If I spend my Dollars out of Twin Falls and you spend your Dollars out of Twin Falls, and all the people spend their Dollars out of Twin Falls, WHAT IN THE THUNDER WILL BECOME OF TWIN FALLS?

THINK ABOUT IT

Twin Falls Commercial Club

While Twin Falls is not often troubled with a heavy snowfall, some of the inhabitants seem unduly paralyzed over the unexpected sight to judge from the large number of sidewalks left uncleaned. The Times believes that some time in the dim past an ordinance was passed requiring the walks to be cleared of snow within a certain time. It should be resurrected together with a number of the main paralyzes.

PROSPEROUS YEAR

The building of the sugar factory in Twin Falls county, the coming year should produce a wave of optimism that will sweep away all the inactivity and gloom of the people of the county. It means renewed activity in business circles with the incoming of three to four hundred workers at the factory. It means prosperity for the lumberer, the day laborer and the real estate dealer. It means thousands of dollars to the farmers in the bringing in of stock to feed upon the best pulp and with the attendant demand for other stock feed. It will bring annually for circulation locally, over a half million dollars of additional money. But above all the sugar factory, by routing the somewhat depressed spirits of the people, will do much to make the year coming the biggest in the history of Twin Falls county.

THE NEW YEAR

The New Year approaches with its days, weeks and months of unknown opportunities, or possible disappointments, of sorrow and of joy. Stretching forward is one of life's spans with the other end obscure and of grave portent. It is seemly that every man should approach the new year with gravity and with a prayer for Divine guidance. To the youth the new year means one more year of the pleasures of life, with no thought of failure in life's battles. To the young business man, the new year means the nearer approach toward the goal of business success, of wealth and future contentment. To the man who has crossed the sunny slope and faces the unknown with his back to the sun, the new year presents either one of two aspects, contentment for the accomplishments of a successful life and the attendant happiness; or it means the despair of a life of failure and the facing of the new year with unlingered nerves and climax of unhappiness. It is seemly that the new year should mean much to every person.

The fact that not one moment of the coming year is his own to make or to mar, but is bound up in the happiness of his home, his community and his associates is food for careful consideration on the part of the man who honestly strives to make the most of his life. Each new year to the conscientious man, means a new burden of responsibility to the social life about him. A more sublime faith in the goodness and justice of the Creator and a determination to make the new year count for more than the year that has passed. To such a man, the new year is faced with courage and optimism that each of the succeeding days will be better and bigger. Is that your viewpoint for 1917? If it is, Twin Falls will be bigger and better for your endeavor for the coming year.

THE EDITOR

The editor is a high salaried machine whose working tools are a text-book of tariff and a wall map showing how far the Russian army can retreat without jumping off. He is given supreme control over the editorial page, and is obliged to fit in every day with forceful articles on the war which will not cause the advertising manager to throw up both hands and cry for help.

There are two kinds of editors--city and country. The city editor is the limousine variety, being able to buy a new suit every spring and fall and changing neckties with lightning like rapidity. He is hired for his ability to unwind a long sinuous vocabulary and wrap it around some subject which is charged up to the neck with dynamite. If the city editor can do this without losing a full page ad and still maintain the uncompromising attitude of the paper he is given a life job, with four hours off for golf.

The country editor is the hardest working individual in his community being obliged to run the cylinder press with one hand and the postoffice with the other. What will hunt down the delinquent subscriber, removing the split infinitives from the country correspondence, placating the advertiser who wants to buy the front page at 8 cents an inch, and dodging the curt form letters of the first assistant postmaster general the only recreation the copy editor gets is in filling the furnace morning and night. However, country editors have more money now than formerly, as they no longer accept second-growth pin oak and the Hubbard squash on subscription.

The editor is a great molder of public opinion, although some of his best molds are roughly treated on election day. One of the worst experiences an editor can have is to support some candidate for congress with a double column half-tone cut and a series of human interest editorials about his home life, and then discover two weeks before election that the candidate has two healthy wives living in Mexico. This is so depressing to the average editor that he will drown his grief with the first bottle of vegetable compound that comes to hand.

The editor is not afraid of anything on earth except the eagle-eyed proof-reader and the educated subscriber, who detects a miss-spelled word in the lower left-hand corner of the seventh page and telephones his congratulations. While editors make and unmake congressmen, senators and other public servants, they seldom run for office, themselves without returning from the polls full of gaping punctures. --Howard L. Rana, in Wallace Press-Times.

