THINK ABOUT IT

Twin Falls Commercial Club

The National Defense Program seems to be the rock upon which the Democracy is going to be wrecked. President Wilson favors a wide departure from the present policy. Bryan favors peace at any price. It looks like war—Democratic war. Probably the Republicans will be glad to furnish the munitions to keep such a war going.

The blowing up of munition factories in different sections of the United States shows still further that the utter lack of protection which this nation has for its citizens and their property. The whole nation should look with humiliation upon the fact that enemies of this country can so easily cripple our industry. It looks as though Uncle Sam will have to declare martial law in the vicinity of all industrial centers unless the alien anarchists can be caught and the wholesale destruction of life and property stopped.

The Boy Scouts of this city are to be congratulated upon their attempt to make the organization count as a factor in civic improvements. The present attempts to make themselves useful to the community will materially enhance the value of the boys as future citizens and make the purpose in life of each worth while. It cannot hurt any boy to be drilled in the habits that make for his own betterment, and that of the community in which he lives.

One grave mistake of parents is to neglect the growing boy and leave him too much in his own devices for amusement. Responsibility tends to strengthen character in any boy. Make them a part of the community betterment plans and get a hundred per cent return in broadened character.

PREPAREDNESS AND POLITICS

Evidence that "preparedness" will be a stirring issue in the coming Presidential campaign appears in the newspapers from day to day as one leader after another come out with a statement supporting or condemning the president's defense program. He is pushing America toward militarism says Mr. Bryan, and Mr. Kitchin, the Democratic leader in Congress, agrees. Ex-presidents Roosevelt and Taft oppose his plans, the former because they do not go far enough, the latter because they go too far. Even the President's own party seems divided on the issue, and he has felt impelled to appeal for Republican support. That the question of national defense should come up "just at a time when a national election is in prospect" seems unfortunate to non-partisan editors, as they note, with the New York Journal of Commerce, the "all most irrefragable disposition to make a party question of it." When President Wilson, in his New York speech of November 4, set forth his program for preparedness "for defense, not war," he asked for the hearty support "of men of all shades of political opinion." And the venerable Joseph H. Choate stood for many Republican leaders and editors when he expressed "the fervent hope that no partisan spirit will enter into this matter of national preparedness." "But the most influential member of the Democratic party, other than the President himself, dissents in toto, and if he is going to carry a number of Senators and Members sufficient to deprive the Democrats of a majority in Congress with him and against the Administration," remarks the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times (Rep.), it will be impossible for Republicans "to ignore the situation thus created." Besides such Democrats as may follow Mr. Bryan and oppose their president because they think he leans too far toward militarism, at the possible risk of weakening their party, there are Republicans and Progressives who believe they have been presented with an issue by the sad inadequacy of Mr. Wilson's tardy concessions to our military needs. Thus the Chicago Evening Post (Prog. Rep.) calls for a candidate to lead a successful campaign with "real preparedness" as an issue, in which connection it is interesting to note (Signed) Roosevelt's expression of regret that the president "does not present a real and substantial plan of defense instead of a shadow."

Mr. Bryan, it will be remembered on the very day after President Wilson's brief restatement of the now familiar naval and military program of the administration, denounced the plan as "a menace to our peace and safety," and "a challenge to the spirit of Christianity." This action of Mr. Bryan's, the Boston Herald (Ind. Rep.) declares, "gives him an issue for square and open antagonism to the president at the coming session of Congress, and gives him a basis on which to oppose the renomination of President Wilson." "While it will not seriously impede the arms-movement," says the Journal (Ind. Rep.) in the ex-Secretary's home city of Lincoln, "Mr. Bryan's split with the president may have serious political consequences. It is not likely that any Democrat can be elected president next year without Mr. Bryan's support. If this feud goes far enough it will jeopardize President Wilson's chance of re-election."

But a Democratic daily in the same city, The Daily Star, though admitting that "Bryan's avowal of hostility may mean that in the next national convention he will be a marked presidential candidate," adds confidently: "So strong is the esteem in which Wilson is held by the people that it does not seem possible that he can be destroyed by this latest effort at party perfidy." The Boston Traveler (Ind.) predicts that Mr. Bryan "will be beaten to a standstill, if not to silence." On the general question, agrees the New York Evening Post (Ind.), Mr.

