WASHINGTON - In a firstday whirlwind, President Barack Obama showcased efforts to revive the economy on Wednesday, summoned top military officials to the White House to chart a new course in Iraq and eased into the daunting thicket of Middle East diplomacy.

"What an opportunity we have to change this country," said the 47-year-old chief executive. Obama also issued new ethics rules for his administration and federal regulators Wednesday promised a second look at a recent decision to drop gray wolves in the Great Lakes and Northern Rocky Mountains from the endangered list.

Jerome officials discuss future of county P&Z

By Nate Poppino Times-News writer

Jerome County's Plan-Zoning ning and Commission hasn't had the easiest couple of years.

There was the time that officials split it in two but discovered they hadn't done it right, leaving the full body to redo much of its work. And an attempt to revise the county's ordinance on confined-animal feeding operations outlasted two moratoriums intended to let the body finish its work.

Recently, the P&Z debated splitting again, and then convinced county commissioners to let a committee try handling revising the county's comprehensive plan.

That last idea's a keeper, said new County Prosecutor John Horgan. But Horgan says other aspects of the board need to be reworked, starting with its size.

For about half an hour Tuesday afternoon, Horgan, Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown and former prosecutor Mike Seib — now a deputy prosecutor — talked with county commissioners about ways to adjust the P&Z and avoid some of its past problems. Item one: slash the current 12 seats to five.

"The more you have, the less you're going to get done," Horgan said.

The comprehensive plan has to be the highest priority, Horgan said, and that work will start with gathering fresh statistics on Jerome County.

Much, as the P&Z suggested, of the job could and should be done by an advisory committee made up of Flynn McRoberts talked at the Herrett Forum at the College of Southern Idaho, which was a homecoming of sorts for the Twin Falls High School graduate who worked as a part-time Times-News sports writer in the 1980s. More than 100 people attended.

McRoberts pointed out that the Internet is a mixed blessing — a source of information, but also a source of consternation that sucks away advertising revenue and readers from the newspaper industry.

At first, the Internet was viewed like radio and television - another media alternative that newspapers easily compete could against, said McRoberts.

Wendell police: curfew ordinance legally sound Unidentified teen says law is unconstitutional By Andrea Jackson Times-News writer

Wendell's curfew law is constitutionally sound and effective, its police chief said, after an attorney for an unidentified teenaged violator claimed otherwise in the Idaho Court of Appeals this week.

The teen admitted to breaking the city's 11 p.m. curfew on May 12, 2007 at 1:30 a.m. and got a misdemeanor ticket for riding in a pickup stopped for a broken taillight, according to court filings from lawyer David Heida, of the Capitol Law Group in Gooding.

Heida says the local law is vague, overbroad, and violates the First and 14th Constitutional Amendments, along with parents'

The group looked at ways to reduce the cost of hiring a consultant to help, which commissioners had resisted in the past because of the expense. Commissioner Cathy Roemer brought up the possibility of paying for the plan through a grant, as was done in the past.

the right people to serve on it. Horgan suggested county commissioners have all P&Z members fill out an undated resignation letter to keep on file as motivation against becoming biased or self-serving. The moment commissioners collectively disapprove of the way a P&Z member conducts himself, they can accept and date the letter. he said.

Brown said he disapproved of the measure, and Roemer asked Horgan if such an arrangement would cause any legal issues. "Absolutely not," Horgan replied.

Horgan also advised the commissioners on handling CAFO revisions, a public hearing on which is scheduled for Tuesday. He pointed out the need to base the ordinance on practical evidence, referring to a similar rewrite in Gooding County, his previous employer. The judge upheld the ordinance, but that decision has since been appealed.

Seib raised the idea of even putting the ordinance revision on hold until the comprehensive plan is modified, arguing that approaching the ordinance first has contributed to problems along the way.

"It should have started with the comp plan," he said.

rights to rear their children. Gooding County Magistrate

Court denied a motion to dismiss the case, and so did the district court.

Heida's office is now trying to win with the appellate court, and isn't revealing the name of his client.

Not even Wendell's police chief knows who is challenging the law.

"I made a phone call to find out who it is," said Wendell Police Chief Kirtus Gaston. "At this point ... I just don't know. I'm left in the dark.'

People under 18 can't be out in Wendell between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m. unless they're with parents, guardians, out on emergency errands, or other legitimate business with documentation.

"I think it's a well-written ordinance," said Gaston. "Parents have to be involved in the child's life ... I think it's laid out in an enforceable ordinance."

But a big problem with the law, Heida says, is that it doesn't specifically mention the First Amendment, according to court records.

"Nearly every juvenile curfew ordinance which has not provided an explicit or even minimal First Amendment exception has been struck down," Heida writes in court records

A quick search of city curfew codes shows many have First Amendment exemptions.

Twin Falls, Kimberly and Jerome all do. Salmon, however, does not. Jerome even lets violators off the hook if they're married or were previously married.

In Twin Falls last year, police made 19 arrests, and issued 12 citations to curfew violators, said Sgt. Terry Thueson. Gaston said about 5 to 10 citations are issued every year in Wendell and 100 warnings are usually given.

"We don't issue an awful lot of citations for curfew," said Gaston, adding police usually cite when they've warned a familiar violator before.

The curfew keeps juveniles out of more serious trouble and protects the community, Gaston says.

Not everyone agrees, though.

"The curfew is, quite simply, an exercise of sweeping state control irrespective of parents' wishes," Heida writes in court records. "It prevents a parent from saying 'Have fun with your friends tonight, do not break any laws and be home by 1 a.m."

Area curfew laws differ on times, and other details.

Wendell's 11 p.m. curfew is an hour earlier than in surrounding Gooding County.

Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough says Wendell's cut-off is too early, but Gaston thinks it's just right.

Most curfews apply to people under 18, but in Twin Falls special times are also laid for those under 16 and differ between weekends and weekdays.

People under 18 in Twin Falls have a curfew between 11:59 p.m. and 5 a.m. on Friday and Saturday, and 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. all other nights. Teens under 16 have an 11 p.m. curfew on weekends and a 10 p.m. curfew on week nights.

In Kimberly, there's a daytime school-year curfew of 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

A curfew violation is considered a misdemeanor crime under most of the ordinances.

The state's appellate court has yet to rule on Heida's case.

Senate panel approves changes to state employee medical leave

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

BOISE — A Senate Committee approved a controversial rule change Tuesday that would eliminate the opportunity for state employees to take off up to two hours with pay for a medical appointment such as a routine doctor check-up.

The change was enacted by the Division of Human Resources in August and sparked a statewide outcry among state workers and several lawmakers. It still must pass the Senate as part of an omnibus package of the agency's rule changes.

After the change, state employees will be required to use their sick leave — they get almost 100 hours per year or vacation time for appointments, according to the Division of Human Resources. Agency officials said they changed the rule because there aren't laws to back up a policy that was costing the state between $1.5 million and $1.7 million per year.

Dennis Moberly, an agency deputy director, told the Senate Commerce and Human Resources Committee there are no legal prohibitions to the appointments being filed as sick leave time.

But Alex Neiwirth, an organizer with the Idaho Association of Government Employees, said the current provision is both cost-effective and employee-friendly because it allows workers to take care of illnesses ahead of time while preserving their sick leave.

"Employees are going to be forced to ask themselves, 'Is my preventive wellness check-up worth taking off from my sick leave?" he told the committee. "It puts them in a bind."

Members of the committee had critical words for the agency for keeping the Legislature out of their decision making process.

"I don't think it was used in the most judicious way by the department," said Senate Assistant Majority Leader Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston. He said the current provision is too vague because there are no requirements to document the time employees take as leave or how often it can be used. Others also pointed to how doctors stay open in evenings and on weekends; the ability to use sick hours for the appointments; and the potential savings to the state. "I frankly welcome trying to find revenue in any place I can find it," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, cochairman of the state budgeting panel. Sen. Dick Sagness, D-Pocatello, voted against striking the rule because he felt the policy could be refined and tightened — but not completely removed just yet. "Don't strike it. Redefine it," he said after the meeting.

Twin Falls Mayor Lance Clow is looking for volunteers interested in drawing people to the city's downtown.

The city of Twin Falls will have a town hall meeting tonight at 7 p.m. The meeting is following up on the feedback that grew out of a December meeting in which people brainstormed for potential ideas that will attract people to the city's downtown.

for some event," Mayor Lance Clow said.

The ideas have not been finalized vet. The list of possibilities includes a magic festival with magic demonstrations, a haggler's market where shoppers can negotiate the price of purchases, and events with art or outdoor summer movies.

The meeting's focus will be to help volunteers get involved in a committee that "If you make it a friendly enough atmosphere, I think people will come, and I think it will be successful." - Ryan Horsley, a former president of BID's board will make further plans.

"We're primarily going to focus on trying to get volunteers to take on different aspects of ideas," Clow said.

He said he would like the events to be self-sustaining. That happened last October when Twin Falls businesses pitched in to have Oktoberfest.

city's Initially, the Business Improvement

District cancelled the event to save money, but downtown merchants and the BID later agreed to join forces to continue Oktoberfest. The district's board agreed to pay $6,000, and sponsorships covered the remaining $11,000 needed for the event.

Ryan Horsley, a former president of BID's board of directors, said it's crucial for events to have involvement from local businesses for them to be a success.

"It kind of needs to be left to the merchants to decide what they want," he said. "If you make it a friendly enough atmosphere, I think people will come, and I think it will be successful."

He said Oktoberfest is an example of that kind of involvement.

'You got a bunch of volunteers who rallied around and put it together," Horsley said.

Buhl school calendar adds to time in classroom

By Blair Koch Times-News correspondent

The Buhl School District Board of Trustees unanimously approved a mid-August start of the school year at Monday's meeting, cementing a change months in the making.

"We need to do this for our students ... we're here for the students," said Trustee Jackie Frev.

While the school year typically starts the day after Labor Day, a Sept. 7 Labor Day this year would push the end of the 2009-2010 school year to mid-June.

The 2009-2010 school year calendar, approved during Monday's board meeting, features an Aug. 19 start to the school year and a June 3 finish.

"We need to, as a board, figure out ... the final game plan on how we prioritize these things."

The calendar will accomextracurricular modate activities with time off for the Twin Falls County Fair in September and additional time off around the Christmas holiday. It also allows for more instructional time: seven additional classroom days for high school seniors and nine more days for fourth and fifth graders. Superintendent Margaret Cox said the calendar keeps graduation on the traditional Friday before Memorial Day, to the delight of district administrators, parents and students.

"I received a lot of very positive remarks," Cox said.

In other meeting news, trustees reviewed a draft list of facility projects, including painting classrooms, replacing gym bleachers, resurfacing playground asphalt and upgrading the middle school's heating and air conditioning system.

The list needs prioritization, said Trustee Mike Hamilton.

Project areas include the three schools within the district and shared facilities, like the Seventh Street Gymnasium and the football stadium.

Hamilton said the list was first prioritized by individual school principals and then by Cox.

— Trustee Mike Hamilton

Different minds led to different levels of priority for projects and Hamilton suggested district officials meet together to hammer out details and timelines.

"We need to, as a board, figure out ... the final game plan on how we prioritize these things," Hamilton said.

The district also needs to identify funding sources for While some projects. improvements can be paid for out of the regular operating budget or lottery funds, the bulk of projects will likely require a levy, and requisite support and approval by voters.

Rupert Council discusses Howarth building options

By Laurie Welch Times-News writer

Extending a more than four-year effort to dispose of the old Howarth building, the Rupert City Council again tabled action as officials entertain new interest in the property.

During a Tuesday city council meeting, City Superintendent Dennis Andrew said during the last couple of weeks there has been someone showing interest in purchasing the building at 725 Scott Ave.

In other business, Rupert city officials are drafting an ordinance to regulate the size of trash bins in town to reduce the risk of sanitation employee injury.

"Interest in the Howarth building has taken a different course," Andrew said.

Andrew said the interested party is willing to purchase the property in its current condition and it would be in the city's best interest to see if a deal can be struck before the building falls to the wrecking ball.

The building, which was donated to the city by its previous owner, was declared surplus property by city officials in 2004.

The city planned to bid out the salvage of the building materials and auction off the land, but the project has stretched on for years.

Rupert City Attorney Kelly Anthon provided a first reading of the new ordinance for city council members.

If the ordinance is approved, trash receptacles will be limited to 33 gallons, have tight-fitting covers that are kept on at all times and come with two handles.

