Hoshaw murder case comes to close, driver gets 10-25 years behind bars

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

The 17-bullet slaying of Leland Joe Hoshaw was an execution, a Twin Falls judge said Tuesday, before sending two men to prison for decades.

Hoshaw was brutally gunned down in November 2007 at his Twin Falls home on Washington Street by his girlfriend's ex-boyfriend, Dana Dade.

Dade was sent to prison Tuesday for 30 years to life, after pleading guilty to first-degree murder.

"I'm eternally sorry for my actions and do take responsibility for them," said Dade during his hearing.

Obama sworn in as 44th president, urges a new era of responsibility

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

Before a jubilant crowd of more than a million, Barack Hussein Obama claimed his place in history as America's first black president, summoning a dispirited nation to unite in hope against the "gathering clouds and raging storms" of war and economic woe.

On an extraordinary day in the life of America, people of all colors and ages waited for hours Tuesday in frigid temperatures to witness a young black man with a foreign-sounding name take command of a nation founded by slaveholders. It was a scene watched in fascination by many millions — perhaps billions — around the world.

"We gather because we have chosen hope over fear, unity of purpose over conflict and discord," the nation's 44th president said.

Obama's challenges clear, remedies not

WASHINGTON — After the familiar salutation to "my fellow citizens" and a polite thank-you to the man he replaced, President Barack Obama got right to the point.

News analysis

"That we are in the midst of crisis is now well understood," he said.

It was an inaugural address that laid out his economic challenges with cold-eyed realism. But his remediates — equal parts hope and policy agenda — face a slew of political and practical hurdles. And he offered no specifics to back up his promise to improve America's standing in the world and end a war that he opposed.

Tax commission asks for fine for dyed-diesel violators

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho State Tax Commission proposed legislation Tuesday that would strengthen the penalty against violators of dyed diesel fuel laws, including assessing a $1,000 fine and making it a civil penalty.

Tax commission officials said their proposal stems from a growing number of instances of the non-taxable diesel fuel being misused across the state's highways. In Idaho, non-taxable diesel fuel may only be used in off-road or unlicensed vehicles, such as tractors. It's colored to distinguish it from the more commonly-used taxed diesel.

"There has been non-taxed fuel in vehicles used on the highway. That is illegal," Ted

Dade

Dade likely has below average intelligence, said lawyers on both sides of the case.

"I apologize to each and every one of you," Dade told Hoshaw's family seated in the courtroom.

During his hearing, Dade calmly glanced up at a projector screen illuminating pictures of Hoshaw's lifeless body, battered by bullet wounds.

Hoshaw's brother, Donny Wageman, told Dade he doesn't forgive him.

"The one you have to ask forgiveness from is your maker," Wageman said. "You understand that?"

Quickly, Dade replied: "Yes sir."

Another man was also sentenced Tuesday in the murder.

John Bond, an intravenous meth user, drove Dade to shoot Hoshaw and pleaded guilty to second-degree murder. He'll be locked up for 10 to 25 years.

"Not only did I do nothing right," said Bond at his hearing Tuesday, "I did everything wrong."

After Dade killed Hoshaw Bond asked him if he felt better. Dade replied that he did and said "I just haven't done it that sloppy before," Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb said at the hearing.

Authorities don't have evidence, though, that Dade has murdered before, said Loeb.

Loeb said the murder was senseless.

And guilt in the case was obvious, said 5th District Court Judge Randy Stoker.

"This was not a killing, this was an execution," Stoker said.

A third man was previously sentenced in the case. Jeremy Clayton Johnston rode in the backseat of the car and handled a rifle used in the killing.

He cleared court in August, when he was sent to prison for seven to 20 years.

In the end, Loeb said he was satisfied.

"At (Dade's) earliest he'll be 74 when he's first eligible for parole, and I think his chances of ever getting out are pretty slim, and that's appropriate," he said.

In their plea agreements, Dade and Bond waived their right to appeal.

Spangler, a deputy attorney general who represents the tax commission, told House members. "There are a lot of people who have contacted the tax commission who are just aware this is taking place."

But the legislation will likely face criticism should it receive a hearing at the House Transportation Committee to which it was deferred. Both Democrats and Republicans questioned the legality and appropriateness of a separate proposed $1,000 fine to motorists who refuse to allow an inspection of a vehicle.

Democratic House Assistant Minority Leader James Ruchti, D-Pocatello, an attorney, and House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, both expressed concern about search and seizure laws when vehicles are inspected.

Others were concerned about whether the proposed fine was too much. Currently, violations are punishable by a misdemeanor, Spangler said.

"Have you noticed a rampant abuse in this area?" asked Rep. Lenore Barrett, R-Challis. "One-thousand dollars is a pretty stiff fine."

The Internal Revenue Service oversees the matter on a federal level, but many states have their own laws to deter violations, Spangler said. House tax committee chairman Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot, said he estimated the IRS fines are as much as $10,000.

Spangler said the intention is not to raise revenue — about $100,000 would go to the Idaho Transportation Department — but rather to deter people from breaking the law. He said motorists would be pulled over and inspected only when there was sufficient "evidence" — not in spot checks.

In related news, the commission also introduced a bill that would strike a requirement for non-commercial producers of less than 5,000 gallons of biodiesel fuel per year to obtain licensing or pay a 1-cent per-gallon transfer fee.

Dan John, the commission's tax policy manager, said the legislation would relieve the producers of some menial paper work and combined annual costs of typically no more than $60. He said most biodiesel producers don't produce 5,000 gallons.

"This is for the guys who pick up the grease from McDonald's," John said after the meeting.

Gooding prosecutor dismisses theft case

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

A man who was accused of stealing a slain man's car was let off the hook on Tuesday in Gooding County.

The felony grand theft case against Jesus Valencia-Bolanos was supposed to go to trial today.

The hearing was called off, though, after Gooding County Prosecutor Calvin Campbell dismissed his charge Tuesday against Bolanos without prejudice.

"The prosecuting attorney wanted to re-evaluate the charges that were currently filed against Jesus," said Gina Mulder, a spokeswoman for Campbell's office.

A vehicle connected to the theft charge belonged to a man authorities say was killed more than a year ago.

A hunter found Gustavo Flores' body in a field, shot in the back of the neck.

Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough has said he knows who killed Flores but needs more evidence to prove his theory.

Early on, authorities named Bolanos and another man, Carlos Alberto Villanueva-Martinez Jr., as suspects in the homicide.

Gough has recently said the men pointed fingers at each other, complicating the case.

A jury already convicted Martinez on a grand theft charge. He's set to be sentenced in February.

Meanwhile, Bolanos is being held on a $50,000 bond as a material witness in connection to Martinez's case, said Mulder.

"It keeps him in the country so border patrol can't deport him," said Mulder. "We want to make sure he's around for any upcoming court proceedings."

Campbell hasn't decided if he'll file any other charges in connection to the case, said Mulder.

The theft charge could potentially be refilled against Bolanos, said Mulder.

Authorities say Flores' death is still under investigation.

Naerebout spent Tuesday morning with her three daughters, age 3 to 12 years, huddled in front of the television watching history unfold.

Party member Kevin Dane, of Twin Falls, said he was energized early in the campaigning, when nearly 1,000 people came out for last January's caucus. Obama's message of change resonated with Dane, who said he is grateful to see the tides change.

"This is a great day for America ... I thought I would never see the day a black man would be elected president," Dane said.

"This day ... is vindication," Leuze said.

CLARIFICATION

An article in Tuesday's Agribusiness section did not fully describe the effects of hedging commodities.

The objective of hedging is to lock in a profit when the futures market triggers a satisfactory return. This process eliminates the hedger's participation in the market lows, but also tends to eliminate extreme market highs.

Don't ask me Steve Crump

Brother, can you spare a Ding Dong?

Things are tough out there, but it's not a full-blown recession yet — at least not in the Magic Valley. How do I know this? Because the Hard Times Staples aren't out-selling the good stuff.

I did an informal survey of some of the folks who stock shelves in local supermarkets last week. They told me that shoppers are still buying food such as fresh fruit, tomatoes and avocados out of season, sliced meats from the deli — all relative luxuries.

Demand is up for the Hard Times Staples too, but sales of these items don't dominate yet. Still, that could change. Here are some warnings signs:

- Bologna — the poor man's sliced turkey. Bologna is cheap and lasts forever, and if you buy the kind with pimentos you can consider it a vegetable, too. Besides, it's a natural fit with ...

- ... Sliced Wonder Bread. White, of course. There's no place for fiber in lean times.

- Velveeta. I don't know what else to say about this legendary "processed cheese product."

- SPAM. It's hard to get the straight scoop about SPAM. Local grocers say they're selling more of the stuff, but do you know anyone who actually eats it?

- Tapioca. Flavorless, colorless, odorless and nearly protein free. The perfect dessert for lean times.

- Folger's coffee. A year ago, Kraft Foods — which makes Maxwell House coffee — announced that it would no longer use robusta, the muscatel of coffee beans, in its products. Folger's, Maxwell House's chief rival in the cheap-coffee market, still does.

- Junket. This dairy-based dessert is made with sweetened milk and rennet, the digestive enzyme which curdles milk. Junket is commonly made with a prepackaged mix of rennet and sweetener from a company known as Junket (now Redco Foods of Little Falls, N.Y.).

- Farina — the world's cheapest hot cereal. Farina usually refers to Cream of Wheat made from soft wheat. Wheat farina is a carbohydrate-rich food, often cooked in boiling water and served warm for breakfast, or cooked with milk and made into semolina pudding. Yum.

- Welch's grape jelly. Unless you're collecting Flintstones glasses, this is the best reason yet to eat dry toast.

- Shredded wheat. Kraft persists in our national obsession of serving up small bales of hay for breakfast.

- Dinty Moore Beef Stew.

A single serving contains 53 percent of the recommended daily allowance for fat. And you can get it in a 42-ounce can.

- Tab. The Coca-Cola company's 45-year-old testament to carbonated bad taste. Still contains saccharin, by the way, which can cause bladder cancer.

- Ding Dongs. I really can't say it better than IBC's publicity Web site: "Ding Dongs are enrobed with chocolate coating, with rich and majestic creme filling, you can't help but feel like royalty when you bite into one. In fact, when they were first introduced, they were actually called King Dons in some parts of the country ..."

"The name Ding Dong came from the chiming bells used in Hostess' first television commercials and you'll be singing a happy tune every time you polish off a package. Nibble them slowly, like a king or queen, and savor the creamy goodness of every morsel, or bite right into that creamy center and get a mouthful of chocolate goodness ..."

- SpaghettiOs — canned spaghetti that consists of small, circular pasta shapes, suspended in cheese and tomato sauce. Besides the plain (pasta and sauce only) version, other varieties of SpaghettiOs include miniature meatballs or franks (processed meat that resembles slices of hot dogs).

Clearly, happy days are here again.

Twin Falls County considers new fees

Money would cover clinic costs, change building-fee system

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County residents have a chance Monday to weigh in on several new fees for county services, including building projects and drug treatment.

The board of county commissioners will hold a public hearing on deposits for building projects and charges for services through the new Treatment and Recovery Clinic on Gooding Street. Not all of the fees necessarily represent new costs for users. But if approved, all of them would be new charges.

The clinic fees — for everything from therapy and drug tests to life skills education classes — would be just for adult state-paid services and reflect current private-pay fees charged to teenagers and adults, said Jaci Urie, the clinic's executive director. The county has provided services to teens for several years, and is licensed for state funds for them. But with the completion of the new county service center that houses the clinic and the Status Offenders program, she said, officials are working to acquire a license to accept state funding for adults.

Urie wasn't sure Tuesday what her customers have thought of her fees — most of the teens coming through have actually been fully covered by state funds, she said. The clinic does offer a sliding scale for private-payers with lower incomes.

"This is going to be new to us," she said.

The additional state licensing is one of the last things needed for the fledgling center, and would allow the clinic to serve adults going through DUI or drug court. It's an important role, she said, and one officials are working to draw attention to, as well as the rest of the service center's offerings.

"The goal is to ... reduce the re-entry of that revolving door from treatment to jail to nontreatment," she said.

The building permit and review fees would be non-refundable deposits similar to what the city of Twin Falls requires, said Planning and Zoning Administrator Rick Dunn. They're largely intended to put a halt to people who have their building plans reviewed by county staff, but come back later and say they've decided to stop their project.

That wastes county time and money, he said.

"There's no sense in the citizens of Twin Falls (County) funding someone who doesn't do the work," Dunn said.

Single-family homes would require a deposit of $250, additions such as garages $100 and commercial projects 65 percent of the building permit fee. For projects that proceed on to the construction stage, the fees would help pay for the permit later on. For those that don't, the county would keep the money.

Along with residential and commercial projects, the fees would also apply to wind turbines 50 feet tall or less — a $540 deposit each.

That's for consistency, Dunn said, and reflects a growing segment of county construction projects.

The hearing is planned for 10 a.m. in the commission chambers of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone St. N.

T.F. County selects pest board

Times-News

A pest abatement district created by voters last fall now has its board of directors.

Twin Falls County commissioners have appointed five county residents to run the abatement district, which is funded with nearly $442,000 from a tax increase on the November ballot.

Commissioners approved the new board members last week after issuing a call for applicants in November. The board includes Theresa Strolberg of Buhl, Greg Garatea of Murtaugh and Tony Brand, Clif Amundsen and John Snelling of Twin Falls.

