Interstate move cleans record of Idaho child rapist

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Twin Falls native Jason Carrol Smith has a long history of violent rape in Idaho, but you wouldn't know it by looking at the Indiana Sheriffs' Sex and Violent Offender Registry.

Smith, 33, managed to scrub most of his record by moving to a small central Indiana town in 2007, two years after he was released from prison in Idaho. He registered as a sex offender in Indiana, but that state's public Web site doesn't mention two of the three criminal convictions that earned him a classification as a Violent Sexual Predator in Idaho.

Smith

That status was dropped last week following an Idaho Supreme Court ruling.

In fact, it lists only one crime — statutory rape, a charge that doesn't even exist in Idaho — while ignoring two prior convictions for raping young boys.

Idaho officials expressed outrage at the oversight.

"I don't see why we would want to have a sex offender registry if it only has half the information," said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs. "Ideally, these are supposed to warn people of the threat. You don't know the threat of Jason Smith without knowing his whole record."

Even authorities in Vigo County, where Smith now lives, were surprised to hear about his record.

"Certainly we can change that," Vigo County Sheriff Jon R. Marvel said of the Web site listing.

In 1990 at the age of 14, Smith raped a 5-year-old Twin Falls boy he was babysitting. He was convicted as a juvenile and put in a three-month sex offender program that took him six months to complete because of his behavior.

Three years later, in 1993, he admitted to raping another boy. After 30 days in jail he was remanded to

A crew from Balanced Rock Electric places a temporary traffic signal at the intersection of Washington Street North and North College Road Wednesday night in Twin Falls. A permanent signal system is scheduled for installation in late 2010. The city is spending about $45,000 for the temporary signal, which will better control traffic at the busy intersection where recent accidents have occurred.

Dairymen funding could be delayed by a year

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — Federal stimulus money may help fund a $35 million state livestock research center in the Magic Valley, while the economic downturn will delay dairy industry donations by a year, a House committee was told Wednesday.

The Idaho Center for Livestock and Environmental Studies, estimated to cost between $25 million and $35 million, remains a top priority for the state. The nearly 4,000-animal nonprofit confined feeding facility with at least 1,000 acres of crop acres to fund research is just the latest project lining up to benefit from the $787 billion federal stimulus package President Obama signed Tuesday.

Kutran pleads guilty in child's fire death in T.F.

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

A Russian-speaking father has pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter for the house fire death of his daughter last year in Twin Falls.

Stepan Kutran, 32, now faces up to five years in prison and possible deportation for involuntary manslaughter, a felony, and misdemeanor injury to a child.

Kutran's wife, Inna Gorbenko-Kutran, 28, was also charged with felony involuntary manslaughter and misdemeanor injury to a child, after their daughter, Jasmine Gorbenko, 2, died of burns, smoke inhalation, or a combination of the two, following the Feb. 19, 2008, fire at 441 Gardner Ave.

Authorities assert the child was left unsupervised with her 1-year-old brother, Emmanuel Gorbenko Jr., who also suffered smoke inhalation. They also say the couple had left the children home alone before and had been warned not to let it happen again.

Craig Jewett bought his first airplane in Caldwell.

There's no question that the 41-year-old Centerville, Utah, man was looking forward to flying the single-engine Piper Comanche.

"He told everybody about that plane," said Warren Kenner of Centerville, a friend who flew him up to Caldwell from Utah in a separate aircraft to pick up the Comanche Sunday. "He loved flying."

Former officials to study stimulus for Otter

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — A panel appointed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to study the federal stimulus money coming to Idaho will include former Idaho governors and state budget directors, but will not meet in public, Otter's budget chief confirmed Wednesday.

Wayne Hammon, Otter's budget director, said the former officials have been invited to offer information to the governor. The panel will serve similar to other state-budgeting processes and not meet publicly, Hammon said. Otter's legal counsel, David Hensley, will also serve on the committee.

Meanwhile, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee is expected to begin hearing reports from its non-partisan legislative staff next week on the federal stimulus. The reports will begin after JFAC hears annual budget suggestions from the germane committees in the House and Senate, said JFAC co-chairwoman Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome.

"He's taking a very cautious look and it's the right approach. We don't want to just sit and twiddle our thumbs but we're careful to not be raining on his parade, either," Bell said.

JFAC was scheduled to begin setting budgets Monday but postponed that after President Obama signed the $787 billion stimulus this week. Bell and other legislators said it's still unclear just how much money Idaho will receive. Some reports indicate the amount could be more than $1 billion.

The advisory panel's work will delay budget writing and adjournment of the Legislature into April. GOP budget writers said budget cuts will still be necessary even with the stimulus. After the panel issues its findings to Otter by March 19, he'll make recommendations to legislators on how to use the stimulus.

Budget writers and legislative leaders have said the mid-year 6 percent hold-backs to this year's budget won't change. They added whatever the stimulus amount, it will not be enough to balance next year's budget.

Farm equipment accident near Malta kills one

Times-News

BURLEY — A fatal accident occurred Wednesday afternoon in the Malta area of Cassia County. Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd confirmed the death, saying officers were at the scene of 1950 East and 50 North, near the port of entry along southbound Interstate 84 to the Utah state line.

"It was on a farm," Kidd said. "It was a piece of equipment used to prepare livestock feed."

Kidd declined to provide any additional details. Further information is expected to be available Thursday.

Rapist

state custody until he was 21. In 1998, he pleaded guilty to raping a 15-year-old girl and went to prison.

At the time he was released from prison in 2005, Smith told authorities he raped another boy who was only 5 or 6 years old sometime before 1990. That confession came during a polygraph test, but did not result in criminal charges.

In addition to understating Smith's record, the Indiana Web site gives an incorrect date for his most recent conviction in Idaho, which it incorrectly calls statutory rape — a crime that usually involves consensual sex between an adult and a person legally too young to give consent.

Idaho doesn't have a "statutory rape" crime, and considers any sex between an adult and a child to be simply rape, Loeb noted.

"I'll bet they looked at our statute and thought it was closest to their statute and that's why it was changed," he said. "The state systems don't always fit together."

Indiana sex offenders can be listed as "sex predators" on that state's Web site.

Smith was registered on Idaho's sex offender Web site until 2007, when in June he informed the state he was moving to Brazil, Ind., a small town near Terre Haute. According to the Indiana sex offender site, he's now living in Terre Haute. However, the site's map function — which shows where offenders live and work in relation to schools and other places frequented by children — says his current address "cannot be found" for mapping.

When Idaho sex offenders report that they are leaving the state, as required by law, Idaho reports it to the destination state, said Dawn Peck, an operations officer with the Idaho State Police Bureau of Criminal Identification.

But it's up to the receiving state to ask about the background of the offender, Peck said.

"We provide whatever they ask us for," said Peck, declining to say exactly what Idaho may have told Indiana about Smith.

The offender is then dropped from Idaho's own Internet-based registry, Peck said.

Marvel said Wednesday that when sex offenders from other states register with his office, they get information directly from the offender.

"We try to verify as much as we can," said Marvel, adding "we're a small department" with just one staffer handling sex offender registration.

While the U.S. Department of Justice also maintains a national Internet registry of sex offenders, it simply links back to the erroneous Indiana site. DOJ officials did not respond to repeated requests for comment this week.

Just last week the Idaho Supreme Court ruled that Smith's Violent Sexual Predator designation should be dropped because the process used to determine that status doesn't allow the offender adequate opportunity to challenge the label. But the state's highest court took pains to say that while the process was unconstitutional, Smith very likely fits the definition of a violent sexual predator.

He's also "a significant threat to re-offend," as described in the 2005 psychosexual evaluation that led up to his unconstitutional violent sex predator designation, the court noted in its ruling.

Smith, who could not be reached for comment, has not been arrested or charged with a crime in Indiana, according to Indiana State Police records and Vigo County Sheriff's Det. Rory Leech.

But those who knew him in Idaho — including his own family — say they believe he will rape again, and that residents of Indiana should know more about him.

Smith's cousin, Pam Henstock, said he raped her son in 1993 and killed a dog in front of him as a way to frighten the child into keeping the rape secret. Smith was convicted of that rape.

"If I have to call Indiana, I will," said Henstock. "If you keep it a secret, they'll keep offending."

Center

"Obviously, everybody's eyes are kind of focused on federal stimulus monies and the potential for tapping those to complete our funding package for the research center," Rich Garber of the University of Idaho told the House Agricultural Affairs Committee. "So we will be putting together a proposal at the request of the governor to try and tap into those stimulus dollars."

Garber said after the meeting stimulus funds would not replace existing money. The project's funding was appropriated before the economic downturn — $10 million from the state and $10 million from the U of I. At least $5 million was pledged by the dairy industry.

But Garber said when additional facilities joined the project last year — the U of I's Caine Veterinary Teaching Center and testing labs for the state departments of Agriculture and Fish and Game, both at Otter's request — costs grew that the university's land assets won't cover in the economic climate.

Garber gave the information at the request of Committee Chairman Tom Trail, R-Moscow, who learned of the matter in meeting with Garber and State Ag director Celia Gould.

Legislators said they've been told officials have nearly $1 million of the $5 million pledged by the dairy industry. But the economic downturn will delay collecting the rest of the money from the industry by a year, said Greg Ledbetter, a former state veterinarian now working with the Independent Dairy Environmental Action League, a group set up to solicit tax-free donations from businesses and dairymen.

Still, he said he's confident in raising the money and told lawmakers both dairymen and businesses see potential in the facility, which officials say will be located within the 20 mile radius of the College of Southern Idaho campus.

He added that in addition to that money, the dairymen are looking to raise an additional $5 million to $10 million in endowment to "fund the research projects" that could "directly benefit us in a much larger scale."

Ledbetter and Bob Naerebout of the Idaho Dairymen's Association said there will eventually be an educational and informational aspect to the facility that could draw additional revenue.

"We believe if we can get the research facility off the ground and running that just makes a natural constitution to this project," he said. "Let them see cheese being made, ice cream being made, and cows being milked. What better way to educate our future consumers about what we are doing?"

Ketchum police contract proposal draws comment

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — It was almost like a reunion in Ketchum's City Hall chambers Tuesday night, as former and current public and police officials discussed the possibility that Ketchum contract with Blaine County Sheriff for police services.

Since the resignation last fall of former Ketchum Police Chief Cory Lyman, the city has been seeking a permanent top cop. Assistant Chief Mike McNeil has helmed the department in the interim. On Tuesday, Blaine Sheriff Walt Femling gave a presentation outlining what he sees as the benefits of a contract with his office to all the parties involved. He had previously given presentations to the county commissioners and behind closed doors to the Ketchum City Council.

Before Femling's presentation on Tuesday, several former officials offered comment on the idea of a contract. They included former Mayor Ed Simon, former Police Chief Cal Nevland, former City Councilwoman Sue Noel, and former police officer Pete Cantor.

All agreed that while they respect Femling and his deputies, the city should retain full control of its law enforcement as a municipal department.

"The citizens of Ketchum should be marching on City Hall over even the idea of this," Noel said. "If the city needs to save money, find another way to do it."

Ketchum Mayor Randy Hall noted that more than $700,000 has been slashed from the budget recently and more cuts must be made.

The police salary budget is currently at about $1.5 million. Femling presented, but did not offer details on, two proposals that would reduce that to $1,102,000 or $1,124,000.

If the city does contract with the county, any contract would be binding one year at a time, so future councils could revert control to the city without difficulty.

Several speakers made allusions to poor morale at the Ketchum police department, something Femling felt could be improved through closer cooperation with his office.

"You can't change the economy, but you can change the morale," said Deborah Burns, a Ketchum planning commissioner, who liked the idea that officers would have more of an ambassadorial role in the community.

Although a contract with the sheriff's office is the only option that has gotten much public attention, the council has previously said they are also considering hiring from within, advertising for a new chief or contracting with the Sun Valley Police Department.

"No horse is out of any barn yet; this is all part of the process," said Ketchum City Councilor Charles Conn. The council did not say what the next step in the process might be, or offer a timeline.

Drought, pumping riddle WR aquifer

New USGS study measures flows

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The second phase of a federal study of the aquifer under the Wood River Valley has concluded drought and water consumption are responsible for its decline.

Released Wednesday by the U.S. Geological Survey, the report studied how much water entered and left the aquifer between 1995 and 2004, with a close look at 1995, a wet year, and 2001, a dry year. Called a "water budget," the document gives government entities and others in the valley a look at how the aquifer operates, said James R. Bartolino, the lead scientist on the project.

That's something the area desperately needs. The valley's population depends on groundwater for drinking, irrigation and other uses, but rapid population growth and other pressures have threatened its long-term water supply.

"For every blade of grass in the upper basin that's green, there's a blade of grass in the lower basin that's brown," Dave Tuthill, Idaho Department of Water Resources director, said Wednesday. "There is not enough water to go around." Hence Bartolino's work. Funded by nine organizations, including cities in the valley, the scientist and his peers at USGS are mapping how the aquifer operates and where its water goes.

Phase one measured groundwater levels and tracked a decline over the past 30 years. The proposed phase three will examine the geology of the aquifer to better track how water moves through it, Bartolino said, and the fourth will study water quality and could start in three years.

Pieces of the aquifer have been the focus of previous studies, he said. But the current work seeks to build a broader picture, albeit one still hampered by a lack of data.

"We're trying to look at the whole system," he said.

The water budget concludes that the aquifer took in an average 20,000 acre-feet per year more than it released for the 10 years — more so in 1995, the wettest year on record for the Ketchum Ranger Station measuring site. But its analysis of 2001, a year more similar to the past few, shows that maintained pumping during the current drought has contributed heavily to the aquifer's decline. Figures conclude that urban development consumes slightly less water than most agricultural land uses, but can take away from what returns to replenish the aquifer.

The Snake River Basin Adjudication is currently in the midst of sorting out the thirsty valley's contested water rights, with initial hearings held on most of the nearly 600 subcases, Tuthill said. The department is also working on the area's complicated transition to conjunctive management — managing surface water and groundwater together to acknowledge their effects on each other.

Developing good technical information such as the USGS report is important to the latter, Tuthill said. And Bartolino envisions other uses for the document as well — it could be a reliable guide for planning and zoning boards as they shape development in the region, he said.

Buhl schools examine reduction in force policy

Layoffs may loom if stimulus doesn't save district from budget cuts

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The Buhl School District Board of Trustees is hoping for the best with the district's budget but preparing for the worst.

During Tuesday's regular school board meeting Chairman Jim Barker frequently referred to the "Sword of Damocles" that may fall from the state in terms of funding cuts.

Before moving forward in creating next year's budget the district is awaiting news from the state about how much money it will receive. With the $787 billion federal stimulus recently signed by President Obama the budget crisis may be softened but trustees are preparing for cuts to the district's nearly $3 million annual budget in the coming fiscal year.

To prepare for shortfalls trustees reviewed a resolution on the district's reduction in force policy, serving as a warning that layoffs could be around the corner.

"It's frightening to me ... this is the first step. Heaven forbid this policy be implemented," said Janet Smutney.

The resolution must be passed before the district can engage in layoffs but Trustees Jackie Frey and Barbara Bremers were uncomfortable voting on it because they did not have an opportunity to review the document prior to the meeting.

Action on the force reduction resolution was tabled but will likely be on an upcoming agenda as the district will review teacher contracts for finalization in May.

"The resolution is the necessary first step, if we should in fact have to implement our RIF policy," Barker said. "Before we do anything we have to find out what our budget is going to look like next year and right now we don't know that yet."

In addition to cutting personnel costs, trustees are looking at ways to boost revenue, including the possibility of a holding a supplemental levy election.

Once the district knows how much money to expect from the state, trustees will have a clearer picture of local needs.

"We don't even know how much to ask for," said Bremers.

For now, the district will continue to hope "the sword" doesn't lop off much of its budget and look for ways to ease the pain if it does.

Indigent fund $2.5M short in '09 as economy dims

BOISE (AP) — A fund that pays medical costs of indigent Idaho residents will likely be $2.5 million short in the current fiscal year as the economy dims and the uninsured rack up bills, its administrator told legislative budget writers Wednesday.

Blake Hall, who oversees Idaho's Medically Indigent Health Care Program, wants more money for fiscal year 2009, but Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter hasn't recommended it, renewing another year of conflict over a fund with totals that have increased nearly every year since it was created in 1984. Hall projects the cost of the program will exceed $23 million by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

"This is a program that is highly sensitive to the state of the economy," Hall told the Joint Finance Appropriation Committee. "We are seeing in the first eight months of the year the effects of the downturn."

