Liquor license reform bill coming this session

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's office is reviewing legislation from a task force he set up that would overhaul Idaho liquor licensing by increasing local control and removing the state's role in the system.

The 51-page proposal, designed to spur economic development while ensuring new safeguards against alcohol abuse, would transfer responsibility of granting liquor licenses at restaurants to cities and counties while capping the existing number of licenses at bars. There are more than 1,100 liquor licenses in Idaho.

Construction has started again on the successor to Gooding County Memorial Hospital after the project's funding was secured this week, hospital officials announced Wednesday.

Work on the new North Canyon Medical Center in Gooding came to a halt in December when its backers delayed selling $30 million in bonds, citing difficult market conditions.

More cuts coming to state budget

January tax revenue expected to come in less than projected

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — State legislators said Wednesday that reports of January tax revenue coming in less than the $267 million state economists forecast will essentially guarantee more cuts to this year's budget.

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert and co-chairman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said January revenue figures available are not official, but are low enough that more cuts will be needed to balance the budget.

"I don't see any way out of it," he said Wednesday.

State budget writers have already slashed about $150 million, or around 4.7 percent, from this year's budget. Public schools have been held harmless

Idaho State Police faces budget cuts

The Associated Press

BOISE — The head of the Idaho State Police says projected funding cuts may mean fewer troopers patrolling state highways during the late night and early morning hours.

Col. Jerry Russell told state budget writers Tuesday the anticipated loss of state revenue for fiscal year 2010 is hitting the agency hard and forcing difficult choices for staffing, training, programs and equipment.

"We are now well beyond trimming fat, and we are cutting into the agency's bone and muscle," Russell said.

Among the cuts could be reductions or in some parts of the state elimination of the 24-hour patrol program.

Russell said one of the agency's successes in 2008 was a 97 percent increase in trooper contacts with motorists between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. Having troopers on the

This year, the 19-year-old is getting formal welding training at the College of Southern Idaho. It's a field with the opportunity to travel to jobs in Wyoming and elsewhere outside Rupert.

"Everybody's got something broke or they need something built," said Tyler, a 2008 graduate of Minico High School.

The college's overall enrollment for this spring is 7,741 students, a 9.3 percent increase compared to this point last year when the enrollment was 7,078.

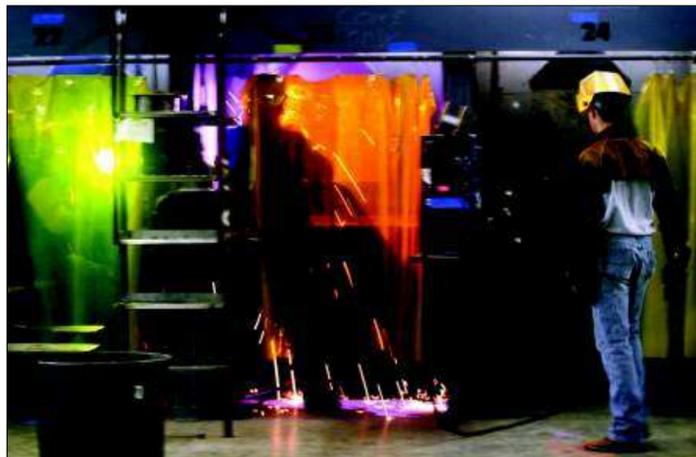

Spring enrollment of students in technical programs is 1,423, a 23.5 percent increase compared to last spring's enrollment of 1,152. Enrollment in academic programs, meanwhile, also increased at 6.6 percent from 5,926 to 6,318.

CSI instructors say they see a diversity of students entering their programs, ranging from recent high school graduates to older students looking for a career change after being laid off.

Liquor

"If this becomes law, the state of Idaho would never again be in the business of issuing licenses," said Ken Burgess, a lobbyist for the Idaho Licensed Beverage Association. "The governor is reviewing it and ultimately, unless he wants to make some minor changes, we'll end up moving it forward."

The bill is the result of more than a year's work from an Otter-appointed task force consisting of public officials, lobbyists, and various bar and restaurant owners. The committee — assembled by Otter in 2007 to update the state's prohibition-era liquor laws — signed off on the final draft last week. His aides in the past have said a driving force behind the legislation is to let an archaic set of laws operate freely in the free market.

Currently, licenses are awarded by the state on a per-capita basis: one license for every 1,500 people in a city's population. However, the process has drawn a waiting list people have spent years on, and licenses can be sold or leased for an unlimited amount, creating a black market where licenses sell for more than $100,000.

Under the new rules, the quota list would be eliminated and sale of bar-only licenses would be overseen by a new independent board appointed by the governor. Licenses would be transferable throughout Idaho but only for eligible bars, not restaurants.

Meanwhile, the restaurant licenses would be non-transferable, administered by city councils and county commissions, and require companies to have 75 percent of business come through serving food.

Capping the number of licenses is designed to preserve the value of licenses and satisfy people skeptical of expanding alcohol consumption — avoiding "a bar on every corner," Burgess said.

The board would take up many duties currently held by Alcohol Beverage Control in the Idaho State Police, which Burgess has said has been the "judge, jury and executioner" and routinely butted heads with license holders. The ISP would continue to manage violations.

"This is a major, major issue for licensees that will be satisfied," Burgess said of the independent board.

The bill also requires that bartenders and servers complete a $30 mandatory training course which would subsequently make them accountable for any violations in liquor laws. Rep. Liz Chavez, D-Lewiston, a member of the task force, said Idaho is just one of a few states without such training, which would give servers safety guidelines, including spotting underage drinkers and withholding alcohol from drunk customers.

"Without that (training) not everyone knows what they're doing," she said.

instructor. Some graduates leave for work in Wyoming, where gas drilling is creating jobs, he said.

"It hasn't been as hard-hit by the economy," Parish said.

Forty-five students are in the program this year, up from about 30 last year, he said.

Tim Pierce, an auto body instructor, said that program has grown to 28 students up from 23 students last year. Customers at auto body shops aren't a shortage either, he said.

"A lot of people are wanting to fix up their old car," Pierce said.

Brett Reid, who oversees the college's law enforcement, said the class has 27 students, up from 20 last semester. He already may be full for the fall semester, too.

Enough prospective students have signed on to fill the class, but they need to be screened with background checks and physicals before Reid knows for sure. If they aren't eligible for the program, he has a list of other interested students he can contact, too.

The field has attractions that include stable employment, good health insurance and vacation benefits, Reid said.

Recruiters come from police departments throughout Idaho and even Alaska and Arizona, he said.

Pat Ferrell, a drafting instructor, said students sometimes enter that major from the construction field because of injuries or layoffs, along with those that are recent high school graduates. He's also noticed a recent uptick in people entering the program from other fields such as truck driving or the retail industry.

This year, 18 students are in the program, up from 15 students last year, he said.

Budget

thanks to reserve accounts.

The state received less than the $267 million forecast by state economists, said Wayne Hammon, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's budget chief. He said exact figures will come next week, after senior-ranking legislators meet with Otter.

"Everyone expects them to be lower than expected. The fear is how much lower they'll be," he said.

Cameron said a $35 million drop in revenue is "in the ballpark but it could end up being $5 million or $10 million off." He said a 2010 budget amount will still be set sometime next week. The legislative economic outlook committee forecast a 2010 budget more than $100 million less than Otter did.

And the actual amount — some legislators Wednesday said they believe the shortfall to be between $30 million and $40 million — means Otter's proposal to reduce the 2010 budget by 7.5 less than this year's original appropriation isn't enough.

Minority Democrats said the lower figures make a stronger case to take more from the Public Schools Stabilization Fund to keep public schools — which account for about half of the budget — intact this year.

"I think we'll be using more than what the governor wanted on the reserves," said Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum. "We're going to have to dip more into the school stabilization fund."

A FINANCIAL RESCUE MISSION

A Filer family gets household budgeting help. SUNDAY IN FAMILY LIFE

Take two for three

State regulators give tiered power rates a second try

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

In 2001, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission thought it had a great idea.

To encourage energy efficiency among Idaho Power Co. customers, commissioners approved a three-tiered rate system that charged more to people who used more power. It didn't quite work, and after protests from owners of all-electric homes and data showing the system occasionally overcharged customers, the PUC reversed course one year later by a 2-1 vote.

This year, the PUC is trying the same thing — mandating an almost identical, though slightly lower-priced tier system that kicked in on Sunday.

But commissioners think this time should be different, PUC spokesman Gene Fadness said on Wednesday. In his view, the uproar over the prior tier system was influenced by a number of other factors, including the then-recent Western energy crisis that led to rolling blackouts in California.

The PUC at the time passed along a 19.4 percent jump in the power cost adjustment at the same time it approved the new system, Fadness said, causing changes to everyone's bills. This time, the average customer will actually see a rate decrease — though he said he's sure the PUC will still hear from some with all-electric homes, likely most of the 12 percent of customers who should reach the highest rate tier in winter months.

In the long run, he said, the tiers should keep costs down overall, delaying new power plants and dropping the amount of power the company has to buy on the market. Plus, he said, customers in today's world are more receptive to goals and incentives meant to reduce their energy use.

"I think more people understand the absolute necessity of cutting back," he said.

Only one current commissioner, Marsha Smith, was on the PUC in 2001 and 2002. She voted for the tier system both times, Fadness said.

Idaho Power resisted the Power rates

The new rate tiers for residential customers stack on each other:

- First 800 kilowatt-hours: 5.58 cents per kWh, or 5.78 in the summer
- From 801 to 2,000 kWh: 6.2 cents, or 6.59 summer
- More than 2,000 kWh: 7.13 cents, or 8.17 summer
- Idaho Power's old rates were 5.78 cents per kWh year-round, going up to 6.51 after the first 300 kWh in the summer.

Source: Idaho Public Utilities Commission

tier system in 2001. But this time around, it had proposed one of its own based around just two tiers. Spokeswoman Stephanie McCurdy said the company doesn't have much to say this time about how the tiers might work out. But she pointed out the benefits of conservation to both the company and its customers.

"Customers who pay less are going to be happy customers," she said.

Residential ratepayers were split in 2001 and 2002 as to whether the tiers were a good thing. But one Idaho Power customer already isn't excited to hear of the tier system's return.

Filer resident Margaret Holley's home holds seven people and relies solely on electricity. In 2002, she told the Times-News that she would be glad to see the old tier go. On Wednesday, she questioned why it needs to return when she already faces high power bills.

Her bill for power used in December shows the family used 7,153 kilowatt-hours — worth an estimated $413.44 under the old non-summer rate and $486.45 using the new system. Even if she managed to bring her power usage down to what it was in January 2002 — 4,865 kWh — she still won't reach the 2,000 kWh cutoff.

"They should not punish a larger family," Holley said. "They should reward them because they're only heating one house."

Rupert boosts power credit to senior center

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minidoka County Senior Center will receive a little extra credit from the city of Rupert on its electric bill this year.

The Rupert City Council unanimously voted to increase the amount of the center's credit by $226 to help with rising expenses. The city will give the center a credit of $5,000 for the year.

Rupert City Clerk Carma Maxey said the center had been receiving a credit of $4,774 since 2002. The center's total bill in 2008 was $4,958.

Rupert City Councilman Mike Brown said he would like to encourage the center to continue to conserve as much energy as possible.

"I think they have displayed all areas of conservation and I think they will continue to do so," James Bowers, Rupert councilman said.

Minidoka County Senior Center Director Holly Najera said if the center had to pay its own electric bill each month it would be difficult for the center to continue to provide all of its services.

Wood River Valley welcomes Special Olympics torch during run's final leg

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Hundreds of Wood River Valley schoolchildren gave a warm welcome on a chilly Wednesday morning to the Flame of Hope as police and others carried the Special Olympics torch to Dollar Mountain where the 2009 Special Olympics World Winter Games open Sunday.

It was the final leg of a ceremonial flame that has been carried more than 37,000 miles through five continents.

"Welcome to my town — Ketchum. I think it's the best place on the planet," actor Scott Glenn welcomed those who gathered for a half-hour ceremony at the conclusion of the run.

Glenn said he and his wife participated in their first Special Olympics 30 years ago. He also added that he had gotten to "hang" with elite athletes participating in a variety of sports.

"But Special Olympics has helped redefine what athletic competition is all about," he added. "It's about courage, generosity, determination and love of athletics. And above all else, it's about having a ... good time. Turn it loose and have the time of your life!"

More than 100 "guardians of the flame" from as far away as Ireland and Turkey carried the torch from Hemingway Elementary School through Ketchum's downtown to Dollar Mountain.

As the procession turned onto Dollar Road, 300 Community School students cheered, waving signs they'd penned in Arabic, Hebrew and other languages that said things like "Congratulations" and "Let's Go."

They then joined in the procession, running behind the torch.

"I think it is so awesome that we get to have the Special Olympics here,"

Law enforcement officers from a variety of countries, including Ireland and Bulgaria, carried the 2009 Special Olympics World Winter Games Flame of Hope torch through Ketchum and on to Dollar Mountain Wednesday morning. The games begin after Saturday's Opening Ceremony at the Idaho Center in Nampa.

said Wood River High School student Megan Jones. "And I think it's awesome that we have such wonderful facilities here, like our ski area, that they would want to come here."

Community School student Sam Farnham, who emceed the event, got the police officers doing the wave as he shouted out a rap he'd written for the occasion. And Sun Valley Mayor Wayne Willich presented an Irish officer with the keys to Sun Valley for which he in return presented Willich with a number of trinkets from Ireland.

Jim Grossman, the Ketchum man who spearheaded the drive to bring the Olympics to Idaho three years ago, took time out from his photographing to take a few minutes behind the podium.

"This is a dream that started three years ago and it shows how one moment can change a whole world," he said. "I'm one of the luckiest people in the world right now to see the dream I had become reality."

Law enforcement officers in countries participating in Special Olympics raised more than $34 million for local Special Olympics programs through golf tournaments and other events during 2008. Idaho officers raised more than $85,000.

New trustee says ed board should set policy, not direct programs

T.F.'s Ken Edmunds addresses Idaho senators for first time

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — Ken Edmunds, the newest member of the State Board of Education, told senators Wednesday that the board's proper role is to set policy and stay away from direct involvement in programs.

"I truly believe the role is in policy," he said. "For whatever reason, the trend has been to become more involved with programs — and that's not what the board is about."

Edmunds, a Twin Falls developer, appeared before the Senate Education Committee and is expected to be confirmed by both the committee and the full Senate shortly. The routine is a formality after Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter appointed him in May to replace Twin Falls attorney Laird Stone.

"This is something — I hate to use the saying 'a dream come true' — but I did want to be involved at a state level to benefit my community," he said.

The question about the board's role, from Sen. Dick Sagness, D-Pocatello, alluded to last year's session-long controversy between the Senate committee and the board over financial mismanagement, policy disputes and the board's responsibilities. A number of programs have been proposed by Otter to be transferred to the Department of Education.

Edmunds, prompted by questions from senators, said the board should concentrate on increasing residencies to reduce Idaho's doctor shortage before funding a medical school; look into a more comprehensive, statewide community college system; and has more important items to attend to than move the University of Idaho College of Law from Moscow to Boise.

"I'll have to admit, it's not a priority," he said. "If we have limited funds, I can give you a list of other things I'd like to work on."

Asked about increasing efficiencies, Edmunds said school districts must seriously consider consolidating some services. He said the Legislature has created incentives but districts don't communicate very well.

"Nobody has made anything happen yet," he said.

Edmunds also told the board it needs to refine its strategic plan and mission statements, noting the last time the board completed one was in 1998. But he also noted he's bothered by colleges and universities that appear to be fighting over programs and funding while they should be working together to provide the best education.

"We're always gonna have limited dollars," he said. "This year isn't an exception."

The seven-member board next meets Feb. 26 and 27 in Boise.

Police: Boy died after falling out of father's pickup

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Help out

A 10-year-old boy died after falling out of his dad's pickup and may also have been run over, Twin Falls police said Wednesday.

Police say the child, Chance Rowe, a student at Sawtooth Elementary School, was riding Monday in the back seat of a 2007 Dodge pickup driven by his father, Shannon Rowe, 30, of Twin Falls.

There was no one else in the four-door truck, and Chance was seated in the back seat, said Twin Falls Police Capt. Matt Hicks.

For unknown reasons Rowe "suddenly fell out of the vehicle," according to police.

The boy fell at the intersection of Bitterroot Drive and Sawtooth Boulevard just before 8 p.m. on Monday.

He was taken to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center and then to Boise's Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, where he died on Tuesday from his injuries.

Shannon Rowe couldn't be reached Wednesday by the Times-News.

Police are still trying to figure out how and why Chance fell out of the truck. "Investigators are inspecting the vehicle and interviewing all available witnesses," said Hicks.

There's a possibility he was struck by the truck after he fell, Hicks confirmed. "We're not exactly sure how his injuries were obtained."

Hicks added police don't think Chance was struck by another vehicle.

Authorities are investigating if a crime occurred and no one has been charged.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said grief counselors were available for Sawtooth Elementary students on Wednesday.

Dobbs said the child's death is heart-wrenching. "There's no words to describe how tragic this is."

A funeral service is scheduled for 10 a.m. on Saturday at the Boys & Girls Club of Magic Valley. A viewing is from 5 to 7 p.m. on Friday at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home.

Burley's attorney: Felons can't hold elected office

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Any felons hoping to run for office in Idaho should first get pardoned, or at least have the charge expunged. At Tuesday night's Burley City Council meeting, community activist John Walsh asked the council if a felon can hold elected office in the city. City Attorney Randy Stone told Walsh he would get an answer for him, but nobody was able to provide an answer at the meeting. Some in the crowd wondered if the silence meant felons can hold office. Others wondered if Walsh was a felon and considering a political campaign. Neither is true. Article 6, Section 3 of the Idaho State Constitution disqualifies felons from holding elected office but provides an exception. It reads: "No person is permitted to vote, serve as a juror, or hold any civil office who has, at any place, been convicted of a felony, and who has not been restored to the rights of citizenship, or who, at the time of such election, is confined in prison on conviction of a criminal offense." Walsh posed the question, he said Wednesday, because he was wondering about someone else considering a run for office in Burley who, he said, was busted for selling heroin in 1972 — to Walsh, he claimed. "I was the agent who made the buy against him. I bought a quarter-ounce of heroin from him," Walsh said. According to Walsh — providing some insight into his tenacious attempts to expose alleged corruption in Burley — he was working as an organized crime and undercover narcotics agent for the Idaho Attorney General's Office at the time and later came to Burley to investigate prostitution and payoffs to city officials. A call made to contact the Idaho Attorney General's Office regarding Walsh's claim was not returned Wednesday afternoon. Burley Mayor Jon Anderson confirmed that to his knowledge Walsh was an undercover narcotic agent for the state at that time. Regarding Walsh's claims of investigation prostitution in Burley, Anderson said, "That's certainly possible. We definitely had prostitution in those years." Damon Hunzeker may be reached at 208-677-8764 or dhunzeker@magicvalley.com.

In tough economy, Gwartney makes case for spending

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho Director of Administration Mike Gwartney presented a 2010 departmental budget Wednesday 69 percent higher than this year's original appropriation that includes investing in technology upgrades he said will lead to long-term savings.

In outlining the $99 million budget proposal to the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee, Gwartney and his assistants explained technology is such a vital part of doing government that spending millions in upgrades now will reap benefits later. He spent a lot of time on the Idaho Education Network, a statewide broadband system designed to expand education, which Gwartney wants more than $2.9 million to begin.

"Even in this gloomy environment, there are opportunities out there — opportunities abound," said Gwartney.

"Everything we ask for has a business plan behind (it) and the returns are clear."

The department handles contracts, buildings, technology and other nuts-and-bolts aspects of making state government run. He outlined savings plans, including consolidating the state's 70 telephone systems and postal services. He's requesting $1.2 million to consolidate the government's e-mail system, reducing 84 e-mail servers to six.

The biggest bite would come from around $35 million for the unfunded medical liability from retired employees who get state health insurance. The amount would be lower if plans are switched this year to private insurance.

"Even in this gloomy environment, there are opportunities out there — opportunities abound." — Idaho Director of Administration Mike Gwartney

Meanwhile, Gwartney pushed for the IEN, which surfaced about a dozen times during the 90-minute meeting. It's designed to increase education to rural areas while saving money. He said companies who've won contracts — Syringa, Education Networks of America and Qwest — will generally rely on existing infrastructure.

Gwartney said the federal government would provide 70 percent of the funding and that just $1 million from the state would help get things off the ground. He stressed the project would not proceed without state funds. But lawmakers had a number of questions about the system, including how the proposed $2.9 million would be used.