Commissioners had originally hoped to get one board member from each of five regions of the county, but were unable to drum up enough interest, Commissioner George Urie said.

"We're trying, but most of (the applicants) were from Twin," he said.

The commissioners met with the new board Monday afternoon to start setting up the district. They previously said their goal is to get it fully set up by April.

Nuke plant hearing date pushed back

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

A public hearing on a proposed nuclear plant in Elmore County has been delayed to April 22, county staff confirmed Tuesday.

County commissioners will consider a requested rezoning of nearly 1,400 acres near Mountain Home for a nuclear power plant. Its developer, Alternate Energy Holdings Inc., requested the delay to ensure company CEO Don Gillispie will be able to attend the hearing, spokesman Martin Johncox said. Gillispie is focusing on wooing investors for the project during the next couple of months, Johncox said.

The hearing was previously set for Feb. 11. The county's Planning and Zoning Commission voted Nov. 5 to recommend the county commissioners not approve the rezoning, citing conflicts with the county's comprehensive plan.

Gillispie was unable to attend four nights of P&Z hearings in October and November, but "will certainly make every effort" to be at the county commission one, Johncox said. Finding investors is a huge priority right now, he said, but still believed doable in a tough economy.

The plant's opponents, including the Snake River Alliance, seized on to Gillispie's previous absences as a sign that he's not dedicated to the project. But Johncox argued that the CEO will face criticism no matter what happens.

"If he makes it, they'll exorcise him for showing his face," Johncox said. "If he doesn't make it, they'll exorcise him for not showing his face."

AEHI officials have argued against the P&Z's reasoning since its vote. In a Thursday press release, Gillispie was quoted as telling Mountain Home city officials that the area zoned for heavy industrial development is unsuitable for a nuclear plant, and that the comprehensive plan did not foresee a nuclear plant.

AEHI plans to submit a license application for the plant to federal authorities in 2010.

T.F. police cruiser crashed Tuesday

Times-News

A new Twin Falls Police cruiser collided with another vehicle on Tuesday morning at the intersection of Shoshone Street and Second Avenue West, said Patrol Sgt. Chuck Garner.

There were no injuries, but both vehicles were towed, Garner said.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office is investigating.

After the collision, the officer who was driving the 2008 Dodge Charger went back to work, Garner said. "Per our protocol we have another agency investigate."

The police officer was going to a domestic disturbance at about 11 a.m., said Garner.

The officer's name may be released by the sheriff's office, Garner said.

A spokesperson for the sheriff's office didn't immediately return a call for comment.

T.F. Council OKs plan to rename LDS Softball Complex

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council approved on Tuesday plans to rename the softball complex that the city purchased from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints last year.

The council also agreed to continue prohibiting smoking and alcohol at the facility. Officials heard a presentation from Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer that included a list of improvements at the complex for the next several years that will cost an estimated $680,000.

The improvements include replacing restrooms, new or upgraded lighting, parking lot reconstruction, scoreboards, and playground equipment.

"We're not going to be asking for all of this in one year," Bowyer said.

The complex is located south of Highland Park near the intersection of Park Avenue and Lois Street.

City officials did not approve those plans, but council members did formally recognize the development plan's improvements in their vote to rename the facility and the regulations.

As the planning progresses, the council will vote on budget requests for the various improvements.

City officials won't be the ones brainstorming for a new name for the facility. Instead, each class at nearby Oregon Trail Elementary School will submit a name.

The Parks and Recreation Commission will pick the top three names, and from there, the city council will select one name. As an incentive for the students, the winning class will receive a pizza party.

The city had leased the softball complex from the church starting in 1995 and finalized an agreement to own the property in November.

Inaugural prayers reach out to broader audience

By Rachel Zoll
Associated Press writer

The clergy were Protestant, and so was the new head of state.

But the inauguration Tuesday of President Barack Obama aimed for a much broader audience: an increasingly diverse America, where people want their beliefs acknowledged in the nation's most important ceremony.

In his address, Obama referred to God and Scripture, saying, "the time has come to set aside childish things," from 1 Corinthians.

But he also reached out to American secularists, calling the United States, "a nation of Christians and Muslims, Jews and Hindus — and nonbelievers." The Center for Inquiry and the Council for Secular Humanism, based in Amherst, N.Y., called recognition in the inaugural address "truly historic and remarkable."

Evangelical pastor Rick Warren, whose participation drew criticism from liberals and gay rights groups, directly invoked Jesus as expected in his invocation, but did so personally.

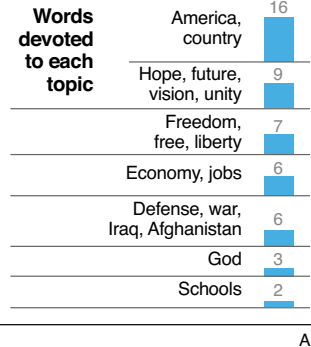

"I humbly ask this in the name of the one who changed my life," he prayed.

He also quoted from the most important prayer in Judaism, the Sh'ma, when he said, "Hear O Israel, the Lord is our God. The Lord is One," and he called God "the compassionate and merciful one," a phrase from Muslim devotion.

"His was as inclusive a prayer as an evangelical can give," said Richard Mouw, president of Fuller Theological Seminary, a leading evangelical school in Pasadena, Calif.

Address stressed a unified vision

America, hope and freedom were among the most mentioned topics during President Barack Obama's inaugural address.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, a United Methodist considered the dean of the civil rights movement, focused on poverty and social justice.

"Lord, on the complex arena of human relations, help us to make choices on the side of love, not hate. On the side of inclusion, not exclusion. Tolerance, not intolerance," he said.

He called the stage where Obama took his oath "this mountaintop," a reference to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s final speech. Lowery also quoted from the song known historically as "The Negro National Anthem."

"God of our weary years, God of our silent tears," he said, at the start of his benediction.

Prayers at inaugural ceremonies generally draw little attention, but this year was different. Obama spoke of his faith openly during the election, trying to change the image of the Democratic Party as hostile to religious voters. He has also welcomed nonbelievers, who tend to vote Democratic, in his speeches and public appearances since the earliest days of his campaign.

His supporters had been deeply upset by the prominence of the Christian right during the administration of President George W. Bush, and they watched to see what religious signals Obama would send at his swearing-in.

Warren is a Southern Baptist who wants to broaden the evangelical agenda to include environmental protection, fighting poverty and ending AIDS. He also backed Proposition 8, which banned gay marriage in his home state of California.

Gay rights advocates and liberals were outraged that Obama had given Warren a place of honor at the ceremony.

Roberts, Obama stumble on oath

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Chief Justice John Roberts and President Barack Obama stumbled slightly over wording of the presidential oath of office on Tuesday, providing a brief, awkward moment in an otherwise smooth inauguration ceremony.

Initially, Obama interrupted Roberts midway through the opening line, in which the president repeats his name and solemnly swears.

Next in the oath, which is enshrined in the Constitution, is the phrase "... that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States." But Roberts rearranged the order of the words, not saying "faithfully" until after "president of the United States."

That appeared to throw Obama off. He stopped abruptly at the word "execute."

Recognizing something was off, Roberts then repeated the phrase, putting "faithfully" in the right place but without repeating "execute."

Obama then repeated Roberts' original, incorrect version: "... the office of president of the United States faithfully."

Jerome students get a presidential education

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

It's an event that takes place only once during a student's four years of high school.

For Jerome High School students, the presidential inauguration became part of their government class on Tuesday. The students took a break from textbooks, focusing their attention instead on the inauguration events that unfolded on a television screen in the class.

That doesn't mean they took a break from learning, though.

"They can kind of see history in the making," said their teacher, Terry Waitley.

Students said they liked the change of pace in the classroom. They also agreed with their teacher that the event was historic.

"I started crying," said Jeannie Gallup, a senior at the school. "We're actually changing and getting over the racism and stuff in America."

At first, seeing the inauguration was somewhat boring, but became interesting when Obama appeared, Gallup said.

"I think he has a lot of changes for us, and that's nice," she said.

Hailie Kemp and Letecia Storey, both seniors, appreciated the opportunity.

"It's interesting because I've never seen it before," Kemp said. "We're learning about the government around us. We're not studying and doing book work."

Storey said she liked seeing the former presidents together all at one time.

Waitley also talked about the event with students in an informal discussion, pointing out that only 44 people can claim the title of president.

"It's the hardest job in the world," he said, adding that presidents often turn to former presidents for advice.

At Jerome Middle School, sixth-grade students learned about the inauguration and wrote essays about what they would do if they became president. Some answers resembled those of grownup political candidates: lowering taxes and gas prices.

T.F. youth at inauguration

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Wayne Jeffers, a ninth-grader from Robert Stuart Junior High School in Twin Falls, didn't settle for watching the inauguration of Barack Obama on television from Idaho.

He traveled to Washington, D.C., to see the event himself and attend the Presidential Youth Inaugural Conference, a national program for students.

In a telephone interview on Tuesday, Jeffers, 14, said that the inauguration was crowded but fun.

"There were so many people," he said. "Everybody was within inches of each other. Just trying to get around was difficult." Because of the large crowds and the distance he was from the inauguration, Jeffers watched the inauguration on a large screen. But that didn't diminish the enthusiasm of the crowd. "It was really cool," Jeffers said. "I liked how everybody there was so excited about what was happening."

As for the outgoing president, George W. Bush, Jeffers said the crowd wasn't as receptive, adding that he thought it was rude. "When they said his name and introduced him, half the world was booing at him," Jeffers said.

They also talked about concepts that came up in Obama's speech like citizenship, segregation and the Civil War, said teacher Margaret King.

"We think it's a great opportunity," she said.

Lourdes Vera, a senior at Jerome High School, said that it's important to remember what you're doing on Inauguration Day this time around, pointing out that Obama is the first African-American president. Years from now, grandchildren might ask their grandparents what they were doing when Obama became president, she said.

"It was pretty cool because you usually don't take the time to do this in school," she said.

Bush tells cheering Texans 'it is good to be home'

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Waving cardboard red, white and blue "W"s, thousands welcomed George W. Bush and his wife on Tuesday to their post-presidential home in Texas.

"The presidency was a joyous experience, but as great as it was, nothing compares with Texas at sunset," Bush said to cheers from the crowd of about 25,000 as former first lady Laura Bush stood at his side. "Tonight I have the privilege of saying six words that I have been waiting to say for a while — it is good to be home."

In the hours leading up to his return, excerpts of some of Bush's speeches played on a large TV screen, including remarks he made to Congress shortly after the terrorist attacks in 2001.

One little boy waved a sign that read, "President Bush, thank you for keeping me safe" in multicolored lettering.

"It's a special day, but it's a sad day," said Dudley Winn, a cotton farmer who drove two hours from Lubbock to greet Bush on his first stop after leaving office. "He did the job we asked him to do. He kept our values safe."

As the crowd looked on, the jet carrying the Bushes flew over downtown, then landed at the airport in Midland shortly before 5 p.m.

Obama

He had a message for the world: "We are ready to lead once more."

Meaning that he, the young African-American, was ready to lead.

Obama didn't forget he was black.

"This is the meaning of our liberty and our creed," he said, "why men and women and children of every race and every faith can join in celebration across this magnificent Mall, and why a man whose father less than 60 years ago might not have been served at a local restaurant can now stand before you to take a most sacred oath."

No one blinked. That was that.

The presidency passed to black Democrat Obama from white Republican George W. Bush at the stroke of noon, marking one of democracy's greatest gifts: the peaceful transfer of power.

It was a stark transfer all the same. In one of the new administration's first acts, Obama ordered federal agencies to halt all pending regulations until further review — this after Bush's final weeks raised heated debate over rushing new rules into effect on the way out the door.

And even though new White House aides struggled to find offices and work intercoms, an overhauled www.whitehouse.gov Web site was running under Obama's banner within minutes of his swearing-in. "Change has come to America," he declared.

Obama plunges into his new job in earnest today after capping inaugural festivities at a national prayer service in the morning, meeting with his economic team and Iraq advisers and welcoming a stream of public visitors into the White House while Congress gives his economic revival plan a going-over and takes up the nomination of Hillary Rodham Clinton to be secretary of state. Her confirmation has been held up for now by Republican concern over the foundation fundraising of her husband, the former president.

The new president had been buoyant and relaxed through the three days of pre-inaugural festivities. But he seemed somber as he stood on the Capitol steps, placed his left hand on the Bible used by Abraham Lincoln and repeated the inaugural oath "to preserve, protect and defend" a Constitution that originally defined blacks as three-fifths of a person. A deafening cheer went up.

"What is required of us now is a new era of responsibility — a recognition, on the part of every American, that we have duties to ourselves, our nation, and the world, duties that we do not grudgingly accept but rather seize gladly," Obama said. "This is the price and the promise of citizenship."

It was a day of high spirits — jarred by sudden concern about the health of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. The legendary Democrat, suffering from brain cancer, and was rushed from a Capitol luncheon in Obama's honor to a hospital. "My prayers are with him and his family," Obama said. Later, fellow Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts said Kennedy was laughing and joking at the hospital and itching to get back to work.

On the inaugural parade route, Obama and his wife, Michelle, climbed out of the heavily armored presidential limousine and walked a few blocks along famed Pennsylvania Avenue, waving to adoring crowds under the watchful eyes of security agents.

