BULL DAIRY CATTLE TO NORTH IDAHO

A. F. Tage of Salmon City Sends Out Fifty-two Head of Jersey and Holstein Cows.

A. F. Tage of Salmon City, Idaho, has begun shipping dairy cattle from the Bull country to the neighborhood of Salmon City, the first shipment of 52 head of choice Jersey and Holstein cows being sent last Friday.

Mr. Tage, who is considered an expert cowman, says that they are the best he has been able to find. The success of the dairymen in the Bull country has attracted widespread attention from other parts of Idaho, and during the coming year there will be many new dairy herds founded, and the Salmon City country is already taking active steps in that direction. The Bull herds, all founded during the last seven years, have for foundation stock some of the best blooded lines in the country, and the dairymen have spent much time and money in developing their stock. Nineteen head of the shipment were from the herd of C. H. Kneigh, and from the H. W. Geiger Cow Testing association and brought Mr. Kneigh $1500 in cash, the entire shipment of 52 cows and two calves bringing the farmers who sold them $5500 in cash.

CLARK NEWS.

Times' Special Correspondence.
Edward Washaw, the little 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Washaw of this place, was host to a number of small friends last Friday evening from 5 to 8, on the occasion of his birthday. The party was a very many little games until they were called upon to partake of a generous dinner, a special feature of which was the big birthday cake, surrounded by eight tiny candles. These present were: Kath Rutherford, Howard Margaret and Lester Cavender, Janette and Frankie Clark and Charley Valentine.

D. F. Clark and Hattie Brown are convalescing rapidly after their recent illness. Mrs. S. K. Nesbitt, who was called east two months ago to the sick bed of her sister, who was injured in an auto accident, returned home last week. Her sister will probably be an invalid the remainder of her life and will be unable to get about without the aid of crutches.

Mr. Morgan made a professional call here last week.

Frank Wilson, wife and baby Kathleen, of Rose Lawn, were guests in Twin Falls last week.

Fred Wilson, a brother of Joe and Frank Wilson, is up from London, Ore., his former home. Mr. Wilson is contemplating locating here.

C. A. Baker was a business caller in Twin Falls last week.

The main frame of the sugar factory looms up in the distance from Clark, and, judging from the way the workmen are blazing and progressing with their work, the buildings will all be completed in ample time for the reception of the large beet crop now being planted. In every direction for miles around.

Mrs. Leedson and little daughter were shopping in Twin Falls last Monday.

Irvine C. Brown, who has been visiting with relatives here for the past two weeks, returned to his home in Minnesota last week. Mr. Brown was very favorably impressed with the growth of our tract. He expects to locate in Twin Falls.

WOMAN DROWNED WHEN TEAM BACKS OFF CANAL BANK

BOISE, Ida.—Mrs. Jean Alececa was drowned in the New York canal here when the city limits on Monday night when the wagon in which she and her husband were driving in the Archibald-Island road was backed off the bridge on the Mountain road by the horses, which took fright at an automobile. Alececa got ashore in an exhausted condition and called scarcely to tell what happened. Wires are being stretched across the canal to catch the body of Mrs. Alececa. One of the horses was drowned. The other scrambled ashore.

According to the statement of Alececa, an automobile approached as she was driving across the bridge. The horses took fright and backed up, cramping the wagon and forcing it off the bridge. What became of the automobile he did not know.

Charles Overfield's brother of Colfax, Wash., is a guest at the Overfield home this week, on his way to the state capital.

Charles Overfield's mother, who has been visiting with the Overfields, is at present the guest of Twin Falls friends.

Mr. Buzzard, with his wife and two little daughters, were visitors in Twin Falls Saturday.

A pleasant rain was welcomed by the farmers here the fore part of the week, saving the irrigators considerable work.

The Onks Corner club held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. M. J. Thurney last Thursday.

Most of the members were present and several guests, among whom were Mesdames Sterns and Porterfield. A social time was enjoyed. There was a reading by Mrs. Potter and a short talk by Mrs. Porterfield. The hostess served a delightful English tea. The next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. Potter.

Pete Trappen, a farmer near Bull, was visiting here Sunday.

Mr. Seavey and family of Castleford were guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin.

After an extended visit in South Dakota, W. Shroff and wife returned home last week.

The Twin Falls Waterworks Co. has a number of teams cleaning out the laterals.

Fred Johnson and family and Herbert Cavender and family, spent Sunday in Twin Falls planting.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson of Rose Lawn, entertained a number of friends at dinner Easter Sunday.

Mrs. H. E. Neal of Kimberly, was the victim of a runaway last week. While returning to her home from Twin Falls, her horse became frightened and bolted, upsetting the buggy and throwing its driver out and down the grade. When found she was unconscious and was hurried to Twin Falls to a physician, who discovered that her back and hips were badly injured. At present she is getting along nicely.

Here are Suits at $19.75 Possessing an Unusual Amount of Style and Value

This is going to be a rather unusual season—several reasons will make it so. The manufacturers are making serious complaint that they cannot get cloth to make up the garments and the scarcity of dyes has increased the cost of fabrics as well, making it difficult to secure fabrics of certain colors. In view of these conditions—these suits at $19.75 ought to be very interesting to any woman who has set a price of $19.75 to $30.00 for her spring suit.

One model made of blue taffeta silk, has the new belted coat semi-fitted, correct length, edged with blue serge; the skirt is made along the new lines—hangs gracefully.

Other suits at $19.75 are made of serge, gabardines, shepherd checks—in fact, checks of various sizes—and every one of them in a striking, stunning style.

Other suits at $15.00 to $39.75.

A Dressy Silk Dress at $15.00

Quite a number of women feel they would like to have at least one of their spring dresses made in a style that will be dressy as well as adaptable for use for street wear. So these dresses, made of chiffon taffeta, trimmed with effective organizes, georgettes, etc., make the best styles of the season and will surely appeal to you. Other dresses of silks and other fabrics, $15.00 to $39.50.

For Cool Evenings—A Spring Coat

This is the time of the year when one must be prepared for sudden changes in weather, so a light weight coat is really necessary. When you can buy a spring coat of the kind we're selling for $12.50, and which is made along the new lines for this season, of a material that will give excellent service, we believe you ought to see these coats early and make selection while so good a value can be had.