"I heard $200,000 for someone to coordinate that, and then I heard $1 million, then $3 million, then $5 million and $10 million" Sen. Shawn Keough, Sandpoint, said. "It would be very helpful in the decision process for me to have a specific list of where $2.9 million is anticipated to go."

Gwartney said the state's libraries, universities and public safety agencies would come onboard — and after additional questions said agencies such as the Idaho Transportation Department and Department of Labor will eventually join, too.

"The possibilities are unlimited and of course the providers obviously want to make some money in with the communities," he said.

Still, the proposals come during a devastating economic downturn. Budget writers are waiting on official figures for January revenue, and heavy cuts are planned for 2010. Budget writers support the IEN in concept but are wary of creating new problems.

"It's a great program but we just don't have the money this year," said JFAC member Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls. "If it's a decision between having that or keeping teachers I expect we'll be keeping teachers."

Police

road at those hours is critical to keeping tabs on drug trafficking, the movement of stolen goods and public safety.

"We have an obligation to be out there as much as we can, and some of that will be 24-hour coverage, whenever we can do that," he said. "With the reduction of funding, it's likely that those 24-hour patrols will be diminished, in some cases ceased altogether."

The ISP budget recommendations by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter call for an 8.2 percent cut from the general fund and a 5 percent cut overall. But Otter also supports adding at least three new positions to the agency's forensics division.

Otter also recommends most of the requested funding to move the department into its new regional office in Coeur d'Alene, which is expected to be completed in late June; $300,000 for conducting background checks for people with access to vulnerable adults or children in long-term care; and $25,000 to continue a special gang enforcement project with the U.S. attorney's office.

But the threat of reduced graveyard shift patrols has some lawmakers concerned.

"That's when people start moving their products," said Sen. Diane Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, referring to late night illegal drug dealing. "And (the Legislature) is determined to keep the public safe."

Capt. Eric Dayley, region commander of District 5 in southeast Idaho, said he's had to stretch his budget in recent years to assign at least two troopers to the overnight shift. Other shifts are typically staffed with up to five troopers.

With the budget holdbacks imposed this fiscal year, Dayley says he has left vacant several trooper jobs, leaving the district about 25 percent below its authorized staffing level.

"I don't know about the future," he said. "We're trying to do the best we can. Right now, we're not paying overtime. Any overtime they get, they have to take off."

EDITORIAL

Blaine, Ketchum police merger makes sense

In this season of doing with less, the rest of the state should be paying attention to what two south-central Idaho government agencies are considering.

The Blaine County Sheriff's Department and the Ketchum Police are having serious discussions about consolidation. That hasn't happened around here since the Cassia County Sheriff and Burley police combined forces in 1986.

There are powerful incentives to do the same in Blaine County. Ketchum's income from local-option taxes for the month of December — normally the most lucrative tax-collection month of the year — was down 33 percent from the prior year. And it's been without a police chief since last fall.

The City Council has been exploring four options: Promoting from within, advertising for a new chief, merging with the sheriff's office and merging with the Sun Valley Police.

An SVPD merger is probably off the table because it wouldn't save money.

And that's the main goal, Mayor Randy Hall said.

This is not a union without obstacles. Blaine County and Ketchum are largely parallel, not complementary, law enforcement operations with separate cultures. What's more, the city and county have been involved in a fractious dispute over apportionment of costs for Blaine County's emergency dispatch system.

But the potential saving are just too significant to pass up, and melding operations would put Blaine County on the road to a single, cost-effective law enforcement entity with more capabilities than any other in the county.

We don't know yet what Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling will have to say about the prospect of joint operations with Ketchum; he's scheduled to talk to the Ketchum City Council later this month. Sheriff for 21 years, Femling is widely liked and respected and his perspective on the consolidation will be pivotal. It takes a strong sheriff to make such a transition successful.

And if Blaine County and Ketchum can make it work, then how about Gooding County and Gooding, Wendell and Hagerman? Jerome County and the Jerome city police? Twin Falls County and the Twin Falls, Filer, Kimberly and Buhl police departments?

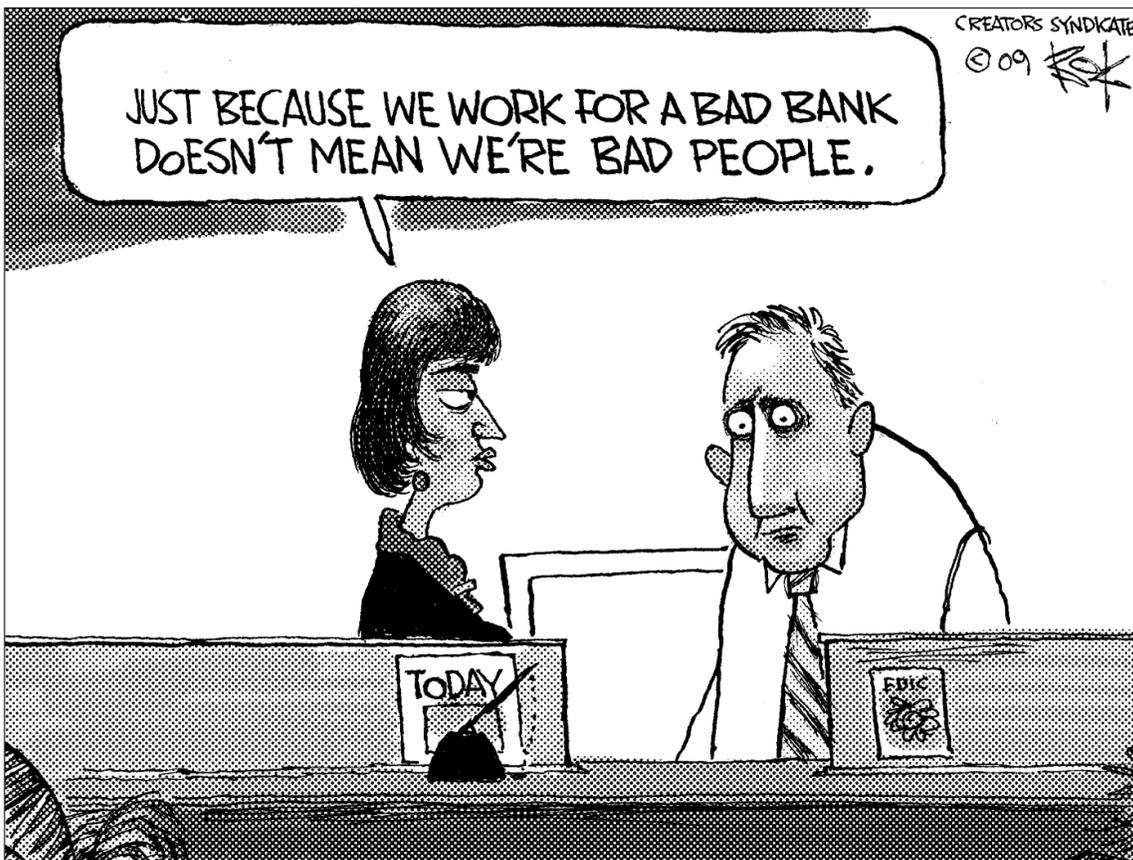

It's not just about saving the taxpayers money, although that's an essential consideration at the moment. It's also about making communities safer.

Our view:

One reason that government agencies in south-central Idaho are in budgetary trouble is duplication of services.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Learning to live with less trust

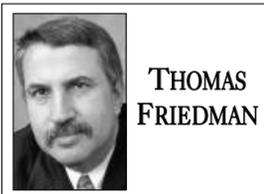

In its own unpredictable way, the Davos World Economic Forum in Switzerland usually serves as a crude barometer of the latest mood or mania on the world stage. This year did not disappoint. What has struck me is the quiet urgency that infused so many panel discussions and private conversations here between investors, politicians and social activists.

To put it crudely: everyone is looking for the guy — the guy who can tell you exactly what ails the world's financial system, exactly how we get out of this mess and exactly what you should be doing to protect your savings.

What do I mean? First, if it is not apparent to you yet, it will be soon: There is no magic bullet for this economic crisis, no magic bailout package, no magic stimulus. We have woven such a tangled financial mess with subprime mortgages wrapped in complex bonds and derivatives, pumped up with leverage, and then globalized to the far corners of the earth that, much as we want to think this will soon be over, that is highly unlikely.

We are going to have to learn to live with a lot more uncertainty for a lot longer than our generation has ever experienced. We keep pouring money into the dark banking hole of this crisis, desperately hoping that we will hear it hit bottom and start to pile up. But so far, as hard as we listen, we can't hear a thing. And so we keep pouring...

A broker friend told me it reminded him of when he was a teenager and his doctor first diagnosed him as unable to digest wheat products. He said to the doctor, "Well, just give me a pill." And the doctor told him: there is no pill. "You mean I'm just going to have to live with this?" he asked. That's us. There is no pill — not for this mess.

The fact that there is no single pill doesn't mean there's nothing to be done. We need a stimulus big enough to create more jobs. We need to remove toxic assets from bank balance sheets. We need the Treasury to close the insolvent banks, merge the weak ones and strengthen the healthy few. And we need to do each one right. But even then, the turnaround will be neither quick nor painless. Indeed, the whispers here were that what has been an exclusively economic crisis up to now may soon morph into a domino of political crises — as happened in Iceland, where the bankruptcy of the banks toppled the govern-

Second, we're going to have to get used to a loss of trust. All those rock-solid people and institutions that we trusted with our money, our pensions and our kids' piggybank savings — like Citigroup, Merrill Lynch, Bank of America — do not seem trustworthy anymore. Never before in my adult life have I looked around at every bank in my town and said, "I'm not sure I wouldn't prefer to put my paycheck in a mattress."

The Bernard Madoff scandal, of course, has only reinforced that loss of trust. His degree of betrayal — his alleged willingness to embezzle the life savings of people whom he had known his whole life — is so coldhearted that it charts new territory in human behavior. He's on his way to becoming an adjective. Money managers are already being asked prove to prospective new clients that their internal safeguards are "Madoff proof."

"We're all going to have to learn to live with a lower level of trust in our lives," an African banker friend said to me here. But the mind recoils at that, which may explain why so many people I talked to here are hoping that President Barack Obama will turn out to be the guy.

Like Harry Truman, Obama is definitely present at the creation of something. He is arriving on the scene "not after a war but after the same kind of shattering of institutions that a war does," said Peter Schwartz, chairman of the Global Business Network. "His job is to restore confidence to these institutions that have been at the foundation of our economy."

That may be Obama's most important bailout task: to educate the country that there is no easy escape here, except taking our medicine, getting our fundamentals right again and working our way out of this, brick by brick, by getting back to making money — what was that old Smith Barney ad? — "the old-fashioned way" — by earning it.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Library exhibition misses the point about fences

I take issue with the Smithsonian Display at our library. It takes the didactic position that fences are inherently good, as if this carved-in-stone decree came down from Mount Sinai. Fences, in and by themselves, are neither good nor bad. They simply perform a function, which can bring about either or both results. The indigenous tribes held to no such concept as owning land. They knew that land cannot be owned.

People die, rulers die, governments collapse, countries are absorbed by other, stronger countries. Oceans, earthquakes, volcanoes, floods, wars, changing river courses take priority over surveyors. Land titles are lost, destroyed and forged. Yes, fences can temporarily control land use by keeping dangerous animals out, children and pets in. Therefore, they can be classified, as with fire, as friendly or unfriendly. But by far the greatest function of fences is to declare property as private.

Eastern European dissidents brought the concept to our shores. They purchased land from the native tribes. Unschooled in such an unnatural idea, the tribes used the land and moved on and assumed these silly foreigners would do likewise. The Manhattan purchase for $24 worth of junk jewelry is an example of the ethical European business tactics. Any audience loudly boos the black-suited landlord of a melodrama throwing the poor widow out into the snow. Here, such behavior brought compliments and riches.

The U.S. government did even better. They traded worthless, unwanted land for valuable, wanted land. And from whence did this god-like control over the land come? From laws they had written, with authorization they gave themselves.

The slanted position of this display implies that we should rethink our border policies based on the reaction of foreigners. This is certainly manipulative if not outright brain-washing.

Step down your personal spending to make do, not do without

I see it in the Extension family economics classes that I teach as a University of Idaho Extension educator: the fear that the good times are over. Participants tell me they have all these debts and what will happen now if they lose their jobs? They're ready to cut back their spending — and the good news is that the good times don't have to be over.

I like to teach the "step-down principle" — a financial management technique developed by Utah State University's Alena Johnson. Although we all should have budgets, too many budgets fail because people try to totally cut out the things they enjoy and end up feeling deprived and resentful. The step-down principle is a way to make do, not do without.

Think about buying four pancakes for breakfast. The most expensive method (the top step of a theoretical staircase) would be to pay $4.99 plus tip at a sit-down restaurant. The next step: Buy the pancakes at a fast-food restaurant for around $2.99. Go down another step and pay $1.99 for frozen pancakes at the supermarket. Step down again to 30 cents for pancakes made at home from ready-prepared dry mix. At the floor of the staircase, spend 18 cents for a serving of pancakes made from scratch.

Or, let's say you want to see a movie. In stepwise order, you can go the theater, rent from the video store, rent on a midweek bargain night from the grocery store, borrow from the library or swap movies with friends.

You don't have to cut out pancakes or movies. You can still have them, but at less cost. Keep on doing this and you'll have money to put toward credit card debt or toward that three-month emergency savings fund we all should have.

This recession is like nothing we've ever seen; we're all in uncharted waters. But we can help each other through this. Research shows that even 10 hours of personal financial education positively affect students' spending and saving habits. Financial education can even become an addiction—a good one.

The parent and employee groups to whom Extension delivers its "Dollar Decisions" curriculum in the Magic Valley are demonstrating the impacts of their education by developing budgets, tracking their spending and applying new ways to make ends meet.

The teachers we trained in the use of the National Endowment for Financial Education's "High School Financial Planning Program" last summer are sharing their knowledge with a projected 4,600-plus students statewide this school year.

The number of people who subscribe to or download our Idaho's Two Cents

Tips e-newsletter has reached 3,100.

Each of the teens who participated in last year's experiential learning camp "So, You Want to Move Out?!" feels better prepared to survive independently one day: they learned the challenges of covering so many new planned-and unplanned-expenses with youthful salaries.

Middle school participants in our after-school "Fun with Money" program are learning the difference between needs and wants, allocating "dollars" with 20 beans, appreciating the true cost of credit with simulated credit cards, and experiencing the "real world" with assigned careers and the large or small paychecks that go with them.

We like to get started as early as possible! In "Money on the Bookshelf," three- to five-year-olds watch and listen while one children's book character loses his money and another saves hers. The kids graduate with their own piggybanks.

Regardless of our stage of life or the stage of a national economic cycle, it's always a good time to start saving and building financial security. We can even have a good time doing it.

What Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... people and potholes

Lewiston Tribune

It is understandable that many Idahoans do not want their children's education to fall victim to the recession, but there is no reason to pit good schools against good roads as legislators prepare next year's state budget.

Idaho needs both, and it is a mistake to pit one against another in a zero-sum game.

Some Democratic legislators invited competition between the two after Gov. Butch Otter recommended raising the gasoline tax and transportation-related fees to maintain roads and bridges while cutting support for education to avoid finding additional revenue for it. "Putting people over potholes" was the phrase used to rebuke the Republican chief executive's priorities.

Otter may be shortsighted on the importance of good schools, but that doesn't make him blind on the need for decent roads. State government has neglected road maintenance for too long, and more of the same will only retard the economic recovery ...

A country that prospered from building the interstate highway system begun under President Dwight Eisenhower in the 1950s hurts itself by permitting its transportation systems to deteriorate.

And it isn't as if money that isn't spent on roads can be used to prevent harm to education, including Otter's proposed 10 percent cut in the higher education appropriation. Not a penny from the state's general fund goes to finance the works of the Idaho Transportation Department. It relies entirely on the taxes and fees Otter suggests raising.

Raising them is no excuse for failing to keep public education whole, however. And state government today suffers from a scarcity of the visionaries who once refused to accept letting hard times sap schools.

That decline is most visible in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction. Current Superintendent Tom Luna proposed a public school budget 5 percent higher than this year's before the recession deepened, but is proving eager to revise his recommendation downward as revenues wither ...

Then of course there is Otter himself, a governor who knows better than to let roads crumble in hard times but talks as if there is no alternative to letting the same happen to schools.

He's wrong. But he's only half wrong. And so are those who say we must choose people over potholes.

... old schools

Post Register, Idaho Falls

Idaho Falls has old schools. Many were built in the 1950s and 1960s to accommodate the baby boom and the community's expansion during Idaho National Laboratory's early days. Most are wearing out.

So the district concluded it needed to float an $85 million bond to pay for updates and repairs. Taxpayers would pay $129 per $100,000 of taxable value. Not cheap, but certainly less than what they spent a few years ago before former Gov. Jim Risch cut the $300 per $100,000 of taxable value school support levy and replaced it with a penny sales tax boost in 2006.

... is it conducive to learning to have chunks of concrete falling from Dora Erickson Elementary School's exterior walls? The old boiler is being held together with duct tape and Popsicle sticks. Just repairing Erickson would cost almost as much as building something new ...

Consider (this among the) the first casualties of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposed school budget cuts.

... the (Idaho Falls) school board essentially decided local money that would have gone toward those projects instead will be needed just to plug the holes Otter is poking in the budget. The construction bond is "on hold."

If the Legislature approves the governor's plan to cut state public education appropriation by more than 5 percent — while leaving tens of millions of "rainy day" dollars in the bank — $2.7 million will disappear from Idaho Falls classrooms. Factor in another $1.8 million to cover the cost of inflation.

Coming up with that much money will require a new levy of almost $190 per $100,000 of taxable value ... Odds are that school officials won't risk raising the entire amount by expanding the local voluntary property tax. At some point, voters might recoil, depriving the district of 11 percent of its operating budget.

So the district probably will muddle through, raising the supplemental a bit here and cutting a bit there.

Voters will pay more. Their children will get less ...

... curbing dropouts

Idaho Press Tribune, Nampa

Meridian Republican Rep. Rich Jarvis wants to require all Idaho high school students to stay in school until they are 18. He says the change would be long overdue, and he's absolutely right.

Idaho's neighbors ... have seen the wisdom of doing this, and Idaho lawmakers should do the same. Right now, Idaho students can drop out of school when they turn 16.

The proposal could encounter some opposition because it would cost money — about $11 million, according to the state Department of Education. But Jarvis points out that the state would gain far more than that in return over the course of time.

• More dropouts means more crime ... dropouts are 3.5 times more likely to be arrested than high school graduates ... Imagine the money we could save by reducing our inmate population at those rates.

• High school graduates earn more than dropouts. Having more graduates wouldn't immediately translate into more money ... but a more educated work force would help the state recruit more skilled, better-paying jobs. The state would eventually see more money in terms of wages and tax base ...

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fair trial is too good for Bush and Cheney

Finally, the bad guys have left the White House. Now we need to prosecute them for their crimes.

There's a book out by Vincent Bugliosi titled, "The Prosecution of George W. Bush for Murder." Mr. Bugliosi prosecuted and obtained the convictions of Charles Manson and his four family members for the 1969 Tate/La Bianca murders. He also wrote "Helter Skelter," a book about the Manson family, the murders and the trial.

During his tenure as a Los Angeles County deputy district attorney, Bugliosi successfully prosecuted 105 out of 106 felony trials and 21 out of 21 murder trials. He later went into private practice as a defense attorney. He's written several best-selling books about his own cases, the O.J. Simpson murder trial and the JFK assassination.

With his unlimited knowledge of the Constitution and the law, Bugliosi makes an ironclad case of conspiracy and murder against Bush for knowingly lying to the American people and Congress to justify his personal quest to invade Iraq, which cost the lives of more than 4,000 Americans.

Bugliosi puts himself in the defense attorney's place, then one by one dispels every defense possible. He explains each step in detail leaving nothing out. His only interest in this is simply to see justice done. Everyone should read this excellent book, including Bush, who would probably move quickly to a foreign country without extradition, assuming there's one that would take him in.

I believe Bush and Cheney should be punished for their crimes; however, my suggestion would be less expensive than a trial. We could waterboard them on the 6 o'clock news. It wouldn't take more than a few minutes before Bush would scream for his mommy and Cheney's head would simply explode. How about that for a deterrent?

Your yard has no fence? No foster baby for you!

I recently gave away my baby beds. It's been more than a year since I applied to provide foster care, and I give up. I thought there was a need. I did the paperwork, attended the classes, endured the home study and tolerated a plethora of indignities that were completely uncalled for. I tried to meet the criteria. Apparently, I have failed. My yard is not fenced.

