Reports that Walton had died were persistently circulated. It was also said that he had been taken to a hospital in Burley, which was also without foundation, as he was not removed from his home after he returned after the accident.

Interstate Association Tournament in Connection

MANY BIG PRIZES OFFERED FOR COMPETITORS.

First Day Will Be For Practice and Classified System Will Prevail.

The Interstate association shoot for the encouragement of trapshooting will be held in this city in connection with and as part of the Idaho sportsmen's state tournament, beginning June 11 and ending June 13.

This is a registered state tournament to which the Interstate association has contributed $25 in cash, $75 in trophies, and $25 in prizes to the winner or runner-up of the Interstate association's state amateur championship event, conditional upon the winner or runner-up attending the Grand American Trapshooting tournament and competing in the National Amateur championship at single targets.

The members of the Interstate association are:

Bremington Arms—Union Metallic Cartridge company, 275 Broadway, New York; E. L. Dupont de Nemours & company, Wilmington, Del.; The Hunter Arms company, Inc., Paton, N. Y.; Winchester Repeating Arms company, New Haven, Conn.; Parker Brothers, Meriden, Conn.; The Peters Cartridge company, Cincinnati, O.; The Chamberlain Cartridge & Target company, Cleveland, O.; The Loring Arms company, Syracuse, N. Targets for this practice shoot will be two cents. The class system which will prevail during the two days following will not be in effect and no prizes will be given.

On Monday, June 12, the program will begin at 9:00 o'clock, with 10 events of 15 targets each, at 16 yards, which will serve to classify the participants. For each of these events a purse of $15 will be given. These will be followed by contests for the Gooding Gun club trophy, the U. C. T. trophy and the Capital News trophy.

These events being for permanent trophies, only residents of Idaho are entitled to possession of them, although all share in the purse distribution. High Idaho gun is entitled to possession of the trophy for the ensuing year, and to 60 per cent of the purse at the next tournament. There is no entrance fee to the several events other than the price of targets at three cents each. The purses are paid by the holding club, and are shown in the program. The first 100 targets each day at 16 yards are deemed the "regular" events. From the number of targets actually broken by each contestant in these events, whether he shoots in all events or not, is determined his class for the day, as follows: 89 per cent and above, "A" class; 80 to 89 per cent, "B" class; 70 per cent and less, "C" class.

In the permanent trophy events handlings are as follows: "C" class, 15 yards; "B" class, 18 yards; "A" class, 20 yards.

The winner of each permanent trophy event shall thereafter, for each subsequent permanent trophy event, stand at the next greater distance, without regard to a possible change in his classification upon the next day's shooting. (This does not, however, change his class for the purse distribution, this being determined upon his actual day's score for each day.)

Sweepstakes will be provided, if the shooters desire, but will be divided upon the class system as above shown. The "A" class shooters will shoot for their own money, the "B" and "C" class shooters likewise.

Interstate association rules will govern and will be strictly enforced. Professionals are cordially invited to attend but do not participate in purses.

On the night of June 12 the annual meeting of the association will be held at the rooms of the Twin Falls Commercial club.

On June 13 following the regular events, there will be held the Interstate association tournament shoot at 100 targets. For purse distribution each block of 25 targets is considered a separate race.

The Interstate association distributes seven high guns in the 100 target race, and in addition pays to the winner, or the runner up, fifty dollars up-attendance at the grand American handlings.

In addition are offered a trophy cup, a Holstman medal and a Stateman trophy.

REMOVAL OF MITCHELL ASKED BY SOCIETY

Charge Him With Failure to Prosecute Alleged Conspirators.

NEW YORK—The removal of Mayor John Purroy Mitchell from office was asked in resolutions adopted and sent to Governor Whitman Saturday night by the United Independent Democrats of Kings county.

The technical basis for the request for the mayor's removal was that he had failed in his duty as a citizen, to notify the district attorneys of Kings and New York counties of the knowledge he had that clergymen were conspiring criminally for illegal purposes. The resolutions cited that in testimony and in public statements the mayor repeatedly said that he had such knowledge.

Martin Kahn, of J. P. Morgan & Co., testifying today at the inquiry into police wire tapping, said Detective Burns reported to him he found the name of a former agent of Captain Boy Ed in information which the detectives uncovered as to the affairs of the firm of Seymour & Seymour. He also testified Burns learned from the same source of an alleged shipment of ammunition to Mexico.

MUTTON ON HOOF HAS A TREMENDOUS SLUMP

Lambs Fall 50 Cents—Hogs Go Off Slightly—Cattle Firm—Wool Strong.

Receipts of sheep have been abnormal as compared with the run that has taken place for nearly all this year previous. Packer outlet seems limited and prices are showing lower on both sheep and lambs. Lamb top today was at $2.00 on some pretty good quality offerings. This shows a reduction in top prices of fully fifty cents since the beginning of the week. Hogs show fairly active receipts since Monday's light run. Prices, if anything, are a nickel off the general top of the week's opening. Eight ninety-two was the general bid. Bulk at $3.90@3.95. Quality in general was very good. Eastern markets look some lower in general for the day.

Wool, the California section this year to come to this market have been natives. It should not be very long, however, before the Mexicans begin to appear in quantity. To date the California article has been much more in evidence than was the case last year. Pulpers are fast becoming a thing of the past and very few more are expected during this season. Possibly a hundred or two might be available but few more.

Wednesday was another California day, in fact much more of one than Monday was. With exception of a few head of dairy cows the entire receipts of over 600 head were from California points.

Notwithstanding the fact that the market was slow in getting under way, the bulk of the cattle was sold at $5.75@7.00, about the same gain that this class of cattle have been striking for several weeks.

Any break in the present market for cattle would, undoubtedly be due to an over-eagerness on the part of the country to take advantage of the rather satisfactory market.

Buyers have taken hold of the rather large receipts so far in a very good way.