Obama wove a thread of personal responsibility and accountability through his inaugural address, an 18-minute sermon on civic duty. A liberal Democrat proposing billions of dollars in new spending, Obama nonetheless spoke of the limits of government.

"It is the kindness to take in a stranger when the levees break, the selflessness of workers who would rather cut their hours than see a friend lose their job which sees us through our darkest hours," he said. "It is the firefighter's courage to storm a stairway filled with smoke, but also a parent's willingness to nurture a child, that finally decides our fate."

Obama's 10-year-old daughter, Malia, aimed a camera at her father as he spoke. Michelle leaned onto the edge of her seat, body tensed and brow knitted.

"Starting today, we must pick ourselves up, dust ourselves off and begin again the work of remaking America," Obama said.

He placed blame for the recent economic collapse not just on greed and irresponsibility "on the part of some" but also on the inability or unwillingness of everyone to move the country beyond an industrial-based economy — what he called "our collective failure to make hard choices and prepare the nation for a new age." With that, the 47-year-old former Illinois senator transformed himself — from a candidate claiming his campaign is about the voters to a president promising to put the nation in the people's hands.

Unlike most predecessors, Obama takes office with his agenda in many ways set for him.

An economy that seems more foreboding than at any inauguration since Franklin D. Roosevelt took office in 1933, with some 11 million people now out of work, and trillions of dollars of stock market investments lost. Two wars, one in Iraq that most of the country has long wanted over and another in Afghanistan that is spiraling downward and needs an overhaul. The continuing fear that another calamitous terrorist attack is not out of the question.

More inspirational than prescriptive, Obama's inaugural address only glancingly mentioned a series of promises from his campaign: to get the U.S. out of Iraq, stabilize Afghanistan, create jobs, "restore science to its rightful place," boost the use of alternative energy, address climate change, transform schools, manage government spending wisely and oversee a more bipartisan, less-divisive approach to policy-making.

John (Jack) Fred Hubsmith

Jack was born Nov. 22, 1928, and passed away Monday, Jan. 19, 2009, with his family by his side.

Jack was born to Fred and Irene (Greenfell) Hubsmith in his grandparents' Bellevue home. He was the third child of six born to Fred and Irene. Due to his mother's ill health at the time of his birth, she could not nurse him, so he was fed beef broth and juices in his infancy. On Nov. 4, 1950, he married Faye Deeds at her parents' Richfield home. Ten days after their marriage, Jack honored the nation's call to military service, serving in the Army for two years. He was stationed in Fort Lewis, Wash., for one year until his unit shipped out to Anchorage, Alaska. At the time, he did not know where he would end up. As it turned out, every other man was assigned to the Army base in Fairbanks, Alaska, while the rest of the unit remained on the ship and was sent to the Korean Conflict. Several of Jack's friends did not return. Jack spent his year at Fairbanks in the 78th Tank Division.

In 1952, he returned to Richfield, where they farmed until 2005. He was proud of his crops, his cattle and the farms he bought, which he always made better with the hard teamwork of the entire family. But most of all, he was proud of and loved his family. You could always find him teasing, wrestling or playing games with his kids and grandkids. In 2005, Jack and Faye retired to Twin Falls. In retirement, they enjoyed fishing and camping with friends and family. Jack always had a thing for a nice pickup. He always showed his pride by keeping them cleaned and polished.

Jack was a six-year survivor of pancreatic cancer. He fought with determination, a positive attitude, his sense of humor and a smile that was so very special to all who knew him. He truly is and always will be an inspiration to his family, friends, doctors and nurses. The family would like to thank Dr. Richard Miranda and the nurses at St. Luke's Cancer Center and Hospice Visions. Our special thanks to Vickie, Rhonda and Sue.

He is survived by his loving, devoted wife and best friend of 58 years, Luella Faye (Deeds), currently of Twin Falls and formerly of Richfield; four children, Nicholas Hubsmith of San Diego, Calif., Marie (John) Lickley of Jerome, Rodney (Kaysi) Hubsmith of Richfield and Connie (Tracy) Sorenson of Shoshone; seven grandchildren, Clay and Dustin (Kim) Lickley, Sarah (Tony) Giannopolos, Morgan Hubsmith, Richard (Alex) Taylor, Courtney and Meghan Sorenson; and one great-grandchild, Alexis Taylor. Also surviving is a special niece, Cheryl (Ed) Stevens of Gooding, who lived with Jack and Faye in Richfield after her parents passed during her senior year. Jack is also survived by his sisters, Fern (Burl) Coats of Shoshone, Sharon (Jim) McGaughey of Castle Rock, Wash.; and brother, Earl (Vickie) Hubsmith of Moses Lake, Wash. He is preceded in death by his parents; sister, Marjorie Stevens; brother, Raymond Hubsmith; and first-born grandson, Coryell Lickley.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, Jan. 23, at the LDS Church in Richfield, with visitation starting at noon. ## Duane Rodney Bean RUPERT — Duane Rodney Bean, 58, of Rupert, lost a courageous, long-fought battle with cancer Saturday, Jan. 17, 2009.

Duane was born Jan. 10, 1951, in Burley, to Cleve and Myrtle Vibbert Bean. He lived in the Mini-Cassia area most of his life. He graduated from Minico High School in 1969. He started his family in 1971 with the first of four children, Jason, Julie, Breanne and Kevin. Duane was a field man and a truck driver most of his career. He was always involved with agriculture and had a passion for gardening. Whether it was advice on how to plant, grow or water whatever was in the garden, or how to harvest and can it properly — a trait he learned from his parents and passed on to his kids. He was always there to help and get it done right.

He was an avid sports fan and was quite a hunter and fisherman, teaching his kids to fish. He also loved playing pool and darts with his buddies. Most recently, Duane was employed at Valley Wide Co-op in Paul, where he leaves many close friends.

We appreciate the boys at Valley Wide who took loving care of Dad and looked after him during his illness, as well as his only sister, Marilyn, who devoted much of her time to Dad, especially these last two years. Thank you, Aunt Marilyn! Also, we would like to thank the nurses at Minidoka Memorial Hospital who took loving

Carl E. Osterhout

DECLO — Carl Edward Osterhout, 98, of Declo, returned to his Heavenly Father early Sunday morning, Jan. 18, 2009, at his home with his loved ones near his side.

Carl was the first baby boy born in the new town of Declo on Nov. 6, 1910, to Leon Carl and Katie LeNell Winn Osterhout. He was the oldest of eight brothers, Milton, Ray, Seymour, Kenneth, Winn, Owen, Devon and Welton.

Carl attended school in Declo and graduated in 1929 with a class of 13 students. As a young man, his greatest interest was sports. He went to college on two football scholarships and lettered at Albion State and the University of Idaho. Carl graduated with his Master of Education in 1941. He taught school and coached sports for 11 years at Worley, Potlatch, Castleford and was the superintendent of Acequia schools. His true love was farming! He said it was in his blood. Carl was a hard worker all of his life.

Carl met the love of his life, Sarah Hogge, and was married on Aug. 28, 1939, in the red brick home that they have lived in since 1942. In 1940, they were sealed in the Alberta Canada Temple. Carl and Sarah had three boys, Jerry Carl, Neal H. and Glen Paul.

Carl was an active member in the community serving on the County Agriculture Stabilization Committee for 14 years. He was also the president of the local Kiwanis Club. Carl was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He loved to serve and had a strong testimony of Jesus Christ. He served in the bishopric for 10 years. Afterward, he and Sarah served a mission together in the Tulsa, Okla., in 1978.

Carl and Sarah loved to travel with Ken and Ruth Allred. Their adventures took them from San Francisco to Washington, D.C. Above all, they loved camping and the great outdoors. Carl loved to hunt with his brothers and farm with his sons. Carl raised a garden all of his life and was known for his famous cantaloupes. His grandchildren were his world, and his great-grandchildren were the sparkle in his eyes.

Carl was preceded in death by his wife, Sarah, of 60 years in 2000; his sons, Jerry and Neal; his parents; and all of his brothers. He is survived by his son, Glen; five grandchildren, Lee Osterhout, Dalea (Scott) Altmann, Jennifer (Thayne) Schafer, Sarah Elizabeth (Zach) Warner and Sister Britney Osterhout serving in the Missouri St. Louis Mission; six great-grandchildren, Brailey and Jayde Osterhout, Nathaniel Hollins, Kailee Altmann, and Carl and Sally Schafer; and sisters-in-law, Ruth (Ken) Allred, Edith Osterhout, Betty Osterhout, Lillian Osterhout, and Melba Osterhout.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Jan. 23, at the Declo LDS Stake Center, 213 W. Main St., with Bishop Tim S. Darrington officiating. Burial will be in the Declo Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 22, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Friday at the church.

Auditors can't squeeze financial breakthrough out of ITD

The Audit isn't the answer to Idaho's highway maintenance problems. Gov. Butch Otter and many in the Legislature hoped the long-awaited examination of the books of the Idaho Transportation Department would free up a significant amount of money to put a dent in the state's $240 million annual highway maintenance shortfall.

The audit, which cost taxpayers $450,000, found a few tweaks in the way the state manages roads that could result in some savings, but not nearly enough.

A 2006 Idaho transportation forum identified a $200 million annual shortfall to meet the state's interstate, highway, local roads, airport and public transportation needs. Inflation has since upped that number to $240 million.

ITD's portion of that deficit is $137 million — the amount the agency needs to maintain and improve the 5,000 miles of interstate and highways for which it is responsible.

Otter is asking lawmakers to raise, over five years, gas taxes and vehicle license fees as part of a plan that will ultimately generate $174 million a year. But after that money is distributed to state and local agencies, the tax increases would leave ITD with about $100 million a year.

The audit released Monday said ITD could save $30.6 million in the first five years and about $6.6 million a year after that. The auditors said the agency's management needs work, calling it decentralized, reactive and lacking a long-term infrastructure management plan.

Auditors estimated that even with $137 million a year, ITD will fall $55 million short of its maintenance needs by 2013. They say the agency could save hundreds of millions of dollars by not delaying maintenance or repairs until a road or bridge becomes unusable.

So there are no shortcuts for Idaho's battered roads and bridges. The taxpayers, sooner or later, are on the hook to fix them.

In one form or another, that needs to start this year.

Our view: Turns out there's no alternative to the taxpayers picking up the tab to fix Idaho's battered roads. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

“Pick ourselves up ... and begin again”

The text of President Obama's inaugural address on Tuesday:

My fellow citizens: I stand here today humbled by the task before us, grateful for the trust you have bestowed, mindful of the sacrifices borne by our ancestors. I thank President Bush for his service to our nation, as well as the generosity and cooperation he has shown throughout this transition.

Forty-four Americans have now taken the presidential oath. The words have been spoken during rising tides of prosperity and the still waters of peace. Yet, every so often the oath is taken amidst gathering clouds and raging storms. At these moments, America has carried on not simply because of the skill or vision of those in high office, but because We the People have remained faithful to the ideals of our forbearers, and true to our founding documents.

So it has been. So it must be with this generation of Americans.

That we are in the midst of crisis is now well understood. Our nation is at war against a far-reaching network of violence and hatred. Our economy is badly weakened, a consequence of greed and irresponsibility on the part of some, but also our collective failure to make hard choices and prepare the nation for a new age. Homes have been lost; jobs shed; businesses shuttered. Our healthcare is too costly; our schools fail too many; and each day brings further evidence that the ways we use energy strengthen our adversaries and threaten our planet.

These are the indicators of crisis, subject to data and statistics. Less measurable but no less profound is a sapping of confidence across our land — a nagging fear that America's decline is inevitable, and that the next generation must lower its sights.

Today I say to you that the challenges we face are real. They are serious and they are many. They will not be met easily or in a short span of time. But know this, America — they will be met. On this day, we gather

... there are some who question the scale of our ambitions — who suggest that our system cannot tolerate too many big plans. Their memories are short.

because we have chosen hope over fear, unity of purpose over conflict and discord.

On this day, we come to proclaim an end to the petty grievances and false promises, the recriminations and worn out dogmas that for far too long have strangled our politics.

We remain a young nation, but in the words of Scripture, the time has come to set aside childish things. The time has come to reaffirm our enduring spirit; to choose our better history; to carry forward that precious gift, that noble idea, passed on from generation to generation: the God-given promise that all are equal, all are free, and all deserve a chance to pursue their full measure of happiness.

In reaffirming the greatness of our nation, we understand that greatness is never a given. It must be earned. Our journey has never been one of short cuts or settling for less. It has not been the path for the faint-hearted — for those who prefer leisure over work, or seek only the pleasures of riches and fame. Rather, it has been the risk-takers, the doers, the makers of things — some celebrated but more often men and women obscure in their labor, who have carried us up the long, rugged path toward prosperity and freedom.

For us, they packed up their few worldly possessions and traveled across oceans in search of a new life.

For us, they toiled in sweatshops and settled the West; endured the lash of the whip and plowed the hard earth.

For us, they fought and died, in places like Concord and Gettysburg; Normandy and Khe Sahn. Time and again these men and women struggled and sacrificed and worked till their hands were raw so that we might live a better life. They saw America as bigger than the sum of our individual ambitions, greater than all the differences of birth or wealth or faction.

