"Spugs" More in Evidence than Ever Before. Early Buying on the Increase.

"Spugs" are much in evidence in Twin Falls this year. For the sake of the full title (Society for Prevention of Useless Dying). To be a Spug is to be set down as a very practical Christian.

The stores of Twin Falls show no dearth of toys for the little folk and probably never before in the history of this city has there been such liberal stocks of toys and novelties.

One thing most noticeable about the Twin Falls prices is the absence of any effort to boost prices in the Christmas buying season.

BIG HERD OF DEER

Idea Suggested Might be Tried With Good Effect in This City to Clear the Docket.

What promises to become an annual national event, has been inaugurated as National Pay-Up Week, February 21-26, inclusive.

National Pay-Up Week has its beginning in the little city of Waukon, Iowa, a county seat of but little over 2,000 population at the end of a little railway in the northeastern part of the state of Iowa.

Everybody seemed to join in the spirit, and consequently all found it easy to pay their debts.

BEGIN GOOD ROADS CRUSADE

The Times believes that this winter is the ideal time to work over plans for a big "good roads" campaign for next year. In order to work up enthusiasm, it would be a great stimulus to put substantial prizes up for the best mile of graded road. By placing these prizes high enough say three hundred dollars for the first prize, the farmers in various sections will wake up and take notice. As a result of putting up the big prize the rivalry will increase to the point where fifty to a hundred miles of road will enter into the contest where perhaps eight or ten miles if the prize were placed at fifty dollars.

The amount would interest several of the rural districts, who thus might obtain money for a new school library or piano. At any rate the notion of picking up three hundred dollars as first prize and smaller amount for second and third prizes would do much to develop the good roads movement.

In connection with above idea it has been suggested by some of the road enthusiasts to set aside a rock lifting day in which every automobile driver and every farmer would pledge himself to pick up every stone possible in the road. It could be further worked out to interest the children in the idea and make the rock lifting day a semi-holiday.

The above suggestions are made with the idea that the matter of good roads is not merely for the county commissioners but a vital topic for every man who must traverse the highways and who must pay dearly by added cost when the roads are poor.

ANOTHER DEMOCRATIC SPLIT ON PREPAREDNESS

Representative Kitchin's attack upon President Wilson's defense-plans is even more embarrassing to the Democratic party than Mr. Bryan's opposition, as some observers see it. For Mr. Bryan is now merely a private though influential Democrat, while the North Carolina Congressman, as chairman of the Ways and Means committee in the leader of the party in Congress and therefore the man to whom the President would naturally look to steer his program past the senate. Mr. Kitchin, it is true, explains that he is conducting his fight as an individual, and not as leader of the House, and the President, according to Washington dispatches, accepts this explanation. But many papers agree with the New York Evening Sun (Ind.) in thinking this distinction "absurd," and some of them do not hesitate to say that if he cannot conscientiously cooperate with the President on what is likely to be the paramount issue before the next Congress he should surrender his leadership on the floor to some one who can. Thus even in Mr. Kitchin's own state we find this suggestion advanced by the Charlotte Observer (Dem.), which thinks he might best preserve his convictions by sacrificing his ambitions and by the Fayetteville Observer (Dem.), which remarks more bluntly that "he might follow Mr. Bryan's example and resignation." To the New York Commercial (Com.), also, it "seems inconsistent" for Mr. Kitchin "to attack the defense-plan of the President and yet hold the position of spokesman for him in the House"—for "Although the Constitution does not make any provision for the representation of the Federal Administration in either branch of Congress, long-established custom has caused the leader of the President's party in the House so to be recognized." A Republican paper, the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, even warns President Wilson that his complacent attitude toward his refractory House leader may "create a suspicion of his own sincerity in the public mind." The "ridiculous" position in which Mr. Kitchin's action places his party is thus pictured by the New York Times (Ind. Dem.):

"There must, of course, be a leader for the Administration's program, a leader to guide the party through the campaign for it on the floor. Mr. Kitchin, the elected leader, can not do it; he will be not much more than a spectator, if he carries out his promise to act simply as an individual; if he breaks that promise he will be a leader of the opposition. Therefore the leader in the preparedness fight must be some one else. That person, whoever he is, will then stand out in the public mind as the Democratic leader; for he will be doing the leading, he will be the Administration's general throughout the first, the longer and more important part of the session. The party will have two leaders, the nominal and elected leader, passive or antagonistic and the draft leader, the emergency leader, who would in the natural course of events be the chairman of one of the military committees, but might be some one else. Trying to imagine a plight for the Democratic party on which it would be more supremely ridiculous than it ever has been even in the past, could any crafty and ingenious mind think up anything that would surpass this? For years the Democratic party in Congress and its comic leadership were the standing joke of politics; it reflected itself at last with difficulty, but in its wildest absurdities, when its leaders led in one direction and its rank and file stamped in another, it never reached this height."—Literary Digest.