Bryan "can get but a corporal's guard to go with him and against the president," and this editor speaks of "some who see in the president's speech a deliberate attempt to force Bryan into the open and to complete his political discomfiture." Republicans, made certain by the election returns "that the Republican party can return to power in 1916, regardless of a split in the Democracy," may well be indifferent to the political bearings of the Wilson-Bryan split; but, adds the Boston Transcript (Rep.), "coming at this time, and on this issue, the breach is full of sinister significance."

"It portends the defeat in congress next winter of the president's preparedness-program. It means that all real Americans, in both the senate and the house of representatives . . . must rally to a common cause without respect to party affiliation. Every patriotic vote will be needed . . . Mr. Bryan's strength in congress should not be underestimated. There are in that body a choice lot of 'pork barrel' patriots and fourth-class postmaster grabbers who were cast at birth in the Bryan mold and who have assiduously devoted themselves since then to the task of improving upon nature by cultivating the arts of assiduity. It will be more than a corporal's guard that Bryan will muster under the rallying cry of 'Millions for the rifle, but not one cent for defense.' Many will flock to his standard from the Gorman centers in our great cities and from the uncombed prairies of the West. Nor will they be lacking in Republican support if Mr. Taft speaks with any authority when he says, 'We are not justified in rushing into militarism.'"

"The country is groping in the dark while politicians estimate the value of the nation's honor in terms of votes."—Literary Digest.

"Which Shall It Be?"

A powerful story in two acts by Thalhouser's company. You remember that grand old home circle poem, a poor family, seven children with a cripple and a very bad boy among them.

I will give
A house and land where you shall live,
If in return from out your seven,
One child to me for aye is given."

But bless those kids, a mother's heart loves them all. Which shall it be? Which shall it be? I looked I looked at John—John looked at me.

There's theme and pathos—a feature you will like.

COOKING TWIN FALLS APPLES

Domestic Science Department Tests Cooking Properties of Apples.

Realizing that Twin Falls is a fruit producing community, the advanced class in Domestic Science of the local high school performed the following experiment with the various kinds of apples which were secured by courtesy of the Twin Falls Packing company.

As far as possible apples of uniform size were selected and they were baked at the same time in a common oven. A check experiment was made by experiment with the various kinds of apples which were secured by courtesy of the Twin Falls Packing company.

As far as possible apples of uniform size were selected and they were baked at the same time in a common oven. A check experiment was made by experiment with the various kinds of apples which were secured by courtesy of the Twin Falls Packing company.

The properties of a good baking apple are an attractive color and firm texture and they must not only bake quickly but must remain whole and firm. The Jonathan, Gano, Kinard and Winter Banana, all baked quickly and were very attractive when done. The Wagner is perhaps the most attractive in appearance but it requires a greater time to get tender.

The best apples for pies and dumplings are those that cook quickly without being mushy. The Rome Beauty is perhaps preferable for this reason but the Gano, Kinard, Jonathan, or Winter Banana all serve this purpose admirably.

When one wishes the apples in the sauce to remain whole or to be mushy should govern their selection of apples for this purpose. If you want them to retain their shape the Marfee, Jonathan, Wagners, or Rome Beauty are best as the Gano and Kinards have a greater tendency to become mushy.

As can be observed from reference to the table the Arkansas Black, Stoughton, Winesap and Marfee require the longest time and have too solid a texture to make them practical for cooking purposes. The Rome Beauty is superior to those tried out with respect to time and texture but its color makes it less desirable for baking purposes.

DECKER, at Sign of the Big Clock

We have just finished checking over our November books. In spite of the stormy weather, we did almost as much portrait business in November of this year as we did in December of last year. This is a phenomenal comparison and indicates—it practically insures—an unusually large December business, for December is invariably the heaviest month in a studio.

Last year we had to turn sittings away because of lack of time; we do not want to do this again. We think we are prepared to handle nearly twice the volume of business we did last December. Whether we do this or not; one thing is certain: both days and evenings between the tenth and twentieth of this month will be crowded with appointments.

We want your business; more than that, we want to give you thoughtful, careful work; this takes time. We want time to talk over your preferences; we want time in the posing-room. We want you to have the dressing-room quite to yourself without waiting your turn. We want you to have time to tie your pretty packages in leisure instead of nervous haste. BEST SAFETY RECORD

A statement of interest has been issued by the Short Line to all employees.