This is the journey we continue today. We remain the most prosperous, powerful nation on earth. Our workers are no less productive than when this crisis began. Our minds are no less inventive, our goods and services no less needed than they were last week or last month or last year. Our capacity remains undiminished. But our time of standing pat, of protecting narrow interests and putting off unpleasant decisions — that time has surely passed. Starting today, we must pick ourselves up, dust ourselves off, and begin again the work of remaking America.

For everywhere we look, there is work to be done. The state of the economy calls for action, bold and swift, and we will act — not only to create new jobs, but to lay a new foundation for growth. We will build the roads and bridges, the electric grids and digital lines that feed our commerce and bind us together. We will restore science to its rightful place, and wield technology's wonders to raise healthcare's quality and lower its cost. We will harness the sun and the winds and the soil to fuel our cars and run our factories. And we will transform our schools and colleges and universities to meet the demands of a new age. All this we can do. And all this we will do.

Now, there are some who question the scale of our ambitions — who suggest that our system cannot tolerate too many big plans. Their memories are short. For they have forgotten what this country has already done; what free men and women can achieve when imagination is joined to common purpose, and necessity to courage.

What the cynics fail to understand is that the ground has shifted beneath them — that the stale political arguments that have consumed us for so long no longer apply. The question we ask today is not whether our government is too big or too small, but whether it helps families find jobs at a decent wage, care they can afford, a retirement that is dignified. Where the answer is yes, we intend to move forward. Where the answer is no, programs will end. And those of us who manage the public's dollars will be held to account — to spend wisely, reform bad habits, and do our business in the light of day — because only then can we restore the vital trust between a people and their government.

Nor is the question before us whether the market is a force for good or ill. Its power to generate wealth and expand freedom is unmatched, but this crisis has reminded us that without a watchful eye, the market can spin out of control — and that a nation cannot prosper long when it favors only the prosperous. The success of our economy has always depended not just on the size of our gross domestic product, but on the reach of our prosperity; on our ability to extend opportunity to every willing heart — not out of charity, but because it is the surest route to our common good.

As for our common defense, we reject as false the choice between our safety and our ideals. Our Founding Fathers, faced with perils we can scarcely imagine, drafted a charter to assure the rule of law and the rights of man, a charter expanded by the blood of generations. Those ideals still light the world, and we will not give them up for expedience's sake. And so to all other peoples and governments who are watching today, from the grandest capitals to the small village where my father was born: know that America is a friend of each nation and every man, woman, and child who seeks a future of peace and dignity, and that we are ready to lead once more.

Recall that earlier generations faced down fascism and communism not just with missiles and tanks, but with sturdy alliances and

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Many thanks from Christmas Council

Once again, we have quietly reflected on the chaos as well as the blessings of the holiday season. We of the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council have turned out the lights on another season of hard work and caring. We realize that without the help of generous people, we could not have helped the 550 families who needed assistance in 2008.

It is difficult to name names without leaving someone out, but perhaps some of the contributions could be listed. Thank you for the new and gently used bicycles that were delivered to our door. If you donated the thousands of cans of food or were one of the many who sorted that food, thank you. More than 400 little girls received dolls because someone donated them, dressed them or made a blanket to wrap them in. Many little boys enjoyed playing with the homemade blocks and cars which were crafted by loving hands. Many quilters in our area spent many hours stitching love and warmth into quilts to be used by others. Toys were carefully packed into packages for more than 1,000 children in our area.

Dec. 13 was a cold day. We had many people standing in the cold, but everyone was considerate of each other. Volunteers carried boxes to cars, and a family passed out hot chocolate they brought to donate. The best part was hearing thank you and Merry Christmas from grateful recipients.

This day could not have happened without all of you and your generosity. Our work begins again and this is where you come in. If you have donations you need to drop off, call Verlee Frost at 878-7940. If you would like to start a project, call Mary Young at 436-0241 or Linda Short at 436-0571.

Who maintains the road to the airport?

This was my first winter at the Magic Valley Regional Airport, so as a new kid on the block, I had a number of new experiences that the airport regulars and the people of Magic Valley take for granted.

One thing I'm sure I won't miss or likely forget is the drive to the airport, especially during Christmas 2008!

I was reminded the road to the airport has been a constant battle between the city of Twin Falls and the county of Twin Falls as to who keeps it maintained and plowed during adverse weather such as 2 feet of snow in one day and drift-causing winds after. However, I'm sure there's an excellent excuse that's used whenever this subject is brought up as to why the last road in the county to get any attention (or so it seems) during a snow storm happens to be the main road to the regional airport.

Sure, the stuff all melted away in two days, but it was a terror trip for most of us during that time, especially for the folks from Texas who'd never driven on this stuff. I was glad it wasn't a bus full of passengers from one of the diverted Hailey flights stuck in the roadside ditch! Remember, they can afford lawyers!

Think of what kind of message we're sending to the businesses we're trying to attract. Could it be something like, "Come to our valley, just don't leave the airport!"

I know it doesn't make a lot of sense, but what does anymore?

I'll miss the airport, but I'm sure not gonna miss the winter time drive to it!

Obama

enduring convictions. They understood that our power alone cannot protect us, nor does it entitle us to do as we please. Instead, they knew that our power grows through its prudent use; our security emanates from the justness of our cause, the force of our example, the tempering qualities of humility and restraint.

We are the keepers of this legacy. Guided by these principles once more, we can meet those new threats that demand even greater effort — even greater cooperation and understanding between nations. We will begin to responsibly leave Iraq to its people, and forge a hard-earned peace in Afghanistan. With old friends and former foes, we will work tirelessly to lessen the nuclear threat, and roll back the specter of a warming planet. We will not apologize for our way of life, nor will we waver in its defense, and for those who seek to advance their aims by inducing terror and slaughtering innocents, we say to you now that our spirit is stronger and cannot be broken; you cannot outlast us, and we will defeat you.

For we know that our patchwork heritage is a strength, not a weakness. We are a nation of Christians and Muslims, Jews and Hindus — and non-believers. We are shaped by every language and culture, drawn from every end of this earth; and because we have tasted the bitter swill of civil war and segregation, and emerged from that dark chapter stronger and more united, we cannot help but believe that the old hatreds shall someday pass; that the lines of tribe shall soon dissolve; that as the world grows smaller, our common humanity shall reveal itself; and that America must play its role in ushering in a new era of peace.

To the Muslim world, we seek a new way forward, based on mutual interest and mutual respect. To those leaders around the globe who seek to sow conflict, or blame their society's ills on the West — know that your people will judge you on what you can build, not what you destroy. To those who cling to power through corruption and deceit and the silencing of dissent, know that you are on the wrong side of history; but that we will extend a hand if you are willing to unclench your fist.

To the people of poor nations, we pledge to work alongside you to make your farms flourish and let clean waters flow; to nourish starved bodies and feed hungry minds. And to those nations like ours that enjoy relative plenty, we say we can no longer afford indifference to suffering outside our borders; nor can we consume the world's resources without regard to effect. For the world has changed, and we must change with it.

As we consider the road that unfolds before us, we remember with humble gratitude those brave Americans who, at this very hour, patrol far-off deserts and distant mountains. They have something to tell us today, just as the fallen heroes who lie in Arlington whisper through the ages. We honor them not only because they are guardians of our liberty, but because they embody the spirit of service; a willingness to find meaning in something greater than themselves. And yet, at this moment — a moment that will define a generation — it is precisely this spirit that must inhabit us all.

For as much as government can do and must do, it is ultimately the faith and determination of the American people upon which this nation relies. It is the kindness to take in a stranger when the levees break, the selflessness of workers who would rather cut their hours than see a friend lose their job which sees us through our darkest hours. It is the firefighter's courage to storm a stairway filled with smoke, but also a parent's willingness to nurture a child, that finally decides our fate.

Our challenges may be new. The instruments with which we meet them may be new. But those values upon which our success depends — hard work and honesty, courage and fair play, tolerance and curiosity, loyalty and patriotism — these things are old. These things are true. They have been the quiet force of progress throughout our history. What is demanded then is a return to these truths. What is required of us now is a new era of responsibility — a recognition, on the part of every American, that we have duties to ourselves, our nation, and the world, duties that we do not grudgingly accept but rather seize gladly, firm in the knowledge that there is nothing so satisfying to the spirit, so defining of our character, than giving our all to a difficult task.

This is the price and the promise of citizenship.

This is the source of our confidence — the knowledge that God calls on us to shape an uncertain destiny.

This is the meaning of our liberty and our creed — why men and women and children of every race and every faith can join in celebration across this magnificent mall, and why a man whose father less than 60 years ago might not have been served at a local restaurant can now stand before you to take a most sacred oath.

So let us mark this day with remembrance of who we are and how far we have traveled. In the year of America's birth, in the coldest of months, a small band of patriots huddled by dying campfires on the shores of an icy river. The capital was abandoned. The enemy was advancing. The snow was stained with blood. At a moment when the outcome of our Revolution was most in doubt, the father of our nation ordered these words be read to the people:

"Let it be told to the future world ... that in the depth of winter, when nothing but hope and virtue could survive ... that the city and the country, alarmed at one common danger, came forth to meet (it)."

America. In the face of our common dangers, in this winter of our hardship, let us remember these timeless words. With hope and virtue, let us brave once more the icy currents, and endure what storms may come. Let it be said by our children's children that when we were tested we refused to let this journey end, that we did not turn back nor did we falter; and with eyes fixed on the horizon and God's grace upon us, we carried forth that great gift of freedom and delivered it safely to future generations.

Truth Revealed About Anti-Aging Creams!

DEAR DONNA: I am a baby boomer and am noticing wrinkles around my mouth, lips and cheeks, which are making me look older than I am. I also have very dark circles under my eyes. I see so many ads with models and actresses for miracle creams. Do any really work?

And it's not expensive!

DEAR DONNA

In fact, eb5® is like having five creams in one jar: wrinkle cream, throat cream, firming cream, 24-hour moisturizer and makeup base - all in one! And for your puffy, dark-circled eyes, there's eb5® Eye Treatment to effectively relieve puffiness and reduce the appearance of dark circles while firming and moisturizing dry eye areas. It's perfect for the older woman with deep circles or the younger woman just beginning to notice symptoms of aging eyes. eb5® formulas are available in JCPenney Cosmetics departments. Hamas declares victory in rallies across Gaza

GAZA CITY — Waving green Islamic flags atop the ruins of Gaza, Hamas proclaimed victory in rallies attended by thousands of supporters Tuesday, saying it survived Israel's military onslaught despite the destruction and massive death toll suffered by Gazans.

Beyond its fiery words, however, Hamas offered no plans for rebuilding Gaza, which suffered some $2 billion in damage during three weeks of fighting. Gaza's borders with Israel and Egypt, largely sealed since the Islamic militants seized power 19 months ago, remain closed and are unlikely to open unless the militants relinquish some control.

Israel has also claimed victory, but neither side was the clear winner.

The fighting killed some 1,300 Gazans, the vast majority civilians, and thousands of Palestinian homes were destroyed. Israel emerged from the war with relatively few casualties — 13 dead, including 10 soldiers — but halted fire before reaching its objectives. No internationally backed truce deal is yet in place to prevent Hamas rocket fire on southern Israel or arms smuggling into Gaza.

Israel had withdrawn the bulk of its forces from Gaza by Tuesday evening, coinciding with the inauguration in Washington of Barack Obama as president. However, the cease-fire remained shaky. Israel's air force struck a Gaza mortar squad after it shelled Israel, the military said.

NEW YORK
Only a small recovery
likely for Madoff victims

NEW YORK — Investing a dollar and getting 10 cents back in return is a bad deal even in today's market. But recovering 10 cents on the dollar might be optimistic for investors who gave their cash to Bernard Madoff.

Moreover, they face a years-long process to get any money back as investigators search to find Madoff's assets. Dozens of lawsuits and the possibility the fraud was committed over decades makes the chance of recovery even more difficult.

Madoff has become one of the most vilified people in America since news broke Dec. 11 that he had confessed to running a giant Ponzi scheme, paying returns to certain investors out of the principal received from others. He's estimated to have duped investors out of as much as $50 billion.

Experts agree that the first of any recovery payments might be years in the future.

"It will probably take between one and three years," said Dana Basney, director of due diligence and forensic accounting services for CBIZ MHM, LLC in San Diego. It could take most of the upcoming year to trace Madoff's funds and accounts, he said.

Boats scour icy Hudson
for US Airways engine

NEW YORK — Authorities using sonar in the search for the missing engine from US Airways Flight 1549 detected something about the size of the massive aircraft part deep in the frigid, murky Hudson River on Tuesday, but divers ran out of daylight before they could locate the object.

Crews will resume their search today. Police have already located several pieces of debris from the flight, including 35 flotation seat cushions, 12 life jackets, 15 pieces of luggage, two brief cases, 11 purses, 15 suit jackets and shirts, four shoes, and two hats, according to NYPD spokesman Paul Browne.

The missing left engine, however, is the most coveted prize. Investigators will examine it along with the plane's attached right engine to better understand how the jet conked out Thursday after hitting a flock of birds. All 155 people survived the miracle crash landing on the river, and US Airways said Tuesday that not even a pet perished.

New York Police Department harbor officers working with a sonar expert from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration got a reading on an object 16 feet long and 8 feet wide in about 60 feet of water north of the Intrepid Sea, Air and Space Museum, near where the plane made its emergency landing. The engine is about the same size as the object picked up by sonar.