The annual dance given by the members of the Twin Falls band was held in Coulter hall Wednesday night. A large crowd danced to the excellent music.

The Five Family club surprised Mrs. Wright on Blue Lakes Boulevard with a dinner party last Friday. Each family contributed one thing for the dinner. A very enjoyable time was had.

Mrs. P. W. McRoberts was hostess for the Winoona club Wednesday afternoon. The afternoon was devoted to Christmas sewing, after which a delicious two course luncheon was served.

Mrs. Gates entertained the members of the Monday card club this week. There were two substitutes, Mrs. Karstis and Mrs. Fletcher. A cut glass dish was the hostess' prize. Light refreshments were served.

Miss Florence Sharp and Miss Belva Pearson entertained the Sewing club and a large number of guests at the Hibbard home. The evening was spent in sewing after which light refreshments were served.

The Priscilla club was entertained by Mrs. J. W. Patrick last Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Elmer Hoellingsworth and Mrs. Herren were guests of the club. After a busy afternoon spent in sewing, light refreshments were served.

Miss Ione Martin and Miss Rosamond Putnam entertained the members of the Kappa Delta Sigma sorority and their men friends with a dance at the Putnam home last Friday night. Light refreshments were served.

The members of the Addison Avenue Kensington Club delightfully entertained by Mrs. Guy Simpson last Friday afternoon. Mrs. Wolfe and Mrs. Dunlap were guests. In a guessing contest Mrs. Fletcher received first honors and Mrs. Dunlap second. Light refreshments were served.

Mrs. Cordes, living four and a quarter miles southeast, was hostess to the Shamrock club, Thursday afternoon, November 25th. The program consisted of a paper by Mrs. Deane and a little guessing contest. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in needlework, followed by dainty refreshments, served by the hostess.

Mrs. Rowan was hostess to the members of the Acroma club last Thursday. The program for the afternoon consisted of a paper on the "Cambridge Poets," by Mrs. Ennis. The members responded to roll call with quotations from Longfellow. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in sewing, after which refreshments were served.

The last regular meeting of the Mother's Surprise club was held Wednesday, December 1, at the home of Mrs. Boone. The program was very interesting to the ladies who are making Christmas presents, as it consisted of suggestions for Christmas presents and fancy work. Roll call was responded to with Christmas songs and a dainty luncheon was had by Mrs. Boone.

SOCIETY MAKES BIG PLANS

Holiday Season Will Bring Several Formal Parties.

With the approach of the holiday season, New Year and Mid-Winter, several formal parties, including family suppers in Twin Falls, are being planned. Your enjoyment of these affairs will be insured by the taste and distinction shown by your gown, which our holiday dresses alone possess.

SPECIAL NOTICE

To my PATIENTS, and all others who are wishing to take CHIROPRATIC TREATMENTS for their ailments, I have found it necessary to leave Twin Falls and seek a lower one. And have turned over my office, fixtures and complete equipment, they are able to render service to the sick, second to no other practitioners in the State.

I can highly recommend Dr. Atterton as thorough and competent Chiropractors, as their years of experience and their complete equipment, they are able to render service to the sick, second to no other practitioners in the State.

Edward Colts in "After Five" a Comedy of Life Turned Upside Down.
James L. Lusk presents Edward Colts, who made his first notable screen success under Lusk's management in "Breast of the Million" in a new melodramatic comedy with a money motive, entitled "After Five". This play which is the joint work of Cecil B. De Mille and William C. de Mille finds humor in things and conditions generally associated with tragedy, such as life-insurance coupled with a plot to get killed "accidentally" on purpose, and a blackmailing scheme of the deepest dye. The originality of the elements of ordinary life upside down, so to speak, provides the piece with a rare quality of whimsical humor.