Containers must be provided by the city sanitation customer and failure to do so will result in the city providing a trash can and adding the cost to the service fee, according to the ordinance draft.

The city council also accepted an appointment of Diane Nielsen to the DeMary Memorial Library board and voted to renew a taxi cab license for Gonzalo Lopez.

Continued from page A1 years ago. The plan lists a number of ways to put water back into the aquifer while addressing water shortages seen by users across its length.

But Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and co-chairman of the state budgeting panel, said finding the money could be tough, despite southern Idaho's dependence on water for irrigation. He asked how a lack of funding might affect the process.

"How do we keep the CAMP process moving forward without any money?" he asked.

The first 10-year stage would affect only 200,000 to 300,000 acre-feet of water for an annual cost of $7 million to $10 million. Of that money, $3 million each year would come from the state and the rest from water users.

Obama

After dancing at inaugural balls with first lady Michelle Obama past midnight, Obama entered the Oval Office for the first time as president in early morning. He read a good luck note left behind by President George W. Bush, then began breaking cleanly with his predecessor's policies.

Aides circulated a draft of an executive order that would close the detention facility at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, within a year and halt all war crimes trials in the meantime.

Closing the site "would further the national security and foreign policy interests of the United States and the interests of justice," read the draft prepared for the new president's signature. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press, and an aide said privately that Obama would sign a formal order on Thursday.

Some of the 245 detainees currently held at Guantanamo would be released, while others would be transferred elsewhere and later put on trial under terms to be determined.

On the wolf front, the Interior Department said it was withdrawing at least temporarily a rule announced last week changing the wolf's status in both the Great Lakes and Northern Rocky Mountains. The rule never formally took effect.

It was among many regulatory changes the Bush administration pushed through in its final days. President In the 2010 budget proposal, the $3 million request is listed as a placeholder — in essence a concept without funding.

Its consideration depends on whether the Legislature adopts the plan, according to the IDWR.

"The funding issue has been critical and it's my perspective, as agency director, that we're not going to be receiving funding through the governor's recommendation for CAMP, so we focused on potential opportunity of existing funding on this item," said IDWR Director Dave Tuthill. "We do plan to discuss funding opportunities (with the board). The board has assets and the question is would those assets be enough?"

Rigby and Tuthill both said they are looking at proposing changing laws to help shore up funding to get the first year going. IDWR Administrator Hal Anderson said after the meeting it's possible the first phase of the plan be delayed a year.

The board will vote on whether to approve the final CAMP plan Friday. It then goes to the Legislature for consideration.

Rigby, responding to a senator's question, said the board's duties so far have not been jeopardized by the strains of the economy.

"Having said that, there's always huge needs, and unfortunately that's the time you see us — when there are huge needs," Rigby said.

"This particular year we have the CAMP practice, which is a huge need. We're trying to work out the intricacies of funding but the plan itself it moving ahead."

Aircraft coming into state could be exempt from taxes

BOISE — The Idaho State Tax Commission wants to expand a tax exemption to personally-owned aircraft coming into Idaho from out of state.

The commission introduced a bill Wednesday in a House committee that would exempt people who move into Idaho from paying sales and use tax on aircraft if the vehicles have been owned for at least three months.

The move would bring taxing policy on aircraft in line with motor vehicles in Idaho.

Obama's Cabinet was also moving closer to completion. At the Capitol, the Senate confirmed Hillary Rodham Clinton as secretary of state after a one-day delay forced by Republicans. The vote was 94-2, and spectators seated in the galleries erupted in applause when it was announced.

Obama's schedule for the day included separate sessions on the economy and the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Pay raise rejected by Idaho House committee

By Sarah D. Wire Associated Press writer

BOISE — An Idaho House committee wants to reject a 5 percent pay increase for state legislators, saying that Idaho's dismal economy and rising unemployment make taking a raise inappropriate.

The House State Affairs Committee unanimously passed the measure Wednesday. The bill will move directly to a House vote, a sign that it will likely gain wide support.

Rep. Darrell Bolz, R-Caldwell, said rejecting the pay increase could save the state around $180,000.

The raise, proposed in June by the Idaho Citizen's Committee on Legislative Compensation, would boost the pay for all 105 lawmakers to $16,921 from $16,116, and extend reimbursements to legislators for some official trips outside of session.

Bolz said that in tough economic times the Legislature needs to direct resources to those who are struggling, not legislative members. In December, the state's unemployment rose to 6.6 percent, more than double the level of a year ago and the highest rate in decades.

"When you're going through tough times everybody has to suffer a little bit,"

Bolz said. If Americans were critical of Congress for taking a pay raise, he said, "Why would we put ourselves in the same position?"

Assistant House Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, said he sees no major obstacles for the bill in the House. He said the amount won't have a large impact on the state but is a symbolic gesture when state agencies have been asked to make drastic spending cutbacks.

"In the context of the budget it's not that much money compared to other state agencies," he said.

Bolz's measure would reject any form of a pay raise for legislators for the next two years, including such things as boosting mileage compensation and per diem pay, the money legislators receive to cover living and travel expenses relating to work.

The committee recommended reimbursing legislators who drive more than 50 miles outside of the session to state-related events by up to $1,000 a year. Bedke, a rancher in rural southeastern Idaho, said he occasionally has to drive 150 miles to get to meeting, but supports giving up the prospect of extra travel cash.

"Things are tough all over." Bedke said.

No Bush pardon for Idaho soldier

An Idaho soldier convicted of killing an unarmed Iraqi, then planting an AK-47 rifle on the dead man's body wasn't pardoned by President George Bush during his final hours in office.

Evan Vela, a 24-year-old U.S. Army sniper, is serving 10 years in prison following his conviction last February.

Earlier this month, Bush aides told Vela's family in eastern Idaho that their request for a pardon would be "seriously considered."

Idaho Sen. Mike Crapo and Rep. Mike Simpson, both Idaho Republicans, said Wednesday they were disappointed Bush didn't include Vela on his pardon and commutation list.

The lawmakers pushed for clemency, including a phone call from Crapo to Bush last weekend asking for additional consideration.

Idaho's newest U.S. senator will have a presence on the same committee as several of his predecessors. Sen. Jim Risch was named leaders also Senate appointed Risch to the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Select Committee on Intelligence and the Select Committee on Ethics.

Risch is serving his first term as Idaho Senator and occupies the seat left vacant when Craig decided to retire.

Committee approves tougher septic rules

A House subcommittee has approved a proposed rule that would toughen statewide standards for new septic systems.

On a 3-2 vote, the subcommittee of the House Energy and Environment Committee approved a rule that would require larger drain fields for newly installed septic systems. Chairman Dell Raybould, a Republican from Rexburg, Wednesday to the Energy says he expects to schedule a public hearing on the proposal next week.

The rule change is likely to draw opposition from the Association Idaho of Realtors.

The group fought the rule change last year when it was introduced by the Idaho Department of Environmen-tal Quality. The group's lobbyist says requiring bigger septic systems would prohibit construction on many small lots and some already platted.

Agency rules take effect unless both houses of the Legislature vote to reject them.

LEWISTON Woman refiles abuse claim against church

LEWISTON — A Lapwai woman has refiled a lawsuit against the Roman Catholic Diocese of Boise and the Iesuit order, alleging she was abused by her priest, but this time two more women have joined the case.

Mia Sonneck first filed a lawsuit in federal court last fall against the Oregon Province of the Society of Jesus, saying she was abused by the nowdeceased Rev. A.I. Ferretti when she was about 8 years old.

Her attorneys asked the federal court to dismiss that lawsuit in December. On Tuesday, Sonneck and two other women filed the lawsuit in Idaho's 2nd District Court, the Lewiston Tribune reported.

Alberta Sena of Culdesac and Dorothea Skalicky of Lewiston joined Sonneck in the lawsuit, contending they also had been abused by Ferretti. The lawsuit says the Boise Diocese oversees the parish where the alleged abuse took place.

Neither the diocese nor the Oregon Province had seen the suit, representatives for both organizations said.

It's a crime how farm diesel is burned on roads he dirty little secret of big pickup trucks in Idaho is that many aren't street legal. Not because of the size of the tires or the engines, but what's in the tank. Diesel fuel in Idaho isn't taxed if it's used in off-road or unlicensed vehicles, such as tractors. It's dyed to distinguish it from diesel burned by trucks and some cars that are driven on the highway.

Now the Idaho State Tax Commission aims to strengthen the penalty against violation of dyed diesel fuel laws, assessing a $1,000 fine and making it a civil penalty.

Tax commission officials said their proposal stems from a growing number of cases of the nontaxable diesel fuel being misused across the state's highways.

"There has been non-taxed fuel in vehicles used on the highway. That is illegal," Ted Spangler, a deputy attorney general who represents the tax commission, told members of the Idaho House of Representatives. "There are a lot of people who have contacted the tax commission who are just aware this is taking place."

But the legislation will likely face criticism should it receive a hearing at the House Transportation Committee. Both Democrats and Republicans questioned the legality and appropriateness of a separate proposed $1,000 fine to motorists who refuse to allow an inspection of a vehicle.

Democratic House Assistant Minority Leader James Ruchti, D-Pocatello, an attorney, and House

Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, both expressed concern about search and seizure laws when vehicles are inspected.

Others were worried about whether the proposed fine was too much. Currently, violations are a misdemeanor.

We disagree.

Diesel inspections in Idaho are rare simply because law enforcement agencies don't have the resources to do them, and there's no disincentive for motorists to say no.

That must change. Under the proposed law, motorists would be pulled over and inspected only when there is sufficient "evidence" — not in spot checks. Eventually, there should be spot checks too when the tax commission and the Idaho Transportation Department can afford them. But in the meantime, this is a fairness issue. Idaho motorists will likely be asked to pay significantly more in gas taxes to pay for road repairs. They have a right to expect that the state will be checking up on diesel-tax scofflaws.

uring the last six decades of the 20th century, a simple idea animated the American psyche. It was the idea that the American people could do anything.

It originated as the Great Depression came to an end and American men and women went to war and went to work to defeat fascism. American blood hallowed battlefields across Europe and Asia. And the United States emerged as the most magnanimous victor in history, turning enemies into friends and allies.

The American people bequeathed the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe. Americans then shouldered a decades-long global burden to confront and contain the spread of communism. They challenged the injustices in their own society. They put a man on the moon.

They achieved scientific breakthroughs that saved millions of lives and vanquished much of the primeval pestilence that has afflicted mankind. And they constructed an economic system that created unprecedented prosperity for billions of people around the world.

America's leaders captured the essence of this can-do spirit. In his inaugural address, John F. Kennedy famously spoke of the burdens the American people are willing to bear. He said that the final success or failure of the American experiment rested in the hands of the nation's citizens, not its leaders. "Ask not what your country can do for you - ask what you can do for your country."

Ronald Reagan delivered his first inaugural address under circumstances not so different from today.

"The economic ills we suf-several decades. They will not go away in days, weeks or months, but they will go away. They will go away because we, as Americans, have the capacity now, as we have had in the past, to do whatever needs to be done to preserve this last and greatest bastion of freedom."

The cure for America's problems and the hope for the future was not government, he said, it was the elixir that had unleashed the individual talents and energy of the American people in the past.

All these words, all these deeds reflected a generation of Americans whom Kennedy described as being "tempered by war, disciplined by a hard and bitter peace, proud of our ancient heritage." Over time, this group earned the distinction of being called the Greatest Generation.

What we have witnessed in recent years, what we are especially witnessing now, is the great undoing of the optimism and resourcefulness of it. Call it the greatest degeneration.

That degeneration is the result of the abandonment of principle and the adoption of the politics of expediency, situational ethics and irresponsibility. It is the consequence of leaders who turned the revolutionary concept of government for the people into people as instruments for government. And now those people are demanding to know what the country will do for them.

The current economic crisis is called a failure of private markets. In fact, it's a crisis that began with the failure of government-sponsored enterprises — Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac - compounded by the failure of government regulators and congressional overseers who distorted free markets and encouraged irresponsible behavior.

The problem is not that government is the enemy. Government must do some things. Too often, though, a tions produces bad results. And a grave danger of the current degeneration into record bailouts is that Americans will abandon their ancient heritage of freedom and limited government.

President Obama acknowledged that danger in his inaugural address. "It has been the risk-takers, the doers, the makers of things...who have carried us up the long, rugged path towards prosperity and freedom," he said. "For as much as government can do and must do, it is ultimately the faith and determination of the American people upon which this nation relies."