Dainty Undermuslins Underpriced

And when we say underpriced we mean every word of it. GOWNS, SKIRTS, CORSET COVERS, CHIEFESSE and children's garments. We think we never saw such pretty and such good garments, so reasonable in price. Just the pretty, dainty, good kind you are looking for, with lace and embroidery trimmings. Gowns from $10 to French hand embroidered, at $12.50 to $25.00. Envelope chemise $12.50 in fine cambric or silk crepe and silk Jersey at $2.50 to $5.00. Corset covers at $5 and up. A truly wonderful display at remarkable prices.

The New Spring Draperies in Profusion

Our new COLONIAL DRAPERIES are here, showing the latest in Cretonnes and Chintz. These old Colonial effects, as are pretty today as in the days of Washington and lend a homelike air of comfort and a touch of artistic beauty to the home. In the latest patterns, priced 15c, 25c, 35c up to 75c per yd.

Fillet Curtain Nets, the Big Item

Never were they so popular and never at the prices now shown. These are the best wearing nets made and the best washing nets known and we have them in the late small patterns and they are so very pretty with the cretonne side drapes. Priced at 35c yd. to $1.25.

Other nets at 10c yd. and up.

Scrim and Blainines are shown very reasonable. The very last things in house furnishings are here, bought before the raise and not raised by us.

American Force Surrounded by 20,000 Mexicans

UNITED STATES SOLDIERS ARE STILL CONCENTRATING.

Interest Centers On Situation In Northern Mexico, Where Clash May Occur at Any Time.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—Receipt of news that more Mexican troops are being concentrated in northern Mexico increased the interest at Gen. Funston's headquarters in the coming conference between Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff and Gen. Alvaro Obregon, minister of war for the de facto government of Mexico. It was realized that Gen. Obregon, as minister of war, has so disposed his forces that, by the time he meets Gen. Scott in a diplomatic engagement, he will have behind him within easy reach no fewer than 40,000 men.

Gen. Scott probably will remain here until he knows that Gen. Obregon is nearing the meeting place at the border which, it is believed, will not be before the end of the week.

The concentration of Gen. Pershing's men has continued and today the punitive forces are backed together in a much shortened line, with the main point of concentration at Casas Grandes and Sonolupa. Scouts reported movements of de facto government troops continuing. Official information placed the number of those in and about Torreon at about 20,000. Military estimates of those in Sonora that could be used against Gen. Pershing are approximately 15,000, while another 5,000 are in the state of Chihuahua.

Failure by Gen. Obregon to convince Gen. Scott of the soundness of his diplomatic arguments could be followed, army men here asserted, by a very practical use of this combined force.

It was indicated Gen. Scott and Funston would remain here two or three days, in order not to arrive at the border too much in advance of Gen. Obregon. They expect instructions tomorrow.

Gen. Funston's participation in the border negotiations was ordered by the war department and is in line with the wishes of the chief of staff, who believes that the purpose of the conference will be better served if he has with him one who is more intimately acquainted with the details of the situation.

GERMAN FLEET RAIDS COAST OF ENGLAND

Two Men, Woman And a Child Killed in Raid On Lowestoft, England.

LONDON.—German battle cruisers appeared at Lowestoft, Tuesday. Announcement of the appearance of the German warships was made in an official statement. Local naval forces engaged the raiders and three British light cruisers. The German warships retreated in 20 minutes.

The German warships opened fire on the coast before departing. Two men, one woman and a child were killed. The material damage, apparently was small. In the engagement, two British light cruisers and a destroyer were hit, but none of them was sunk.

"The following official announcement was made: 'About 4:30 o'clock Tuesday morning the German battle cruisers, accompanied by light cruisers and destroyers, appeared off Lowestoft. The local naval forces engaged them and in about 20 minutes they returned to Germany, chased by our light cruisers and destroyers.'

"On shore two men, one woman and a child were killed. The material damage seems to have been significant, so far as is known at present. Two British light cruisers and a destroyer were hit, but none was sunk."

Partial View of Immense "Bull" Durham Factories at Durham, N. C.

The Purity of "Bull" Durham Is Proven Absolutely by Government Statistics!

Herewith we print a facsimile of a letter from Hon. W. H. Osborn, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, written in the routine of his official duty in answer to a letter from the manufacturer.

The Government officials find in the "Bull" Durham factory nothing but the bright, golden leaves of Carolina and Virginia tobaccos—the tobaccos that have made American cigarettes the most popular smokes in the world.

In Durham—and indeed, throughout practically all of North Carolina and the adjoining counties of Virginia—nearly every man is interested in tobacco, the great staple crop of the community. In the towns where the tobacco warehouses are located; on the farms, in the banks, in the stores—everywhere—these men who grow the tobacco, who take it to market, who buy it and sell it and are made prosperous by the business of handling the money received from the crop—everywhere, these men know that the sweetest, mellowest, choicest, mildest leaf is bought for

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

And they know that nothing else ever enters the "Bull" Durham factory.

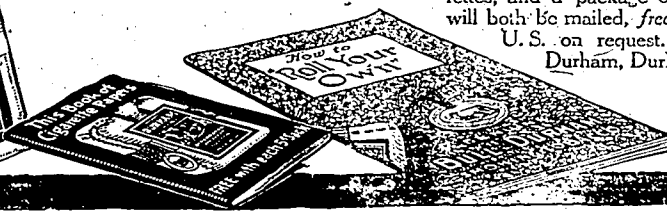

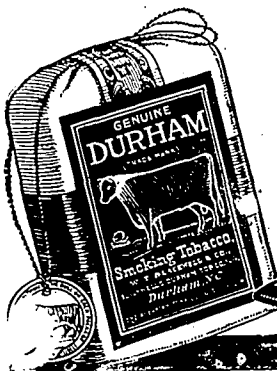

These men who live with tobacco, know that for three generations the same farms in the same counties have been producing their best for "Bull" Durham. They know that the quality of "Bull" Durham has made the city of Durham famous—and the honor of "Bull" Durham is a source of pride, not only to the manufacturers, but to the entire community.

Test "Bull" Durham Purity for Yourself! You can easily prove to your entire satisfaction the absolute purity of this famous old tobacco.

Simply take a bag of "Bull" Durham and empty the tobacco on a piece of white paper. Then separate the grains with your finger and examine them closely. You will find only tiny flakes of pure tobacco—nothing else looks like the golden Carolina-Virginia leaf used in "Bull" Durham. Your eye would instantly "spot" anything of a different nature. Make the test today—learn to "roll your own" with "Bull" Durham—and you'll find the greatest smoke-enjoyment of your life.

FREE An illustrated Booklet, showing correct way to "Roll Your Own" Cigarettes, and a package of cigarette papers, will both be mailed, free, to any address in U. S. on request. Address "Bull" Durham, Durham, N. C.