By the special permission of the Famous Players, dainty, brilliant Margaret Clark is the star in Jesse L. Lasky's production of "The Goose Girl," the most interesting production of the old Metropolitan's famous novel of the same title, which is to be the center of our Monday and Tuesday, December 13 and 14, at the Lavington. Mrs. Clark is a vision of loveliness just suited to be the heroine of such a romantic tale in kingdoms unknown and to inspire the hero with that great love which conquers all obstacles and breaks down all barriers. Miss Clark plays the role of a Princess who has been kidnapped in youth and brought up by her peasant foster parents to guard their genes. Hence the name of the production.

for Christmas are those which add to the comfort and satisfaction of the loved one. Useless petty gifts are soon forgotten with the giver. Those of value live in the memory. In making that Christmas selection do not overlook the fact that in pretty and substantial furnishings for the home is a hundredfold satisfaction, because the joy over the gift grows as the days and months pass. Why not look over our big stock of furniture for that gift.

For Mother—A fine range "The Eternal", a kitchen cabinet with its economy of space, in saving steps, a pretty rug or a rocker.

For Dad—A big easy chair or a book rack or book case, a big comfortable footstool for those tired feet.

For Sister—A pretty bed room suite, a dainty wicker rocker for her room, a cedar or wicker skirt box.

For Baby—Cute little beds and rockers.

These are the appreciated gifts that make Christmas the very best day of the year, because of the idea of service back of the gift. Let us show you some of the many practical and beautiful gifts that we have in our big stock.

"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"

The American Film Manufacturing Company's Picturized Romantic Novel in Chapters.

This contest is open to any man, woman or child who is not connected, directly or indirectly, with the Film Company or the newspapers publishing the continued story. No literary ability is necessary to qualify as a contestant.

You are advised to see the continued photo play in the theaters where it will be shown—to read the story as it runs every week, and then send in your suggestion. Contestants must confine their contributions for the sequel to 1,000 words or less. It is the idea that is wanted.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A feud has existed between Colonel Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar over a diamond, the diamond from the sky, found in a fallen meteor by an ancestor. Also, the ancestor to the Stanley family in England was connected to an American. When a daughter is born to the colonel and the mother dies the colonel buys a gypsy boy and substitutes him. Three years later the gypsy mother, having had no part in this bargain, steals the air. Esther, the girl, is born and leaves her son undetected as the heir. The gypsy has obtained possession of the diamond from the sky, and a document which the Stanley secret. Years later Hagar, gypsy queen, returns to Virginia with Esther, the girl, the late Colonel Stanley's friend, adopts Esther. Arthur Stanley, son of Hagar, falls in love with Esther, and so loses his cousin and cousin. The Stanley, rightful male heir of Stanley, in stealing the diamond Blair causes the death of the doctor and tries later to put the blame on Arthur, who takes the gem. Arthur Stanley studies his purport and John Hagar, who reveals his identity and upbraids him for his wild life. Needing money, he pawns the diamond in Richmond. At a ball, at which an adventurer, Vivian Marston, wears the borrowed gem, Luke Lovell, Hagar's gypsy guard, steals the diamond. Arthur leaves Richmond and goes to the west. Quabba, organ grinder, befriends Esther. Hagar takes Esther to Stanley hill.

Tom Blake, a detective of Richmond, who is hired by Hagar, produces finger prints convicting Blair. Hagar proposes silence to Mrs. Stanley as the price of Hagar's and Blair's being released in Fairfax county. Blair strikes down Hagar and steals the finger prints, leaving the gypsy queen dead. Blair is arrested by Smythe, lawyer, arrives to announce Arthur is heir to the deceased Earl of Stanley. The diamond is found in the pocket of Blair instead. To win Vivian, Blair steals the diamond, later marrying her and leaving her for his own. Vivian is robbed. Vivian loses the diamond, which a slain traitor robs drops to the desert. The $10,000 is stolen from the pocket of now known as John Powell, sheep herder. Vivian deserts Blair, telling him he must regain the diamond for Luke Lovell, driven from the camp after learning Hagar's secret, leaves to seek Blair. Hagar is under treatment in a sanitarium in Richmond society. Abe Blipon, gambler, knows Blair's guilt and covets the diamond. He calls to the prison and secures Blair.