After raising six wonderful, productive children of my own, adopting a child from China, working as a registered nurse for 25 years and being grandmother to my 15 grandchildren, I thought I would fulfill my dream of providing foster care. Apparently, I will not. My yard is not fenced.

I have a new seven-passenger van, five warm bedrooms, empty beds, clothing (that will go to the Mustard Seed), time on my hands, love in my heart and a desire to nurture foster children, but no fence. My yard is small and a fence would make it smaller from a child's perspective.

Due to zoning, a fence would block access to the trees in my yard and the sidewalk where the children ride their toys. The estimated cost to have it fenced is equal to approximately three years of piano or dance classes for a foster child. My yard is not fenced.

My entire family, who was instantly very supportive of my son's adoption and is always warm and loving especially to children, encouraged me to not get involved with foster care because of its reputation and potential problems. I get the well-meaning "I told you so" from friends and co-workers. I've learned my lesson. I admit I cringe now when see the posters and service announcements that ask, "Do you have room for one more?"

I am not a foster mother. My yard is not fenced.

Salazar scraps sale of oil-and-gas leases in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — In a high-profile reversal of the Bush administration, Interior Secretary Ken Salazar said Wednesday the government is scrapping the lease of 77 parcels of federal land for oil and gas drilling in Utah's redrock country.

"In the last weeks in office, the Bush administration rushed ahead to sell oil and gas leases near some of our nation's most precious landscapes in Utah," Salazar said from Washington in a teleconference call with reporters.

He ordered the Bureau of Land Management, which is part of the Interior Department, to not cash checks from winning bidders for parcels at issue in a lawsuit filed by environmental groups.

The sales were worth $6 million to the government in addition to royalties on any oil or gas production.

"We will take time and a fresh look at these 77 parcels to see if they are appropriate for oil and gas development," Salazar said.

Woman charged in car seat death

SPOKANE — A mother has been charged with vehicular homicide after Spokane police said her infant daughter was critically injured when her car seat was improperly installed in the front seat of a vehicle.

Spokane County prosecutors say this could be the first such case in Washington, which requires all children under 13 to sit in a rear seat when practical.

In March 2006, the car driven by Eileen Jensen, 24, of Post Falls, Idaho, crashed into a stopped vehicle in Spokane. Her daughter Chloe, 3 months, was in the front seat in a rear-facing car seat.

The passenger-side air bag deployed during the crash, causing extensive head trauma to Chloe, police said.

The child died 10 months later, but "her brain stopped developing that day," said Spokane police Officer Teresa Fuller.

Plan to move vocational rehab agency stalls

BOISE — The success of an agency that trains people with disabilities for jobs has state leaders backing off of a plan to shift its management from the state Board of Education.

Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter had proposed moving the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and a slew of other agencies out from under the oversight board.

Administrator Michael Graham told lawmakers Tuesday that many of the agency's clients have become taxpayers and are "adding real value to the state. That's part of our mission," The Spokesman-Review reported.

Idaho's Division of Vocational Rehabilitation is one of the highest-performing agencies of its type in the nation. In 2008, the division placed 2,083 disabled clients in jobs, about 29.5 per counselor. That's a higher number per counselor than any of nine surrounding states, and Idaho's cost per client of $9,701 was the lowest of the 10 states. Washington's comparable figure is $27,561.

Lawyer wants courts to vet guardian backgrounds

By Sarah D. Wire
Associated Press writer

BOISE — An Idaho lawyer says the state should protect children by checking to make sure their prospective guardians have not committed a felony.

Boise attorney Robert Aldridge told the Associated Press that an increasing number of grandparents are gaining custody of their grandchildren because of drug problems across the state.

He said the Idaho court system should be required to look at the criminal history of a potential guardian and anyone living in or visiting the home.

The guardian felony bill he has proposed would also require guardians for those who are incapacitated or elderly to go through the same criminal history check.

"It can go both ways, that's why we cover it in both minors and adults," he said.

Aldridge told Senate Judiciary Committee members on Wednesday that the bill would provide early warning of children or incapacitated adults who could be in potentially harmful situations. The committee passed the bill; it goes now to the full Senate.

Since 2005, Aldridge and the group he started, the Trust and Estate Professionals of Idaho Inc., have proposed several bills dealing with guardianship and conservators. The guardian felony bill was introduced last year but did not pass.

Judges often close guardian cases to the public, which makes putting a human face on the issue difficult, but in 2008 there were 1,196 new cases, according to Idaho Supreme Court officials. Many cases take several years to complete.

A spouse, relative, adult child or sibling may be declared a guardian.

Aldridge stressed that the majority of people who want to be a guardian are good people who are making sacrifices, but said it's the courts' job to do everything possible to protect people against potential harm.

"Unfortunately there's a lot of sick people out there," Aldridge said. "And we don't have a way to judge that based on relation."

Aldridge said it is important to look at all people who live in the home, not just the guardian.

"We've had cases where the petitioner wasn't a felon but the petitioner's spouse was a convicted sex offender," Aldridge said.

Aldridge said that case, which involved grandparents, led to the grandchild being molested.

"When it's a grandparent, the concern is more the sexual side, that generation does not tend to have the drug problems," he said.

Unemployment report delayed until Feb. 27

Times-News staff

The Idaho State Department of Labor announced Tuesday that it will not release the unemployment report for January 2009 until Feb. 27.

State labor offices in the United States revise unemployment rates each year to reflect actual rates — a process known as “benchmarking.”

The revision is not likely to change current or future unemployment rates in south-central Idaho, said Idaho Department of Labor Spokesman Bob Fick.

The unemployment rate in the Twin Falls micropolitan reporting area jumped from 4.6 percent in late November to 5.1 percent in December. The Burley micropolitan area increased from 4.5 percent to 6.1 percent.

Fick said most parts of Idaho will likely see another increase in unemployment during January.

Cassia County sees increase in taxable sales during economic downturn

T.F. and Jerome counties report 4Q decline

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Cassia County reported an increase in taxable sales during the fourth quarter of 2008 compared to the previous year.

Quarterly reports released by the Idaho State Tax Commission on Tuesday showed that taxable sales increased by more than $600,000, despite most counties in Idaho reporting steep decline in taxable sales.

The increase is an exception to an otherwise dismal report on county sales tax collections.

Taxable sales for all counties in Idaho during the fourth quarter of 2008 was $434 million less than the previous year — totaling $4.9 billion for the quarter ending Dec. 31, 2008.

Twin Falls County reported that taxable sales declined $13 million compared to the same quarter the previous year, while Jerome County reported a decline of about $1 million.

The report showed that the agricultural industry in Idaho reported a slight increase in sales tax receipts.

But Saul Cohen, tax policy specialist for the commission, said it's difficult to know why Cassia County saw an increase in taxable sales.

“Unfortunately, the data that we have is not that specific,” he said.

A month-by-month analysis of taxable sales indicates that Cassia County saw a jump in taxable sales during the summer months.

South-central Idaho narrows fuel price disparity

Times-News staff and wire reports

Fuel prices in south-central Idaho crept closer to the state average during the fourth quarter of 2008, but the region is still reporting some of the highest prices in the state.

The average price for a gallon of regular-grade gasoline in south-central Idaho was $1.76 on Wednesday, while the average price in Idaho was $1.75, according to the AAA Fuel Gauge Report.

Pocatello and Idaho Falls reported an average fuel price of $1.67.

The latest data from AAA Idaho shows that gas prices increased 19 cents in January despite a drop-off in demand by motorists.

The organization's latest data shows Idaho's average price at $1.75 per gallon, giving the state the fifth lowest price per gallon in the nation. It's also a break from a year ago when Gem State motorists paid $3.02 per gallon.

The national average price on Tuesday was $1.89, up 24 cents in the last 30 days, but short of the 2007 January mark of $2.98.

AAA Idaho attributes the recent surge in prices to refiners cutting back on output, either by design or in response to operational issues.

At the same time, energy officials are reporting that demand for gas is down about 5 percent from the same time last year.

Some families can't even get together for dinner without all hell breaking loose but that is definitely not the case for the sisters behind Twin Falls newest floral shop, Canyon Floral.

Canyon Floral, located at 1563 Fillmore Street, is owned by Iona Lehmann, Elizabeth Lehmann and Jennifer Lehmann, all of Twin Falls.

The trio's sister, Robin Rouff, of Castleford, isn't an owner but is a floral designer at the shop.

“We've all done different things but this is something we are all good at and something we've all just come back to,” said Elizabeth Lehmann. “We've worked at several area shops but somehow seemed to migrate to working together.”

The ladies have been behind the area's floral design scene for 20 years and worked for many stores.

“We all have our own strengths and niches within the operation,” said Iona Lehmann.

She loves introducing new designs and flowers to the market, like the trendy tropics and orchid arrangements. While Elizabeth Lehmann enjoys designing silk

Congress postpones digital TV transition

By Joelle Tessler
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — After weeks of debate, Congress is giving consumers four more months to prepare for the upcoming transition from analog to digital television broadcasting.

The House voted 264-158 on Wednesday to postpone the shutdown of analog TV signals to June 12, to address growing concerns that too many Americans won't be ready by the Feb. 17 deadline that Congress set three years ago. The Senate passed the measure unanimously last week and the bill now heads to President Barack Obama for his signature.

The change is being mandated because digital signals are more efficient than analog ones. Ending analog broadcasts will free up valuable space in the nation's airwaves for commercial wireless services and emergency-response networks.

The delay is a victory for the Obama administration and Democrats in Congress, who maintain that the previous administration mismanaged efforts to ensure that all consumers — particularly poor, rural and minority Americans — will be prepared for the switchover.

The Nielsen Co. estimates that more than 6.5 million U.S. households that rely on analog TV sets to pick up over-the-air broadcast signals still are not ready. People

Service sector declines less than expected in January

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The nation's service sector shrank for the fourth straight month in January, a trade group said Wednesday, but at a slower pace than the previous month.

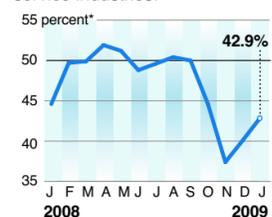

The Institute for Supply Management, a trade association of purchasing executives, said its service sector index rose to 42.9 last month, from December's downwardly revised reading of 40.1.

That January reading was above analysts' expectations of 39, according to a survey by Thomson Reuters. Any reading above 50 signals growth, while a reading below 50 indicates contraction.

The ISM's service sector index is based on a survey of member companies in 18 industries such as hotels and travel, retail, health care and mining.

While the report indicates that the economy's decline may be moderating, it does not necessarily signal a turnaround, economists said.

The report said new orders and production declined, but also at a slower pace than the previous two months.

Only two service industries in the ISM survey reported growth in January — health care and social assistance, and finance and insurance — despite recent troubles in the banking industry.

The 16 industries that reported declining activity include: mining, retail trade, accommodation and food services, transportation and warehousing, and real estate, rental and leasing.

The survey's employment index also continued to weaken, dropping to 34.4 in January from 34.5 the previous month. Only one industry — transportation and warehousing — reported an increase in hiring, while the rest reported a drop or no change.

Billions of dollars available for taxpayers in stimulus package

By Stephen Ohlemacher Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Sending a kid to college, purchasing a new car, buying a first home or making the one you own more energy efficient. Those are a few of the ways Americans might cut their tax bills under the economic stimulus package Congress is crafting.

Richard Hucks, and Demetrius Rumph, left, install energy efficient windows in October 2008 in a home in West Columbia, S.C.

The biggest tax breaks target the working poor, especially those with children, but many apply to middle-income and even wealthy taxpayers.

Most workers would see about a $20 a week increase in their take-home pay, starting around June, from a new tax credit. Millions of additional low-income workers who don't make enough money to pay income taxes would get checks from the government when they file their 2009 tax returns.

The $819 billion economic recovery package approved by the House last week includes about $188 billion in tax breaks for families and individuals over the next two years. The Senate package, which has topped $900 billion, has about $263 billion in tax breaks for families and individuals.

The goal is to get people to spend money at a time when making more than $150,000 would receive reduced amounts. The Senate bill phases out the credit quicker for families with incomes of more than $150,000.

• Parents with children in college — and some adult students — could get expanded tax credits of up to $2,500 to help cover tuition and related expenses in 2009 and 2010. Families making between $160,000 and $180,000 can get reduced credits. Those making more are ineligible.

• First-time homebuyers could get a tax credit of up to $7,500 if they buy homes in the next few months. The credit refunds 10 percent of the purchase price, up to $7,500, to couples with incomes of less than $150,000. Those making up to $170,000 can get reduced credits, while those making more are ineligible. Current law requires the credit to be repaid over 15 years. The stimulus package would repeal the repayment requirement. The House package covers homes bought before July 1, 2009. The Senate bill covers homes bought before Sept. 1.

• Existing homeowners could get a tax credit of up to $1,500 by making their homes more energy-efficient in 2009 or 2010. Numerous projects would qualify, such as installing energy-efficient windows, doors, roofs, furnaces, water heaters and air conditioners, or adding insulation. Homeowners can get back 30 percent of their expenses, up to $1,500.

• People who buy new cars in 2009 can deduct the interest payments and sales taxes from their taxable income under the Senate bill. The House bill doesn't have that tax break.

• The Senate bill would spare about 24 million taxpayers from being hit with the Alternative Minimum Tax in 2009. On average, the change would save mainly upper middle-income families of four about $2,300. The House bill does not contain this annual AMT "fix," but Congress is unlikely to let 2009 lapse without doing it.

• The Earned Income Tax Credit would be expanded for poor families with three or more children who pay no income taxes. The maximum check they could receive from the government would rise $5,028 to $5,656.

• Poor families would have greater access to the $1,000 child tax credit. The Senate bill lowers the earnings threshold to qualify from $12,550 to $6,000. The House bill would eliminate the earnings threshold.

most are cutting back and saving more. It makes sense to be frugal when the economy is in such bad shape, but it hurts the economy when everyone does it.

Here are some ways taxpayers could save money:

• The centerpiece of the tax package provides credits of up to $500 for individuals and $1,000 for couples, in 2009 and 2010, hence the increase in take-home pay. Individuals making more than $75,000 and couples

38 cents per share, a year earlier.

Excluding one-time items related to asset impairment, exit and implementation costs, and an adjustment on a gain from its split-off of Post cereals, net income was 43 cents per share. That is a penny short of the 44 cents per share analysts polled by Thomson Reuters, on average, expected.

Revenue rose 6 percent to $10.77 billion from $10.14 billion last year. That missed analyst predictions of $11.29 billion as North American volume fell amid mark-downs and inventory reduction by retailers, and as the company pruned less profitable items.

Sara Lee posts loss, cuts 2009 forecast

DOWNERS GROVE, Ill. — Food maker Sara Lee Corp. said Wednesday that it lost $17 million in its fiscal second quarter, largely due to a write-down related to its North American foodservice beverage unit.

The maker of Jimmy Dean sausages and Ball Park franks also cut its fiscal 2009 earnings forecast for a second time on the write-down and softer results from its international household and body care and international bakery business divisions.

Sara Lee now anticipates full-year 2009 earnings in a range of 72 cents to 79 cents per share. That is down from a November forecast for earnings in a range of 99 cents to $1.06 a share.

Its shares fell 44 cents, or 4.2 percent, to $9.99 in morning trading.

Opponents of a delay warned, however, that the move will confuse consumers, create added costs for TV stations that will continue broadcasting both analog and digital signals for four more months and burden wireless companies and public safety agencies waiting for the airwaves that will be vacated by the switchover.

A DAY ON WALL STREET

SOURCE: SunGard

(AP) — After an early rally Wednesday, investors succumbed to concerns about disappointing earnings and the market ended the day with a loss. Falling consumer stocks weighed most heavily on the Dow Jones industrial average, which slid 122 points. Meanwhile, the tech-focused Nasdaq composite index showed only a moderate retreat.

Fourth-quarter numbers from Kraft Foods Inc., Walt Disney Co. and Time Warner Inc. provided the latest reminder of the economy's struggles. The weaker-than-expected reports and a profit warning from Costco Wholesale Corp. left investors fearing that consumers are cutting back even more than most analysts thought.

The Dow fell 121.70, or 1.51 percent, to 7,956.66. Broader indicators also fell. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 6.28, or 0.75 percent, to 832.23, and the Nasdaq composite index fell 1.25, or 0.08 percent, to 1,515.05.

Lawmakers clash with SEC over Madoff probe

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — House lawmakers on Wednesday accused the Securities and Exchange Commission of impeding their probe into how the agency failed to uncover the alleged $50 billion fraud perpetrated by Bernard Madoff.

The clash between lawmakers and high-ranking SEC officials came at a hearing after the whistleblower in the case, Harry Markopolos, said he had feared for his physical safety and would turn over new evidence to the agency showing the alleged Ponzi scheme mastermind had not acted alone.

Markopolos said he had discovered a dozen additional funds that funneled money to Madoff, "hiding in the weeds" in Europe. Managers of investment "feeder" funds that relayed money to Madoff willfully turned a blind eye to his improprieties because they were paid generous fees, Markopolos said.

He plans to present his findings to the SEC's inspector general on Thursday. If proven, they would substantiate the assertions of many analysts that the alleged fraud was far too large for Madoff to have conducted alone.

Madoff, a prominent Wall Street figure who had been chairman of the Nasdaq Stock Market, was arrested in December after allegedly confessing to his sons that he had bilked investors in what the authorities say may be the largest Ponzi scheme ever.

Independent financial fraud investigator Harry Markopolos testifies at a House subcommittee hearing on the Madoff scandal, Wednesday on Capitol Hill in Washington.

Markopolos also planned to provide information on what he called a "mini-Madoff," another Ponzi scheme he said he's uncovered that may have defrauded investors of as much as $1 billion.

In loud, angry exchanges, lawmakers threatened to issue subpoenas to SEC officials to compel their testimony.

Rep. Paul Kanjorski, D-Pa., the House Financial Services subcommittee's chairman, vented frustration after the SEC's acting general counsel said the five officials appearing before the panel couldn't answer lawmakers' questions about the Madoff case because it's under investigation. The five SEC commissioners voted earlier to assert a privilege in not having officials answer questions from Congress.

Obama caps executive pay tied to bailout money

By Ben Feller
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Assailing out-of-touch corporate pay and perks, President Barack Obama on Wednesday slammed a salary cap on top executives from companies that want bailouts — but it's a limit that could end up thinning the wallets of only a small number of people.

Obama's action comes as many Americans, while hanging on for economic life, have watched Wall Street high-flyers receive big-dollar bonuses even as their firms draw public help for survival. The outcry has grown with each report of a bailed-out company that plans to buy a jet or hold a Las Vegas retreat.

The president aimed for a target — extravagant corporate behavior on the public dime — that fit the mood of the day. His $500,000 salary limit on executives from a limited number of companies was part of a broader assault on what he called a "reckless culture" that has helped wreck the economy.

"We don't disparage wealth. We don't begrudge anybody for achieving success. And we believe that success should be rewarded," Obama said. "But what gets people upset — and rightfully so — are executives being rewarded for failure, especially when those rewards are subsidized by U.S. taxpayers."

Top business leaders often receive annual packages worth several million dollars, so a $500,000 compensation cap is striking.

Yet in practical terms, the intervention into the corporate world is also limited.

The compensation cap covers distressed companies seeking special bailouts but would not apply retroactively to those that already have received them. What's more, consultants on executive pay say the cap will probably apply only to a few executives — not big-time traders, brokers and salespeople who routinely earn whopping pay packages. And there are sure to be efforts to exploit loopholes as the new rules start to take hold.

Had the salary cap been in place when the $700 billion bailout program began, it probably would have applied only to executives at five companies that have received so-called exceptional help: Chrysler LLC, General Motors Corp., American International Group Inc., Bank of America Corp. and Citigroup Inc.

Going forward, the compensation cap would also apply to other banks that receive more broadly available aid — but they could get around it by disclosing their plans and involving shareholders in the decision. Some 360 companies have received such aid. The cap does not apply to them retroactively, either.

By taking on executive pay and other corporate spending — including lofty severance packages — Obama sought to get his White House back on track with an issue that resonates with the public.

His move came one day after the withdrawal of the nomination of Tom Daschle, his friend and choice to head the Health and Human Services Department. Daschle got tripped up over, among other things, overlooking the taxes he owed for the personal use of a car and driver that was paid for by a company he did consulting work for — the kind of problem that elicits no sympathy from the public.

Obama's new plan is broad.

Beyond imposing tighter rules on companies that get emergency bailouts, it also requires more openness and limits for healthy banks that tap into public money to expand lending. And it envisions broad reforms in how employees are paid at any public financial institution, even ones that don't get federal help.