A CRIME.

The man who died Tuesday of last week in a local hospital, having been brought in from his farm on the Salmon tract broken in health, discouraged, despondent and impoverished, died as the result of the failure of the state board of land commissioners to perform its obvious duty towards the particular irrigation project on which this man, lured by worthless promises of the state of Idaho, deceived by the assurance of state officials, attempted to reclaim a small piece of the sagebrush desert and to convert it into a farm as prosperous as any of those on the wonderful Twin Falls tract, only two miles north of the scene of this latest tragedy.

This failure to perform a duty, which in at least this instance has resulted in the death of a man, cannot be explained away as an oversight; for in a hundred different ways has the seriousness of the matter been brought home to the members of the state land board. The members of this board, themselves, and with their own lips, only a few months ago, assured the settlers on the Salmon river project that they realized how critical their position was, and they promised that something would be done. Neither can this failure to perform a duty be attributed to the difficulties of the situation itself, as the members of the board would have the people believe.

It is because the land board has willfully and deliberately refrained from taking such action as would force a speedy adjustment of the distressing problems of the Salmon project, that in at least one instance, a man has perished.

Because we know this to be the case; because the land board has repeatedly refused to do the only thing that will effect an adjustment of the Salmon situation, we call the death of this settler what it is—A CRIME. The parties responsible for this crime are the members of the state board of land commissioners.

They know how critical the situation was. They had been warned and have no doubt fully appreciated right along what the outcome would be. They persist in doing nothing. They are entitled to full credit for the awful result.

Let us examine the situation just briefly:

The state board of land commissioners contracted with a promotion company for the reclamation of the lands embraced in the Salmon river segregation. This land board sold lands, and permitted the sale of water rights (which it had authority to supervise) in excess of the supply of water. The federal government early realized the mistake that had been made, and the Secretary of the Interior advised the Idaho land board nearly four years ago that the situation should be corrected immediately, while there was time to prevent the hardship and suffering that would inevitably follow if prompt attention was not given it. The Secretary's letter was pigeon-holed; so was the report of an engineer of the reclamation service, advising that there was water for only 32,000 acres (approximately 80,000 acres had been sold); so was the report of State Engineer Robinson, advising that the tract was confronted with a tremendous shortage; so was the report of the irrigation commission, appointed by the last legislature, to investigate this and other projects, recommending that "the land board should pass an order requiring the Salmon river company to reduce the area in the segregation to the acreage which can be irrigated as determined by the foregoing computation, which the commission agrees should not be in excess of 26,000 acres"; so were the findings of Judge Dietrich, of the federal court, who has refused to let the company enforce any further collections from the settlers until the company can show that it is in shape to fulfill the contracts. All disregarded! and the do-nothing policy steadfastly maintained!

J. B. Beauregard came to the Salmon tract in its early days, like the majority of pioneers, with only a moderate supply of money. He built a little one-room shack, in which he barely escaped dying five years later. He worked hard and succeeded in putting a portion of his farm in cultivation, only to lose the crop on account of conditions. This experience was repeated in successive years, until 1915, when there was a slight, but no less favorable variation. In 1915 he was able, on account of diminishing funds, to put only 20 acres in crop. Then, with practically no water in the reservoir, the water company refused to deliver to him even his scanty share, because he was unable to pay the 65c per acre maintenance charge. This was the last straw. In the meantime, on account of hard work and privation, his health steadily failed; he was unusually conscientious about meeting his obligations, and made it a rule to do without rather than to run in debt. The result was he often died without.

At last, without health, without money, but with hope remained; a hope that could not be realized. All Mr. Beauregard had left in the world was his farm, and if that could be disposed of, even at a sacrifice, it would provide him with the means necessary to go to California, rest and recuperate. For a year Mr. Beauregard had but one small chance for life; the hope that the land board might force an adjustment of the situation and establish some value, however slight, for the farm Mr. Beauregard had tried to develop.

We have already seen what the land board was doing in the meantime. Nothing!

Sickness, discouragement, no prospects for better days ahead, dread of poverty, fearful of becoming a burden on his neighbors, reluctant to become a county charge—what remained?

The situation of a majority of farmers on the Salmon tract today is the same as that of Mr. Beauregard, with but one striking exception. They have their health left, and while health remains hope lingers. Let declining health stalk into many of the homes on the Salmon tract today, and there would be many sad stories to relate instead of a few.

Here is what the irrigation commission, which investigated the situation carefully, said:

"Many received one-half bushel of clover seed per acre, while on similar soil on the South Side Twin Falls tract, there were yields of from 6 to 16 bushels per acre. Wheat yielded 10 to 12 bushels as compared with 50 to 75, and other crops in relative proportion. Pastures were entirely burnt up early in August and orchards suffering severely. With no water to raise crops, or crops to sell to pay obligations, we find them upon this tract without crops, without money, without credit, and property that would not be security to get any relief. Many of them are leaving to avoid destitution, and that condition is sure to follow if relief does not soon come."

At the hospital Mr. Beauregard whispered to those attending him his wish that he be permitted to die—a desire that God, in His infinite wisdom, saw fit to grant.

Last summer a member of the irrigation commission, a resident of this city, expressed the opinion publicly that the land board was CRIMINALLY NEGLIGENT in its lack of attention to the Salmon river project. This charge was intended to apply to the land boards, past and present, as a whole; and not to any particular member.

The Governor rushed in where the more discrete would have kept out, and undertook the defense of himself and associates.

Among other things a sharp letter was dispatched by the Governor nor to the prosecuting attorney of Twin Falls county, defying him to prefer charges against the land board.

The question ended in a legal quibble: whether or not the land board was LEGALLY criminally negligent.

While the Governor remains satisfied as to the security of his position—THOSE FACTS REMAIN.

NEGLIGENCE, and NEGLIGENCE ALONE, on the part of Idaho's State Land Board, past and present, is responsible for the condition that exists on the Salmon tract today.

The resulting situation has been the cause of widespread poverty on the tract, discouragement, and finally in at least one instance, death.

THE GOVERNOR CAN CALL THIS SORT OF NEGLIGENCE WHAT HE CHOOSES.

THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTY WILL CALL IT WHAT IT IS.

MAKING THE NAVY EFFICIENT.

But one fact seems to have been established by the testimony before the congressional committee which is investigating naval conditions and that is that there are not enough men to man the ships now in commission.