The diamond is later picked up by an Indian woman, Dr. Lee, Arthur learns, died of heart disease. Becoming very rich he buys Stanley hill, sold at auction, through Blipon, and also provides for Hagar and Esther and Luke. The diamond from the sky, but loses it in a fight. Vivian, desiring aid to enslave Arthur, sends for Hagar.

Esther and Quabba, also Blair, go to the California mines to seek Arthur. Smythe is sent west by Blake. Vivian Marston is saved from drowning by Powell, who is infatuated by her. Smythe finds the diamond and gives it to Arthur to deliver to Arthur, Blair and Luke go to the yacht and find Esther there.

Esther and Quabba, who stole Blair and Luke battle. Blair in the meantime has joined Vivian in Los Angeles. During "King of diamonds" a fight breaks out between Vivian and Luke to try to discover the diamond. Thereafter Luke Lovell, Esther and Arthur appear on the scene. The diamond is lost in a melee. Esther saves Arthur, who is injured, and he goes to Los Angeles. Blair, the scion-crook, Durand, Esther follows and is refused admittance to see him. In the meantime Smythe has hid the diamond in a tree. It is later found by two bill posters, one of whom murders the other for the diamond. Arthur is "killed" by Durand, De Vaux and Vivian, although Blair, who has taken charge of Arthur's business affairs, protests.

The diamond passes in dice play from the bill poster to Stanley, circus owner, who gives it to La Belle, lion tamer. Splinters, the clown, her jealous husband, shoots Stanley as the lion strikes down and kills the woman. The animal seizes the diamond. Stanley, a stableman, seizes it and hides it in his stable. Blair and Vivian falsify a telegram from Blake to Arthur, making Arthur believe he suffered from hallucinations, the diamond was Esther. Esther tries to see Arthur, on his way to the races, but the plotters prevent her.

CHAPTER XLV.

Still in the Clutch of Drugs.
"IT" the coachman takes the doctor-critic Durand, subconsciously changing from his careless air of rascaller to the grave demeanor of physician. "Lend a hand, Blair," he added as the coachman worked around from the back seat to the groom to the driver's place on the tallyho.

Blair and Vivian, assisting as best they could, aided Durand in dragging Arthur from the box seat, the second one. Here the drug victim collapsed, murmuring:

"Esther? How plainly I saw her—in her gypsy dress! She spoke to me. The hunchback fellow was with her."
"It was imagination," said Vivian soothingly to the stricken man as the pseudo physician, Durand, administered the all too handy hypodermic. "A touch of sun, wasn't it, doctor?"
"Yes," said Durand in equally soothing accents, "I think it was the sun and too much exertion. We shouldn't have let you drive, Mr. Powell; you are not strong enough yet for these things."

Blair said nothing. He could have almost pitied Arthur (that in so short a time as had elapsed since his father's character had been so weakened from his hurts and the drugs administered that Arthur could be convinced that the evidence of his own eyes was but the phantom of a disordered imagination).

Neither the coachman nor the groom had understood the significance of his master's collapse at the sight of two gypsy muskies with piano, pony cart and the coachman and groom, like the other servants at the Powell mansion, only knew their master had never been mentally the same since his injuries at the altar and his first homeward to his new, grand mansion, a battered, shattered, insensible form on a stretcher.

In a few moments the effect of the stimulating drug had calmed Arthur, and he was sitting with closed eyes on the second seat, while Blair, Vivian and Durand. The conspirators decided to return home.

A passing auto coming in the same direction slowed beside the coach, and the occupants called to the driver and the tallyho party that there was a man on behind.

"He looks like a tough customer, too," added the driver of the car.

The groom on the rear seat looked down and ordered the tallyho looking customer to get off. The tallyho looking customer was Luke Lovell, who had come back to Los Angeles solemnly determined to make an asset of his secret and blackmail either Arthur Stanley or Blair, the gypsy boy.

Luke Lovell growled a curse back at the groom and held on. The coachman, with practiced dexterity lashed the whip, back of the coach at a signal from the groom. The thong cut Luke's arm, and he was hurled forward, the shield himself. But again, again the lash cut and stung him cruelly on neck and shoulders, and despite his hardness and determination to stand the onset of the whip he was compelled to get up and drop off. He limped to the sidewalk of the quiet suburban residence street and sat in the shade of a tree by the curb.

Near him a leaking fire hydrant trickled. Luke mopped his brows and the burning cuts across his face with the cooling water. The pain slowly subsided, and Luke looked about him.