Those could be the words of Kennedy or Reagan. Let's hope that as the priests of government salvation call for more burnt offerings, Obama can restore his predecessors' faith in the American people.

As economy sputters, so do chances for a loan

• 've got great news for Americans who may be playing hell getting loans from their U.S. banks for new cars, small business startups or other necessities.

Put on your oldest britches, pass yourself off as a migrant worker and head to Mexico.

See, the Mexican government is offering loans to Mexicans returning to their country. The idea is to help these people - who can no longer find work in the U.S. because of our financial crash — start their own businesses back home in Mexico.

Wow. You know what this means, don't you? Instead of the U.S. putting up a wall to keep out the undocumented workers so they won't steal our roofing jobs, the Mexican government will have to build a huge wall to keep out American businessmen so they won't steal the Mexican loan money.

And the first thing the Mexicans should attach to their wall is a poster of Bernie Madoff, along with the message in big red letters, "Do Not Give Money to This Man."

Who ever thought we'd see the day when it would be easier to borrow money from Mexico than from Citigroup?

Building a wall to keep out shifty American investors shouldn't be any problem for Mexico. With all the disappointed workers returning to Mexico from the U.S., there should be one heckuva labor pool signing up to work on that project.

This Mexican loan program sounds like a pretty good deal. So perhaps hurting corporate types in the U.S. ought to consider trying to pose as returning Mexican workers to take advantage of it. The Mexican loans could run from $30,000 to $250,000. And they feature a variety of low-interest, nointerest and forgivable loans.

So the question for you defrocked Wall Street suits is: How do I pass myself off as, say, a Mexican laborer so I can qualify for the money?

Well, the first thing you should do is go to a pawn shop and buy a tool belt. What with all the condos in downtown Austin that have stopped construction halfway up, there ought be plenty of used tool belts to be found. So put on the tool belt, then gnarl up your hands so it'll look like vou've done a few actual honest days' work in your lives.

Bone up on your Spanish. Try to get beyond the old frat boy standby "Dos Dos Equis, por favor," every once in a while.

And don't drive down to Laredo in all of your individual BMWs, either. Try truckpooling. Have six or seven Wall Street guys hop in the back of an old beat-up pickup. It'll look authentic, and it'll give you some green cred.

OTHER VIEWS Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... holding Hailey's water Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Hailey's mayor and council need to declare a timeout. They need to do some thinking about how to rectify the city's wastewater planning blunders without costing city taxpayers needless sums of money.

In recent weeks, the city admitted that it might not have the sewer capacity necessary to meet its obligations. It had promised to provide hookups to 72 homes planned for Peregrine Ranch north of the city and two Croy Canyon projects, the 117-home Spring Canyon Ranch and a separate eldercare facility.

A memo obtained by this newspaper last week showed that the city's own public works director, Tom Hellen, warned against extending services.

As for the city's contract with Peregrine Ranch, heaven only knows what the city knew or didn't know before it agreed to a deal with the developer because it was crafted behind closed doors.

The city could find itself in violation of new Environmental Protection Agency standards governing how much treated waste it can discharge into the Big Wood River. It may be faced with the need to upgrade its wastewater treatment plant to the tune of $12 million.

The Croy Canyon decision turned more on emotions surrounding the possibility of a new eldercare facility than on good planning practices preventing expensive suburban sprawl. Now before the City Council is an annexation request to allow development of 378 more homes in Quigley Canyon.

Hailey needs to step back and get its act together before it costs taxpayers money they can ill afford or makes any more promises to developers that it cannot keep.

... Idaho's gerontocracy

Post Register, Idaho Falls

America has passed the torch to a new generation of leaders. Idaho has not. Idaho elected the second- and thirdoldest members -Democratic Rep. Walt Minnick, age 66, and Republican Sen. Jim Risch, 65 out of a 57-member congressional freshman class. Only Alabama Democratic Congressman Parker Griffith is older than Minnick, ... No freshman senator is older than Risch.

The National Journal puts the average age of the House freshman class at 49; the average Senate freshman age is 59. Idaho's delegation just grew marginally grayer. Risch is two years older than the man he replaced, retired Sen. Larry Craig ... And Minnick defeated Republican Bill Sali, who is 54. It was not always so. Sixteen years ago, Idaho elected 41year-old Dirk Kempthorne to the U.S. Senate and 41-yearold Mike Crapo to the House. A decade ago, Republican Mike Simpson was elected to the House at age 48.

Today, Idaho's sclerotic politics leaves people in their 30s and 40s who should be advancing stuck in the Legislature or local government, while people old enough to collect Social Security hold onto the top jobs.

Why?

Money. Running for office is so expensive that one prominent Republican can scare off other GOP competitors simply by locking up campaign cash and organization early. That's how then-Congressman Butch Otter froze Risch out of the 2006 gubernatorial race. When it came time to run for the Senate, Risch used the same tactic.

What was once a fairly robust and competitive system of campaigns in this state has atrophied under one-party rule to an insider's game.

In the case of Democrats, that's even truer. Lacking resources and a bench of candidates, Idaho Democrats have turned toward a narrow pool of wealthy candidates to largely self-finance their campaigns.

They included former Senate candidate Alan Blinken in 2002, gubernatorial candidate Jerry Brady in 2002 and 2006, and Minnick, who spent $900,000 of his own money last year ...

Simpson waited 10 years to earn a ranking-member post on an Appropriations subcommittee. For Minnick to rise as far, he'd have to wait until age 76.

Had Craig not destroyed his career in a Minneapolis airport men's room in 2007, he'd just now emerge as the senior GOP member of the Senate Energy Committee.

To reach the same pinnacle, Risch may have to wait until he reaches age 83.

Criticism of bank bailout shows a fundamental misunderstanding ast week, a five-member congressional oversight panel harshly criticized how the U.S. Treasury has so far spent the first $350 billion of the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP). The bulk of that money has been used to inject capital into a wide range of potentially viable but ailing banks, giving the government an ownership share in return for these funds. The panel had several complaints about the way TARP has been run, but its basic criticism — widely held among members of Congress and the public — was that the Treasury has not required the banks to use the money for increasing loans to business and consumer borrowers.

These findings have strengthened a growing interest in Congress to condition approval of the program's remaining $350 billion on a mandate that the Treasury not only track the funds but also require that they be used primarily to make new Main Street loans — to support homeowners facing mortgage defaults, struggling municipalities and other troubled segments of the economy.

The criticisms behind this sentiment are misguided. For one thing, the position of banks is dire, and lending is like the right thing to do in terms of accountability and oversight of federal tax dollars, it is actually infeasible because bank loans typically cannot be traced to a particular source of funds — banks get their money for loans from a variety of sources.

Much of the criticism of TARP reflects a fundamental misunderstanding of the basic financial problem that the program was intended to address. The first goal was to ameliorate the large and long-lasting contraction in lending that was the inevitable consequence of the mortgage-related losses by U.S. banks. This credit squeeze has already depressed bank lending and, if unabated, threatens to radically deepen and prolong the recession. It is unrealistic to expect troubled banks to make a lot of new loans. Only when the banks are stabilized can we expect them to raise new private capital to expand lending and fuel an economic recovery. Look at the facts and the numbers: An International Monetary Fund analysis in October found that global banks and other lenders are likely to suffer losses of about $1.4 trillion from defaulting U.S. mortgages and consumer and corporate debt. These losses, once recognized on the books of financial lenders, reduce their capital by an equal amount. That capital is the "backup" behind a lender's overall portfolio of loans and other investments. In the United States, each dollar of lender capital supports, on average, more than $10 in loans and other assets; the "leverage ratio" varies among different institutions and different kinds of assets. Bank supervisors, following a complicated set of regulations, are charged with keeping bank capital from falling and remaining below a "safe' level. If a bank's capital does dip below certain levels, the bank is required to limit its lending. Equally important, as its capital falls relative to its assets, the bank would be considered increasingly risky by private markets, raising its cost of borrowing, lowering its stock price, and reducing its ability to attract new capital and expand its loans and investments. In short, for every $1 million of losses on bad loans, a bank must reduce its portfolio of loans poses a serious threat to the economy.

The IMF has estimated that, without large infusions of government funds, U.S. and European banks over the period 2008-13 would be selling assets and failing to renew existing loans to the tune of $10 trillion, equivalent to a whopping 14.5 percent of their loan portfolios. More than half of this lending contraction would occur among U.S. banks. At this stage, therefore, TARP's success has to be judged not in terms of how many new loans it produces but what problems it has prevented.

So far, the TARP capital injection has reduced the size of the problem, but the problem remains large. We are not against providing additional help directly to homeowners, but any substantial diversion of TARP funds away from their central task would be a serious mistake and could worsen this very nasty recession. A restored financial sector must play its part in ending the recession and sustaining an economic recovery. Congress should release the second half of the TARP funds with rules that can actually be enforced and recognize what the program is trying to

Palin goes on offensive, tells media to leave kids alone

By Rachel D'Oro Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin is going on the offensive against news organizations and bloggers she says are perpetuating malicious gossip about her and her children.

But political observers say the former Republican vice presidential candidate can't have it both ways: trotting out the children to showcase her family values, then trying to shield them from scrutiny.

Palin's criticism also raises questions about her motivations because she has said she is open to a presidential run in 2012.

"I think she's positioning herself. She's attacking the media as a way to generate support among a base she hopes will support her," said Leonard Steinhorn, a professor of communications at American University in Washington and an expert on the presidency.

Most consumers were aware the switch was coming due to a marketing and public education blitz by federal officials and broadcasters. Still, 75 percent of consumers who called help lines reported that their converter boxes did not appear to be working, according to a team of student volunteers answering calls. More than half of the callers were advised to either change the direction of their antenna and to have their converter boxes scan for channels.

"We had to say, 'Your antenna is not powerful enough, or you don't have one, or it's pointed in the wrong direction, or the height needs to be raised,' " said Connie Book, a professor at Elon University who led the students.

A large number of viewers who hook up a converter box or use a newer digital TV, will have clearer reception and more channels than they did with analog broadcasts. Others will receive fewer digital channels than with analog and may have to buy extra equipment to pull in the channels.

CSI to receive $2 million in federal grants

College to use funds to make job training programs more accessible

Times-News staff

The College of Southern Idaho was awarded a grant of almost $2 million by the U.S. Department of Labor to make training in certain industry-based programs more current and accessible to students.

The grant is part of $122 million that is being awarded to 68 colleges and training institutions in 36 states. The purpose of the 2009 Community-Based Job Training Grant is to improve and upgrade the tools and labs that provide more workers with the skills they need to succeed.

CSI and its nine communitv-based training partners, including the Jerome Police Department, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department, St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Intermountain Orthopedic Clinic, and the Twin Falls School District will upgrade equipment and training facilities for Law Enforcement, Technology, Radiologic Dental Hygiene, Metal Fabrication, Welding, and Online Learning.

"Industry has told us to find solutions," said CSI President Jerry Beck in a written statement. "We need to modernize and keep up with industry standards in order to provide training of value to our students and our industry partners."

Grant coordinator, Monica Castaneda-Kessel said the college and its partners are providing more than $1.2 million worth of funding, building space, and personnel to the federal grant, which will bring its value to more than $3.2 million.

Con Paulos, who chairs the Statewide Workforce Development Council and one of the grant partners, said the community-based train-ing funding will reach out to workers not only in southern Idaho but the entire state.

He added that it will complement the recently awarded WIRED grant, which

State of mining bad, but it could get worse

By Sandy Shore Associated Press writer

DENVER — Withering cost cuts across the mining industry have left tens of thousands of people without jobs from the Arizona desert to the Andes — and there is a litany of evidence that the situation is growing worse.

International mining companies also have postponed or canceled projects and padlocked the gates to mines as consumers have cut spending on cars, jewelry and housing.

Global mining giant Rio Tinto announced last week that iron ore production, used to make steel, tumbled 18 percent in the fourth quarter and said Tuesday its aluminum subsidiary would previously double announced production cuts.

Unwanted copper, gold,

Small business turning more to independent contractors

s the recession A forces small businesses across the country to cut expenses, some are making a dra-matic shift — they're laying off employees and using independent contractors instead.

Back in 2006, Ron Gold had only full-time employees in his advertising agency, but business began to slip and he began using freelancers. Last year, he closed the agency and started a marketing services firm, using only independent contractors – some of whom used to be former staffers.

