GERMANY'S OPPORTUNITY.

That Germany wants peace is manifest. Within a week appeals direct and indirect have been made to President Wilson; to King Alfonso of Spain and to Pope Benedict V. to begin mediation with a view of bringing the war to a close.

At this time the armies of Germany are about at the zenith of their power, and are still apparently on the offensive. That they may still gain some advantages is undoubted; that they can go further in aggressive warfare is highly improbable. On the other hand the allies are just beginning to get their vast resources into practical operation. At no point have they, as yet, outnumbered their foes, and this is not due alone to their lack of preparedness, but is largely the result of their comprising many widely scattered nations with different military systems, political systems and a galaxy of national and social ideals.

The same phenomena is noted in all great confederacies against a central power. Louis XIV. of France not only held all Europe at bay for years, but actually invaded other states, though the total population and resources of the countries pitted against him were superior to his. Napoleon was even more successful for years in keeping superior forces on every front against nations that greatly outnumbered his in population and resources. Even Frederick the Great, while outnumbered five to one, generally had about as many men on every battlefield, as his foes did and sometimes more. A central power, which has no division in council and no international differences to adjust, can, moving on shorter lines, more than offset greatly superior aggregate numbers, and present the larger armies on battlefields for a long time, even when the state of preparedness of its confederated enemies is approximately as good as its own.

But in the long run numbers count. Ultimately Louis XIV. was crushed, Napoleon was exiled and Frederick was saved from destruction only by the timely death of a czar which converted a powerful enemy into an ally.

Germany, then, while she stands to win by some unforeseen fortuitous circumstances like that which rescued Frederick the Great, finds herself at the point where Napoleon was after the battle of Wagram and Louis was after the fall of Nismes, where common sense should teach her, as it did not teach the French monarchs named, of the arrival of the time for a permanent settlement of the war.

Evidently the lesson has not been wholly lost on the Kaiser. On the other hand, the allies, anticipating that Germany will demand impossible conditions, and realizing that her power must wane soon, emphatically announce that no peace is possible until Germany is crushed.

But Germany can force peace shortly and prove herself to be the benefactor of mankind if she is sincere and not simply playing for strategic diplomatic advantage. Let her pledge herself to renounce all claim on the foreign territory occupied by her armies, come to an agreement with France in regard to Alsace and Lorraine, and at the same time insist that peace shall be accompanied by the permanent freedom of the seas, by a great measure of international disarmament and by arrangements for complete international arbitration. Let her also insist, which is by far the most important, that in arranging peace, steps shall be taken by the hostile nations to secure a greater measure of social and economic justice for the masses within their boundaries, in order that the vast armies now in the field can be assimilated by the civil population of the nations involved, without violent revolution and social upheaval. This is not only feasible but it is necessary if bloody revolution is not to follow on the heels of the great war. A famous enemy of socialism predicted just before the breaking out of the war, that the next international struggle would be followed by violent revolution. One of the most distinguished American socialists has predicted recently that this war would be so followed in most of the nations involved. Unless this problem is taken care of, the signing of peace treaties will have little effect. They will indeed be "scraps of paper" and any advantage that Germany might get in the matter of territory would prove worthless and evanescent in the event that provision were not made for internal peace along the lines mentioned. On the other hand, should Germany take the initiative toward securing a juster social system as a condition for the settlement of the war, and forego the worthless bauble of conquest, she could force the other nations to some of her terms, and out of battlefields fertilized by the blood of the men slain in the struggle, would spring the plant of a higher civilization.

CHEAP WATER FOR CITY POSSIBILITY

ture on pure water illustrated with stereoscopic view, drafting plans and specifications and superintending their construction. The proposal was made after a visit to the different sources of supply near the city, and was taken under advisement until Monday night. Mr. Burns said that without making the required survey it occurred to him that the securing of blue-lakes water, considering the cost of installing the heavy machinery needed to pump it to the reservoir and the heavy cost of maintenance would require the expenditure of too much money. If other good water were available. The taking of water from Rock creek 22 miles from the city, if the supply were sufficient, might prove more satisfactory owing to the great fall which would obviate the necessity of pumping. All these details, however, would have to be worked out in the course of the survey.