EUROPE'S DISAPPROVAL OF THE PRESIDENT

The true neutral, someone has said, is he who can see equal disaffection to both sides. If this be accurate, then President Wilson is the world-champion in neutrality. His earlier notes to Germany and England made a fair start; the rebukes to Austria and France have kept matters warm, and his message to Congress elicits irritated remarks that reveal a certain lack of affection all around. The editors in the Fatherland resent his denunciation of disloyal citizens as an attack on the German-Americans, while on the Allies' side the influential papers are annoyed because the President did not seize this opportunity to protest against what they term "the countless breaches of the law of nations committed by the Germans." Apart from this curious irritation on both sides, the most interesting comment is found in the English press. London editors see in the President's demand for armaments and his stress upon Pan-Americanism, the abandonment of our traditional policy of isolation and a desire to play an instrument in the "Concert of the Powers." The London Daily News remarks:

"It is doubtful whether the Monroe Doctrine will ever be tenable again, experience having shown that the United States can no longer rely on political isolation founded on geographical detachment, which has largely lost its meaning. * * * If Germany were victorious in this war the United States' guarantee of the independence of the States of South America, would not be worth the paper on which that doctrine is written."

The London Times observes similarly: "The President has striven, and is still striving hard, with the full approbation of the masses of the people to cling fast to the notion that the United States can continue to live its own life, uphold exalted ideals throughout the New World, and promote their realization in the Old World without abandoning the splendid isolation which has so long enjoyed. The hard realities of the situation created by the war are beginning to show that the notion is no longer tenable with the firm assurance of even last year."

Other influential London papers, including the Daily Chronicle, Daily Graphic, Standard and Daily Telegraph, take the President to task for not protesting against the abominations wrought in the name of German Kultur, as the Standard phrases it. This attitude, which is much like that taken by Colonel Roosevelt, is particularly marked in Peck's and the remarks of the Journal des Debats are typical. Its editor, Mr. Gaurain, writes: "Mr. Wilson's policy of isolation is all the more unjustifiable as Washington has taken the initiative in various international arrangements regarding arbitration, the rights of people, neutral and belligerent, during the war. A consummate jurist like President Wilson is especially qualified to formulate a striking protest against the German illegalities and assassinations."

"We in no way question the good faith of President Wilson or the Pope, but we are obliged to recognize that the preoccupation of prudence and opportunism has outweighed simple duty with each. Moral authority over the world largely depends on the risks to which the total fulfillment of duty exposes one. It is certain today that neither President Wilson nor the Pope will enjoy the same prestige when a general pac is made that he would have enjoyed if he had raised his voice in August, 1914, and various times since."

The Paris Temps says, in a similar vein:

"President Wilson has not been able to entirely free himself from the abstract conception of neutrality which forbids even any manifestation of feeling. The impartiality which he believes to be the duty of countries not involved in the conflict consists in the refusal to pronounce between right and crime. Such neutrality is a privileged treatment for those openly violating all laws and engagements."

"It is due to such impartiality that outrages such as President Wilson admits have been committed and that those which compromise American honor have been perpetrated. The impartiality which consists in remaining silent in the presence of a crime, whether through fear or interest, is a false conception of neutrality, only exposing those practicing such dangerous ideology to the gravest dangers."

The German editors are not unreasonably annoyed at the President's veiled strictures upon those who sympathize with the German side, and they believe that he had in his mind no blame for those who vigorously espouse the cause of the Allies. The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger thinks that: "Our friends across the water are men enough to settle matters with the nation's chief with that fearlessness which in the New World is accounted one of the highest rights of mankind. They will not allow themselves to be outdone in this virtue by any native-born American. * * *

"German-Americans will know better what they must do. They had already proved they were true sons of their new Fatherland long before there was a President Wilson in the White House. They will not permit themselves to be made countryless by this man."

The Berlin Morgenpost says the President "has hardly a word of reproach for the shameless incitements of the fringe press against Germany. The Kreuzzeitung thinks that some Germans in America may perhaps have been indiscreet, but--

"Germany can not be made responsible for them. There is nobody in Germany who approves them. President Wilson, however, seems not to appreciate the psychology of those who allow themselves to be induced to commit such excesses through their indignation over the unscrupulous and unlimited support of the enemy of their old Fatherland which America permits itself through President Wilson's policy."