An annual report of Interstate Commerce Commission for the first quarter of 1915 (January, February, March) and installation of railroads of the United States with a mileage of over 250,000 miles, operated with a total of only 65 fatalities (including passengers, employees, trespassers and others) in train accidents (where train was in accident) in these three months the railroads handled 202,000 passengers, who traveled a distance of 6,811,600 miles. Statistics show this to be the best safety record for any quarter since the law requiring monthly accident reports went into effect in 1907, or in 14 years.

Official returns of the Interstate Commerce Commission for the last three calendar years, show fatalities as follows:

In Train Accidents.

	1914	1913	1912
Passengers	50	75	153
Employees on duty	295	511	631
Trespassers	76	79	99
Others	22	44	70
Total	443	712	953
Per-cent of decrease in 1914, 49.3; 1915, 25.3.

Other Than Train Accidents.

	1914	1913	1912
Passengers	113	189	173
Trespassers	5168	5474	5402
Employees on duty	1028	2435	2380
Others	1519	1837	1838
Total	8419	9686	9588
Grand Total	8902	10398	10541
Per-cent of decrease in 1914, 12.2.

The Safety First movement has brought about the results reflected above; an incontestable illustration of accomplished results due to united effort for a common end. Continued co-operation upon the part of all must be encouraged and kept actively alive. Safety First was not launched on most railroads until the year 1912 and the two years of its activity resulted in 470 fewer deaths in the United States in 1914 than in the year of its inception.

Constant vigilance is the price of safety; lack of co-operation, thought, care and obedience to the rules, the cause of accidents and personal injuries. Be vigilant, co-operative, thoughtful, and careful, thereby assisting as individuals "Safety First" which will make you a more efficient employe and a more valuable citizen. In your civic life the topic of trespassing upon railroad property should be agitated and those of your immediate circle who have not had your opportunity to become informed of the danger of this practice, advised of the army of persons (more than 5000 each year) sacrificed in this way, all of which could be avoided by the public conforming itself to the regularly dedicated highways. The major portion of persons killed while trespassing are not of the element commonly known as hoboes or tramps, but on the contrary are useful citizens, and wage earners or children.

BUILDING JUST THE HOME YOU WANT.

In speaking of the home you want to build one writer has said:

"The house he is to build is the house of his hopes and dreams, probably the fruit of long years of work and study and contemplation; it is to be a home for his soul as well as his body, a little corner of the world that is essentially his own."

In other words, to be just what you want, your new home must be vastly more than an example of practical construction of good quality materials. Its whole makeup, interior and exterior, must interpret and express you—it must harmonize with your individuality.

The floor plans and sketches comprising our "Cottage Home" Plan Service are chock full of sensible suggestions which the architect or builder can carry out at a modest outlay.

The home of your hopes need not be an expensive home.

STRUGGLE ON ICE SLOPES

Chicago Man Overtaken by Storm on Summit of Longs Peak.

Estes Park, Colo., Dec. 2.—The following letter, addressed to Mr. Joseph Dickson Sherman, at this village, by Mr. D. W. Roper, of Chicago, gives the interesting details of an unusually dangerous ascent of Longs Peak, the giant of the new Rocky Mountain National Park, in the early part of September.

Longs Peak, which is 14,255 feet high, was considered unclimbable for many years. Its summit is reached by passing from Boulder Field, which lies 12,000 feet up, through an opening in the rocky wall known as Keyhole out upon the side of a sharp-angled slope covered with perpetual ice and snow, which slants from near the summit far down the mountain side to end in a nearly precipitous drop of a good deal more than a thousand feet into Glacier Gorge.

This is called the Trough and it is ascended by steps cut in the ice and snow, which are frequently obliterated by fresh snowfalls and must be renewed continually. So far none of the hardy scalars of the summit, which include by the way, an increasing number of women, have lost control on this dangerous slope, though stories are whispered of occasional slips caught just in time.

In the Face of a Gale.

Last summer the writer, while ascending the lower levels, met four young men; two of them with frozen feet, who had been held overnight on the summit by a snow squall obliterating the steps too late in the day, to enable them to cut new ones on their descent.