The Northwestern wool situation is unchanged. Market is still strong, and until sales begin real situation cannot be shown further. There is, however, no present tendency toward a lower market.

Boston continues exceedingly quiet, but whole world position is very strong. Mills naturally keep Boston market down while they are buying in the west.

Submitted colors have been subjected to the vigorous tests, and the results have been—unanimous. BULL COWTESTERS

PLEASED WITH REPORT

Great Improvement Shown in Individual Cows During the First Half Year.

The first semi-annual report of O. T. Koester, official tester for the Bull Pioneer Cow Testing association, presents some interesting reading to dairymen in general and affords the members of the association a great deal of personal satisfaction. Says the Bull Herald. First, the report of the United States Dairy division of the United States department of agriculture recently reported that the association stood first in standard of cows in the association and also in standard of efficiency over the state of Wisconsin and that means practically over all the associations in the country. Second, it is found on careful comparison that there are but two or three associations in the country which have produced cows which have equalled the records set by several cows in the Bull association. Herald's Dairyman reports about eight which have done so. The improvement made by the individual cows in the association has been extremely marked and the average production has been materially increased during the first six months of the work. There has been an increase in the number of registered bull calves in use and many cows have been proven as profitless to their owners and have been sent the way of all poor cows—31 have gone to contribute their usefulness to keeping up the supply of juicy porterhouse and veal steak.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the general results of the work being done by the official tester, the good from this work being spread over a number of ideas. For example the work done in obtaining better results with the separator stands out very conspicuously, the waste of butterfat via the skim milk route having been reduced from 24.00 per cent butterfat to .0196 per cent, the value of the saving thus effected at the average price of butterfat for the period, of 27.2 cents, being $67.48 in the association. The average butterfat production in October was 27.811 per cow, while in March it had increased to 40.487 pounds per cow which at the average price again of 27.2 cents for butterfat amounted to a total gain in the value of butterfat to the 600 cows in the association of $107.48 in the improvement of nine per cent.

A PLATFORM BY DISINTERESTED PATRIOTS.

It is approaching near unto the election and the editors of the country newspapers may expect a deluge of that syndicated political dope, which can be headed up for news, with a Washington date line, or fixed up as editorial without obligation to credit, and no cost. We have an offer on file from the American Protective Tariff League, headed by Willard Fighthard Wakefield, special representative of special interests, offering free any amount of such junk. Of course the poor laboring man pays for his stuff—that is in the end. They take it out of his wages.—Grangeville Free Press.

The American Protective Tariff league shows its disinterested good will in other ways, one of which is the assistance it proffers in the writing of platforms for political parties. It makes no charge for this service, may does it expect remuneration or reward of any sort. Disinterested patriotism is the impelling motive. The league is now sending out proposed platforms to Republican politicians and to newspapers of various political beliefs, suggesting that certain planks be inserted in this year's platforms. The proposed platforms end up with the following plank:

"We therefore give pledge that at the earliest moment following the inauguration of a protectionist president and the induction of a protectionist congress an adequately protective tariff shall be enacted."

What an adequately protective tariff is in the opinion of these wholly disinterested parties, who are so anxious about the welfare of the nation, can only be guessed. Although they advocate in another place a tariff for the "protection of all American industries alike, that all may prosper alike."

And reasoning, false inferences and untrue insinuations have unfortunately crept into the conclusions of these patriots to such an extent that some people, who do not with simple faith accept all such utterances, will believe that the tariff league is hardly non-partisan in character, and is not wholly disinterested—certainly a most unwarranted conclusion!

One patent fact in connection with the protection of industries is that they do not need "protection alike" in order to "prosper alike." Moreover tariff schedules nominally affording the same protection to all industries would result in much protection to some and none to others. There are some industries which do not come into competition with foreign productions because their products are produced more cheaply at home than abroad, and the producers are too numerous in some of these industries to make possible a combination in order to file the home consumer of more than a competitive price. For these a substantial "protection" would be unnecessary and of absolutely no benefit. But where the home manufacturers are few enough, or great enough in size to control the market, a "protective" tariff, plus cost of transportation, would make possible prices that would afford a tremendous takeoff to the favored FEW. No doubt the American Protective Tariff league is aware of this. No doubt its membership includes the few who would benefit materially by such a tariff as the league advocates. But then the league is, of course, working for the benefit of the whole country and would not let such considerations as this interfere with the accomplishment of that purpose.

DAVIS HAD THE GOODS.

That Captain E. G. Davis "had the goods" when he made the statement here last winter in a public address that a certain Republican state official had appraised lands in which he was virtually interested, for a state loan, seems to be borne out by developments within the past week. The official referred to is State Auditor Fred L. Huston and the land in question was sold by him just prior to the valuation and loan, to Thomas M. Williams, P. W. Williams and John S. Scott. Luther W. Huston, the father of the state auditor, also received a loan on lands transferred to him by his son, but appraised by the state appraiser. At the time that the lands were transferred by State Auditor Huston it was necessary to redeem them from sheriff's sale. Inasmuch as the loans were made immediately following the transfers and apparently secured through the activity of the state auditor, it was claimed by Captain Davis that this not only showed undue and suspicious activity on the part of that official in his own interest, but that it also substantially amounted to a permission by the land board to him to violate the state law which forbids the loaning of more than $5000 to any person. The loans granted under the circumstances named aggregated $19,000, of which $5000 each went to Thomas M. Williams, P. W. Williams and Luther Huston and $4000 to John S. Scott.

Another feature of the transaction which caused unfavorable comment was the fact that the appraiser's fees amounting to $1900 were cancelled, on the ground that no charge had been made for the appraisal.

On the vigorous denunciation of the transaction by Captain Davis the land board reversed its previous action and decided to demand the appraisal fees. This action was determined on by a vote of three to two, Attorney General Peterson and State Auditor Huston voting against charging the fees. Later it was announced that the state auditor had secured other investors who would take up the mortgage and that the state loan would be cancelled.