Precisely the same stand is taken by the powerful Berliner Tageblatt, which adds:

"Persons who are born in Germany and become American citizens can not be excused for violating the laws of America. Germany would punish such persons from abroad who came here and violated German laws. But the passion of German-Americans to which President Wilson refers would not have been heated to such a point if the United States, under Queen Marie Antoinette, had endeavored to maintain honest neutrality. * * *

"Above all, American industry has 'passionately' taken sides in this war--with passionate dollar-hunger. There also President Wilson has looked on quietly."--Literary Digest.

WHY SQUARE HANDKERCHIEFS?

Interesting History Concerning Most Universally Used Article.

Why is the modern pocket handkerchief square, or at least rectangular, whereas our ancestors of the 15th century permitted themselves every variety of shape? The answer to the question provides a curious little footnote of history.

It chanced that the existing irregularity of form was displeasing to Queen Marie Antoinette, who suggested one winter evening at Versailles that a uniform shape should be an indication of good taste. "The curious searcher among the debris of the ancient regime will accordingly find a decree of Louis XVI, issued in the early days of 1788, enjoining that all pocket handkerchiefs should have right-angled edges henceforward."

From Paris the new mode rapidly spread over Europe, but its origin was somehow overlooked by the revolutionaries, when busy obliterating all traces of Bourbon rule. And so it is that the square pocket handkerchief remains as Louis XVI's one permanent achievement.

The Old Year and the New

By HARLOWE RANDALL HOYT

THE New Year comes. The Old Year goes. Adown the pathway of the years, Bent'neath his pack of joys and woes, Of Junetide smiles and April tears, Across the fields with snowdrift white, The Old Year passes on tonight.

A TWELVEMONTH past we welcomed him. A New Year he, one year ago, But now his eye is weak and dim, He totters on with footstep slow, His voice, complaining on the breeze, Comes in the groaning of the trees.

WE watched him grow. The wintertime Ebb'd into spring, and summer, then We saw him pulse with virile pride When autumn fields were ripe again, And now, we view him at the last, Nipped by December's chilling blast.

WELL, let him go. His race is run. He was a goodly Year, indeed, So let us toast him, every one, And bid the wanderer "God-speed!" Old Year, a final health to you! You were a comrade, tried and true.

THE Old Year goes. The New Year stands Before the door and waits us here, Ho, bring him in with welcome hands, The Year is dead! Long live the Year!

NEW YEAR "NEVER AGAINS"

Suggestions for Husbands, Wives and All Lovers, Married or Single, That Are Timely.

If you haven't thought up any, here are a few timely suggestions: For hubby: Never again to spend a moment out of the presence of the wife unaccompanied by a trustworthy guardian appointed by her, who will report faithfully all of your doings even to the irregular quiver of an eyelash, or the drinking of soda instead of buttermilk.

Never again to be such a brute as to want to stay at home when the wife wishes to go out, or to wish to go out—by yourself—when wife desires you to stay at home in the bosom of your family.

Never again to growl, grumble or swear, or pretend to be asleep when the wife pokes you in the back and asks you to wait with the baby in the middle of the night.

Never again to threaten to forbid tradespeople to allow the wife credit if she and the girls do not cease their extravagance—when the monthly bills come in.

Never again to forget to pick up the check upon leaving her in the morning and coming home at night, to tell her that her frightful non-bonnet is a perfect gem, and that her "fourteen-year-old" short dress is altogether too old-looking for her youthful figure.

For wife: Never again to make biscuits for breakfast until you have tried them on your own digestion for a few weeks in the absence of the rest of the family.

Never again to notice a girl exchanging glances with the pretty girl across the aisle all the way downtown.

Never again to keep the lights turned on when you have been detained downtown "on business," in order to see what time he gets home, or to insist on his kissing you that you may smell his breath.

Never again to come to the table with hair in curlers and wearing a soiled kimono.

Never again to subject pa to spells of hysterical reproaches, telling him that he doesn't love you any more.

For lovers, married or single: Never to miss an opportunity to tell the dear old story over and over again.

Never to lose the coquettish elusiveness that makes lovers so delightful to each other.

Never again to spend the sweets of young lover souls in cheap flirtations when there is such a world of real happiness at your command.

Never to become insensible to the delicious tremblings and flutterings of your own heart, or to become lax in all of those lovely attentions and girly things that help to keep a keen response a thrill in the heart of the beloved.

QUAINT SOLDIER CEREMONY

How Crack Scotch Regiment, the Seaforth Highlanders, Ushers in the New Year.

