and Saturday.

Culligan's Famous Colored Minstrels holds the boards at the Lavering for Friday and Saturday in addition to the regular program of pictures. This company is gaining an enviable reputation this season. Only three of the company have ever appeared in Twin Falls before. Two of them were formerly with the Nashville Students, of which this show is the successor and the other, Sam Fowler, was with Richards and Pringle's company last season. The other members of the company were recruited from the famous Mahara Minstrels in the East. A program entirely different from anything ever before offered in Twin Falls will be presented during their engagement here.

"THE LITTLE GYPSY"

William Fox Presents Dorothy Bernard at Isis Thursday and Friday.

On Thursday and Friday evenings of this week, William Fox will present Dorothy Bernard in "The Little Gypsy" at the Isis theatre. At the San Diego exposition the Fox Film corporation of New York City was awarded first prize for features, by a committee in charge of the motion picture section of the fair. There will be a change of program each night at the Isis, excepting Thursday and Friday evenings, Fox Feature nights. The Fox pictures are sure to make a hit with the theatre going public of Twin Falls.

PEG O' MY HEART

Kitty O'Connor, who comes to charm our theatre goes with her artistic rendition of the role of Peg in Oliver Morosco's wonderfully successful production of A. Hartley Mannor's "Peg O' My Heart," is one star who disclaims any aversion to the playing of the one part for more than one season. She states, in all good faith, that she could go on playing her present role forever, as with each performance she finds fresh charm in every line and situation of "Peg."

This attraction plays a special return engagement at the Lavering on November 19th.

Dr. Brannan on City League

(Continued from Page 1.) of great commercial enterprises, factories, etc. It is the purpose of the Municipal League to plan the city's growth today and tomorrow and years to come. Tilling of the advancement and growth of a number of eastern and western cities which have entered the present system, he said stressed upon the statement that no civic organization could longer be the tool of any person for his individual advancement. And to guard against such the towns of the northwest should come together in an effort to better take care of their future growth and advancement. A civic specialist must be employed, a man trained in business directions, a man who understands the needs not only of today but ten years, twenty years hence. He must be an efficient manager in every sense of the word, knowing every phase of present day problems and providing a plan for the future development of other towns and cities. Such is the program, according to Dr. Brannan, to which the Pacific Northwest League is committed. The betterment, the uplifting and the development along strictly business lines of the entire northwest. Dr. Brannan, President Black of the Lewiston State Normal spoke for a few minutes upon the subject of civic betterment. He told what had been accomplished by the present government in Lewiston and complimented Twin Falls upon its great advancement since seven years ago, when he first visited the city. During a general discussion following the addresses, Congressman Smith took occasion to remark that while he felt very proud of the development and progress of Twin Falls, he was yet of the opinion that there was considerable room for further betterment. He cited the numerous excavations that "grace" the city and stated himself in favor of a law that would fine every man who dug a hole in the ground and did not erect a building. Following the discussion a motion was made and carried that a committee should be appointed to canvass the situation in Twin Falls relative to the forming of a local league to be allied with the northwest movement. Superintendent Blue announced he would appoint the committee within a few days and the meeting adjourned.

Renews Agency Contract Maxwell Motor Company Pleased With Work of E. S. Johnson. Formal renewal of contract relations between the Maxwell Motor Sales company of Detroit, and Johnson Auto Sales Co., of this city, have been made in the ratification of the local firm's contract and its return bearing the signature of Assistant Sales Manager C. E. Stebbins of the Detroit factory. The Maxwell line is thereby assured, for another year, representation here which has been found adequate and satisfactory. While ratification of the contract by the Maxwell people was little more than a mere formality—"Once a Maxwell dealer, always a Maxwell dealer" is an axiom of President Walter E. Flanders—members of the local organization are all enthusiastic.