That the transaction was of doubtful morals and propriety seems to be putting the matter mildly.

TWIN FALLS ANOTHER SALT LAKE CITY?

The story of the great strike at Jarbridge, virtually confirmed, following a conference of the Sloss and Guggenheim representatives at San Francisco, will mean much for this city and for the Twin Falls tract. While less sensational, the assurance that the mines at Contact promise to realize all that was hoped from them, is itself an item of much importance to Twin Falls. Salt Lake City was built up from the mines in the surrounding mountains, and the same is true of Denver and several other large American cities that have had no greater camps in their neighborhood than that at Jarbridge promises to be. The agricultural resources of this city and its adjacent territory are great, and even though there were no mines, it would always be a thriving and progressive city, but all indications are that it is destined to be much more and that it will prove the metropolis of the country lying between Salt Lake City and Spokane. The agricultural resources will be worth much more if the mines at Jarbridge and Contact prove as wealthy as it seems now assured that they will, for these camps will furnish a nearby market to the almost unlimited resources of the fields and dairies on the tract.

A SOLDIER OF THE FLAG

By Caroline Christian Kunkley

"STUFF AND NONSENSE!" said Mr. Job Larkins, "This Memorial Day, furs and feathers, bands of music, flags, powder, and some kind of a better take the money they cost, and give it to the widows and orphans, and the living soldiers. Much these dead soldiers know or care about Memorial Day. I know I wouldn't if I were lying there." It was a fact well known to Mr. Job Larkins that he never mentioned it to any of his friends, that he might have been lying by the side of some of his comrades. If he hadn't taken such precious good care of himself, that he didn't get in the way of any more bullets than was absolutely necessary. "They might help," continued Mr. Larkins, "be a looking after the veterans that need help in their old age." Now though Job did not need pecuniary help he voted the complaints of some of his disabled neighbors, who said, and who were never satisfied with what G. A. R. work or its officers. Job grumbled to his wife (poor soul), and she had to let him know that he had been assigned to complete of a man. Mrs. Larkins hardly knew whether Job had been the bravest soldier in the army, or the one who recognized heroes, or whether he had learned to grumble there, and had never gotten over it. In any case, she felt that a man who had served through the war, and had come out alive from such danger was entitled to much honor, and all the love one man could give him. And, too, it seemed an miracle to her that any man could have escaped from the storm of bullets, and shells, and cannon balls, and come through, and as he had described the awful scenes to her, and brought the vivid pictures before her mind, her heart had been at the thought of the awful carnage of war. This was Memorial Day, and Job was to march as usual with his comrades, so Mrs. Larkins soothed him with loving words, and helped Job brush his "parade suit," and saw that it was all "spic and span." Now if Mr. Larkins had known what an eventful day Memorial Day was to be to him he would never have lingered so long over the details of his toilet. He wouldn't have polished the buttons of his coat, or mended on his blouse so carefully. No, he would have hung the suit away, and taken the shortest route for the nearest land where Memorial Day was unknown. The happy unconscious of all in store for him there was no more soldierly looking a veteran than Job Larkins, and his heart leaped as it did in the old days when he saw the dear old flag flung out to the breeze, and heard the roll of the drum. The color came to his pale cheeks at the "forward march," and into Job's mind came all the old memories of the past. Again he and his boyhood friends marched under Georgia skies, down the river, the deep Ozarkes, and his twin, the bright Ozarkes, until Atlanta, the gate city of the South was in ruins; on to Savannah, Job shuddered as he remembered the graves of sons, and sighs that marked the long weary march of Sherman to the sea. Ah! Job's heart was growing tender as he thought of the dear old boys, and he brushed away a tear as the hand began to play sad, grand strains such as are played when heroes, and martyrs are being borne to their last resting place. On went the long procession until Fairview cemetery was reached. At the first entrance was a mound on which flowers and flags were placed to the memory of the "unknown dead." Over in the northeast corner they went first, and stood with uncovered heads by the grave of one of the boys. On a tall shaft of marble they read "Willis Jay, fell at Charlestonville." Job thought of Willis with a sudden pang of pity. As only son, brave as a lion, only a shot to the heart in the first battle. Job looked up with dim eyes and his face blanched, for there, leaning against the shaft was Willis himself. The same slender youthful form Job stared, horror stricken. Yes, it was Willis. The white face so sorrowful, yet tender in his expression, was looked at Job, but whose mind came the thought of how the Saviour looked at St. Peter until he broke his heart. Ah! if Willis wouldn't look so at him! He must be remembering, no, thought poor Job. He tried to speak, but his lips seemed glued together. He could only look and think. "My God! I believe that," he said, "that we have not forgotten them." "Willis," he tried to say. The procession moved on and halted at a low cross of every stone. Job read the name on the cross. "Warren W. H." and when the flowers brightened the vivid green of the mound, and the wreath hung on the arm of the white cross, Job looked up expecting to see Warren, standing there—and he was. On his white forehead was the cruel bullet wound, but he looked at Job, and Job—Job—the same reproachful look that Willis had given him—Job thought, and it flashed through his mind that he had never said all the kind things about Warren that he might have said. "Warren," he tried to say, but he could only whisper, and Warren looked at him, though now his look changed, and there was a happy smile on his face as he stretched out his good right hand and took Job's. "Oh, this is horrible!" thought Job, did they all know what he had said, and were they coming to reproach him for his words? Again the column moved on, and on one of the smooth gravel walks to the sad strains of the music; again the soldiers halted. Overhead the blue sky shone cloudless, again the warm wind rustled the leaves. The sunbeams threw flickering shadows on the closest grass. The sun touched each leaf, and Job, looking as though he were to say, "you were there, with them; and all you came back to love and friends, and home, while they slept three many years." All came to Job, and he looked there a mist of tears as they stood one mound, then at another.