Whether the navy is "fit as a fiddle," as two admirals testified in effect, or whether, as others seemed to imply, it would make mincemeat for Bud Fisher's imaginary Irish navy, all seemed to agree that more men were needed to fully man the ships. How many more nobody can tell. For the truth of the statement of Congressman Butler, the ranking Republican member of the naval committee, that the experts agree on nothing, is brought home by all the testimony.

This condition is chronic. Assistant Secretary Roosevelt of the navy department, testified that when the fleet went around the world during the administration of his distinguished cousin, it was short of men and the ships that did not go had to be stripped of their crews in order to man those that did. He added that when the great array of ships was reviewed by President Taft in 1912, many of them had to be towed to their places in line because they had no crews. He added that conditions had since been improved but were not yet anything like satisfactory. A machine like a battleship is a fine thing, but it never sets itself going nor runs by itself. The combined fleets of the world without crews would be easy picking for a band of naked savages with canoes and armed with bows and arrows. While the talk has been going on for years about needing more men, why hasn't some statesman suggested that the way to get men both for the army and the navy would be to pay them enough to induce them to join?

We have long since passed the age of the press gang. Now men would go out in disguise with a bottle of doped whiskey to render likely youths unconscious and get them on shipboard. We still have a volunteer service and will have for some time to come. Suppose that we immediately want an increase of 200,000 for the army and navy.

The only way to get them is to convince 200,000 qualified young men, the flower of the youth of this nation, that it pays to join some branch of the service. It is true that a laboring man, one year with another, taking the year as a whole, will be enabled to save more in the army than working around. But while this is true of the average, there are so many exceptions that many, even of those who are not saving as much on the outside as they would inside, hesitate to join. Suppose that the pay were raised $10 a month. This for a full force of say 350,000 men would mean an increased appropriation of $42,000,000 a year. And that, after all, is a small amount. An increase of $10 a month would get the desired results. In case of war it would take very few less battleships to make up that sum. Instead of calling for only more ships, why not call also for more men in the only effective manner? The navy probably is not in as bad condition as the more glibulous of the predictions made by the most pessimistic of the naval officers would indicate. Naval officers are only men and the more ships that we have, the more chances there are, for promotion. Also they may unconsciously lean toward the armor trust in some instances. But whatever men are required to man the ships should be hired. More wages for men would serve quite as well to increase the efficiency of the navy as more appropriations for the builders of battleships, which cannot be manned after they are finished.

Another thing. Before the European war broke out, the naval appropriations of this country were greater than those of any other country save England. This was true under several administrations. If the navy is in as bad condition as some of the admirals would have it, what has become of the money? And what assurance have the people that future appropriations will not evaporate without any tangible evidence remaining of their having once been made?

"THE TIMES" believes in a substantial and efficient army and navy, but believes that the first step is to fill the regiments and the ships by offering satisfactory inducements to men to enlist.

HOOG CONDITIONS GOOD

ON MISHOKA PROJECT Dr. W. A. Sullivan and Dr. L. C. Henderson of the bureau of animal industry, returned Tuesday from a visit to the 103 farmstead on the Mishoka project where cholera at one time existed and report that conditions are good. There is no cholera there and 95 per cent of the places visited had already been disinfected. The premises again as a precaution while the rest promised to do so. On their return Dr. Henderson was called to Gooding where a case of cholera was found in a herd and promptly treated.

CARD OF THANKS.

We avail ourselves of the opportunity to express our sincere thanks to relatives, neighbors and friends for the kind assistance and floral offerings extended during the illness, death and funeral services of our dear, beloved sister, Mrs. E. A. Alcorn. Yours appreciatively, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph N. Ireland, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ireland.

SWEET SINGER AT ROGERSON.

Miss K. Karryn will be at the Rogerson a short time longer to cheer the guests with her sweet lyric soprano voice. If you are going to entertain your friends, why not take advantage of her presence to do so while she is here and to catch a treat with the latest popular songs.—Adv.

Baby Wants Her Picture Taken

Probably she has always worn the soft little baby caps, or the frilly little cloth bonnets, but now she is quite a big girl and she must have her first straw hat, dainty to be sure, but "a really and truly hat." It's such an event, too; we know just how much pleasure she takes in it for, we photograph many little girls on such occasions.

We've sent East for boxes of field flowers, made and selected especially for photographing well, and the prettiest of baskets. The little folks love to play with them—they do it so naturally, too, and the negatives we are making are like a breath of spring; not only do they portray the likeness, but they suggest the spirit of innocence and sweetness—the spirit of Baby.

SOCIETY NOTES

Society items for this column will be gladly received by The Times, Phone 125-W. The Society Editor.

Complimentary to her sister, Mrs. Holt of Caldwell, Mrs. L. L. Brock-bridge entertained very informally last Friday afternoon. The usual ladies served and later tea was served.

A very important event of the near future will be the Junior class given by the junior class of the high school to the senior class. This event will take place May 4 in the high school.

The Acirema club, which has not met for some time, had a pleasant session at the home of Mrs. Brice on Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Thompson read an entertaining paper on the "Making of the Northwest," and Mrs. Patterson one on "American Club Women." Mrs. Brice served a delicious luncheon, suggestive of the Easter colors, yellow and white, and the Easter symbols.

Master Charles Mull and Miss Flo Mull were the hosts at an enjoyable children's party given last Thursday afternoon. Thirty-seven boys and girls were entertained. The usual Easter games were played and then the refreshments were served in the dining room. Two rabbits occupied the most in the center of the table. Vases of apple blossoms were used here and there.

Master Bobby Nixon entertained a large party of his little friends Saturday afternoon. The occasion was his sixth birthday. An Easter egg hunt and various Easter games made the time pass enjoyably. About 5 o'clock the guests were served light refreshments in the dining room. In the center was a basket containing presents for each boy and girl. Easter eggs and spring flowers were also used to make the table attractive. On the table also was Master Bobby's birthday cake, bearing six candles. Twenty-seven children were present.

The engagement of Miss Thelma Senior to Earl Beck was announced at a sewing party given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. A. P. Senior at her suburban home. The guests spent the afternoon in sewing, after which a delicious two-course luncheon was served in the dining room. The table was centered with a basket of colored Easter eggs surrounded with sprays of apple blossoms. The place cards were decorated in the Easter symbols. The favors were tiny rabbits, each holding a card bearing the announcement. The wedding will take place in the summer. The guests were: Misses Spafford, Jenkins, Ripley, Oler, Field, Sanger, Bunnett, McShea, Johnson, Hunsinger, Martin; Messrs. Laird, White, Coughlin, Burton, Greenhaw, Buller, Morrow, Spaford, Wood, Baker and Reed.