The new treasury secretary, Timothy Geithner — confirmed last week despite controversy over his own tax problems — said the raft of new policies is intended to restore the public's trust.

"There is a deep sense across this country that those who were not responsible for this crisis are bearing a greater burden than those who were," he said in announcing the details with Obama.

Obama signs bill for children's health-care

Measure to be funded primarily by boosting fed. tax on cigarettes

By Noam N. Levey
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama signed legislation Wednesday to expand publicly funded health insurance for children, marking a historic shift in Washington's political landscape and providing the White House its biggest victory since Obama took office.

Less than two years ago, former President George W. Bush blocked similar bills by congressional Democrats, labeling the proposed expansion of the State Children's Health Insurance Program as a step toward government-run health care.

But with Democrats now firmly in control of the White House and Congress, the party's leaders easily pushed through a $33 billion bill that is expected to provide government subsidized insurance to 4 million mostly low-income children.

That would reduce the number of uninsured children in America by about half over the next 4 1/2 years and boost the number covered by the program to 11 million.

The measure — funded primarily by boosting the federal tax on cigarettes by 61 cents, to $1 a pack — sailed through the House earlier Wednesday on a largely party-line vote of 290-135. The Senate overwhelmingly approved the bill last week.

The swift passage came in marked contrast to the economic recovery package, which is currently mired in debate on Capitol Hill despite pleas from Obama for congressional action.

The bill was an early benchmark in the planned Democratic campaign to reshape the nation's health-care system over the next two years.

"The way I see it, providing coverage to 11 million children . . . is a down payment on my commitment to cover every single American," Obama said before signing the bill in the East Room of the White House.

The president also drew on language from an earlier era, when Washington more openly embraced the expansion of the government-funded safety net.

"We're not a nation that leaves struggling families to fend for themselves," he said.

WASHINGTON Senators add break for home buyers to stimulus

Seeking to jump-start the housing market, the Senate added new tax relief for home buyers to its $900 billion economic stimulus bill Wednesday as the legislation moved toward a final vote.

The housing amendment, offered by Sen. Johnny Isakson, R-Ga., represents a significant victory for Republicans. GOP lawmakers have complained that the package includes few of their priorities for easing the economic crisis, including more help for the housing sector, which has been devastated by foreclosures and the frozen credit market.

The Isakson provision would provide a tax credit of up to $15,000 for any home bought as a primary residence, for one year after the stimulus bill is signed into law. It would add $19 billion to the package's $900 billion price tag.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said a final vote on the Senate package could come as early as tonight.

MASSACHUSETTS FBI to review evidence in Tylenol deaths

CAMBRIDGE — Federal agents on Wednesday searched the home of a man linked to the fatal 1982 Tylenol poisonings in Illinois and the FBI in Chicago said authorities are reviewing evidence in the deaths, which caused a nationwide scare and led to dramatic changes in the way food and medical products are packaged.

No one was ever charged with the deaths of seven people who took the cyanide-laced drugs. The FBI would not immediately confirm the search at the apartment of James W. Lewis was related to the Tylenol case, only that it was part of an ongoing investigation.

Lewis served more than 12 years in prison for sending an extortion note to Johnson & Johnson demanding $1 million to "stop the killing."

The FBI's Chicago office cited "advances in forensic technology" in a statement announcing that it, along with Illinois State Police and local departments, was reviewing all evidence in the case.

NEW YORK Survey finds American adults are risk takers

YONKERS — We're not smart cookies when it comes to eating cookie dough, and too often engage in all kinds of other risky behavior.

Those are the findings of a Consumer Reports telephone survey of 1,000 adults.

It found nearly 3 of every 4 Americans put cotton swabs inside their ears, risking a perforated eardrum. Nearly 4 in 10 admit eating raw cookie dough, which can carry salmonella.

Only half the respondents have a carbon monoxide detector at home and 61 percent don't have a rubber mat in the shower. Thirteen percent admitted sometimes drinking beer while using power tools.

ARKANSAS Bomb critically wounds head of medical board

WEST MEMPHIS — A car bomb explosion critically wounded the head of the Arkansas panel that licenses and disciplines doctors, detonating in his driveway as he was leaving for work, authorities said.

Police said they had no idea why someone would target Dr. Trent P. Pierce, chairman of the Arkansas State Medical Board. The explosive device placed on or near the car shattered the front of his white Lexus hybrid in a blast the police chief said could be heard a mile away.

"We don't know if this was a random target or someone specifically targeted him," said West Memphis Police Chief Bob Paudert. He said it wasn't known if the doctor was in his car or outside it when the device exploded.

Pierce was taken to Regional Medical Center in Memphis, Tenn., where he was listed in critical condition, hospital spokeswoman Sandy Snell said. Paudert said Pierce lost one eye and was in surgery late Wednesday afternoon.

A photo released by Nature magazine/AP shows a vertebra of an adult green anaconda, lighter color, dwarfed by the vertebra of a giant snake named the 'titanic boa from Cerrejón,' after the region where it was found in northeastern Colombia. The behemoth was 43 feet long and weighed 2,500 pounds.

Fossil of super snake is discovered in Colombia

By Thomas H. Maugh II
 Los Angeles Times

It was the mother of all snakes, a behemoth as long as a school bus and as heavy as a Volkswagen Beetle, that ruled the Amazon rainforest for 2 million years before slithering into non-existence.

Now this monster has resurfaced in fossils taken from an open-pit coal mine in Colombia, a startling example of growth gone wild.

Modern boas and anacondas, which average less than 20 feet in length and reach a maximum of 30 feet, have been known to swallow Chihuahuas, cats and other small pets, but this prehistoric monster snacked on giant turtles and primitive crocodiles.

"This is amazing. It challenges everything we know about how big a snake can be," said herpetologist Jack Conrad of the American Museum of Natural History in New York, who was not involved in the research.

The estimated length, 43 feet, "is the same as the largest Tyrannosaurus rex that we know of, although it only weighs one-sixth as much," he added.

The find sheds light on snake evolution but also provides insights into climate. Because Titanoboa cerrejonensis, as it has been named, was cold-blooded, the tropical climate had to be 6 to 8 degrees warmer than it is today for a snake that large to survive, said evolutionary biologist Jason Head of the University of Toronto Mississauga, lead author of a paper on the fossils appearing Thursday in the journal Nature.

The fossils of several specimens of the snake are from a cache of fossils excavated from the Cerrejón coal mine in Colombia. Paleontologists are excited about the find because there are few fossils of tropical vertebrates from the period after the dinosaurs' demise 65 million years ago.

Most rock outcroppings that might contain fossils have been hidden by the region's foliage, said paleontologist Jonathan Bloch of the University of Florida, who identified the snake. "The entire 10-million-year period following the extinction of the dinosaurs is a blank slate," he said.

Bloch and his students found hundreds of specimens dug from the mine, including "the largest freshwater turtle ever known" and "beautifully preserved skeletons" of an extinct species of crocodile "known to have been in South America but never seen before."

They also found fish fossils, related to bone fish and tarpon, that would have lived in brackish seawater. "That indicates it was a big, riverine system close to the ocean," Bloch said.

Titanoboa was probably the largest non-marine creature living on Earth during that period, Head said. The turtles and crocodiles that the team excavated were probably the giant snake's primary diet.

Snakes are generally able to swallow prey that weighs about the same as they do, Conrad said. Modern photos show reticulated pythons eating deer that weigh 120 to 150 pounds, he said. This snake, weighing 2,500 pounds, "could eat a large cow or a bison" — if there had been any around.

Instead, it probably had to settle for other reptiles, sliding into the water and gulping them down in ferocious strikes.

Extrapolating from the energy requirements of modern snakes, the team estimated that Titanoboa required an average yearly temperature of 86 to 93 degrees Fahrenheit, higher than the modern average of about 83 degrees in coastal Colombia.

This expands on current theories about what happens at the equator during periodic bouts of natural global warming. One school of thought holds that temperatures at the equator are buffered, staying relatively constant while more northern latitudes heat up.

"These findings support the idea that, with a warmer world, the equator was also warmer," Bloch said.

Vatican: Holocaust denier must recant before rehabilitation

By Craig Whitlock
 The Washington Post

BERLIN — The Vatican on Wednesday ordered a British bishop to publicly recant his denials of the Holocaust, responding to an outcry over last month's decision by Pope Benedict XVI to welcome the excommunicated cleric back into the church.

In an unsigned statement, the Vatican said the formerly defrocked bishop, Richard Williamson, would be barred from resuming life as a priest until he admitted, "in an absolutely unequivocal and public way," that he was wrong in asserting that the Nazis did not kill any Jews in gas chambers during World War II.

The Vatican said Benedict was not personally aware of the bishop's repeated public comments denying the Holocaust until after the pontiff decided to overturn a decision to excommunicate Williamson and three other renegade clerics 21 years ago.

The Vatican previously had fended off criticism of Williamson's rehabilitation even as church officials in Rome distanced themselves from his views. On Tuesday, Cardinal Tarcisio Bertone, the Vatican's secretary of state, declared the matter "closed." Other Vatican officials said Benedict had adequately addressed the controversy the week before by warning against Holocaust revisionism and proclaiming his "full and indisputable solidarity" with Jews.

But the Vatican's handling of the case continued to anger people inside and outside the Roman Catholic Church who said Benedict — a Bavarian who was conscripted into the Hitler Youth as a teenager — was underestimating the importance of the issue.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel on Tuesday accused the Vatican of "creating the impression that Holocaust denial might be tolerated" and urged the church to "clarify" its position. Even some German cardinals and bishops called on the Vatican to speak out more strongly against Williamson and apologize to Holocaust survivors.

Williamson

The Vatican's decision Wednesday to issue the new order was welcomed by leaders of several Jewish groups, although they said Benedict needed to confront other high-ranking clerics who have espoused extremist views about Judaism.

"This was the sign the Jewish world has been waiting for," said Ronald Lauder, president of the World Jewish Congress. "Anti-Semites should not be allowed to have a say in the church."

The episode has caused a particular stir in Germany, where Holocaust denial is a crime and prosecutors in Bavaria have said they are investigating Williamson for his comments. The country celebrated in 2005 when Benedict became the first German pope in five centuries, but many Germans are now cringing.

"We Catholics are trying to be loyal to the Vatican and trying to understand what happened behind the scenes," said Edmund Runggaldier, a professor of religious philosophy at Humboldt University in Berlin. "It's horrifying because we all know what happened in Auschwitz and we know that the pope does, too. That's what makes it so embarrassing."

There was no word Wednesday from the bishop on whether he would agree to the Vatican's demand. Williamson resides in Argentina and could not be located for comment. He had previously apologized for causing the pontiff "unnecessary distress" but did not back away from his comments on the Holocaust.

Pocatello to be Poke's new home Minico standout running back Morgan signs with Idaho State

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Poke is headed to Poky. Minico High School star running back Skylar "Poke" Morgan signed a National Letter of Intent Wednesday to play football at Idaho State University. "I went on an official visit last weekend and it just felt right," Morgan said. "It felt like the place where I needed to be." ISU's full-ride offer helped influence Morgan's decision to turn down solid walk-on offers from the likes of Boise State and Snow College. Other schools also wanted him to switch positions, but Morgan feels more comfortable at running back, and the Bengals plan to keep him there. "We're real thin at running back," ISU head coach John

Zamberlin said during Wednesday's press conference unveiling the team's recruiting class. The Bengals are expected to return three running backs from the 2008 team — senior-to-be Clint Knickrehm and sophomores-to-be Jared Bartholome and Ben Laporta. Morgan, who will pursue a degree in business, also likes the fact that ISU is close to home, where his family, friends and the entire community can follow his college football career. Idaho State finished last season 1-11 overall and in last place in the Big Sky Conference under second-year coach Zamberlin. "I think I can go in and help them right away," Morgan said. "I'm excited to help turn around the program. It's a challenge. I have an opportunity to go in and make a difference." Morgan got the attention of Idaho State coaches during their team summer camp last year, where he received the award for the camp's best offensive player. The 5-foot-10, 185-pounder continued to impress during his senior season, in which he shattered every school rushing record and led the Spartans to their fourth consecutive Great Basin Conference West championship and Class 4A state semifinal berth. Morgan finished his Minico career with school records for yards in a game (335 vs. Jerome in 2007), season (2,062) and career (4,300). He also set school records for carries in a game (41), season (275) and career (625), as well

PLAYING FOR A CROWN

Kimberly eases into SCIC title game

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It wasn't easy, but confidence made the difference. Wendell threw everything it had at the veteran Kimberly squad, but the Bulldogs would not buckle as they held firm for a 52-44 win at CSI Gymnasium on Wednesday to advance to the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference championship game.

After watching a 12-point fourth-period lead dwindle to just four with a little more than three minutes left, Kimberly (17-3) decided to pound the ball into the paint with its two difference makers, junior Alex Pfefferle and senior Megan Crist. The pair combined to score 14 of Kimberly's 16 points in the final quarter.

"Our team does a really great job of staying calm," said Crist, who finished with 14 points. "Buhl came at us late in our last game, just like tonight, and we're really good at keeping our composure in situations like that."

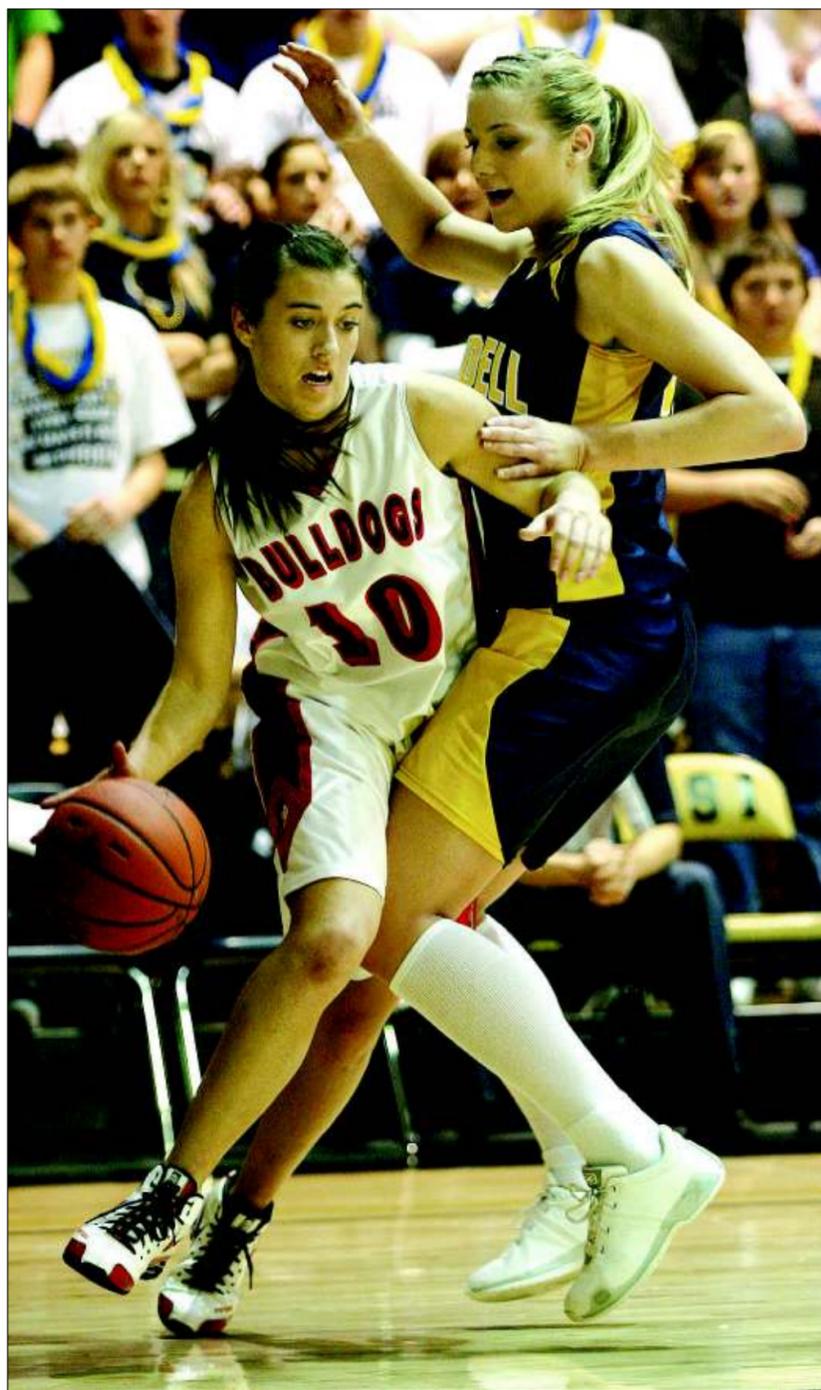

Pfefferle led the Kimberly attack with 24 points and 10 rebounds. Fourteen of those points came in the second quarter.

Wendell (16-6) got 12 points and 14 rebounds from Jori Fleming, but the Trojans missed 11 of their 18 foul shots.

"Free throws just killed us, and we're good shooters. That stuff doesn't happen to us in practice," said Wendell head coach Delon Huse. "We have to get ready for (a home game against Buhl) Monday, because Buhl will be really tough. They've been playing really well."

The victory gives Kimberly three cracks at a trip to the state tournament. The first will come next Wednesday when the Bulldogs return to CSI against either Wendell or Buhl for the SCIC title.

"We just have to win one more ... and we're telling the girls just to focus on one game," said Kimberly coach Rich Bishop. "This is the position you like to be in, because now you can watch the other teams have to battle."

Notes: Wendell forward Heather Sturgeon left in the fourth quarter with a calf injury and did not return ... Wendell guard Laurie Andrus, who was taken away from Tuesday night's game in an ambulance following a collision, was on the Wendell bench in street clothes and a neck brace. Huse said that Andrus has a concussion and neck stiffness, but possibly could be available next week.

Bruin boys beat up Madison Bobcats

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls boys committed themselves to playing the second half twice as hard as they did the first, and as a result doubled their output to defeat regional foe Madison 58-38 Wednesday at Baun Gymnasium.

"We didn't want to give them a chance to come back," junior post Jon Pulsifer said.

Twin Falls is now 4-3 in Region Four-Five-Six play and 12-5 overall with one conference game remaining.

The Bruins balanced outside shooting with an aggressive inside game during the third quarter to put distance between themselves and the Bobcats. Jake Hanchey hit a 3-pointer and went to the rim a couple of times, scoring the bulk of his nine points during this crucial period.

Hanchey

"They went to a zone," Hanchey said. "I saw openings and took them."

Brennan Lancaster added a couple of buckets along with some help from Jon Pulsifer and Russell Crane. The fourth quarter became a formality, and the Bruin bench got in some offense as well.

"We were solid all the way through," Twin Falls coach Matt Harr said. "We're not gambling as much, and we're playing solid defense."

On defense, Twin Falls held the Bobcats to single-digit scoring during the middle quarters. Madison was often making hurried outside shots and botching layups.

A bit of revenge

Burley boys take down Minico

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Maybe it was the memory of getting beat by their rivals 12 days earlier.

Perhaps it was the energy of the filled-to-the-brim Burley gymnasium.

Or maybe the Burley boys basketball team is simply beginning to shift gears with the postseason right around the corner.

Whatever the reason, the Bobcats played with a bit of confidence and sense of urgency Wednesday night in a 56-49 win over Minico.

After losing by three points at Minico on Jan. 23, the Bobcats weren't shy about admitting they wanted revenge.

"We definitely wanted to get them back. We hate losing to them more than anybody," said A.J. Hunter, who had 14 points, seven rebounds and four assists.

The Burley trio of Kyle

Hepworth, Bill Blauer and Ryan Larson ruled the paint as the Bobcats whipped the Spartans on the boards, including 16 offensive rebounds.

"They just outworked us inside," said Minico coach Mike Graefe. "We've had some kids sick so we had to bring sophomores up off the JV and I think our front line guys got tired."

Kyle Hepworth scored 15 of his game-high 20 points before halftime as the Bobcats led by as many as 12. Hepworth also finished with 14 rebounds.

"Hepworth is a nightmare to try to stop," Graefe said.

Minico battled back in the second half, slowly whittling away at Burley's lead until the Spartans found themselves down just two points early in the fourth quarter. Coltin Johnson led the Spartan comeback with 10 of his 14 points coming in the fourth.

Burley was able to hold off the Spartans' rally with clutch shooting down the

Richfield, Dietrich girls aim to cement dominance with state berths

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

It takes just two more victories for the Richfield girls to win the Northside Conference, but Dietrich could have one last chance to knock off No. 1.