"There, far off down the street, but distinct to the keen eyes of the gypsy, were two figures flitting by a pony, piano cart, two figures he knew as well as he knew his own—Esther and Quabba.

Old emotions, old feelings stirred in Luke Lovell at the sight of Esther, daughter of Hagar, the queen of the gypsies; Esther, whom he had always gazed upon with pride and a dull longing—she was not for him. Luke knew that. But yet there stirred in him the old sense of affection and interest with a sense of shame. Had as the late gypsy with there had always been something fine and tender in his regard for Esther. To injure her had been no part of all his wild plans to make more change of what he had always regarded as the Stanley secret and Hagar's. Luke's mental processes were slow, but he was quick to realize he had been in time to think of how he should meet with Esther again, but he was quick to regain her confidence, as he now desired to do.

Luke Lovell rose from the curb even while cogitating upon these things and concealed himself behind the tree. But he could have stood plain upon the sidewalk for all he would have been seen, for Esther and Quabba, their hearts

A half hour later Esther and Quabba part at the alley entrance that leads to Sankey's stables. Esther dons her cloak again to cover her gypsy attire and remove her headress and thus catches a passing thought, her does she attract undue attention as she slips quietly to her room by the entrance of the hotel on a side street.

Quabba stands gazing after his young mistress wistfully until she has turned from the street, and then blocks away. Then Quabba is roused by a hand upon his shoulder and turns to see the awfully face of Luke Lovell.

But meanwhile what of the Santley circus? Santley, the course gained from the owner of the show, lies dead in the morgue downtown. Inside him is Splinters, the clown, who killed Santley and shot himself, and with them is the disfigured body of La Belle, wife of Splinters, the clown, killed by the fire. A triple tragedy and all because of a woman's cupidity and the diamond from the sky!

The new manager of the circus is optimistic. He is inclined to believe "the big blow off," as he calls the tragedy, will be "great press stuff for the show." But the triple tragedy and the panic and riot that followed it have brought the creditors—who are numerous—down upon the show, and it is seized for debt and will be sold at auction. The discomfite performance and attacks, their salaries long in arrears, realize it is a bad season for the show business and are fully aware the returns from a sheriff's auction will pay little if any of their salaries.

Then Hill, the sheriff, sends Luke Lovell to the Sheriff's stable. Luke gave La Belle before the lion. Lancelot killed her—inspired to the deed by the jealous clown Splinters, the show believes. Gospel as to the value of this great gem has been rife about the town since William, the billposter, brought it in from the woods where he said he found it and lost it to Santley at dice.

If this diamond were recovered it would be an asset that would perhaps pay all salaries when sold. Bill Hill, the sheriff, remembers Sankey, the stableman, was one who snatched at the diamond. Hill knows Sankey. In a previous season, with a smaller show, some of the animals had been stabled at Sankey's.

Sankey is informed, and the actor, donning an overcoat to hide his fidgets—for the sheriff's seizure has stopped the show—leaves the way to Sankey's stable. With the sheriff and the coroner go a policeman and the manager of the circus to see the show.

They have reached the stable yard in an auto just previous to the arrival of Quabba with his monkey and pony and street piano cart that he stables here. While Quabba faces Luke Lovell, the coroner, policeman, the sheriff with the coroner and others are in the stable. Sankey has been in the loft searching vainly for the diamond, where he hid it beneath the hay. He comes down the ladder and faces the stableman from the open door, and there between him and the daylight, gleaming like a star, dances from the hay rack over the pony's empty stall the diamond from the sky!

Just as Sankey grasps the diamond from where it had been hid, unseen, by Quabba in his pony's hay the sheriff and his party are at the door and seize the shining stableman.

Out from the piano cart, struck by the diamond with the sheriff's party, the diamond is Sankey's gypsy hand, that is to be cherished by his owners. In wrestling it from the desperate man, the diamond is passed at dice against the eye of Quabba and Luke Lovell, who have hurried upon the scene to the stable mouth at the last moment for the string tie.

How well they know the dazzling jewel! It had been a fortune for them both, a fortune known but not a reality.

The next day the press is with the account of the recovery of the diamond, the aftermath of the circus tragedy. The value of the diamond can hardly be estimated, the Los Angeles papers say. There are no conflicting stories as to how it came into the possession of the dead circus proprietor. This only is known: It will be sold at sheriff's auction as an asset of the Santley circus bankrupt.