The formal proposition included a report on the different possible sources of supply and the securing of all necessary data, with an estimate of cost of each and a statement in regard to which is considered most practicable, with all the required maps and sketches necessary for a complete understanding of the cost of installing each, and a recommendation as to which is considered the most practicable. For this and for plans for rehabilitating the pipe system the sum of $1500 would be required. The last proposition was in regard to the supervising of the letting of the contract, the supervising of the installation and the final passing on the work before acceptance. This would include the drawing of detailed plans including description of material and workmanship needed at all parts and including bidding blanks, as well as the details of attending to the letting of contract.

For this a charge of five per cent of the total cost would be charged, four per cent payable when plans and specifications were delivered and one per cent on the acceptance of the contract.

Inasmuch as Mayor Sweeley had a number of letters from cities where the firm had put in work it was decided to defer final action until Monday in order to get more facts from these cities with reference to whether the work proved satisfactory. One of the suggestions of Mr. Burns was to the effect that filter beds of modern form could be put in in sections or units as needed by the city, instead of putting in one large lot, years in advance of the city's needs in anticipation of future growth.

TWIN FALLS PEOPLE

GILL CANTANT-ACTION
Those who have used it in Twin Falls are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple linctus hark, city cerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-Eka. Because it acts on the liver and upper bowels, it relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The Bedford-Flaher Drug Co., Adv.

Brought to Hospital—John McConnell, of Contact, whose right leg was broken at the elbow property by falling rock, May 6, was brought to Twin Falls and placed in a local hospital last week.

Shank's Report Accepted—Before adjournment last week, the commissioners accepted the report of Judge J. M. Shank up to the time of his resignation, April 4. He had received $315.56 earned fees for the quarter.

Conditions Satisfactory—Dr. Samuel Fortier, chief of the United States office of public roads and rural engineering, was here last week visiting the experiment station in charge of M. R. Lewis. He declared that he found conditions in every way satisfactory.

School Would Foreclose—The trustees of Independent school district No. 1, have begun foreclosure suit for lots five and six in the Snyder addition and ask judgment for $1500 from C. M. Hill and Ora L. Hill, his wife. Longley and Walters are attorneys for the plaintiffs.

Jack Davis Bound Over—Jack Davis, charged with the felonious assault of A. N. Sprague, with a deadly weapon was bound over to the district court Friday morning by Judge of the Peace W. J. Smith, under $3000 bond. He is defendable by C. M. Booth. No witnesses were put on the stand for the defense.

Well Known Minister Dead—Rev. William Craven, father of Mrs. C. R. Scott of this city, died Saturday at his home in Chicago at the age of 78 years. Rev. Craven was prominent in Chicago Methodist circles for many years. He visited this city in November, 1914, and occupied the Presbyterian and Methodist pulpits during his visit.

22.7 Ft. in Salmon Reservoir—Due to the withdrawal of 9,734 acre feet during the week ending May 13th, the gate height in the reservoir dropped 1.3 feet. The net loss at the reservoir in acre feet was 2,600 acre feet of water. The present available storage is 44,200 acre feet. The cold weather during the past few weeks has retarded the run-off.

Thanks Fire Department—Mrs. C. Smith, matron of the White Cross hospital today at a card party, thanks to the fire department for prompt service in response to alarm on the stormy night last week. Mrs. Smith mentioned the fact that while the fire proved to amount to "nothing," the promptness of the arrival of the brigade was an assurance of protection.

for these 21 standards would be made until the time for expiration of the present contract, over though this should be supplanted by another contract embodying the ideas submitted, others agreed upon. The present contract expires February 1, 1917. Mr. King said that the annual cost per lamp was cheaper by $2.60 on a 10-year contract than on a seven-year contract and from $2.00 to $2.50 cheaper on a seven-year contract than on a five-year contract. Mayor Sweeley said that a hearing would be had on the light situation later at which everybody would get a chance to be heard.