If the $2.5 million isn't approved, payments to medical care providers in Idaho's 44 counties could be put off until next year, he said.

The so-called "catastrophic fund" covers medically indigent who don't qualify for state or federal health and welfare programs, but who can get county assistance. More than 3,700 people had bills covered under the program in 2008.

Counties pay the first $10,000 in medical bills at federal Medicaid rates, with the state then chipping in for the rest.

In his Jan. 12 State of the State speech, Otter proposed boosting the counties' share of the cost to the first $15,000, starting July 1. That would increase counties' costs by about $6.2 million.

Otter also recommends appropriating only $14.7 million in state funds for the program for fiscal year 2010, while Hall wants $25.4 million.

Should the lesser amount be approved by lawmakers, county officials said Wednesday they might be forced to raise property taxes or tap into other sources of revenue, including sales tax proceeds they now share with the state. That might force them to cut other programs, said Bonneville County Commissioner Roger Christensen.

"In our county, a lot of revenue sharing goes to fund law enforcement," Christensen said. "That's one of the areas we'd have to look into in order to come up with this additional revenue."

Lawmakers say they're looking at ways to trim the program's expenses, including extending the time for medical providers to recover the cost of procedures, or changing the definition of medical care now eligible for reimbursement.

That could be difficult. Until 10 years ago, Idaho's catastrophic fund only paid for so-called "emergency care." But as a result of lawsuits, Hall said lawmakers changed the law to encompass "necessary medical attention," dramatically increasing some costs.

Nonini's right: Now is the time for one-year teacher contracts

It's difficult to imagine how Idaho House Education Committee Chairman Bob Nonini could have been more artless with his now-suspended bill to change teacher contracts, but implicit to the proposal was an important point:

In tough times, multiple-year contracts are a burden in a small state like Idaho.

The three-term Republican from Coeur d'Alene wanted to require that administrators and teachers sign only one-year contracts. He also sought to cut early retirement for teachers; make all teacher contracts expire annually without provisions carrying over; allow districts to reduce contract lengths and teacher salaries; and eliminate one year of experience-based raises for teachers and administrators.

All of which went into limbo when President Obama signed the massive stimulus bill Tuesday. Legislative leaders and Gov. Otter are waiting to see how much of that money — and for what purposes — is coming to Idaho.

Multi-year contracts are the exception in Idaho, but educators like them for the measure of job protection they afford; some school boards favor multi-year contracts because they allow a district to lock in costs and hire highly paid administrators without having to renegotiate their deals every year.

But in a hand-to-mouth economy, multiple-year contracts are more often than not dead weight.

Not that Nonini shouldn't have had conversations with more teachers and with the Idaho Education Association before he dropped the bill. It's simply common courtesy to ask an employee for input before changing the rules of compensation.

But the Legislature could mandate that new contracts between school districts and teachers and administrators be for a single year — and they could do so temporarily, say, through 2012.

There are few other public agencies in Idaho in a position to make financial commitments beyond next year, when tax revenue might actually be lower.

This is a pay-as-you-go state and spend-what-you-can-afford times. One-year contracts for teachers make sense.

Our view:

Why would an Idaho school board that doesn't know whether it will have enough money to finish the school year want to take on a multi-year contract?

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Will Ferrell! George Bush! Broadway!

I was dubious about Will Ferrell doing his Bush impersonation one more time on Broadway.

As we lurch through the disasters bequeathed by W. — the economy tanking, 17,000 more troops going to Afghanistan, Chrysler pleading for a total of $9 billion — would audiences still laugh at Ferrell's lovable fool of a president?

I was wrong. The audience for the Sunday matinee of "You're Welcome America. A Final Night with George W Bush" howled in delight.

I asked Adam McKay, the former head writer of "Saturday Night Live" who directed and co-wrote the show with Ferrell, why people respond this way to one of the worst presidents ever.

"He's so clearly a neglected 13-year-old that there's something really kind of heartbreaking about him," McKay said, calling him "a good-time Charlie" who was "just used his whole life to front questionable business endeavors, and in a way that's what his presidency was."

"He doesn't have Cheney's cartoonish need for power and greed that's so off the charts you don't even understand how Cheney got that way. W. may have some awareness, deep down inside, sort of like a petulant teenager who just flunked the trig quiz and knows he screwed up. I think Cheney not only knows but is delighted with everything he did, as is Rumsfeld."

In the show, the former president dismisses waterboarding as a spa treatment at Bliss, and reveals that he did walk in on Cheney once in the basement of the White House locked in the amorous arms of a giant goat devil in a room full of pentagrams.

"He looked at me with solid silver glowing orb-like eyes, and his breath had a strong ammonia scent to it," Ferrell's W. said. "And he told me in a language that I knew in my heart hadn't been spoken in a thousand years 'Pariff Go Lanerff! And I just ran.'"

One of the great mysteries of the Bush presidency is whether W. ever had an epiphany when he realized that he had been manipulated by Dick Cheney, whether it ever hit him that he had trusted the wrong father figure.

There were clues in the last couple of years that W. and Condi were trying to sidle away from Cheney by using the forbidden strategy of diplomacy in dealing with Iran and North Korea, and by cutting loose Rummy.

As one official who worked closely with both W. and Cheney told The New York Daily News' Tom DeFrank the last week of the administration: "It's been a long, long time since I've heard the president say, 'Run that by the vice president's office.' You used to hear that all the time."

The clearest sign of disaffection we have is Bush's refusal to pardon Scooter Libby, the man known as "Cheney's Cheney," despite Vice's tense and emotional pleading. It was his final, too little, too late "You are not the boss of me" spurning of Dick Cheney.

It may seem pointless for W. to worry about his legacy at this juncture, but he clearly did not want to add a Marc Rich blot to all the other gigantic blots on the copybook.

As DeFrank reported in The Daily News, Cheney conducted a full-bore, last-ditch campaign to persuade W. to pardon Libby, peppering the reluctant president with visits and phone calls, and was furious when W. would not relent.

After so many years of getting W. to do so much of what he wanted, by giving the insecure president the illusion of deference and a lack of personal ambition, it must have been infuriating to Cheney to have W. turn a deaf ear.

Cheney, uncharacteristically critical of W., told The Weekly Standard last month: "I disagree with President Bush's decision." Other Libby sympathizers put it more bluntly in the conservative magazine, calling Bush "dishonorable" and saying that his action was akin to leaving a soldier on the battlefield.

Alan Simpson, the former conservative Wyoming senator who is close to Cheney, told Jo Becker and Jim Rutenberg of The New York Times that the decision had left the former vice president "hurt and deeply disappointed," but he is not the type to stay bitter.

By not pardoning Cheney's alter ego, who plied his dark arts trying to discredit Valerie Plame and Joe Wilson and then lied to protect his boss, W. was clearly saying he thought that Libby, and by extension Cheney, did something wrong.

But it's not clear whether W. is simply pouting because Cheney's machinations blackened his legacy, or if, at long last, he fathoms the morality of it, that Cheney did hideous things to the Constitution — not to mention that goat devil.

Left-wing loons fail to think clearly about Bush

When I mentioned I'd be writing this letter, the consensus in my household was "You're going to honor Ken White's letter with a response?" I did put some thought into not addressing Mr. White's concerns as reason doesn't seem to be in his lexicon.

There is no question the war in Iraq was begun under false pretenses. President Bush thought there were weapons of mass destruction. As did the CIA, NSA and every Bush adviser, while the United Nations repeatedly drew lines in the sand that Saddam crossed. What if Bush had done nothing — would that have been the right move? Also, when it was discovered there weren't any WMDs — Americans were told as such — but also that Saddam Hussein must be stopped and terrorists residing in Iraq would be hunted down so we'd continue our Iraqi occupation. Was that a worthy cause?

Mr. White, as well as so many left-wing loons, harbor so much hatred toward President Bush and Vice-President Cheney that clear thinking isn't even on the table. His closing line stated we should "waterboard Bush and Cheney on the 6 o'clock news." While I imagine he was being a bit facetious, I'm sure he is the same person who gets up-in-arms when hearing about suspected terrorists being made uncomfortable when valuable information is being extracted from them.

Are the American lives saved by these methods less important than the 4,000 soldiers — the very ones he championed in his letter — who lost theirs in the Iraq war? In the seven years since 9/11, we've been attacked a grand total of zero times. For that alone, what should Bush's punishment be?

Why Japan isn't a stimulating role model

We argue by analogy. The president says that Japan's history demonstrates the need for his "stimulus package." To the contrary, claim Hannity and other conservatives, Japan shows that stimulus plans don't work. Up to a point, they're both right. But the possible parallels between Japan's experience and our own are much broader and pose the question of whether we, too, might face a "lost decade."

What happened to Japan in the 1990s?

It did not, as some commentators say, suffer a "depression." Not even a "great recession," as others put it. Japan experienced a listless, boring prosperity. Its economy expanded in all but two years (1998, 1999), although the average annual growth rate was a meager 1.5 percent.

Unemployment rose to 5 percent in 2001 from 2.1 percent in 1990. Not good, but hardly a calamity. Japan remained a hugely wealthy society.

Its situation compelled attention mainly because it confounded conventional wisdom. From 1956 to 1973, Japan had grown 9 percent a year; in the 1980s, it was still growing at 4 percent. Japan was widely expected to overtake the United States as the richest, most advanced economy. It didn't. Worse, its semi-stagnation defied the notion that modern economics enabled government to ensure adequate growth.

Papers were written, conferences organized, and the verdict rendered:

The Japanese had botched it. After the "bubble economy" of the late 1980s burst, the Bank of Japan had eased credit too slowly. Burdened with bad loans, banks stopped lending; government didn't cleanse the banks quickly enough. Government stimulus packages were too little, too late. Naturally, the economy languished. All plausible — and wrong.

The standard analysis reassures, because it suggests that with better decisions, Japan might have avoided its prolonged slowdown. The reality seems to be that Japan's economic reverses reflect deeply held social and political values. The same might be true of us.

Japan has what Richard Katz, editor of the Oriental Economist, terms a "dual economy." On the one hand, export industries (autos, steel, electronics) are highly efficient. They face intense global competition. On the other, many domestic industries (food processing, construction, retailing) are inefficient and sheltered from local competition by regulations or custom.

This has suited most Japanese. Exports earned the foreign currency needed to buy food and fuel imports. Meanwhile, protected domestic industries provided the job security and social stability that most Japanese preferred to hyper-competition. While exports thrived, they — and the supporting business investment — were Japan's engine of economic growth.

The trouble is that this system broke down in the mid-1980s. The rising yen made Japanese exports costlier on world markets. New competitors — South Korea, Taiwan — emerged. Japan lost its engine of growth and hasn't found a new one. That's Japan's central economic problem.

Government has tried. In the 1980s, the Bank of Japan sought to offset the effect of the higher yen with cheap credit. This backfired, resulting in the bubble economy. From 1985 to 1990, Tokyo land prices rose 134 percent; the stock market boomed. Since the bubble's collapse, there have been 13 stimulus plans, reckons economist Randall Jones of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. Even now, the economy is trade dependent; in December, exports dropped 35 percent from a year earlier, pushing Japan into a deep recession.

What happened in Japan does not doom Obama's stimulus as futile. Sometimes, government should intervene to break the fall of a declining economy. Japan's packages probably temporarily bolstered a faltering economy. In this sense, the president is correct. Unfortunately, his stimulus is weaker than advertised, because much of the effect occurs after 2009.

Still, the operative word is "temporarily." Hannity is correct in that serial stimulus plans become self-defeating. The required debt is unsustainable. At some point, the economy must generate strong growth on its own. Japan's hasn't. Will ours?

Since the early 1980s, American economic growth has depended on a steady rise in consumer spending supported by more debt and increasing asset prices (stocks, homes). Just as the mid-1980s signaled the end of Japan's export-led growth, the present U.S. slump signals the end of upbeat consumption-led growth. But its legacy is an overbuilt and over-employed consumption sector, from car dealers to malls. The question is whether our system is adaptive enough to create new sources of growth to fill the void left by retreating shoppers.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... the consolidation imperative

Idaho Statesman, Boise

The rhetoric says one thing: Idahoans want lean, efficient government. The numbers say something else. Idahoans tacitly accept 115 school districts and 295 highway districts.

Twin Falls County, with about 73,000 residents, has eight school districts. The smallest, the Three Creek District, had four students in 2007-08 ... Idaho County, with scarcely 15,000 residents, has 13 highway districts and a county road department — a stark contrast to the countywide Ada County Highway District.

The state can't afford to pay for redundant local overhead ... Not when lawmakers have had to dip heavily from a $113 million rainy-day fund in order to protect public schools from budget cuts, and not when lawmakers are contemplating a menu of tax and fee increases designed to fix antiquated and inadequate roads and bridges.

If legislators and government agencies can't look for efficiencies during the worst budget crunch in a quarter century, when will they? More than a month into a trying 2009 session, though, lawmakers seem to have no stomach for taking up consolidation.

That's a mistake. Consolidation critics raise a litany of familiar arguments, and ... they seem tired.

They'll say they'd rather let local entities make consolidation decisions on their own. That feels like a copout. Considering lawmakers' historic resistance to local taxing authority, they seem to embrace "local control" out of convenience, not out of deep-seated support of the concept.

The naysayers also will say consolidation would yield limited savings ... With state and local governments facing the toughest times in recent memory, is all spending on the table — or isn't it?

... Consolidation does not have to be a third-rail political issue, since savings could actually protect the on-the-ground programs taxpayers demand and deserve.

... put charters on hold

Idaho Press Tribune, Nampa

Providing more school choice is a worthy goal. Some students do not fare as well in a traditional public school setting and do better in alternative learning environments such as charter schools. Critics have a good point when they illustrate some of the funding and other advantages charter schools can have, but in general, there is ample reason to support them in normal times.

But as we all know, these are hardly normal times. Things are more than a bit chaotic right now. Luna has already floated his plan to chop $62 million from the public schools budget. President Obama on Tuesday signed into law the hotly-debated economic stimulus plan, which could bring up to $1 billion to Idaho in one form or another.

How will it all play out? Who will get how much? That's what Idaho officials must now determine.

A three-year moratorium may be longer than the current recession will last. And it could be that Idaho will get enough help from the stimulus package that Luna's proposed budget cuts won't be necessary — or at least won't need to be nearly as severe.

It could also be that the state will want to play things as close to the vest as possible — something Idaho lawmakers have shown consistently they can and will do. That means penny pinching. And spending more money to create more charter schools doesn't seem like a prudent move in such shaky times.

Regardless of what happens with the federal stimulus money, we should at least give the dust plenty of time to settle before starting up any new charter schools. A moratorium of at least a year or two sounds like a smart idea.

... the anti-Kempthorne

Post Register, Idaho Falls

Former U.S. Sen. Kenneth Salazar, D-Colo., and the new U.S. secretary of the Interior, offers the promise of refreshing change in how this nation's public land is managed. That's in stark contrast to the Bush administration, which consistently undermined the nation's environmental laws.

A rancher and Colorado attorney general before winning a Senate seat in 2004, Salazar succeeds former Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne in that Cabinet position.

Although some environmentalists have greeted Salazar's nomination with reservations — he supported the nomination of Gale Norton as Bush's first Interior secretary, for instance — he has initiated the following:

He canceled oil and gas leases in Utah near that state's treasured southern Canyonlands. The Bush administration's drilling mania there had triggered an uproar among Utah residents who objected to it.

By withdrawing from oil and gas drilling three parcels of land adjacent to Wyoming's wildlife-rich Shoshone National Forest, he has protected critical wildlife habitat. And acting on the appeals of the Greater Yellowstone Coalition and the Wilderness Society, Salazar also canceled drilling in five additional parcels of the Absaroka Mountains in southwest Wyoming.

He has declared his intent to re-examine the 1872 Mining Act. Enacted under President Ulysses S. Grant, that law has deprived American taxpayers of billions of dollars in royalties when hard-rock miners take valuable minerals from public land. Under this long-outdated law, these miners are so privileged that they can make claims where they wish and buy public land for as little as $5 per acre ...

In recognizing the immense scope of water scarcity in the West in an era of global warming, he is trying to aim a major cooperative effort throughout the region to find answers.

... It's a good start.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank you, Gooding, for passing school levies

On behalf of the board of trustees, staff and students of the Gooding Joint School District 231, I want to thank voters for passing both our plant facility and supplemental levies on Feb. 10.

Your confidence in us will allow our district to do an even better job of saying "yes" to our students' educational needs. We appreciate the vision and tenacity of the dedicated groups and individuals who worked hard to pass the levies. We also appreciate the opposing points of view voiced by those who had concerns.