was John Gray who starved to death at Andersonville, and there was Matt Mills who came from the horrors of Libby Prison a wreck in health. Poor Matt, he came home to die. This one who stood erect, and tall was Meli. Hurt who fell in the wilderness. Oh how they all looked at him! Job's voice stood out like whip-cracks, and he felt giddy, and something seemed to clutch at his heart. Ah! these pale faces, gaunt, bullet marked, and so lifeless; they seemed to speak to him. "Dear old boys," thought Job, "I should have died when you did, and you should have come home," he said, "I would have been a second Job that he never could speak again. Oh! why had he said 'the boys did not know'." Ah! he would never say that again. They did know; they do come back. Surely they must for he had seen them all. Ah! how dim the sun was; how dark it was growing; how faint he felt. Was that Jack O'well there? No, Jack fell at Bull Run. Yes! it was Jack; his old clum; how many times they shared their canteens with each other. A second boy, and Job stretched out his hands to him, but an overpowering faintness came over him, and a second later he was lying in the arms of the boys. "Overcome by the heat," they said, and "the boys" shook their heads as they said pathetically: "We vote can't march as we used to." When Job Larkins was well enough to be about again, which was not for some weeks, there was a marked change in him. All the old complaining spirit was gone. A new purpose in life seemed to have come to him. To a few old clums he told his story of how he saw "the boys" and though they argued against such a thing having been possible, nothing could shake Job in his belief of what he saw. "It was a punishment," he said, "for all my selfishness and discontent, and unkind remarks of all my old clums. I did not honor their memory as I should have done. I did not let my heart open toward the living for their sakes, and I begrudged them the honors, and the reward, that death had given them. It was a fearful experience, but I needed it, and I have found the debt of friendship that I can pay to the living, for the sake of our sleeping comrades. And I am going to pay every debt that I owe." And any one who knows Job Larkins today will say that no more earnest worker in the G. A. R. cause could be found; no more generous giver; for the "stuff and nonsense" as he used to call the flags, and powder, and bands of music, which he had written upon his heart forever.

HUGHES AND TEDDY HEAD-ALL OTHERS

The Progressives will nominate Roosevelt for president. If the Republican convention adopts a straightforward, sincere, ringing declaration on the vital public questions now discussed and nominates a man clearly equal to the immortal tasks which will confront the next president, Roosevelt might not think there would be any need of his entering the field. But if the Republicans nominate a man whom Mr. Roosevelt thinks is a misfortune and adopt a platform which he regards as "bunk" he may feel so outraged as to run and perhaps re-elect President Wilson.

IDAHO DELEGATES ARE FOR HUGHES

Senator Borah Quoted As Favoring Hughes, Whose Nomination He Predicts.

WASHINGTON.—Interviews with senators and representatives from the Rocky mountain and Pacific northwest indicate that practically all the delegates to Justice Hughes in the Chicago convention after the preliminary first ballot is taken. The vote of Oregon will be given Justice Hughes on the first and succeeding ballots. According to Senators Jones of Washington and Borah of Idaho the delegates from their respective states will vote for Hughes, if not on the first ballot, on succeeding ballots. Senator Smoot says that, while he has not had an opportunity to confer with all of the members of the Utah delegation to the convention, he believes the prevailing sentiment of the delegation is favorable to Justice Hughes, a Republican. State Chairman Evans of Idaho, arrived in Washington Saturday and spent Sunday in conference with Senator Borah. Monday he conferred with Senator Brady. The object of his conference was not disclosed by any party thereto, further than WHATEVER opinion one may hold regarding the ability of native style specialists to create fashions in frocks, no one acquainted with facts will deny native supremacy in the origination of neckwear. And there's a very good reason why American mode creators excel in this particular section of the sartorial field.

American women are more exacting in their choice of neckwear than the women of any other country. Wait a moment. We do not mean to infer that only the American woman exhibits good taste in the selection of these accessories of the wardrobe. We mean that the demand for neckwear is greater in the United States than in any other country.

America is the home of the separate blouse—the erstwhile "shirtwaist." American women purchase more tailored suits than the women of any other two countries. The separate blouse and the tailored suit are garments that demand separate neckwear as their complement. And there is the answer and the reason in a nutshell.

Considering the present and the approaching season, it is pertinent to point out that native mode creators have created a demand for a modernized version of the neck ruche—the separate neckpiece of tulle, chiffon, net and other materials. These ruches are to contest for favoritism with last summer's style sensation—the fur neckpiece.

I have just received an express shipment of the newest and smartest creations in women's neckwear in separate collars, ruffs and collar and cuff sets. It will be a pleasure to us to show them to you.

Then slowly fades and melts away.

On fading bank of sunset rim
The star of evening sheds its ray.
And things of night come out to play.

GERMAN SCIENTIST DISCOVERS NEW FOOD PROCESS

Milk, Eggs, Meats, Fruits and Vegetables Reduced to a Dry Food Powder.

From Munich, Germany, comes the announcement that the latest invention for conserving Germany's food supply, and, scientists believe, one of the most valuable in years, is a machine recently completed by a Munich engineer, G. A. Krause. By the application of a centrifugal force rather than by heat, the machine is said to quickly and absolutely extract the moisture from all kinds of food stuffs, without removing any of the valuable ingredients.

Milk placed in the new machine quickly turns to a whitish, almost vapor-like powder. But, unlike milk which has been reduced to powder by heating processes, the fluid treated by the centrifugal motion machine is said to lose none of its nutritive value, and when mixed with water an hour or a year later becomes real, pure milk again. It tastes precisely like the original; it contains, as chemical analysis shows, every kind of the characteristics and properties of milk, and produces a thick, rich cream—providing the original milk did—from which but-ter may be churned.

Herr Krause has as yet revealed his exact process to no one, though his machine is open to inspection and he has operated it for the benefit of scores of scientific men.