The Seaforth Highlanders, one of Scotland's crack regiments now at the front, have one of the most peculiar New Year's customs of the whole British army. The ceremony is picturesque and imposing.

On the night of Hogmanay, at about 10:30 o'clock, the regiment assembles in the barracks square. A few minutes later the oldest soldier in the battalion, dressed as a Druid, makes his appearance, to the accompaniment of a flourish of trumpets. Ascending the improvised throne he calls on the veterans to show their uniforms and achievements of bygone times. To the music of the pipes and brass band veteran after veteran, arrayed in the uniforms worn by the regiment at different periods, marches past and salutes the Druid. The Druid then toasts "The Seaforth Highlanders."

After a display of Highland dancing the alarm is sounded, and the second oldest soldier, arrayed as Father Time, approaches. The veterans then retreat, leaving their honors to be guarded by their successors, and Father Time expels the Druid.

At the last stroke of midnight a loud knock is heard at the gate and out rings the sentry's challenge: "Halt! Who goes there?"

"The New Year!" comes back the answer.

"Advance, New Year, and give the counterclaim!" is the next command.

"Pass, New Year; all's well!"

The gate is then opened and the youngest boy of the battalion enters, dressed as the high chief of ancient times, to represent the New Year. The colonel shakes hands with the boy, while the band strikes up "A Guid New Year to Ane and A'."

After the colonel's greeting to the battalion the national anthem is played and the men fall out.

WHAT A BOY DID

Achievements on Farm by Youths Herded in Elk Metropolis.

Carrying cornstalk canes and wearing cornhusk hats, more than 200 Ohio boys and girls, winners in corn growing, hog-raising, hay-producing and flower culture contests, marched down Broadway, New York, armed for breakfast into the Waldorf-Astoria, rode for three hours in a ferryboat, found the statue of Liberty, inspected it and left it there, ate a meal at the Waldorf, attended the Hippodrome, spent the day in a ceaseless round of activities, and dined and spent, left the Pennsylvania station at midnight for home.

"We're rubes and we're proud of it," was the air with which the young farmers swung in line down the big streets and all New York looked on, didn't give a whoop whether the curious public smiled or sneered. And right well, they had a right to tread New York's great thoroughfares as young sovereigns and sovereignties. The group of fresh-faced rural youth gave the country a new note of interest and pride in the records in farm crops that demonstrated spectacularly the latent possibilities of American farm production.

The boy of 17 who won the first prize in corn growing produced 153 bushels an acre. At the same rate, the corn belt of the United States would produce, not the present three billion bushels, but 16 billion bushels a year.

What mightier fact was ever conveyed to the American people; what outlook so dazzling was ever held before their vision, than contained in the performance of this Ohio boy of 17 and his young compatriot? Oregon Semi-Weekly Journal.

CAMPAIGN FOR RURAL SCHOOLS

Secretary Lane Urges Greatest Public Help for Children.

Washington, Dec. 26.—In his forthright annual report Secretary Lane suggests the need for a national campaign for a better rural school. He speaks of Young America, our 22,000,000 school boys and girls, as the chief resource of the nation, and asks: "Are we doing all possible to develop this resource?" His report continues: "There is no disguising the fact that we have a most difficult problem in the rural school situation. We do not believe it is ours alone—in the rural community. A majority of our school children are in rural schools. The great masses, and the great schools, are doing their part in making life in the country desirable. An ambitious people will go where education can be had, and where it is better. There is no sense in talking of the charms of country life and the independence and dignity of producing from the soil if the schools are so backward as to be more modern than a wooden plow. The old-fashioned, one-roomed schoolhouses, which hold 40 or 50 ungraded pupils, are the chief trouble. There is nothing but books is not a modern institution, though great men have issued from its doors.

It may be all that the country can afford where many schools are maintained, but it is not all that the country can afford if schools are grouped and great interest centers are developed. The state in the Union has over 4000 schools of this character, where the teachers are paid less than competent farm hands, and the state is unable to maintain them.

It may be all that the country can afford where many schools are maintained, but it is not all that the country can afford if schools are grouped and great interest centers are developed. The state in the Union has over 4000 schools of this character, where the teachers are paid less than competent farm hands, and the state is unable to maintain them.

How can the schools of a county be so coordinated and combined as to make them efficient tools? What should be the standard for a teacher's qualifications? How can children be brought to and taken from the school to distant homes at the least expense? To what extent should the teaching be out of doors and the examples those of real life? How can the boy learn that there is adventure in farm life as well as in the city? For adventure he will have.