Rest assured that the process to determine how these funds are used will be open, public and transparent, and we encourage input from Gooding Joint School District residents. We value your opinions and tax dollars, and will treat them both with respect and responsibility.

Gov. Otter recently said, "The best helping hand you're going to get this year is the one at the end of your sleeve."

Thank you for making our students' needs a priority in your personal budgets during this tough economy, and thank you for extending a helping hand to help our district move forward. Once again, thank you for your vote of confidence and for the future of Gooding Joint School District 231.

Let he who is without sin cast the first stone

Tell me. Why would non-Christians want to be Christians when all they see, hear and read is the bickering among Christians regarding abortion and homosexuality? God's first commandment is to love God. The second is that we love our neighbors as ourselves. Does it sound loving when more than a billion dollars was spent to defeat the Gay Marriage Act in California when people right here, far less around the world, need food, housing and medicine?

Frankly, I too wish it wasn't called marriage, but I do think they should have legal rights. When two people of the same sex live together, does it hurt anyone else? Not nearly as much as the greed, divorce rate, infidelity, and filth on our TVs, movies and Internet. If it is a sin, then it is their sin. Jesus challenged those ready to stone to death the prostitute that the first person without sin throw the first stone. All left.

Personally, my life's purpose and challenge is that "They shall know me as a Christian by my love, by my love," as the song goes. Wouldn't it be wonderful if that is how the world would see all of us who profess to be Christians?

You've got your 'amen,' but it's not going to help

Our economy, meaning you and I, have spent $596,258,345,936 on a war that served no purpose and no return.

Someone proposes to spend money in our own country to offset that very bad investment choice by a democracy that reeks of fascism and now you complain.

OMG, a "savior-based economy," who needs that? After all things are just peachy, right? You are right about something. Home ownership is not an entitlement, but it is supposed to be at the least an option. Credit is not a civil right; however, our economy is based on it so we may want to consider how we make it a viable option. My property valuation is your problem if you're my neighbor.

Judge warns Idaho about prison overcrowding

BOISE (AP) — A federal judge is warning Idaho prison officials that a bad economy is no excuse for overcrowding one of the state's prisons.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill heard arguments Wednesday concerning whether the Idaho Department of Correction should be held in contempt of court for its inmate population at a medium-security prison near Boise.

Winnmill told state lawyers that the rights of inmates should not be affected by Idaho's budget challenges and current economic struggles.

"I certainly don't think the state can alleviate one Eighth Amendment violation by moving inmates into another potential Eighth Amendment violation," Winnmill said, telling the lawyers that such moves amounted to a "prisons shell game."

The U.S. Constitution's Eighth Amendment prohibits cruel and unusual punishment.

The hearing comes after last month's inmate uprising at the Idaho State Correctional Institution. The riot occurred at a new, warehouse-style dormitory created last year as a way to save an estimated $1.2 million and return hundreds of inmates previously housed out of state.

The Jan. 2 riot caused nearly $60,000 in physical damage to the facility and cost thousands more in employee overtime as the state scrambled to repair the situation.

But it could cost the state much more: attorneys representing inmates in the decades-old prison overcrowding lawsuit have asked Winnmill to fine the Idaho Department of Correction $5,000 a day for each day it was in violation of the ruling — a total that could reach $135,000 or more.

The issue first came to a head in 1984, when Walter "Bud" Balla, then an inmate at ISCI, filed suit against the state, alleging that overcrowding and other problems at the prison were inhumane and a violation of inmates' constitutional rights.

In 1987, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan ruled in Balla's favor, imposing a cap on inmate populations in certain cell blocks at ISCI. Though the practice of housing two inmates to a cell on those blocks was ended after the ruling, the actual bunk beds that the inmates slept in were never removed.

Those beds became known in the Department of Correction as "Balla beds," and the prohibition against filling them forced the state to send hundreds of inmates to private prisons in Texas and Oklahoma.

The new dormitory-style cell block — known as Unit 24 — opened up 200 new beds at the prison, but only for a few hours. The inmates rioted on their first night in the unit, making it uninhabitable.

It was the riot — and not the decision to bring the out-of-state inmates home — that caused the overcrowding, Idaho Deputy Attorney General Michael Gilmore said.

The ruling was only violated because of "extenuating and mitigating circumstances," Gilmore said.

IDAHO State retirees may move to private insurance

BOISE — Idaho state government retirees would be moved to private insurance plans under a measure that cleared a House committee Wednesday.

The Department of Administration made several changes to the bill, including boosting a premium subsidy for early retirees to $155 a month from $100.

There was just a single no vote, from Rep. Phylis King, D-Boise. The bill now moves to the House floor.

The bill would end state retiree insurance benefits for new employees. Medicare-eligible retirees 65 and over would be shifted to private supplemental insurance plans.

Idaho officials are trying to move retired employees from the state's health care insurance because it's facing a growing unfunded liability. They say comparable private plans are largely more affordable and just as good as what the state offers now.

Pelosi: Risch 'fabricated' mouse stimulus

BOISE — Idaho Sen. Jim Risch incorrectly told Idaho lawmakers Wednesday that the federal stimulus package included $50 million for the "red-breasted harvest mouse" in House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's California district.

Pelosi aides called Risch's statement during a speech to state senators "a total fabrication," the Spokesman-Review reported.

Pelosi's district has no such mice.

Republicans in Congress criticizing the $787 billion stimulus alleged last week the mouse would get $30 million.

That's also incorrect: that was what the California State Coastal Conservancy, a state agency, proposed for "shovel-ready" projects eligible for stimulus money. Wetlands restoration included some mouse habitat.

Republicans make case for closed primary

BOISE — A lawyer for the Idaho Republican Party told a federal judge Wednesday that the party has a right to determine who can join and ultimately what kind of voters should be allowed to cast ballots in its primary elections.

If U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill agrees, Idaho would have to scrap a decades-old system that allows voters to cast either a Democratic or Republican ballot in primary elections. Instead, the Republican Party, which has long dominated Idaho politics, wants to limit Republican primary participation to voters willing to register as Republicans.

"Registration is meaningful to the Republican Party," GOP lawyer Christ Troupis told the judge during an hour-long hearing.

Last April, the Idaho Republican Party sued the state, specifically Secretary of State Ben Ysursa, seeking to close the primary elections. Idaho has had an open primary for the past 36 years, though there have been previous efforts to close it.

UTAH Gas saver? Pot makes gas gauge read half full SANDY — A stash of grass can take the place of a lot of gas, but it won't do anything for mileage.

A Utah man took his newly acquired used SUV to a mechanic to find out why the gas gauge always read half-full.

The mechanic in Sandy looked inside the gas tank and found about 35 pounds of marijuana in plastic-wrap packages that filled about half of the tank's volume.

Police estimate the pot is worth about $35,000.

The Nissan Armada has had several different owners and was once a rental car.

Sandy police are trying to figure out who stashed the pot but say the current owner is not a suspect.

CALIFORNIA Man kills himself in televangelist's cathedral

GARDEN GROVE — A man shot and killed himself in front of a cross inside televangelist Robert H. Schuller's Crystal Cathedral on Wednesday as a nearby volunteer told a group of visitors about the church's suicide-prevention program, police and church officials said. The man handed a note and his driver's license to two ushers, walked to the cross and then shot himself in the head as he appeared to be praying, Senior Pastor Juan Carlos Ortiz said. The Orange County coroner's office identified the man as Steve Smick, 48. Church spokesman Mike Nason said there was no record of Smick being a member at the cathedral.

Betty Spicer, a volunteer usher at the famous sanctuary, said she greeted Smick when he entered. She said he handed her a folded note with two cards inside as the man told her: "You may want this."

Spicer said he then walked to the foot of the cross. She and Yvette Manson, another volunteer, said they thought Smick was praying when they heard a pop.

The man used a semiautomatic handgun, said police Lt. Dennis Ellsworth.

A tourist, one in a group of several visitors from Canada, told Manson the man had shot himself.

Largest banks that received aid cut lending

Treasury says lending likely would have fallen further without aid

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The 20 largest banks that received government rescue funds slightly reduced their lending to consumers and businesses in the last three months of 2008, the government said Tuesday.

The Treasury Department said the banks reduced their mortgage and business loans by a median of 1 percent each, while credit card lending rose by a median of 2 percent. The median is the point halfway between the banks that lent the most and those that lent the least.

The department's report is the latest sign that the bailout has done little to increase bank lending. A quarterly survey by the Federal Reserve earlier this month found that nearly 60 percent of banks said they had tightened lending standards on credit card and other consumer loans in the previous three months.

Many lawmakers have blasted the banks for not lending more in the wake of the $700 billion financial rescue program approved by Congress last October.

The Treasury Department said lending likely would have fallen further without the roughly $200 billion that has been provided to banks so far, given the sharp downturn in the economy.

"Loan activity was resilient in the face of the worst economic downturn in decades," the department said.

The report also said that banks reduced new commercial real estate loans by 19 percent, while increasing loan renewals by 55 percent.

The data is from the first in what the department says will be a series of monthly reports on the banks' lending. The report did not provide total lending amounts in each category.

The Treasury Department also said the report is intended to increase the transparency of the widely unpopular bank bailout program, which has provided billions of dollars with few strings attached to large financial institutions like Bank of America Corp., Citigroup Inc. and JPMorgan Chase & Co.

In December, The Associated Press asked 21 banks that received more than $1 billion from the program to describe what has been done with the money. None would provide any specifics.

The report said that Bank of America, for example, originated about $44.6 billion

Obama unveils $75B mortgage relief plan

Says program will cut mortgage payments for some homeowners

By Mark S. Smith and Alan Zibel
Associated Press writers

MESA, Ariz. — Seeking to tackle "a crisis unlike any we've ever known," President Barack Obama unveiled an ambitious $75 billion plan Wednesday to keep as many as 9 million Americans from losing their homes to foreclosure.

Announcing the plan in Arizona — a state especially hard hit by the housing crunch — Obama said that turning around the battered economy requires stemming the continuing tide of foreclosures. The housing crisis that began last year set many other factors in motion and helped lead to the current, widening recession.

"In the end, all of us are paying a price for this home mortgage crisis," Obama said at a high school outside Phoenix. "And all of us will pay an even steeper price if we allow this crisis to deepen."

But while talking in broad strokes about the importance of the issue to the economy as a whole, the president took care not to miss the pain that the housing problems are causing in individual families.

"The American Dream is being tested by a home mortgage crisis that not only threatens the stability of our economy but also the stability of families and neighborhoods," he said. "While this crisis is vast, it begins just one house and one family at a time."

More expensive than expected, Obama's plan aims to keep between 7 million and 9 million people from foreclosure. Of the nearly 52 million U.S. homeowners with a mortgage, about 13.8 million, or nearly 27 percent, owe more on their mortgage than their house is now worth, according to Moody's Economy.com.

Headlining Obama's plan is a $75 billion Homeowner Stability Initiative, which

Fed downgrades economic forecast for this year

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve on Wednesday sharply downgraded its projections for the country's economic performance this year, predicting the economy will actually shrink and unemployment will rise higher.

Under the new projections, the unemployment rate will rise to between 8.5 and 8.8 percent this year. The old forecasts, issued in mid-November, predicted the jobless rate would rise to between 7.1 and 7.6 percent.

Many private economists believe the jobless rate — currently at 7.6 percent, the highest in more than 16 years — will hit at least 9 percent by early next year even with the $787 billion stimulus package.

The Fed also believes the economy will contract this year between 0.5 and 1.3 percent. The old forecast said the economy could shrink by 0.2 percent or expand by 1.1 percent.

The last time the economy registered a contraction for a full year was in 1991, by 0.2 percent. If the Fed's new predictions prove correct, it would mark the weakest showing since a 1.9 percent drop in 1982, when the country had suffered through a severe recession.

The bleaker outlook represents the growing toll of the worst housing, credit and financial crises since the 1930s. All of those negative forces have plunged the nation into a recession, now in its second year.

"Given the strength of the forces currently weighing on the economy," Fed officials "generally expected that the recovery would be unusually gradual and prolonged," according to documents on the Fed's updated economic outlook.

Fed officials anticipated that unemployment would remain "substantially" higher than normal at the end of 2011 "even absent further economic shocks."

The Fed forecast calls for the jobless rate to dip to between 8 and 8.3 percent next year, and to between 7.5 and 6.7 percent in 2011. All those projections are worse than the Fed's previous estimates and would put unemployment higher than the normal range around 5 percent.

Employment is usually the last piece of the economy to heal once the country is out of recession and in recovery mode. Businesses are usually reluctant to ramp up hiring until they feel confident that any recovery has staying power.

Under the Fed's new projections, the economy should grow between 2.5 and 3.3 percent next year.

Habitat for Humanity of Magic Valley receives grant

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Habitat for Humanity of the Magic Valley received a grant for $2,500 from the Idaho Community Foundation to help market the organization's building material thrift known as ReStore.

The ReStore, which is located at 669 Eastland Ave. S., helps cover construction overhead costs and has helped match funds for several grant applications.

The store accepts new and used building materials from individuals, merchants and contractors and then sells them to the public on Fridays and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"The ReStore, which opened its doors in March of 2006 is still one of the best kept secrets in 'Twin Falls'," said Linda Fleming, executive director of Habitat for Humanity Magic Valley.

Funds are used to help build affordable housing for families in need. The ReStore is operated completely with Habitat volunteers, many from Lutheran congregations in the Magic Valley.

Fleming said the grant will help market the ReStore by sending out mailers, placing ads in the Times-News and enlarging the ReStore's presence in the Yellow Pages.

"By advertising, we hope to get people to check out the ReStore first, to save a bit of money, during these tough economic times," she said. "We also need people to be more selective about the items that they are putting in our landfills. Many remodeling items can be easily recycled."

Fleming added that donated items can be a tax write-off, while also raising money for a great cause at the ReStore.

Industrial production, housing starts plunge

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Big industry production throttled back in January due partly to auto shutdowns, and housing construction tumbled to a record low, weaker-than-expected performances that show the country caught in a worsening economic tailspin.

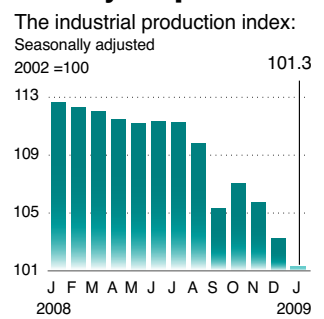

The Federal Reserve reported Wednesday that production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities fell 1.8 percent last month. Many economists expected a 1.5 percent decline. It marked the third straight month where production was cut back and December's performance was even weaker than initially reported, plunging 2.4 percent.

Another report from the Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments plummeted 16.8 percent in January from the previous month, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 466,000 units, a record low. Analysts expected a pace of 530,000 housing units.

Builders are slashing home construction as skyrocketing home foreclosures dump more empty properties on an already glutted market. The reduction in new projects should aid the housing market in the long run as fewer properties for sale help increase competition and stabilize prices for those left on the market.

Applications for building permits, a barometer of future activity, also sank to a record low pace of 521,000 units in January, a 4.8 percent drop from the prior month.

GM, Chrysler downfall leave no easy solutions

By Ken Thomas and Tom Krisher
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — General Motors Corp. and Chrysler LLC, two venerable titans of American industry, will burn through $17.4 billion in government loans in three months and want billions more to stay alive.

The ink is still drying on their new requests for an additional $21.6 billion, but for President Barack Obama's month-old administration, there are no easy answers.

Give them more money? GM and Chrysler could return seeking more. Let them slip into bankruptcy? Hundreds of thousands of jobs could be lost. Try a government-led bankruptcy? In GM's case, that might cost up to $100 billion.

"There can't be a bottomless pit to this. There aren't the resources to deal with it," White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said Wednesday as the government began reviewing the automakers' plans.

"We have to get a sustained path to that restructuring to ensure that there isn't a constant necessity for continued government intervention and money from the taxpayers," Gibbs said.

At stake is much more than the future of the PT Cruiser or the Saturn Vue. Jobs at assembly plants, car dealers, parts suppliers and the small businesses that serve them could be at risk in a fatigued economy in which nearly 12 million people are unemployed, including about 600,000 who got pink slips last month.

"This is an entire way of life here," said Republican Rep. Thaddeus McCotter, who represents a district near the auto industry's hometown of Detroit. "An entire state is hanging in the balance."

Even if Obama meets GM and Chrysler's requests for an additional $14 billion in loans and the companies execute the turnaround plans they released Tuesday, it would come with a painful price: An estimated 50,000 workers worldwide would lose their jobs and five more U.S. plants will be closed.