The regular monthly meeting of the Wayside club was at the home of Mrs. Hamilton last Thursday. The subject for the meeting was "Poets," and was capably handled by Mrs. Rose Rutherford. Current events occupied a part of the afternoon as did some very pretty piano selections which were rendered by Miss Fay Hunt. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess. New members are being taken in each meeting.

Complimenting her friend, Miss Irene Hayes of Pocatello, Miss Mary Miller was hostess to a number of friends last Thursday. In a pleasant game of 500 Miss Margaret Wilson won first prize, a dainty crocheted bag. Miss Alma Bennett received consolation and guest prize was given Miss Hays. Luncheon was served during the afternoon. Present at this very delightful affair were Misses Alma Bennett, Margaret Wilson, Vera Thompson, Irene Hayes, Fern Costello, Pauline Evans, Margaret and Mildred Conway, Mrs. Alexander, Miss Lesley Williams and Miss Jeanette.

Mrs. A. J. Putnam of Pocatello, was the guest of honor at a pretty course of dinner party last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. M. C. Putnam. Pink predominated in the table decorations. Miss Margaret Putnam and Mrs. Albert Seligman assisted in serving. Covers were laid for Mrs. A. J. Putnam, Mrs. A. Dufresne, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Southworth, Mrs. March of Seattle, Miss McCauley, Walter Dufresne, Miss Mary Cashin, Joe Putnam, Mrs. A. Seligman and Miss Margaret Putnam, and Mrs. M. C. Putnam. The balance of the evening was delightfully spent in playing cards.

Miss Helen Strobeck was a gracious young hostess to a large number of her friends last Saturday afternoon honoring Mrs. Helen Miller of Boise and Miss Eleanor Miller of Washington, Pennsylvania. Pink and white decorations were effectively used in the house decorations; flowers being used in abundance. Dancing preceded a

One of the most successful events of the season was the operetta, "The Methodist Music Master," given by the Filer club women with the assistance of some of Twin Falls' talent, last Wednesday in the Gen theatre at Filer. The operetta was for the benefit of the Filer rest room and proved a splendid success. The ladies were served a delightful course luncheon during the afternoon, and the tables were beautifully decorated in the club colors, lavender and white, a profusion of lavender lilacs and bridal wreath being used effectively. Music was furnished by Mrs. Shearer during the luncheon. The Filer ladies wish to extend a vote of appreciation to the following Twin Falls ladies who so willingly devoted their talent in making the affair a success: Mesdames H. W. Dwight, Murphy, I. O. Brown, C. D. Hoag, and Mrs. Wilfred McKay, Oleson and Misses Mildred Conway and Pauline Field.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Sheridan's attempt to make a business matter of his son Bibbs by starting him in the machine shop ends Bibbs going to a sanitarium, a nervous break.

CHAPTER II—On his return Bibbs is met at the station by his sister Edith.

CHAPTER III—He finds himself an incalculable and unconsidered figure in the "New House" of the Sheridans. He sees Mary Vertrees looking at him from a summer house.

CHAPTER IV—The Vertreeses, old town family and impoverished, call on the Sheridans, new-rich, and after a discussion, Mary puts into words her "pale" suspicion that she may marry one of the Sheridans.

CHAPTER V—At the Sheridan housewarming, Sheridan spreads his self. Mary frankly encourages his attention, and Bibbs hears he is to be sent back to the machine shop.

CHAPTER VI—Mary tells her mother about the banquet and shocks her mother by talking of Jim as a matrimonial possibility.

CHAPTER VII—Jim tells Mary Bibbs is not a lunatic, but half-accepts him.

CHAPTER VIII—Sheridan tells Bibbs he must get back to the machine shop as soon as he is strong enough, in spite of Bibbs' idea of going to college.

CHAPTER IX—Edith and Sibyl, Roscoe Sheridan's wife, quarrel over Bibbs' Lantern. Bibbs goes to Mary for help to Lamborn from marriage Edith, and Mary leaves her in the room alone.

CHAPTER X—Edith has to break to his father the news of Jim's sudden death.

CHAPTER XI—All the rest of the family helps in their grief. Bibbs becomes temporary master of the house. At the funeral he meets Mary and rides home with her.

CHAPTER XII—Mrs. Sheridan pleads with Bibbs to return to the machine shop for his father's sake, and he consents.

CHAPTER XIII—Bibbs purposely interrupts a tea-party between Edith and Lamborn making love to Roscoe's wife.

CHAPTER XIV—Mutual love of music arouses an intimate friendship between Bibbs and Mary.

CHAPTER XV—Mary sells her piano to help out the finances of a Vertrees family.

CHAPTER XVI.

Mrs. Vertrees' opportunity occurred the very next afternoon. Darkness had fallen, the piano moved had come.
They had carried the piano down the front steps, and Mrs. Vertrees was standing in the open doorway behind them, preparing to withdraw, when she heard a sharp exclamation; and Mrs.
Roscoe Sheridan, hunched, emerged from the shadow into the light of the doorway.

"Good gracious!" she cried. "It did give me a fright!"

"It's Mrs. Sheridan, isn't it?" Mrs.
Vertrees was perplexed by this information, but she reflected that it might be proverbial. "Won't you come in?"

"No. Oh no, thank you!" Sibyl panted, pressing her hand to her side.
"You don't know what a fright you've given me! And it was nothing but your piano!" She laughed shrilly. "I just glanced out of the window, a minute or so ago, and saw your door wide open and black figures of men against the light, carrying something heavy."

"And I thought I'd see your daughter start for a drive with Bibbs Sheridan in a car about three o'clock—and—Thou art! back yet, are they?"

"No. Good heavens!"

"And the only thing I could think of
was that something must have happened to them, and I just dashed over —and it was only your piano!" She broke into laughter again. "I suppose you're just seeing it somewhere to be repaired, aren't you?"