"As there was a heavy snow on the summit of Longs Peak the night after I returned to the Inn," writes Mr. Roper, "I was advised not to attempt the ascent for several days on account of the danger. I therefore waited until the fourth day after the snow, and made my ascent on Saturday, September 7, 1915. Starting about seven in the morning, I rode alone and without guide to Boulder Field, where the horse was left. I had some description of the appearance of the Keyhole, and it had been suggested that perhaps it would find difficulty in getting by the snow in the Trough and might do better to climb the boulders along the side. The geological survey map constituted the lower level, met four young men; two of them with frozen feet, who had been held overnight on the summit by a snow squall obliterating the steps too late in the day, to enable them to cut new ones on their descent.

"Walking across Boulder Field I was somewhat sheltered from the wind which was blowing a gale from the southwest. On reaching the Keyhole I found the wind blowing against me so strong that I could hardly stand. Therefore I retraced a few steps and sat down in the lee of a projecting rock and ate a portion of my lunch. It was so cold that there appeared to be no prospect of rain at higher altitudes, and I therefore left at this point my knapsack, containing my raincoat, the remainder of my lunch and a few other incidentals.

Cutting Steps in the Ice.

"After leaving the Keyhole the general direction of the trail was indicated by a few cairns, but they were very scarce. The footprints in the snow of a party that had made the ascent the previous day were of considerable assistance and particularly in the Trough where I found their steps cut in the ice and crusty snow. I did not have to cut more than six or eight steps, and as I had nothing that could be used for the purpose except my hunting knife this was very fortunate.

"The ascent from the Keyhole to the summit required an hour and thirty minutes. In the Trough I was on all fours about half the time and did considerable climbing over and amongst the boulders. I would characterize the ascent as dangerous rather than difficult. There was no snow of any consequence except in the Trough although the notes in the register of the summit showed that the party had found two inches on the summit the previous day.

"I had taken opportunity to enjoy the most magnificent views on the way up the peak, and it was fortunate that I did so, as I there found a storm brewing, the clouds being about on the level with the top of the peak, and snow starting to fall. I made a slight tour of the summit and then located and examined the register of the Colorado Mountain Club.

Fighting a Snow Storm.

"The snowfall rapidly increased, so that in twenty minutes after reaching the summit I started the descent, as I feared difficulty due to the snow covering the steps in the ice through the Trough. My furs were well founded. More than half of the steps were not only filled but entirely covered and obliterated, so that it was impossible to locate them. There were several places from fifty to a hundred feet wide or more between the boulders alongside the Trough where there was no sign of a footing, and if one should start to slip it was hard to see just where one might expect to stop. The only certain place appeared to be down near Glacier Lake, some 2,000 feet below.

"In these places I made steps by repeated kicks with my heel, at the same time making handholds higher up with my hands in the crusty snow.

Fortunately, I was able to find the steps in that order, and in the case of the Trough that was covered with ice. In one place I attempted to go down over a boulder by lowering myself feet first, but after getting so far that I swung freely below my chest, I found it impossible to find safe footing and had to climb up again over the boulder. As this boulder was located in a position with a steep crusty snow slope below it, the climbing up was attended with some danger, and especially so as the first part of the climbing consisted of a series of kicks and wriggles in an attempt to lift my clothing clear of the rough boulder and to move forward at the same time until I could bring my foot or knee into action.

"The trail was very dim after getting out of the Trough. Several times I found myself a considerable distance above the trail and nearly descended through the transom. If there is one, instead of the Keyhole. The difficulties in the Trough, and in leaving the trail resulted at my making the descent to the Keyhole in an hour and thirty-five minutes, or five minutes longer than the time required for the ascent.

THE VAMPIRE

A fool there was and he made his prayer (Even as you and I!) To a rag and a bottle and hank of hair (We called her the woman who did not care) But the fool he called her his lady fair (Even as you and I!) Oh, the years we waste and the tears we waste And the work of our head and hand, Belong to the woman who did not know (And now we know she never could know) And did understand. A fool there was and his goods he spent (Even as you and I!) Honor and faith and a sure intent And it wasn't the least what the lady meant But a fool must follow his natural bent (Even as you and I!) Oh, the toll we lost and the spoil we lost. And the excellent things we planned, Belong to the woman who didn't know why (And now we know that she never knew why) And did not understand. The fool was stripped to his foolish hide (Even as you and I!) Which she might have seen when she threw him aside— (But it wasn't on record the lady tried) So some of him she lived, but most of him died. (Even as you and I!) But it wasn't the shame and it isn't the blame That stings like a white-hot brand— It's coming to know that she never knew why (Seeing at last she could never know why) And never could understand.