Homer Graydon, millionaire, reads the story. Homer Graydon is old in years, but, as he says, "young at heart." Wicked at heart would be the true saying.

CHAPTER XLVI.

"I Am Not John Powell"

Her arrival in Los Angeles Vivian Marston attracted the attention of Homer Graydon, a counsellor of fair wealth. Since the accident to John Powell, the newly rich young oil and mining man, Homer Graydon has seen little of Vivian Marston, for it seems she is an old friend of Powell and old friend of Blair Stanley, the young capitalist and relative from the east, now in charge of Powell's affairs. She is also an old friend, it would appear, of the Durand, Powell's private physician.

"In fact, Vi," says Graydon to that fair charmer, "you seem to be an old friend to everybody but me in this town."

Vivian smiled. "She has met Graydon in the park by telephone appointment. Now that her charge has recovered Miss Marston, who so capably nursed him, has time for her social engagements again. She must be careful in social matters, however, for Blair is jealous and Durand suspicious. But Graydon is too good a friend to lose, according to Miss Marston's way of thinking, and unknown to the others concerned she has driven to the park and kept her secret appointment with the old man.

"You have been cruel and neglectful of me, Vi," continues Graydon. "But here is something in the paper that may interest you. Don't you see diamonds, and I remember your telling me of a wonderful one that broke your heart when it was taken from you by train robbers. It was a wild story, and I cannot say I believed it. But there seem to be strange travels about big diamonds. Here, the paper says, is a wonderful one that caused a triple tragedy the other day at the circus."

Vivian paled as he showed her the newspaper account. "Yes, I know," she said, "I was there. It was a wonderful diamond and"—she faltered—"a dreadful tragedy."

But she does not tell him the diamond was the veritable gem she lost. Homer Graydon was a materialist. He was skeptical of much he saw, and he believed little of what he heard.

"He, he!" chuckled the old man. "The papers are full of wild yarns that the circus owner gave the diamond to the lady-lion tamer, and the circus boss husband, told his friend, the old lion, the lady was unfaithful. The lion killed the lady; the husband killed the giver of the jewel. Then the lion pined the handle from the dead woman's neck, and a millionaire stole it. Romantic, to say the least, eh, what?"

"I was there," repeated Vivian. "I saw it all. The papers speak the truth."

"Well, if you will be a good little girl I'll go to the auction and buy this wonderful diamond for you," chuckled the old lion vivant.

"Will you?" asked Vivian eagerly. "I will if you promise to give up these 'old friends' who have recently monopolized you. Old friends? Never mind old friends. Stick to good friends and you'll wear diamonds."

"I will stick to good friends who get me the diamond," retorted Vivian. "It is well enough to criticize my old friends, as you call them, but they have promised me the diamond too."

"I'll get it for you. I'll outbid them if it costs every cent I have!" cried Graydon excitedly.

Vivian smiled at the thought of the companion to her charms that several told them a threatening fellow was hanging around the Powell mansion evidently bent on blackmail. Another caller at the Powell house was Marmaduke Smythe, legal representative of the Earls of Stanley. He had never met Arthur Stanley, Arthur being a fugitive from Virginia when Smythe had come to notify him he was Earl of Stanley. But Blake, the Richmond detective, had given Smythe a letter to "John Powell" in Los Angeles. Blake informing Smythe that Powell could tell him something of the missing Arthur Stanley.

As Vivian arrives and after Luke left Smythe has called and has been admitted. Flushed with wine and enlivened with drugs, Arthur is wild and boastful. Smythe produces a newspaper and speaks of the circus tragedy and recovery of the great diamond. Suddenly Arthur dashed down his wine glass and stood erect.

"It is the diamond from the sky!" he cried. "I will buy it at the auction, if you are the lawyer of the Earls of Stanley, listen, I am the Earl. I am not John Powell, but Arthur Stanley of Stanley Hall!"

Blair and Durand and De Vaux, who were present, started in surprise at this announcement. The lawyer's jaw dropped, he stepped back a pace and fell backward over his chair.

Just then the servant announced that a rough fellow was at the door who demanded to see Mr. Powell and Mr. Blair Stanley.

The party left the library and crossed to the door. Luke had followed the butler in, and Blair and Durand without ad seized the Gypsy and thrust him out.