"It's—It's being taken down," said Mrs. Vertrees. "Won't you come in? I really—"

"Thank you, but I must be running late. My husband usually gets home about this time, and I make a little point of it always to be there."

"That's very sweet," Mrs. Vertrees descended the steps and walked toward the street with Sibyl.

"I'm afraid Mr. Vertrees will hate her piano," said Sibyl, watching the instrument disappear into the big cab in the curb. "She plays wonderfully." Mrs. Kitterbry told me.

Yes, she plays very well. Mr. Sheridan came last evening to hear her play, because she had arranged with them that is, it was to be removed this afternoon. He seems almost well again."

"Yes," Sibyl nodded. "His father's going to try to start him to work."

"He seems very delicate," said Mrs.
Vertrees. "I shouldn't think he would be able to stand a great deal, either physically or—"

She paused and then added, glowing with the sense of her own adroitness—"or mentally."

"Oh, mentally Bibbs is all right,"
said Sibyl, in an odd voice.

"But has he always been?" The question came with anxious eagerness.

"Certainly. He had a long course of nervous dyspepsia, but he's over it."

"And you think—"

"Bibbs is all right. You needn't worry. Sibyl choked, and pressed her handkerchief to her mouth. "Good night, Mrs. Vertrees," she said, hurriedly.

"Won't you come in?" urged Mrs.
Vertrees, cordially, hearing the sound of a cheerful voice out of the darkness beyond the approaching glare of automobile headlights. "Do! There's Mary down, and she—"

But Sibyl was halfway across the street. "No, thanks," she called. "I hope she won't miss her piano!" And

"Oh, Mentally Bibbs is All Right," Said Sibyl.

she ran into her own house and plunged headlong upon a leather divan in the hall, holding her handkerchief over her mouth.

The noise of her tumultuous entrance was evidently startling, for there followed the crash of a decanter upon the floor of the dining room, and, after a rumble of indignant profanity, Roscoe came forth, holding a dripping napkin in his hand.

"What's your excitement?" he demanded. "What do you find to go into hysterics over? Another death in the family?"

"Oh, it's funny," she gasped.
"Those old frost-bitten people! I guess they're getting their composure!"

Lying prone, she elevated her feet in the air, clapping her heels together repeatedly, in an ecstasy.

"Come through, come through!"
said her husband, crossly. "What you been up to?"

"Me?" she cried, dropping her feet and swinging around to face him.

"Nothing. It's them! Those Vertreeses!" She wiped her eyes. "They've had to sell their piano!"

"What, what of it?"

"That Mrs. Kitterbry told me all about 'em a week ago," said Sibyl.

"They've been hard up for a long time, and she says so long ago as last winter she knew that girl got a pair of walking shoes resoled and patched, because she got it done the same place Mrs.
Kitterbry's cook had her."

"Well, well," he urged, impatiently.
"Well, I'm telling you Mrs. Kitterbry says they haven't got a thing! Just absolutely nothing—and they don't know anywhere to turn! She says the whole town's been wondering what would become of 'em. The girl had plenty chances to marry up to a year or so ago, but she was so indifferent she scared the men off. Gracious! they were lucky! Mary here! The man that found himself tied up to that girl!"

"Terrible funny, terrible funny!"
said Roscoe, with sarcasm. "It's so funny I broke a glass decanter and spilled a quart of—"

"Wait!" she cried. "You'll see. I saw a big wagon drive up and someone to take to the house. Well, I thought I'd see, so I slipped over—and it was her piano! They'd sold it and were trying to sneak it out after dark, so nobody'd catch 'em! Acute she came way to her enjoyment, but resumed, as her husband seemed about to interrupt the narrative, "Wait a minute, can't you? Yes, they'd sold it; and I hope they'll pay some of their debts. They owe everybody, and last week a coal dealer made an awful fuss at the door, with Mr. Vertrees. Their cook told our upstairs girl, and she said she didn't know when she'd seen any money, herself! Did you ever hear of such a case as that girl in your life?"

"What girl? Their cook?"

"That Vertrees girl! Don't you see they looked on our coming up into this neighborhood as their last chance? They were just going down and out, and here bobs up the green, rich Sheridan family! So they send her out to get a Sheridan—she's got to get out and she just goes in blind, and Jim was landed—there's no doubt about that! But Jim was lucky; he didn't live to any landed, and it's a good thing for him!" Sibyl's mirth had vanished, and she spoke with virulent rapidity. "Well, she couldn't get you, because you were married, and she couldn't get Jim, because Jim died.

And there they were, dead broke! Do you know what she did? Do you know what she's doing?"

"No, I don't," said Roscoe, gruffly.

Sibyl's voice rose and culminated in a scream of renewed hilarity. "Bibbs!
Bibbs! Roscoe, child of wit, Bibbs!"

He stared uncomprehendingly, but her mirth was unabated for all that.
"And yesterday," she continued, between paroxysms—"yesterday she came out of the house—just as he was naked! She must have been looking out—waiting the chance; I saw the old lady watching at the window! And she got him there last night—to 'play' to him; the old lady gave that away!
And today she made him take her out in a machine! And the evening it is that they didn't even know whether he was insane or not—they thought maybe he was, but she went after him just the same! The old lady set herself to pump me about it today. Bibbs!
Oh, Lord, Bibbs, through!"

But Roscoe looked grim. "So it's funny to you, is it? It sounds kind of pitiful to me. I should think it would to a woman, too."

"Oh, it might," he returned, sobering. "It might, if those people weren't such frozen-faced smart Ales. If they'd had the decency to come down off the perch a little I probably wouldn't think it was funny, but to see 'em sit up in their pedestals all the time they're cutting dirt—well, I think it's funny." That girl sits up as if she was Queen Elizabeth, and expects people to wallow on the ground before her until they get near enough for her to give 'em a good thrashing! With her old patches about—oh, she'd do that, all right—and then she powders up and goes out to mash—Bibbs Sheridan!"

