

CONTACT MINERS ARE ENTHUSIASTIC

Prominent Engineer Tells Story of Recent Development

MANY MINES ALREADY PRODUCING LARGE AMOUNTS OF ORE.

New machinery to be installed by Delano-Roads from Camp Arc Being Improved.

That there will be three large shipments of ore from Contact in the near future is the statement of H. K. Luce, lawyer and mining engineer, who was in this city Thursday night on his way from Contact to Salt Lake and Denver, for the purpose of buying a three drill compressor for the Delano mine, which has an immense body of high grade ore on hand that does not have to be sorted. The Delano mine now shipping two car loads of ore a week, but this will shortly be greatly increased. Mr. Luce was accompanied by William McArchie, the largest individual holder in the district and owner of the Zettis Mine, which promises to develop into one of the biggest properties in Nevada. They report that Elaine Hank and William Rainey are making preparations to open the hoston which carries free gold is unknown quantity.

MARCH SNOWFALL MORE THAN THE AVERAGE

Total for Five Months About Double the Average Year and a Third More Than Any Other.

Declaring that the snow on the Salmon river drainage is still quite deep and solid, that it has drifted to a considerable extent and that it increases in depth from four feet at Bonanza to seven feet on the higher summits, the snowfall bulletin for the Idaho section for the month of March announces that more snow fell during that period than during any previous March for many years, which makes a total for five months of about double the average, and more than a third greater than during any previous five-month period. With reference to the general condition in the state, it says: "While the snowfall during March was considerably lighter than during the three months preceding, it was above normal, particularly at the higher levels, and was the heaviest recorded in March in the last nine years. This snowfall, added to the large amounts that fell in November, December, January and February, make a total that is almost double the normal amount for the five-month period that exceeds by one-third the amount ever recorded in a similar period before. There was rapid melting at the lower levels during the month, and even at the higher levels the deepening and accumulation, but in the latter case the decrease in depth was more due to settling than to actual losses. The snow is compact, with a high water content, and is drifted more than usual, while slides have been relatively infrequent. An abundant and well-sustained flow of water is expected in all the principal streams of the state during the coming season, and the occurrence of a period of abnormally high temperature during the spring might cause an overflow in some of them."

POTATO PLANTING —DEMONSTRATION GIVEN

County and State Experts Tell Farmers About How to Select and Plant Seed.

County Agriculturalist W. N. Birch and E. P. Taylor, horticulturist of the university extension department, are giving a series of demonstrations to potato planters and others interested in this county, with a view of educating the people in regard to the selection, preservation and planting of seed potatoes.

The first of these demonstrations in Twin Falls county was held on E. T. Sandmeyer's place, near Buhl, this week, and demonstrations are scheduled for the following places and dates:

Thursday, April 20, 10 a. m.—H. E. Mendenhall, two miles east of Filer.
Thursday, April 20, 2 p. m.—George A. Erhardt, three miles northwest of Filer.

Friday, April 21, 10 a. m.—J. C. Bently, two miles northwest of Twin Falls.

Friday, April 21, 2 p. m.—A. C. Ruthenford, three miles east of Twin Falls, on Kimberly road.

In addition to these demonstrations will be held in the Hansen and Murtagh districts, the dates and places to be announced later.

The farmers will be given the benefit of practical instruction in the selection and cultivation of the best types for the variety to be grown.

The leading potato diseases will be exhibited and explained, and after the elimination of all possible defects in the seed the best will be dipped in corrosive sublimate or formaldehyde. Both of these treatments will be shown.

The treated seed will be "greened" in some cases and planted in carefully selected seed plots. These seed plots will be "regarded" of any mixture of variety when the potatoes are in bloom.

The irrigation, rotation and culture of the demonstration plot will be along approved lines for the production of disease-free seed. The diseased tubers will be removed and a careful "hill selection" of the seed plot will be made at digging in the fall.