A policeman was waiting, and Luke, striking and protesting, was thrown into an automobile and taken to the station house, the others going along as complaining witnesses.

At the station house Luke, strangely silent now, was searched. A champagne and some silver rods were all that was found upon him, and then the policeman dashed from an officer's scribe pocket a small, creased, stained piece of paper. It was a broken match-head, such as are put around packages of banknotes. Printed on it were the words:

WELLS FARGO EXPRESS

Over the heads of those closest to him Luke glanced fixedly at Arthur, who blinked and trembled. It was a slip of paper such as had been around the train robber treasure Arthur had come upon in the desert, funds upon which he had founded the great John Powell fortune.

It had been among the bank notes Arthur had given to Luke. It had been hidden among them and Luke had held to it when the money was gone, as evidence against Arthur, for Luke had suspicions where the money had come from.

"This looks like train robbery stuff," said the desk sergeant.

And then Durand spoke up. "I remember this," he said, pointing to the slip of paper. "I saw it in the hands of a train robber's hangerout at the mining town of Mammoth, where Mr. Powell here was injured some weeks ago."

"Well hold him till we find out," said the sergeant, "Lock him up!"

And Luke was taken away. By the aid of the police station messenger, Luke got word of his plight to Quabba and asked that Esther be brought to see him.

Quabba apprised Esther by telephone. She had just received a telegram from the convalescing Hagar asking her to return to Richmond, and Esther had just wired to reply that she would come, guardedly adding that Arthur seemed to be under evil influences here and that she was discouraged regarding him.

At the station house Esther briefly explained that Luke had been a servant of her mother in Virginia five years and that she knew him to be honest.

Quabba waited for Esther. More strange company, thought the sergeant. But Esther spoke of Tom Blake, the famous Richmond detective, and the sergeant absently her from suspicion, especially when she winsomely smiled and admitted she was of gypsy blood.

At the cell bars Luke Lowell seized his young mistress' hand and kissed it, while contrite tears rolled down his bronzed cheeks. Briefly he explained what had happened.

"There is but one thing to do," said Esther. "Tell the truth. I am tired of subterfuge and deception. I am going back to my mother in Richmond. She has recovered, and she needs me. I cannot shield Arthur at the expense of wronging any one, much as I have loved him and much as others have loved him. If he has done evil things he is not worthy of further sacrifice and silence. I know Blair Stanley to be wicked, as are all those who live in luxury with Arthur. So tell the truth."

"No, Miss Esther," said Luke, huskily. "I will keep silent. They have doubtless crossed me, and I will have revenge in my own way—the gypsy's way."

"There is only one course to follow, my poor Luke," said Esther gently, "and that is the open and truthful course."

"I am not up in this," replied Luke earnestly. "Go back to Hagar and ask her to forgive me and forget I ever rebelled against her. I will attend to my enemies and to hers. I will not harm Arthur if I can help it. I am on Blair Stanley and the others I will have my revenge for their treachery. Tell Hagar that when I can get away I shall return to her and serve her and you faithfully again, my little mistress."

Luke's determination and contrition were so evident that Esther made no further attempt to change his mind. She invoked a blessing on the rugged gypsy and left him, convinced his loyalty to her and Hagar was what it had been before money greed had led Luke to evil courses and companions.

At the circus the auction was on. Arthur and his quondam friends were there; also, gypsies and as though just from a bandbox, the old beau, Homer Graydon. Vivian divided her smiles impartially.

The tents, the animals, the circus equipment generally, brought a few listless bids and went at paltry sums. Then came the event of the sale, the one valuable asset, the great diamond.

"How much am I offered, gentlemen?" cried the auctioneer.

"Ten thousand dollars!" cried Arthur. "Mr. Powell bids $10,000!" cried the auctioneer, gayly. "What else do I hear?"

"Fifteen thousand!" shouted Homer Graydon.

There was a buzz of excitement as John Powell, the mad young millionaire, dropped his bid, and the crowd rose to the price proffered for the diamond from the sky. The crowd roared as the bids went up and up as though it were the Kolobow.