"That would pay interest on $100,000 city bonds and we would own our own lighting system," was the remark made by Councilman Bobler, when Manager King of the Electric Investment company laid tentative plans for the complete lighting of the city before the council Thursday night, showing a thorough system of lighting for intersection at a total cost of $64,250. Notice was given that the matter further than to look over the proposed plan, at the Thursday meeting.

The plan outlined by Manager King, at the request of the council through Mayor Sweeley, provides for 214 lights instead of 108, as at present. The present cost of the system now in use is $3250, so that with an increase of about 60 per cent in cost, the number of lights will be approximately doubled. The 25 lights of the city would be eliminated, and Shoshone street and Main avenue lighted, in the business part of the city, with standards, like those in use in the city park. There would be 40 standards on Main street and 25 on Shoshone. The curb posts on which these lights would be installed would be paid for and owned by the city, but as each standard light is $7.50 a year cheaper than the same candle power lamp on other systems, these would eventually pay for themselves. Another tentative plan, having a total of 165 lights, without the addition of standards beyond those in use in the park at present, was presented, the total cost for this being $4822.50. The following is a complete statement of the tentative plans proposed:

Proposed System.
50—60 cp. @ $25.00	$1,300.00
1—400 cp. @ 44.00	44.00

CHAPTER II—On his return Bibbs is met at the station by his sister Edith.

CHAPTER III—Edith finds himself in an inconsiderate and unbecoming figure in the "New House" of the Sheridans. His new Mary Vertrees looking at him from a summer house next door.

CHAPTER IV—The Vertrees, old town family and unimpaired, call on the Sheridans, newly-rich, and afterward discuss them. Mary puts into words her parents' unspoken wish that she marry one of the Sheridan boys.

CHAPTER V—At the Sheridan house, warning banquet Sheridan spreads himself. Mary frankly encourages Jim Sheridan's attention, and Bibbs hears he is to be sent back to the machine shop.

CHAPTER VI—Mary tells her mother about the banquet and shocks her mother by talking of Jim as a matrimonial possibility.

CHAPTER VII—Jim tells Mary Bibbs is not a lunatic. She goes to the machine shop to see him.

CHAPTER VIII—Sheridan tells Bibbs he must go back to the machine shop as soon as he is strong enough, in spite of Bibbs' plea to be allowed to write.

CHAPTER IX—Edith and Bibbs, Roscoe Sheridan's wife, quarrel over Bibbs. Roscoe goes to Mary for help to keep Bibbs from marrying Edith, and Mary leaves her in the room alone.

CHAPTER X—Bibbs has to break to his father the news of his sudden death.

CHAPTER XI—All the rest of the family helpless in their grief, Bibbs becomes temporary master of the house. At the funeral he meets Mary and rides home with her.

CHAPTER XII—Mrs. Sheridan pleads with Bibbs to return to the machine shop for his father's sake, and he consents.

CHAPTER XIII.

The outward usefulness of things continued after dinner. In the library, while his wife sat in her customary chair, gazing at the fire, Sheridan let the unfolded evening paper rest upon his lap, though now, and then he lifted it, as if to read. Bibbs came in noiselessly and stood in the corner, looking at the paper, and from a "reception room" across the hall an indistinct low murmur became just audible at intervals. Once, when this murmur grew louder, under stress of some irrepressible mercantile, Edith's voice could be heard. "Bobby, aren't you awful!" and Sheridan glanced across at his wife appealingly.

She rose at once and went into the "reception room," there was a flurry of whispering, and the sound of footsteps in the hall—Edith and her sister changing quarters to a more distant room. Mrs. Sheridan returned to her chair in the library.