To what uses may the school building be put as a community center for the neighborhood dance, lecture, or moving picture show, or perhaps, as the home of a co-operative buying or marketing organization? These are but a few of the questions which many men have tried to answer, and there have been some excellent experiments made and right answers given.

But it is as hopeless a task for a local school board to find these answers as it is for the state to make decisions of all the courts. The teachers, the superintendents and the school boards need leadership; they need an authoritative statement of conclusions by the wisest and most practical men in the land; they need to be shown the better way. And this, as little as it is, is the only thing that we need for two or three years we could if we would conduct a campaign for a new kind of rural school that would work with less than a revolution in rural life.

Our aim would be to identify the school with the farm and the village, and develop a new respect in fathers and mothers for the school as a practical and not a mere scholastic institution. The problem is only one of popularization. The experimental work has been done. We know where the best seed is. Here is call for the co-operative leadership of the government in a work of supreme value to the state.

The man to direct this work should be one whose own credit would be done by showing to the picked teachers of the country the model schools. The quietest and the surest way to get the country wide with zeal for a better type of country school would be to show the teachers such schools, make them live in them, add farm from them by seeing them in action.

There is no such lesson as the one that is taught by experience. Lectures, moving pictures and books may all aid in the work, but the real movement or life is to make it one's own. If 10 live men or women were taken from each state to some one of the finest and most modern rural schools and there for a month were initiated into the art of teaching out of life, by doing things and not reading about things being done, and if each one of these 10 went home a missionary for the new idea, how low would it be before the states were converted to the old methods abandoned? And once the right kind of school were started in any state, how long would it take others to follow? It can be done and it can be done by methods that are so simple and direct that they will be starting. The need is immediate, and surely it would be a shame to let a generation waste its life while the idea slowly creeps on all hills through the country that has invented wireless telephony.

Let us see the newspapers of the country and I feel assured would give invaluable assistance. Not merely by the publicity given to the movement, but more definitely by helping in the selection of the candidates for this opportunity. In sending them to these selected schools, and wrapping on the campaign for students what they have found in reality.

NEW YEAR'S DAY IN CHINA

Occasion When Whole Country is Painted Red—Time When All Debts Must Be Settled.

New Year is the national payday in China. All accounts must be squared up at that time, and the man who cannot do so, such as may his debts has to go into bankruptcy. The laws are such that the creditor can enter the debtor's house and take what he pleases if there is no settlement. To prevent such action families club together and make all sorts of contributions to keep up the business reputation of the clan. New Year is a great day for the pawnbrokers; their shops are crowded with people who want to redeem their best clothes before the New Year. There are crowds, also, who want to pawn other things in order to get money to pay their debts. Pawnbrokers receive high rates of interest, in which they are protected by the government.

The Chinese paint the whole country red, and they are speaking on New Year's day, in more senses than one. Red is the color which with them denotes good luck and prosperity, and all the New Year cards and invitations are on paper of that color. Every child gets its New Year's presents wrapped in red paper, and red inscriptions are pasted over the doors of the houses. These inscriptions bear characters praying for good fortune, wealth and happiness, and they are posted on each side of the outer door of a house. New pictures of Chinese generals are put on the front doors and the houses are scoured and made clean.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Cheerfulness Cure.

Franklin D. Roosevelt of Pennsylvania says it is very difficult for the most skilled diagnostician to trace the exact connection between mental depression and physical illness, but he insists the connection is there all the same. His idea is that the cheerfulness cure is largely a health cure which is closely related to health that they go together. Any person who gets sick should try first to cure himself with cheerfulness. It is done many a time. Health is harmony, joy, kindness, hopefulness, helpfulness. The Bible tells us "a merry heart, doeth good like a medicine."

If people would only take the merry heart kind of medicine, it would save them hundreds of dollars. There is hardly a malady but what it will cure if only taken in the right way. There is no reason why there should not be a school of medicine in which cheerfulness is the daily prescription. Besides, any drug medicine one takes has to be mixed with cheerfulness or it will do no good. The Bible tells us "a merry heart, doeth good like a medicine."

English Lawns as War Maps.