"Going, going!" shouted the auctioneer. "The last call. Am I offered any more? Going, going—gone!"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Laws of the Vikings. Of the north brought terror, to many lands because of their savage warfare, nevertheless, be it said to their credit, no better laws were made or enforced for the time and people than theirs. Few among themselves they strove for, and what words more fitting show this spirit than the following: "Now let us agree and be at peace, one with the other, in good will, whether we meet on mountains or bench, on ship or snowshoes, on earth or Joki (clacker), on the high sea or on horseback, as if one and his friend, on water or his brother on the way, agreeing as well one with another as son with father or father with son in all dealings. Now we join our hands together, all of us, and keep this true, and all words spoken in this pledge of faith witnessed by God and good men and all who hear my words or are here present."—J. W. Perkins in Case and Comment.

There Was a Buzz of Excitement as John Powell Doubled the Bid.

would bid for the diamond for her sake. Let the cost be what it may, the diamond from the sky would be hers, no matter who bought it.

Then Vivian had good news to Graydon and drove away. During her absence from the Powell mansion there were callers she might have recognized. The first was Luke Lovell, set and determined upon what he called "having a square deal."

Luke Lovell had encountered Blair earlier in the day, and the suave master of Blair puzzled Luke. Blair told him that he (Luke) was well within his rights in demanding a share of the spoils—Arthur's wealth.

"Call at the house," said Blair, "and kick up a row. You'll get yours, for I'll back you up."

Then when Luke had departed from the office Blair called up the police and

(From the Herald)
Bob Barnwell, Lee Jensen and Al Stolte spent Thanksgiving day with S. E. Hyde and family, at a turkey dinner.

H. E. Thompson and family, who live northeast of town, spent Thanksgiving day at the home of E. T. Sandmeyer, east of town.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Green entertained Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Callin, last Thursday at a Thanksgiving dinner.

J. H. Rogers, proprietor of the Second Hand store, returned from Denver Saturday, where he closed a real estate deal, disposing of his property interest north of Denver, six miles.

Dr. and Mrs. A. McClusky entertained Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Davis, and daughter, Dorothy, and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bower and son, Donnie, Thanksgiving day.

Otto Hansen went to Twin Falls the first of the week where he is building a fire place in a new residence.

Miss Crossland and Miss Harris, slossers, Wabber, Kitchin and Johnson, ate Thanksgiving dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McQuown.

Thomas Clinton is negotiating the purchase of the lot adjoining the McClusky office building, and next to the Buhl Meat Market.

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Tillery entertained at Thanksgiving dinner E. B. Johnson and family and Geo. L. Layne and family.

Mrs. J. H. Murphy and daughter, Elizabeth, went to Twin Falls Wednesday evening to spend the week end with the M. C. Ware family, who formerly lived at Buhl. They returned the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Taylor left this week to spend about a month visiting at their former home in Dresden, Kansas.

Miss Nona Faris came down from Twin Falls to spend several days at her home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Weaver went to Rosser, Friday for a visit with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Schwing.

Misses Etta Green and Bess Cunningham went to Twin Falls to spend Thanksgiving day at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Beebe, returning Thursday night.

John Williams of Rockland, Idaho, is visiting this week with his mother, Mrs. Clyde Williams. He expects to spend several weeks here before returning to Rockland.

George A. Harlan is erecting an addition to his house on his ranch south of Buhl six miles. It is being transformed into a modern eight-room residence. John A. Brown is doing the carpenter work.

H. M. Allen, proprietor of the Buhl Meat Market, is suffering the inconvenience of another infection of diphtheria this week. It started from a small cut on his finger Saturday morning, and by night it was giving him considerable pain. Medical attention was given and the wound is getting along as well as could be expected at this time. This is the second time Allen has contracted during the past several months, the other being earlier in the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Sargents spent the latter part of last week visiting relatives near Jerome, and ate their Thanksgiving dinner over there.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wils entertained with a Thanksgiving dinner at their ranch southeast of Buhl, last Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Pat Trumpfeller, and Mrs. Wils' father, Mr. Jarris, from Salt Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Furguson, of Eden, Idaho, came Saturday to spend a week visiting at the home of N. F. Ring this week. Mrs. Furguson was formerly Miss Nina Ring, and she is well known to Buhl people, and especially to those of the Luncie district.

Mrs. Norton Converse went to visit relatives in Iowa the latter part of last week, and she will take her daughter, Dorothy, to the McLean Sanitarium in St. Louis, Mo., where she is to receive treatment for infantile paralysis. Mrs. Converse expects