The Northside tournament begins today at Dietrich High School with Bliss, Camas County, Magic Valley Christian and Carey battling it out for a shot to upset either the Tigers or Blue Devils in the semis. The top three teams will receive berths to the Class 1A Division II state championship tournament in Nampa.

"Definitely, Richfield is the team to beat," Dietrich coach Acey Shaw said. "They've proved it through the season. They're beatable, but we have to limit turnovers, and our field-goal percentage has to be around 40 or 50 percent."

Richfield (20-0) is led by Teenie Kent, who has averaged 18 points per game and four steals. Michelle Kent has put up more than 11 points and six rebounds, while Shasha Kent and Lea Piper contribute more than eight points per game. Piper leads in rebounding with seven per game.

The Blue Devils (15-5) will get the other first-round bye. Senior Jesse Dill leads the team in multiple categories (16.8 ppg, 7.9 rpg, 2.3 assists, 2.6 steals), but sore ribs suffered during last Monday's game against Richfield may limit her play-

CSI softball makes quick work of CNCC

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho softball team opened conference play Wednesday, easily sweeping a doubleheader with Colorado Northwestern Community College in St. George, Utah. The Golden Eagles crushed the Spartans 31-0 and 28-0 in shortened five-inning games.

No. 27 CSI tallied more than 50 hits through the doubleheader, with more than 20 going for at least two bags. Ashley Chappel hit three home runs and two doubles, while Cassi Merrill added a homer and two doubles.

Head coach Nick Baumert said the team had to find other ways to maintain focus through the blowout.

"We hit a lot of foul balls down the left field line," he said. "So for every ball a righty would pull, the team had to do five pushups."

Freshman pitcher

Generra Nielson earned 11 strikeouts in her Game 1 performance, while Kyla Bryant won her third game, striking out eight in a no-hitter.

The Golden Eagles (6-2-2, 2-0 Scenic West Athletic Conference) shouldn't get too complacent. Even though they have another doubleheader against CNCC today (with times changed to noon and 2 p.m.), Salt Lake Community College awaits for league doubleheaders in St. George on Friday and Saturday.

CLASS 1A SNAKE RIVER CONFERENCE TOURNAMENT Trojans nip Hornets as 1A Div. I tourney opens

By Diane Philbin
 Times-News writer

For 27 minutes and 53 seconds in the opening game of the Snake River Conference Tournament at Shoshone between No. 4-seed (North Division) Oakley and No. 1 (South Division) Raft River, the Hornets dominated the Trojans in all aspects of the game.

Several times in the first three quarters, Oakley extended its lead to 10 points. But it wouldn't hold up as Raft River rallied for a 46-44 win at Shoshone High School.

Three players, Raft River's Marli Manning, Oakley's Sabrina Wybenga and Raft River's Chelzee Nye went to the free throw line in the final 43 seconds and each player missed both attempts with the game tied.

The Trojans rebounded Nye's second miss, and with eight seconds remaining Hansen's teammates opened up a sideline drive to the basket with picks and screens and the senior was able to drive and score the winning basket. Hansen finished the game with 20 points — 12 coming in the final quarter.

"We may have come into the game a little overconfident after beating them twice," said Hansen. "Oakley has really improved. We can't dwell on this game. Wwe have to do better in all aspects of our next game."

The Hornets held a 27-18 lead at the half and were still in command of the game at 34-25 starting final quarter. The Trojans took their first lead at 38-37 with 4:49 remaining in the game on a basket by Sally Hansen.

In the final four minutes, there were four ties with the last one coming with 1:20 remaining at 44-44.

When asked about his halftime speech, Raft River coach Jeremy Qualls joked, "I went into the other locker room to see what Kristen (Jones) had to say."

The Hornets near-miss sends them to an elimination game against Castelford on Friday.

"We won in every area but the score," said Oakley coach Kristin Jones. "The defense came out on fire and the girls had confidence that they could win. Several players had career games. We have a bright future. This is a classy bunch of girls and I'm just so proud of their effort."

Saless Terry scored a team-high 17 points and Wybenga had 15.

"We were really pumped and excited," said Terry. "We knew we could play with them and we didn't back down. I had to work hard for my points and really push myself."

The Trojans advance to face Hagerman on Friday.

"This time of year, it is about staying alive," said Qualls. "You hope the girls are prepared when they get in these situations and can execute. Kristen has done a lot with her team. And they are doing some great things."

Despite loss, CSI women climb up a spot in poll

By Mike Christensen
 Times-News writer

Asked about last Friday's 59-58 loss at North Idaho College, College of Southern Idaho women's basketball coach Randy Rogers replied, "I don't think it hurt us."

That was certainly true as far as the NJCAA Division I Women's Basketball Top 25 is concerned. After splitting a weekend trip against the Cardinals, the 17-4 Golden Eagles (6-1 Scenic West Athletic Conference), climbed one spot in the national rankings, landing at No. 12.

The loss at North Idaho was the first for CSI in conference play and snapped a 13-game winning streak. But CSI righted the ship a day later, blowing out NIC 70-54.

Rogers said his team may have been "a bit overconfident" entering the games with the No. 17 Cardinals (18-4, 5-2 SWAC).

"I felt like we needed that loss to get our focus back and play better," said freshman forward Shaunce Samms.

Unbeaten Jefferson (Mo.) College remained No. 1 in the NJCAA rankings for the ninth consecutive week. For the fourth straight poll, No. 2 Central Arizona and No. 3 Midland (Texas) College round out the top three.

CSI is home for games Friday (5:30 p.m.) and Saturday (3 p.m.) against a 12-10 Eastern Utah team that is 3-4 in SWAC play.

Court documents: Former trainer discusses injecting Bonds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Court documents show Barry Bonds tested positive for three types of steroids, and his personal trainer once told his business manager in the Giants' clubhouse how he injected the slugger with performance-enhancing drugs "all over the place."

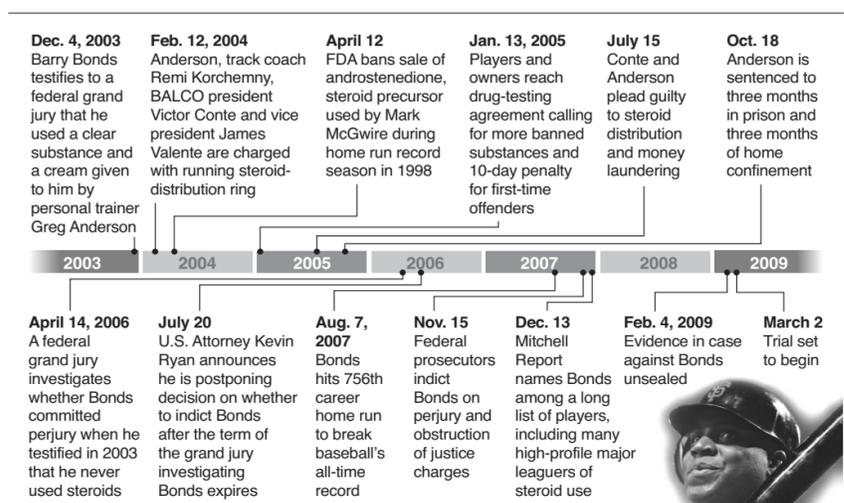

Prosecutors plan to use those 2000-2003 test results and other evidence, detailed in documents released Wednesday, at Bonds' trial next month to try to prove he lied when he told a federal grand jury in December 2003 that he never knowingly used steroids.

Bonds' attorneys want that evidence suppressed, and U.S. District Judge Susan Illston is to hear arguments Thursday on what to allow jurors to hear. Bonds' trainer Greg Anderson, who was jailed several times for refusing to answer questions before a grand jury, appears to be at the heart of the government's case. But his lawyer, Mark Geragos, said Anderson will again refuse to discuss Bonds if prosecutors call him to testify. Also among the evidence made public were a positive test for amphetamines in 2006 in a urine sample Bonds gave to Major League Baseball; doping calendars Anderson maintained with the initials "BB" and a handwritten note seized from his house labeled "Barry" that appears to be a laundry list of steroids and planned blood tests; and a list of current and former major leaguers, including Jason Giambi, who are expected to testify at the March 2 trial.

The documents said that Steve Hoskins, Bonds' childhood friend and personal assistant, secretly taped recorded a 2003 conversation with Anderson in the Giants' clubhouse because Hoskins wanted to prove to Bonds' father, Bobby Bonds, that his son was using steroids.

Anderson and Hoskins, who were near Bonds' locker, were discussing steroid injections, and at one point, they lowered their voices to avoid being overheard as

The government's case against Barry Bonds, who is accused of lying to a federal grand jury about steroid use, is set to begin next month. Evidence in the case — including past drug test results — was unsealed by a federal judge on Wednesday.

Cable has big plans for Raiders

Former Idaho coach formally introduced

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — Although Tom Cable is aware of the stiff challenges he is assuming by staying with the Oakland Raiders, their no-longer-interim coach only sees the opportunities.

Owner Al Davis formally introduced Cable as his fifth head coach since 2003 on Wednesday in a news conference lacking the theatric vitriol of last year's rare public appearance by Davis, when he promoted Cable and fired Lane Kiffin four weeks into the season.

The Raiders also announced the hiring of several more assistant coaches, nearly completing Cable's overhauled coaching staff. Ted Tollner was named the Raiders' passing game coordinator, and veteran NFL assistant John Marshall will be Cable's defensive coordinator.

After finishing 4-8 as the interim coach last season, Cable gradually sold himself to Davis during a five-week process lengthened by the death of Cable's father. Although Davis said he strongly considered another candidate, Cable's enthusiasm and loyalty won over the Hall of Fame owner.

"As I said when this became an interim job in October, this is my dream," said Cable, who joined the club as offensive line coach in 2007. "This was my team growing up. There's not anything in the world I'd rather be doing. I'm honored to have the opportunity. I'm very honored by what this football team did in the last six weeks of the regular season and where we have grown as a football team, and I know right now where we need to go to get to the playoffs."

After a rocky start to a tenure that began in the wake of Davis' vicious public spat with his thirtysomething coach, Cable led the Raiders (5-11) to back-to-back victories at the close of their sixth consecutive losing season. That late surge made an impression on Davis, who praised Cable's leadership and play-calling while also defending the deliberate process of selecting him.

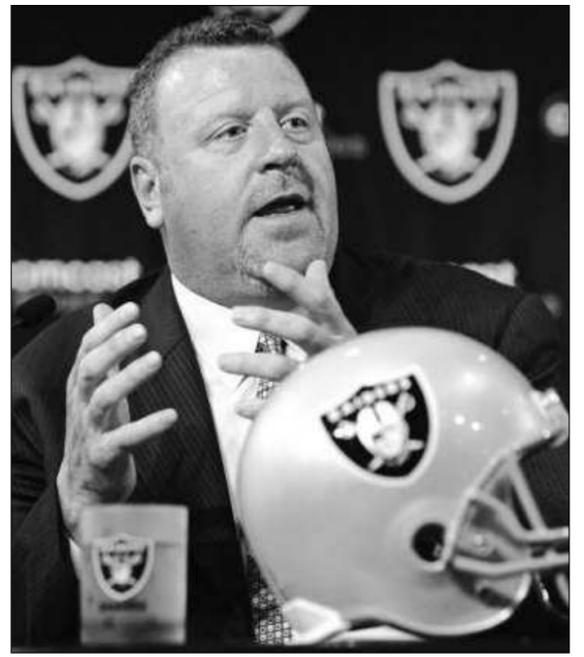

"He took over a team last year in the middle of the season, and I thought he did well," Davis said. "There were peaks and there were valleys there. There were things that came up from time to time, but he's young. He loves it. He loves football, and I admire the passion for it where I'm not so sure all the other (former Raiders coaches) had that passion."

Davis and Cable both said the coach hired the Raiders' new assistants, including several coaches who joined the club while Davis claims he was still deliberating between Cable and another unnamed finalist, suspected to be New York Giants offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride.

With Wednesday's addition of linebackers coach Mike Haluchak and the promotion of Adam Henry to tight ends coach, Cable's staff has been filled except for offensive line coach.

The Raiders won't have an official offensive coordinator, with Cable calling the plays in conjunction with Tollner and quarterbacks coach Paul Hackett. Tollner was an offensive assistant for the San Francisco 49ers last season, while Marshall was the Seattle Seahawks' defensive coordinator for the past six seasons under Mike Holmgren.

Oakland Raiders head coach Tom Cable gestures during a news conference at Raiders headquarters in Alameda, Calif., Wednesday. The Raiders retained Cable, officially removing the interim designation from his title more than five weeks after their season ended.

No. 10 Clemson blows out No. 4 Duke

CLEMSON, S.C. — Trevor Booker scored 21 points and Terrence Oglesby had five 3-pointers as Clemson got consecutive wins over Duke for the first time in 13 years with a 74-47 blowout on Wednesday.

The Tigers (19-2, 5-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) used a 20-8 run over the last 8 minutes of the first to take a 33-21 lead. They extended the lead to as many as 23 points.

Duke (19-3, 6-2) had won 22 straight over Clemson — most in blowout fashion — since the Tigers won three straight in the series in the 1994-95 and 1995-96 seasons.

The Blue Devils' run of success ended last March in the ACC tournament semifinals when Clemson beat them 78-74.

Gerald Henderson led Duke with 16 points.

NO. 2 OKLAHOMA 77, TEXAS A&M 71

NORMAN, Okla. — Taylor Griffin hit a tiebreaking layup with 46.4 seconds left and followed it with two clutch free throws as No. 2 Oklahoma rallied from a late nine-point deficit to beat Texas A&M 77-71 on Wednesday night.

The Sooners (22-1, 8-0 Big 12) blew a 15-point lead and found themselves trailing 68-59 with 6:25 to play.

MIAMI 79, NO. 7 WAKE FOREST 52

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Jack McClinton scored a season-high 32 points and Miami handed Wake Forest its second straight loss.

The Demon Deacons struggled throughout on offense and shot a season-low 31.7 percent, including 3-for-20 from 3-point range. Miami led 29-26 at halftime, then pulled away by outscoring Wake Forest 25-8 over the first 9:10 of the second half.

The Hurricanes (15-7, 4-5 Atlantic Coast Conference) snapped a three-game losing streak.

Wake Forest (17-3, 4-3) hasn't won since beating then-No. 1 Duke a week ago.

NO. 13 MICHIGAN ST. 76, NO. 19 MINNESOTA 47

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Durrell Summers opened the game with two 3-pointers and finished with 21 points as Michigan State snapped a two-game home losing streak.

The Spartans (18-4, 8-2 Big Ten) held the Golden Gophers

(18-4, 6-4) to 17.4 percent shooting in taking a 42-16 halftime lead.

NO. 14 MEMPHIS 79, SMU 66

DALLAS — Tyreke Evans scored 26 points, including eight in a key second-half run, and Memphis won its 50th straight Conference USA game.

The Tigers (19-3, 8-0) lost in league play to UAB on March 2, 2006. They have won 13 straight, the second-longest winning streak in the nation behind Utah State's 16.

MISSOURI 69, NO. 16 TEXAS 65

AUSTIN, Texas — Zaire Taylor hit a driving layup with 5.5 seconds left, then made a free throw to finish the three-point play and Missouri handed Texas its second straight home loss.

The Longhorns, who hadn't lost to Missouri at home since 1999, tied it at 65-65 on A.J. Abrams' floater in the lane with 1 minute to play.

NO. 17 VILLANOVA 94, PROVIDENCE 91

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Scottie Reynolds scored 31 points and Dwayne Anderson had 19 points and 10 rebounds to lead Villanova to its fourth straight victory.

Reggie Redding had 12 points, 11 rebounds and a key blocked shot for the Wildcats (18-4, 6-3 Big East).

NO. 20 SYRACUSE 74, WEST VIRGINIA 61

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Eric Devendorf and Jonny Flynn both scored 22 points to lead Syracuse, which ended a three-game losing streak.

The Orange (18-5, 6-4 Big East), who had lost four of five, avenged a 20-point loss at West Virginia (15-7, 4-5) last season.

NEW YORK — LeBron James scored a season-high 52 points in his 21st career triple-double, joined Michael Jordan as the only players with multiple 50-point games at the present Madison Square Garden, and led Cleveland to a 107-102 victory over New York on Wednesday night.

Two nights after Kobe Bryant set a record at the present building with 61 points, James added 11 assists and 10 rebounds, becoming the first player since Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in 1975 to have a triple-double in a 50-point game. James grabbed his final rebound with under 2 seconds left, then tumbled out of bounds as time expired.

They were similar numbers to James' game in New York last March, when he finished with 50 points, 10 assists and eight rebounds.

Zydrunas Ilgauskas scored 15 points, and Wally Szczerbiak had 12 points and 13 rebounds for the Cavaliers, who have won four straight and eight of nine. Al Harrington scored 39 points for the Knicks.

NATIONAL SIGNING DAY 2009

The best get better: Ohio State, USC, LSU all sign top recruiting classes

NEW YORK (AP) — Three straight BCS breakdowns aren't keeping the big-time recruits away from Ohio State.

Coach Jim Tressel turned another batch of blue-chippers into Buckeyes, putting together a class that rated among the best in the nation Wednesday, the first day high school players can make their verbal commitments to colleges official.

Most of the usual suspects cleaned up on the recruiting trail: Southern California, Texas and LSU have classes that experts are touting as top-10 caliber.

Defending champion Florida's class is small — that's what happens when a team wins a national title with a roster full of underclassmen — but strong.

Michigan's first class fully recruited by new coach Rich Rodriguez should give Wolverines fans some hope for a brighter future after a 3-9 debacle in 2008.

Miami coach Randy Shannon is poised to have a second consecutive promising signing day, though the Hurricanes won't know if top-rated running back Bryce Brown of Wichita, Kan., will keep his verbal commitment to them or switch to Oregon or Kansas State. Brown's adviser said it will be several weeks before Brown signs a letter of intent.

And at Alabama, Nick Saban has another top-rated class lined up to help him keep the Crimson Tide where he had them for much of the 2008 season: atop the polls.

The national championship has been elusive for Tressel and the Buckeyes in recent years, despite Ohio State's domination of the Big Ten. Ohio State has won or shared four straight conference titles, but lost three consecutive Bowl Championship Series games, including back-to-back title games after the 2006 and '07 seasons.

The Buckeyes had their hearts broken again in January, losing 24-21 to Texas in the Fiesta Bowl on a last-minute touchdown.

Maybe a recruiting national title will lift the spirits of Buckeyes fans?

"Recruits are not paying any attention to the game results," Allen Wallace of Scout.com and SuperPrep Magazine said Wednesday. "For some kids it might serve as a reason to jump on the bandwagon. They go in thinking, 'Maybe I can make the difference.'"

Ohio State had the majority of its class signed before noon, a group that includes most of the top players in the Buckeye state. Going into signing day, Ohio State was ranked No. 1 by both Rivals.com and Scout.com.

"Jim Tressel is one of the great national recruiters," said Tom Lemming of CBS College Sports, who had Ohio State No. 2, behind LSU. "He has a fence around the state of Ohio and put it up again this year. He also did a great job in western Pennsylvania."

Linebacker Dorian Bell and defensive back Corey Brown, teammates at Gateway High School in Monroeville, Pa., and both given five stars (out of five) by Rivals.com, are headed to Ohio State.

Tressel even managed to convince a couple of four-star recruits from the Sunshine State — running back Jaamal Berry of Miami and wide receiver Duron Carter of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. — to leave the Deep South and brave chilly temperatures in Columbus.

Carter has family ties to Ohio State. His father is former Buckeyes great Cris Carter.

Coach Urban Meyer's Gators made it three consecutive national championships for the Southeastern Conference with their 24-14 victory over Oklahoma in Miami last month.

And when it comes to recruiting, the SEC is just about as good. Scout.com had 10 of the 12 SEC programs among its top 25 recruiting classes heading into signing day. Rivals' top 25 had nine SEC teams.

IDAHO SCHOOLS GET THE ATHLETES THEY WANT TO SIGN ON THE DOTTED LINE

Boise State signs 22 new football players

BOISE (AP) — Boise State coach Chris Petersen says he got most of what he was looking for in his newest batch of football players.

Petersen announced the signing of 22 recruits Wednesday, the first day high school players can make their verbal commitments to college programs official.

While the new group brings plenty of talent, Petersen said each also possesses characteristics that have been crucial to Boise State's dominance of the Western Athletic Conference over the last seven years — a tireless work ethic, keen football savvy and character.

"It still comes down to finding really good players and not getting hung up on size and recruiting status," said Petersen, who led the Broncos last season to a 12-1 record, sixth WAC title in seven years and No. 11 ranking in the AP Poll. "The hard part is figuring out if they're your type of guy."