These demonstrations are the beginnings toward a system of potato seed certification, such as is in vogue in Wisconsin, and is to be of great benefit to potato seed growers and the Idaho potato industry in general.

These potato specialists promise to be some valuable and practical information to all who can attend.

RURAL HIGH SCHOOL IS STRONGLY URGED

Proposed to Include Eight Districts With an Assessed Valuation of About $2,750,000.

A decision has been received from the State Superintendent of education, in which he states that the formation of a rural high school district, in and about Filer will be entirely legal. The new law is now clear for the organization of a high school in the Filer community which will be in keeping with the future of the country. As stated in last week's Journal, the plan which has been proposed and which has met with much favorable comment is to form a school district for high school purposes only, of the eight school districts adjoining this community. These districts are: Maroon, Curry, Elbowood, Washington, Thompson, Cedar Draw and Polar Hill.

A levy of two mills on their total valuation of $2,750,000, would produce a yearly fund of slightly over $7000 for the maintenance of the school. A board of six members, elected from the high school district at large, would control the school.

A building of $25,000 would comfortably house this new high school. The levy of two mills mentioned above, would maintain the ordinary running expenses of the school with six teachers. In addition to this, the building would afford space to these essential elements in every enthusiastic school—dramatics, music and athletics, the forces above all others that will keep your boy and girl at home and in school at the same time.

FILER MANGETS CALLED ON OFFER FOR SALE OF DOG

Jake Burkett owns a fine little Spitz dog that refuses to be handled by anyone. Knowing this Jake jokingly told one of the crew working on the state highway that was admiring the dog and playing with him, in response to "how much would he take for him," he could have him if he could pick him up and take him home. Jake had no idea of parting with him, but did not think it possible for anyone to pick the dog up. The fellow picked the dog up, but put him in a couple of times, but managed to get a wire around the dog's neck so he could handle him, and started off with the canine. Jake called to the man to get the dog down but he kept on going and took the dog to the camp near town. The following day Jake reported the dog in justice court, and not possession of him. Papers were filed and the trial set for the 18th. This did not suit the man who picked up the dog, and he urged immediate trial, or he was leaving town Monday, so Judge Hitley suggested that the men get together and settle the controversy. This they did, Jake paying the costs of the suit and the stranger getting $7.50 in full settlement. So ended what promised to be a long drawn out suit for the possession of the cute little Spitz.

THE GOVERNOR AND CAREY ACT PROBLEMS

The failure of Governor Alexander to comprehend the problems confronting several Idaho Carey act projects that happen, by reason of the state's maladministration, to be in a most deplorable condition, is alarming to a small number of people who are interested, financially and otherwise, and who thought two years ago that Mr. Alexander was a man who would measure up to the task of straightening out the tangles, or who would, at least, be able to offer some constructive suggestions in an official capacity.

There can be no surprise that the other members of the state land board, with whom the governor is associated, should fail to grasp the point of view of the unfortunate settlers on any one of the projects in question, as these members generally have been credited, and not without reason, by those who have watched closely the actions of this board, with marked sympathy towards the rights of capital, as represented by the promoters of these projects, as against any consideration whatever of the welfare of the people who were misled into the purchasing of lands with bogus water rights through the misrepresentations of state officials and promoters.

It has always been the contention of the Republican members of the land board—and we are obliged to credit them with consistency—that the state is in no way responsible, legally or morally, to those who were duped in these matters, regardless of the fact that the state was one of the contracting parties; that it was the state that undertook the supervision of the construction of the irrigation works, the sale of lands and of all other matters pertaining to the project; and that on the strength of the state's assurances and supervision, these lands were colonized.

Governor Alexander took occasion while here last week to condemn the action of a certain group of Twin Falls people who petitioned the land board for funds to be used in litigation designed to compel the Twin Falls-Salmon Land and Water company, or their successors, to carry out their contracts with the entrymen; if not in letter, at least in substance. It was plain to see that the governor thought these men had perpetrated an outrage on the land board in making this request.