The first workshop will be held from 10 a.m. to noon; a repeat of the workshop will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. The workshops will focus on providing students with advising and registration information for the upcoming summer and fall terms and the process of obtaining financial aid and scholarships.

Utility companies want to help pay your bills

BOISE — Avista Corp. and other utility companies are asking Idaho lawmakers for permission to provide assistance programs for customers who need help paying their utility bills.

Avista lobbyist Neil Colwell told the Senate State

Affairs Committee on Wednesday that Idaho is among few states where utilities are not allowed to provide these services and state money is not made available.

Colwell told the Associated Press the cost of the assistance program would be passed on to existing customers, who should expect their bills to increase by about $1 each month if the plan is approved by lawmakers.

Terri Ottens, representing a coalition of community action groups in Idaho, supports the bill and says utilities are already passing on the costs of unpaid bills to existing customers.

Ottens says up to 25 percent of Idahoans could use assistance.

Oil falls below $35 on more bad economic news

HOUSTON — Benchmark oil prices fell below $35 a barrel Wednesday as another dose of bad economic news only raised concerns about the global downturn's impact on energy demand.

Economic expectations for the U.S. were sharply downgraded by the Federal Reserve, which predicted that more people will lose jobs and the economy will contract.

Light, sweet crude for March delivery fell 31 cents to settle at $34.62 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The March contract expires on Friday, and most of the trading was for the April contract.

Benchmark crude for April delivery fell $1.13 to settle at $37.41.

Whole Foods 1Q profit drops, beats projections

AUSTIN — Natural grocer Whole Foods Market Inc.'s profit dipped in the first quarter on slowed sales but the earnings beat expectations.

The Austin, Texas-based grocer said Wednesday that its profit slipped to $27.8 million, or 20 cents per share, compared with $39.1 million, or 28 cents per share last year. The results included $11 million in legal costs.

Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters expected the company to earn 15 cents per share for the quarter, excluding such one-time items.

Whole Foods also lowered its guidance for 2009 for the second time.

HP sales fall short, but profits match forecast

SAN FRANCISCO — Hewlett-Packard Co. says its quarterly profit sank 13 percent, and revenue ticked up just 1 percent. Even the technology company's cash-cow printer ink business took a hit because of the recession.

HP cut its 2009 guidance, but it was still in line with Wall Street's expectations.

The Palo Alto, Calif.-based company says it earned $1.85 billion, or 75 cents per share, in the three months that ended Jan. 31. That compares with profit of $2.13 billion, or 80 cents per share, a year ago.

Without one-time costs, HP earned 93 cents per share, matching analyst estimates.

HP's sales of $28.8 billion fell short of Wall Street's forecast by more than $3 billion, however.

Cartoon of dead chimpanzee stirs outrage in N.Y.

By Karen Matthews
 Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A New York Post cartoon that some have interpreted as comparing President Barack Obama to a violent chimpanzee gunned down by police drew outrage Wednesday from civil rights leaders and elected officials who said it echoed racist stereotypes of blacks as monkeys.

The cartoon in Wednesday's Post by Sean Delonas shows two police officers, one with a smoking gun, standing over the body of a bullet-riddled chimp. The caption reads: "They'll have to find someone else to write the next stimulus bill."

The cartoon refers to a chimpanzee named Travis who was killed Monday by police in Stamford, Conn., after it mauled a friend of its owner.

Some critics called the cartoon racist and said it trivialized a tragedy in which a woman was disfigured and a chimpanzee killed. Others said the cartoon suggests that Obama should be assassinated. Many urged a boycott of the Post and the companies that advertise in it.

"How could the Post let this cartoon pass as satire?" said Barbara Ciara, president of the National Association of Black Journalists. "To compare the nation's first African-American commander in chief to a dead chimpanzee is nothing short of racist drivel."

State Sen. Eric Adams called it a "throwback to the days" when black men were lynched.

The Rev. Al Sharpton called the cartoon "troubling at best given the historic racist attacks of African-Americans as being synonymous with monkeys."

The cartoon set off a furious response against the Post. Its phones rang all day with angry callers. Protesters picketed the tabloid's Manhattan offices, demanding an apology and a boycott and chanting "shut the Post down."

Col Allan, editor-in-chief of the Post, defended the work.

"The cartoon is a clear parody of a current news event, to wit the shooting of a violent chimpanzee in Connecticut," Allan said in a statement. "It broadly mocks Washington's efforts to revive the economy. Again, Al Sharpton reveals himself as nothing more than a publicity opportunist."

The cartoon drew hundreds of comments on the Internet including at the liberal Huffington Post, where columnist Sam Stein wrote: "At its most benign, the cartoon suggests that the stimulus bill was so bad, monkeys may as well have written it. Most provocatively, it compares the president to a rabid chimp."

White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs declined comment.

"I have not seen the cartoon," he told reporters aboard Air Force One as Obama returned to Washington from Arizona, where he announced his plan to deal with the foreclosure crisis. "But I don't think it's altogether newsworthy reading the New York Post."

Slain chimp's owner now says it wasn't on Xanax

By John Christoffersen
 Associated Press writer

STAMFORD, Conn. — As authorities considered criminal charges, the woman whose 200-pound domesticated chimpanzee went berserk and mauled a friend backtracked Wednesday on whether she gave the animal the anti-anxiety drug Xanax.

Sandra Herold told The Associated Press on Wednesday that she never gave the drug to her 14-year-old chimp, Travis, who was shot dead by Stamford police Monday after he grievously wounded Herold's friend Charla Nash.

However, Herold said in an interview aired Wednesday morning on NBC's "Today" show that she gave Travis the drug in some tea less than five minutes before he attacked Nash — she even showed a reporter the mug. Police have said Herold told them that she gave Travis Xanax that had not been prescribed for him earlier on Monday to calm him because he was agitated.

In humans, Xanax can lead to aggression in people who are unstable to begin with, said Dr. Emil Coccaro, chief of psychiatry at the University of Chicago Medical Center.

"Xanax could have made him worse," if human studies are any indication, Coccaro said.

The chimpanzee's rampage forced Herold to stab her beloved pet with a butcher knife and pound him with a shovel.

"For me to do something like that — put a knife in him — was like putting one in myself," she said Wednesday. "Then he turned around and like, 'Mom, what did you do?'"

Herold's voice was filled with fear and horror in 911 tapes released by police Tuesday night.

Travis can be heard grunting as she cries for help: "He's killing my friend!"

The dispatcher says, "Who's killing your friend?"

Herold replies, "My chimpanzee! He ripped her apart! Shoot him, shoot him!"

After police arrived, one officer radioed back: "There's a man down. He doesn't look good," he says, referring to the disfigured Nash. "We've got to get this guy out of here. He's got no face."

Doctors at Stamford Hospital said Wednesday that it took four teams of surgeons more than seven hours to stabilize Nash, 55.

orthopedics, ophthalmology and trauma have treated Nash's brother, Mike Nash, Nash, who has made slight progress but remained in critical condition, Dr. Kevin Miller said at a news conference with the victim's family.

Nash's brother, Mike Nash, did not take questions from reporters but said the family is grateful for community support it has received.

Police have said they are looking into the possibility of criminal charges. A pet owner who knew or should have known that an animal was a danger to others can be held criminally responsible.

CSI MEN, WOMEN VISIT RIVAL SLCC

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Salt Lake Community College ended the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball season a year ago with an upset win in the Region 18 Tournament championship game. That's a fact not lost on sophomore Daequon Montreal.

"It's just another game, but at the same time, you can't overlook the fact that it's Salt Lake, and they knocked us off last year. Me and (head coach Steve) Gosar are the only ones that know what that feeling's like. So we can say it's just another game, but we're going into it knowing we want to win this game."

CSI dropped a 78-73 home game to SLCC on Jan. 24 and needs a road sweep to stay in contention for the regular-season Scenic West Athletic Conference crown as the Bruins hold a three-game lead with four games to play.

"The ball didn't bounce our way a few times the last time we played them," said Montreal. "Hopefully we can get a few calls our way and a few balls to bounce our way and get it done."

SLCC's other big 3

The ninth-ranked Bruins are led by the talented trio of point guard Dathan Lyles (9.9 points, 2.8 assists), center Nate Bendall (14.3 points, 6.8 rebounds) and 6-foot-9 forward D.J. Wright (17.6 points, 9.9 rebounds).

"They're definitely a big three-some," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar, whose team will counter with Montreal (16.7 points, 9.4 rebounds), Jay Watkins (16.1 points, 7.5 boards) and Janelle Barrett (11.5 points, 6.2 assists).

But it's another SLCC trio that has Gosar's attention this week, namely, sophomores Logan Magnusson, Ricky Shoff and Wendell High grad Kael Pope.

"They do all the dirty work," said Gosar.

"You've got to try to contain those big three, but at the same time, you can't let the other three have career days on you. You have to keep them in check."

"Those three guys are very important. They're the glue guys. They do all the little things that

Bulldog boys advance to SCIC title tilt

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Filer boys basketball coach Alex Wells had powerfully valid excuses at his disposal.

His team was whistled for 23 fouls in Wednesday's Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference semifinal to Kimberly's eight, and shot three free throws to 32 for the Bulldogs despite a fine balance of aggressiveness from both teams at each end of the floor.

Wells refused to use either fact in assessing the game.

"Our kids played hard ... we just flat got beat," he said after Kimberly's 69-58 victory at the College of Southern Idaho. "We were down six and got three straight stops, and couldn't do anything with it. It

Declo boys top Glens Ferry in Canyon tourney

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Declo's Jarad Erickson missed out on the Hornets' senior night last week due to an untimely stomach illness.

There was nothing nauseating about Erickson's solid performance Wednesday, as he scored 17 points and pulled down seven rebounds in Declo's 51-47 victory over Glens Ferry in the Class 2A Canyon Conference tournament.

The win places Declo (16-5) in the tourney's championship game next Thursday. Glens Ferry (16-6) will host Valley on Tuesday in an elimination game that will decide the Hornets' title game opponent.

"This was probably the best we've played as a team all season," Erickson said. "I had to make up for missing last week."

Castleford, Sho-Ban boys reach SRC title game

By Diane Philbin
 Times-News writer

Castleford combined three basics of basketball — playing good defense, outrebounding the opposition (33-16) and committing only 11 turnovers as the Wolves nipped Raft River 48-47 in the semifinals of the Class 1A Division I Snake River Conference Tournament at Shoshone.

A last desperation shot at the buzzer by Raft River's H.D. Tuckett for the win narrowly missed the mark.

"Our first half defense was amazing," said Castleford coach Dan Winn. "Holding a team to 17 points in a half, that was our goal. We also outrebounded them 15-6."

Raft River trailed 21-17 at the break. The Wolves held their largest lead of 10 points at 42-32 with 4:47 left in the final quarter, but Bridger Barrett hit a 3-pointer and Cade Powers added a basket to pull the Trojans to within five. The teams traded buckets in the last two minutes and Trojan guard Rio Manning hit a trey with 48 seconds remaining to get within 46-44.

Dylan Kinyon hit two free throws for Castleford, followed by another 3 by Barrett to account for the final margin.

Ethan Tverdy registered a double-double for the Wolves with 19 points and 12 rebounds before fouling out late in the fourth quarter.

"We gave it a valiant effort," said Raft River coach Jeff Greenwood. "They just made too many putbacks."

Barrett led the Trojans with 18 points and Manning added 17.

"We needed to take care of the loose balls. They killed us," said Greenwood.

SHO-BAN 70, SHOSHONE 62
 Just too much Magic.

Sho-Ban senior Magic Smith zigged and zagged through the Shoshone defense, launched 2s and 3s from everywhere imaginable on the court and was 5-for-5 from the line on his way to 46 points as the Chiefs defeated the Indians 70-62. Many of Smith's points were on drives to the basket, but he also tossed in three 3-pointers.

"He plays with heart and desire," Shoshone coach Larry Messick said of Smith. "He took it upon himself to get them there."

Shoshone's Nell Valencia, right, goes up for a shot as Sho-Ban's Magic Smith tries for a block Wednesday in Shoshone.

The game was up-tempo and full of scoring with the two teams combining for 132 points, including 13 treys.

"It was too fast paced — more than I wanted," said Messick.

Shoshone led 31-28 at the half and still held a 51-47 edge at the end of three quarters. The Chiefs outscored the Indians 23-11 in the final period, with Smith netting 16 of the 23.

"I think we got tired in the fourth quarter, said Messick. "It was a combination of a couple crucial turnovers by us and Sho-Ban stepped up their intensity and took us out of it."

Nell Valencia tossed in 18 points to lead three Shoshone players in double figures, followed by Ryan Sortor and Josh Olsen with 15.

Kidd takes down former team

DALLAS — Jason Kidd and Antoine Wright celebrated the first anniversary of their trade from the New Jersey Nets a day early Wednesday night, leading the Dallas Mavericks to a 113-98 victory over their former team.

Kidd opened the game with three early 3-pointers and scored 23 points, one shy of his season high. He also had 10 assists and a quick-handed steal against Devin Harris — the youngster he was dealt for — during the game-breaking third quarter. Wright hit three 3-pointers and scored 13 of his 20 points in the period.

HORNETS 117, MAGIC 85

NEW ORLEANS — Chris Paul had 36 points and 10 assists, and New Orleans handed Orlando its worst loss of the season.

Rasual Butler added 15 points, and David West had 14 for the Hornets, who've won their first two games following the All-Star break.

Rashard Lewis had 17 points, and J.J. Redick 14 for Orlando, which shot poorly from the field and free-throw line. Dwight Howard had 12 points and was a non-factor for most of the last three quarters, when he scored only two points.

TIMBERWOLVES 111, HEAT 104

MIAMI — Sebastian Telfair had 30 points and eight assists, Ryan Gomes added 20 points, and Minnesota hit a season-high 14 3-pointers to spoil Jermaine O'Neal's debut in Miami.

Minnesota blew an 11-point lead with 10 minutes remaining, but recovered in time largely thanks to Telfair, who hit a 3-pointer with 1:26 left for a four-point lead — and the Timberwolves held on to snap a five-game slide.

CAVALIERS 93, RAPTORS 76

TORONTO — LeBron James had 20 points, nine rebounds and nine assists, and Zydrunas Ilgauskas added 22 points for Cleveland.

Needing two rebounds and one assist in the final quarter for his 21st career triple-double, James had six points but only one rebound before leaving the game for good with just over 3 minutes remaining.

NUGGETS 101, 76ERS 89

PHILADELPHIA — Carmelo Anthony had 26 points and 14 rebounds, Chauncey Billups added 22 points for Denver in the Nuggets' third straight victory.

Billups scored 17 points in the third quarter — 13 during a 24-4 run that erased a 10-point deficit and gave Denver a 61-51 lead.

Andre Miller led Philadelphia with 17 points, but strained his right calf with about 7½ minutes left in the third quarter.

BOBCATS 103, PACERS 94

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Gerald Wallace had 25 points, 10 rebounds and seven assists, and Raymond Felton added 16 points for Charlotte.

Troy Murphy had 18 points and 16 rebounds for the Pacers. All-Star forward Danny Granger left after spraining his right foot early in the second quarter.

BULLS 113, BUCKS 104

MILWAUKEE — Kirk Hinrich scored a season-high 31 points, and Luol Deng added 21 for Chicago, playing with a short bench after trading four players to Sacramento.

Utah State downs CS Bakersfield 78-57

LOGAN, UTAH — Stavon Williams scored 13 points and Tai Wesley added 11 to lead Utah State to a 78-57 win over Cal State Bakersfield on Wednesday night.

Gary Wilkinson pulled down a game-high 10 rebounds for the Aggies (25-2) in the non-conference game.

Trent Blakely scored 14 points, including 3-of-6 3-pointers, for the Roadrunners (6-20). Teammate Alex Johnson added 13 points.

UTAH 89, COLORADO ST. 79, OT

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Luke Nevill blocked the potential game-winner at the end of regulation and scored eight of his 23 points in overtime as the Utah Utes survived a scare from scrappy Colorado State 89-79 Wednesday night for their seventh straight win.

Nevill also tied a school record with seven blocks and pulled down 14 rebounds.

Tyler Kepkay led the Utes with a career-best 27 points, including four in overtime after his potential game-winner with 17 seconds left in regulation rimmed out.

Lawrence Borha added 16 points for the Utes (19-7, 10-2 Mountain West), who remained atop the conference standings but it wasn't the runaway over the Rams (8-18, 3-9) that their records suggested was in store.

was a possession here, a possession there that was the difference."