The 2009 class includes one junior college transfer, two natives of the Netherlands, a pair from Boise high schools, an Oregon tailback who rushed for nearly 7,000 yards and the grandson of Carl Eller, the former Minnesota Viking and Hall of Fame defensive end.

"We feel as good as we've ever felt," Petersen said of the 2009 class. "But for us to really know, it'll be a year or so."

It's also a class laden with linemen and cornerbacks, but light on offense, with just two quarterbacks, three receivers and one running back.

But if Malcolm Johnson rushes the ball on the Broncos' blue turf as effectively as he did in Oregon, Petersen won't have any regrets about signing a single tailback.

Johnson, 5-foot-11 and 190 pounds, rushed for 6,975 yards during his career at Barlow High School in Gresham, Ore. As a senior, he scored 25 touchdowns and was named to the Oregon All-State first team while averaging 204 yards per game. He drew only mild interest from recruiters at Oregon and Oregon State.

"Hopefully he'll continue that resume here," Petersen said of Johnson. "When Malcolm was a sophomore we saw him at camp and you could tell he'd be a special player."

The Broncos also landed Kirby Moore, a receiver and brother of Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore, who started every game last year as a redshirt freshman. Kirby Moore, from Prosser, Wash., had 131 catches for 2,126 yards as a high school senior, earning first team All-State honors.

Another recruit with solid bloodlines is Nicholas Alexander, from Los Angeles. Like his grandfather, Carl Eller, Alexander plays defensive end and notched 10 sacks his senior year. He also made the honor roll as a junior and senior.

Together, Boise State signed seven players from California, including quarterback Joe Southwick, who as a senior threw for 3,781 yards and 36 TDs and rushed for another 350 yards.

Petersen grabbed two players from Arizona and two from Texas, including receiver Aaron Burks. As a senior, Burks, 6-3, 180 pounds, caught 32 passes for 535 yards.

In conjunction with National Letter of Intent Signing Day, Old Spice announced Wednesday that Morgan has been named a national Red Zone Player of the Year.

Morgan was chosen from a large pool of nominees from more than 9,000 schools across the country. As one of 50 Red Zone Players of the Year, Morgan will be honored in a full-page announcement in today's USA Today newspaper.

Idaho nets 20 players

MOSCOW (AP) — University of Idaho football coach Robb Akey announced 20 new recruits on Wednesday, including two quarterbacks who may push returning starter Nathan Enderle.

Quarterback Brian Reader will transfer from Monterey Peninsula College in California, while Taylor Davis is a high school recruit from Anthem, Ariz.

"Competition is always a good thing," Akey said. "We have a very good quarterback in Nate Enderle."

But the Vandals need depth at the position, he said.

Reader was originally recruited to Arkansas and redshirted there for one season. He threw for 2,500 yards and 20 touchdowns at Monterey.

The new recruiting class will increase the Vandals' speed as they seek to become more competitive in the Western Athletic Conference, Akey said.

The group includes five linebackers and five defensive backs.

He noted the Vandals landed two of the best players in Idaho, in Jeffrey Bediako of Boise and Jared Heston of Coeur d'Alene.

Bediako is a 6-foot-3, 228-pound linebacker who moved to Boise from Amsterdam, Netherlands, and played only his senior year of football.

"He can run," Akey said,

and will only improve as he learns the game.

Heston is a 6-foot-1, 220-pound linebacker.

Idaho also signed four recruits from Washington, which Akey, a former Washington State assistant, called "Vandal country." They include Aaron Grymes from Seattle, a defensive back who had committed to Washington and then backed out after a coaching change.

The Vandals also landed Taylor Elmo, who played quarterback and safety at Eisenhower High in Yakima. Among the signees is 358-pound offensive lineman Tevita Halaholo, from San Mateo College in California. He benches 350 pounds.

"He helps us right away with the interior of the line," Akey said.

Utah tries to cash in on unbeaten season

BYU adds 21, USU focuses on JC transfers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah coach Kyle Whittingham says recruiting seems to get easier after each undefeated season.

He'd love to have one or two more to confirm his theory.

Whittingham said Utah's perfect season had a definite impact on this year's recruiting class, which he released Wednesday. The Utes went 13-0 and capped the season with an upset of Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, finishing the season ranked No. 2 in the nation.

Whittingham said a few recruits signed the day after the Sugar Bowl and he expects the 2008 season to continue paying dividends in future classes. He said that was the case after Utah went 12-0 in 2004. The difference is four years ago Whittingham was taking over for Urban Meyer and trying build his new staff and capitalize on the BCS Busters' success at the same time.

And now nobody can call the Utes a one-season wonder.

"This is a one-time shot. Forget about this happening again." That was what other schools used against us," Whittingham said. "Now there's more continuity and people understand that we're for real. I think it's a big difference this year as far as what we had to go through in '04."

Utah received 17 letters of intent on Wednesday, giving the Utes 23 newcomers including junior college transfers. Whittingham felt it was the best of his four recruiting classes, although whether that's true won't be known until they're actually playing for the Utes.

While going unbeaten twice in five seasons has definitely bolstered the Utes' image, Utah is still not among the heavyweights whose classes were billed as the tops nationally by scouting Web sites.

"Where we are in the recruiting chain, there's some schools that select who they want. They don't recruit. They just choose. We're not in that category right now," Whittingham said. "We have to work our tail off to get these guys signed."

Two of the recruits are quarterbacks and both will participate in spring practice. Terrance Cain transferred from Blinn College in Texas and enrolled in January.

Freshman Jordan Wynn graduated high school in December so he could start school in time for spring practice.

The Utes need to replace three-year starter Brian Johnson. Cain, Wynn, and redshirt freshman DeVonte Christopher will compete with Corbin Louks, Johnson's backup last year, for the starting job.

Cain is one of six players from Texas, the recruiting-rich state where Utah was shut out a year ago. Five of the recruits are from California and seven are from Utah, including Provo linebacker Jason Whittingham, the coach's nephew. Jason Whittingham plans to go on a Mormon church mission next year and won't start his college football career until 2011.

Whittingham expects the rest of the class to be available, starting with the six junior college transfers.

"We feel we took another step forward in upgrading the speed and athleticism," Whittingham said.

Both Utah and rival BYU lost out on one of the state's top recruits when coveted lineman Xavier Su'a-Filo signed with UCLA.

BYU coach Bronco Mendenhall also called this the best of his four recruiting classes. The Cougars got official commitments from 18 high school players and three junior college transfers.

The transfers are linebacker Jordan Atkinson (Diablo Valley CC) and defensive backs Lee Aguirre (Fullerton College) and Brian Logan (Foothill College). BYU's defense got off to a strong start last fall, but stalled midway through the season.

BYU signed five defensive backs, two linebackers and a defensive lineman.

"This class is a fantastic fit for both the young men and our institution," Mendenhall said in a release.

New Utah State coach Gary Andersen, the former defensive coordinator for the Utes, built his first recruiting class around eight junior college transfers as he tries to rebuild a program that hasn't had a winning season since 1996. The Aggies also kept hometown quarterback Jeff Manning, who threw for 3,180 yards and 42 touchdowns last year as a senior at Logan High School.

especially on the defensive line and the offensive line," said Zamberlin.

The Bengals are coming off a disappointing season, finishing just 1-11 and winning their only game 36-33 in the season finale over Sacramento State in overtime.

The list of Idaho players includes Skylar Morgan of Minico, who was voted the 4A State Player of the Year as a running back.

"He's a good get for us," said Zamberlin.

New Jerome Senior Center
nearing completion

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

Seniors in Jerome are about to have a new place to congregate, while city officials are thinking about what to do with the old building.

The city passed a bond last year, making possible the construction of the new Jerome Senior Citizens and Community Center building on Lincoln Street across from Saint Benedict's Family Medical Center. The building is almost ready to occupy.

City Administrator Ben Marchant said the project suffered some building delays last July but the city's current top priority is to finish the project.

"The city is discussing the old senior center building but nothing has been decided yet about what might be done with it," Marchant said.

Center manager Kristine Shelton said she's noticed the impact of a souring economy on the activities at the Center.

"Seniors are being careful about spending choices," she said, "And as a manager, if we don't have the money, I just don't spend it."

Despite economic concerns — or perhaps due to them — the center's various programs for residents age 60 and over have gained momentum. Meals at the center are served at a suggested price of $3.50, though Shelton said "any donation amount will be accepted, no matter how small."

"We've been growing in attendance for some time, now," she said. "We think it is our expansion in activities, as well as, perhaps, the economy."

Shelton said the fitness program is an example of that growth, as 30 to 35 people regularly attend.

Shelton said she is an optimist about the center's future and that thinks it looks better all the time.

Glaucoma remedy farfetched but seems to work

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have an advanced case of glaucoma with only partial vision in my left eye, which causes annoying difficulty in reading. I came across a delightful after-dinner drink that claims to reduce stroke damage by 80 percent. It is two cups of black coffee, a spoonful of sugar and two ounces of Irish whiskey chilled with ice cubes.

ASK DR.
GOTT
Dr. Peter
Gott

In investigating, I realized glaucoma was sort of like a stroke of the eyes, so I decided to test the drink. It tasted delightful and better still, within minutes, my partial vision cleared, and I was able to read again. A few weeks later, my vision worsened, so I drank another glass and my vision cleared.

I have since tried altering the drink a bit. I have eliminated the sugar and reduced the coffee to only one cup (but left the instant coffee at one heaping tablespoon). I drink it only when my vision starts to get foggy or I feel uneasy about my eyes. I have used the drink only four times in 10 weeks.

I know this remedy sounds farfetched, but, since first starting this, I have been seen by two doctors at two clinics within two days of each other. Both times, my eye pressures had dropped to normal and appeared to be holding. I don't know if this will work for others, but it certainly works for me, so I hope you will print my letter to share with your readers.

DEAR READER: Glaucoma is a complex disorder that can cause damage to the optic nerve, resulting in loss of vision and blindness. I must take a moment to state that not all increased eye pressure carries a diagnosis of glaucoma. In fact, glaucoma can develop with normal pressure readings on testing. The optic nerve must be damaged for the condition to occur. Beyond that, people vary in their ability to tolerate increased levels, so there is no definitive value for diagnosis.

You do not indicate whether you are on any medication. I can only determine you are under the care of an ophthalmologist who has you on drops or pills for control. Should this be the case, you must take your drugs precisely as instructed by your eye-care professional. Several of the medications must be taken more than once a day to be effective. Side effects from drops can include burning and redness. If you discontinue taking your drops or pills on occasion for this or other reasons, return to your prescribing physician, who will be able to switch you to another comparable medication with fewer side effects.

From a medical standpoint, I must agree that your remedy is quite farfetched. However, there are possible reasons for the pressure to decrease and your vision to improve. Symptoms can improve when you are in a relaxed stated, such as when you have had a cocktail. Adversely, they can worsen in times of increased stress. I suggest you experiment by listening to calming music, walking around the block or by doing something else that truly relaxes you. If you have positive results, we have the answer.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 7, at the Oakley LDS Stake Center, 355 N. Center Ave., where friends may call from 12:30 until 1:45 p.m. Officiating will be Bishop Thomas Garrard. Burial will follow at the Oakley Cemetery.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the LDS Church Perpetual Education Fund.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley.

'America's Best Idea' brings parks to the screen

Filmmaker Ken Burns' latest documentary on national parks

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Before the national forests were designated, before the interstates were even a glimmer in the mind's eye, Congress started making national parks.

Their creation, Ken Burns relates in his latest blockbuster documentary, "The National Parks: America's Best Idea," was a triumph of democracy. It secured forever and for everyone some of the continent's natural jewels — Yellowstone's otherworldly geysers, Yosemite's granite towers, the Grand Canyon's endless depths.

And as the nation and its ethic evolved, so has the park system. It now has sites marking Indian massacres carried out by soldiers under the same government that designated the first parks. Large predators such as wolves and grizzly bears, once trapped and shot to near-extinction across the nation, now thrive in places such as Yellowstone, Glacier and Grand Teton national parks.

Yellowstone, in northwestern Wyoming, became the first national park in 1872. On a recent trip into the park's Lamar Valley, Burns and his co-producer, Dayton Duncan, laugh with delight as they see a red fox arc skyward and plunge snout first into 2 feet of snow in search of a mouse.

"That was just fantastic!" Burns exclaims.

But like Burns' prior epic works for PBS — Civil War, baseball, jazz — his latest documentary looks beyond the park system's immense acreage and impressive beasts to grab at its quintessential American themes.

There are the big thinkers, John Muir and Teddy Roosevelt, who dove into America's wilds and came out with the idea that dams shouldn't go everywhere and not every animal should be shot.

There are the shadowy corporate interests of the railroads, whose lobbyists pushed the parks' creation so

SKIERS TAKE TO THE SKIES

Snow kiting gaining in popularity in U.S.

By Mark Morical
The Bulletin (Bend, Ore.)

BEND, Ore. — Finally, a gust of wind blew hard across the cold white terrain, puffing a swirling cloud of snow into the blue sky on a ridge near the east base of Ball Butte.

Tim Carlson took immediate advantage of the wind. His bedsheet-like foil kite flapped into the air, and suddenly he was up and skiing. The kite took him back and forth across the flat swath of snow as he turned expertly on his telemark skis.

Soon others joined in, and the mid-January sky was filled with half a dozen colorful kites as the skiers and snowboarders carved their way along the snow.

"It's the new chairlift," quipped Carlson, president of a group known as the Bend Kite Crew.

One of the latest winter sports to hit Central Oregon, snow kiting has a small but dedicated following. The seven-member club meets most winter weekends at Dutchman Flat Sno-park near Mount Bachelor before snowmobiling about five miles due north to Ball Butte.

Snow kiting is an offshoot of kiteboarding, a water sport that is popular in places such as the Columbia River Gorge. Snow kiting, however, is practiced on land.

Just like kiteboarders, snow kites use large inflatable kites — some use foil kites that are easier to power down — that allow the wind to pull them along. Kite lines attach to a snow kiter's harness and handle, which is used to maneuver the kite.

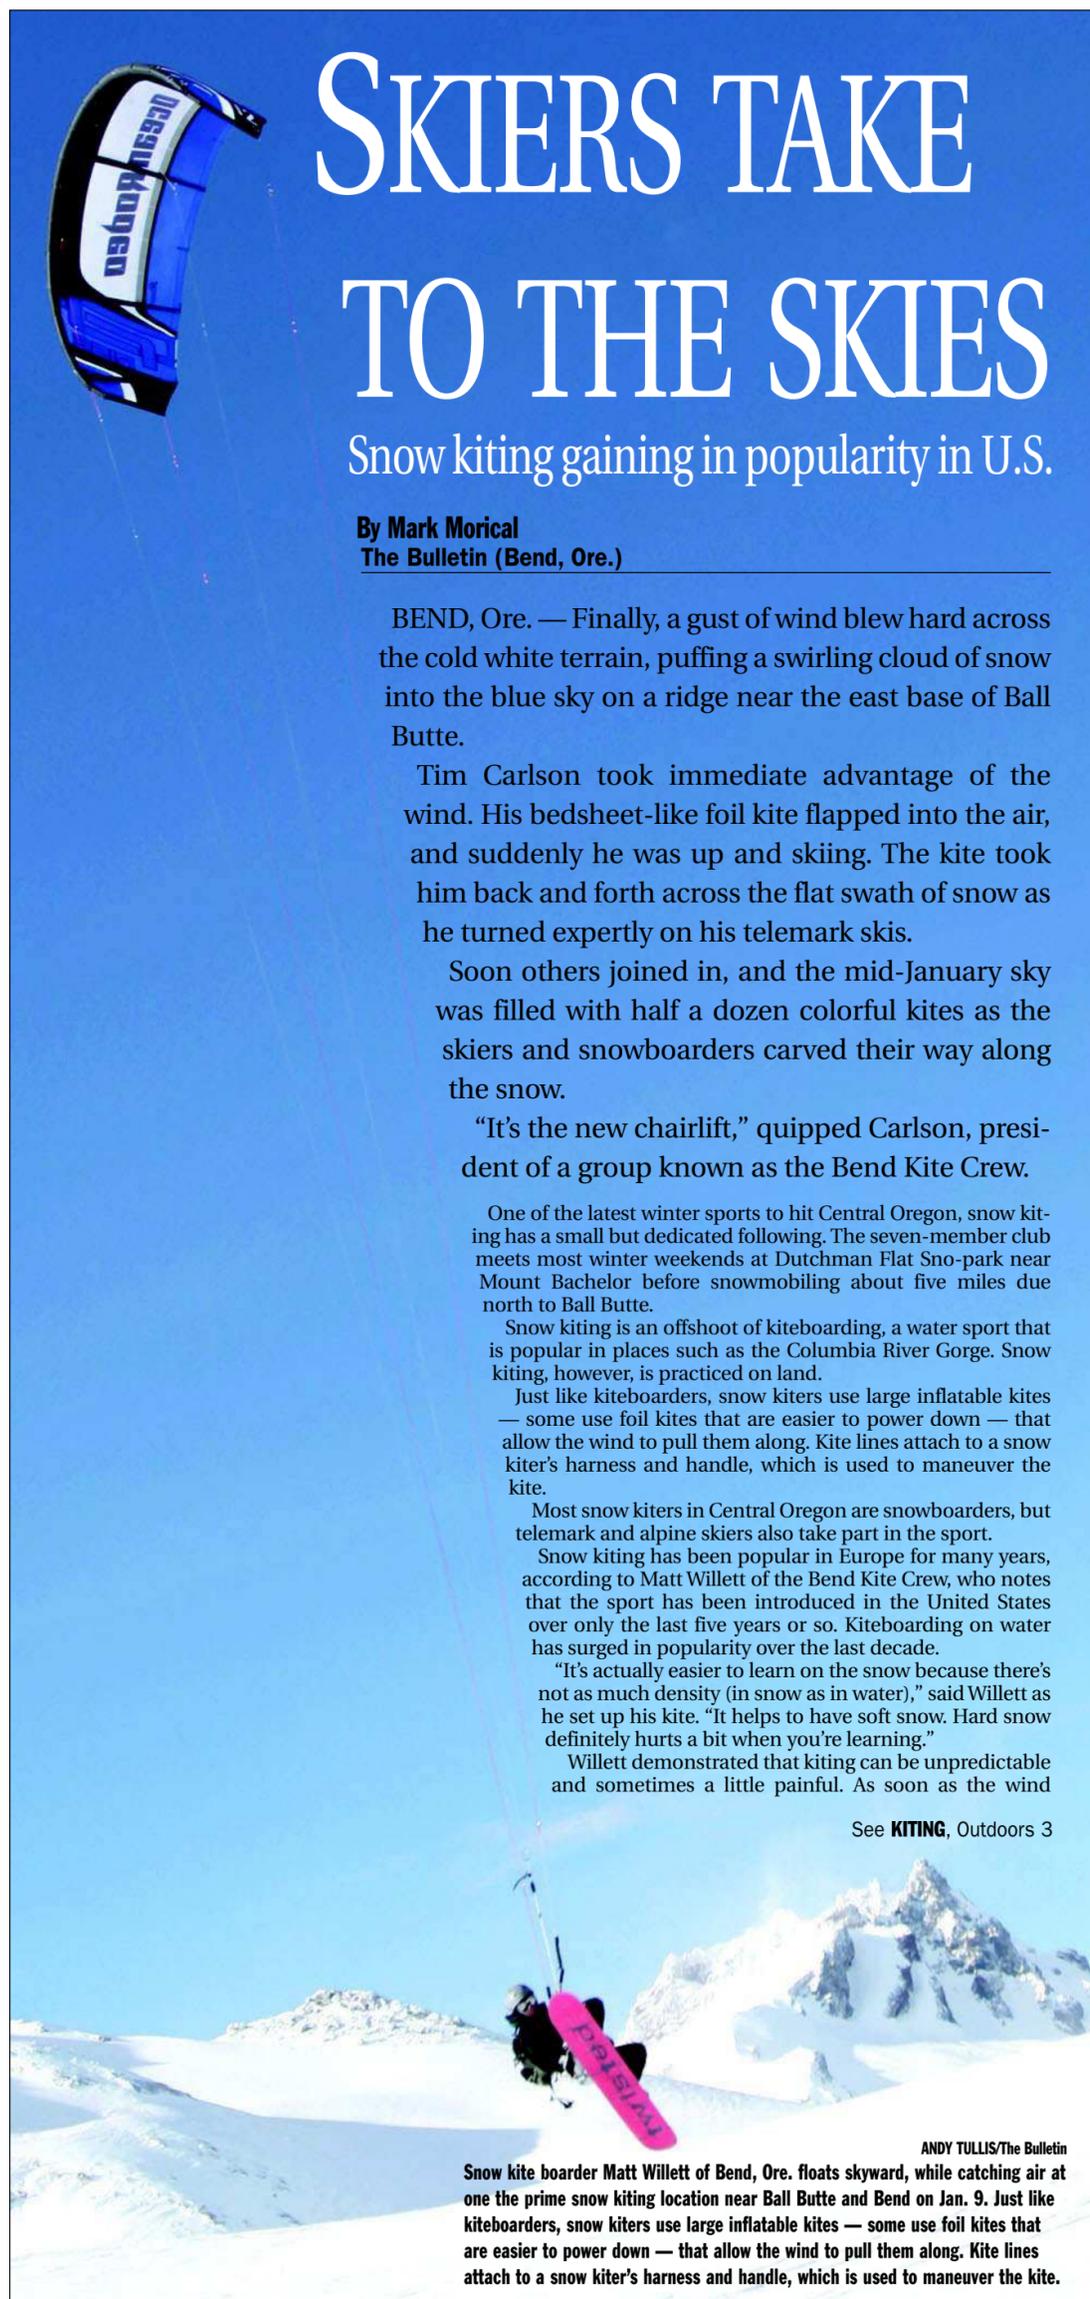

Most snow kites in Central Oregon are snowboarders, but telemark and alpine skiers also take part in the sport.