The Governor's solution for the Salmon river trouble, published some time ago and amplified in his conversation with us the other day, is that the settlers agree to accept two and one-quarter acre feet of water instead of two and three-quarters acre feet, the amount provided in the company's contract with the state and the amount awarded by the federal court. In addition to accepting less, the Governor provides a way whereby the settlers can pay more. "Equitable adjustments must be made," says the Governor, "with the entrymen who are to be cut off the project," a proposition to which no one will take exception. This adjustment is to be made half at the expense of the company and half at the expense of the entrymen, if the Governor's suggestions prevail.

Inasmuch as the original contracts called for two and three-quarters acres feet, the Governor was asked what assurance there was that the settlers would actually get the two and one-quarter feet called for by his plan. The assurance that the Governor offered was that the trust should be reduced to 40,000 acres—the state engineer has already granted up to 43,000 acres—which would include 5,000 acres of state land, for which no water rights would be disposed of at the present time. The Governor said these school lands would not be sold before it was apparent that there was two and one-quarter acre feet of water for them BECAUSE NOBODY WOULD BUY THEM. The Governor expressed his opinion that eventually the settlers would be able to get along with even less water, and that the average of the project might be increased another ten thousand acres or so.

In the whole proposition there are just two things that appeal to the settlers as being absolutely certain. The first is that the settlers would be tied up to pay more for their water rights. The second, that they would have just as much trouble getting their scanty allowance of water as they ever had.

For its part, THE TIMES has heretofore refrained from commenting upon the Governor's proposition, owing to the fact that it was not sure that it understood the attitude of the man who, in the presence of several men, including the writer, said to the manager of the Twin Falls-Salmon River Land and Water company, in words about as follows:

"THERE IS JUST ONE THING FOR YOU FOLKS TO DO—FIGURE UP YOUR LOSSES AND POCKET THEM. YOU WILL HAVE TO GIVE THESE SETTLERS WHAT YOU AGREED TO. I'VE NOT LISTEN TO ANYTHING ELSE. WITH ME, IT IS A COLD-BLOODED BUSINESS PROPOSITION."

PROSPERITY TEXT OF THE GOVERNOR

mon who buy from you now, that our currency system is sufficiently elastic, so that if things threaten to tighten, it will expand and you will be in no danger of hard times, and the men who purchase will be in no danger of hard times, and so, being able to calculate on the future, they buy and you are enabled to purchase what you want and so prosperity becomes general. We have some Republican sheep owners who predicted that wool would be worth only one cent in the future. A Democratic administration, they are getting 30 or 32 cents a pound for it, and I am glad that they are, for the more they get, the more they will get from them. Before your sugar mill is completed the price of sugar will have gone up as a result of demand for it and as a result of the general prosperity. I tell you that the period of hard times is past and that we are just on the verge of a great upward movement to far higher prosperity than we now have. We have become the great credit nation of the world. Instead of changing our money into pounds and shillings and francs, they have changed their money into dollars and cents. We are not only financing the world now, but we will do so in the future. England and France and Russia and Japan and the countries of South America are already coming to us for financial aid. What would have been the condition of this country if the financial legislation enacted by Woodrow Wilson and a Democratic congress had not been in effect when the war broke out? Within 10 days after the war started, every bank in Europe had suspended payment. The bankers and financiers in this country were in a state of consternation. Quickly information was conveyed to them that they should go ahead and loan to their customers and that sufficient amount of new currency would be let out to tide them over.

Four hundred million dollars of money were quickly placed in the channels of trade, the greatest panic in the history of the country was averted, and a foundation laid for this splendid era of prosperity that we are now enjoying. How different from the condition of our financial legislation at the time when the panic of 1907 came upon this country! You will never hear much more about the high protective tariffs that used to be talked about.

There will never again be a high tariff such as formerly existed, where a small class of the people could oppress the rest by making prices high on a few things while the prices for the rest were depressed. We will have a tariff that will be for the people, and the subject, but the day of oppressive tariffs is over. But there is other legislation coming that will still further benefit the people. The Jeffersonian principle is over. We are going to have rural credits, so that the farmers can get money through the assistance of the nation and the state.