In an almost carbon copy of the previous two games between the rivals this season, the teams played it close to halftime and Kimberly (15-5) raced ahead with a big run in the third quarter. Unlike last week's 18-point win for Kimberly, the Wildcats (14-6) mustered up a late rally. Unlike the first game between the two, in which Filer scored the last 11 points to win by two, the Bulldogs didn't crumble.

"We lost our composure that day, and we learned from it and kept it tonight," said Kimberly senior Eric Marvin, who scored a team-high 14 including a couple of big 3-pointers. "We've taken two of three from (Filer) late, and we have the chance to get back to state now so we're feeling pretty good."

Marvin led three Bulldog scorers in double figures as Cody Wadsworth scored 13 and Jared Mumm added 11.

Filer rallied from down 13 at the end of three to get within six, but could get no closer despite getting the defensive stops at the right time. Then again, the Wildcats wouldn't have been within six without a great contribution from beyond the arc. Filer hit 10 treys on the night, to six for Kimberly.

Bryce Beard led the Wildcats with 24, including six 3-pointers, dishing out seven dimes and nabbing four steals while playing all 32 minutes.

Nathan Hughes added 16, and Terrell Bailey canned three treys in scoring 11.

"I thought the guys gave great effort the whole game," Beard said. "Sometimes things just don't go your way. Now we've got to get back and give that good effort again on Monday. Hopefully it goes our way then."

Filer will host Wendell on Monday in an elimination game. The winner not only gets at worst a spot in a state play-in game, it will also face Kimberly in the championship game next Wednesday at CSI.

WENDELL 47, BUHL 45

Nolan Stouder drove through the Buhl defense and hit a layup with 21 seconds that proved the decisive bucket as Wendell eliminated the Indians 47-45 at CSI on Wednesday.

Stouder seemed surprised that his drive left him unguarded at the basket, but he had plenty of time to collect himself and hit the shot that turned a one-point deficit into a lead the Trojans (9-14) would cling to the rest of the way.

"I knew that we needed to make a play," Stouder said. "Jordan (Lancaster) found me with a great pass, and I had a path to the basket."

Stouder had a game-high 14 for the Trojans, while John Campbell added 12.

Buhl (5-18) had two chances to tie or win, but J.D. Leckenby was stripped of the ball with less than 10 seconds left, and the Indians threw the ball away after Keith Mowery made the second of his free-throw attempts at the other end.

Leckenby led the Indians with 12 points, while Nick Hamilton scored 11.

McGrady out for season with knee injury

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets star Tracy McGrady will have surgery on his left knee and miss the rest of the season.

The star forward said on his Web site Wednesday that the pain has been persistent and he will have microfracture surgery. He's confident he'll return next season.

McGrady is Houston's third-leading scorer. He had arthroscopic surgery in May and has missed 18 games this season because of his sore knee. He also missed one game with a sprained ankle. He said before the All-Star break he wanted to consult with doctors before deciding on the best course of treatment on his knee.

ESPN.com first reported that McGrady was out for the season after the Rockets beat the Nets on Tuesday night.

WADE SUES ESTRANGED WIFE, ATTORNEYS

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade sued his estranged wife and two of her lawyers Wednesday over accusations the Miami Heat star contracted a sexually transmitted disease through an extramarital affair.

In the lawsuit, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, Wade is seeking at least $50,000 in damages from each defendant.

Siohvaughn Wade said last month the player infected her with an unspecified disease in 2007. Weeks later, she withdrew the claim from the court hearing the divorce case for unknown reasons.

BULLS GET MILLER, SALMONS FROM KINGS

The Chicago Bulls acquired center Brad Miller and John Salmons from the Sacramento Kings on Wednesday for four players, including forwards Drew Gooden and Andres Nocioni.

Sacramento also got Michael Ruffin and Cedric Simmons in the deal, but immediately traded Ruffin to the Portland Trail Blazers for forward Ike Diogu and cash. The Kings then waived guard Quincy Douby and veteran Sam Cassell, acquired on Tuesday from Boston, to make room for their new players.

Declo's Connor Garner drives to the hoop against Glenns Ferry Wednesday.

Wednesday's game. Declo, however, has been just as solid on its home floor, where it's lost just once in 11 games.

"It was a lot more intense tonight," Erickson said. "The crowd helped, too. It was a big crowd, and our level of play stepped up a little bit."

Connor Garner chipped in 16 points for Declo, including three 3-pointers in the third quarter. Hornets head coach Dee Lewis said Garner's shots came from a halftime adjustment to the Pilots' zone defense, which had given Declo trouble in the first half. The Hornets were ready for whatever Glenns Ferry threw at them.

"Right now our kids are confident in how they can play and finish," Lewis said. "They've played games where they've been out front, they've played games where it's been a scoring contest, and they've played games that have been defensive struggles. Playing here (at home), they just expect to win."

Declo's one-point lead with just over five minutes to play ballooned with a 6-0 run and Glenns Ferry made just two buckets in the final 6:30. Declo shot 42.9 percent from the field while Glenns Ferry struggled with 30.4 percent.

"They made a lot of shots and we didn't," Pilots head coach Jeremiah Johnston said. "Declo is big and physical. They maintain their game pretty well and execute when they have to."

Mike Crane led Glenns Ferry with 21 points and Justin Solosabal added 12. The Pilots hope to regroup and be able to return to Declo next Thursday, but first thing's first.

"We've got to focus up on Valley," said Johnston. "They played us well last time. We've got to execute against them and hopefully we can make it back here to take another crack at (Declo)."

averaging 22.8 points and 5.0 rebounds. His insertion in the lineup has been a welcome one, but not without some hiccups.

"We're adjusting," said Gosar. "Nate's trying to find out where he fits with us, and we're still adjusting to how we're going to work him into our system. But the more games we have with a chance to play with him, the better off we're going to be in March."

Montreal said point guards Janelle Barrett and Chuck Odum have had to tweak their roles as Miles likes to take the ball himself and push it up the floor. While Miles' shooting touch and passing skills have helped offensively, he's still learning the ropes on the defensive end.

"Once he gets that down, we'll be fine," said Montreal.

The fat lady's not singing yet

While CSI (19-7, 6-5 SWAC) is three games back of Salt Lake (22-3, 9-2) in the standings with only two weekend's of play left, Gosar isn't conceding the regular-season title just yet.

"There's still plenty of time for anything to happen," he said. "There's a lot of the season still left."

Second-place North Idaho (23-3, 8-3) has to play at Snow College this week, and the Bruins travel to Eastern Utah (19-6, 5-6) next weekend.

Said Gosar: "I think it could come down to that last Saturday."

As for the two games in Salt Lake, Gosar added, "It's gonna be fun. Big weekend."

Backing out

Freshman sharpshooter Cheyne Martin said Wednesday he will likely sit out the games in Salt Lake with a sore back. Byago Diouf continues to recover from his own back problems and should be good to go on Friday.

ON THE SIDE

Back in the Top 10

For the first time since being ranked No. 3 in the pre-season, the CSI women's team is in the Top 10 of the NJCAA Division I Women's Basketball Top 25.

"It's a long road back to that Top 10," said women's head coach Randy Rogers, whose team fell out of the rankings after starting the season 3-3. Now 21-4, the Golden Eagles are ranked 10th entering this week's games at Salt Lake CC and are poised for a high seed at the NJCAA tournament if they can win the Region 18 Tournament.

This week's men's and women's polls are on Sports 3.

More of the same?

CSI hammered the Bruins 74-46 on Jan. 24 as Soana Lucet had a 23-point, 11-rebound double-double. But the Golden Eagles expect tighter tests this week.

"Salt Lake is a team that year in and year out gets better at the end," said Rogers.

Bringing their best

Sophomore LaCale Pringle-Buchanan missed the first game against the Bruins as she was home in Seattle, Wash., for family matters. That fact has her psyched up for the upcoming contests with Salt Lake.

"It fires me up a lot," said Pringle-Buchanan. "I like to play against Salt Lake, and I wasn't able to play against them the first time. Salt Lake's a team that in the past has brought the most out of us. We're really excited about these games. We're not overlooking them at all."

say that lesson is in their minds as they face Salt Lake again.

Poll: Majority of fans say no on A-Rod for Hall

The Associated Press

More than half of baseball fans surveyed say Alex Rodriguez shouldn't make the Hall of Fame after admitting that he used steroids. And as for the game's hallowed records? Those same fans seem to care less and less anyway.

An Associated Press-GFK poll released Wednesday also showed this: Fans are losing interest in the whole steroids issue.

With 553 home runs, Rodriguez is considered likely to break Barry Bonds' career record of 762. Five of the top 12 home run hitters in history — Bonds, Sammy Sosa, Mark McGwire, Rafael Palmeiro and Rodriguez — have been tainted by allegations of steroid use.

According to the poll, 62 percent of baseball fans now take the game's records less seriously for that reason. But what about their marks?

"You can't take the numbers away from the guys," Texas slugger Josh Hamilton, suspended from baseball multiple times for illegal drug use, said Wednesday.

"Did it make them feel better? Absolutely. But you've still got to hit the ball, you've got to throw the ball and you've got to catch the ball. I'm not defending them, but they've still got to swing the bat," he said.

As for Rodriguez, 52 percent said he shouldn't be allowed into the Hall when he becomes eligible, five years after his final game. In an AP-AOL Sports poll in April 2006, 61 percent of fans said Bonds shouldn't go into the Hall.

Eric Scott, 32, of St. Louis, said the Yankees slugger "should be suspended."

"People who have set records recently, there should be some kind of notation they were doing these illegal drugs," he said.

"I don't feel sorry because they got paid millions of dollars. They knew it was wrong. I feel sorry for the people who work really hard and may not be an All-Star because they didn't use performance-enhancing drugs. That's who I feel sorry for," he said.

Rodriguez admitted Feb. 9 that he used banned drugs from 2001-03 while playing for the Texas Rangers. On Tuesday, he went into greater detail at a spring training news conference, saying his cousin repeatedly injected him with performance-enhancing drugs from the Dominican Republic during that period.

Overall, 55 percent of fans surveyed earlier this month say they care "a lot" about whether players use steroids — down from a high of 71 percent in an AP-Ipsos poll in June 2007.

Brooke Smith, 39, of Palos Verdes Estates, Calif., said steroids were part of the sports landscape.

"You shouldn't be shocked or ashamed because it's happening. It's been happening," she said. "I don't think it's gotten worse. I just think it's evolving. It is just evolving with the times."

Jeter supports Rodriguez, says don't label sport

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Derek Jeter played it right down the middle with Alex Rodriguez: Didn't like what he did, time to move on.

A day after Rodriguez tried to explain his use of performance-enhancing drugs, Jeter responded.

"We're here to support him through it," the Yankees captain said Wednesday. "I don't condone what he did. We don't condone what he did. And Alex doesn't condone what he did. And I think at this point now it's our jobs to try to help him be as comfortable as he can on the field and try to move past this."

With all the focus on A-Rod, Jeter bristled at those who continue to group all players together.

"One thing that is irritating and it really upsets me a lot is when you hear everybody say, 'It was the steroid era. Everybody was doing it.' You know, that's not true. Everybody was not doing it," he said.

"I think it sends the wrong message to fans, to baseball fans; I think it sends the wrong message to kids, saying that everybody was doing it, because that's just not the truth," he said. "I understand there's a lot of people who are big-name players that have come out and allegedly done this and done that, but everybody wasn't doing it."

Jeter's plea to acknowledge the clean players came after an opening workout in which photographers and cameras tailed behind Rodriguez for two hours at New York's spring training complex. Manager Joe Girardi said A-Rod's talent automatically makes him a focal point.

"It would be hard to say that to Michael Jordan when he walked into the stadium, 'Don't be the center of attention,'" Girardi said.

A-Rod was the last of 60-plus Yankees to take the field, sprinting from the right-field corner. Some of the 1,600 or so fans gathered under a near-cloudless sky at Steinbrenner Field cheered when they saw No. 13. A few yelled out encouraging words. Not a single boo or insult was heard.

Rodriguez reported for spring training on Tuesday and held a 32-minute news conference, his first since Sport Illustrated reported on its Web site Feb. 7 that he was on a list of 104 players who tested positive for steroids during baseball's anonymous 2003 survey.

Rodriguez had admitted to ESPN on Feb. 9 that he used banned substances while playing for Texas from 2001-03, and he expanded on his story during his news conference. He claimed a cousin — whom he would not identify — repeatedly injected him during those years with a mysterious substance from the Dominican Republic called "boli."

Jewish leaders: Punish UAE for banning tennis star

JERUSALEM (AP) — A prominent group of Jewish American leaders urged the Women's Tennis Association on Wednesday to punish the United Arab Emirates for barring an Israeli player from entering the country for a tournament this week.

The Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations also called on international tennis authorities to cancel a men's tournament in Dubai next week unless the UAE allows another Israeli player, Andy Ram, to participate. Ram is still waiting to receive a visa.

Organizers of the Dubai Tennis Championships have said Shahar Peer was denied a visa last weekend due to security concerns. They said they feared riots could break out over Israel's recent military offensive in the Gaza Strip.

The Jewish umbrella group, which is holding meetings in Jerusalem this week, called the decision "offensive, discriminatory and unacceptable."

In an interview, the conference's executive vice chairman said his group had urged WTA tour chief Larry Scott to cancel the women's tournament next year if Dubai did not change its policy.

"There has to be some price," Malcolm Hoehnlein said. "History teaches us if you let a thing like this go, it grows, and if people perceive it as a license to discriminate, there will be no limit."

He said Scott was "very responsive" but offered no immediate promises. Scott has said he will consider dropping Dubai from the tour's calendar. The WTA is expected to discuss the matter at an upcoming board meeting.

Hoehnlein said his group planned to contact Dubai authorities later Wednesday to express its dissatisfaction and urge it to allow Ram, one of the world's top doubles players, into the country.

If Ram is kept out, the group has asked the Association of Tennis Professionals, which runs the men's tour, to cancel next week's tournament. The ATP already has said the UAE must "make the right decision."

Former Giants linebacker Brad Van Pelt dies

OWOSSO, Mich. — Brad Van Pelt, a five-time Pro Bowl player with the New York Giants who helped form one of the NFL's best linebacking corps in the early 1980s, has died. He was 57.

Van Pelt was found dead Tuesday by his fiancée at his home, the Giants said Wednesday. He died from an apparent heart attack, the team said.

A second-round draft choice out of Michigan State in 1973, Van Pelt played 14 seasons in the NFL, 11 with the Giants. Although he played on only one winning team in New York, he made the Pro Bowl five consecutive seasons from 1976-1980.

Van Pelt's only winning season with the Giants came in 1981, when Lawrence Taylor was drafted and the team made the playoffs for the first time in 18 seasons. Van Pelt played strong side linebacker with Taylor on the weak side and Harry Carson and Brian Kelley in the middle of a group called the "Crunch Bunch."

Van Pelt left the Giants in 1983 and spent two seasons with the Los Angeles Raiders before finishing his career with Cleveland in 1986. He played in 184 regular season games and had 20 interceptions and 24½ sacks.

"Brad was a very good friend," said Carson, who like Taylor is a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"Obviously he was a great teammate, but I consider him more of a very good friend and very much like a brother. Having played together for a number of years ... but then the relationship after football and the things that we did as a group of linebackers after football, those things really bonded us together."

At Michigan State, Van Pelt also played baseball and was drafted by the St. Louis Cardinals as a pitcher, lasting into the second round of the NFL draft because many teams thought he would play baseball. He was an All-American safety in 1972, and became the first defensive player to win the Maxwell Award as the nation's top player.

"Brad Van Pelt was Duffy Daugherty's favorite player," said former Michigan State football coach George Perles, who was an assistant coach under Daugherty from 1967-71. "Duffy thought so much of Brad as a high school player that he began a golf outing in Owosso just so Brad could be his caddie. Duffy loved him like a son."

Van Pelt's son Bradlee spent three seasons as a quarterback in the NFL with Denver and Houston.

RAIDERS RE-SIGN STAR P LECHLER

OAKLAND, Calif. — All-Pro punter Shane Lechler agreed to a four-year contract Wednesday to stay with the Oakland Raiders, allowing the club to avoid a potentially tough choice in free agency.

Lechler could have become an unrestricted free agent next week after being chosen to the AFC's Pro Bowl team for the fourth time in his stellar nine-year career. The Raiders didn't disclose financial terms of the deal, but it's believed to make Lechler the highest-paid punter in NFL history.

"This contract is the greatest ever given to a punter in the history of the National Football League," Raiders senior executive John Herrera told The Associated Press.