"It was not that we wanted to hurt anybody, but we needed to grow," said Gold, owner of Marketing Works in East Setauket, N.Y. He noted that with employees, he had to keep paying them even when business was falling off and there wasn't as much work to do. Bonnie Harris also began using independent contractors when her marketing business slowed in the summer of 2007. Until that point, she had four full-time employees as well as part-timers.

"My business was really having a hard time and the biggest problem was payroll taxes and employees, carrying salary burdens," said Harris, owner of Wax Marketing in St. Paul, Minn. "I couldn't pay myself because I was paying these people."

So she began replacing her employees with independent contractors. The bauxite (used in aluminum) and iron ore, is piling up or being left underground as the worst recession in at least a generation saps demand.

"Expect inventories to get bigger and expect this continuing process (of cutsaid backs),' Andrew Martyn, a portfolio manager who specializes in mining for Toronto-based Davis-Rea Ltd. "It's going to go for quite some time here.'

The effect on many communities worldwide that rely on mining has been immediate. Workers are protesting job cuts and others are expected to begin migrating in large numbers in search of work, some across international borders.

"A lot of the communities are remote so that when (mines) do shut down, the town actually collapses," Martyn said.

The bulk of the layoffs in the United States are in base metals such as copper and zinc, although major companies are scaling back production of metallurgical coal for use in steel manufacturing.

Coal companies have slowed production from Wyoming to Australia.

Coal jobs are among the highest paying in many rural U.S. communities, potentially creating a dire economic ripple effect. In the past, coal companies have been more recession proof, AP photo but the average price per ton for Appalachian coal has fallen more than 35 percent since the summer.

At least 700 job cuts are likely in Tennessee and Montana by Swiss-based Glencore International AG, a commodities company.

Still, job losses have been most severe outside the United States.

Glencore's Bolivian subsidiary recently announced it will layoff several hundred people, triggering labor protests.

Thousands of miners who dig primarily for zinc in Bolivia either have been laid off or left their jobs in the Andes, the poorest region in South America's poorest country. In the mines around the small cities of Potosi and Oruro, the work force of roughly 25,000 miners and refiners has been cut roughly in half.

A controlling stake in Bolivia's largest mine, San Cristobal, has been put up for sale by Denver-based Apex Silver Mines Ltd., which is reorganizing under bankruptcy protection.

There are many benefits to hiring contractors rather than employees, and not just during a recession. Businesses don't have to pay for benefits and don't

Homebuilder sentiment index hits new record low

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A key gauge of homebuilders' confidence sank to a new low this month, as the deepening U.S. recession and rising unemployment erode chances for a housing turnaround.

The National Association of Home Builders/Wells Fargo housing market index released Wednesday dropped one point to a record 8 in January. The index was at 9 for the previous two months.

Index readings higher than 50 indicate positive sentiment about the market. But the index has drifted below 50 since May 2006 and has been below 20 since April. The slide in builders' confidence accelerated in

"Clearly, conditions in the nation's housing market aren't getting any better," NAHB Chairman Sandy Dunn said in a statement, "and they aren't going to get any better until the federal government takes substantial action to encourage qualified buyers to get back in the market."

Homebuilders are pushing Congress for a 10 percent tax credit of up to $22,000 for homebuyers that purchase a home over the next year. They are also asking for a temporary interest-rate reduction on 30-year mortgages.

The latest builder index reflects a survey of 419 residential developers nationwide, tracking builders' perceptions of market conditions.

The builders' gauge of current sales conditions fell two points to six, while expectations for sales over the next six months inched up a point to 17, the NAHB said.

owe the government payroll taxes for contractors. When there's less work to be done, the contractor isn't paid, unlike the employee who draws a regular salary.

"It makes my business more profitable, without a doubt," said Charles Barrett, owner of FZ Media Design, a graphic arts and Web design company in Yardley, Pa. Besides saving on benefits, he noted that he doesn't need as much office space, and that also helps keep expenses down.

Barrett made the decision to use only contractors when he started his business five years ago, and he credits that strategy for helping his company to flourish even in a sluggish economy.

Moreover, he said, "by not carrying all the overhead, I'll be willing to pay a higher hourly rate" to draw talented workers.

There are other pluses: Owners can hire different contractors for different projects, depending on workers' strengths and talents.

It also means less time spent managing workers. Harris had an unexpected feeling of relief without any employees.

What I didn't have was the burden of feeling responsible for that person's career, helping them grow and learn," she said. Harris also found she was more free to make her own hours when she no longer had staffers to supervise. But Harris also making the switch from full-time employees to contractors had a learning curve supervising an independent contractor is very different from overseeing the work of someone on your payroll.

"It was hard for me to figure out how to do it at first," she said. "You tell them, 'here's this task,' and you have to be specific, and you're not there in the office with them."

The difficulty that Harris encountered comes in part from the fact that independent contractors must by law be treated differently from employees. An owner doesn't have what the IRS calls the right of control over contractors — for example, the place where they work, the hours they tools they use and how much supervision there is. If a worker is too much under the control of an owner, the IRS could find that this is in fact an employer-employee relationship, and the business then must pay Social Security and Medicare taxes retroactively and will also have to pay penalties.

Owners can find information on the IRS Web site at http://www.irs.gov/businesses/small/article/0,,id99 921,00.html to help them determine if the way they're treating workers makes them employees or contractors.

The Dow Jones industrials surged nearly 280 points and all the major indexes rose more than 3.5 percent. Some bounce would have been expected after the Dow tumbled 332 points Tuesday but forecasts from PNC Financial Services Group Inc. and Bank of New York Mellon eased concerns that the troubles at financial giants like Citigroup Inc. were hitting all banks.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 279.01, or 3.51 percent, to 8.228.10.

Broader stock indicators also gained. The Standard & Poor's 500 index advanced 35.02, or 4.35 percent, to 840.24, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 66.21, or 4.60 percent, to 1,507.07. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 14.69, or 3.39 percent, to 448.34. Investors often turn to smallcap stocks when placing bets on a market recovery.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 4 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 6.33 billion shares compared with 6.23 billion shares traded Tuesday.

Study: Cleaner air adds 5 months to U.S. life span

By Alicia Chang Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Cleaner air over the past two decades has added nearly five months to average life expectancy in the United States, according to a federally funded study.

Researchers said it is the first study to show that reducing air pollution translates into longer lives.

Between 1978 and 2001, Americans' average life span increased almost three years to 77, and as much as 4.8 months of that can be attributed to cleaner air, researchers from Brigham Young University and Harvard School of Public Health reported in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Some experts not connected with the study called the gain dramatic.

'It shows that our efforts as a country to control air pollution have been well worth the expense," said Dr. Joel Kaufman, a University of Washington expert on environmental health.

Scientists have long known that the grit in polluted air, or particulates, can lodge deep in the lungs and raise the risk of lung disease. heart attacks and strokes. The grit - made of dust, soot and various chemicals — comes from factories, power plants and diesel-powered vehicles.

In 1970, Congress passed a revised Clean Air Act that gave the Environmental Protection Agency the power to set and enforce national standards to protect people from particulate matter, carbon monoxide and other pollutants.

The law is widely credited with improving the nation's air quality through such things as catalytic converters on cars and scrubbers at new factories.

For the study, scientists used government data to track particulate pollution levels over two decades in 51 U.S. cities. They compared these changes to life expectancies calculated from death records and census data. They adjusted the results to take into account other things that might affect life expectancy, such as smoking habits, income, were among the cities that saw education and migration.

On average, particulate matter levels fell from 21 micrograms per cubic meter of air to 14 micrograms per cubic meter in the cities studied. At the same time, Americans lived an average 2.72 years longer.

"We saw that communities that had larger reductions in air pollution on average had larger increases in life expectancies," said the study's lead author, C. Arden Pope III, a Brigham Young epidemiologist.

Pittsburgh and Buffalo, N.Y., which made the most progress cleaning up their air, saw life spans increase by about 10 months. Los Angeles, Indianapolis and St. Louis gains in life expectancy of around five months.

The study was partly funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and EPA.

"This finding provides direct confirmation of the population health benefits of mitigating air pollution," Daniel Krewski, who does pollution research at the University of Ottawa in Canada, wrote in an accompanying editorial.

In a statement, the EPA said such studies provide critical information that can help the agency set standards on particulates. EPA data show that average particulate levels nationally have fallen 11 percent since 2000.

Engine of ill-fated US Airways plane is found in Hudson River

By Colleen Long Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Divers searching for an engine that broke off a US Airways plane after it hit a flock of birds and safely splashed down in the Hudson River last week found it Wednesday in hard mud about 65 feet below the surface of the murky, frigid water.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board, already examining the rest of the Airbus A320, discovered a feather attached to one of the plane's wings. The feather was being sent to bird identification experts at the Smithsonian Institution.

In the search for the left engine, New York Police Department and New Jersey State Police harbor officers working with a sonar expert from the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration got a reading on the river floor Tuesday of an object 16 feet long and 8 feet wide near where Flight 1549 made its emergency landing.

Divers went into the water around 2:35 p.m. Wednesday and located the engine in about 10 minutes, NYPD spokesman Paul Browne said.

The Army Corps of Engineers dropped a 1,500pound concrete anchor with a light attached near where the engine was thought to be. NYPD divers Paul Reynolds and Michael Delaney used the anchor line to guide themselves down to the engine and were within 2 feet of it. Delaney was involved in the rescue efforts after the Jan. 15 crash, pulling passengers from the icy water.

saw an eerie glow of red and blue from the engine.

"When I hit it, I knew right away it was part of the wreckage," Reynolds said. "I could see writing on it, 'Open hatch here,' that type of thing."

Divers had been unable to locate the object found Tuesday after running out of davlight and being stifled by swift currents that made it impossible to drop a robotic device with a video camera to confirm whether it was the engine.

Investigators want to closely inspect the engine once it is pulled from the water to better understand if it conked out after hitting a flock of birds shortly after the plane's takeoff from LaGuardia Airport.

The NTSB said salvage crews were working with federal, state and local agencies to recover the engine, likely on Thursday. The rest of the plane was taken by barge to a Jersey City, N.J., marina over the weekend to be studied by investigators. On-scene work was expected to last through the week and plans were being made to move the plane to a more permanent location.

An examination of the fan blades from the right engine showed soft-body impact damage, the NTSB said. The engine's electronic control unit was missing, and numerous internal components of the engine were significantly damaged.

The NTSB said organic material was found in the right engine and on the wings and fuselage. Samples of the material were sent to the U.S. Reynolds said that when he Department of Agriculture reached the river bottom he for DNA analysis.

Investigators also were interviewing passengers about their experiences. The baggage left on the plane was being removed, and crews were working to return the items.

Police have already located several pieces of debris from the flight, including 35 flotation seat cushions, 12 life jackets, 15 pieces of luggage, two briefcases, 11 purses, 15 suit jackets and shirts, four shoes and two hats, Browne said. The plane's right engine was still attached to the body of the plane.

Has Canada Goose made the world's warmest winter coat?

he mercury dredged to minus-26 degrees last week here in Minnesota.

But I was not worried. A shipment had arrived from Canada Goose, the Torontobased outerwear maker that still deals in beaver-fur trim, hoods with coyote fur, and buckets of its eponymous goose-down insulation.

The company, which has serviced polar expeditions and Mount Everest climbs for decades, touts its catalog as containing the "best extreme cold weather outerwear in the world."

My test coat, the Snow

Mantra Parka, is bar none the warmest winter coat I have ever pulled on. It has a large tunnel hood with a coyotefur ruff, a billowed body stuffed two inches thick with pounds of goose down, and a fleece-lined throat latch to seal the neck and chin from chill. The jacket, a model purportedly favored by researchers at the South Pole, has been around for years. It has an expeditionary look that Will Steger could model with no issue, including knit insignia patches, reflective striping, a D-ring clip, and a plastic ID window on the chest pocket so people know who you are under all that fluff.

The company (www.canada-goose.com) touts the Snow Mantra as holding its own to temperatures as low as minus-70 degrees Fahrenheit.

But this warmth does not come cheap. The Snow Mantra, made to last for years in extreme climates, costs an astounding $885.

Despite its high price, the coat has extremely limited use. It is made for outdoors activities in extreme cold where the wearer will be stationary or fairly inactive. Walking, hunting in a blind, dog sledding, stargazing, ice fishing, polar research, and light snowshoeing would be appropriate activities. Anything more rigorous and you'll soon be sweating.