OSTRANDER LUMBER COMPANY over the assumption of another year's alliance. "We picked the Maxwell in the first place; we believed we could make a better car than any other type of cars," said Mr. E. S. Johnson, of the Johnson Auto Sales Co. Our experience has justified our choice. Through the margin of profit on a 55% car is necessarily small, the volume of sales is great, provided always that the car satisfies its owners as the Maxwell does. "We are expecting even greater sales in the coming season." The cars are larger, handsomer and more powerful than last year's. They will have behind them a sales impetus given by the satisfactory performance of the cars and have already sold. Our own service department has shown its ability to keep every Maxwell car in our territory at top efficiency all the time, and the factory has a magnificent system of keeping us supplied with anything we may need. "Manufacturing economies that have been put in force at the Detroit, Dayton and Newcastle Maxwell plants have made possible a big cut in the price of the car this year. We are now able to show a combination of style and mechanical ability that is absolutely unique." The first shipment of the new Maxwell is already on view at the local dealers. Dr. Brannan's good enthusiasm of the sales force. In addition to a number of mechanical changes, the new Maxwell has a heart driving motor crown, increased seating room, denoumentaire rims, one-man type top and is furnished completely with electrical equipment at the price. A clutch running entirely in oil is a feature that greatly adds to the smoothness of operation. In specifications and in its general lines the cars show plainly its right to a heritage of sturdiness, descended from a long line of sturdy Maxwell ancestors. The friends and neighbors of the Shannon school district spent a very enjoyable evening at the school building, October 30. The affair being an entertainment and box supper. The entertainment was planned by a committee from Shannon club and consisted of songs and recitations accompanied by some of the pupils; piano solos by the Misses Alta McKibbin, Florence Tadhken, Mary and Pauline Griffith; readings by Mrs. Palmer and readings and vocal solos by Mr. Palmer. Mr. Palmer acted as emcee. Boxes being sold to the amount of $37.20. Proceeds of which will be used in beautifying the interior of the school building.

HEALTH AND HYGIENE

Issued by the United States Public Health Service. Great things have small beginnings. A spectacle maker, Jan Leppersheim by name, living in Holland, invented a simple and effective method of detecting and destroying disease in 1908.

We spend our days surrounded by another world, a living world of countless billions, invisible to the naked eye. It is these tiny organisms, the living, consuming the dead, useful in the sciences and arts, yet often followed by a train of sickness, suffering and death.

There were persons who do not necessarily produce disease. Rattling the parable of the sower, some bacteria fall by the wayside, some fall upon stony places, and some fall in good soil.

HEALTH BULLETIN

From the Idaho State Board of Health. With the present knowledge of treating diphtheria, there should be no deaths from it if the nature of the ailment is discovered soon after the clinical symptoms become manifest and antitoxin is freshly used.

In some few cases the physicians have failed to administer antitoxin until the disease is far advanced. A delegation of Eden and Hillside districts appeared before the Highway District, Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1915.

There is no evidence for the statement that the antitoxin depresses the heart of the patient in an acute diphtheria, and that men who do not use antitoxin as soon as the nature of the disease is determined must succumb to its infection.

OCTOBER HEALTHIEST MONTH

When People Go in Doors, Winter Sickness rate Climbs. October is the healthiest month of the year. November is its close second. In December the sickness rate is at its highest. October is the month with the lowest sickness rate of all months in the year, especially from baby diseases.

In November colds and infectious diseases are more prevalent. People now live more inside and the window openings are kept open, especially at night.

ANOTHER HIGHWAY SCRAP

County Commissioners of Blaine took up Against Hard Problem. The application of the petitioners to have the Hillside Highway District dissolved precipitated a pretty a little altercation as has been seen in Hillside official circles for some time.

CHARITY AND OTHER THINGS

The "Holler-than-thou" attitude and lack of sympathy on the part of many worthy folks may be attributed to privation. They hold themselves superior to the most needy and every applicant for aid is an impostor, to make the helpless poor feel like criminals—these are the crimes which in many good people are guilty.

"Some day, it may be so, we will all be old, and it may be that many of us will be blind, and then a little bread and sympathy on the water so that it can come back to us in case we need it. Let some epigrammatist has reminded us, 'there is no such bad in the best of us, and so much good in the worst of us, that it ill behooves us to condemn the best of the rest of us.' A little more charity all around; a little more milk of human kindness; a little more understanding and sympathy in our own world will work more easily along its under-Wendell Irrigatorian.

THE STORE OF NO REGRETS

NOT SUBJECT TO TAXATION

Lincoln County Cannot Collect Taxes From The Idaho Irrigation Co.