MICHIGAN
Mail-hoarding carriers
hurt post office's image

DETROIT — Some of those who are supposed to endure snow, rain and gloom of night to deliver the mail have resorted to hiding tons of it in garages, a self-storage unit and the dark of their basements.

Carriers from North Dakota to North Carolina have been hauled in recently for hoarding mail. Though the U.S. Postal Service says the offense is rare, it smacks at the agency's image.

"I heard a couple of people come in and say, 'Can I pick up my mail — or is it in storage?'" said Annette Koss, the postmaster in Howell, 50 miles northwest of Detroit. A former carrier there, Jill Hull, pleaded guilty Tuesday to deserting the mail, a misdemeanor.

The part-time, fill-in carrier had kept thousands of pieces of unopened mail, including 988 first-class letters, in a self-storage unit that managers opened in September after she failed to pay her bill. Some of the mail had postmarks from 2005.

"We just didn't understand it," Koss said. "It's such a stupid thing to do."

During a brief hearing in federal court in Detroit, Hull simply said, "I was unable to deliver all the mail." A postal investigator said in a court filing that Hull had intended to catch up with late payments and apparently keep the mail under lock and key until she died. No one on the rural route had complained about missing any mail.

IDAHO
Lobbyist's action prompts
calls for tougher laws

BOISE — A canceled campaign contribution from Idaho's most generous lobbying group has prompted calls from some lawmakers to toughen the state's bribery laws.

At the center of the debate is a report about a $500 contribution promised in October by the Idaho Association of Realtors to Joan Cloonan, a Garden City Republican who ran last fall for the state legislature.

The Idaho Statesman reported that the donation was promised shortly before the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality board voted for a rule on septic systems. The donation was withheld after Cloonan, a board member, voted for the rule, which was opposed by the realtors group.

Cloonan filed complaints with the Idaho secretary of state and attorney general,

NEED HELP WITH QUICKBOOKS®?
Call Teresa at 737-0087
TRAINING, SETUP & SUPPORT

contending John Eaton, the realtors' lobbyist, withdrew the donation because of her vote.

Cloonan is a Ph.D. chemist, lawyer and former environmental officer at the J.R. Simplot Co. She lost her legislative race in November to Democrat Grant Burgoyne.

During a break at the environmental quality board's Oct. 8 meeting, Cloonan says she was approached by Eaton, who told her he would give her a donation at a fundraiser hosted by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter later that day. Also at the meeting, Eaton testified against the septic system rule, saying the rule, if approved, would make it more expensive, and in some cases, impossible to build on lots already platted.

Cloonan voted for the rule, which passed 6-1.

EAT CHEAP

ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

Chow mein with sweet and sour pork • $6.50

Mandarin House: Chinese Buffet & Family Restaurant, 735 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Twin Falls

For me Chinese food is just one of those things: I can eat it any time of the year and, if it's done right, walk away happy.

Not that I'm an expert by any means. To be honest, I wouldn't be able to tell the difference between authentic Chinese food and Americanized versions. But I do know when my belly is pleased.

I walked away happy after eating a $6.50 lunch special at Mandarin House in Twin Falls.

Though the restaurant offers a buffet, visitors can also order from a menu. I took the No. 2 special, a hot and heaping chow mein with an equally hot serving of sweet and sour pork.

It was a little after noon when I walked in. A dozen or so tables were already filled with lunch patrons busily eating or raiding the buffet table. Just as I was seated at one of the booths, a pleasantly smiling waitress approached. She left me to look at the menu, but pointed out a listing of the 18 lunch specials before she did.

Once I ordered, she returned within 10 minutes, apologizing that it took so long. I chuckled.

Then dug into my lunch — which was almost as pleasing to look at as it was to eat — and burned my tongue on the sweet and sour sauce. Unlike some Chinese establishments I've visited, which have thin, soupy sauces, this one served a thick and flavorful version. And the pork was tender, not tough.

The chow mein — a combination of cabbage, celery and other vegetables piled atop crunchy noodles — was also tasty and heated as if it had just come out of the wok, the noodles as fresh as if they were taken from a newly opened bag.

I have only one complaint: the American music that played through the overhead speakers. I would have preferred some Oriental sounds, since one reason I like Chinese restaurants is for the Asian atmosphere. But I soon forgot these thoughts once the waitress returned to see if I'd like a free bowl of ice cream.

Bean tostada • $5.95

El Cazador, 113 Broadway Ave. S., Buhl

When I walked briskly into Buhl's El Cazador, it was 33 degrees outside and windy. I couldn't stop shivering.

Lucky for me, my waitress quickly delivered a basket of chips and bowl of salsa. I added salt to the plain chips and dug in.

By the time my lunch came, my mouth was ablaze from the spicy salsa, and beads of sweat had formed on my forehead. I fantasized about running outside and cooling my tongue with snow. What a way to fight off the winter chill.

The menu offered a decent number of lunch options for less than $7. My bean tostada, $5.95, was pretty good. It came topped with refried beans, tomatoes, cheese, guacamole, sour cream and enough greens to make Mama proud. I normally shun the creamy toppings, but I welcomed them this time to help quench the fire on my taste buds. Anyway, extra fat helps keep the body warm during the cold months, right?

The abundance of chopped lettuce made the dish a little soggy. Still, it tasted good, and I stuffed myself.

The waitstaff was friendly, if a little lax — even though the restaurant wasn't busy. No one checked on me during my lunch, and flagging down a waitress for a bill proved difficult. I finally gave up and started updating my cell phone calendar and texting my friends. Ten minutes of number-pad typing later, I received my check.

By the time I left, I was still recovering from my fiery encounter with the salsa. I didn't even need my coat on the way to the car.

Tomato bisque and roll • $5.75

Golden Elk Espresso & Bakery, 620 N. Main St., Hailey

For a bowl of soup that didn't look so big when it arrived, Golden Elk's tomato bisque is remarkably filling.

The cream-based soup didn't taste too creamy, as herbs and good-sized chunks of tomato were the dominant flavors. Both the bowl size — which I had — and the cup were accompanied by a warm, crusty roll that, like a good English muffin, was full of little holes to cradle melted butter. Don't worry, Jill; I went easy on the tasty topping, using less than half the provided pat.

This winter, the tomato bisque is available every day, with another soup offered for those who don't find tomato appealing. On the day I visited, the other choice was chicken noodle.

Golden Elk is the only drive-through espresso stand in Hailey, so much of its business is done through a window. Inside, there are cafe tables and a small kids' play area with toys, and lots of decorations on the themes of coffee and Wood River Valley recreation.

At midday, lunch specials — panini, sandwiches, wraps and salads, as well as the soups — attract quite a few locals. On the day I was there, they greeted each other by name and chatted about last night's high school ball game.

Soup and stew are definitely among my favorite ways to warm up on a cold winter day, in part because they stick with me in a way a salad just doesn't. And despite telling myself I have plenty of "reserves" for the winter, I just can't resist a spoonful of creamy soup when there's snow out there.

Thai peanut wrap • $6.50

New York Burrito, 1239 Pole Line Road, Twin Falls

At owner Chad Newey's urging, I made my first visit to New York Burrito this month to check out its array of wraps, salads and smothered burritos. Something spicy seemed the antidote to that slushy, sloppy day, so I settled on a wrap with spicy Thai peanut sauce.

To accompany the peanut sauce and marinated chicken, I had the choice of three rices (brown for me), two types of bean (black for me), and two of lettuce (Romaine for me). That was all wrapped up with light portions of tomato, onion and shredded cheese inside a tortilla. Scanning the long menu, I didn't spot other vegetables to ask for.

Newey had said that most of the eatery's tortillas are preservative-free. But the friendly employee who assembled my meal couldn't tell me which those were, so I simply picked wheat from the lineup of seven tortilla flavors and didn't attempt other questions about ingredients.

The tasty salsa served on the side, I knew from Newey, was made fresh in the store.

New York Burrito's cheerful quick-dining atmosphere that day drew a mixture of students with friends, and working folks dining alone. One of the latter, I ate on a stool at a high table.

My huge wrap, heavy with beans and rice and looking fairly Mexican, created a strange disconnect between what I saw and what I tasted. Bite after bite, that Thai peanut flavor dominated.

A meal hard to categorize, but easy to enjoy. And extremely filling.

Dinner in 35 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

You can put together these quick parcels in no time. The recipe calls for one or two banana leaves, but parchment paper can be substituted.

The recipe's parcel method of cooking and its ingredients are representative of cook-book author Pierre Thiam's home region of Casamance, in southern Senegal.

Serve with couscous. Adapted from Thiam's "Yolele! Recipes From the Heart of Senegal" (Lake Isle Press, 2008).

COCONUT CHICKEN AND PLANTAINS EN PAPILLOTE

4 servings

- 1 large lime
- 1 medium jalapeno pepper
- Pinch freshly grated nutmeg
- Pinch kosher salt
- 1 1/2 cups low-fat coconut milk
- 1/4 cup unsweetened shredded coconut
- 1 1/4 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (preferably already thin-cut)
- 2 ripe plantains (may substitute 2 to 3 bananas)
- 1 to 2 large banana leaves, for wrapping the parcels (may substitute parchment paper)

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees.

Use a zester or Microplane grater to finely zest the lime, yielding at least 1 teaspoon. Place in a large mixing bowl, then squeeze the juice from the lime into the bowl (there should be at least 2 tablespoons).

Stem and seed the jalapeno pepper, then cut it thinly either crosswise or lengthwise; add to the bowl along with the nutmeg, salt, coconut milk and shredded coconut; mix well.

Trim and discard any excess fat from the chicken breasts. Cut the breast meat and chicken tenderloins, if any, horizontally into very thin slices (so that you have flat, thin and wide paillards of breast meat). Transfer them to the bowl as you work.

When all of the chicken has been cut, make sure it is evenly coated in the bowl, and let it sit for 5 minutes while you prep the plantains.

Discard the plantain peels, then cut the plantains (lengthwise or crosswise) into very thin slices.

Rinse and pat dry the banana leaf, then cut it into eight 6- to 8-inch squares. Use a second leaf if necessary. (If using parchment paper, cut into 8- to 10-inch squares. Line the banana leaves with a smaller piece of parchment paper, if desired.)

Place one-quarter of the plantain slices in the center of each banana leaf square, then place one-quarter of the coated chicken on top of them (you may need to cut some of the slices in half to even out the amount of meat among the parcels). Close the leaf, folding the ends over. Use kitchen twine to tie the parcels securely. Repeat to use all the chicken and plantains. (If using parchment, place the plantain and chicken slices on one side of each parchment square, then fold the other side over and crimp together the edges of the three open sides to form a packet.) Discard the remaining marinade mixture.

Place the packets on a large rimmed baking sheet and roast for 20 minutes. (You can test for doneness of the meat by opening one of the packets.)

Transfer the baking sheet to the stove top (off the heat); the sealed banana-leaf packets will keep warm for up to 15 minutes. Open onto a plate; serve warm.

Brown rice, healthy protein are keys to Thai wrap's 'Eat Cheap' nutrition win

Winter is when we crave warm, hearty dishes. They help our bodies adjust and stay warm in cold weather.

With the new year many people are eating healthier, but unfortunately they're eating the wrong things — like salad and raw vegetables. It is hard to feel satisfied and not crave a hamburger and fries when you eat foods that cool you off instead of warm you up. This is one reason many people fail to keep their New Year's resolutions. It has less to do with willpower than with your body's need for foods to help it survive cold weather.

Ordering and eating hearty, healthy, satisfying meals can be done. Let's see how well the Times-News reporters ordered to help them combat winter.

Chow mein with sweet and sour pork

Andrew Weeks, ordering off the menu instead of the buffet was a great move, because many people overeat at a buffet to get their money's worth.

I grew up eating a lot of Chinese food, and sweet and sour pork was my mom's favorite dish. So I grew up looking at that glow-in-the-dark red sauce and wondering what made it glow. Well, I found out: It's ketchup! Unfortunately, it also contains a lot of sugar, which is probably why so many people enjoy this dish. The sweet and savory flavors are a popular combination. Pork is the other white meat, so choosing it as your main protein was a good choice; however, ordering it with a lighter sauce would have been better.

Andrew, I did like that this dish came with a side of veggies — although I have never seen veggies garnished with ham slices before. You never mentioned whether you ate those. I hope not.

People often think all Chinese dishes are healthy, but you have to be careful of the deep-fried dishes and heavy sauces. When dining at a Chinese restaurant it is easy to order dishes with veggies that are still crunchy and delicious. Why not change it up a bit and order tofu as your main protein? Or try a sauteed vegetable-and-noodle dish such as vegetable lo mein. Even if a dish is not on the menu, restaurants are usually accommodating and will make substitutions. These dishes are still satisfying.

RESTAURANT NUTRITION

Mandarin House offers a variety of entrees where the chicken, pork or meat is more of an accent. This reduces the saturated fat and cholesterol, and plenty of veggies balance the protein and add fiber and nutrients.

Tomato bisque and roll

Ariel Hansen, you are right: Soups and stews are a great way to warm our core on a cold winter day. And what could be more warming than a big bowl of Golden Elk's homemade tomato bisque?

A bowl of soup will stick to your ribs better than a salad. I don't think I have ever heard anyone come in from shoveling, skiing or working in the snow and ask for a big bowl of salad! Just because we can fly lettuce into our grocery stores from warm climates doesn't mean we should be eating it this time of year. To eat what is in season is an important part of being healthy and living comfortably in our local climate.