To test the coat, I hiked a couple miles one evening outdoors in minus-20 degree weather with only a shortsleeve T-shirt under the Snow Mantra. I paired the coat with boots, big mittens, and Canada Goose's $250 Tundra Down Pant, which have thick, insulated nylon legs.

In this getup, I was toasty warm the whole time and sweating when I walked up hills in the woods.

Indeed, in weather above 10 degrees, Canada Goose's offerings were almost too warm to wear for anything more than standing around in the woods or on a frozen lake.

Oregon woman afflicted by multiple sclerosis attempting to finish Seven Summits feat by climbing Mount Everest

By Mark Morical The (Bend) Bulletin

END, Ore. — Wendy Booker's left side is numb from her toes to the top of her rib cage.

Yet somehow, she has managed to climb the tallest peaks on six continents. For Booker to complete the climbing feat known as the Seven Summits, just one peak remains: Mount Everest, the highest mountain on Earth.

Living with multiple sclerosis, Booker says, is much like climbing a mountain.

"I wanted to show what life with MS is like," she says. "It's a struggle. You can't always get to the top."

Booker, 54, will strive to become the first person with multiple sclerosis to climb the highest mountain on each of the world's seven continents when she attempts Everest this spring. At 29,035 feet, Mount Everest towers above the Himalayas on the border of the south Asian countries of Nepal and Tibet.

"(MS) takes good athletes and destroys them," Link says. "What she's done is just incredible."

After experiencing leg numbness, Booker was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis in 1998.

Boston and Boulder, Colo., Booker will have plenty of help from Central Oregon climbers.

Booker, who has received international media attention on her quest, plans to climb Everest with Brooke Barnes of Mountain Link guide service in Bend. The two have trained at Mount Bachelor, practicing ladder crossings while wearing crampons, in preparation for the dangerous Khumbu Icefall on Everest.

Barnes and Booker have reached together the top of three of the Seven Summits: Mount Vinson Massif in Antarctica, Aconcagua in Argentina, and Mount Kosciuszko in Australia.

Booker says she will not climb without Barnes.

"We definitely have bonded in a way that only the mountain can do," says Barnes, 40. "She's a really gung-ho woman."

Robert Link, the owner of Mountain Link, who reached the Everest summit in 1990, will communicate with Booker and Barnes from Everest Base Camp. Booker climbed Russia's Mount that I said, 'Before I get in that wheelchair, I'm gonna run the Boston Marathon.' I knew there was more I had to do."

An autoimmune disease, multiple sclerosis is an inflammation and degradation of the nervous system. 400,000 More than Americans have the disease, according to the Multiple Sclerosis Association of America. Currently, there is no cure for the disease, but it is not fatal. Symptoms include an increasing loss of coordination, muscle weakness and numbness.

Booker says her multiple sclerosis is in remission. but she concedes that the disease is "unpredictable."

Booker notes that before 1993 there were no drugs for the disease. But she has taken a daily injection of a drug called Copaxone for the last 11 years to manage the disease. She says she has no visible signs of the illness, just the numbness on her left side, which she describes as a fuzzy, tingling feeling.

Booker, who had started running regularly shortly before she was diagnosed, she was asked to be part of the first team of climbers with multiple sclerosis to attempt to summit Denali (Mount McKinley) in Alaska.

The group went unguided and did not reach the summit. Frustrated, Booker vowed to train harder and to use a guide the next time. spent She time training in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, and in the Cascade Mountains.

Booker reached the summit of Denali in 2004.

"I thought, 'What can I do now?" she recalls. "And that's when the Seven Summits started to come in."

Over the next 41/2 years, she climbed 19,340-foot Kilimanjaro in Africa, followed by Elbrus, Aconcagua, Vinson Massif and Koscuiszko.

All that remains is the highest and most notorious mountain in the world. Everest is an endless source of controversy for its overcrowding and peril. More than 200 climbers have died on the mountain.

Booker notes that fewer than 25 percent of Everest

"I really feel I know when to say 'when,' and Mountain Link respects that," she says. "We listen to one another. You have to have that trust."

Because of the multiple sclerosis, Booker has difficulties with balance and dealing with cold weather.

"She'll deteriorate faster if she gets to a certain point," Barnes says. "Sometimes, it just doesn't allow her to do it. When she gets tired, she'll drag the left side of her body. That's when we've gone too far."

Before her diagnosis, Booker, who is divorced, worked as an interior decorator. Now, she makes a living traveling the country as motivational speaker. а Sponsors pay much of the expenses for her mountain climbing.

dicular to its orbital plane; it's tilted almost 27 degrees. Consequently, as Saturn circumnavigates its 29-year orbit, there are two times when the rings appear tilted open. Halfway between these times they appear edge-on. Since the rings are very thin — perhaps less than 50 feet — they virtually disappear.

Earth's relatively rapid orbit, on a slightly different plane than Saturn's, causes us to "bob" up and down relative to Saturn's equator.

Depending on the timing either one- or three-ring plane crossings can occur within a year's time.

In 1995-96 Earth crossed Saturn's equator three times. This September - one half-Saturn-orbit later — we cross only once.

In the meantime, Saturn's rings may disappoint in the telescope. They were tilted just under one degree on Christmas, will peak at only four degrees in mid-May, then shrink away to zero by early September when Saturn will be too close to the Sun to view.

Backyard planet watchers' loss is astronomers' gain, however. Edge-on rings offer an opportunity for large telescopes to discover

For the deep, dark temperatures it's made to endure, the Snow Mantra excels. Extra features including knit nylon cuffs to ensconce the wrists and internal mesh pockets made to hold heatemitting chemical hand warmers add amazing warmth.

But the cocoon of heat has performance disadvantages, too. This coat is bulky and heavy, tipping nearly seven pounds on my scale. Its hood is huge and immobile, blocking peripheral vision when deployed with its fluffy coyote fur stuck out.

Canada Goose offers a range of products, including less-extreme parkas, aviatorstyle jackets, down vests, and casual winter coats.

With its hefty price tag and limited use, the Snow Mantra has a small audience - mainly polar explorers and dwellers of the high latitudes.

But for these arctic individuals, Canada Goose's coat could mean the difference between comfort and cold even life and death — in the most frigid and forlorn places on the planet.

"We're bringing (buffalo) back to their native range." - Dax Magnus, a wildlife biologist for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources

31 Utah bison headed for the Book Cliffs

By Mike Stark Associated Press writer

ANTELOPE ISLAND, Utah – For the first time in nearly 70 years Utah has a new freeroaming bison herd.

State officials this week are taking the final steps toward restoring bison to the Book Cliffs, a remote and rugged area in eastern Utah where bison images appear on ancient rock art and skulls have been found in the fossil records.

"We're bringing them back to their native range," said Dax Magnus, a wildlife biologist for the state Division of Wildlife Resources.

Eventually, state officials expect the Book Cliffs herd to grow to around 450. That would make Utah — which already has one herd managed by an American Indian tribe and two herds controlled by the state — among the West's leaders in the number of wild bison roaming within its borders.

"It's a neat opportunity to have kind of an icon of the American West" expanding on Utah's publicly managed lands, said Dave Olsen of the wildlife division, who oversaw a plan approved in 2007 to bring bison to the Book Cliffs.

On Saturday and Sunday, crews in a helicopter and an airplane captured 31 bison from the Henry Mountains in southeastern Utah. The bison were trucked to Antelope Island State Park in the middle of the Great Salt Lake.

The park, which has about 500 bison of its own, provided a series of chutes and corrals where the bison could be sorted and checked for disease before heading for the Book Cliffs.

Magnus was one of about 20 state employees who spent much of Tuesday at Antelope Island getting the animals ready for the trip.

This undated image provided by the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources shows a helicopter bringing a captured bison to the handling area on the Henry Mountains in southeastern Utah. The bison are being used to start a new bison herd in the Utah Book Cliffs.

They've been tested for diseases such as brucellosis to 2,000 pounds, once and tuberculosis and have a clean health record, wildlife officials said. About a dozen were affixed with radio collars so the herd's movement can be tracked.

The bison, which have had minimal human contact, behaved as expected in the chutes, snorting, bucking and staring wide-eyed at anyone who approached. Domesticated, they're not.

But that's the idea, wildlife officials said. The project is intended to return an element of the wild back to Utah.

Bison, which can weigh up roamed huge swaths of North America before being nearly wiped out in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

As bison numbers slowly rebounded in the West, some were brought to Antelope Island as part of a ranching operation. Today the herd numbers around 500 and is one of the main reasons why people visit, second only to views of the landscape, said Ron Taylor, the park's managand brought to the San Rafael Desert. The herd grew and eventually moved to the Henry Mountains, where today there are around 450.

Decades ago, state wildlife officials started talking about returning bison to the Book Cliffs.

The state, with contributions from several advocacy groups, paid $4 million for three ranches in the area and for the grazing rights on public lands. That has reduced the number of cattle that will share the land with the bison.

Some also worried that the bison could impede oil and gas development in the area. State officials agreed not to use bison as a way to limit mineral development.

When the bison arrive in the Book Cliffs yesterday and today - after a seven-hour trailer ride — they'll have more than 1,300 square miles of state and federal land to roam. They'll join 14 bison brought out in August and hundreds on nearby tribal lands that are controlled by the Ute tribe.

Magnus said the area's remoteness and ample food supplies make it a perfect spot for bison.

"You're really about as far from civilization as you can get," Magnus said.

It could take a decade or longer before the herd flourishes to 450 and still years before a hunt is considered.

There are no discussions yet about starting herds elsewhere.

"Bison are large, big-game animals that need lots of open space," Olsen said. "With the growth in Utah now, it's questionable how much open space-type land will be available in the future for large free-roaming animals."

Tricking out Ruger's fabulous 10/22

t has recently been estimated that between 2 and 2.5 billion .22 rimfire rounds are fired annually worldwide.

Here in America for the past 40 years, a hefty percentage of those bullets have been triggered by Ruger 10/22's. In today's column, I'd like to highlight a number of aftermarket products that can transform your rather Spartan 10/22 into a highly individualized custom gun.

Since the heart of any gun is its barrel, enhancing the utility and effectiveness of your 10/22 can be as simple as swapping out its rifled tube. Due to the rifle's unique V-Block mounting system, this switch can be accomplished in about 10 minutes' time and requires nothing more than a standard hex head driver.

Replacement barrels for 10/22s are available in either carbon or stainless steel and are machined to the standard factory sporter diameter or a hefty .920-inch bull barrel configuration.

Interested in high accuracy and lightweight? Magnum Research markets an ultra light model featuring a carbon fiber wrapped steel barrel liner. All these custom offerings trump standard factory barrels by offering machined feed ramps, precise match chambers and rifling, target muzzle crowns and longitudinal or helical fluting to reduce weight, speed cooling, and enhance rigidity.

The major players: Butler Creek, Shooters Ridge, Volquartsen, Tactical Solutions (out of Boise) and Green Mountain promise and deliver impressive half-inch groups at 50 yards with quality ammo. To aficionados, a gunstock is much more than just a handle; it is a dedicated piece of firearm furniture and it is within the realm of 10/22 stock options that the wonder and excesses of capitalism reveal themselves. Ramline, Butler Creek, Uncle Mike's, Shooters Ridge, and Hogue peddle fine synthetic sporter and target stocks for around $100. Stealthy types might want to check out Tapco and A.T.I.'s tactical-style models, replete with folding or collapsing butt stocks and Picatinny rails for mounting lights and lasers.

Prefer wood? Boyd, Volquartsen and S&K Industries market wonderful sporter and target models in laminated hardwood, as well as various grades of American walnut. If money is less of an obstacle, Bell & Carlson and McMillian would love to sell you one of their high-end synthetic models.

Rimfire riflemen burn up lots of ammo and high capacity magazines appeal to many. Butler Creek, Eagle, Ramline, and Shooters Ridge produce 25-, 30-, and even 50-shot offerings.

To keep my well worn 10/22's reliably extracting all those empty casings, I make it a practice to replace the factory extractors/springs with Volquartsen's Exact Edge extractor. Not even the most stubborn case can resist this claw's tug. Cheap insurance, indeed, at $12.

Though I prefer iron sights on my rimfires, these aging eyes need some help nowadays. That optical assistance has come by way of Williams' fiber optic "Fire Sights." By framing the target in multicolored points of light, I can hit with greater consistency. Best $25 I ever spent.