The deal also frees up the Raiders to apply the franchise player tag to cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha, another potential free agent. The Pro Bowl defender also had the tag last season, when he made $9.765 million.

COMPETITION COMMITTEE MAY RECONSIDER OT RULES

INDIANAPOLIS — Atlanta Falcons president Rich McKay doesn't like hearing people say the overtime coin toss usually determines the winner. He's even more unhappy seeing statistics back it up.

McKay, the co-chairman of the NFL's competition committee, said Wednesday he believes the group needs to discuss possible overtime rules changes even though there may not be overwhelming support to change it.

"Sudden death is a good procedure. It's fun and everyone knows the rules," McKay said. "I would like to see the stats change because I don't like the fact that the team winning the coin flip now wins 60 percent of the time, and the team winning the coin flip, 40-plus percent of the time, wins it on the first possession."

Those numbers have increased in recent years in part, some believe, because of other rules changes. The league has moved kickoffs back to the 30-yard line and brings in new balls for kicks to reduce loft and distance, hoping to reduce touchbacks and give returners a better chance at long runbacks.

The current overtime rules encourage teams to play for field goals — usually by attempting short, risk-averse drives. One possible change discussed was moving kickoffs in overtime further up to force longer drives in overtime.

Caddie: Tiger Woods 'a few weeks' from returning

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — Tiger Woods is "a few weeks" away from a return to the PGA Tour and could decide within days where that return will take place, his caddie Steve Williams said Wednesday.

Williams told Television New Zealand in an exclusive interview that Woods is close to ending his long injury lay-off and will return to the tour mentally stronger than before.

"It's going to be anytime, shortly," Williams said.

"He's probably 95 percent of the way there. He was waiting for the birth of his second child which just came last week so he's ready to go. He just needs a little bit more walking. He hasn't been able to walk too well," he added.

"Anytime in the next few weeks he's going to tee it up. He definitely wants to play a couple of tournaments before Augusta so any day now he's going to make a decision when he's going to play."

Speculation has increased over the past week that Woods would make his return at the Accenture Match Play Championship in Tucson,

"It's going to be anytime, shortly."

— Steve Williams, Tiger Woods' caddie on when the star golfer will return to competition

Arizona starting Feb. 25. His wife, Elin, gave birth to their second child — a boy named Charlie Axel — earlier in the month.

Woods has not played since reconstructive surgery on his left knee a week after winning the U.S. Open in June.

Williams said Woods had remodeled his swing to accommodate his injured knee and had been refreshed mentally by his long break.

"He's just got a couple of little issues but when he tees it up that will be a sign to say 'I'm ready to go' because he won't play unless he's 100 percent. It's getting closer," Williams said.

Woods had been doing six hours a day of rehab on his knee to get fit again, Williams said.

MINORITY GOLFER GETS HIS SHOT AT RIVIERA

LOS ANGELES — On the clubhouse balcony at Riviera, high enough to see the Pacific Ocean over the tops of eucalyptus trees that frame fairways, Vincent Johnson hardly looked like a player about to make his PGA Tour debut.

For one thing, he was dressed smartly in a dark suit and tie.

He also stood out because of the color of his skin.

In the dozen years since Tiger Woods joined the PGA Tour, the number of players with African-American heritage at PGA events have been few. Kevin Hall, who is black and deaf, has received sponsor exemptions in New Orleans and Pebble Beach. Tim O'Neal has made it as far as the final stage of Q-school. Tony Smith qualified for the Buick Invitational two weeks ago.

Johnson, a two-time winner in college at Oregon State, might not have received the chance to play in the Northern Trust Open alongside defending champion Phil Mickelson if not for a newly created exemption that honors a pioneer.

In a ceremony Wednesday afternoon, he was introduced as the first recipient of the Charlie Sifford Exemption, which goes to a player who represents the advancement of diversity in golf.

"It's just been a little surreal, this whole thing," Johnson said. "Finding out that I was just a candidate, I was really honored because of what Mr. Sifford stands for. And to receive it ... things like this don't happen to me."

The field includes Mickelson, trying to shake out of his West Coast doldrums; Padraig Harrington, Vijay Singh and Dustin Johnson, coming off his rain-shortened victory at Pebble Beach.

NORMAN BACK IN THE HUNT AT JOHNNIE WALKER CLASSIC

PERTH, Australia — Confident he can still be competitive at the majors after his stunning British Open performance last year, Greg Norman is using the Johnnie Walker Classic this week to start fine-tuning for his 23rd trip to the Masters.

The 54-year-old Norman led the British Open at Royal Birkdale by two strokes after three rounds last July and finished in a tie for third place. That was good enough to earn an invitation to the Masters in April.

He last played the Masters in 2002. His most famous run at Augusta National was six years before that, when he lost to Nick Faldo after holding a six-stroke lead going into the final round.

"I've had some great experiences there and I've had some bad experiences there, but at the same time it all neutralizes over my whole career there," Norman said Wednesday.

He's aiming to make the cut this year, saying experience allows him a mature approach.

"I've always been a believer: Age is really not anything but a number, as long as you keep yourself in good shape," he said. "That's why I don't really need to be like a 21-year-old or an 18-year-old thinking about (the Masters) months and months and months in advance."

Old Jerome school building meets the wrecking ball

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

School bells have rung through the halls of Central Elementary School in Jerome for the last time.

On Tuesday, city demolition crews tore down most of the building that formerly housed the city's high school when it was built in 1921. The demolition of the brick and stone building across from the county's government center will allow the Jerome School District to sell the property it formerly occupied.

The demolition is part of a carefully planned shuffle of facilities and renovation of some buildings paid for through funds from a $26.5 million bond voters approved in 2005.

According to Linda Adams, with the Jerome School District office, the demolition will be complete in another week.

"In the last year the building was used for offices for the school district and special needs classes plus a few other uses," Adams said.

It also was used as a middle school before the current Jerome Middle School opened to students.

"It was a beautiful building and it was like a second home," said Betty Hyder, a former principal during the years when the building housed a grade school. "I don't necessarily like seeing it go but the building had

Head pain, pounding pulse at night needs diagnosis

DEAR DR. GOTT: I hope you can help me. I am an 80-year-old widow, living alone, not overweight and I am active. I still mow my own lawn and have a garden and orchard. I grow veggies, berries, grapes, several types of tree fruits and walnuts. I have many other hobbies that keep me busy during the winter months. My faith is also very important to me.

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

My only medication is thyroid hormone replacement, which I have been taking for more than 60 years.

My problem is that for the past 40 years, when I go to bed, I awaken between 2 and 4 a.m. because of a pounding pulse and pain on the right side of my head that extends down through the back of my neck. The pain is very intense. A few years ago, I found that taking an aspirin with caffeine stops the pain within half an hour. I still cannot get back to sleep, but I figure it's better to lie awake pain-free than to lie awake with a horrible headache. I never get headaches during the day.

I have lost track of the number of chiropractors and doctors I have seen and tests I have had done. One physician thought it might be something in my room or house. I have a big house with four bedrooms and have tried each bed and about 12 different pillows. I even went to visit some relatives in California but still had the same problem in three different locations while visiting. All the tests I have had, including a few days in a sleep clinic, have been normal.

My only relief came last spring, when I tried a new supplement that contained butterbur, ginger and riboflavin. I had three glorious months without a headache, but just as suddenly as they stopped, they returned. I still occasionally retry the supplement, but with no effect.

It is currently 3 a.m. as I write this, so I hope you can served its purpose and it was time to move on. More modern buildings are much better designed for the education of younger children."

Frank Pierson, now a third-grade teacher at Jefferson Elementary School, taught in the building from 1976 to 1995.

"I drove by the demolition site on Lincoln and I have to admit I recalled many memories," he said, "especially of the people with whom I had worked."

After hearing that Hyder felt it was time for the old building to go, Pierson recalled a memory about the subject. He said while disciplining a boy, he was called away from his classroom. When he returned, the boy was gone. The student had climbed into and up a large vent built into the brick interior walls of the classrooms.

"That's just an example of what I think Betty was referring to," Pierson said.

DEAR READER: Your situation is incredibly difficult. Upon first reading, I thought perhaps sleep apnea was the problem, but I then saw that you had already been tested.

You may wish to repeat certain tests, because 40 years have brought substantial change in their accuracy and sensitivity. Tests that didn't exist 40, 30 or even 20 years ago may now be available.

You have already indicated you underwent a sleep study, but if it was more than five or 10 years ago, you may wish to have another. The brain monitoring associated with many of these studies has improved drastically.

You may also benefit from a Holter-monitor study because of the pounding pulse. That recording will be interpreted by a cardiologist, who may be able to detect any abnormal cardiac rhythms.

Another option is to start keeping a journal of your activities. This should include mealtimes (what time and what foods were consumed), showers (and products used), exercise and more. This could point out triggers, such as an allergy to a laundry detergent, perfume, shampoo or food. It could even show a relation to the time you last ate and when you woke up.

Have a frank discussion with your primary-care physician. Work together to discover the cause of your head pain and pounding pulse.

Elma McCowin Lott

FLORENCE, Ore. — Elma Lott died Friday, Feb. 13, 2009, in Florence, Ore., of age-related causes. She was 91.

Elma was born in Idaho Falls on Jan. 20, 1918, to Elmer and Nonna McCowin. She attended public school in Idaho Falls and was a member of the Lutheran Church. One of her favorite memories of growing up in Idaho Falls was going with groups of friends to dances at the old Wandemere Ballroom, where many of the popular "big band" orchestras of the era came to play.

On March 24, 1940, Elma married William "Bill" Lott of Heyburn. They had five children. Bill and Elma divorced in 1966. She did not remarry.

Before she married and raised her family, Elma worked as a telephone operator and recalled connecting the first long distance call to go through the Idaho Falls switchboard. After her children were grown, she worked as a desk clerk at the Ponderosa Inn in Burley during its heyday in the 1970s. Later in that decade, she lived in McNary, Ore., and managed a clothing store. But she always saw being a mother as her most important job in life. She cooked our food, sewed our clothes, nursed us through mumps, measles, whooping cough, chicken pox and a thousand bouts of cold and flu. She bandaged our scrapes and soothed our bruised hearts. She was always on our side, always there for us.

Elma had a green thumb and grew beautiful roses and flower gardens, as well as vigorous house plants. She also was a wonderful cook who learned her culinary style from her German mother. Her German heritage also meant that Christmas was always a special time and her home was filled with the aroma of the cookies and candies she made herself and shared with friends, neighbors and family. In 1992, Elma moved to Boise to be near her daughters and, in June of 2008, she moved to Florence, Ore., with her daughter and son-in-law, Barbara and Patrick Cunningham.

Elma was preceded in death by her mother and father; her sisters, Alita Hartert, Betty Osborne and Catherine Forhreck; her brothers, Carl and Clifford McCowin; her former husband, Bill Lott; and by many beloved family members and good friends. She is survived by her brother, Kenneth McCowin and his wife, Uvon of Idaho Falls; sister, Donna Hartley of Sacramento, Calif.; children, Michael Lott and his wife Linda of Burley, Karla Wynn of Boise, Kathryn Warthen of Seattle, Wash., Barbara Cunningham and her husband Patrick of Florence, Ore., and Rebecca Ogawa of Boise. She also is survived by eight grandchildren, 11 great-grandchildren, and a wealth of friends, young and old.

A private family service will be held later in Idaho Falls.

Acclaimed jazz drummer Louis Bellson dies at 84

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Big band and jazz drummer Louie Bellson, a master musician who performed with such greats as Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Benny Goodman and his late wife, Pearl Bailey, has died. He was 84.

Bellson died Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles of complications of Parkinson's disease following a broken hip in November, according to his wife, Francine.

Bellson's career spanned more than six decades, performing on more than 200 albums with jazz greats including Tommy Dorsey, Harry James, Oscar Peterson, Woody Herman, Sarah Vaughan, Ella Fitzgerald, Dizzy Gillespie and Louis Armstrong.

It was through Ellington that he met Bailey, the great singer and Broadway performer. They married in 1952, and when she died in 1990 at age 72, he told the Philadelphia Daily News that "I just lost my best friend."

Susan Hibbert, witness to German surrender, dies

LONDON (AP) — Susan Hibbert, who typed the English version of the German surrender document and then messaged London when World War II ended in Europe in 1945, has died at age 84.

Hibbert died Feb. 2, her family said.

As a staff sergeant in the Auxiliary Territorial Service, Hibbert — then Susan Heald — was assigned to type the English version of the surrender document, and retyped it several times as it was amended.

She was present on May 7, 1945, when Gen. Alfred Jodl formally surrendered, and she was given the task of sending a cable to London confirming that the mission had been accomplished. The Daily Telegraph said in an obituary published Wednesday.

Conchita Cintron, famed woman bullfighter, dies

By Barry Hatton
Associated Press writer

LISBON, Portugal — Conchita Cintron, who broke into the male-dominated sport of bullfighting at age 13 and became one of the world's first famous women matadors, has died. She was 86.

Cintron, a Peruvian who became known as "La Diosa Rubia," or "The Blonde Goddess," died of a heart attack in Lisbon on Tuesday, the Portuguese news agency Lusa said, quoting unidentified family members. She was buried on the outskirts of the city on Wednesday, a funeral agency and a local church said. Famous for her bullfighting skills on foot and on horseback, Cintron reportedly killed more than 750 bulls during her career in Europe, Central America and South America.

"She made an indelible mark on a period of bullfighting history," Hugo Ferro of the Portuguese Bullfighters' Union said in an interview on Wednesday.

"She was probably the best-known woman bullfighter," he said.

Born in 1922 as Concepcion Cintron Verrill, daughter of a Puerto Rican father and an American mother, she faced her first bull at 13 and made her debut in Lima, Peru.

During the 1940s, Cintron became one of the most famous women in bullfighting at a time when few females became matadors whose job it was to maneuver around the animal at close range, then to stab it to death with a sword.

"She wasn't the first woman, but she kept going season after season and made a name for herself," Ferro said.

Cintron was seriously injured in 1949 in Guadalajara, Mexico, when a bull gored her in the thigh.

Carried to the ring's infirmary, she pulled away from doctors, returned to the ring and killed the bull. She then fell unconscious and was rushed into emergency surgery.

That same year in Spain, where a law prohibited women bullfighters from dismounting their horse and fighting on foot, she simulated the kill by touching the bull on the shoulders — where the sword would go — as it passed her, drawing cheers from the crowd.

GOP governors consider turning down stimulus money

By Melinda Deslatte
Associated Press writer

BATON ROUGE, La. — A handful of Republican governors are considering turning down some money from the federal stimulus package, a move opponents say puts conservative ideology ahead of the needs of constituents struggling with record foreclosures and soaring unemployment.

Though none has outright rejected the money available for education, health care and infrastructure, the governors of Idaho, Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alaska and South Carolina have all questioned whether the $787 billion bill signed into law this week will even help the economy.

"My concern is there's going to be commitments attached to it that are a mile long," said Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who considered rejecting some of the money but decided Wednesday to accept it. "We need the freedom to pick and choose. And we need the freedom to say 'No thanks.'"

U.S. Rep. James Clyburn, D-S.C., the No. 3 House Democrat, said the governors — some of whom are said to be eyeing White House bids in 2012 — are putting their own interests first.

"No community or constituency should be denied recovery assistance due to their governor's political ideology or political aspirations," Clyburn said Wednesday.

In fact, governors who reject some of the stimulus aid may find themselves overriden by their own legislatures because of language Clyburn included in the bill that allows lawmakers to accept the federal money even if their governors object.

He inserted the provision based on the early and vocal opposition to the stimulus plan by South Carolina's Republican governor, Mark Sanford. But it also means governors like Sanford and Louisiana's Bobby Jindal — a GOP up-and-comer often mentioned as a potential 2012 presidential candidate — can burnish their conservative credentials, knowing all the while that their legislatures can accept the money anyway.

Jindal said he, like Perry and Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour, is concerned about strings attached to the money even though his state faces a $1.7 billion budget shortfall next year.

Barbour spokesman Dan Turner, for example, cited concerns that accepting unemployment money from the stimulus package would force states to pay benefits to people who wouldn't meet state requirements to receive them.

In Idaho, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter said he wasn't interested in stimulus money that would expand programs and boost the state's costs in future years when the federal dollars disappear — a worry also cited by Jindal and Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin.

A spokesman said Sanford, the new head of the Republican Governors Association, is looking at the stimulus bill to figure out how much of it he can control.

"We're going through a 1,200-page bill to determine what our options are," Spokesman Joel Sawyer said. "From there, we'll make decisions."