The Theatres

ISIS TO PRESENT "THE SPORTING DUCHESS"
"The Sporting Duchess," with popular Rose Coghlan in the title role, is unquestionably the most fascinating play of the season. The picture will be shown at the Isis theatre Friday and Saturday.

Briefly, the story is thus: Lord Desborough and Captain Mostyn, both officers in an English regiment, are sent to India, and while here Desborough wins and marries her, thereby incurring the enmity of his unsuccessful rival. The regiment is ordered to India, and while here Desborough falls under the wiles of an adventuress. Vivian Darville, Mostyn reports this situation to Muriel, and further complicates the affair by drawing into it, Rupert Lee, another officer, who has been rejected by Vivian Darville, and drops his sword in drink.

The scene of the play shifts from India to England and centres around the race track where Desborough and Mostyn are rivals. Desborough acquires a horse in the famous derby. Desborough's patron is "The Sporting Duchess," a woman of untold wealth, whose chief hobby is the racing, and who is attracted to Desborough through mutual confidence in the ability to win of Desborough's horse, "Clipsie."

Enter another character, Mary Almyer, daughter of Desborough's stable trainer, to still further complicate matters. Mary has been betrayed by Mostyn under promise of marriage. Mary discloses her condition to Muriel and Muriel tells Desborough. Desborough then writes her a letter stating that he will provide for her future, but that she must leave his home. He also writes to Vivian Darville stating that their former relations must be forgotten and that she should no longer remain in his house.

A villainous interchange of these letters brought out by a clever teasing away of the name and replacing the name, gives Mostyn an opportunity to induce Muriel to come to his apartment secretly, where she is found by her husband. A divorce then ensues. Rupert Lee who becomes jealous of Vivian Darville's infatuation for Mostyn, decides to set a trap to unravel the letter mystery, and does unravel it, and makes atonement. "The Sporting Duchess" in the meantime is also playing detective and through her efforts the sinner is brought to justice and right is made to prevail.

LILLIAN GISH IN GREAT SCENES FROM EARLY AMERICAN DAYS

Historically correct is the story of "Daphne and The Pirate," the newest Triangle-Pine Arts play which presents the favorite Griffith player, Lillian Gish, as its star, to be shown at the Orpheum theatre next Monday evening only. The happy ending of the picture occurs on the soil of Louisiana back in the 17th century, when that territory was still a French colony and wives for the planters were recruited by the government and shipped across the sea to be sold to the highest bidder.

Francine La Tour is game keeper in the Green Forest and Daphne is his obstreperous daughter. Philip rides through the forest and meets the lovely girl, with whose charms he is at once smitten. When she snubs him he has her kidnapped and taken to Paris, where she is kept prisoner in a resort where he is known. Later Philip gets into a quarrel with the young prince and is forced to flee. He falls in with a pirate band and is carried aboard their ship. Almost at the same time the resort where Daphne is a prisoner is raided by the authorities and the girls placed on a ship to be sent to Louisiana.

The two vessels meet on the high seas. The pirates attack and for a time seem to be successful. Daphne, however, takes command of a gun which is of no use because of lack of men to handle it and with her aid the pirates are decisively beaten. The king's officer makes them walk the plank after promising Daphne anything in his power except her liberty. When Philip appears, she demands his life as her reward. He thinks that her act is inspired by her infatuation for him, but she is not so easily snared. Finally she is offered the highest bidder among the Louisiana colonists, but delays her sale by numerous attempts to appear unattractive. Finally she is purchased by Jamie d'Arcy and taken to his cabin to await the arrival of the priest, Philip, who has been barred from bidding for Daphne because of the fact that he is not a property owner, traces the pair and interrupts Jamie in his undesired

A Novel By
BOOTH TARKINGTON

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I--Sheridan's attempt to make a business man of his son Bibbs by sending him to the machine shop ends in Bibbs going to a sanitarium, a nervous wreck.

CHAPTER II--On his return Bibbs is met at the station by his sister Edith.

CHAPTER III--He finds himself inconsiderable and unaccountable figure in the "New House" of the Sheridans. He sees Mary Vertrees looking at him from a summer house next door.

CHAPTER IV--The Vertreeses, old town family and impoverished, call on the Sheridans, now rich, and afterward discuss them. Mary Vertrees looks at him parents' unspoken wish that she marry one of the Sheridan boys.

CHAPTER V--At the Sheridan housewarming banquet Sheridan spreads himself. Mary Vertrees' encounter with Jim Sheridan's attention, and Bibbs hears her in the machine shop.

CHAPTER VI--Mary tells her mother about the banquet and shakes her mother by telling of Jim as a matrimonial possibility.

CHAPTER VII--Jim tells Mary Bibbs is not a lunatic--"just queer." He proposes to Mary, who half accepts him.

CHAPTER VIII.

Through the open country Bibbs was borne flying between brown fields and sun-drenched groves of gray firs, to breathe the fresh air of a town with a glorious sky. Upon Bibbs' cheeks there was a hint of actual color, but undeniably its phantom. This apparition may have been partly the result of a lady's bowing to him upon no more formal introduction than the circumstance of his having caught her looking into his window a month before.

It seemed to Bibbs that she must have meant to convey her forgiveness. Nor did he lack the impression that he would long remember her as he had just seen her, her veil tumultuously blowing back, her face glowing in the wind--that look of gay friendliness tossed to him like a fresh rose in carnival.

By and by, upon a rising ground, the driver halted the car, then backed and tacked, and sent it forth again with its nose to the south and the smoke.

They passed from the farm lands, and came, in the amber light of November afternoon, to the farthestmost city skirts of the city. The sky had become only a dingy thickening of the sunset air; and a roar and clangor of metals beat deafeningly on Bibbs' ears. Now the car passed two great blocks of long brick buildings, hideous in all ways possible to make them hideous. And big as these shops were, they were growing bigger, spreading over a third block, where two new structures were unmurmuring to completion in some hasty recent process of a stability not yet ascertained. Bibbs pulled the rug closer about him, and just even the phantom of color was left upon his cheeks as he passed this place, for he knew it too well. Across the face of one of the buildings there was an enormous sign--"Sheridan Automatic Tump Company, Inc."