"They won't bother you any more, papa," she said, in a comforting voice. "She told me at lunch he'd behaved so. I wanted to come up this evening, and I said I thought he'd better wait a few days, but she said she'd already told him he could." She paused, then added, rather guiltily: "I got kind of a notion maybe Roscoe don't like him as much as he used to. Maybe—maybe you better ask Roscoe, papa." And as Sheridan nodded solemnly, she concluded, in haste: "Don't say I said to. I might be wrong about it, anyway."

He nodded again, and they sat for some time in a silence which Mrs. Sheridan broke with a little snarl, having fallen into a reverie that brought tears. "That Miss Vertrees was a good girl," she said. "She was all right."

Her husband evidently had no difficulty in following her train of thought, for he nodded once more, affirmatively.

"Did you—How did you fix it about the—The Realty company?" she faltered. "Did you—"

He rose heavily, helping himself to his feet by the arms of his chair. "I fixed it," he said, in a husky voice. He went to her, put his hand upon her shoulder, and drew a long, audible, tremendous breath. "It's my bedtime, mamma. I'm going up." When he reached the door he stopped and spoke again, without turning to look at her. "The Realty company'll go right on just the same," he said. "It's like—It's like sand, mamma. It puts me in mind of children playing in a sand-pile. One of 'em sticks his finger in the sand-pile and makes a hole, and another of 'em'll put the piece with his hand, and all the little grains of sand run in and fill it up and settle against one another; and then, right away it's flat on top again, and you can't tell there ever was a hole there. The Realty company'll go on all right, mamma. There ain't anything anywhere. I reckon, that wouldn't go right on—just the same."

And he passed out slowly into the hall; then they heard his heavy tread upon the stairs.

"Mrs. Sheridan, rising to follow him, turned a piteous face to her son. "It's so forlorn," she said, chokingly. "That's the first time he spoke since he came in the house this evening. I know it must 'a' hurt him to hear Edith laugh with that Lamborn. She'd oughtn't to let him come, right the very first evening this way; she'd oughtn't to do it! She just seems to lose her head over him, and it scares me. You heard what Sibyl said the other day, and—"

"What Edith said to Sibyl?" Bibbs finished the sentence for her.

"We can't have any trouble of that kind!" she wailed. "Oh, it looks as if now!" up to this new house had brought us awful bad luck! It scared me!" She put both her hands over her face. "Oh, Bibbs, Bibbs! If you only wasn't so queer! If you could only be a kind of dependable son! I don't know what we're all comin' to! And, whooping, she followed her husband.

Bibbs gazed for a while at the fire, then he rose abruptly, like a man who has come to a decision, and briskly

"Nothing," he returned, smiling. She frowned. "Did you want something?" she asked.

"Nothing in the world. Father and mother have gone upstairs. I shan't be going up for several hours, and there didn't seem to be anybody left for me to chat with except you and Mr. Lamborn."

"Chat with?" she echoed, incredulously.

"I can talk about almost anything," said Bibbs with an air of genial politeness. "It doesn't matter to me. I don't know much about business—it's that's what you happened to be talking about. But you aren't in business, are you, Mr. Lamborn?"

"Not now," returned Lamborn, shortly.

"I'm not either," said Bibbs. "It was getting cloudier than usual, I noticed, just before dark, and there was wind from the southwest. Again tomorrow, I shouldn't be surprised."

As he spoke he felt that he had begun a conversation the support of which had now become the pleasurable duty of other parties; and he sat expectantly, looking first at his sister, then at Lamborn, as if implying that it was their turn to speak. Edith returned his gaze with a mixture of astonishment and increasing anger, while Mr. Lamborn was obviously disturbed, though Bibbs had been as considerate as possible in presenting the weather as a topic. Bibbs had perceived that Lamborn had noted in his mind at any time except "personality"—he could talk about people and he could make love. Bibbs, wishing to be courteous, offered the weather.