Only irrigation systems from which the water is sold or rented or used on lands outside the state are subject to taxation under the laws of the state of Idaho enacted in 1899 and amended in 1912. Other companies are exempt from taxation. This decision is made by the supreme court in the suit of the Idaho Irrigation company, a Carey net company, against Lincoln county and V. V. Bower, the tax collector.

The court rules that the Idaho Irrigation company having lived up to its contract with the state, has sold or leased no water except to the settlers on the project who were thereby made owners of a proportionate amount of the system. The diversion plant is constructed in Blaine county and the greater part of the system lies in Lincoln county, all in the state of Idaho. Under these conditions the court finds that the company has no taxable interest in the canal system.

Taxed in Lincoln County.

The suit was brought in the district court for Lincoln county to recover $1025.64 taxes being levied against the system under protest. The defendant entered a general demurrer which was upheld by the court and the irrigation company appealed to the supreme court on that decision. The supreme court reversed the judgment of the trial court, and the court made the following instructions to overrule the demurrer and permit the defendants to answer if they care to.

The suit was alleged in the complaint and not contradicted in the demurrer that the company was using none of the uncollected water rights on its land or on any lands whatsoever.

Two Classes of Companies.

In discussing the meaning of the laws relating to exemptions of irrigating systems from taxation, the court gives as one of the reasons for the exemption the intention of the legislature to divide irrigation companies into two classes for the purpose of taxing those selling or renting their water supply and those which did not. The former are to be taxed to the extent of their sales or rentals and the latter not. The purpose of the Idaho Irrigation company the court decided belonged to the latter class and was exempt so long as sold or rented water to the settlers on the project, who by the terms of the contract, became the owners of the water right and the water which it carried, under a lien held by the construction company covering deferred payments.

May Recover Taxes.

As to the right of the company to obtain special interest for the taxes paid under protest, the court says that, as the assessment was made on property that was exempt from taxation, and the taxes were levied on it illegally assessed, it has the right to bring action to recover.

The opinion was written by Chief Justice Sullivan, with Justices J. H. Morgan and Justice J. H. Morgan. —Stateman.

AFTER BETTER VARIETIES

Apple Breeding at the Idaho Experiment Station Promising.

The October issue of the Journal of Heredity, a scientific magazine published by the American Genetic Association, contains a review of the address given by Prof. Vincent, horticulturist at the University of Idaho, at Berkeley last August. The article is of special interest to Idaho people, because it gives an idea of the big work that is being done along the lines of apple breeding in Idaho. One of the great needs in the state, Vincent, is a better winter apple. Many of the varieties we have have many good points, but also have some serious drawbacks. The Jonathan has the color, the quality, but is not a good keeper, and is subject to water core and storage rot. It is also very susceptible to blight. The Red Hawk is a great producer, is a good keeper, the trees bloom late and are remarkably free from disease. The fruit is not entirely marketable in shipping. But along with all these good qualities the fruit lacks crispness, juiciness, flavor and texture, and is so late in maturing in the north that it does not color up well with other varieties, all having very serious defects.

It is in this line that a variety that will combine the better qualities, Professor Vincent is using the Ben Davis as a basis and crossing several other varieties. The varieties used are Jonathan, Spitzenburg, Wagoner, Winesap, Rome Beauty, Gravenstein, Newtown, Arkansas Black, and Delicious.

With these varieties there have been made 10,225 crosses since 1910, and at the present time there are growing in the nursery at Moscow, 10,915 seedling trees. No one knows what these trees will develop into, but it is believed that there will be found many improvements in the good qualities as a result of the work.

Some idea of the immense amount of work involved in this kind of breeding is gained by the methods of procedure that must be followed. First, the unopened blossoms must be visited at an interval of work on fertilization performed so that the blossoms bred will not be self pollinated, and the blossoms covered to prevent foreign pollen from being blown in. Pollen is obtained from the desired blossom at just the right time, and dusted onto the emasculated blossom. Then it must be sealed in the fruit. In pollinated apples are taken, the stem removed and carefully kept till spring, when after two or three transplantings they are finally set out in the nursery as seedlings. All this requires an immense amount of bookkeeping and painstaking, careful manipulation.

Prof. Vincent worked and the seal of said District Court, this 29th day of October, A. D. 1915.

DECISION FOR PHYSICIAN

Judgment of the District Court for Elmore County is Affirmed.