Snow kiting has been popular in Europe for many years, according to Matt Willett of the Bend Kite Crew, who notes that the sport has been introduced in the United States over only the last five years or so. Kiteboarding on water has surged in popularity over the last decade.

"It's actually easier to learn on the snow because there's not as much density (in snow as in water)," said Willett as he set up his kite. "It helps to have soft snow. Hard snow definitely hurts a bit when you're learning."

Willett demonstrated that kiting can be unpredictable and sometimes a little painful. As soon as the wind

Treading the middle ground

Balancing downhill power and performance with acceptable cross-country capability has long been a battle for back-country-skiing connoisseurs. You need speed on the flats and control when you're going down, a free heel to stride, and power to turn and stop where the mountains tip steep.

THE GEAR JUNKIE
Stephen Regenold

All these requirements do not add up to any whole. Despite decades of tweaking and the development of hundreds of products, a single system for all snowy terrain has never come to light.

Karhu, a brand created in Finland that came to North America in the 1970s, offers a line of skis that tread the middle ground better than most. The company's XCD line, unveiled 30 years ago, were initially touted as a marriage of downhill and cross-country qualities — metal edges, Nordic builds, and a sidecut and camber capable of touring as well as turning on the slopes.

A new entrant in the XCD line, I recently tested Karhu's 10th Mountain ski, which, at about three pounds per ski, is light enough for cross-country skiing and uphill plodding. But the $350 skis, which have full metal edges and a slalom-friendly sidecut, slice quick turns on slopes up to 45 degrees.

My test paired the 10th Mountain ski with the company's lace-up XCD Traverse boot and Voile 3-Pin Cable Telemark bindings. On the snow, the lightweight setup seemed skewed at first toward touring, with a camber that popped the midsection up and a fish-scale grip pattern underfoot for pushing off in lieu of kick wax.

In the backcountry, the Karhu (www.karhuski.com) configuration lets you leave climbing skins behind, with the etched fish scales gripping snow so you can push

Skiers prepare for Boulder Mountain Tour

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Records could fall in Saturday's Boulder Mountain Tour, thanks to a combination of fast snow and fast skiers.

"We're looking for a good fast course — cross country skiers love these high pressure systems," said Backwoods Mountain Sports owner Andy Munter and tour board member.

"And we've got a lot of fast skiers coming — of course, we'll all be rooting for the hometown boy."

That hometown boy is Mike Sinnott, who won last year's Boulder Mountain Tour in his first attempt.

A Saab Salomon Factory Team and Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation member, the former Dartmouth team captain boasts a plethora of trophies including two-time Junior National Champion and U23 Grand Champion. He has his sights on the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver, B.C.

Also expected to compete in the 32-kilometer race from Galena Lodge to Sawtooth National Recreation Area headquarters is Fairfield's Morgan Arritola — another local youngster who hopes to make the Olympic team. She finished third at last year's tour.

They will be competing against 700 other skiers — some of whom are former Olympians and some who are amateur racers just out for the sheer joy of saying they did the Boulder.

The race was conceived by Elephant's Perch owner Bob Rosso and a couple of others in 1976 to commemorate the occasion that Sun Valley ski instructor Louis Stur skied from Ketchum to Galena to deliver some medicine.

"We used to have to walk the course on skis to knock the air out of the snow so the snow machines could groom it," recalled Rosso. "Now, of course, the groomers are so much better — and the Blaine County Recreation District has a bunch of them out there manicuring the course."

Today the Boulder Mountain Tour is one of the most prestigious cross-country races in North America. Part of the American Ski Marathon series, it attracted up to a thousand racers from around the world before organizers decided this year to limit entrants to 800.

Spectators who wish to watch the start of the race at 10 a.m. can board a free shuttle bus at Hemingway Elementary School in Ketchum after 9 a.m. The buses will take spectators back to the finish line and back to Hemingway.

Spectators may also ride shuttle buses just to the finish

Lawmakers increasingly target unruly off-roaders

By Susan Montoya Bryan
Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Gordon Spingler is 75, but he still loves riding dirt bikes and taking along his children and grandchildren to share his reverence for nature.

"It's the experience of the outdoors," said Spingler, whose backyard is a gateway to hundreds of miles of single-track through some of New Mexico's most beautiful areas.

But Spingler and other off-road enthusiasts are worried that an effort by legislators to overhaul the state's off-highway vehicle law could curtail access to New Mexico's backcountry for the next generation of riders.

"It could be very contentious," Spingler said.

From New Mexico to New Jersey, lawmakers in many states are considering measures aimed at reining in off-road recreation as constituents express concerns about safety and complain that off-road vehicles are tearing up the landscape and harassing wildlife.

The measure introduced in the New Mexico Senate would allow youngsters to continue riding motorcycles as long as they have safety gear, training and supervision. However, children under 14 would no longer be allowed to ride all-terrain vehicles or other off-road recreational vehicles with four or more tires.

The measure also calls for higher registration fees, and spells out penalties for violating the state's off-highway vehicles law or OHV — a $200 fine for the first offense, $500 for the second and $800 for a third or subsequent violation.

Supporters say the measure will help ensure the safety of children and establish provisions so the law can be enforced.

But off-roaders say putting an age limit on ATV riders is unfair to families who enjoy off-road recreation, given that existing laws already call for safety training, proper equipment and supervision of all young riders.

"This is a popular kind of amendment for states that have no OHV statutes. But for us, where we already have these statutes on the books, it only unfairly targets the responsible user," said Rick Alcon, president of R&S Powersports and chairman of the state Off Highway Motor Vehicle Safety Board.

State Sen. Dede Feldman, the Albuquerque Democrat behind New Mexico's first OHV law, said the existing law isn't being enforced and some of the safety measures were never implemented. She said legislation is needed to "put us back on track to do what we originally intended to do."

Nearly 40 states have considered legislation dealing with safety and reckless riders over the past two years, according to Virginia-based Responsible Trails America.

The measures have included requiring off-road vehicles to have license plates, tougher penalties and more support for law enforcement.

Legislation has become more important given that the battle between off-roaders and their opponents has reached a volatile level, said Harrison Schmitt, executive director of the advocacy group.

"There's no question that the incidence of violent user conflicts as a direct result of reckless off-road vehicle use are popping up everywhere," he said. "That's a very real and frightening part about this problem. It's not just about natural resources anymore, it's really about people — and increasing numbers of people — using the same area."

Residents on Glorieta Mesa near Santa Fe, for example, have been complaining the rural area is being overrun by off-roaders. Fences are being cut, holding ponds are being used as mug bogs and livestock is being chased — all offenses that would be prohibited under the legislation.

There are similar complaints in the Tehachapi Mountains of central California, where residents have started a community watch to tackle unruly off-roading.

Off-roaders argue that irresponsible riders are giving the off-roading community a black eye.

"There is certainly an element of every group that the group probably wishes weren't part of them, but I think New Mexicans by and large want to do the right thing. They're law-abiding citizens," said Mark Werkmeister, president of the New Mexico Off Highway Vehicle Alliance.

The alliance said more than a quarter of New Mexicans participate in OHV activities, and many of them belong to groups like the Blackfeather Trail Preservation Alliance, which spends thousands of volunteer hours maintaining trails in the Jemez Mountains.

"Can OHVs damage the environment? Sure. There are a lot of things that can damage the environment," Werkmeister said. "I think OHV recreation, like any other form of recreation, can be practiced in a sustainable manner and I've been doing so over the last 30 years."

It comes down to personal responsibility, said Leo Hubbard, a Glorieta Mesa resident and longtime off-roader who supports the legislation.

"At some point, we have to say look this is my sport and my sport is doing some damage so what responsibility do I have in this matter," Hubbard said, adding that he doesn't understand why law-abiding off-roaders are fighting a proposal that targets only those breaking the law.

Spingler said the stakes are high because some supporters of the legislation want to push off-roaders out of the woods all together.

But he said critics should realize responsible off-roading can be a tool for teaching people to appreciate New Mexico's landscape.

"I died and went to heaven when I came here. It's cool," Spingler said.

John Wayne Pioneer Trail tunnels close

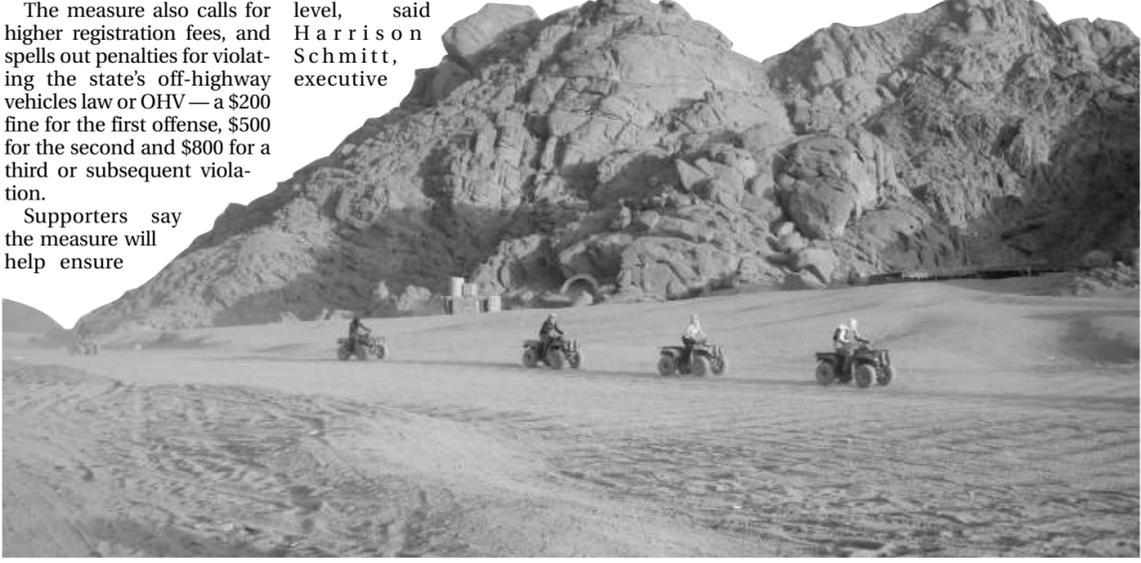

ELLENSBURG, Wash. — The state Parks Commission has closed five tunnels on the John Wayne Pioneer Trail because of the risk of falling debris.

An engineering study found hazards in the tunnels between Snoqualmie Pass and Kittitas. The study estimates repairs would cost $9 million.

The John Wayne Pioneer Trail follows a former railroad roadbed from the western slopes of the Cascades to Idaho. The 100-mile portion from near North Bend to the Columbia River near Vantage is managed as Iron Horse State Park.

The trail is open to hikers, bikers and horse riders, cross-country skiers, dog sleds and snowmobiles.

Ruger's versatile M77 Hawkeye bolt-action rifles

Introduced in 2006, the Hawkeye is the latest iteration in Sturm Ruger & Co.'s immensely prolific line of M77 bolt-action rifles and carbines.

True to founder William B. Ruger's practice of applying modern manufacturing techniques to update and improve classic firearms designs, the M77 represented his attempt to best the gold standard of all bolt guns, the Mauser 98. Sales figures, dating from the model's market entry in 1968, suggest that he may have succeeded in the attempt.

To be fair to the memory of Peter and Paul Mauser, however, it is the complex and costly machining required to produce a 98 that has primarily been responsible for the decline in the model's popularity, rather than any inherent superiority of more modern designs, like the M77.

Designed to fill a market niche between the economy bolt-action sporters of Savage, Marlin, Remington and Mossberg and the higher-end models marketed by Browning, Winchester, Remington, Weatherby and Sako, M77's have always provided lots of bang for the buck.

SHOOTING THE BULL
Rich Simpson

Let's take a look at the latest evolution of the '77 design and my personal favorite, the Hawkeye. Whether fashioned from investment cast blue or stainless steel, the Hawkeye's action boasts the classic Mauser two lug bolt, fixed ejector and large claw extractor — fail-safe features favored by hard core hunters everywhere. Boxed with each M77 are Ruger's proprietary scope rings. These hefty two-piece steel rings dovetail directly into slots milled in the rifle's receiver. This practice negates the need for "the weak link in the scope mounting equation" — separate bases.

And the best part: the rings (a $60-$80 value) are included free of charge. Nice touch, Bill!

Though it still falls short of the excellent mechanisms fitted to new Remington, Browning and Winchester rifles, the Hawkeye's LC6 trigger offers a noticeably lighter and crisper pull than its oft criticized predecessor, the Mark II.

Retained from the Mark II design, however, are the excellent receiver-mounted 3 position safety and patented floor plate latch. This positive latch can be easily disengaged to drop the steel floor plate (complete with monogrammed Ruger Eagle logo) conveniently emptying the magazine of its cartridges.

Another change that I truly appreciate as a big game hunter is the substitution of a subdued matte finish to both the blue and stainless variants' metal work, in place of the Mark II's game-alerting high polish.

Perhaps the most noteworthy and noticeable improvement involves the redesign of the Hawkeye's stock. Gone forever are the overly thick and squared forearm and pistol grip contours; replaced by the slimmer, rounder and more refined dimensions of its black synthetic or higher grade walnut stocks. In addition, fuller patterns of molded or machine-cut checking help to ensure a positive grip in any weather.

To gain a greater appreciation for the breadth and versatility of the current Hawkeye line, you simply have to check out the company's Web site at www.ruger.com. With more than a dozen variants ranging from the diminutive Compact to the full-stocked International, few rifle models match the affordability and versatility of the Hawkeye. Check them out at your local dealer. You won't be disappointed.

Idaho lawmaker: ban motocofflaws on groomed trails

BOISE (AP) — Driving your car or other motorized vehicle on a groomed snowmobile trail might get you in hot water with the local police, if one northcentral Idaho lawmaker gets his way.

Sen. Lee Heinrich, a Republican from Cascade, told Senate Transportation Committee members there's nothing in Idaho code that now prevents off-road rowdies from tearing up groomed trails frequented by snow machine enthusiasts.

The panel unanimously agreed to debate the bill further at a future meeting.

Before it cleared Tuesday's preliminary hearing, however, Mountain Home Republican Sen. Tim Corder wondered how police would enforce such a ban.

Heinrich, whose district includes miles of backcountry snowmobile trails in the Payette National Forest, said it's pretty easy to find violators, since most wind up getting stuck and end up having to be towed from the woods.

Bald eagle survey: Above average wintering population

Times-News

The mid-winter bald eagle survey completed Jan. 15 found 13 adults along the Snake River in north central Idaho, well above the long-term average of nine, according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

"We counted 13 bald and eight golden eagles along the 55-mile route up the river," said Joel Sauder, non-game biologist for the Lewiston Fish and Game office.

Early January each year, Idaho Fish and Game participates in a nationwide survey to estimate the number of bald eagles in each state, their distribution, and to identify previously unrecognized areas of important winter habitat. Sizes of survey routes vary from single fixed points to 150 miles. Surveys are conducted from vehicles, fixed-wing aircraft, boats and helicopters.

The local survey consists of jet boating up the Snake River from the Grande Ronde River to the mouth of Temperance Creek, counting adult and immature bald eagles.

The number of bald eagles observed wintering can fluctuate widely from year-to-year and is determined by the amount of open water and availability of prey, Sauder said.

The annual mid-winter survey provides information on breeding and non-breeding segments of the population at a potentially limiting time of year. It also provides an opportunity to monitor modifications or threats to habitat at important wintering areas.

In addition to providing information on eagle trends, distribution and habitat, the count has helped to create public interest in bald eagles and their conservation.

Bald eagles, once an endangered species, were upgraded to threatened in 1995 because of successful recovery efforts. Easily observed perching in large trees adjacent to area rivers or in flight, wintering bald eagles feed on fish, carrion and waterfowl. Adults have a dark brown body and white tail and head, while immature bald eagles are brown and have irregular white plumage.

"For those hardy souls interested in viewing bald eagles, as well as many other wintering birds in Idaho, the Snake and Clearwater rivers are excellent locations," Sauder said.

2009's best eclipse will be a subtle one

Idaho saw its last eclipse on Feb. 20, 2008, when the full moon became totally immersed in the Earth's dark (umbral) shadow, turning dark red-orange. This year's best eclipse occurs early next week, but will require a discerning eye.

Because the sun is so much larger than the moon (four hundred times wider), the moon's shadow tapers to a point. When that shadow — just a few miles wide — brushes the Earth, the lucky ones in its path experience a total solar eclipse. A much wider swath on either side of the shadow path sees the sun partly obscured, and gets a partial solar eclipse.

The Earth is more than 3.6 times as wide as the moon, and thus casts a complete (umbral) shadow 3.6 times wider, large enough to cover the entire moon for nearly two hours. The partial (penumbral) shadow is even larger, spanning five times the moon's diameter.

If the moon enters the penumbra but misses the umbra, it's called a penumbral eclipse. Since the penumbra comprises a ring around the umbra barely one lunar diameter thick, on rare occasions the moon can be completely inside the penumbra, but still avoid the umbra.

On Monday morning, we'll see a lunar eclipse with the moon almost completely immersed in the penumbra. This penumbral eclipse will begin at 5:39 a.m., but don't expect to see

Two orphaned bears put in man-made dens near Tahoe

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A pair of young, orphaned black bears have been placed in man-made dens northwest of Lake Tahoe in an attempt to reintroduce them to the Sierra wilderness.

The twin bears, now about a year old, were orphaned as cubs last summer when their mother was shot while raiding a chicken coop near Auburn, Calif.

Biologists for the California Department of Fish and Game drugged them and placed them Thursday in the specially constructed dens north of Truckee, Calif.

"Good night, Mr. Bear," biologist Jason Holley said as he covered the entrance to the den with pine branches and lumps of snow.

The twins, one male and one female and both 101 pounds, should stay through the winter, Holley said.

It's hoped when they emerge in spring, the bears will stay in the woods and not repeat the behavior that cost their mother her life. They were among seven orphaned cubs collected in California last year and raised in isolated conditions at Lake Tahoe Wildlife Care in South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

Another, "Lil Smokey," gained notoriety after he was found suffering from burns by a firefighter at a northern California wildfire last summer. That bear will be put in a similar den in the Trinity Alps next week, Holley said.

The bears placed in dens

Thursday at the University of California's Sagehen Creek Field Station near Truckee represent part of a problem of increasing conflict between the animals and people, mostly due to available garbage and human food.

"Now they are ready for another chance at being wild," Holley told the Reno Gazette-Journal. "It's a whole better option than throwing them in a zoo for the rest of their lives."

Contrary to what many believe, black bears do not sleep constantly through the winter. In what Holley described as "pseudo hibernation," they will emerge from time to time, perhaps looking for a little food, before returning to their den to sleep.

Lake Tahoe and parts of the Carson Range stretching from Reno to Minden had a record year for human-bear conflicts during the summer of 2007 when drought conditions dried up berry bushes and other natural food sources.

That prompted California fish and game officials to adopt an "aversion" campaign similar to one used in Nevada since the late 1990s that involves capturing, drugging and tagging problem bears and releasing them in the same general area.

Noise, rubber bullets and trained dogs harass the bears to create an unpleasant experience.

"We want to get them afraid of us again," Holley said.