All my 10/22s are

Snow bikes

The bikes come with full suspension, but no brakes, which might seem intimidating to some newcomers. They have footrests, but no pedals.

As with skiing or snowboarding, when riding the bike down a hill the rider will want to descend at angles, not steer straight. And when making a turn you don't maneuver the handle bars, but instead swing your hips.

All the steering is in the back, said Hulbert's son, Cade Hulbert. The front-end is for stabilization.

The Hulberts visited Magic Mountain Ski Resort the past two Saturdays to demo the bikes to potential customers. Though most of the resort's visitors Saturday were using skis or snowboards, the bikes seemed to also have sparked an interest among some people, said resort owner Gary Miller. While the Times-News was at the mountain, however, it was observed that it was mostly Hulbert and his family and friends who rode the bikes.

Miller originally bought four bikes to keep at the mountain, but by Saturday had sold two out of that stock. He had plans to buy more, he said, so he can always keep at least four on hand.

They're not for everyone, though, and surely not doable for everyone's wallet. The bikes start at about $895.

The bikes would likely appeal mostly to bicycle or motocross enthusiasts, said Cade Hulbert. It is that group of people who would likely find them easiest to maneuver, though other groups would find them just as fun, he said.

"They're very easy to take on a ski lift, and very easy to ride down the hill," said Brian equipped with recoil buffers by Buffer Technologies. This cylindrical piece of polymer replaces the factory steel recoil bolt and makes the gun much more comfortable to shoot by negating most of the shock and noise of the bolt's "back slam." Certifiable bargain at about $10.

Have I piqued your curiosity? If so, why not check out some of these fine aftermarket products at vour local dealer or on the Net. Before long you could be creating your very own "one of a kind" 10/22. Good Shooting!

We are a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the bankruptcy code.

nswer: As a general rule the only debts that will discharged in a Chapter A 7 bankruptcy are those debts that you had already incurred on the filing date of your bankruptcy case. Since the medical debts were incurred after the filing of your bankruptcy case, they will not be discharged. One potential solution is to convert your Chapter 7 bankruptcy to a Chapter 13 bankruptcy. In doing so, you would be required to repay a portion of your debts by making at least 36 monthly payments to the bankruptcy trustee, based on your ability to repay. When you convert a case in this fashion, you can add the debts incurred after the initial filing, and those creditors will be able to share in the distribution of the money you pay to the bankruptcy trustee. Another possibility is to ask the court to allow you to voluntarily dismiss your existing Chapter 7 case and refile your case as a new Chapter 7 case that would include the new debts. You need to speak to an experienced bankruptcy attorney to advise you on what course of action to take.

Jerome library hosts exhibit, Franklin portrayal By Mary Hanson

Times-News correspondent

The spicy fragrance of tea and apple cider permeated the Jerome Public Library Saturday as a crowd gathered for a reception and exhibitopening entitled, "The History and Heritage of Our Country: Masterpieces of American Art."

Following the reception, everyone was invited to sip tea and visit with a special library guest, Benjamin Franklin. The famous but aging Franklin — portrayed by historical impersonator Tim McNeal — was in the mood to talk about his life as he contemplated writing his 1788 autobiography. Franklin chuckled to himself as he recalled starting work as an apprentice printer and ending as a full-fledged printer at the age of 16 due to a series of lucky breaks for him and bad fortune for others.

He took the audience through his participation in the development of the new government of the colonies that became the United

He paused over his establishment of the first library in the Americas, something he seemed quite proud of. He marveled about the sustained popularity of his "Poor Richard's Almanac."

After growing a bit weary, Franklin ended his talk and invited his audience to ask questions which they did for 20 minutes or more, with answers now coming from McNeal.

"I've done a lot of things in my life but mostly having to do with theater and public speaking," he said. "I've started doing Ben Franklin only recently. Before that I played Meriwether Lewis for several years."

Originally from Michigan and an Michigan State University graduate, McNeal, a grandfather of three, said he spends his summers as a Mesa Verde National Park ranger in Colorado. In the winter he and his wife, Sharon, travel while McNeal studies history and does his impersonations.

'Tea With Ben," along with the exhibit, was made possible for the Jerome Library by funding from the Idaho Humanities council, the state-based affiliate of the National Endowment of the Humanities, and the American Library Association.

The Jerome Library is located at 100 First Ave. E., Jerome.

Seroquel not advised for elderly with dementia

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please give your opinion on Seroquel being prescribed to a patient with dementia. I've heard it is a dangerous drug when given to the elderly, as it can cause death. Also, should this drug be given long term?

DEAR READER: Seroquel is a medication used to treat conditions such as bipolar disorder. It is not approved for behavioral problems related to dementia. Black box warnings for elderly patients with a dementia-related psychosis indicate an increased risk of serious side effects, including pneumonia, heart attack, stroke and death. The product is available in doses from 25-milligram to 300-milligram tablets or capsules by prescription only. When the drug is prescribed for the elderly, the recommended initial dose is 25 milligrams daily. Contraindications are noted for people with a history of hypertension, stroke, thyroid disorder, diabetes, high cholesterol, seizures or heart attack.

Side effects can include fever, sweating, uncontrolled muscle movements, severe headaches, visual and gait disturbances, and more. Be sure to speak with the prescribing physician should any symptoms occur.

Seroquel XR extendedrelease tablets also contain black-box warnings because of an increased mortality rate in elderly patients with dementia. XR is indicated for the treatment of schizophrenia, a name given to a group of mental disorders in which a patient loses touch with reality and is unable to think or act in a rational manner. The condition is often treated with tranquilizers and specific drugs to lessen the degree of depression. Extended-release tabs are not recommended for the elderly. Adverse reactions include dry mouth, dizziness, orthostatic hypotension, constipation, a feeling of sedation and more.

There are a number of interactions with this drug. Be sure to advise your physician of any medications you are taking to ensure there will not be a negative response should he or she choose to prescribe Seroquel XR.

You are correct that the drug can be dangerous for elderly patients with dementia. I can only hope the prescribing physician fully researched all the options before prescribing it and that the dose is a reasonable one.

All patients regardless of age that are treated with antidepressants or antipsychotics for any condition should be monitored carefully for negative alterations in behavior, especially during the early stages of a new medication. Chief Justice John Roberts administers the oath of office to President Barack Obama at the White House on Wednesday evening.

Obama takes oath of office — again

By Ben Feller Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — After the flub heard around the world, President Barack Obama has taken the oath of office. Again.

Chief Justice John Roberts delivered the oath to Obama on Wednesday night at the White House — a rare doover. The surprise moment came in response to Tuesday's much-noticed stumble, when Roberts got the words of the oath a little off, which prompted Obama to do so, too.

Don't worry, the White House says: Obama has still been president since noon on Inauguration Day.

Nevertheless, Obama and Roberts went through the drill again out of what White House counsel Greg Craig called "an abundance of caution."

This time, the scene was the White House Map Room in front of a small group of reporters, not the Capitol platform before the whole watching world.

"We decided that because it was so much fun ...," Obama joked to reporters who followed press secretary Robert Gibbs into the room. No TV camera crews or news photographers were allowed in. A few of Obama's closest aides were there, along with a White House photographer. Roberts put on his black robe.

"Are you ready to take the oath?" he said.

"Yes, I am," Obama said. "And we're going to do it very slowly."

Roberts then led Obama through the oath without any missteps.

The president said he did not have his Bible with him, but that the oath was binding anyway.

The original, bungled version on Tuesday caught observers by surprise and then got replayed on cable news shows.

It happened when Obama interrupted Roberts midway through the opening line, in which the president repeats his name and solemnly swears.

Next in the oath is the phrase " ... that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States." But Roberts rearranged the order of the words, not saying "faithfully" until after "president of the United States."

That appeared to throw Obama off. He stopped abruptly at the word "execute." Recognizing something was off, Roberts then repeated the phrase, putting "faithfully" in the right place but without repeating "execute."

But Obama then repeated Roberts' original, incorrect version: "... the office of president of the United States faithfully."

AROUND THE NATION

WASHINGTON Clinton confirmed, but new questions raised about Holder

Republicans Wednesday put new obstacles in the path of Eric Holder's quest to become attorney general, raising concerns that he will prosecute intelligence agents who engaged in potentially illegal interrogation techniques and postponing consideration of his nomination.

The Senate easily confirmed Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton as secretary of state Wednesday on a 94-2 vote after Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas, dropped his request for more information about foreign donations to former President Clinton's charitable foundation. Cornyn said Wednesday that he had been swayed by a private conversation with Clinton, and he was among those supporting her nomination. Sens. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., and David Vitter, R-La., were the only dissenting votes.

But even as he was getting out of the way of one appointee to President Obama's Cabinet, Cornyn raised new questions about another. The Senate Judiciary Committee decided Wednesday morning to delay a vote to send Holder's nomination to the full Senate, while lawmakers attended the morning National Prayer Service with the Obamas. The hearing was rescheduled for Wednesday afternoon, but Republicans then requested a one-week delay on the nomination that Democrats were required to grant under committee rules.

Geithner apologizes, moves toward approval

Timothy Geithner apologized to Congress Wednesday for what he called "careless mistakes" in failing to pay $34,000 in taxes and moved closer to confirmation as treasury secretary and the Obama administration's point man in reviving the economy.

While some Republican lawmakers questioned whether Geithner was being forthright in the explanation of his tax errors, he appeared to have sufficient support to win approval from the Senate Finance Committee.

Several senators told Geithner during the panel's lengthy confirmation hearing that they planned to vote for his nomination. And Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., told him, "You will be confirmed" although Roberts said his phones were "ringing off the hook" from constituents upset about the prospect of having a treasury secretary who was so careless in tending to his own taxes.

Committee Chairman Max Baucus, D-Mont., scheduled a committee vote for today with the new Obama administration hoping the nomination can quickly be approved by the full Senate so that Geithner can assume his role in dealing with the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression. Baucus called Geithner's tax transgressions "disappointing mistakes," but said he believes they were innocent ones — and should not bar Geithner, who is currently the head of the Federal Reserve's New York regional bank, from serving in the administration's top economic position.

NEW YORK Reports: Kennedy withdraws Senate bid

ALBANY — Published reports say Caroline Kennedy is withdrawing from her effort to join the U.S. Senate in the seat once held by her uncle, slain Sen. Bobby Kennedy.

The New York Times and New York Post reported Wednesday that Kennedy has ended her monthlong bid to succeed Hillary Rodham Clinton, who was confirmed as secretary of state. The reports come a day after Kennedy's uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, suffered a seizure at the inauguration of President Barack Obama. He has been treated for an aggressive brain tumor.

The Times cited a source it didn't identify as saying Kennedy withdrew out of concern for her uncle and his illness. But the Post cited an unidentified source as saying she dropped out because she learned Gov. David Paterson would not choose her.

The move appears to clear the way for several other candidates including Attorney General Andrew Cuomo, who Paterson confirmed Tuesday is under consideration. Cuomo surpassed Kennedy in statewide polls last week as the favorite of New Yorkers who were surveyed.

Paterson has said he hopes to make an appointment by this weekend.

CUBA

Argentine prez: Castro 'believes in Obama'

HAVANA — Fidel Castro watched the U.S. inauguration on television and said Wednesday that Barack Obama seems "like a man who is absolutely sincere," Argentina's president said after meeting with the ailing Cuban icon.

"Fidel believes in Obama," Cristina Fernandez said. The meeting with Fernandez, just before she ended a four-day visit to Cuba, dispelled persistent rumors that the 82-year-old Castro had suffered a stroke or lapsed into a coma in recent days.

"I was with Fidel about an hour or more," she told reporters at the airport as she left. "We were chatting, conversing. He looked good."

Fernandez said Castro wore the track suit that has become his trademark since he fell ill in July 2006 and vanished from public view. A spokesman said the two met alone.

"He told me he had followed the inauguration of Barack Obama very closely, that he had watched the inauguration on television all day," Fernandez said. "He had a very good perception of President Obama."

Fernandez said Castro called Obama "a man who seems absolutely sincere," who believes strongly in his ideas "and who hopefully can carry them out."

Raul Castro, who took over the presidency from his brother, appeared with Fernandez, scoffing at the rumors about his brother's health.

"Do you think if he were really gravely ill that I'd be smiling here?" Raul Castro said. "Soon I'm going to take a trip to Europe. You guys think I could leave here if Fidel were really in grave condition?"