"Look here," said Roscoe, heavily:
"I don't care about that one way or another. It's not my business, though, I got something I want to talk to you about.
I was going to, to that just before we heard about Jim."

At this Sibyl stiffened quickly; her eyes became intensely bright. "What is it?"

"Well," he began, frowning, "what I was going to say then—"

He broke off, and, becoming conscious that he was still holding the wet napkin in his hand, threw it pettishly into a corner.

"I never expected I'd have to say anything like this to anybody I married; but I guess going to ask you what was the matter between you and Lamborn."

Sibyl uttered a sharp monosyllable.

"I felt the time had come for me to know about it," he went on. "You never told me anything—"

"You never asked," she interposed, curtly.

"Well, we'd got in a way of not talking much," said Roscoe. "It looks to me now as if we'd pretty much lost the run of each other the way a good many people do. I don't say it wasn't my fault. I was up early and down to work all day, and I'd come home tired at night, and went to go to bed soon as I'd got the paper read—unless there was some good musical show in town.
Well, you seemed all right until here lately, the last month or so, it began to seem something was wrong. I couldn't help seeing it."

"Wrong?" she said. "What like?"

"You changed; you didn't look the same. You were all strung up and excited and jittery; you got to looking peaked and run down. Now then, Lam-born had been going with us a good while, but I noticed that not long ago down just about the time you began falling out with him." He stepped close to her. "Now here, Sibyl, I'm going to know what it means."

"Oh, you are?" she stammered. "That was what you were going to say the other day. Yes. What else have you to say tonight?"

"Tonight," he replied, with grim swiftness, "I want to know why you keep telephoning him you want to see him since he's stopped coming here."

She made a long, low sound of comprehension before she said, "And what else did Edith want you to ask me?
I want to know what you say over the telephone to Lamborn," he said, bercey.

"Is that all Edith told you to ask me? You saw her when you stopped in there on your way home this evening? I want to know what you say you then what I said over the telephone to Mr. Lamborn?"

"No, she didn't," he vociferated, his voice growing louder. "She said, 'You tell your wife to stop telephoning Robert Lamborn to come and see her, because he isn't going to do it! That's what she said! And I want to know what it means. I intend—'

A maid appeared at the lower end of the hall. "Dinner is ready," she said, and, giving the troubled pair one glance, went demurely into the dining room. Roscoe disregarded the interruption.

"I intend to know exactly what has been going on," he declared. "I mean to know just what—"

Sibyl jumped up, almost touching him, standing face to face with him.

"Oh, you do?" she cried, shrilly. "You mean to know just what's what, do you? You listen to your sister insinuating ugly things about your wife, and then you come home making a scene before the servants, and humiliating me in their presence? Do you suppose that Irish girl didn't hear every word you said? You go in there and eat your dinner alone! Go on! Go on! Eat your dinner alone—because I won't eat with you!"

And she broke away from the detaining grasp he sought to fasten upon her, and dashed up the stairway, panting. He heard the door of her room slam overhead, and the sharp click of the key in the lock.

JARBIDGE WANTS NEW GRADE FINISHED

Times' Correspondent Tells of Great Advantages From Satisfactory Roads.

During the past week thousands of visitors to the Idaho and Nevada border have been made aware of the fact that the matter of a new and better road was looked into very thoroughly. The party all came into camp in autos and all agreed that this end of the road might be much better for auto travel if some of the grades were eliminated. Accompanying the officials above mentioned, were J. B. Lechler of Rock Creek, W. B. Keith, of Grand View, Mr. Reynolds, U. S. mail contractor, and Mr. Bosstick, of the DuPont Powder company. A large number of the citizens of the town met the visiting commissioners at the club hall in the evening and the whole road business was gone over very fully and the great necessity of a new piece of road between Jarbridge and the Hot Springs was conceded by everyone. All the gentlemen were very enthusiastic over the outlook of the district and expressed themselves very emphatically in favor of the proposed new section of road and promised to take the matter up with their respective commissions and do all they could to further the immediate building of the proposed road. A survey of the proposed route had been made and blue prints of the profile and details of the work necessary were at hand for the use of the commissioners. The new piece of road is about twelve miles long and it is estimated that one thousand dollars per mile will build it in good shape. About half of this road will be in Elko county and the other half in Owyhee county. This road will cut out all of the heavy grades between Jarbridge and the Hot Springs and thus eliminate all of the grades which now give trouble to autos and freight teams. With this new road completed, this route through Jarbridge should become an important inter-state thoroughfare, connecting the state roads of Idaho with the Lincoln highway and other auto highways of Nevada. The Jarbridge-Deeth road over the summit of the Humboldt range, offers a feat of magnificent scenery to the traveler. To the north this Jarbridge road connects with the state roads of Idaho which are already built from Twin Falls to Yellowstone National park; while to the south and west it connects with the fine county roads of Nevada extending down the Humboldt river and the Lincoln highway over to the Yosemite. Jarbridge begins to show some promise of making a great camp and to realize something of the early expectations. The Long Hike mine is pro-ing to be a really big mine and gives promise of becoming one of the great mines of the state. George Wingfield and other strong operators are investigating properties in camp and there is every assurance that there will be considerable activity in the district this season. CARRANZA TROOPS PLAN CAMPAIGN Hope To Capture Villa Soon and End Reason for American Occupation. CHIHUAHUA, MEX.—Strong columns of Constitutionalists have been dispatched by General Jacinto Trevino, military commander of northern Mexico, to surround Hacienda Minera, about 125 miles from Jimenez, where General Ignacio Huerta resides, by reported Villa with a few followers, to be hiding. The troop movement announced Saturday was said to be in response to additional information reports. Military authorities here seemed confident that the bandit chieftain would be captured, either dead or alive, within a few days. Flying columns are also being prepared to pursue the Villista bandits between the American field bases and on the flanks of the American expeditionary column. It is hoped that these flying commands will prove so effective, that there will be no work for the American troops to do and that in the light of their resultant inactivity prompt retirement will be recognized as the logical necessity. Other moves in the new plan of campaign were revealed in a report Saturday by General Trevino to Minister of War Obregon. In this the military commander announced an entire redistribution of the command. A brigade under Manuel Elencado has been instructed to entrain immediately for Cuat, from which point it will march to San Francisco de Borja. Using that village as a base, garrisons of 100 men each, to patrol the surrounding country in search for bandits are to be established in Carrizosa, churches of Satevo, Nonava and Slogachic, in the territory recently evacuated by the Americans. Gen. Macias Huerta and his brigade have been ordered to Aldama to await orders, while Colonel Zazuza's command will occupy Santa Ysabel, Santa Andrea and the district in the vicinity of Dussilla. ARTESIAN CITY MAN DIES IN HOSPITAL IN THIS CITY Jacob H. Hutchinson of Artesian City, died at the Twin Falls hospital Saturday and was buried at the Artesian City cemetery Sunday afternoon. Mr. Hutchinson was aged 77 years, seven months and three days. The services were conducted by the pastor of the Church of the Brethren of Mortuaria.