It is often difficult to comprehend from a small map the significance of different movements and the strategic value of certain positions in the present European war, because of the vast territory involved. Seeking to get around this difficulty, several Englishmen have been experimentally converted into large scale, open air maps. On these huge plots one can actually stroll up and down the "firing line," observe how close one's position is to that of the enemy, and, in general, gain a comprehensive idea of progress in warring operations. Small national flags mark the positions each country's armies occupy and the towns are indicated by small posts, also appropriate to the subject. Colored tape, staked down at intervals, shows the location of rivers, and small stones set in the sod spell out names of the various districts.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Tunesless Solo.

Signor Marconi, the inventor of the wireless telegraphy, who returned recently to Italy from America at the request of the Italian government, is likely to prove of great use to his country. He has just presented to the present crisis an amusing story is told about a reply that the celebrated inventor once made to a lady who mistook him for his equally famous compatriot, Mascagni, the composer.

"Oh," she said, gushingly, "I'd love to hear you play your beautiful 'Intermezzo!'"

"Madam," replied Marconi gravely, "I'll do it with pleasure if you've got a wireless piano."

One of the most delightful parties of the season was that given by Mrs. W. H. Thomas Xmas day for her daughter, Florin, and twelve of her best friends. The house was decorated with holly, mistletoe and poinsettias with red and green trimmings. The little tots were dressed in tissue dresses to represent the different features of Xmas, such as the mistletoe, holly, the Xmas carol, plum pudding, the Xmas candle, etc. Some Xmas games were enjoyed by the little folks. A beautiful box of chocolates was given to the winner of the Santa Claus game, little Jewel Schwinn. After the games the kiddies lined up and marched into the dining room to enjoy three-course luncheon. Old Santa had already arrived at the beautifully decorated table and gave a hearty welcome to each little guest. After the family luncheon was over, Santa Claus led the kiddies into the sitting room, where stood a beautiful Xmas tree loaded with presents for all. Little Santa distributed the beautiful particular scene is reproduced in the play. To give the finishing touch the producer had the services of Captain Dalton, a soldier of fortune in Villars' war with Garza. The captain, who is a London cockney, had nearly his entire right side shot away during the battle of Torroon, but his magnificent physique enabled him to withstand the terrible wound and he served in this mimic war of Griffith's with great vim and gusto. So popular was the production of "The Lamb" in New York City that many declared it the finest film comedy they had ever seen. Others called it a miniature "Birth of a Nation." It will present the celebrated legitimate star, Douglas Fairbanks, in the title role, together with Sean Owen, Alfred Pagot, Monroe Salisbury, Kate Toncray, Lillian Langdon and several thousand others.

A REALISTIC WAR PLAY

With Comedy and Battle Thrills New Triangle Offering.

"The Lamb" which will be seen at the Orpheum on Friday, is one of the finest examples of play in filmdom. It was supervised by D. W. Griffith and made at Los Angeles under conditions approaching those in the actual Indian country, which lies a few score miles south. It is a story of a young New Yorker who finds himself in Mexico through a misadventure and saves himself and his sweetheart by fighting a battle single handed against the savage redskins. Large bodies of Mexican Federal soldiers, United States cavalry and Yaqui fighters are shown. Unlike the average picture snappers these are not made up actors, but real Mexican militia, government cavalry and southwestern Indians, all of them under D. W. Griffith's command.

It required considerable diplomacy to handle the Mexicans, who were recruited in the Spanish quarter of Los Angeles. At one time they read a bill-board announcing that war had broken out between the United States and Mexico. They were then loaded their rifles and trained them upon Mr. Griffith's gringos. The Indians were obtained from the tribes in northwestern Arizona. They were better type than the half breed Mexicans and required careful handling. One of them named Eagle Eye performed the most astonishing feat of heroism, such as falling when apparently wounded from a horse while in full gallop, and this Tenant Defense Leagues. The workers' war emergency committee of Great Britain, in consideration of the increase of house rents throughout the country, are organizing conferences to be held in all the chief industrial centers within the next few weeks with a view to forming tenant defense leagues. These leagues are to organize the tenants with the object that they shall refuse to pay the increased house rents during the war. It has been indicated that the government would take action against the abusive demands of landlords, but the workers' war emergency committee will carry out their present plans.

OUR BUSY GOVERNOR

At a recent meeting of the state land board, a very important matter was under discussion, being the West End Twin Falls Carey act project, which contains some 80,000 acres of land. The irrigation and drainage code commission recently made a voluminous report on this project, which contained severe strictures upon the promoters of the project. This brought a representative of the company before the board. He claimed the report did his company a great injustice. In the course of the discussion it developed that the governor had not read the report though it was filed with him weeks ago. While it was being talked over he said:

"I don't know anything about it; I haven't read the report." "But it was addressed to you," spoke up Miss McCoy.