"We are going to have a merchant marine through Democratic legislation. We are going to extend the principle of government ownership to the telephone line begun in Alaska. I see no reason why if a government railroad is good in Alaska, a government railroad should not be good in Idaho. The Twin Falls county can afford a car. We will build that road from Twin Falls to Wells, Nev., as a post road, without waiting for the Oregon Short Line or the Western Pacific to do it. And by the co-operation of the nation and the state we will have a complete system of highways, so that when you travel you can go in your own gas car. If you re-elect Woodrow Wilson and vote in Democratic prosperity again, it will not be long until every Democrat in Twin Falls county can afford a car. Perhaps some of them will not be able to start out with a big one like the postmaster rides around in, but will have to buy a Ford and wait for the process of evolution to turn it into a big car.

Some of our Republican friends are talking about war. Who wants war? If the Republicans want it, why do not some of the Republican senators introduce a resolution declaring war on Germany, or England, or Mexico or some other nation. Nobody wants war. We have the American soldiers in Mexico and that country is going to be no quiet as it is possible for that sort of people to be. But we will not have war there. We are going to get rid of the Philippine islands. The Republicans bought them at $2.50 apiece and got stuck. They are sick of their barracks now and a lot of them are anxious to let them go. We should do that. In the first place, these people are entitled to govern themselves in their own way. That is the Jeffersonian principle. We cannot assimilate them in our Anglo-Saxon civilization. We are drawing away a lot of money trying to make them over into a people with Anglo-Saxon ideals. This cannot be done and the money that we are losing in this way ought to be spent on our roads and other internal improvements. Then in case of war they would be a weakness. It would take a vast amount of money to hold millions of hostile people 7,000 miles from this country. I believe that a bill for Philippine independence will pass within the next six weeks. And we are going to have reasonable pardons, but we are going to be prepared through government armament and armor plate factories so that we cannot be held up by monopolies in the hour of need.

"I might continue all night along this line, recounting the great things done by Woodrow Wilson and the possibilities of the extension of the Jeffersonian principles on which he is acting, but I have said enough to show you why I am proud tonight that I am a Democrat and why you should vote to return Woodrow Wilson to the presidency for another term. We do not need the offices. It matters little what individual as such holds a place. But we do want Democratic legislation. We can accomplish more than has been done in half a century previously in a little more than three years, and could afford to step out and let these principles develop from the applications of them already made, assured that their good work would go on expanding in the future. But there is more to be done and Idaho, rock-ribbed Republican though she is, should get away from old time reaction and line up for Wilson, progress and prosperity at the next election."

Before the introduction of the speaker or an election of officers was held, resulting in the selection of Judge Lawrence Hansen as president, F. H. Kaylor as first vice president, H. G. May as second vice president, and A. R. Hicks as secretary and treasurer. In introducing Judge Hansen for re-election, Editor J. W. Tanner of the Flier Journal, paid an eloquent tribute to him as a man and a Democrat.

Following the speaking a lunch was served and cigars passed around. There were about 200 present, a number of Republicans accepting the invitation to attend.

ADVICE ON FEEDING PIGS GIVEN FARMERS

Professor E. J. Fjelsted Says Weaning
Time Is Critical Period For Small Porkers.