Golden Elk offers some delicious sandwiches and panini — grilled sandwiches with olive oil and Italian seasonings — so other than half a panino, a warm, crusty roll was the perfect complement to the soup. Ariel, using only half the butter pat was better than slathering the whole thing on your roll. One of the easiest ways to cut calories and saturated fat is to ignore the butter altogether and dip your roll in the soup.

Bean tostada

Melissa Davlin, I think this lunch not only heated you up, but helped you discover the power of food. Hot peppers and chilies do increase the body's circulation and heat, while sour cream cools it off. This is the reason many spicy ethnic dishes, such as Indian food, are served with yogurt sauce and Mexican food with sour cream. So, instead of frowning on your use of sour cream, I commend you for letting it help you put out the fire. El Cazador's homemade guacamole should have helped, too.

And yes, fat does help us stay warm in the winter months and gives us energy. In addition to the sour cream, I think the deep-fried tortilla helped with that, too. The crispy, fried tortilla is hard to resist and this would not be a tostada without it, but you could have ordered the tostada in a bowl or on a plate.

El Cazador makes its refried beans the traditional way — with lard — and unfortunately does not offer a healthier bean option. It does offer many vegetarian entrees, such as vegetable burritos, enchiladas, quesadillas, and fajitas, which would have been healthier lunch choices. However, if you are a vegetarian, I must warn you that the rice and bean side dishes served with these entrees are not vegetarian.

Melissa, it probably was a good thing you waited a few minutes before you braved the elements — otherwise, you might have looked like a big ball of steam walking to your car!

Thai peanut wrap

Chad Newey and his wife bought New York Burrito on Sept. 1 and have made some healthier changes to its menu. The change I am most excited about is the brown rice option. Brown rice has seven times the nutrients of white rice, so whenever it is on a menu, it is the one to choose. In addition, it contains much more fiber — a necessary but neglected element in the standard American diet — than white rice. New York Burrito is now the third restaurant I know of in Twin Falls to offer brown rice; hopefully, it is becoming a trend.

Since the rice and bean options are all vegetarian, it is easy for anyone to dine here. The best part is you can choose what items you want on your burrito. And if you are worried about eating too many carbs, New York Burrito offers an "unwrapped" burrito: all the same toppings served on a bed of lettuce instead of in a wrap. And speaking of wraps, the wheat and tomato-basil tortillas are preservative free, but the Neweyes hope all of the wraps will be in the future.

With the large burrito, made with a 12- to 13-inch tortilla and weighing in at a pound or more, and the mini-burrito made with a 10-inch tortilla, New York Burrito handles all appetite sizes. I was told many people buy a large burrito so they can have enough for a second meal.

Virginia Hutchins, you made all the right choices for your burrito. Even though it was probably a bit protein-heavy with the chicken and beans, it definitely sounded like it hit the spot on a cold, wintry day. It was hard to pick just one healthy lunch because they all had great aspects. However, I liked that this lunch was loaded with fiber, complex carbohydrates and healthy protein, which is why I'm choosing this as the healthiest of the bunch.

New York Burrito appeals to all kinds — vegetarians, low-carbers and big eaters — so it's a wrap.

It's a TV cooking competition with a knife for a logo. A celebrity host. Guest judges. Mystery ingredients. A sleek industrialized kitchen. Men and women in chef's jackets racing to plate their dishes. A cash prize for the winner.

And, of course, a somber parting line for those who didn't make the cut: "You've been chopped."

What? You were expecting "Please pack your knives and go"?

Long before "Chopped" debuted last week on Food Network, the blogosphere had labeled it a rip-off of Bravo's Emmy-winning TV show and pop-culture phenomenon "Top Chef."

Exhibit A? Ted Allen, a guest judge on "Top Chef," is the host of "Chopped."

If you feel as if you need a score card, you're not alone. Every network, it seems, is trying its hand at food-competition programming. But no one has yet figured out a way to break the mold.

"Food competitions blend together; the format is pretty much always the same," says Michael Ruhlman, a food writer and occasional Food Network guest. "The next person who comes up with that new format is going to make a lot of money."

In fact, viewers who give "Chopped" a chance might be pleasantly surprised to find that its stripped-down style relates to the everyday cook in a way that other cooking competitions don't.

Each week, four new contestants will appear on "Chopped," hailing from the culinary world's working class — caterers, sous chefs, aspiring pastry chefs and the like. For each course, they're thrown a culinary curveball: They get just 30 minutes to cook an appetizer, entree or dessert using everyday ingredients that remain a mystery until the clock starts ticking.

Because they're cooking for only the three judges, rather than the cocktail parties for 200 that "Top Chef" tends to favor, the scale is much closer to what most home cooks experience.

Anyone who's been caught between a few paltry ingredients in the cupboards and a hungry family can identify with the contestants on "Chopped" and play along far more than they can with "Top Chef," or even "Iron Chef America," for that matter.

With no time to spare, contestants resort to raw cooking instinct. One person is "chopped" after each round. The last person standing gets $10,000 — and then goes back to his or her day job.

Allen says he was attracted by the "pure" food competition at the heart of the show. "All of the drama revolves around whether you can cook this stuff. It's really just about food. Food and panic."

That emphasis on drama — not the traditional instructional food show — appears to be winning over audiences.

Food Network says it's coming off its most successful year with total prime-time viewership growing 9 percent from 2007 to 2008, and the median age of the network's prime-time viewers landing at 44, down from 47 in 2007. (Credit goes to youngerskewing reality-competition shows and "docu-soaps" such as the popular "Ace of Cakes," "Throwdown With Bobby Flay" and "Dinner Impossible.")

Executives are hoping the trend will continue, bolstered by offerings such as "Ultimate Recipe Showdown," which brings viewers in to compete for a $25,000 prize. There's also "Will Work for Food," in which host Adam Gertler — a runner-up in "The Next Food Network Star" competition — travels the country trying his hand at outlandish food jobs. (The channel's most popular show, "Next Food Network Star" also will be back later this year.)

But these forays into food entertainment are a sign that the network that introduced the country to round-the-clock food programming is now just one of many channels competing for the same audience.

The Travel Channel, for example, just scored its highest-ever ratings for a new debut with "Man v. Food," in which host Adam Richman travels the United States in search of food challenges, such as trying to consume a 13-pound pizza.

Michael Klein, senior vice president of content for the Travel Channel, says Food Network's shift from traditional cooking shows into food entertainment has made it more vulnerable to all comers.

"They certainly seem to have abandoned the 'stand and stir,'" Klein says, "I think it leaves them open to more competition, frankly."

After all, very few channels have Food Network's ability to discover and brand the next Rachael Ray or Emeril. But creating a low-budget reality show around food — whether it's a cooking competition or food-and-travel — is within every channel's reach.

Food Network's Bob Tuschman rejects any copycat talk about "Chopped" and "Top Chef" or any suggestion that the channel has abandoned the type of food show that helped make it famous. But the channel's senior vice president of programming and production concedes that there are more food-entertainment offerings than before — and that everyone sees Food Network as the one to beat.

"There are a lot of them out there," he says of competitors vying for foodies. "We take it as great flattery that a lot of other channels have watched our success" and wanted to give it a try.

If viewers can't find the traditional cooking shows they're looking for at Food Network, they might try PBS, which is sticking to the tried and true with shows such as "America's Test Kitchen" and "Lidia's Italy," starring Lidia Bastianich. There, building a franchise is more important than finding the next new thing — or trying to duplicate it, says Christopher Kimball, publisher of Cook's Illustrated magazine and host of "America's Test Kitchen," which is based on that publication.

Take "Lidia," he says. "That's the most old-fashioned show in the world, but she has a brand that nobody can compete with."

Cooked fennel has its charms

The Washington Post

Raw fennel is delicious and may cleanse the palate, but cooked fennel has its charms as well. This preparation, which could accompany roast pork or a firm fish such as tuna or salmon, is similar to "a la greque."

The fennel may be served hot, but it is much better at room temperature with some of its cooking liquid spooned over.

PROVENCAL MARINATED FENNEL

6 to 8 servings

6 firm fennel bulbs (6 to 6 1/2 pounds)

Tableware from Crate and Barrel.

1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil

Sea salt
Freshly ground black pepper

1 small celery rib, cut crosswise into thin slices

1 thin leek, white and light-green parts cut crosswise into thin rounds

2 large cloves garlic, crushed

1 tablespoon thyme leaves

2 bay leaves

2 tablespoons pine nuts

1 cup dry white wine

2 tablespoons sultana raisins or dried currants

2 tablespoons minced flat-leaf parsley

Trim the fennel bulbs, cutting off the stalks and some of the root end and removing the bulb's tough outer layer. Then cut lengthwise into 1/4- to 1/2-inch slices.

Choose a skillet or sautépan large enough to hold all the fennel; in it, combine the olive oil, salt and pepper to taste, celery, leek, crushed garlic, thyme and bay leaves. Place over medium heat. As soon as the vegetables start to sizzle, which will happen within a minute or so, add the pine nuts. Cook for about 5 minutes or just until the pine nuts start to brown, then add the fennel, stirring the contents of the skillet or sautépan until the fennel is well coated.

Add the wine and increase the heat to medium-high until it just comes to a boil, then reduce the heat to medium-low. Cover and cook for 15 to 20 minutes or until the fennel is just tender; the cooking time will depend on the thickness of the slices.

Uncover, then add the raisins and stir to mix well. Increase the heat to medium or medium-high to bring the liquid to a boil; cook for about 10 minutes and then add half of the parsley, stirring to mix well. Cook for 5 to 10 minutes, until the liquid has reduced to a syrup. Discard the bay leaves.

Sprinkle with the remaining parsley. Serve hot, warm or (preferably) at room temperature.

Dubonnet, in sickness and in health

By Jason Wilson
 Special to
 The Washington Post

Obscure spirits become obscure for many obscure reasons. But there may be no bottle more enigmatic than Dubonnet. Its strange journey from popularity to obscurity begins with malaria, involves the French Foreign Legion, the Queen of England and Pia Zadora, and ends with it languishing on the dusty bottom shelves of your local liquor store, usually next to the vermouth.

Luckily for us, malaria hasn't been endemic around here for decades. Though if we lived in a malarial swamp, we might be better acquainted with Dubonnet and its category of wine-and-cinchona-bark-based aperitifs called quinquinas.

Long before the days of modern medicine, a cinchona bark extract called quinine was the only weapon against the deadly mosquito-borne parasite that caused malaria. And so, by the 19th century, pharmacists were continually mixing up ways to mask the bitter taste of quinine in a drink.

During the French conquest of North Africa in the 1830s, "French authorities offered rewards to anyone who could create wine-based recipes that would help make quinine more palatable," writes cocktail expert and historian Paul Clarke in a recent issue of Imbibe magazine. Not long afterward, Dubonnet was born, created in 1846 by a Parisian chemist named Joseph Dubonnet. Its "infusion of sensual flavors" (according to the bottle) "won world-wide acclaim after Madame Dubonnet began serving it to family and friends"; an image of Madame's cat remains the brand's logo. Dubonnet's distinct portlike flavor is spiced with cinnamon, coffee beans, citrus peel and herbs (a secret formula, of course), but the quinine is what creates its slightly bitter edge.

Dubonnet has won enough fans to keep it available while other spirits have come and gone. Dubonnet reportedly is a preferred tippie of Queen Elizabeth II and was favored by the late Queen Mother. "I think that I will take two small bottles of Dubonnet and gin with me this morning, in case it is needed," the Queen Mother once wrote to her butler in preparation for an outdoor lunch. Last summer, that handwritten note was sold at auction for 16,000 pounds.

JULIA EWAN/Washington Post
 Crosby Gaige, in his 1941 classic 'Cocktail Guide and Ladies' Companion,' placed the Dubonnet Cocktail as one of 16 major drinks in his 'Hall of Fame.'

Dubonnet even had a sort of moment in the late 1970s and early 1980s, when Pia Zadora starred as the "Dubonnet Girl" in television commercials. Those might be among the cheesiest liquor ads of all time: Zadora plays sensually with ribbon and peers out between gauzy curtains while her Continental lover approaches by motorcycle — wearing a helmet, tuxedo and white scarf — for their rendezvous.

I'm a sucker for Eurotrash like that, so I recently grabbed a few dusty bottles of Dubonnet Rouge and Dubonnet Blonde to experiment with. Let me be clear about one thing: The white is to be avoided at all costs. It has an unpleasant aftertaste and a cat-pee smell — perhaps channeling Madame Dubonnet's feline?

Dubonnet Rouge, on the other hand, makes an excellent mixer, particularly with gin. Like applejack or Campari, the spirit doesn't have a million applications, but the few it does have stand out and make it worthwhile. Case in point: The Dubonnet Cocktail (the Queen Mother's drink) is a mix of equal parts gin and Dubonnet that's simple and wonderful, an early 20th-century classic. Add a dash of orange bitters to the mix, and it might give the martini a run for its money.

Crosby Gaige, in his 1941 classic "Cocktail Guide and Ladies' Companion," placed the Dubonnet Cocktail as one of 16 major drinks in his "Hall of Fame" (rechristening it "Put On Your Old Dubonnet"). Gaige also suggests a variation I've included here, called the Appetizer Cocktail. Obviously, drink this before dinner.