Thence they went through streets of wooden houses, all grimed, and adding their own grime from many a sooty chimney; flimsy wooden houses of a thousand tiny windows in the fishboning, built on narrow lots and nudging one another crossly. Along these streets there were skinty shade trees, and here and there a forest elm or walnut had been left; but these were dying.
Some people said it was the smoke; some said it was the smoke; and some were sure that asphalt and "improvements" the streets did it; but Bibbs was in too big a hurry to bother much about trees.

Onward the car bore Bibbs through the older parts of the town where the few solid old houses not already demolished were in transition; some were being made into apartment buildings; others had gone opportunely into trades; one or two seemed humorously over the tops of old buildings of one story in the old front yards. Altogether, the town here was like a boarding-house hush the Sunday after Thanksgiving;
the old ingredients were discorable.

This was the fringe of Bibbs' own sanctuary, and now Bibbs reached the rushing holy of holies itself. Magnificent new buildings, already dully furnished hundreds of feet above him; never ones, more magnificent, were rising beside them, rising higher; the streets were laid open to their entrails and new worked underground between pavements, and overhead in metal columns like spiders in the sky. Trolley cars clanged and shrieked their way round swarming corners, and cars of every kind and shape known to man bubbled frightful warnings and frantic demands; hospital ambulances clamored wildly for passage; steam whistles demanded the swinging of titanic engines and claws; riveters rattled like machine guns; the ground shook to the thunder of gigantic trucks; and the conglomerate sound of it all was the sound of earthquake, playing accompaniments for battle and sudden death.

Add to the hurrying crowds, swirling and shifting through the brooding fog of iron and steel, one saw the cavaliers and followers and the pugnacious women--there would be work today and dancing tonight. For the Puritan's dry voice was but the crackling of a leaf underfoot in the rush and roar of the coming of the new world.

Bibbs was alone. He knew it must be "to the minute" or his father would consider it an outrage; and the big chronometer in Sheridan's office marked four precisely when Bibbs walked in. Coincidentally with his entrance five people who had been at work in the office, under Sheridan's direction, walked out. They departed upon no visible or audible suggestion, and with a promptness that seemed obnoxious to the newcomer. As the massive door clicked softly behind the elderly stenographer, the last of the procession, Bibbs had a feeling that they all understood that he was a failure as a great man's son, a disappointment the "quaker one" of the family, and that he had been summoned to judgment--a well-founded impression, for that was exactly what they understood.

"Sit down," said Sheridan.

It is frequently an advantage for deputy schoolmasters and worried fathers to place delinquents in the sitting posture. Bibbs sat.

Sheridan, standing, gazed enigmatically
upon his son for a period of silence, then walked slowly to a window and stood looking out of it, his big hands, loosely hooked together, his thumbs, behind his back. They were soiled, as were all other hands down town, except such as might be still damp from a basin.

"Well, Bibbs," he said at last, not altering his attitude, "do you know what I'm going to do with you?"

Bibbs, leaning back in his chair, fixed his eyes contemplatively upon the celling. "I heard you tell Jim," he began, in his slow way. "You said you'd send him to the machine shop with me if he didn't propose to Miss Vertrees. So I suppose that must be your plan for me.
But--"

"But what?" said Sheridan, irritably, as the son paused.

"Isn't there somebody you'd let me propose to?"

That brought his father sharply round, so, face him. "You beat the devil!" Bibbs' what is the matter with you? Why can't you be like anybody else?"

"Liver, maybe," said Bibbs, gently.

"Boh! Even old Doc Gurney says there's nothing wrong with you organically. No. You're a dreamer, Bibbs; that's the matter. It's not the big dreamers that put through the big deals! No, sir! You're the kind of dreamer that just sets out on the back fence and thinks about how much tree-ble there must be in the world! That ain't the kind that builds the bridges, Bibbs; it's the kind that borrows affairs from his wife's uncle's brother-in-law to get ten cents' worth of tobacco and a nickel's worth of quinine!"

He put the deflating touch to this etching with a snort, and turned again to the window.

"Look out there!" he bade his son.
"Just look at that window! Look at the life and energy down there! Look at the big things young men are doing in this town!"

He swung about, coming to the mahogany desk in the middle of the room. "Look at what your father does! Look at it! Look at it!
Jim! Yes, and look at Jim! Look at Jim! President of the Sheridan Realty company last year, and it's an example to any young man--or old man, either--the way he took hold of it. Last July we owned one of these two more big warehouses at the pump works--wanted 'em quick. Contractor said it couldn't be done; said nine or ten months at the soonest; couldn't see it any other way. What'd Jim do?
He took the contract himself; found a fellow with a new cement and concrete process; kept him on the job night and day, and stayed on it night and day himself--and, by George! we began to use them warehouses next week! Four months and a half, and every thing straight! I tell you Jim's one of these fellows that make miracles happen! I watch just do my heart good! They don't set around on the back fence--no, sir! They're puttin' their life-blood in to it. I tell you, and that's why we're gettin' bigger every minute, and why they're gettin' bigger, and why it's all goin' to keep on gettin' bigger!"

He slapped the desk resoundingly with his open palm, and then, observing that Bibbs remained in the same listless attitude, with his eyes still fixed upon the ceiling in a contemplation somewhat plaintive, Sheridan was lupelled to groan. "Oh, Lord!" he said. "This is the way you always were. I don't believe you understand a thing! I been sayin'! You don't look as if you did. By George! I discouraging!"

"I don't understand about getting-- about getting bigger," said Bibbs, bringing his gaze down to look at his father placidly. "I don't see just why."

"What?" Sheridan leaned forward, resting his hands upon the desk and staring across it incredulously at his son.

"I don't understand--exactly--what you want it all bigger for?"

"Great God!" shouted Sheridan, and struck the desk a blow with his clenched fist. "A son of mine asks me that! You go out and ask the poorest day laborer you can find! Ask him that question!"

"I did once," Bibbs interrupted;
"when I was in the machine shop. I--"

"What'd he say?"

"He said, 'Oh, hell!' answered Bibbs, mildly.

"Yes, I reckon he would!" Sheridan swung away from the desk. "I reckon he certainly would! And I got plenty sympathy with him right now, myself!"

"It's the same answer, then?" Bibbs voice was serious, almost tremulous.

"Damnation!" Sheridan roared.
"Did you ever hear the word prosperity, you dummy? Did you ever hear the word ambition? Did you ever hear the word progress?"

He flung himself into a chair after the outburst, his chest heaving, his throat tumultuous with guttural incoherences. "Now then," he said, husk-ily, when the anguish had somewhat abated, "what do you want to do?"