Lamborn refused it, and concluded from Bibbs' inartistic attitude in the leather chair that this half-crazy brother was a permanent fixture for the rest of the evening. There was no reason to hope that he would move, and Lamborn found himself in danger of looking silly.

"I was just going," he said, rising.

"Oh no!" Edith cried, sharply.

"Yes. Good night! I think I—"

"Too bad," said Bibbs, genially, walking to the door with the visitor, while Edith stood staring at the two who disappeared in the hall. She told Bibbs offering to "help" Lamborn with his overcoat and the latter rather curtly declining assistance, these episodes of departure being followed by the closing of the outer door. She ran into the hall.

"What's the matter with you?" she cried, furiously. "What do you mean? How did you dare come in here when you knew—"

Her voice broke; she made a gesture of rage and despair, and ran up the stairs, sobbing. "She feels to her mother's room, and when Bibbs came up, a few minutes later, Mrs. Sheridan met him at his door.

"Head woefully," she said, shaking her head woefully, "you'd oughtn't to disturb your sister. She says you drew that young man out of the house. You'd ought to be more considerate."

Bibbs smiled faintly, noting that Edith's door was open, with Edith's naive shadow motionless across its threshold. "What's the matter with you?" he asked, in a low voice. "He'd ought to be much of a man's man. He ran at just a glimpse of one."

Edith's shadow moved; her voice came quavering: "You call yourself one?"

"Yes, no," he answered. "I said just a glimpse of one. I didn't climb! But her door slammed angrily; and he turned to his mother.

"There," he said, sighing. "That's almost the first time in my life I ever tried to be a man of action, mother, and I succeeded perfectly in what I tried to do. As a consequence I feel like a horse thief!"

"You hurt her feelings," she groaned.

"You must 'a' gone at it, too, rough, Bibbs."

He looked upon her wistfully. "That's my trouble, mother," he murmured. "I'm a plain, blunt fellow. I have rough ways, and I'm a rough man."

For once she perceived some meaning in his goodness. "Hush your nonsense," she said, good-naturedly, the shadow of a troubled smile appearing.

"You go to bed."

He kissed her and obeyed.

Edith gave him a cold greeting the next morning at the breakfast table.

"You haven't got that under a microscope," he warned her, when she began to fuss about her hair.

"Do what under a microscope?" she asked.

"Speak to me. I came into the morning room last night on purpose," he said, gravely. "I have a proposition about that young man."

"Sibyl said, 'I guess you think it's a great deal what you have picked up the manner of one who has picked up a young man. You've got to go to bed, for your father's sake, and you've got to go to bed, for your father's sake, and you've got to go to bed, for your father's sake. I've decided I'm one of the family.' And then, as the earnestness grew too heavy for him to carry further, he continued, in his usual way, 'I'm drunk with power, Edith. What do you want to tell me?' she demanded, brusquely.

"Lamborn made love to Sibyl," he said.

Edith blushed. "She did to him?"

"No," he said, gravely. "I know."

"How?"

"I was there, one day a week ago, with Roscoe, and I heard Sibyl and Lamborn—"

Edith screamed with laughter. "You were with Roscoe—and you heard Lamborn making love to Sibyl?"

"No. I heard them quarrelling."

"You're funnier than ever, Bibbs!" he cried. "You say he made love to her because you heard them quarrelling?"

"That's it. If you want to know what's 'between' people, you can—by the way they quarrel."

"You'll kill me, Bibbs! What were they quarrelling about?"

"Nothing. That's how I know. People who quarrel over nothing—it's always certain."

Edith stopped laughing abruptly, but continued her mockery. "You ought to know. You've had so much experience, yourself!"

"I haven't any," he said. "My life has been about as exciting as an incubator chicken's. But I look out through the glass at things."

"Well, then," she said, "if you look out through the glass you must know what effect such stuff would have upon me. She rose, visibly agitated.