Or with Pia Zadora. Or with the queen. Or if you happen to be sent off to the French Foreign Legion. Or if you're relaxing at home and want to be super-certain that you remain malaria-free.

Retailers overhaul business as consumers pull back

Companies try to wean consumers off of discounts

By Anne D'Innocenzo
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — For years, retailers could afford to be sloppy about running their businesses because customers kept buying.

No more. Stung by the worry that shoppers — who cut spending by the most dramatic amount in at least 39 years this holiday season — may not start spending again for a long time, stores are making drastic changes. They are cutting out marginal suppliers, hiring outside experts to keep inventory lean, holding special events for those who are still buying and making extraordinary efforts to gauge customer satisfaction.

The new discipline will be mostly good news for shoppers, who will find stores less cluttered and see an array of products at lower prices, from ordinary groceries to jeans from brands they could once only aspire to.

Of course, the downside is that consumers who want something out of the ordinary — an olive green prom dress, for example — may have to look harder. Stores are rooting out offbeat, unpopular colors and styles, which will mean fewer choices.

Sales clerks are also checking back with customers to see if they're satisfied with their purchases.

"We are in a sea of change," said Millard "Mickey" Drexler, J.Crew's chairman and chief executive and former CEO and visionary of Gap Inc.

Pricing goods within reach of strapped consumers is also a big focus, given the way nervous consumers have stopped shopping. Same-store sales, or sales at stores opened at least a year, fell 2.3 percent in November and December together, according to the International Council of Shopping Centers. And the worsening sales slump in January has many worried about the industry's prospects over the next few months.

Even supermarket chain SuperValu Inc. has promised lower everyday prices on groceries and more promotions.

Chief executives from Crate & Barrel to J.C. Penney acknowledged during the National Retail Federation meeting this month that they're navigating new territory, predicting that the fundamental shift by consumers to spend less and save more will linger.

THE CRASH

Delinquencies moving from subprime to prime as next wave of mortgages scheduled to reset

By Dina ElBoghady and Sarah Cohen
The Washington Post

The incoming administration in Washington has promised help on the foreclosure front, but providing help requires federal regulators to get their collective arms around the size and shape of the crisis. That isn't easy.

No one agency collects information on every loan, every borrower and every delinquency.

But interviews and a Washington Post analysis of available data show that the foreclosure crisis knows no class or income boundaries. Many borrowers ensnared in the evolving mortgage mess do not fit neatly into the stereotypes that surfaced by early 2007 when delinquency rates shot up. They don't have subprime loans, the lending industry's jargon for the higher-rate mortgages made to borrowers with shaky credit or without enough cash for a down payment.

The wave of subprime delinquencies appears to have crested. But in October, for the first time, the number of prime mortgages in delinquency exceeded the subprime loans in danger of default, according to The Post's analysis.

This trend shows up most acutely in California and other high-growth regions, such as Arizona, Nevada, Florida and pockets of the Washington, D.C., region.

The recession has made it tougher for people to pay their mortgages, and crashing home prices have left many borrowers underwater, unable to sell or refinance their way out of trouble. One of every five mortgage holders now has a home worth less than the mortgage on it, according to First American CoreLogic, a firm that tracks mortgages and provided data for The Post's analysis.

Of the 20 Zip codes with the highest share of underwater loans, seven are in California and four are in Riverside County, the vast exurb southeast of Los Angeles where the Bohnens live. Riverside's unemployment rate has zoomed to 10 percent, well above the national average of 7.2 percent. About 94,200 people in the county are looking for work, many of them formerly employed in the real estate, banking and construction industries, according to the county's economic development agency.

The foreclosure crisis hasn't played itself out.

The next wave looms in the form of a new batch of adjustable-rate mortgages scheduled to reset over the next two years. Unless the market comes back with a roar, which is unlikely, more borrowers will struggle to hang on to their homes.

Now the county is a case study of what can happen when the only industry in town is growth itself.

The federal government played a central role in the boom. The Fed cut a key short-term rate to rev up the economy following the tech bust in 2001, enabling lenders to borrow money at low rates, lend that cash to home buyers at higher rates and then sell the mortgages to other institutions, said Esmel Adibi, an economist at Chapman University, south of Los Angeles.

"The lenders had ample amounts of money, and they needed customers," Adibi said. "These companies spread their wings in California and then moved on to other parts of the country, such as Las Vegas, Phoenix and southern Florida."

The markets that crashed the hardest were the ones where prices had climbed the fastest.

"The lenders had ample amounts of money, and they needed customers."

A Spreading Problem, a Tightening Vise

There are 55.9 million outstanding mortgages in this country. They fall into three broad categories:

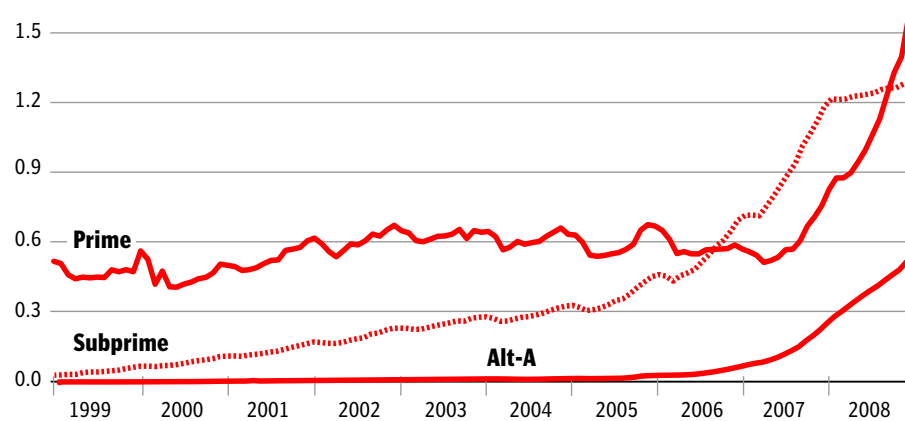

Prime	Alt-A	Subprime
46.9 million	3.3 million	5.7 million
1.68 million delinquent	0.66 million delinquent	1.54 million delinquent
Made to the least risky borrowers, those with strong credit scores and documents that verify their income and assets.	Made initially to borrowers with solid credit scores who pose some risk from the lenders' perspective, usually because they provided little, if any, proof of their income or assets.	Made to the riskiest of borrowers with blemished credit, little cash for a typical down payment or both.

A mortgage qualifies as seriously delinquent when a borrower is at least 60 days late in paying. While delinquency does not always result in foreclosure, it is a leading indicator of coming defaults.

National Delinquencies

The number of delinquencies involving prime loans now outpace the number involving subprime loans. That trend is alarming because prime loans account for such a large percentage of outstanding mortgages: 80 percent as compared to subprime, which is 10 percent of the current total.

Local development group to focus on manufacturing, alternative energy and large-animal sciences

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

South-central Idaho's largest economic development organization will focus on applying grant money toward four specific industries, according to an economic development official.

Brent Tolman, executive director of the Workforce Development Alliance, told business leaders during the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Economic Issues Forum on Tuesday that the alliance will focus on using WIRED grant money to attract construction, manufacturing, alternative energy and large-animal science industries to south-central Idaho.

The organization sees these four industries as being well-suited for the region's geography and demographics, and it projects that they will grow in coming years.

The alliance, which is a partnership of economic development groups in south-central Idaho, promotes industry growth and workforce development in the Magic Valley area.

IDAHO E. Idaho dealerships close doors

IDAHO FALLS — An eastern Idaho car dealership has closed two stores and laid off 35 people.

B.A. Wackerli Company Inc., closed American R.V. & Marine in Idaho Falls and Motor City Auto Sales in Pocatello last week.

Company officials say they may also close a dealership in Blackfoot this week.

At least 35 people will lose their jobs in the move which is intended to help the company survive the economic slump. General Manager John Kennard says the company will maintain three dealerships: including the Wackerli Auto Group, a used car lot and The Import Store in Idaho Falls.

The layoffs leaves the company with about 75 employees. Kennard says closing the three dealerships now is a proactive effort to save the remaining dealerships.

He says if the economic situation improves, the company may reopen the closed stores.

S.W. Idaho ski area drawing more visitors

NAMPA — Bogus Basin officials say the ski area in southwest Idaho is drawing more visitors who are escaping the inversion that blocks out the sun in Boise and neighboring cities.

Spokeswoman Gretchen Anderson says 29,000 people have season passes and revenue from those passes is about $500,000 more than last season. The inversion has been holding a dense layer of fog over the area. But on Saturday skiers had clear and sunny skies above the haze.

NATION Oil prices rise with some traders buying cheap

DENVER — Traders who could find storage space for crude took advantage of prices hovering near five-year lows Tuesday, reversing at least for a moment the downward spiraling cost of oil.

With the February contract expiring at the end of trading Tuesday, light, sweet crude rose 3.8 percent, or $1.39, to $37.90 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract has fallen about one-third in two weeks because of burgeoning supplies at Cushing, Okla., the delivery point for the Nymex.

when or if shoppers will ever resume spending the way they did when the housing market was booming, credit was easy and jobs were more plentiful.

"Customers wanted and wanted and wanted some more and we sold and sold and sold some more," said Burton M. Tansky, president and CEO of The Neiman Marcus Group. Now, "frugality is more important."

Weaning customers off discounts is a big challenge for the industry, as people have gotten used to them — particularly on luxury brands that hadn't been discounted before sales all but dried up.

For the last two years, many of the best-run nation's stores like J.C. Penney Co. had been reducing inventories in response to the consumer spending slowdown. But no one anticipated the severe retrenchment that hit in September as the financial meltdown ravaged shoppers' retirement accounts, reduced credit availability and resulted in massive layoffs across industries.

As shoppers simply stopped buying, stores were forced to discount as much as 75 percent off in some cases even before the official start of the holidays — resulting in the weakest season since at least 1969, when the ICSC index began. Some companies couldn't make it through the Christmas season, and many more are expected to file for bankruptcy in the coming months.

Circuit City Stores Inc., which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in November, said Friday it will go out of business — closing its 567 U.S. stores, after not being able to work out a sale.

Focus

Continued from page C1 The organization received a $5 million federal workforce initiative grant in 2008, which the alliance has used to retain existing businesses as well as to prepare the region's labor pool for new or expanding industries.

"We are really working on the (workforce initiative) grant, and we have selected these four industries as the ones that we want to track with the grant," Tolman said.

"It would be far too broad to look at everything," Tolman said.

The alliance has already been working with the College of Southern Idaho, local school districts and existing businesses to train students for jobs in manufacturing.

However, Tolman said the alliance would like to expand manufacturing labs — such as a lab that was recently established at the Twin Falls High School — in high schools throughout south-central Idaho.

"Only 25 percent of kids go on to complete a four-year degree, so what's happening to the other 75 percent," Tolman asked business leaders. "What we want to do is let those kids know what is available in industries like manufacturing."

He added that the alliance is working to streamline the communication process between economic development organizations and public education, so that both groups can more efficiently prepare students for one of the four specified industries that the alliance hopes to attract.

Bites

Continued from page C1 "I know that in this economy many people are holding on to their pocket books, but I'm still getting a lot of calls from people interested in the building," he said.

Inspired Living changing warehouses: An ad in the Times-News generated some questions about the possibility that Inspired Living, located at 125 Main Ave. W. in Twin Falls, was going out of business.

The ad read that "everything must go," and some readers took it to mean that the home furnishing store was calling it quits.

Janet Goringe, owner of Inspired Living, said that's not the case. "We had to move our warehouse and we had to be out of the Christmas Store across the street by the end of the month," she said. "So we need to sell the inventory from both places."

The Christmas Store is a seasonal business that is operated by Inspired Living.

Young woman's hot temper is cause for friends' concern

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl, and I'm pretty popular in my high school. I'm blessed to have several close friends, and we always have a great time together. My grades are good, and I get along well with my mom, dad and little brother. So what's the problem, you're probably wondering.

I had an argument with my girlfriend "Amber" recently. It was over a "guy issue." I won't go into details because we did end up working it out, but Amber said something during the blowup that has me worried. She said that sometimes my anger gets out of control and concerns her. Two other girls who were with us at the time agreed with her. That floored me.

Abby, this is the first time I've heard about this. I mean, Mom sometimes calls me "Tammy Temper" — and has accused me of "throwing fits." But my friends never called me on it. In the fight with Amber, she said my fists were clenched and she was afraid I might hit her. (I didn't think so.)

I don't want to scare people. I value my friends. I look forward to going to college and making new friends and having new experiences. I don't want to have a reputation as a hothead. Can you help me?

—"TAMMY TEMPER" IN HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR "TAMMY": Anger is a normal human emotion. Everyone experiences anger at one time or another. When primitive humans encountered a threat, they would react instinctively with either fear or anger, which gave them a jolt of adrenaline enabling them to fight or escape. It was a survival mechanism.

Infants show frustration by beating their heads against the side of their cribs, screaming or holding their breath until they turn red. Young children throw tantrums, yelling, kicking or hitting. But as we grow older, we learn to recognize what is upsetting us BEFORE we react, and learn to handle the emotion in acceptable ways.

My booklet "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It" contains techniques for handling anger effectively and constructively. It can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus a check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds) to Dear Abby — Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in this price.