Taken by surprise, Bibbs stammered.
"What--what do I want--"

"It's just you do exactly what you had the whim for, what would you do?"

Bibbs looked startled; then timidity overwhelmed him--a profound shyness.
He bent his head and fixed his eyes down upon the toe of his shoe, which he moved to and fro upon the rug, like a culprit called to the desk in school.

"What would you do? Loaf?"

"No, sir!" Bibbs' voice was almost inaudible, and what little sound it made was unquestionably a guilty sound. "I suppose I'd--I'd try to-- write."

"Write what?"

"Nothing important--just poems and essays, perhaps."

"I see," said his father, breathing quietly with the restraint that was his wont. "That is, if you want to write, but you don't want to write anything of any account."

"You think--"

Sheridan got up again. "I take my hat off to the man that can write a good ad," he said, coming to the door.
"I've been thinking if this country is right again in the ad business today.
You buy a magazine for good writin'.
Look on the back of it! Let me tell you I pay money for that kind of writin'. Maybe you think it's a good thing. I've told my and I can't do it. I tell you an ad's got to be written so it makes people do the hardest thing in this world to get 'em to do it:
it's got to make 'em give up their money!
You talk about 'poems and essays'!
I tell you when it comes to the actual skill of 'puttin' words together so as to make things happen, I, T. Bloss, right here in this city, knows more in a minute than George Waldo Emerson ever knew in his whole life!"

"You may be right," Bibbs said, indistinctly, the last word smothered in a cough.

"Of course I'm right! And if it ain't just like you want to take up with the most out-of-date kind of writin' there is. 'Poems and essays'!"

Look, Bibbs, that's women's work!
Why, look at Edith! I expect that poem of hers would set a pretty high-water mark for you, young man, and it's the only one she's ever managed to write in her whole life! And Edith's a smart girl; she's got more energy in her little finger than you ever give me a chance to see in your whole body.
Bibbs, I'm not sayin' a word against poetry. I wouldn't take ten thousand dollars right now for that poem of Edith's and none of it right enough in its place--but you leave it to the girls. A man's got to do a man's work in this world."

He seated himself in a chair at his son's side and, leaning over, tapped Bibbs' confidentially on the knee.
"This city's got the greatest future in America, and if my sons behave right by me and by themselves they're goin' to have a mighty fair share of it--a mighty fair share. I love this town. I love it like do my own back. I'd fight for it as hard as I'd fight for my own family. It's a beautiful town.
Look at our wholesome district; look at any district you want; look at the park system we're puttin' through, and the boulevard and the public squares.
And the grove. God! how she grows!"

He had become intensely grave; he spoke with solemnity. "Now, Bibbs, I can't take any of it--nor any gold or silver nor buildings nor bonds--away from me in my mind when I have to go. But I want to have my share in it to my boys. I've worked for it; I've been a builder and a maker; and two blades of grass have grown where one grew before, whenever I laid my hand on the ground and willed 'em to grow.
I've built big, and I want the buildin' to go on. And when my last hour comes I want to know that my boys are ready to take charge. Bibbs, when I'm up above I want to know that the big share I've made mine here below, is growin' bigger and bigger in the charge of my boys."

But Bibbs, looking deeply moved, said, "There," he said, huskily. "I've never spoken more what was in my heart in my life. I do it because I want you to understand me, and I don't think me a mean father. I never had to talk that way to five and six children. They understood without any talk, Bibbs."

"I see," said Bibbs. "At least I think I do. But--"

"Wait a minute!" Sheridan raised him. "If you see the least bit in the world, then you understand what I mean. I want to start one of my boys and have him come back on me the way you did, and have to be sent to a sanitarium because he couldn't stand work.
Now, let's get right down to it, Bibbs.
I've had a whole lot of talk with ole Doc Gurney about you, and he thinks another, and I reckon I understand your case just about as well as he does, anyway."

"Now, why did work make you sick instead of brace you up and make a man of you the way I ought to do it?
I pinned ole Gurney down to it. I says,
'Look here, ain't it really because he just plain hated it?' 'Yes,' he says, 'that's it. If he'd enjoyed it, it wouldn't a' hurt him!' (And that's about the way it is.)"

"Yes," said Bibbs, "that's about the way it is."

"Well, then, I reckon it's up to me not only to make you do it, but to make you like it!"

Bibbs, however, and he turned upon his father a look that was almost ghostly. "I can't," he said, in a low voice. "I can't."

"Can't go back to the shop?"

"No. Can't like it. I can't."

Sheridan jumped up, his patience gone. To his own view, he had reasoned exhaustively, had explained fully and had pleaded more than a father should, only to be met in the end by the unreasoning and mysterious stubbornness of a child. He was baffling characteristic from childhood.
"By George, you will!" he cried.
"You'll go back there and you'll like it!
Gurney says it won't hurt you if you like it, and he says it'll kill you if you go back and hate it, so it looks as if it was about up to you not to hate it." Well, Gurney's a fool! Hatin' work doesn't kill anybody; and this ain't goin' to kill you, whether you hate it or not. I've never made a mistake in a person's matter, and it's no mistake I make my son do what he's got to do in the first place. And I'm goin' to prove it --I'm goin' to send you back there and vindicate my judgment. Gurney says it's all 'mental attitude.' Well, you goin' to learn the right one! He says in a couple of more months this fool thing that's been the matter with you'll be disappeared completely and you'll be back in as good or better condition than you were before you ever went into the shop. And right then is when you begin over--right in that same shop! Nobody can call me a hard man or a mean father. I do the best I can for my children, and I take the full responsibility for bringin' my sons up to be men. Now, so far, I've failed with you. But I'm not goin' to keep myself put through, and I'm not goin' to begin with my own son. I'm goin' to make a man of you. By God! I am!"

Bibbs rose and went slowly to the door, where he turned. "You say you give me a couple of months?" he said.

Sheridan pushed a bell-button on his desk. "Gurney said two months more would put you back where you were.
You go home and begin to get yourself in the right 'mental attitude' before those two months are up." (Good-by.)

"Good-by, sir," said Bibbs, meekly.

PREPARING MAY DAY PROGRAM

Great Parade and Other Features on Friday, May 5.

HIGH SCHOOL WILL HAVE FLOATS OF APPROPRIATE CHARACTER.

Believed That Foundation Is Being Laid For Annual Event of Magnitude.