"What if it was true?" she demanded, bitterly. "What if it was true a hundred times over? You sit there with your silly face half ready to giggle and half ready to snifle, and tell me stories like that, about Sibyl picking on Sibyl and Lamborn and worrying him to death, and you think it matters to me? What if I already knew all about their quarrelling? What if I understood why crave to 'get on.' You'd like to be somewhere in Algiers, or to Tournai, perhaps, and back on a balcony, smelling flowers and having a delicate lit-grow fat on it and yourself. Well, what do you say? I can like like Sibyl, Bibbs! Shall I tell your father he'll lose another of his boys if you don't go to Sibyl?"

"I don't want to go to Sibyl," said Bibbs. "I want to stay right here."

The doctor's drowsiness disappeared for a moment, and he gave his patient a sharp glance. "It's a risk," he said. "I think we'll find you so much better. He'll send you back to the shop pretty quick. Something's got hold of you lately; you're not quite so lackadaisical as you used to be. But I warn you: I think the shop will knock you just as it did before, and perhaps ever harder, Bibbs."

He rose, shook himself, and rubbed his eyes. "Well, when we go over you this afternoon what are we going to say about it?"

"Tell him I'm ready," said Bibbs, looking at the floor.

"Oh no," Gurney laughed. "Not quite yet; but you may be almost. Well, don't forget I said to walk down."

And when the examination was concluded, that afternoon, the doctor informed Bibbs that the result was much too satisfactory to be pleasing. "There's no 'situation' for a one-act farce," he said, gloomily, to his next patient when Bibbs had gone. "Doctor tells a man he's well, and that's his death sentence, likely. Damn funny world."

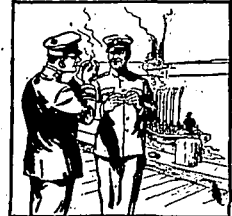

Bibbs decided to walk home. It was a dingy afternoon, and the sun was evident not only to Bibbs' sight, but to his nostrils, though most of the pedestrians were so saturated with the smell that they could no longer detect it. This incited a train of thought which continued till he approached the new house. As he came to the corner of Mr. Vertrees' lot Mrs. Vertrees' daughter emerged from the front door and walked thoughtfully down the path to the picket gate. She was unconscious of the approach of the pedestrian and did not see him until she had opened the gate and he was almost beside her. Then she looked up, and as she saw him she started visibly. And if this thing had happened to Robert Lamborn, he would have had a thought beyond the horizon of faint-hearted blue disfigurements. Lamborn, indeed, would have spoken his thought. "He would have said:

"You jumped because you were thinking of me!"

PUBLISHERS SUBJECT OF FINAL ADDRESS

Commencement Oration Given Thursday Night

CLASS PLAY IN AUDITORIUM THIS EVENING.

Final Part of Program Will Be Reception of Alumni Friday Evening.

"Publishers" will be the subject of the commencement address of Dr. Melvin A. Brannon, president of the University of Idaho, Thursday evening, preceding the presentation of diplomas. The address will begin at 8:15 o'clock. The senior class play, "An American Citizen," will be given tonight. Both programs begin at 8 o'clock. The seniors have worked hard to make their play a success, and it is pronounced excellent by critics who have had a chance to see it. Dr. Brannon will speak at the Parish hall Thursday afternoon. Friday evening, the Alumni reception will close the commencement exercises.

ORCHARDS SHOULD BE PUT IN VEGETABLES

County Agent Birch Advises Planting Them in Beans, Spuds and Corn for Slugs.

That farmers should get busy at once and plant potatoes, beans or corn for slugs in their orchards is the opinion of County Agent W. N. Birch, who says that crops of the sort named can get good results without injury to the trees. He says that a number of farmers are already acting on this theory and that the orchard lands of the tract will be far from unprofitable this year. While it appears that most of the crop is gone, there will be a good crop of strawberries, raspberries, currants and other small fruit, and some late varieties of apples in favored spots, will give better results than was anticipated after the frost last week.