John Robert (Bob) Meiners

RUPERT — John Robert (Bob) Meiners, 81-year-old Rupert resident, died Monday, Jan. 19, 2009, from injuries sustained in a farming accident. He Sept. born and Blauer Meiners. He received his education and graduated from the Burley school system. He left home and went to northern Idaho to work in the silver mines, but being young and alone, the comforts of home soon forced him to make his way back to Burley.

He met and married Lola Edwards. To this union, three children were born, Robert Orlando, Romanda Fae and Walter Phillip. During this time, he enlisted in the Army and, in 1946, was deployed to Japan. After that tour of duty ended, he was once again called to serve in 1952. Upon his release, the family moved to Idaho Falls for a short time while Bob worked for Lockwood Graders, a potato equipment manufacturer. Bob was instrumental in the planning and development of the companies articulating piler and many other designs used on harvesters, windrowers and self-propelled machines.

When the couple divorced, Bob returned to Rupert and became the shop foreman of the Lockwood facility there. He met and married Barbara Broadhead, and the union added two more daughters, Bonnie Jean and Joaunee Dee Plocher. Shortly after the marriage, his oldest son, ing the grandsons fishing and hunting and lavished them with all his stories. The family tradition of spending Memorial Day weekend at Duck Falls running the rapids in his jet boat marked its 46th year in 2008. It has now spanned three generations.

At the time of his retirement, his grandson, Jeremy, had started the pursuit of farming. Dad had always said his one regret was not buying his own farm in his younger days. So he spent the last 15 years accomplishing that dream by partnering with Jeremy. He loved going in the semi or going out to check the fields and was never shy to let his feeling be known as to what was being done right or wrong. His involvement became an integral part of his life when his wife, Barbara, passed away in 2002.

He cherished the bustle of activity that kept him active and also the time he still spent hunting and fishing with his best friend, Mike Kechter. They had ice-fished at the Minidoka Dam three days before his death. It was while spending the day with Jeremy that he left us. But he would have wanted it no other way. Words cannot express the great loss we feel, but the memories and legacy he gave us binds us together and keeps us strong. His quiet demeanor has steadied us through many storms. He was a lifelong member of the LDS Church.

He is survived by his chil-Romanda (Bruce) dren, Berry, Wally (Vicki) Meiners and Bonnie Jacobson, all of Rupert, and Joaunee (Trent) Vorwaller of Denver, Colo.: grandchildren, Charmayne Scow, Bruce Berry, Masina Berry, Tyler Berry, Shantell Berry, Phillip Meiners, Cole Meiners, Wendy Meiners, Ieremy Vorwaller, Jud Vorwaller, Casey Vorwaller and Jaimi Vorwaller; 12 greatgrandchildren; three sisters; and three brothers. He was preceded in death by his parents; wife, Barbara; son, Robert; his in-laws, Guy and Marv McAlister; two sisters; and two brothers. The funeral will be at 10 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 24, at the Rupert LDS 3rd Ward Chapel. 526 S. F St. The viewing will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 23, at the Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and one hour prior to the service Saturday at the church.

BUHL — Wanda J. Dye, of Buhl, went home to our Heavenly Father on Friday, Dec. 26, 2008, following a short battle with lung cancer. She was 72.

Wanda was born in Racetrack (Panama), Okla., in 1936 to Richard and Erma Morgan. She was so small, her mother made her a bassinet out of a shoe box. She was the eldest and only girl and the "big" sister to four brothers.

Wanda was first married to Dick Shearer of Kentucky. She had four children with him before they divorced in 1961. On Valentine's Day in 1962, she married Jim Dye of Arizona, a former Marine and divorced father with five children of his own. Together, they added one more child to the mix.

In 1992, they moved to Buhl, where they were both employed by Paul Welch at the Buhl Landfill. Jim later retired and Wanda stayed on at the landfill when the countv of Twin Falls took over and later when Waste Management took over. She was a clerk and gatehouse attendant. She retired in 2005. Wanda loved spending time with her children, grandchildren and greatgrandchildren. When she wasn't baby-sitting, she loved going to auctions, yard sales

Hazel Stevens

HAILEY — Hazel Stevens passed away peacefully Monday, Jan. 19, 2009, at the age of 89.

She was born in Richfield on April 23. 1919, to William and Lena Carter. Hazel was raised in Richfield with her three brothers and two sisters. She attended Richfield schools and graduated from Richfield High School in 1937. Hazel knew from an early age she wanted to be a teacher, so she continued her education at the Albion Normal School, receiving her teaching credentials in 1939. Her first two years of teaching were in a one-room school house in Priest, which was a small farming community between Carey and Richfield. She then taught second grade in Richfield from 1941 to 1944.

Hazel secretly married Lewis (L.A.) Stevens on Dec. 13, 1941, because her teaching contract stated that she stay unmarried for the school year. L.A. had enlisted in the Air Force and did not want to leave before he married the love of his life. In 1944, Hazel moved to Gila Bend, Ariz., to join her husband. Backup guard Odum comes through big for CSI men

Golden Eagles host Snow College tonight

By Mike Christensen Times-News writer

When destiny called, Chuck Odum was ready.

With starting College of Southern Idaho point guard Jamelle Barrett out with a sprained ankle last week, a heavy weight fell upon the shoulders of Odum, Barrett's only backup at the important position.

But Odum never batted an eye, not even with the task of playing then-No. 12 and unbeaten North Idaho College.

"You don't even think about it. You just go and do it. You gotta do what you gotta do to get the win," said Odum, who barely left the floor in No. 22 CSI's 73-70 overtime win over the Cardinals last Saturday. Odum's line: 15 points, seven rebounds, five assists and only three turnovers in 43 minutes.

"Chuck's really come through when the team's needed him to," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar, whose team rose two spots in this week's NJCAA Division I Men's Basketball Top 25. "He's really buckled down and focused and played within himself.

CSI's transition game was in rare form in last Saturday's 84-59 rout of No. 20 North Idaho College when the Golden Eagles (15-3, 3-0 SWAC) shot 73.3 percent in the first half. A repeat performance will come in handy tonight against what Rogers calls "the best Snow team I've seen since I've been here."

The Badgers (12-6, 3-0 SWAC) have two 6-foot-1 post players (Amy Weitzeil and Amy Parkinson) that can score inside, while sophomores Torlee Nenbee and Abbie Cook lead a group of talented shooters that have helped the team rebound from a 1-4 start.

Eagles Notes: The Golden climbed one spot in this week's national polls, while North Idaho is No. 20. Jefferson College kept is stanglehold on the No. 1 spot.

True to most preseason forecasts, the Jerome boys basketball team has a steady command of the Great Basin Conference West midway through its league schedule, underscored by Wednesday's dominating 52-34 victory over visiting Minico.

Nearly flawless Bruins rout Highland

By David Bashore Times-News writer

A four-game losing streak to Highland, last weekend's sluggish loss to Madison and the Twin Falls football team's thrashing at the hands of Highland earlier this year was more than enough motivation for Braden Box, Jon Pulsifer and the rest of the Bruin boys basketball team on Wednesday night.

Almost flawlessly running their new offense and offering up the most miserly of defenses, the Bruins snapped that streak, rebounded from that loss, and avenged that demolition in one fell swoop with a 68-48 stroll past the visiting Rams.

Box and Pulsifer led Twin Falls (9-3, 3-1 Region Four-Five-Six) with 15 points apiece, the former hitting four 3-pointers and the latter giving enough offense to go with a respectable defensive effort against Highland forward Taysom Hill, who has verbally committed to Stanford to play football.

"That Madison game we

"That Madison game we had a really bad start. We came out tonight and really wanted to start strong and finish strong, and to play four good quarters of basketball." - Braden Box had a really bad start. We (Hill's reputation) so at first I came out tonight and really wanted to start strong and finish strong, and to play four good quarters of basketball," Box said. "The coaches have been talking about carrying a little swagger and savvy. We came in with the mindset that this was our game, and we ran our game the entire night."

Pulsifer came into the night careless about how many points he scored. He knew that his big challenge was to come up against Hill, one of the best all-around athletes in the state.

Hill still scored a gamehigh 18 for the Rams (7-7, 2-2), but Twin Falls coach Matt Harr called it "a very hardearned 18" with the defensive effort Pulsifer gave.

"I've heard a lot about was a little nervous, but when he caught that first alley-oop (layup) I knew it was on," Pulsifer said. "I just took it heart to play good defense against him and make sure that he played good defense against me."

Both players gave and took in the defensive battle, with Hill deflecting one of Pulsifer's shots and Pulsifer's quick hands darting in to steal the ball when Hill tried a cross-over dribble on a drive to the basket. But ultimately Pulsifer perhaps just got the better of his ofthyped foe.

That was one of those things where you take a really competitive kid, throw him in there and say, 'OK, here's one of the best players in the state,'" Harr said. "I was really pleased with Jon's effort, he rose to the challenge and he didn't lose a stride offensively either."

The win puts Twin Falls in a tie for the region lead at the midway point, with Madison the team with which the Bruins share the lead — still to come to Twin Falls down the stretch.

That in mind, the Bruins would figure to be the favorites to take the top seed into the regional tournament, but Harr and the players aren't counting their chickens just yet.

'We need to take care of business on Friday, but we're headed in the right direction," Harr said.

Twin Falls returns to Region Four-Five-Six action Friday when the Bruins host Skyline.

challenge each other to get better."

The upset-minded Spartans jumped out to a 12-8 lead after one quarter. To better match up with Jerome's size, Minico coach Mike Graefe shuffled his starting lineup, calling on sophomores Kevin Jurgensmeier and Casey Christiansen.

Jerome grabbed its first lead just before halftime as Gus

Callen converted a steal into a layup and Zach Ingraham earned an inside bucket to go up 21-20.

"Minico was hitting its shots in the first half and coach (Joe Messick) told us at halftime to keep playing hard and they'll cool down," Pearce said. "We just blew it open at the end. They're a good ball club, but we got them tonight."

The Tigers were able to blow it open with a 20-6 third quarter performance. Jerome forced several Minico turnovers and poured it on offensively as Williams asserted himself inside.

"We thought we could take their big guy out and I could maybe penetrate on him and we wanted to get it in the post a little more in the second half and it seemed to work for us," Williams said.

Jerome's lead ballooned to 12 points in a blink of an eye, and the Tigers led by as many as 19 in the fourth quarter.

"Their two-point lead goes to eight, then to 12. It was quick. They (Jerome) can all shoot it, and that basket gets big when you've got a 12point lead," said Graefe.

Tyson Crane led Minico with 10 points and seven boards.

Both teams have key GBW matchups coming up. The Spartans host rival Burley on Friday. Jerome hosts Wood River next Wednesday.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. -Tayshaun Prince scored 12 of his 25 points in the third quarter, helping the Detroit Pistons pull away from the Toronto Raptors in a 95-76

The Pistons used Richard Hamilton as a reserve after the All-Star shooting guard started his first 611 games, including the playoffs, in his seven seasons with the team.

CELTICS 98, HEAT 83

MIAMI — Éddie House scored 20 points - more than he'd managed in any game this season — in the second quarter, finishing with 25 and Boston ran its winning streak to six games.

Ray Allen scored a gamehigh 27 for the Celtics, who were a season-high 15-for-25 from 3-point range. It matched the most 3s ever allowed by the Heat in their 21 seasons. Kevin Garnett had 16 points and 13 rebounds, and Paul Pierce added 14 points for Boston.

Armstrong having a good time as his cycling comeback begins savs his comeback to cycling will last at least a year.

Beyond that, the seven-time Tour de France champion isn't sure. It all depends on age, health and his campaign to raise cancer awareness.

In the meantime, as he rides in the Tour Down Under and nowhere near the lead, this much is clear: He's having a good time.

"The comeback, so to speak, is at least a year," he said. "It's not three or four, I don't think, but it could be two years. I've got to get through the first part of this season and then decide.

"There are other things, too, that need to fall into place but primarily my condition and how this all feels and how the (cancer awareness) campaign unfolds."

The 37-year-old Texan is aiming for another Tour de France crown and said he has no reason to reconsider the wisdom of his comeback after completing two stages of this race. He rode 90 miles in fierce heat Tuesday and another 92 miles in cooler weather Wednesday. The six-day event ends Sunday.