But state Democratic Party chairwoman Carol Fowler says Sanford's hesitation is driven by his political ambition rather than the best interests of a state that had the nation's third-highest unemployment rate in December.

"He's so ideological," Fowler said. "He would rather South Carolina do without jobs than take that money, and I think he's looking for a way not to take it."

Grooming at 7,000 feet

Resort owner prepares slopes while the sun rises

Gary Miller grooms ski trails early on Jan. 31 at Magic Mountain Ski Resort. Grooming the slopes is only one of a number of jobs that Miller performs during the day at his mountain. The long, hectic schedule is worth it, he says, when he sees his customers' smiles.

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

HANSEN — As Gary Miller climbed aboard his snowcat a little after 4 a.m., his hands were assaulted by frost that, as on most winter mornings, encased the door handle.

He didn't wear gloves. Inside the cab, he turned a key and allowed the machine to idle — heat turned on high — until the inside temperature replaced the chill of another cold morning. Above the mountain the sky was clear, except for countless stars that twinkled against the blackened backdrop, as if to fight off the encroaching dawn.

Gary Miller, co-owner of Magic Mountain Ski Resort, operates a snowcat early in the morning at the resort south of Hansen. He begins work on the slopes between 4 and 5 a.m., finishing before the resort opens at 9 a.m.

The starry heaven was reason to give pause, but Miller didn't allow it to distract him. Too much work to be done.

While he waited for the snowcat to warm up Jan. 31, he went inside his lodge to start a fire in the wood-burning stove, turn on a heater to dry out ski boots and do other small tasks needed before the ski resort's 9 a.m. opening, which, according to his watch, was a mere five hours away.

Back inside the snowcat, he turned on its headlights, aimed it toward the mountain and began his assault on the slopes.

It takes between four and five hours to groom Magic Mountain Ski Resort, the mountain that Miller co-owns with his brother Terry Miller.

"We try to do it in the morning, so it's not all ice" for the skiers and snowboarders, said Miller, the plow raking the snow in 16-foot swaths behind the cab, tossing the white stuff and leaving streaks in the snowcat's wake. "We want them, especially beginners, to have a soft surface."

Some parts of the mountain, which has 21 runs, are left ungroomed for those who like rougher terrain, he said. The only imprint left in those areas, besides cross-country skiers', is by wildlife.

Many a morning while grooming the slopes, Miller sees a deer or moose; one bull moose in particular seems to haunt a spot on the mountain, he said. Most mornings he'll at least see tracks in the snow, sometimes from a bobcat or cougar.

"These are from a bobcat," he said, referring to small paw prints revealed by the snowcat's headlights. "You can tell when they're cougar prints, because they're bigger, about the size of your fist."

That's just one of the pleasures of grooming his mountain. Driving the snowcat is pretty fun, too.

IN THEIR SHOES

Our seven-day series, which started Sunday, takes you inside the lives and jobs of your southern Idaho neighbors. Our reporters and photographers shadowed each subject for a day. Grooming the slopes is Miller's chance to be by himself, to think or listen to country music over the rig's radio speakers.

Driving the snowcat is, in fact, the best part of the day's work, which can last up to 18 hours. Sometimes he doesn't know how he keeps up the pace, he said without the hint of a yawn.

When not on the resort Thursday-Sunday, Miller stays busy at his other business — Miller Concrete and Excavation. He doesn't view his heavy workload as drudgery. He keeps his chin up, hoping that one day he'll actually make money off the resort.

"We've put about $10,000 into it this season ... and have grown about 20 percent to 30 percent since last year," Miller said. But he's not making much profit now, he said. Most of the money goes back into operation, including the 25 or so employees who help him run the 500-acre mountain. But the employees wouldn't arrive until later. For now, as the stars dimmed overhead, it was just Miller on the mountain.

As rays of morning sun broke on the horizon, Miller headed back to the lodge. There were still a couple more hours of grooming to do, but Miller wanted a change of pace, so he turned over the snowcat to his son, Brandon.

Brandon wasn't feeling well on this particular Saturday but agreed to finish the slopes anyway, while Miller grabbed tools and an air filter, jumped into his Yamaha Ranger 700 — its wheels traded out for rubberized snow tracks — and headed to a ski lift. Once there, he changed the lift's filter, which took just a few minutes. As night gave way to daylight, he entered the small

10 TIPS FOR WINTER RUNNING

Each winter, untold thousands of runners head indoors to train on treadmills and tracks when the temps turn cold. But running outdoors year-round is possible. With the right running apparel and gear, you can make winter running not only bearable but comfortable — in any temperature. Here are 10 tips on how to do winter running right.

1. Trail shoes: Trail-running shoes with aggressive tread and water-resistant uppers are the preferred footwear for many winter runners. Unlike road shoes, many trail-running models from companies like Montrail, Salomon, La Sportiva, Inov-8, and others protect feet from wind and moisture.

Plus, they add grip for variable conditions underfoot, from snow to mud to slush.

2. Add extra grip: When rubber tread won't cut it, runners add grip to

THE GEAR JUNKIE
Stephen Regenold

their shoes.

YakTrax products, popular with many runners, wrap steel coils crisscrossed underfoot for grip. More aggressive, Kahtoola Inc.'s MICROspikes are an add-on crampon that cinches over a shoe to position 10 stainless steel spikes down off your sole.

3. Head case: Neck gaiters, hats, balaclavas, and handkerchief-like products including the Original Buff allow for a layering system on your neck, chin, cheeks, and noggin. Start out bundled up, but de-layer once your head gets hot, stowing headwear in a pocket to regulate your entire body's temperature on the go.

4. Hands and feet: Extremities often suffer the most while on a run. Some runners wear thin gloves and ball their hands inside until blood flows to the fingers. Mittens with flip-top finger compartments let you balance heat and get quick dexterity when needed. For the feet, waterproof trail-running shoes — which block the wind and keep more heat inside — are adequate for many runners to zero or below.

5. Thin sheen of warmth: As Nordic skiers know, a dab of petroleum jelly on exposed skin — especially on the cheeks, lips, and nose — adds an invisible barrier of warmth and protection. A smudge of Vaseline or alternative products like Warm Skin (www.warmskin.com) may let you forgo a face mask or balaclava when the temp is above zero.

6. Start out cold: A runner dressed to be comfortable right out the door will soon be too hot. Best to start a run feeling underdressed. Heat generated on the go quickly makes up for layers of clothing you'd regularly wear in winter temps.

7. Night running: Evening runs are dark in the winter, making clothing with bright colors and reflective properties mandatory gear. Car drivers are not expecting to see a jogger at 8 p.m. on a 10-degree night.

8. Layers: Remember, your body generates all the heat it requires to keep itself warm — clothing only helps retain that heat. Layers of clothing — from base-layer long underwear, a mid-layer shirt, and to an outer shell — keeps warm air in and allows a runner to unzip for ventilation or pull off a garment altogether when too warm. Sweat wicks better through a system of layers, keeping moisture off the skin.

9. Heart rate as gage: Feet slip on snow, and each mile is harder earned. You will be slower.

Monitor your heart rate to assess physical output rather than relying on time. An eight-minute-per-mile runner might slow down to nine minutes or more in winter, though calories burned will be equal or greater, despite a slower pace.

10. Breathable shell: No matter how cold, your core is almost guaranteed to sweat when you run. A Gore-Tex jacket or other types of waterproof shells, though great on the ski slope, are too clammy for cold-weather running. Look for a wind and water-resistant shell that banks first on breathability to keep you from clamming up while on a winter run.

Bill to increase hunting and fishing fees delayed

BOISE — The Legislature has delayed introducing a bill that would increase hunting and fishing license fees by 15 percent.

Department of Fish and Game officials say they had hoped the bill would be introduced in the Senate Resources and Environment Committee Friday but it was delayed as Idaho lawmakers debate the state's shrinking state budget.

Fish and Game Deputy Director Virgil Moore says the agency, which has not had a fee increase since 2005, has proposed various increases to raise an additional $5.1 million in hunting and fishing fees.

The Department does not get general revenue funds from the state.

Wyo. Senate OKs bill for farming sage grouse

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — The Wyoming Senate preliminarily approved a bill directing the state Game and Fish Commission to again develop rules for raising native sage grouse on private bird farms.

The Legislature already directed the Wyoming Game and Fish Department to implement sage grouse farming rules last year.

But public comments were overwhelmingly against the idea during last summer's rule-making process. Game and Fish then balked at adopting rules over concerns about the viability of farming the birds.

The bill approved Tuesday directs the Game and Fish to present sage grouse farming rules to lawmakers in August. Lawmakers would then decide whether to develop legislation to address the issue during the 2010 session.

The bill also would put a moratorium on private sage grouse farming until April 2010.

The House has already passed the bill.

Feds: Calif. returning chinook salmon a record low

By Jason Dearen
Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — A record-low number of chinook salmon returned to rivers in California's Central Valley last year, indicating that severe restrictions on salmon fishing are likely again this year, federal regulators say.

The Pacific Fishery Management Council reported this week that in 2008 a total of 66,264 natural and hatchery chinook or "king" salmon adults were estimated to have returned to the Sacramento River basin to spawn, the lowest estimate on record.

The council uses the estimates to determine if it should recommend limits on commercial and recreational fishing.

"Our team is putting together the forecast this week, will come out some time next week," Chuck Tracy, the salmon staff officer for the council, said Wednesday. The final recommendation on fishing limits will be made in April.

The numbers are down from about 90,000 in 2007, which led to bans in 2008 on commercial and recreational salmon fishing off the coasts of California and most of Oregon. In contrast, more than 750,000 salmon adults were counted in the Sacramento River basin in 2002.

A record-low number of chinook salmon returned to rivers in California's Central Valley last year, indicating that severe restrictions on salmon fishing are likely again this year, federal regulators say.

Francisco Bay to spawn in the Sacramento River and its tributaries last fall is part of broader decline in wild salmon runs in rivers across the West in recent years.

Tracy said returns in the Klamath River, the next big salmon spawning river north of the Sacramento River, were fewer than regulators had expected.

The Sacramento River chinook run serves as a bellwether for the Pacific's salmon fishermen — the run often provides the bulk of salmon caught off the coasts of California and Oregon.

The decline in the salmon population has been economically devastating for the fishing industry. The council reported that salmon fishing revenue in 2008 for the entire West Coast was $6.9 million, down from $39.9 million in 2007.

In the Sacramento Delta, fishermen and regulators believe large pumps used to move water around for farming and other uses is to blame for the falling numbers. Others say changes in the ocean due to greenhouse gas pollution also are killing the fish.

Environmental advocates argue that California's salmon losses are higher than other regions because of the state's system of canals, dams and pumps, and have sued the National Marine Fisheries Service to impose restrictions to help save fish.

"These most recent salmon numbers, coming on the heels of last year's disastrously low returns that led to the first-ever complete shutdown of the commercial salmon fishing season in Northern California and most of Oregon, are further proof that (pumping) operations ... are harming salmon," said Mike Sherwood, an attorney for environmental advocacy group Earthjustice, who filed the suit.

Still, regulators and fishermen had expected this year would be tough.

"Realistically, we were looking at the fact that we wouldn't have a season this year. We're looking at 2010 before we can fish again," said Zeke Grader, executive director of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, and industry group.

After the Pacific Fishery Management Council makes its recommendation in April, the National Marine Fisheries Service will make its final decision on the fate of this year's fishing season.

Grader said the fishermen's association has saved millions of dollars in federal assistance received after the collapse of the Pacific Coast salmon industry.

"That money sitting in the account will be distributed to keep people alive for this year," Grader said.

Get out the binoculars for a look at the 'Comet of Cooperation'

While love has been called the universal language, one could make a similar argument for mathematics. And since mathematics is also the language of science, its universality often grants science the power to span borders that otherwise separate rival nations.

This week a comet is in view that highlights such cross-border scientific cooperation. Quanzhi Ye, a 19-year-old Chinese student, first spotted the solar system interloper in an image from Taiwan's Lulin Observatory. Quanzhi is the principle investigator of the Lulin Sky Survey, a program to search for small bodies orbiting the Sun, especially ones that could present a hazard to Earth. He turned to Taiwan for help due to the lack of telescopes on the mainland capable of performing the search.

Historically, newly discovered comets are named after the person who first finds them, so by all rights Quanzhi's discovery should bear his name. But, in an acknowledgment of the China-Taiwan cooperation that made the discovery possible, Quanzhi has graciously abdicated the naming honors. Thus, his discovery now bears the name Comet C/2007 N3 (Lulin).

Although Comet Lulin is no threat to Earth, it is interesting for its orbit, which lies in nearly the same plane as Earth's, but moving in the opposite direction. Thus, in photographs it displays an "anti-tail," which appears to point toward the Sun (an optical illusion caused by looking at Comet Lulin won't be visible with the naked eye, but will be plenty bright enough to be spotted in binoculars. It spends this week tracking westward along a line between Spica (the brightest star visible low in the ESE around 11 p.m.) and Saturn (the moderately bright, yellowish "star" about midway up from the SE horizon). On Monday and Tuesday nights it will appear in the same field of view with Saturn, looking like a fuzzy star.

Next week: A Turkish delight in the sky.

In North America many gray wolves have black coats, a genetic mutation they acquired when wolves and dogs interbred in the last few thousand years.

Researchers report today's wolves inherited some traits from ancient dogs

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Today's dogs are descendants of ancient wolves. Now, it turns out, at least some of today's wolves inherited traits from ancient dogs.

Gray wolves have that name because of their color, but in North America many of them have dark or black coats instead of the standard gray.

The genetic mutation producing dark coats appears to have occurred in dogs, and then spread from them to wolves when the species mated, according to researchers led by Gregory S. Barsh of Stanford University.

The dark-coated wolves are almost exclusive to North America and are much more common in forested areas where they make up 62 percent of the wolf population, compared with 7 percent in open tundra, the researchers noted.

But wildlife biologists don't think wolves rely much on camouflage, Barsh said. "It's possible there is something else going on here."

"It's sort of intuitively appealing, when you see animals that sort of blend in with their environment, to say ... that explains natural selection, that somehow they are better camouflaged either as predator or prey," Barsh said in a broadcast interview made available by the journal Science, which published his research in Friday's edition.

But wolves don't have a lot of predators, and there's no evidence to suggest that a black coat color leads to any increase in a wolf's ability to capture its prey, he said.

Also, Barsh added, black wolves, like humans, turn gray with age, "so you would think that if the black coat-color mutation was being selected because it caused the black coat color, you wouldn't get these older gray wolves, they would stay black."

The same protein responsible for coat color differences in dogs and wolves is associated with fighting inflammation and infection in humans. Thus, it "might give black animals an advantage that is distinct from its effect on pigmentation," Barsh said in a statement.

Co-author Tovi M. Anderson noted that the mutation for black coats has been cultivated by humans in the domestic dog for thousands of years. "Now we see that it not only entered the wild population, but also is benefiting them," she said.

Genetic tests indicate the mutation was introduced into wolves by dogs sometime in the last 10,000 to 15,000 years, Anderson said. That's about the same time the first people crossed the Bering land bridge, probably accompanied by dogs.

"We usually think of domestication as something that is carried out to benefit humans," Barsh said. "So we were really surprised to find that domestic animals can serve as a genetic reservoir that can benefit the natural populations from which they were derived."

"Although it happened by accident, black wolves are the first example of wolves being genetically engineered by people," added co-author Marco Musiani of the University of Calgary in Canada. "It is somewhat ironic that a trait that was created by humans may now prove to be beneficial for wolves as they deal with human-caused changes to their habitat."

Yale University researcher Mark Gerstein, who was not part of the research team, called the report "exciting."

"Positive selection is an important driving force in mammalian evolution. However, there are not many concrete and dramatic examples of it in action. This paper demonstrates such an example using coat color in wolves — an easy to recognize and relate to characteristic," he said in an interview via e-mail.

"Furthermore, it shows how the diversity in the gene pool can be maintained and developed in non-obvious ways — e.g. through the interbreeding of domesticated animals and wolves," Gerstein said.

He also praised the research for developing a clear, evolutionary history of the genes that determine color in wolves.

The research was funded by the U.S. National Institutes of Health, National Science Foundation and Swedish Research Council.

Three guns for the rimfire enthusiast

Ever since the Civil War introduction of B.T. Henry's damnable lever action, we Americans have had an ongoing love affair with our repeating firearms. Whether housed in sporting, self defense or military weapons, the instant availability of follow-up shots has often meant the difference between coming home empty-handed or, in dire circumstances, coming home at all.