Mr. Birch says that the grasshopper crop for the present year is small, and that the slugs and other insects will get busy at once to combat this evil.

ALBION TO HAVE NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM

Government Crew Building Line and City Force Putting Up Poles and Wiring.

ALBION, Ind.—Only a few days will elapse before the entire electrical power line to Albion will be completed. The village system finished and turned on. The government crew is only a short distance from the city limits as putting up the poles and wiring as they come. The substitution in town is about completed and everything will be ready to connect up within another week. The municipal line is now being rushed to completion. The delay in receiving cross-arms for the poles has held off operations for a week in this department, but as the shipment arrived Thursday, the work will be rapidly completed.

The wiring of the business houses and residences is about completed. Those who have held off for a time are now signing up for energy and having wirings made. A great many and everything electrical in their homes and have ordered additional wiring than was at first contracted for. The street lighting is going to be very extensive. The poles for the village. Over three dozen large arc lamps will illuminate the town at night, and these combined with the business lights will give us daylight in Albion all the time.—Albion Nugget.

The Blue Lakes Boulevard club met last Friday with Mrs. Smith, who lives on the Warner place on Blue Lakes boulevard. In the absence of the president Mrs. J. M. Wright presided and a regular program was not carried out. The afternoon was occupied with music and a social time was enjoyed by all. The hostess served a lovely luncheon. Mrs. Eames, was elected as delegate to attend the district federation at Pocatello.

Announcement of Candidacy

On May 4, I announced my candidacy for the nomination for the office of state superintendent of public instruction, subject to the wishes of the Republican electors of the state at the primaries, September 5.

In announcing my candidacy, I take the position of heartily endorsing resolutions recently adopted by the state board of education, favoring a constitutional amendment for the abolishment of the office, thus eliminating duplication in the state department of education.

If elected, I shall do what is in my power toward perfecting the organization for the school system of the state, as well as to perform the duties of the office to the best of my ability. ETHEL E. REIDFIELD. Advertisement.

IRADICK, standard-bred stallion (No. 67598), and Dina Imp, Belgian stallion (No. 6367), will make the season at my place, two miles south of south end of Shoshone street, and Saturdays at Johnston & Conner barn. $5 single, $10 season, cash, or note for $25.00 without interest if paid when due, or 8 per cent if not paid when due, October 1st. W. J. Connolly, manager.—Adv.

GOLDEN RULE IN NEED OF WATER

Desperate Situation Described By Resident.

COUNCIL ACTS PROMPTLY ON THIS AND OTHER MATTERS.

Ordinance For Crossing of Second Street With Switch Passed—Much Business Done.

The people of the Golden Rule addition to Twin Falls are doing so well as they would not be done by, according to the tale of woe told in a continued romance from time to time to the city council, the last chapter, released Monday night, being especially thrilling. Twenty families in that part of town, and what a worse, big families at that, are trying to moisten their tongues from an inch pipe, filled with a solution of iron rust, which is nearly all that has come out of the gallon in two minutes, according to B. N. Rendahl, who was the spokesman for the citizens before the council Monday night.

Mr. Rendahl said that the citizens had been before the council on other matters previously and one of these, namely the putting in of a new sidewalk, was not yet attended to, although the contract had been let for three months. He said that they had not water enough for irrigation, for fire protection, for domestic use or even to drink and they at least wanted enough to drink. Councilman Brackley said that Mr. Rendahl had spoken of 23 people being on the pipe. Mr. Rendahl said he meant families, and he was sorry to say that they were all big families. The council ordered the matter of water referred to the committee on water, sewers and drains with power to act, and also ordered Street Commissioner Porter to notify the contractor for the sidewalk that unless the walks were put in at once the contract would be cancelled and the job relet.

J. H. Moore described a condition dangerous to children along the ditch running from Blue Lakes boulevard to the front of the Block, and under Sixth street across Main. Street Commissioner Porter was ordered to investigate conditions at once and report at a special meeting which was to be called to attend to the matter promptly.