"I came in fairly open minded," he said. "I didn't know what to expect in terms of the crowds and the reaction and my condition in the race. Overall, I'm pleased. I said at the beginning I'm glad I made this decision I made ADELAIDE, Australia — Lance Armstrong and I maintain that statement. I can't ask for anything more. I'm having fun in the race so I can't complain about much."

AUSTRALIAN OPEN Serena Williams, Dementieva advance

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) Serena Williams ignored pain and frustration to reach the third round of the Australian Open with a straight sets win over Gisela Dulko on Thursday.

It was far from routine.

The second-seeded Williams, hoping to extend a sequence of winning the Australian title every alternate year since 2003, had to fend off six set points in the ninth game of the second set to prevent the match going to a third. That game went to a dozen deuces before Williams broke to get back on serve.

She got treatment on her left ankle in the changeover and, grimacing with pain, held and then broke Dulko again - this game going to deuce a halfdozen times - to get her chance to serve it out.

After all that, the nine-time Grand Slam winner finished with ace on her first match point, advancing in 1 hour, 50 minutes.

"It was a very tough second set, she started playing unbelievable, hitting winners left and right," Williams said. "She had a couple of opportunities but I always felt I wasn't going to lose.

"I feel I could play a lot better."

Serena Wiilliams of the United States returns the ball to Argentina's Gisela Dulko during their women's singles match at the Australian Open Tennis Championships in Melbourne Australia, today.

Williams converted only four of her 18 break chances against the 23-year-old Argentine. Dulko was successful on both of hers.

Olympic champion Elena Dementieva improved her 2009 winning streak to 12 matches with 6-4, 6-1 win over Iveta Benesova.

"I didn't want to go back to California because I wanted to try a new experience," said Odum of choosing CSI.

On the court, Odum excels at getting the ball to the rim. His philosophy: "Why shoot it if you can get a layup. A layup is easier than a jump shot.'

Off the floor, Odum spends time with girlfriend Shauneice Samms, a freshman on the CSI women's team, and plays the piano by ear. He plans to major in communications.

his playing time, Odum is eager for Barrett to get back. "I hope so bad that Jamelle can play. We need Jamelle," he said. "Jamelle's our starting point guard, period. He's our best point guard, period. We're complete with him out there.

But if Barrett can't go today, Gosar knows he's got a reliable alternative. In fact, the entire CSI team has found a way to win games despite playing shorthanded much of the season. Freshman Louis Garrett also missed last week's NIC win with a hip Eagles who saw the floor did just enough to scratch out a victory.

"I don't think they were ever looking for excuses," said Gosar. "They were looking for a way to win and that's what this team needs to be. We've had adversity with injuries and sicknesses all year long. But what defines a championship team is not the excuses, it's the solutions."

Notes: Tonight's game tips off at approximately 7:30 p.m. ... Garrett is expected to be back in the lineup. ... Snow College is led by Ryan Brimley's 14.2 points per game. Gomez purchased that mini-stock car in 2006 with the most modest of intentions. At this point, he says, the ambitions are sky high.

PETA WITHDRAW TV OFFER TO VICK

NEW YORK — PETA has withdrawn an offer to televise an anti-dogfighting public service announcement with Michael Vick after his release from prison.

The organization said Wednesday that an agreement was reached with Vick's representatives to shoot the spot, but that Vick's attorneys sought assurance from PETA the group would support Vick's return to the NFL.

"Saying sorry and getting his ball back after being caught enjoying killing dogs in hideously cruel ways for many years doesn't cut it," said PETA president Ingrid E. Newkirk. "Commissioner Goodell knows that he has an obligation to the league and to millions of fans, including children who Gomez.

Picking up a ride last season from RTD Motorsports at Douglas County Speedway in Roseburg, Ore., Gomez stepped into the car with no experience on the day of the race, qualifying 14th and finishing ninth. Two weeks later at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash., Gomez qualified 17th and finished eighth.

Those two performances, combined with his 13 wins, points championship and Rookie of the Year honors at Magic Valley Speedway, earned him an invite to the Drive for Diversity Combine — a rigorous event for which hundreds of aspiring minority and female drivers apply but only 24 are selected. Twelve were selected from the combine to race full-time this season, up from eight last year.

"We're certainly looking for talent and skill. The drivers who are invited to the combine are by and large drivers who have been racing for 8 to 12 years, who have shown real potential on the track and can produce wins over the course of their racing career," said Marcus Jadotte, NASCAR's managing director for public affairs. "They've demonstrated the ability to be competitive on the race track. Jonathon was fast and consistent and really did a good job at the combine, but obviously also had 10 years of racing and has proven himself.'

Those two dozen drivers are put through the wringer at the combine, during which owners in the Drive for Diversity program assess how drivers perform on the track as well as how they handle themselves off the track and with the media.

After the combine, the 12 owners got together in a room to select which driver each wanted. It turned out that RTD Motorsports remembered Gomez's performances and selected him to take the plunge this season.

"What stood out the most (about Gomez) was his desire to do this and to win races, and his competitiveness in those two races (in 2008). My crew chief and I thought that he was our guy to get it done," said Rob Dixon, owner of RTD Motorsports. "He's a rookie and new at this but he's a sponge at the same time. He's willing to learn and absorb everything we're trying to teach him."

wanted to take a shot with me," he said. "I was very grateful to even make the combine ... to know that there were 23 other drivers that a team could pick and they wanted you, it's a great feeling."

The last couple of years may have seemed like a whirlwind to Gomez, but it's only just getting started. Before today's announcement he was in California, prepping for this weekend's NASCAR All-Star Showdown at the Toyota Speedway at Irwindale. He hopped a flight to Concord for today's announcement and will head straight back to Irwindale for Friday's qualifying session. There he'll try and qualify into a race that features longtime Truck Series star Ron Hornaday and rising Sprint Cup phenom Joey Logano.

"It's kind of overwhelming, because it's like I was just watching these guys race on TV and now I'm there against them," said Gomez. "But

He plans to race two races on the East circuit, at Loudon, N.H., and Dover, Del. If he can raise the $150,000 he estimates will rent him a ride, he wants to race a Nationwide Series race this season, ideally the Nov. 14 race at Phoenix.

Above all else, he wants to become the first Drive for Diversity driver to win a Camping World Series race - several have won on the NASCAR Whelen All-American Series, directly below the Camping World Series.

Of course there's also the dream of making the Sprint Cup Series one day.

"I know I'm a little older than what most teams are looking for, but I wouldn't be doing this if I didn't believe I could get there," Gomez said. "Hopefully I've got my chance, and I can go out there and perform and get noticed."

Middle child learns early how to be self-sufficient

it out. Classifieds. 733-0931

DEAR ABBY: Like "Middle Child in Hackensack, N.J." (Nov. 4), I am a middle child. I have an older brother and a younger sister, and I, too, felt my siblings were favored.

When I was younger, it seemed I was blamed for everything and got nothing from my parents. I am 20 now, and realize that my parents actually gave me a lot.

Because they never spent the money on me that they did on my siblings, I have worked since I was 16 to get what I want, and I've learned how to manage my money. I understand sharing better than they do because I've always had to let my little sister use and borrow my things. I have also learned to accept that nothing comes without hard work, and that the best of everything isn't always the most expensive.

'Middle Child" is not alone. I believe many parents with three kids act this way, although not consciously. Don't resent your family members for this because they do love and care about you. Learn what you can from it. Those lessons will help you more in the long run than being spoiled now will.

– HAPPY IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR HAPPY: You are a thoughtful, wise and mature 20year-old, and I thank you for your letter. I advised "Middle Child" that she should also turn her frustration into an effort to excel at something - to find validation from within her family and out-

IF JANUARY 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The year ahead promises to unwind smoothly without any major obstacles or setbacks. An ambitious streak emerges as you become aware of a passion to be a success in some area of your life. Make the most of the next several weeks to put career or business plans in motion while you have your hand firmly on the rudder of your fate. The only months when you should proceed with caution are October and November when your ambitions could be at odds with your good sense. During those months simply maintain the status quo, be a stickler for details and avoid making any key changes or decisions. ARIES (March 21-April 19): Zero in on the target. Wise birds scope out the territory from high above before swooping down on their prey. You can make a killing in the business world or make romantic dreams come true. TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put your foot on the gas. Your moneymaking skills have been given a green light. Find someone you trust and respect and ask for an opinion or receive a frank appraisal of a situation. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Set the stage. You are likely to appear in a flattering light if you attend a side it. Read on for comments from other middle children:

DEAR ABBY: Some parents do favor one child over another, but most try hard not to let it affect how they treat their children. That girl's parents may not realize they are acting differently. I think she should have a non-confrontational private talk with her parents and express her feelings to them. They may be shocked to hear she feels this way.

As a child, I often felt disregarded. This was news to my parents, and we all learned to readjust how we dealt with each other. That was almost 30 years ago, and it made a huge difference.

- SIBLING IN LAUREL, MD.

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle child. Both my siblings were treated better by my mother than I was. Dad tried to make up some of the difference, and it is no surprise that I am closer to him than either of my siblings.

The girl in Hackensack should speak to her school counselor or her religious adviser. Because of my situation I now have a very close relationship with a woman mood music could give a special someone the signal for amorous adventures later this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22):

my mother's age, and she has filled in a lot of the gaps left by my mom. Confiding in a close relative can also be a comfort.

Finding someone to talk to makes it a lot easier to get through until you are out on your own. My relationship with my friends has kept me going. And time does help. I'm proof.

- MIDWEST SURVIVOR DEAR ABBY: I disagree with some of your advice to "Middle Child." Sadly, it's not uncommon for parents to get so wrapped up in daily life that they fail to meet their children's emotional needs. Too many young girls already believe that they must constantly earn the approval of others in order to succeed, and it can easily become a recipe for lifelong low self-esteem. *Middle Child" needs to learn some self-validation skills and to understand that she already has value as a worthwhile human being because of who she is right now.

-WALKED THAT ROAD DEAR ABBY: Here's my theory about middle children. Visualize a sandwich. The outer layers are two slices of simple bread, and the inner layer is what gives flavor to the sandwich. Without the filling, the sandwich would be boring and tasteless. YOU are the "spice' that makes life fun and yummy. I wouldn't give up my middle spot in the family for anything!

— LAURA IN SAN LUIS OBISPO

land a deal or a promise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Recharge your inner batteries by sharing a movie or quiet walk with a certain someone. Sometimes, the sound of silence says a lot more than any words can. Listen to your heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. Workers are only as good as their tools. A positive outlook and optimism are dynamic and helpful tools to use when dealing with others. Pay extra attention to the special person in your life. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): See no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil. Don't monkey around with doubts when you have a good thing going. Be generous with your praise and wise with your counsel. Turn up the flame under a love light. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): When you're hot you're hot. A streak of creative energy can win approval from a higher-up or congratulations from a friend. Make the most of the attractive glow that surrounds you today. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Someone has their flirtatious eye on you. The Beach Boys once sang about good vibrations and you can share them with others today. Remain upbeat and take time to perform some very good deeds.

In 1973, former President Lyndon B. Johnson died at age 64.

In 1984, the Los Angeles Raiders defeated the Washington Redskins 38-9 to win Super Bowl XVIII, played at Tampa Stadium in Florida. (The game broadcast on CBS-TV featured Apple Computer's famous "1984" ad introducing the Macintosh PC.)

In 1995, Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy died at the Kennedy compound at Hyannis Port, Mass., at age 104.

Ten years ago: Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., abruptly called for dismissal of charges against President Bill Clinton to "end this sad and sorry time for our country." Clinton called for spending $2.8 billion to protect the nation from cyber terrorism and chemical and germ warfare. Pope John Paul II arrived in Mexico on his first visit in 20 years.

Five years ago: South Dakota politician Bill Janklow was sentenced to 100 days in jail for an auto accident that killed a motorcyclist. Enron Corp.'s former top accountant, Richard Causey, surrendered to federal authorities; he pleaded innocent to conspiracy and fraud charges. (Causey later pleaded guilty to securities fraud and was sentenced to 51/2 years in prison.) Actress-dancer Ann Miller died in Los Angeles at age 81.

One year ago: Actor Heath Ledger was found dead of an accidental prescription overdose in New York City; he was 28. Jose Padilla, once accused of plotting with al-Qaida to blow up a radioactive "dirty bomb," was sentenced by a U.S. federal judge in Miami to 17 years and four months on terrorism conspiracy charges. Republican Fred Thompson quit the race for the White House after a string of poor finishes in early primary and caucus states.