"That may be, but I have many things to attend to," replied the governor. "I can't do everything at once." Here we have the governor admitting that he has not even read a report and knows nothing about it, which involves a proposition of hundreds of thousands of dollars and the welfare of hundreds of entrymen.

He hasn't had time to read, but it is a matter of common knowledge that he has had time to make speeches at every cross roads school house in the state from which an invitation has been received from the people of the district. The governor has spent over half his time since the legislature adjourned in going to the people of other states, making speeches for the next election, but he says he has not had time to attend to official duties of the most vital importance.—Nampa Leader.

AN OMISSION

In some unaccountable manner, a part of the description of Fusarium wilt was omitted in a recent article on Potato Diseases by County Agriculturalist N. Birch. Mr. Birch blinks guilty as the omission was evidently made in his office. The part omitted is as follows:

In examining seed potatoes for Fusarium wilt, cut a thin slice off the stem end of each. If the potato has the wilt, brown or black streaks will be noted forming a part of, or a complete ring. In the early part of the storage season these streaks are brown, and seldom form a complete ring. As the season advances they spread and turn darker and may affect the entire tuber.

TURNING A NEW LEAF

By De Lysle Ferree Cass

ROGER FEATHERSTONE rose late on New Year's morning with the latest suggestion of a headache. That was the aftermath of the previous night's celebration, memorabilia of which were scattered all about the apartment in a weirdly incongruous way. Roger's coat was still brightly spotted with red, yellow and blue confetti; there was a battered horn protruding from one pocket, and a particular fool's cap made of tissue paper was set unobtrusively on the bronze bust of Beethoven on the piano.

In the lazily-recalled retrospect of last night's homecoming, Roger had doubted himself progressively, beginning with his shoes at the door, his hat and waistcoat beside the dresser, trousers and linen at the foot of the bed and, last of all, his coat and his beautiful necktie how beneath the nob of the bedpost.

Roger sat up regarding all this whimsically for some time and wondering dully how it is that morning daylight always imparts such a hazy aspect to the rosy visions of the night. He had finally risen and stretched prodigiously; then made a bound for the washbowl and immersed his head in gratefully cold and refreshing water from the tap.

"Heigh-ho! New Year's morning and my fortieth birthday all in one! The good Lord knows that I don't feel that old, but these portable 'parties' sure are beginning to pall upon me. If I were to do the conventional thing now, I'd begin the new year by making some amazingly moral resolution and then— but, after all, why not? I'll make a resolution and not break it, either! I'm forty years old today and as comfortable a bachelor as any I know. Hereby I do solemnly avow a placid life of celibacy. No wedding bells for me!"

Roger dressed leisurely, not a little pleased with the tentative formulation of the idea that really had been in the back of his head for months past. He liked and admired girls, of course—what real man doesn't? But it was in a detached, impersonal sort of way. He enjoyed their playful conversation as mentally restful after weighty business conferences at the office all day long; he liked vivacious femininity across the table when he dined out in the evening. But as for actually hardening himself with one woman for life—as for voluntarily domesticating himself, eschewing the good fellows at the club, and as for systematizing his life into a humdrum routine—no, no! not for Roger Featherstone.

"Ah! there went the telephone bell! His name flashed unobtrusively before him who had married Phil Barnes and taken out of the merry whirl of things as jolly a chap as ever—

"Hello! hello! Yes, this is Roger talking. Oh, I thought it might be you, sis. Why, no—no! I've no particular appointment for tonight. For dinner at your house? Yes, I'll come, thank you. Eh? You don't say? Betty Hurling going to be there with you, too? Well, well, of course I remember her! We used to be sweethearts back in kid days. When did she get back in town? Must be four or five years since we've met. All right, I'll be over."

Roger sighed as he hung up the receiver, then grinned.

"Tonight will be a good time to tell them about my New Year's resolution."

The cozy little dinner party was over. Since Mrs. Jones' "Hub" had patronizingly called him—were somewhere out in the back of the house. They had left Roger and his old chum Betty alone tete-a-tete in the dimly lit parlor.

How that girl had grown and "improved" during those five years that Roger hadn't seen her! Why, she had developed into a positive little peach! What a sensation she would make at one of the club dances!