"That the weaning time for pigs is a critical period in the production of pork, that the transition period should be characterized by the greatest care in feeding and then skimmed milk and small quantities of grain constitute a combination that is hard to beat, is the substance of the advice given to hog raisers by E. J. Fjelsted, field animal husbandman of the University of Idaho, in a statement issued this week. The statement reads as follows:

"Probably the most critical period, from an economical pork production standpoint, occurs at the time of weaning the pigs from their dams. If the pigs are taken from their mothers and are used to no concentrated or bulky feeds other than what nature provides them through their dam's milk, and placed upon solid feeds a step in the growth of the animal is sure to result. Such an abrupt change in feeding conditions will take from one to two weeks to readjust and it will be found that very small gains are made during this time. Other than this the farmer will be rather sure of losing a per cent of his litter from the results of digestive troubles. The very best feeders and breeders all agree that profitable pork is produced only when the animals are making good gains from the time they are fattened until they are sent to the market. Any step in the growth of these animals is made in every case at the expense of the owner. This does not mean that the animal must be kept in a marketable condition at all times, but has reference to what may be termed a good growing condition. While the goal is growing we are most interested in the building of a growthy frame that will be able to take care of the fattening feeds and make profitable return in pork production.

"A great number of our pigs receive their first 'stop' at the transition period from weaning to a pasture and concentrate feeding system, and this can easily be prevented by following a feeding system that will, as near as possible, reproduce natural conditions.

"Skim milk stands at the head of the list of feeds as a substitute for the milk that the young pig receives from its mother. This contains high percents of protein and lime in an easily digestible form, and these materials are very necessary for the bone and muscle building of the developing animal.

"Experiments have clearly shown that it is not good economy to feed large quantities of skim milk without the addition of small amounts of grain. The best results are obtained by giving one pound of grain to every three pounds of skim milk fed.

"Great numbers of farmers are not so fortunate as to have any quantity of skim milk. In this event we must look to some other growing feeds, and the oats seem to fit the case better than any other single grain. A combination of 3 parts rolled or ground oats and one part ground wheat makes a splendid feed for the small growing pig. If ground oats are for it is a good practice, thus removing a large percent of the hulls that only serve as an irritant for the digestive tract.

"Getting the pigs to eat these feeds before weaning is the important factor. If a creep is made allowing the little fellows to find a feeding floor away from their dams and finding this combination of grain there, the skim milk in the trough, or both, the problem will be solved. If such an arrangement is made, the pigs will at two or three weeks of age begin to take small amounts of the supplied feeds, and it will be found that at 8 to 10 weeks the weaning will be done with no apparent loss to the litter.

CHAPTER I—Sheridan's attempt to start his business in the machine shop ends in going to a sanitarium, a nervous wreck.

CHAPTER II—On his return Bluba is met at the station by his sister Edith.

CHAPTER III—He finds himself in considerable financial straits after a visit to the "New House" of the Sheridans. He sees Mary Vertrees looking at him from a summer house next door.

CHAPTER IV—The Vertreeses, old town family and impoverished, call on the Sheridans, newly rich, and afterward discuss them. Mary puts into words her "dream" of a husband who shall marry one of the Sheridans boys.

CHAPTER V—At the Sheridan household, Mary Vertrees encourages Jim Sheridan, newly rich, and afterward discusses them. Mary puts into words her "dream" of a husband who shall marry one of the Sheridans boys.

CHAPTER VI.

Mrs. Vertrees "but up" for her daughter, Mr. Vertrees having retired after a restless evening, not much soothed by the society of his landlady. But Mrs. Vertrees had a long vigil of it.

She sat through the slow night hours in a stiff little chair under the gaslight in her own room, which was directly over the "front hall." There, book in hand, she employed the time in her own reminiscences, though it was her belief that she was reading Madame de Rembrandt's.

Her thoughts went backward into her life and into her husband's; and the deeper into the past they went, the brighter the pictures they brought her—and there is tragedy. Like her husband, she thought backward because she did not dare think forward. Her life. What thinking forward this troubled couple ventured took the form of a slender hope which neither of them could have borne to hear put in words, and yet they had talked it over, day after day, for the very thing which they heard Sheridan was to build his new house next door. For—so quickly does any ideal of human behavior become an antique—their youth was of the innocent old days, so dead of "breeding" and "gentility" and no craft had been more straitly trained upon them than that of talking about things without mentioning them. Herein was marked the most vital difference between Mr. and Mrs. Vertrees and their new neighbor, Sheridan, though his youth was of the same epoch, knew nothing of such matters. He had been chopping wood for the morning here in the country grocery while they were still dabbling.