RUPERT WINS GAME SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Visitors Outplay Home Team—Hitching by Frambach the Feature.

After a drubbing that made the Twin Falls fans feel like George Washington would have done, had his father caught him while engaged in his wood chopping activities, the local organization Sunday determined to sign two of the men who helped beat them, and took on McCormick and Pierce, who were identified with the Rupert nine. The visitors won by a score of four to one. The locals were outplayed by the Rupert aggregation though the margin was not great in favor of the outsiders. However, the infield work of the visitors was the best seen here this season. The feature of the game was the pitching of Frambach of Rupert who let Twin Falls down with one hit, a three bagger by Robinson. The first seven innings constituted a pitcher's battle. The following is a summary of features: Three base hit, Robinson. Base on balls, Frambach 4. Hit by pitched ball, Frambach 1. Struck out, Frambach 7; Hart 7. Stolen bases, Ansel, Wagner, Pierce.

The Theatres

SALVATIONISM IS SCREENED. World Film presents the California Company's photoplay version of Edward Sheldon's very successful drama "Salvation Nell." The most ambitious role which this lady has been tempted in pictures. It is a very powerful drama when seen on the screen; full of startling and lurid episodes of underworld life with, over all, the benign influence of the Salvation Army exerting itself for the betterment of defective human nature.

There is hope even for the near hopeless. Nell is the victim of deplorable environment and deplorable percentage. All the squalid vices of sinful humanity attack her; but in the end, Salvationism triumphs and the girl is saved and made whole. Drink and misconduct at its through the offering, which also takes us to goal, and introduced us to a picturesque variety of crooks of all degrees and kinds. But, as we have said, the noble Army gets Nell in the end. Well produced and acted; with a strong supporting cast, "Salvation Nell" will prove a very popular offering. "Salvation Nell" will be shown at the Twin theatre on Wednesday and Thursday.

FAMOUS SPEEDER IN MOTORCYCLE ACCIDENT

Wendell Gloystein Plunges Over Embankment—Water Prevented Injury.

Dashing over an embankment 12 feet high while speeding on his motorcycle Sunday afternoon, Wendell Gloystein was saved from death or serious injury by falling into four feet of water instead of landing on the nearby jagged rocks. His motorcycle was a total wreck. Mr. Gloystein was one of a party of 12 that went on eight motorcycles to the lower Salmon power dam Sunday. He is famed in this and adjoining states for his daring feats on a motorcycle. His injuries were comparatively slight and consisted in a severe jolting up and some bruises. The accident took place on the grade four miles this side of Owsley's ferry. Dr. Baker came along, and his car just after Mr. Gloystein and was fished out and brought him back to the city.

The original intention was to go to the ice caves and organize a motorcycle club. The party started late, and finding that owing to the late spring, ice had not yet been frozen in the caves, the party went to the Salmon power dam and had dinner at the hotel in Hagerman. As they were late starting they were unable to organize. The peculiar phenomenon, namely the freeing of the ice caves only in hot weather is considered one of the marvels of the Twin Falls tract.

Impossible To Get So Much Motor Car Value For The Money

WE FIND this is the attitude of many people who come into our salesroom—before they know anything about the Maxwell.

Not until the Maxwell is shown and demonstrated to them—until they sit in it and examine the finish—until they ride in it—or perhaps not until they drive it themselves, do they realize what a tremendous value is offered in the Maxwell car.

It is not unusual that Maxwell value should not be known to everyone, because it is uncommon to find such a car for a good margin more than the Maxwell price.

The Maxwell stands absolutely alone in a highly competitive field, for the amount of value it offers for the price.

Appearance—The lines of the Maxwell are decidedly attractive. There is no break in the contour from the radiator to the back of the car. The fenders are gracefully shaped. All metal parts are enameled or nickel-plated. The upholstery is deep and well-finished. From any angle it is a car that the owner can be proud of.

Motor—The engine in the Maxwell car is not equalled by any other four-cylinder engine of its size. And we know of larger and more expensive cars that have less able power plants. The Maxwell engine carries its load through mud and sand or over the steepest grades without a falter.

Quality—The materials in the Maxwell car are the best that can be bought and the workmanship that turns them into finished parts is no less excellent. It is only the large production of the Maxwell factories that makes it possible to put such quality of materials and workmanship into a car selling at the Maxwell price.

Economy—With its other attractive features, the Maxwell is a most economical car to own. Owners get 22 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline, and 8,000 to 12,000 miles per set of tires. And the car is so durably built that repair expense is negligible.

We are sure you want a car such as we have described the Maxwell to be. If you will give us a few minutes of your time we are sure we can convince you that the Maxwell Car is an exceptional value. Come in today.