She hadn't forgotten about their old days together, either—recalled lots of

Good Resolutions

tively adorable! Yes, and those liquid, mischievous eyes of hers! Don't take it that she was that dainty accent she used? Did it come from that fluffy hair, or the gown, or—

Roger was in the midst of telling her about his resolution to eternal bachelorhood. He had intended to do it humorously, epigrammatically. But the very physical proximity of the girl was an indubitably permeating thing—went to one's head—and that little-pink-nalled, soft hand lying passive so near to his was—

"So when I got up and remembered that today is New Year's and my fortieth birthday, I said to myself—

"Yes, Roger"—oh, the subtle, amused, encouragement of that infection. It plucked him strangely.

"I said to myself that—

"Yes, Roger—

The man started at her confusedly and all at once was acutely conscious that, somehow or other, that soft, warm little hand of hers was nestling comfortably within his own tremulous grip.

"You were saying, Roger, that you told yourself that—"

"That I've been needing you for ever so long, dear," mumbled the man, red-faced.

And she: "Oh, Roger! What a perfectly lovely New Year's resolution!"

Their Resolutions.

They were young as April as they pressed close to a window full of wondrous constellations.

"What bad habits are you going to give up this New Year?" he asked.

"You," she answered briefly; "what bad habits are you going to give up?"

"Letting you have your own way," he responded firmly, "so our engagement stand."

"Very well, then, go in and buy me that heart-shaped box of candy." And both New Year resolutions went the way of their kind.

The Old and the New.

Another year has joined his shadowy fellows in the wide and voiceless desert of the past, where, from the eternal glass forever fall the sands of time. Another year, with all its joy and grief, of birth and death, of failure and success, of love and hate. And now, the first day of the new year dawns all, standing between the buried and the babe we cry "Farewell and hail!"—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Look to the Future.

In reverent gratitude for the year gone, may we turn our faces toward the more blessed year to come.

GOOD-BY, Old Year! With words of grace, Leave us with him who takes your place, And say, Old Year, unto the New, "Kindly, carefully, carry them through. For much, I ween, they have yet to do."

—John Godfrey Saxe.

Happy New Year

The following New Year wish is ascribed to Goats.

Health enough to make work a pleasure.
Wealth enough to support your needs.
Strength enough to battle with difficulties and overcome them.
Grace enough to confess your sins and forsake them.
Patience enough to toll until some good is accomplished.
Charity enough that shall see some good in your neighbor.
Cheerfulness enough that shall make others glad.
Love enough that shall move you to be useful and helpful to others.
Faith that shall make real the things of God.
And hope that shall remove all anxious fears concerning the future.

When the World's All New.

It is the same old world that we greeted on New Year's morning. But somehow it looked so different. The invisible dividing line between last year and this has made possible a new angle of vision. The grip of old passions seems to have lost its hold, new throbs for recognition. A gentleness appears in faces thought to be hard and cynical. Happiness sparkles in the eyes of sad and lonely folk. A sort of introduction is needed to oneself. For the dawn of the new year makes possible a fresh attack on the age-wear problems. Another attempt to produce the best instead of the good, and a new walk down by-ways of human experience where one may be a good Samaritan with no eye but his to see and understand. The world is all new on New Year's morning—my world, your world, our world—make over for the Kingdom.—Ralph Welles Keesler.

ANCIENT ISLANDS IN LAVA BED

History of Idaho's Curious Formations Given by Government.
The valley of the ancient Snake River in Idaho was flooded with great sheets of lava, which spread out sheet on sheet, buried the old land surface, and partly filled the valley with molten rock, which solidified and the columns of lava are undisturbed except for the gorges that the streams have cut in it. In some places old mountains project through the lava, and the tops of the islands project above the surface of the sea, and old ridges stick out into it as capes and promontories.
The area covered by the Snake River lava is about 20,000 square miles. So far as is now known, there is but one lava field in North America of greater extent. The Snake River lava field, which covers about 20,000 square miles. In Snake River canyon below Shoshone falls nearly 700 feet of horizontal sheets of lava are exposed, but whether this is the maximum thickness or not can not be told. Notice to Advertisers

On and after January first, 1916, the present advertising rates of the Times will become cancelled and an increased schedule go into effect. This ruling does not affect advertisers holding signed contracts during the term of their contract. The raise is made imperative by the increased cost of the printing material and the growing circulation entailing much heavier expense to publish the large list.