It was after one o'clock when Mrs. Vertrees heard steps and the delicate clinking of the key in the lock, and then, with the opening of the door, Mary's laugh and, "Yes—if you aren't afraid—tomorrow."

The door closed, and she rushed up stairs, bringing with her a breath of cold and bracing air into her mother's room. "Yes," she said, before Mrs. Vertrees could speak, "he brought me home!"

She let her cloak fall upon the bed, and, drawing an old red velvet rocking chair forward, sat beside her mother, after giving her a light pat upon the shoulder and a hearty kiss upon the cheek.

"Mamma!" Mary exclaimed, when Mrs. Vertrees had expressed a hope for to "naught" continuing them. "But that's the way I went at it, of course. We are in a hurry, aren't we?"

"My dear, I don't know what to—"

"What to make of anything?" Mary dashed for her. "So that's all right! Now I'll tell you all about it. It was gorgeous and deafening and teetotal. I could have lived a year on it. I think the exciting part was when I lasted over a couple of months. There they were, before me, but I couldn't steal 'em and sell 'em, and so—well, I did what I could!"

She leaned back and laughed roars, nearly to her troubled mother. "It seemed to be a success—what I could," she said, clapping her hands behind her neck and stirring the rocker to motion as a rhythmic accompaniment to her narrative. "The girl Edith and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Roscoe Sheridan, were too anxious about the effect of things on me. The father's world's a bundle of both of them. If he knew it, it's what he is. I like him."

She paused, and then, looking at Edith's interest, she said: "Lamborgh boy; he's good-looking and not stupid, but I think he's—"

She interrupted herself with a cheery outcry: "Oh, I haven't been calling him stupid! I've been trying to make a success of it. I don't understand a thing you're talking about," Mrs. Vertrees complained.

"All the better! Well, he's a bad lot, that Lamborgh boy; everybody's always saying that. I don't know the Sheridans, but I know the everybodies that know. I sit between Edith and Mrs. Roscoe Sheridan. She's like those people you wondered about at the theater last time we went dressed in ballgowns; bound to show their clothes and jewels somewhere! She flatters the father, and so—ditto, for that matter—but not that way. I treated him outrageously!"

"That's what flattered him. After dinner he made the whole regiment of us follow him all over the house, while he lectured like a guide on the Palestine. He gave dimensions and costs, and the whole 'blow' of 'em listened as if they thought he intended to make them a present of the whole. When he was proudest of way the plumbing and that Bay of Naples napkins in the hall. He made us look at all the plumbing—bathrooms and everywhere he went—and then he said, 'I'll give you a whole lot of money for that Bay of Naples. He said it was a hundred and eleven feet long, but I think it's more. And he led us all into the ready-made library to see a poem Edith had taken a prize with at school, and then he put a whole lot of gold bars and framed in motherpieces. But the poem itself was rather simple and watery and nice—he read it to us, though Edith tried to stop him. She was modest about it, and said she'd never written anything like that. And then, after a while, Mrs. Roscoe Sheridan asked me to come across the street to her house with them—her husband and Edith and Mr. Lamborgh and Jim Sheridan—"

Mrs. Vertrees was shocked. "Jim?" she exclaimed, "Mary, please—"

"Of course," said Mary. "I'll make it as easy for you as I can, mamma. Mr. James Sheridan, Jr., we went over there, and Mrs. Roscoe explained that she was sure she'd found a husband. I noticed that Mr. Lamborgh was the only one near death's door at that account. Edith and Mrs. Roscoe said they knew I'd been bored at the dinner. They were objectionably apologetic, and I said, 'I don't know what I think now we were going to have a good time to make up for it. But I hadn't been bored at the dinner, I'd been amused; and the good time at Mrs. Roscoe's was horribly, horribly stupid!'"