Anger is an important subject. While many people have been taught from early childhood to suppress it, it is also important to learn how to express it appropriately. Admitting our anger verbally is one way. It's like releasing steam from a pressure cooker, which is both appropriate and healthy. Mature adults express emotions without "throwing fits" or making bullying gestures. Because your mother calls you "Tammy Temper" and your friends are voicing concern, the time has come for you to take control.

DEAR ABBY: When saying the Pledge of Allegiance, should you put your left hand at your side or behind your back?

—WONDERING IN NEW YORK

DEAR WONDERING: I was taught that your left hand should be at your side.

IF JANUARY 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your ambitions take root in fertile ground during the next several weeks. Because you are a bit wiser than usual, you can learn to run your life like a well-oiled machine. Prepare a viable game plan for the future so you can swiftly reach your goals in the year ahead. Make progress under your own steam. Be advised that next October and November, you may be forced to take control of a distasteful matter or be burdened with extra duties. Avoid making important changes or adding to your debt load then.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Presto change-o! You may have an idea that entails a quick change with your finances. If you have a yen to buy the latest fad just remember that you will have to live with it for a long time to come.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some things are like penny candy and quickly disappear from the table, while other things are like the Taj Mahal and withstand the ages. Fleeting delights are great to have, but so are lasting pleasures.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New people or contacts in your life may be fascinating. You may be enamored by a new flame, but need to wait to see if this latest passion lasts longer than the TV show you are watching this evening.

HOROSCOPE

CANCER (June 21-July 22): One of the great quotations to ponder today is, "You will never experience a traffic jam if you go that extra mile." The road ahead is clear if you are willing to be a team player and cooperate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't get mad, get even. And if you think you need to get even, only even the score with the people who have helped you or shown you loving kindness. Enjoy a few pleasurable interruptions today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Birds of a feather flock together. Your reputation for being a savvy businessperson or good judge of character is enhanced by the company you keep. Try something different with a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The only thing that never changes is the fact that everything always changes. You may need your track shoes to keep up with social activities. Breaks from routines can be disruptive but refreshing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): True optimists are those who promise themselves that they will not let what they cannot do interfere with what they can do. A positive spirit can uplift the members of your household and make dreams come true.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Real charity doesn't need to be pre-approved by the IRS. Sometimes it is the cheerful comment to the overworked clerk or the twenty dollar bill you give to the homeless person that makes the real difference.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is not enough to be good; you have to be good for something. Accept with open arms whatever good fortune or advice comes your way, but then use it wisely. Gather information and contact helpful people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Embrace our enthusiasms like they are your best friend forever because they are exactly that. Anything that makes you happy will light up your world and others can be guided by your shining presence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Every little bit helps. Pessimists are those who do nothing because they can only do a little. You, on the other hand, know that even as a baby you had to learn to crawl before you could walk.

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 21, the 21st day of 2009. There are 344 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Jan. 21, 1793, during the French Revolution, King Louis XVI, condemned for treason, was executed on the guillotine.

On this date:
In 1858, Felix Marma Zuloaga became president of Mexico upon the ouster of Ignacio Comonfort.
In 1861, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi and four other Southerners resigned from the U.S. Senate.

In 1915, the first Kiwanis Club was founded, in Detroit.
In 1924, Russian revolutionary Vladimir Lenin died at age 53.

In 1950, former State Department official Alger Hiss, accused of being part of a Communist spy ring, was found guilty in New York of lying to a grand jury. (Hiss, who always proclaimed his innocence, served less than four years in prison.)
In 1954, the first atomic submarine, the USS Nautilus, was launched at Groton, Conn. (However, the Nautilus did not make its first nuclear-powered run until nearly a year later.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1958, Charles Starkweather, 19, killed three relatives of his 14-year-old girlfriend, Caril Ann Fugate, at her family's home in Lincoln, Neb. (Starkweather and Fugate went on a road trip which resulted in seven more slayings.)
In 1959, Ohio saw widespread flooding caused by heavy rain and melted snow. Movie producer-director Cecil B. DeMille died in Hollywood at age 77. Former child actor Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer was shot and killed during an argument in Mission Hills, Calif.; he was 31.

In 1968, the Battle of Khe Sanh began during the Vietnam War as North Vietnamese forces attacked a U.S. Marine base; the Americans were able to hold their position until the siege was lifted 2 1/2 months later. In Greenland, an American B-52 bomber carrying four hydrogen bombs crashed, killing one crew member and scattering radioactive material.
In 1976, the supersonic Concorde jet was put into service by Britain and France.

Ten years ago: Former Sen. Dale Bumpers told the Senate impeachment trial of Bill Clinton that the president was guilty of a "terrible moral lapse" but not of conduct warranting or even permitting his removal from office. Raul Salinas de Gortari, the brother of a former Mexican president, was convicted of masterminding the murder of rival Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu. (The conviction was later overturned.) Actress Susan Strasberg died in New York at age 61.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush visited community colleges in Ohio and Arizona, where he highlighted the economy and several new job-training initiatives he'd proposed a day earlier in his State of the Union speech. The recording industry sued 532 computer users it said were illegally distributing songs over the Internet.

One year ago: Democratic presidential rivals Hillary Rodham Clinton and Barack Obama accused each other of repeatedly and deliberately distorting the truth for political gain in a highly personal debate in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Jerome grad earns her way onto floor at ISU

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — For the love. That's the motivational source for former Jerome High School basketball player Kari Green, who is realizing her dreams as a member of the Idaho State women's basketball team. Green graduated from Jerome in 2006 then went to Brigham Young University to further her academic education. She hadn't played competitive basketball for two years when she decided to transfer to Idaho State. While making the move to

Green
Pocatello, her desire to play resurfaced. "It's something I had been thinking about doing for a long time. It wasn't something I just decided to do." After contacting the staff of new head coach Seton Sobolewski, she came out for practice in mid-October. It was an eye-opening experience for her. "It was exhausting, it was hard," she said. "I tried to prepare myself mentally for what I had to do, but my body wasn't ready for it. I don't think I finally got comfortable until around mid-December." By then her life had taken a dramatic turn. Because of players leaving the program, issues involving recruits under the previous coaching staff and a few injuries, Green found herself on a plane with the team heading to New Mexico to open the season in mid-November. It was almost surreal for her. "There's no way I could have predicted this. I was prepared to just be a practice player, to not travel and certainly not to play in a game," said Green. Yet she has been in uniform for every game this season both home and away, and actually made her collegiate debut in a game at Southern Utah. In five minutes that night, she scored one point, had two rebounds and garnered an assist. "I was pretty excited," the former Great Basin West All-Conference player said. "Looking back on that night I remember being in awe when I was called in to play." But is all the travel, practice time, physical effort and added academic stress worth it? After all, Green has two appearances totaling six minutes this season. "Absolutely," said Green, with a look on her face that makes convey the depth of her commitment. "Even if I had never gotten into a game it'll be up to the coaches," she said. "I'll do whatever they ask me to do."

any successful program and they'll tell you they need a few Kari Greens around. The players willing to do the small things, practice hard to make their teammates better and give up their bodies regardless of the score. As for Green's future, there are no guarantees. Sobolewski already has four commitments for next season and could have as many as eight new faces on his roster by the time practices roll around this October. Green understands this fact. "When it gets to that point it'll be up to the coaches," she said. "I'll do whatever they ask me to do."

Bruin girls denied last-second win

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Following another third-quarter meltdown Tuesday, the Twin Falls girls basketball team mounted a late rally against the Madison Bobcats only to fall short. The Bruins lost 48-46 at Baun Gymnasium. "Part of me wanted to cry," Bruins coach Nancy Jones said. "I wanted a win for the girls." The Bruins are now 4-14 overall and 1-6 in Region Four-Five-Six play. With the game tied 46-46 with less than four seconds to play, Madison guard Chari Hawkins hit both ends of a 1-and-1 to give the Bobcats the one-possession lead. The Bruins inbounded but were unable to try a buzzer-beater to send it to overtime. It could have been much worse. Twin Falls led 22-17 after one half of play, but the Bruins couldn't get anything going to start the third. The Bobcats took advantage, scoring nearly a dozen unanswered points to take the lead. "We lose our momentum at the half," said Twin Falls guard Sara Federico, who led the team with a dozen points and six rebounds. "We need to come out with some focus." The Bruins got back into the game late in the third and through the fourth with screens and quick buckets. A field goal and a pair of free throws from Jazlyn Nielsen gave Twin Falls a short-lived 46-44 lead at less than 90 seconds to go. The sophomore post scored eight points and grabbed nine boards. Madison guard Emily Allen paced the Bobcats with 14 points, followed by 10 from

Erica George. There is one remaining league contest before the Region Four-Five-Six tournament begins as Twin Falls Please see BRUIN, Page D2

In a zone: Declo boys stifle Crane, Pilots

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Declo found out early it wouldn't be able to contain Glens Ferry's Michael Crane with man-to-man defense. The first time Crane touched the basketball in Tuesday's Canyon Conference clash with Declo, he converted a bucket and was fouled for a three-point play. "I knew we'd have to go zone," said Declo coach Dee Lewis. "If we didn't, Crane would have had 30 (points) and we would have guys fouled out." By making some early adjustments and neutralizing Crane on both ends of the floor, the Hornets beat Glens Ferry 52-47 to remain unbeaten (2-0) in conference play. "It's a good win to get us rolling," said Declo's Shaylon Fenstermaker, who led the Hornets with 16 points and five rebounds. "We'll have to face them again, so we'll look forward to that." The game pitted two of the hottest teams in the state. Both squads were ranked in the top five in Class 2A. Since the holiday break, Glens Ferry had been 4-0 and Declo (11-4 overall) had been 6-1. The win puts Declo in the Canyon Conference driver's seat midway through the league schedule. The Pilots (9-4 overall, 1-1 Canyon Conference) led 20-17 at halftime in what was a hard-fought defensive struggle throughout. But the difference was Declo's ability to hold Crane to 11 points and 10 rebounds, well below his season averages (22.3 points and 15.5 rebounds per game). Ross Arellano scored 14 points to lead the Pilots. "We needed to keep Crane off the boards, and I think we held him pretty good," Fenstermaker said. "When we keep him out of their offense, they struggle a little bit." ## So. Illinois transfer joins CSI roster

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team had a new face at Tuesday's practice as former Southern Illinois player Torres Roundtree joined the Golden Eagles. Roundtree played in 11 of the first 13 games for the Salukis, making four starts and averaging 1.2 points per game on 25 percent shooting. His last game with Southern Illinois was a Dec. 31 home loss to Northern Iowa. "I didn't fit in with their style ... I didn't know what to do and when to do it," Roundtree told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of his reason for transferring. Roundtree said he was looking for "a faster-paced game." The 6-foot-4 guard, who CSI head coach Steve Gosar called an athletic player who can slash to the basket, will sit out the rest of this season and be eligible to play for the 2009-10 campaign. At McCluer North High School in St. Louis, the 6-foot-4 Roundtree was a four-year starter. He averaged 15.8 points, 6.0 rebounds and 3.0 assists as a senior. The No. 24 Golden Eagles (15-3, 2-1 Scenic West Athletic Conference) host Snow College on Thursday and Salt Lake Community College on Saturday. They are coming off a 73-70 overtime win over No. 12 North Idaho College and should move up the NJCAA Division I Men's Basketball Top 25, which will be released today.

Ivanovic, Djokovic breeze into third round

By John Pye
Associated Press writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Ana Ivanovic and Novak Djokovic cruised into the third round of the Australian Open on Wednesday, with both 21-year-old Serbs looking as if they could make another memorable run in the season's first major. Ivanovic beat Italian Alberta Brianti 6-3, 6-2 at Rod Laver Arena, and defending men's champion Djokovic followed with a 7-5, 6-1, 6-3 win over Frenchman Jeremy Chardy. Top-ranked Jelena Jankovic, the only one of the emerging Serbian trio without a major title, had a little more trouble advancing. She held on for a 6-4, 7-5 win over Kirsten Flipkens of Belgium. Jankovic needed a medical timeout for treatment on her right foot in the first set and was broken three times in a tougher-than-expected, 1-hour, 46-minute match. Chardy matched the third-ranked Djokovic shot for shot before wilting while trying to force a tiebreaker in the first set. Djokovic, who ended Roger Federer's 19-match winning streak at Melbourne Park in last year's semifinals, was dominating on his serve against Chardy, faltering only when he was broken at love while serving for the match. But he broke right back, finishing it off when Chardy netted a forehand on match point. "Today I feel really happy with the way I played," Djokovic said. "I played very well in the second and third sets." Ivanovic lost the last Australian Open final to Maria Sharapova, then won her first Grand Slam title at the French Open and gained the No. 1 ranking. Now seeded fifth, she is drawing inspiration from her last run here. Sharapova is not defending the title because of a shoulder injury. "I was in this situation before French Open last year, coming into the tournament as pretty serious finalist," she said. "That experience will help me a lot to approach this Australian Open." Dictating play and ripping winners into the corners, Ivanovic repeatedly took advantage of Brianti's weak serve. The 28-year-old Italian held serve only three times. No. 169-ranked Brianti needed treatment for her lower back and took a medical time out after getting broken to fall behind 3-0 in the second set. She returned to break Ivanovic's serve and held to pull back to 3-2, but lost the next three games. Ivanovic, pushing the limits with her shots, had the same number of winners as unforced errors (26). She won 17 of her 27 net approaches, a sign she's growing in confidence Please see TENNIS, Page D2