Interior secretary tours refuge at former arsenal

COMMERCE CITY, Colo. (AP) — Interior Secretary Ken Salazar stood by a lake with flocks of Canada geese honking in the background Friday to promote a Denver-area national wildlife refuge as a beneficiary of the economic stimulus bill moving through Congress.

Salazar, whose department oversees national refuges, said the $819 billion bill could help fund a $7 million visitor center for the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge, create some 120 jobs there and attract hundreds of thousands of visitors a year. About $4 million already has been raised for the project.

"It is a project that's shovel-ready. It's ready to go," said the former U.S. senator from Colorado.

The Interior Department and other federal agencies will give priority to projects ready to go when allocating funds from the stimulus package, Salazar said.

The U.S. House has approved the $819 billion bill. The Senate is working on its own version.

Salazar visited the refuge on the second day of a two-day trip to Colorado. On Thursday, he visited employees at the Minerals Management Service in suburban Lakewood, where a sex-and-drugs scandal was uncovered last year.

Salazar's chief of staff, Tom Strickland, a former U.S. attorney in Colorado, will review the criminal cases and discipline spurred by an Interior Inspector General's report on the scandal to determine if it was handled properly.

Salazar also is reviewing 11th-hour regulations approved or proposed by the Bush administration, including a plan to open nearly 2 million acres of public land in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming to commercial oil shale development.

On Friday, though, the new Interior secretary talked and joked with federal, state and local officials he has worked with through the years. They posed for photos, the snow-topped Front Range of the Rockies running from horizon to horizon to the west.

Salazar met a busload of people, including Democratic Rep. Ed Perlmutter, whose district includes the arsenal, on a tour before talking to reporters at the lake.

"We're here at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal wildlife refuge because we wanted to come and tout this part of the Department of Interior," Salazar said.

off and glide. But going uphill is not always easy in these skis. I had to cut wide switchbacks on a 30-degree slope, traversing back and forth across the face, to keep the scales gripping and in contact as I moved. Any steeper and they'd slip backwards with pressure during a stride.

Another issue: My test skis, which are 185cm long and 68mm wide in the middle, did not support my weight in powder snow. On a ski straight through the woods, each stride sunk into the fluffy snow several inches, and the motion felt more like snowshoeing than skiing.

On denser snow and wind-blown slopes, the 10th Mountain floated fine.

The setup excelled, surprisingly, on the downhills. I tentatively worked my way up from an easy slope to the steepers at a ski resort. My Telemark technique is far from refined, but the XCD system remained solid underfoot as I skied black diamond runs and slalomed in trees.

In the quest for the perfect all-around ski, the 10th Mountain does not emerge as a final solution. But compared to my regular alpine-touring setup, which includes heavy skis and plastic boots, the XCD system is a lightweight joy on anything less than extreme uphill, going down, or across a flat expanse.

four-day boat trip into Alaska's Glacier Bay National Park.

But more often the best shots came from places like Yosemite's Inspiration Point — right there on the roadside, marked with a sign and complete with parking lot. During the shooting of some scenes, hundreds of tourists milled about just outside the camera's frame as Burns' crew captured the park system's most iconic images.

Duncan conceived the idea for the series during a 1998 trip to Yellowstone and other Western parks with his family. That trip mirrored a cross-country tour Duncan took as a youth, when he was 9 and helped plot a course that took the family through Yellowstone.

The parks, Duncan says now, are as much destination as idea, an imaginative piece of the national psyche that passes through generations.

"This place is the same as when you were 9 years old and when your parents were 9 years old," he says. "This large concept of the parks collapses into a very personal moment."

Burns jumps in to add: "That's your immortality right there."

The PBS series spans the mid-1800s to the 1980s, seeking in part to highlight the timeless pressures the parks face.

Just as some critics today bemoan the National Park Service's $2.6 billion budget as insufficient to keep up with 300 million annual visitors, so did the first advocates of Yellowstone complain that Congress offered not a single cent to support the park's creation.

Then there is the perpetual struggle to carve public space out of a landscape many would like to see used for private profit.

When Yellowstone was created, for example, lobbyists for the Northern Pacific Railway stressed the unsuitability of its 2 million acres. They argued it was too cold to grow anything, too rocky for livestock and lacking in any minerals worth mining. Only then did Congress pass the bill creating the park.

Despite an outspoken advocacy for shielding parks from development, Duncan and Burns see no contradiction in the daily human encroachment into these natural enclaves. Burns says that includes the summer "wildlife jams" in Yellowstone where cars stack up and their occupants exit to crowd around a moose or a bighorn sheep.

The park experience, he contends, accrues to each visitor uniquely. It doesn't matter whether a park's features are viewed while cruising in air-conditioned comfort along Virginia's Blue Ridge Parkway, or soaked in aboard a raft floating down the Colorado River on a multi-day trip through the Grand Canyon.

Both, he says, are valid — and equally American — manifestations of the National Park experience.

"This is a history — not a travelogue," he says. "In these great national wonders such as Yellowstone, we feel insignificant. And yet paradoxically we are made to feel larger."

The filmmaker's latest trip to Yellowstone came in late January. He had visited several times during the summer, but knew through Duncan that tourists are fewest in winter. That's also when heavy snowfalls drive wolves, elk and bison out of the mountains and into Yellowstone's more hospitable river valleys.

On a guided tour into the Lamar Valley, Burns, Duncan and Duncan's 18-year-old son, Will, marvel at a huge bull bison using his massive head to shovel snow aside so he can reach the grass beneath. They observe a sparrow-size American Dipper — the continent's only aquatic songbird — disappear into an icy stream for long stretches before popping to the surface.

And they watch wolves, a pack of a dozen pups and adults, circling the edge of a bison herd on the lookout for winter-weakened prey. Using a powerful spotting scope, Burns sees the animals crane their necks skyward seconds before their howls spill across the valley floor.

"Here it comes," Burns says, raising a hand for quiet just before the sound reaches their ears.

The filmmaker lets out his own howl in response, then offers a quote from one of the characters in his series: "Now let me die, because I am happy."

Kiting

began gusting, Willett was up and riding on his snowboard. He quickly switched directions and the kite launched him a few feet up into the air. Then he landed hard on his rear. On his back with the kite above him, Willett was looking for a pocket of wind to get moving again, but the kite came crashing down instead.

Wind speeds of 10 to 20 mph are ideal for snow kiting, according to Carlson, and the base of Ball Butte, an area popular with backcountry skiers and snowboarders, is a great place to find the right wind.

Waiting for the wind is a necessary part of snow kiting. But once that wind comes, there are plenty of options. On this day, for the Bend Kite Crew, those options included surging up Ball Butte, changing directions to catch air, or just gliding across the snow. The southeast wind that typically blows through the treeless area can send snow kites charging up the butte.

"When you're getting pulled uphill, that's the best feeling in the world," Carlson said.

Harnessing the power of the wind can also be dangerous. Snow kites must make sure they do not get pulled into trees or slabs of ice.

"It's surprising how much power there is," said Steve O'Shea, another member of the Kite Crew. "It's like having a motorbike up in the sky."

Kite Crew member Brent Bishop offered another comparison to describe snow kiting: "It's like wakeboarding, but you're driving the boat, too. You've just got to learn how to turn the kite."

From Dutchman Flat, members of the Bend Kite Crew routinely make a 20-minute snowmobile trip up to the Three Sisters Wilderness boundary near the base of Ball Butte. Snowmobiles are not allowed past this boundary, which is where the snow kites usually set up. Groups of no more than 12 people are allowed past the wilderness boundary, per U.S. Forest Service rules. Snow kites must be careful not to travel too far or get into a difficult situation in the wilderness because snowmobilers will not be able to rescue them.

Carlson started the club because snow kiting is such a gear-intensive sport. Club members contribute funds that go toward the purchase of snowmobiles and other shared gear. Carlson hauls everything to the snow kiting site on a small drift boat hooked to the back of his snowmobile.

"I think it's going to become really popular," Carlson said of snow kiting. "The hard part is coming up with all the equipment to get up here, so that's why we created the club."

Bend Kite Crew members started meeting last winter, and they were able to snow kite into July because of the hefty snowpack in the Central Oregon Cascades.

The crew recently hosted the inaugural Winter Kite Fest, which included 40 snow kites from all over Oregon and Washington. Some snow kites were able to ride all the way to Tam McArthur Rim, some three miles from the wilderness boundary.

The wind was blowing and it was amazing, Carlson said.

"A classic southeast wind. People were flying off the top of Ball Butte," he said.

Aaron Sales, the editor of Kiteboarding magazine, was on hand for the event.

"Finally a killer spot to ride in the Northwest!" Sales is quoted saying on www.bendkitecrew.com.

"That says it all, because he's been to Alaska, he's been everywhere," Carlson said.

Carlson is worried, however, that snow kiting might be banned from wilderness areas by the U.S. Forest Service, much like paragliding and hang gliding are banned. Any mechanized mode of travel is prohibited in wilderness areas.

"Is (snow kiting) really a mechanized mode of travel?" asked Chris Sabo, trails supervisor for the Deschutes National Forest. "It's definitely a new mode of recreation in the wilderness. It's under discussion, and it's not isolated to here. It's really growing in other places."

Carlson and other local snow kites hope to work with the Forest Service to keep their sport alive in wilderness areas.

"We want to totally comply with their expectations," Carlson said, "and keep it open for everybody's use."

Brent Bishop, 26, of Bend, Ore., pumps up his 15 meter sea kite, while preparing to go snow kiting with his friends near Ball Butte and Bend on Jan. 9.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: My bankruptcy case is closed. I'm trying to refinance my house, but the bank says there is a lien against my house in favor of one of my creditors in bankruptcy. What can I do?

Answer: Your creditor sued you and received a court judgment that was then recorded in your county, creating a lien. Although the underlying debt was discharged in your bankruptcy, the lien remains and must be paid or otherwise cleared before your home can be refinanced or sold. In Idaho, you are entitled to a homestead exemption that protects the equity in your home from your creditors. If the judgment lien impairs your exemption, it could have been removed while your bankruptcy case was still open. In order to remove the lien now, your case will need to be reopened, then you will have to file the appropriate motion and documents. This can be a time consuming process and there are fees to be paid to the court. An experienced bankruptcy attorney can handle this matter easily. Because the lien was not removed during the bankruptcy, I assume that you filed the case on your own or used a paid bankruptcy petition preparer. It's unfortunate, but what you saved by not using an attorney for your bankruptcy is probably less than you will spend reopening your case and removing the lien now. Bankruptcy is complex. Every debtor can benefit from being represented by an experienced bankruptcy attorney.

YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:
 A Petition, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging the above-named child comes within the jurisdiction of the Child Protective Act. You are hereby directed to appear personally for a Review Hearing at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho, on March 26, 2009 at 9:30 a.m. You are notified that service of the attached Petition upon you, as the parent(s), guardian, or custodian of this child, confers personal jurisdiction of the Court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act. You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of Court. You are notified that the parent(s), guardian, or a custodian may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the child. Budge, Racine Olson Nye Budge & Bailey, PO Box 1391, Pocatello ID 83204-1391, submitted a Second Mitigation Plan of North Snake Ground Water District and Magic Valley Ground Water District (plan or mitigation plan) to the Department of Water Resources (Department). The Department will process this plan pursuant to the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules (IDAPA 37, Title 03, Chapter 11). The members of the districts hold ground water rights for domestic, municipal, commercial and industrial uses, and for irrigation of approximately 220,000 acres located mostly north of the Snake River within Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Blaine and Cassia Counties. Certain of these ground water rights have priority dates junior to the priority dates of certain water rights from spring sources that discharge to the Buhl to Thousand Springs reach of the Snake River. The ground water and the springs are interconnected sources of water. The districts have proposed the mitigation plan to mitigate injury to earlier priority surface water rights that may result from depletions under later priority ground water rights. The surface water rights which the mitigation plan proposes to benefit are: 36-4013B and 36-7148, both held by Clear Springs Foods for use at their Snake River Farm hatchery facility. The mitigation proposed is in the form of monetary compensation in the amount of $17,820 per cubic feet per second loss of flow per year caused by the ground water depletions. The Department has not determined the adequacy of the proposed plan. A complete copy of the proposed plan is available for review at either the Department's State Office in Boise, the Department's Regional Office in Twin Falls, or may be viewed online at the following website along with other related documents: http://www.idwr.idaho.gov/Calls/Spring%20Users%20Calls/snake_river.htm Any protest against approval of the plan must be filed with the Department of Water Resources, together with a protest fee of $25 on or before February 23, 2009. The protest must include a certificate of service showing that a copy of the protest has been mailed to or served on the districts. DAVID R. TUTTILL JR., Director

Mom maintains friendships with daughter's old beaux

DEAR ABBY: From the time when I was a teen, whenever a romance of mine ended, my mother would continue having her own relationship with the ex, regardless of how I felt about it.

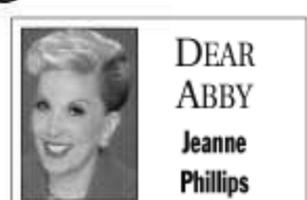

Over the years she has attended my ex-husband's wedding, still visits with my former high school boyfriend, contacts my sister's ex-boyfriend — the list goes on and on. Not surprisingly, this issue has generated some heated exchanges.

Now my adult daughter is experiencing the same thing. She recently ended a three-year relationship, and guess where Mother ended up? She drove 20 miles to visit him in his store, although there are plenty of other stores she could have gone to nearby.

I have long felt that I didn't matter much to her since my exes were so important to her. But seeing the pain this has brought to my daughter makes me furious all over again. Should we just never introduce her to anyone in our lives until the wedding?

— SICK OF THE EX-FACTOR

DEAR SICK OF THE EX-FACTOR: You're within your rights to do that. However, I find it odd that not only does your mother have such a hard time letting go of these men, but also that all of them seem to have a hard time letting go of her. I could see this happening once — but that it's happening with all of them seems peculiar.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am an obese woman who had the lap band procedure done three months ago. I am now able to eat only three or four ounces of food at a time, and I am starting to show some major weight loss.

What do I say to people with whom I go out to eat when they think I am being finicky or snobbish for not eating my entire meal? I have gotten some pretty weird stares, and one of my co-workers believes I have an eating disorder.

Abby, I would prefer not to come out and say that I have had weight-loss surgery, but I don't want people worried about me either. Any suggestions?

— MINI-ME IN TEXAS
DEAR MINI-YOU: So many people in this country have serious weight problems, I see no reason why you shouldn't be frank about what you decided to do about yours. It's not shameful, and it should not be a guilty secret. People who know you well will find out eventually.

However, if you are determined not to reveal that you had the surgery, when you eat out in restaurants, order only an appetizer. That way less food will remain on your plate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a retired guy who likes to stay in shape, so I run and hike in a neighborhood park several times a week. I was brought up to be friendly and outgoing, so I make a point of saying "hi" to everyone I pass. I don't expect anything in return, but it puzzles me that so few people (about one in six) will give a mannerly old guy the courtesy of a nod or a smile, much less a hello.

Is this the new etiquette? Women are excused, for obvious reasons, but interestingly, the prettiest ones do say hello. Any thoughts on this?

— FRIENDLY IN BERKELEY
DEAR FRIENDLY: Maybe the less "pretty" ones are so winded they can't respond. So keep jogging and don't let it get you down.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

IF FEBRUARY 5 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Never fear the future — just wait for it. You may have some very marvelous plan for the future, but pressing responsibilities could interfere with your ability to move forward during the next two months. You might be forced to delay the execution of certain schemes. For the best results, wait until August to take on extra responsibilities such as a new home, new job or business. If you wait and work hard in the meantime you will receive help from unexpected sources and find that things run more smoothly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be dependable rather than passionate. Your romantic ardor or business desire might seem to be on steroids today, but could fail you at the essential moment. Don't be swept away by a passing passion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Steady efforts will be rewarded. When others abruptly change course, you can be depended upon to stick to the schedule and follow through. Don't let envy or jealousy prod you into ill-considered moves.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): There have been some dynamic tensions at play. Situations that shift or alter should not cause any major problem unless you overreact or over-dramatize a situation. Take each day as it comes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It's not over until it's over. A relationship could reach a critical point, especially if there is a visit from the green-eyed monster. Don't gamble with your heart or your money under these stars.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Project positive expectations. Even though you may have some financial concerns or a few reasonable fears, you should balance caution with optimism. Make no investments or major purchases today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Impulsive actions should be avoided. An itch to gamble with your hard-earned dollars should not be scratched. It is wise to leave your credit cards in your pocket and your checkbook at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stick to the script. You are a sucker for sensual stimulus under these celestial conditions and might feel the urge to ad lib if someone strokes your ego. Make no crucial investments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let the Big Bad Wolf huff and puff. Like the Three Little Pigs, you can weather any stormy celestial condition if you have built solid defenses. Be prepared for an unexpected message from a friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial affairs could reach a state of critical mass. To avoid a meltdown, steer clear of investments and risky ventures. It is impossible to catch a wild goose, so don't chase one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hold on to your hat. Any ill wind that blows through your life right now may leave a few unsettled matters in its wake. Social ambitions could be stirred that might disrupt the even tenor of your world.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pass up a passing fancy. You may dream or fantasize, but this isn't the time to take action on a sudden passionate interest. Anything worth having will be good enough to wait until the timing is better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pass up a passing fancy. You may dream or fantasize, but this isn't the time to take action on a sudden passionate interest. Anything worth having will be good enough to wait until the timing is better.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Growing dissatisfaction with the status quo can create a rebellious atmosphere. To break the monotony you might consider changing horses in midstream, but be careful you don't end up in over your head.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Feb. 5, the 36th day of 2009. There are 329 days left in this year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Feb. 5, 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt proposed a Judiciary Reorganization Bill that included a provision to increase the number of justices on the Supreme Court; critics accused Roosevelt of attempting to "pack" the high court with justices who would side with his New Deal policies. (The measure failed in Congress.)

On this date: In 1631, the co-founder of Rhode Island, Roger Williams, and his wife, Mary, arrived in Boston from England.

In 1783, Sweden recognized the independence of the United States.

In 1811, George, Prince of Wales, was named the Prince Regent due to the insanity of his father, Britain's King George III.

In 1887, Verdi's opera "Otello" premiered at La Scala.

In 1897, the Indiana House of Representatives passed, 67-0, a measure redefining the method had left Afghanistan. Ten years ago: Former heavy-weight boxing champion Mike Tyson was sentenced in Rockville, Md., to a year in jail for assaulting two motorists following a traffic accident. (He ended up serving 3½ months.)

Five years ago: CIA Director George Tenet offered a forceful defense of prewar intelligence in a speech at Georgetown University. Pakistani President Gen. Pervez Musharraf pardoned the country's top nuclear scientist for leaking weapons technology to Iran, Libya and North Korea.

One year ago: John McCain seized command of the race for the Republican presidential nomination, winning delegate-rich primaries from the East Coast to California on Super Tuesday; Democratic rivals Hillary Rodham Clinton and Barack Obama traded victories. Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, a guru to the Beatles who introduced the West to transcendental meditation, died at his home in the Dutch town of Vlodrop; he was thought to be 91.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Living is like working out a long addition sum, and if you make a mistake in the first two totals, you will never find the right answer." - Cesare Pavese

The Dyspeptics Club now uses the Jacoby two-no-trump response to a major to show a good hand with trump support. After North used this gadget, South was soon in his accustomed position as the declarer, playing in six hearts.

South took the club ace and drew trumps, but the 3-1 heart split dissuaded him from trying for an endplay in spades. Instead, he cashed the spade ace, then led the spade nine. When West played low, declarer decided to play East for the Q-J-third of spades. No honor appeared under the king, so declarer eventually was forced to rely on the diamond finesse. When West took the queen with his king, the slam failed by one trick.

Unsurprisingly, North was not sympathetic: "After drawing two rounds of trumps, you should have played a spade to the nine. This succeeds in producing three spade tricks whenever East has honor-third or honor-doubleton of spades, or both spade honors. Here, West would win with the jack, and after winning the club return, you can play a spade to the ace. After you return to dummy with the third trump, the spade king drops the remaining spade honor and you make three spades, five trumps, a diamond, a club and two club ruffs.

"If the missing spade honor had failed to drop, you would have fallen back on the diamond finesse. This way you would combine the diamond finesse with a real extra chance in spades instead of the slim shot you were satisfied with."

ANSWER: Some people play a double here as support - precisely three trumps. We do not do that, so the choice is to pass, raise hearts, or bid one no-trump. My instincts tell me to bid one no-trump because I'm worried partner would assume more shape if I raise directly, and I like my hand too much to suggest it is a dead minimum by passing.