"That Mary," her mother began, "is—"

"—is—"

"—is—"

"—is—"

anything else I can do? You and papa don't want me to do anything that distresses me, and so, as this is the only thing to be done, it seems it's up to me to let it distress me. That's all there is about it, isn't it?"

"That's what I say!" said Mary, cheerfully. "And so it doesn't! It's all right." She rose and took her cloak over her arm, as if to go to her own room. But on the way to the door she stopped, and stood leaning against the door, contemplating a threadbare rug at her feet. "Mother, you've told me a thousand times that it doesn't really matter whom a girl marries."

"No, no!" Mrs. Vertrees protested, "I never said such a thing!"

"No, not in words; I mean what you mean. It's true, isn't it, that marriage really is 'not a bed of roses, but a field of battle'?" To get right down to it, a girl could fight it out with anybody, couldn't she? One man as well as another?

"Mary, I can't hear you to talk like that!" And Mrs. Vertrees lifted pleading eyes to her daughter—eyes that begged to be spared. "It sounds—almost reckless!"

Mary caught the appeal, came to her, and kissed her gently. "Never fear, dear! I'm not likely to do anything I don't want to—I've always been too thorough-going a little pig."

She gave her mother a final kiss and went gayly all the way to the door this time, pausing for her postscript. "Oh, the thing that caught me looking in the window, mamma, the youngest one—"

"Did he speak of it?" Mrs. Vertrees asked, apprehensively.

"No. He didn't speak at all, that I saw, to anyone. I didn't meet him, but I'm not likely to see him, for he has long intervals when he's not. Mr. James Sheridan mentioned that he lived at home when he was 'well enough' and it may be he's only an invalid. He looks dreadfully ill, but he has pleasant eyes, and it strikes me that if—if one were in the Sheridan family—he'd laugh a little ruefully—"

"—he might be interesting to talk to sometimes, when there was too much stocks and bonds. I didn't see him at all, dear!"

"There must be something wrong with him," said Mrs. Vertrees. "They'd have introduced him if there weren't!"

"I don't know! His father spoke of sending him back to a machine shop or some sort," glanced at him just then and he was pathetic-looking enough before that, but the most trade change came over him. He seemed just to die, right there at the table!"

"Mr. Sheridan must be very unfeeling!"

"No," said Mary, thoughtfully. "I don't think he is; but he might be uncomprehending, and certainly he's the kind of man to do anything he once sets out to do. But I wish I hadn't been looking at that poor boy just then! I'm afraid I'll keep remembering—"

"I wouldn't!" Mrs. Vertrees smiled faintly, and in her smile there was the remotest ghost of a gentle, regular thing. "I'd keep my mind on pleasant things, Mary."

Mary laughed and nodded. "Yes, indeed! Plenty pleasant enough, and probably, if all were known, too good—even for me!"

And when she had gone Mrs. Vertrees drew a long breath, as if a burden were off her mind, and, smiling, began to undress in a gentle reverie.

RULE 4.—Users Liable for Violation. Where two or more parties or premises are supplied by the same service pipe, the failure on the part of either party to comply with these rules shall warrant the Waterworks Inspector in withholding a supply of water through said service pipe until a separate service pipe with stop cock and key box is put in for each consumer. If any water consumer shall permit any person from other premises, or any unauthorized person, to use or obtain water from his premises or water fixtures, whether inside or outside of his building, the supply of such person may be cut off.

RULE 5.—No Water Wasted. If any water user shall waste water or allow it to be wasted by imperfect water stops, valves, leaky joints, pipes or fixtures, or shall run it through basins or other apparatus, or use it for any other purposes than those for which they have paid, or use it in violation of the rules controlling the water supply, the water may be cut off from such water users and all payments forfeited, unless such persons shall promptly pay for the additional, reasonable charges as may be charged therefor by the Waterworks Inspector.

RULE 9.—City Not Liable for Shortage. The City shall not be liable for any damage caused by water user by reason of stoppage or other interruption of his water supply, caused by scarcity of water, accident to works or mains, alterations, additions, repairs or from other unavoidable causes.