The supreme court affirmed the judgment of the defendant in the case of Elton Osborn, an infant, by Charles S. Osborn, guardian ad litem versus Frank T. Cary, in a decision handed down today written by Justice J. H. Morgan and concurred in by his associates, Chief Justice Sullivan and Justice Budge. The judgment was rendered in the lower court for the Fourth judicial district, Elmore county, by Edward A. Walters, presiding judge, who found for Dr. Cary. The case is one of the most complicated that reached the supreme court on appeal from that county.

Dr. Cary is a physician. He was called in to treat Elton Osborn. The cause of the matter brought action to recover damages against Dr. Cary on the grounds he "negligently and unskillfully diagnosed the disease and prescribed and administered the treatment for the ailment from which he was suffering."

It is claimed by the guardian of Elton Osborn that the cause was not osteomyelitis of the tibia of the right leg; that Dr. Cary diagnosed the disease as septicaemia and treated the suffering boy, or that, recently, he had injury and damage. Dr. Cary claimed this was the correct diagnosis.

This is the second time the case has been brought to the supreme court. The trial of the present case from which an appeal was taken resulted in a verdict and judgment for Dr. Cary.

Syllabus of Opinion.

The supreme court's finding setting forth the findings of fact and law is of interest to the medical profession. It is as follows:

"Where the physician or medical expert was to show that the symptoms of two diseases are so dissimilar that a physician of ordinary skill and ability can readily distinguish one from the other and that therefore respondent, who is a physician, ought to be able to distinguish them, and where the respondent has testified that he was able to distinguish one of these diseases from the other, the evidence sought to be introduced by the question was immaterial."

"Where a patient has been treated for osteomyelitis, which treatment was discontinued prior to the commencement of the action and where the cause of action, if one exists, arises not out of improper treatment of the disease but out of the negligence of the respondent in failing to correctly diagnose ailments as osteomyelitis, it is immaterial what the result of the treatment may have been had it been continued and it is immaterial what the correct treatment for osteomyelitis is."

While it is a general rule that books upon scientific subjects are not admissible in evidence, except after an expert witness has referred to a particular work to sustain his opinion, in which case only such work may be admitted to contradict him in that opinion; it is also a well established rule that a witness in testifying as an expert it is competent to test his knowledge and accuracy upon cross-examination by reading to him the pertinent parts of such authorities upon the subject of his examination and by asking him whether he agrees or disagrees with him.

"All findings of fact given in a case must be read and considered together as a whole and, where they are not inconsistent but may be reasonably reconciled, the jury will be assumed that the jury gave due consideration to the whole instruction rather than to an isolated portion thereof."

"A requested instruction that if the jury find from the evidence that the defendant was employed to treat the plaintiff named in the complaint to attend upon him, the law presumes that such employment lasted during the sickness of plaintiff and the relation of physician and patient continuing until it was ended by the consent of the parties or revoked by the express disclaimer of the defendant by the plaintiff, is properly refused where it appears that after his employment a condition arose in the affairs of the defendant named in the complaint which rendered it impossible for him to visit his patient or to treat him and where he was unable to effect a change in the patient's condition or called upon to administer further treatment.—Capital News."

ALIAS SUMMONS

In the District Court of the Fourth judicial district of the state of Idaho, in and for the County of Twin Falls.

Cottonwood Hanch Company, Limited, a corporation, plaintiff, vs. Frank C. Radtke, defendant.

The state of Idaho sends greetings to Frank C. Radtke, the above named defendant:

YOU ARE HEREBY SUMMONED and REQUIRED to appear in an action brought by the Cottonwood Hanch Company, Limited, plaintiff in the said District Court of the Fourth Judicial District of the State of Idaho, in and for the County of Twin Falls, and to answer to the complaint of the above named plaintiff filed therein within twenty days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service made on you by the undersigned or if served elsewhere, within forty days.

This is an action brought to quiet title in and to the plaintiff to the use of certain of the waters of Cottonwood creek, a stream situated within the above named county, and for general relief as to the Court may seem just and equitable, as will more fully appear in the complaint hereto filed with the Clerk of the Court, and you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief sought.

Witness my hand and the seal of said District Court, this 29th day of October, A. D. 1915.

E. J. FINCH, Clerk.