That the May day festival in this city will become a Twin Falls event of the course of time what the Rose festival is to Portland, Ore., is the hope expressed by the promoters of the annual parade for the Twin Falls schools, which, weather permitting, take place on Friday, May 5, this year. The parade with other exercises, was held last year and proved such an unqualified success that it was decided to make it an annual affair. The day selected this year falls, strangely enough, on the great holiday of the Mexican nation, De Cincos de Mayo, the anniversary of the celebrated victory of the Mexicans under Porfirio Diaz over the French at the Battle of Puebla. There will be a line of march consisting of the members of the several classes. The high school intends to have a number of floats in the procession. It is believed that in the future the merchants and people generally will co-operate in the celebration which will become an event of state importance.

ALL MEASURES ARE ENDORSED BY CLUB

was a greater evil than could result from conservative legislation. An interesting sidelight on present conditions was the fact that manufacturers have at present forced prices up on certain articles so high that there is no profit made by the retailer in their sale. This is the case where the prices of the articles are standardized by custom so that the purchaser demands a certain product at a certain price and will not trade at a place where cannot get it under those conditions. The meeting voted in favor of the recommendations of the committee that the federal government should take the evil of predatory price cutting through the agency of the federal trade commission.

The next subject submitted was the question of federal aid for vocational education. This was strongly championed by Superintendent Hal G. Blue of the Twin Falls schools, who pointed out that aid had successfully been given to home economics and agricultural development by the national government without any evidence of dangers or obstacles economic, political or constitutional which the opponents of the proposal feared. He dwelt upon the fact that less than 10 per cent of the pupils of school age in the United States pass through the eighth grade and less than 14 per cent graduate from the high school, because of their lack of proper training these boys and girls go out into the world entirely untrained to cope with modern conditions or to do their part in the industrial development of the country. "We cannot be commercially great unless we are industrially efficient," declared Professor Blue, "and that up to the present vocational training had not proven successful in this country, because of the fact that the German system had been transplanted bodily here, without making allowance for different conditions and environment. The problem of applying it to conditions in this country was being rapidly solved, however, and in his opinion the legislation suggested should be enacted. The club voted affirmatively.

The last referendum was on preparedness. There were 10 questions submitted, including several having to do with them after organization of a general army and naval staff and the rest with the increase in service recommended by the national committee. The recommendations included universal compulsory military training; the creation of a navy one the Atlantic, second largest in the world and on the Pacific of a navy large enough to protect our coast trade lines and possessions; and the reorganization under governmental supervision of our industrial system so that it can be utilized to co-operate effectively in any possible foreign war. Lieutenant C. H. Krongel, of Company D, 1st N. G., made a speech on our present state of military unpreparedness, quoting extensively from the testimony of officers before investigating committees to show that our battle ships are too slow, our artillery inefficient and our army insufficient. The club voted in the affirmative on all 10 propositions.

Superintendent Blue reported that a May day parade would be held Friday, May 5. This was heartily endorsed. The club then voted to proceed with the preparations for Fourth of July, thanked the speakers who had discussed the questions submitted in referendum and went home.

HOGS FIRM AND TEND TOWARD HIGHER PRICES

Other Markets Quiet With Little Change Noticeable—Receipts Are Light.

Early trading in hogs today started off rather slowly, buyers not being inclined to buy quickly on the 10-cent advance apparent at the opening of the day's market, says the Portland Live Stock Reporter of Monday.

After the market got fairly under way trading did not noticeably lag and rather a good clearance was made on the advance.

Eastern markets all last week were on a decline, but telegraphic reports this morning would indicate a stronger feeling all around the market circle.

Taking the market on a whole there was a rather spotted feeling both today and at the close of last week. While on each occasion there were sales made above the general market, Friday a sale was made at $9.30 and today as high as $9.15, yet the general market is quotable at $9.10.

Today's cattle market started off rather slow after a decided dull feeling this morning after a very uneven market for the end of last week.

Some salesmen last week quoted top steers down to a twenty-five-cent lower level. There was, however, nothing to indicate that best steers would not well at $9.00. The weakness was apparent, however, in the medium grades. Cow stuff showed no change. Today's market was anything but a lively affair. The feeling looks to be only temporary and shows a much better note than any other coast point.

very good in the main. Trade opened very slow and early sales would indicate rather a lower basis than last Monday. A bunch of heavies went early at $8.25, however, which would indicate a pretty good price basis for this class of stuff. No early sales before 10:30 went over the $8.75 spot.

Sheephouse trade was at the lowest minimum today with a crop that was so scanty that there was no basis to indicate any changes in prices.

Eastern markets have for several weeks been receiving shorn lambs. Shorning, however, in this section is late this year and none of this class has been received at North Portland.

WHERE THE BEST IS FOUND

DON'T overlook this matter of power. It is important. You want an automobile that will carry you through mud, sand and snow, and do it easily. You want a car that will climb hills, that will get away quickly without laboring and straining its every part.

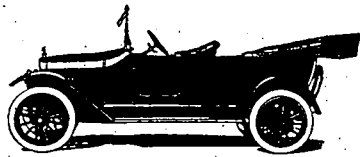

Not all cars can do these things, but you know that the Maxwell can because you have the proof.

When the Maxwell stock touring car set the World's Motor Non-Stop Mileage Record a few weeks ago, it encountered all sorts of unfavorable conditions—rain, mud and hills, over country and city roads—yet it covered 500 miles per day, day after day, for more than six weeks.

Power, plenty of power, unflinching power, is absolutely essential to such a wonderful performance as this.

Let us give you a booklet telling all the details of this record breaking Maxwell car. And let us take you for a ride anywhere. We have the very car you want and we will prove it to your satisfaction. Don't put it off. We have a few Maxwells now, but we may not be able to supply you later.

Dodge Performance

The DODGE performance on our DODGE HILL on Saturday, April 8th, seems to have left a very bad taste with some of our competitors. Do they want another hill pulling demonstration? If so, we are ready for the same at any time.

We wish to state here that the DODGE BROTHERS' car will outpull any other stock car from a standing start. We care not how many cylinders they may have or how much their car cost. To be able to pull a certain hill with seven passengers and stop and then start again without unloading, speaks more for the car than if it pulled it without stopping. The DODGE car can pull it either way.

Some of our competitors seem satisfied to be able to go down and look at our hill without pulling the same. Others again will not put their cars on this hill unless somebody agrees to buy their car right then and there. Of course they know their car best. The fact remains, many cars cannot get up this hill empty, to say nothing about a load of seven passengers.

REMEMBER we are ALWAYS willing to show what OUR CARS will do, whether you buy or not.