OPTIMISM FELT AT JARBIDGE

Development Steady With Greater Activity in Sight

NEW GRADE ON TWIN FALLS ROAD IS ASKED.

Road Has Been Surveyed and Cost of Eight Miles Needed Estimated at $1000 Per Mile.

There is a general feeling of optimism in the camp, and the belief is prevalent that this summer will be the most active season that the district has experienced. Since the original boom and the consequent disastrous failures, which nearly knocked the camp out of existence, there has been a struggle to keep the district alive, and only by the most indefatigable labor and personal hardships has the development of the mines been carried forward. A legitimate and healthy growth of the mining camp has been the result and the future prospects are bright.

It is confidently expected that several mills will be turning out bullion this summer; some of the mines may eventually prove to be of more than moderate size and value. There are more men at work than there have been for several years, and a few more are being added to the payroll now and then, but there are still a number of men who are waiting for the chance to go to work.

There are six small mills in the camp and a prospect of one or two more. There are about 200 men, and only about 70 of these are working for wages. The others are being worked as looking fine and there are many good prospects waiting development. The chances for small capital in here are fine; what the camp needs is money and energy backed by more money. The average value of the ore is from $10 to $20 per ton, and with a little silver, the mines can be worked economically by tunnels for several hundred feet in depth; the ore chutes are of fair workable size.

The vein has been cut in the No. 4 tunnel on the Long Hike, which proves the ore chute to a depth of about 500 feet, and with the showing already made in the other three tunnels levels of width and length of the ore chute, this may be called a very good mine.

Development on the O. K., which has been worked under bond all winter, has been sufficiently satisfactory to warrant the making of a payment of 25 per cent of the purchase price. Also the working force has been slightly increased. The O. K. and the Flaxie in the Starlight ground, which is being worked under leave by Charles Martin and William Rowland. Here they have opened a very promising vein with four feet of ore that pays well in gold. This is the best discovery made for some time, and being situated in a good section gives promise of making another mine.

Just east of the Starlight is the legitimate, which is making a good showing in both drifts from the tunnel.

The Bluster has opened new ore bodies, both north and south of the tunnel, and to the north have raised to make connections with one of the tunnels in the Success mine. To the south a new chute of ore has been developed which shows large values in silver besides the usual gold value. This company expects to begin work on the granite addition to the mill and will probably put in a small power plant on the river. The Twin Falls road is open for auto travel again. The first auto to arrive in camp was Charles Robinson in his Dodge, from Horse Springs, on March 30. He brought in some passengers and went back that evening. On April 10, J. F. Fletcher of Glens Ferry came in his 50 horsepower Cadillac, having with him M. G. Sackler of Glens Ferry and G. E. Bloom and A. M. Breckley of Hill City, Ida. They will spend a few days looking over the district.

Jack Creighton of Elko was in a short time and was very busy talking with the owners of several claims. Mr. Creighton was instrumental in the road as soon as possible, and the Hike mine, which is fast coming to the front as one of the best in the camp.

The snow is fast disappearing and prospecting work is being started. It is confidently expected that much development work will be done this season and that more promising prospects will be discovered.

The survey plans and estimates on the new road down the river to the hot springs have been submitted to the county commissioners of Elko, Twin Falls and Owyhee counties. The two former are disposed to build the road as soon as possible, and the latter is yet to be heard from. This new section of road will be 1 1/2 miles long and can be built at an average cost of $1000 per mile. It is half in Nevada and half in Idaho. The road will eliminate all heavy grades, dangerous points and snowdrifts between Jarbridge and Hot Springs. It should reduce freight rates from Rogerson about 20 per cent and make an auspicious start from Twin Falls to Jarbridge a pleasant one of seven or eight hours.

This new road will also be a great convenience to the ranchers and cattlemen between Jarbridge and the Bruneau. The county commissioners are expected to meet in Jarbridge soon and go over the proposed route with the engineer and contractor.