W. E. Nixon of the library board, made a partial report on conditions of the library. During the past year 19,262 books have been taken out, an average of 1608 a month, and 64 a day. The report was read to the council. The extension of a switch across Second street was allowed. This was overlooked in the fight over a similar crossing over Shoshone street some time ago and some of the council thought it had been passed. The rules were suspended and it went through without opposition.

Commissioner Porter in behalf of both the water and street departments filed a number of recommendations for regulation of streets, alleys and watering of lots, etc., which were referred to the city attorney to see which were not already covered by existing ordinances and to draft ordinances covering the rest. It was agreed that the water commissioner might adjust matters relative to the watering of lots, etc., which were referred to the city attorney to see which were not already covered by existing ordinances and to draft ordinances covering the rest. It was agreed that the water commissioner might adjust matters relative to the watering of lots, etc., which were referred to the city attorney to see which were not already covered by existing ordinances and to draft ordinances covering the rest.

City Attorney Herriott said that he had received another reminder from the state utilities commission in regard to the electric lines. He would give their ruling or not, and he would take the matter up further with that commission.

HILLSDALE VOTERS ARE FOR BRIDGES

Overwhelming Majority in Favor of Proposition

MONEY FOR HANSEN AND MURTAUGH BRIDGES VOTED.

Result Will Be Officially Transmitted to County Commissioners Here For Action.

The Hillsdale highway district No. 2 at an election held Saturday, voted $36,000 in bonds for bridge construction, the vote standing 276 for to 44 against.

The district board of commissioners by resolution adopted on April 7 last provided that funds derived from the sale of bonds should be expended for purposes named and no other.

The bonds will be sold to the highest and best bidder for cash, and the commissioners say that they have reliable assurances that 5 per cent bonds can be disposed of at a premium. The bonds will be payable annually to twenty years from date. The annual interest charge at 5 per cent would be $1,800, which is only slightly more than one-half mill on the assessed valuation.

The following are the purposes for which the bonds are issued: One-half cost of Hansen suspension bridge (county of Twin Falls to pay other half), $20,000; completing Murtaugh bridge, $4,000; bridge across natural between sections 2 and 35, townships 9 and 10, $1,000; minor constructions and repairs, $1,000.

The vote at Hillsdale stood 276 for and 44 against; at Eden, 126 for, and 33 against.

Interviewed yesterday Commissioner Carlson and Moore of Twin Falls county, said that the levy for the Murtaugh bridge in this county had already been made. No levy had yet been made for the Hansen bridge and no formal action had been taken in regard to it. It was assumed, the commissioners said, that formal notification of the action of the voters of the Hillsdale district would be transmitted to the board here for such action as might be deemed advisable.

MEETING OF THE R.N.A. The Royal Neighbors of America will hold their next regular meeting at the I. O. O. F. hall, Friday evening, May 19, at eight p. m. Visiting members welcome.

Vacation Time Is Near at Hand Buy Likely Baggage

The best known and most reliable line of Baggage sold today. Every trunk is sold with a 5-year guarantee by the people who make Likely Baggage. They know and are willing to back their claims by a five-year guarantee against breakage. So you can readily see that Likely Baggage must be exceptionally well made. We are showing some advanced ideas in Wardrobe Trunks for both Men and Ladies—also Steamer Trunks and a complete showing in regular sizes in Bass Woods and Fibres.

Trunks Range from $13.50 to $30.00
Bags and Suit Cases $5.00 to $22.50

See the Boy's Two-Pant Suits at $3.95 and $5.00

These are ideal garments for Boys and a real sensible idea, too, for everyone knows that the trousers receive the hardest wear, and many a one-pant suit is made worthless because the trousers wear out first. But now you can overcome that objection by buying a 2-pant suit, finely tailored, and they come in plaids, Scotch mixtures and fancy weaves. Also Blue Serges.