While showcasing Ruger's immensely popular 10/22 semi auto in a recent column, I alluded to the little rimfire's prodigious appetite for ammo, especially when fed from the varied high capacity magazines specifically developed for it. Now I'm not suggesting that the little carbine triggers itself, but I will confess that there is something deeply soul-satisfying about keeping a soda can jumping around the gravel pit with a steady cadence of .22 Long Rifle slugs.

Now all that shooting requires lots of reloading and despite the consistent spring tension offered by today's magazines, you're still going to have a mighty sore digit after thumbing hundreds of shells home during an afternoon's shoot.

That is, unless you take advantage of another product of good ole American ingenuity, the speed loader. There are three that I would like to report on today — two designed for use with the 10/22 and another fashioned for .22 semi-auto pistols.

Pictured in the right of the accompanying photo is my current favorite, Shooters Ridge 10/22 magazine loader. Available at most local retailers for around $25, this compact and highly portable loader is crafted of rugged transparent plastic. To operate: begin by lifting the hopper cover and dropping up to 50 .22LR into the hopper.

Next, gently shake the loader until all the cartridges have positioned

SHOOTING THE BULL

themselves point down in the loading track. Close the hopper cover and carefully insert the magazine into the loading port. By slowly turning the loading paddle, you can top off your standard factory or aftermarket high capacity magazines in mere seconds.

The company also markets superior single and double stack magazines of 25, 30, and 50 round capacities. A factory designed feeding header ensures consistent chambering and a novel "trap door" feature allows for easy cleanup of wax and field debris. Depending on capacity, these mags will cost you between $25 and $35, but it's money well spent.

Butler Creek's 10/22 loader is positioned to the left in the picture. Though it predated the Shooters Ridge model by several years, its design and performance, in my opinion, are inferior. The rotating lever, which holds the magazine in position for loading, is easily broken and the magazine charging process itself is more hesitant. Retailing for the same $25, it is the inferior choice.

Last up on the docket today is Ram-Line's pistol magazine loader. This black nylon tab (middle of photo) allows you to depress the follower with little effort to quickly recharge your pistols' magazines. Costing just a couple of bucks, this is cheap thumb insurance indeed.

If you consume .22 ammo by the brick, rather than the box, give these loaders a try. In no time at all, I bet you'll be giving them the thumbs up.

Good shooting!

operation shed and primed the lift.

"Damn it," he said, hearing only grinding. The lift's motor wouldn't start.

He primed it more. It kicked to life.

As Miller let the motor warm up, Brandon came down the mountain in the snowcat in one of his first runs of the morning.

Miller explained, as the lift's chairs trailed by on thick cables, that he and his crew check the resort's lifts a number of times throughout the day. They monitor chairs, bolts, cables.

"We don't want any accidents," he said. They've been lucky. So far, they haven't had any.

One day, Miller said, he wants to add another lift, perhaps one that will take visitors to a cliff-top restaurant.

But he couldn't think too much about those "one day" plans now. There was enough to do today.

And the day had just begun.

By the time Miller returned to the lodge, some employees had arrived. The wood-burning stove was in full blaze, stoked by others since Miller left it earlier, and the lodge was warm.

As employees went about their tasks — some behind the food and beverage counter, others in the rental shop — Miller talked with them to see how things were shaping up, to see that everything was on track.

Because his brother and business partner is in China teaching English, Miller especially appreciates the help he receives from family and crew members. He's the first to admit that it's an impossible task to run a mountain resort alone.

And, of course, he couldn't do it without his customers, he said. Especially the children.

Despite long days, despite the sleepiness that might overwhelm him later, he is pleased with his work. The reward, he said, is on the faces of his customers.

"It's really satisfying to see smiles on kids' faces" when they head down the tubing hill or one of the slopes, Miller said. "That might sound corny, but it's the truth."

The stars that shone brightly just a few hours earlier were now hidden by sunlight. The black sky had turned to blue, and people arrived at the lodge.

As they piled their gear on the tables and warmed themselves by the stove, Miller knew he had a long day ahead of him. Good thing he enjoys his job.

Still, sleep would have been nice. He wouldn't get that until he returned to his Twin Falls home, sometime between 8 and 10 p.m. Then morning would come too early and he'd be on his way to his mountain dreamscape to do it all over again.

It's worth it, he said, as long as the smiles keep coming.

Question: I filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy in early 2002 and received my discharge a few months later. Recently I had to have multiple surgeries. I don't have insurance and owe about $50,000.00 in medical debt. I need to file another bankruptcy; what are my options?

Answer: The 2005 changes to the bankruptcy laws require a must pass between the filings of Chapter 7 cases. That means until 2010 to file a Chapter 7 case. However, the waiting period of a Chapter 7 case and a Chapter 13 case is only 4 years, so a Chapter 13 bankruptcy is a program where you repay some of your monthly payment to the Trustee for a period of time between 3 and 5 years. Once your payments are complete, your remaining debt is discharged. You must make payments and the amount of your payments is determined by your ability to pay as defined by the Bankruptcy Code. Chapter 13 is very complex. You should contact an experienced bankruptcy attorney. DO NOT TRY THIS AT HOME.

WASHINGTON McKiernan: More troops needed in Afghanistan

A day after President Barack Obama ordered new soldiers and Marines to Afghanistan, the top U.S. commander there said he might need still more troops in coming months to bolster an intensified war effort that could last an additional five years.

Gen. David D. McKiernan plans to use the 17,000 new soldiers and Marines being sent by Obama to try to break an impasse in fighting with the Taliban in the southern part of the country.

"What this allows us to do is change the dynamics of the security situation, predominantly in southern Afghanistan, where we are at best stalemated," McKiernan said.

The new deployments, raising the overall U.S. troop level to about 55,000, will fulfill military needs through Afghanistan's Aug. 20 presidential election, McKiernan said. But he held open the possibility of additional troop requests.

McKiernan said that, last year, he had forecast the need for an additional 30,000 troops for 2009 and beyond. The 17,000 deployments ordered Tuesday, combined with the earlier assignment of an Army brigade of about 3,500 from the 10th Mountain Division, provide two-thirds of the need, he said.

Holder urges Justice Dept. to discuss race

Attorney General Eric Holder urged employees Wednesday to take advantage of Black History Month to begin a dialogue about race, labeling the United States a "nation of cowards" for not discussing the country's checkered history openly.

Holder, the first African American to serve as the nation's top law enforcement officer, said that Justice Department workers have a special responsibility to acknowledge social limits and to push past them.

The department's civil rights division, which came to being half a century ago to help the Freedom Riders and students seeking to integrate public schools, more recently has been the target of criticism from Democrats who say it has lost its way.

Holder told employees that the level of social interaction among people of different races is "bleak" and that it in many ways does not "differ significantly from the country that existed some 50 years ago."

Demographic changes that within decades will result in no single racial majority only underscore the need for openness and, in some cases, confrontation on issues that separate people, Holder said.

He added: "If we are to make progress in this area, we must feel comfortable enough with one another, and tolerant enough of each other, to have frank conversations about racial matters that continue to divide us."

VATICAN

Pope to speaker Pelosi: Reject abortion support

VATICAN CITY — Pope Benedict XVI received Nancy Pelosi, one of the most prominent abortion rights politicians in America, and told her Wednesday that Catholic politicians have a duty to protect life "at all stages of its development."

The U.S. House speaker, a Catholic, was the first top Democrat to meet with Benedict since the election of Barack Obama, who won a majority of the U.S. Catholic vote despite differences with the Vatican on abortion.

On his fourth day in office last month, Obama ended a ban on funds for international groups that perform abortions or provide information on the option — a sharp policy change from former President George W. Bush's Republican administration.

The Vatican's attempts to keep the Pelosi visit low-profile displayed its obvious unease with the new U.S. administration. Benedict and Bush had found common ground in opposing abortion, an issue that drew them together despite their differences over the war in Iraq.

Wednesday's meeting, in a small room off a Vatican auditorium after the pope's weekly public audience, was closed to reporters and photographers.

The Vatican also said — contrary to its usual policy when the pope meets world leaders — that it was not issuing either a photo or video of the encounter, claiming the meeting was private.

ILLINOIS Clouds gather over Burris nomination

CHICAGO — A slight man elegantly dressed in a navy overcoat and knotted red tie,

Sen. Roland Burris, D-Ill., stepped onto a downtown street Wednesday, only to be instantly dwarfed by a horde of cameramen and reporters.

"Senator, are you going to resign?" they called, microphones and recorders in hand. "Do you have anything to say?"

Burris remained for a moment a silent witness to a political drama largely of his own making.

The junior U.S. senator who thought he was crowning his pioneering career with a position at the political pinnacle finds himself fighting to save both his job and his reputation.

His harsh welcome outside the City Club of Chicago was not what he intended when he scheduled a five-day journey designed as part listening tour, part victory lap for the first African American elected to statewide office in Illinois, and now President Obama's successor.

Plans were made before the revelation of his conflicting words about his contacts with Gov. Rod Blagojevich's inner circle and the opening of two investigations into statements Burris made under oath. That was before his image as a straight shooter began to fade, threatening the legacy of a man so confident that he arranged to have his political accomplishments chiseled into the stone of his future mausoleum.

MICHIGAN UAW deal leaves bonds, benefits on the table

DETROIT — General Motors and Chrysler kept working Wednesday to hammer out two issues left conspicuously unfinished in their requests for more government aid — how to fund a union-run health care trust and how to get bondholders to exchange debt for equity.

The companies submitted plans to the government Tuesday spelling out how they plan to become profitable if they get a total of $39 billion in financing.

While the United Auto Workers reached a tentative deal to help General Motors Corp., Chrysler LLC and Ford Motor Co. reduce labor costs, still at issue is whether the union will accept payments to the health care trust as stock instead of cash. Conditions of the government loans ask the union to take up half of what they're owed as an equity position in the companies.

Bondholders, meanwhile, are holding out on a deal to exchange two-thirds of the GM's debt for equity until there's more clarity from the union, which is weighing the risks of taking shares of GM's poor-performing stock to fund retiree benefits starting next year.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Concision in style, precision in thought, decision in life."
— Victor Hugo

In today's deal from the 2008 Yeh Brothers Cup, Doron Yadlin of Israel and John Armstrong of England (recently deceased) declared their game in almost exactly the same fashion. Both declared three no-trump on a low diamond lead. They won in hand and immediately led a club to the nine, more because of the lack of convenient entries to dummy than anything else. When the nine won the trick, both could infer minor-suit length in West. If that inference was correct, it may look natural to lead a low heart to the queen, but I prefer Armstrong's play of advancing the heart jack from dummy, just in case West had either the nine or 10 of hearts singleton or doubleton. This subtlety turned out to be irrelevant. West won the heart king and cleared diamonds by leading to the king and having East return the suit to dummy's queen. On this trick declarer pitched a spade from hand, then cashed the two top spades, forcing a diamond discard from West. Now came the two top heart winners, and declarer would have had nine winners if the suit had split. When West turned up with the heart length, South exited with the fourth heart to West. West took his heart trick and cashed his remaining diamond winner, but was then forced to lead a club away from his king around to declarer's queen. Dummy's club ace was South's ninth trick.

ANSWER: There are three plausible actions: raise to two diamonds, cuebid two clubs to show a good raise in diamonds, or double to suggest moderate spade length and values. With such a balanced hand and no intermediates, I would be inclined to downgrade this hand into a simple raise in diamonds. If partner has extra shape, he can always bid again.

Couples choose to separate church and state in marriage

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to the letter from "Deceived in Arizona" (Nov. 30). I agree the couple shouldn't have misled their guests and should have let them know it wouldn't be a state-sanctioned wedding. But these days, many couples choose not to legally wed, and for others it is not a choice.

Most gay and lesbian people do not have the opportunity to have a state-sanctioned marriage, and many progressive couples choose not to legally wed because of unequal marriage laws. Other couples view marriage as oppressive and prefer not to invite the state into their relationship.

Also, some churches will no longer perform state-sanctioned marriages until marriage is available to all couples. If members of those churches decide to be legally married, they must go to the courthouse.

My advice to that stepmother: Get over it! Celebrate the fact that your stepdaughter found her lifelong companion and is happy. And be thankful your new grandchild will have loving, committed parents.

—BETHANY
IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR BETHANY: Thank you for writing. When I printed "Deceived's" letter I had no idea I was catching a hot potato. The mail from readers about this has been most interesting and enlightening. Read on:

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Oh, boy, did you open a can of worms with that one! Don't you know that many gay people are frustrated with the government's refusal to grant them a legal marriage? And many couples today no longer have any desire to "register" their union with the government, and have decided to forgo the legal benefits associated with it. They stand together to publicly celebrate their joy and commitment to each other. A "government-approved" marriage means far less to them than one affirmed by God, family and community.

—ALEXANDRA
IN OAKLAND

DEAR ABBY: "Deceived," who complained about the marriage ceremony that was "not legal," pointed out the difficulty we have here in the United States where marriage is the only sacrament that is completely entwined with civil law. What we need is separation of church and state.

Governments should allow the CIVIL marriage of any two individuals who want to take on the rights and responsibilities of marriage. Churches should provide a RELIGIOUS marriage to those couples who satisfy their requirements for a religious marriage. That way the government would be out of the religious sacrament business and only in the business of conferring legal rights and responsibilities upon committed couples.

—BECKLEY
W.VA., LAWYER

DEAR ABBY: You should know that the minister, priest, judge (or whoever) does not "marry" the couple. They only "officiate" — and that's it. In many places around the world people declare in front of family, friends and/or community that they take each other as man and wife — and they are legally married. They do, at some time in the future when the official comes around, go ahead and go through the "formality," but they have already been married all that time before the official shows up.

Depending upon where this couple "pretended they got married," they may very well be married.

Keep up the good work, Abby. You're doing a heck of a good job.
—DONALD H.
ST. JOSEPH, MO.

DEAR DONALD: Thank you for the kind words. Readers, I'll have more on this tomorrow. It appears "the times may be a-changin'..."

IF FEBRUARY 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You can harness drive and ambition during the next two months and become a whirlwind of industry. Leave the competition in the dust. At the same time, you must remember that you may only see what you want to see because your dreams are so important to you and that the people who do help you will expect compensation. You might achieve more than you thought possible by teaming up with like-minded people in June. Consider joining a class, study group or other organization. Maintain a low profile next October and November when the stars are not favorable for new initiatives, projects or responsibilities such as a loan or major change.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Honesty is the best policy. Be candid and forthright and your straightforward approach will draw the notice of the higher-ups. Vigorous exercise could do much to improve your mental outlook.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be cautious and selective when making plans. Careful usage of the piggy bank could yield positive results in the near future. The people talking about you behind your back have only positive things to say.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Words can speak louder than deeds. A well-thought-out presentation could make everyone sit up and listen. You may be able to get a client to enter into an agreement that they have resisted in the past.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Go out on a limb. Don't be satisfied with taking the safe path. Use your sense of competition to its fullest and get down in the trenches. A close friend will be on hand to fuel the fires of your enthusiasm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take the center stage. Flex your proverbial muscles and let the world see what you are made of. Impress everyone with a display of leadership and independence that will have them flocking to follow you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast. Let words vibrate like sweet music to enchant your personal fan club. Your gift of gab may attract new admirers; a sincere manner will impress others favorably.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't burn bridges at both ends. You should be content with what you have and whom you are with, though you may think that you need more. Don't butt heads with a confidant due to unrealistic goals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There's no point in holding a grudge. Open up your heart and be the first one to go to the person you've been feuding with and clear the air. A frank discussion could lead to a mutually beneficial compromise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Follow through with promises. A heart-to-heart talk could give you a fresh perspective and outlook that will expand the possibilities. When opportunity comes knocking just open the door.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A house of cards can collapse in an instant. The only way to reach a goal is through hard work and being honest will those you deal with. Be a paragon of virtue to quickly rise through the ranks.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A leopard will not shed its spots simply because you don't like them. Listen to the ideas of others rather than criticizing, as there may be wisdom in their words. Show a mutual respect to those you encounter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A word from the wise will make you richer. Pay heed to those with more experience, as they will be able to steer you in the right direction. Use your common sense and logic to keep your heart afloat.

Today is Thursday, Feb. 19, the 50th day of 2009. There are 315 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: On Feb. 19, 1945, during World War II, some 30,000 U.S. Marines began landing on Iwo Jima, where they commenced a successful monthlong battle to seize control of the island from Japanese forces.

On this date: In 1473, astronomer Nicolaus Copernicus was born in Torun, Poland.

In 1803, Congress voted to accept Ohio's borders and constitution.

In 1846, the Texas state government was formally installed in Austin, with J. Pinckney Henderson taking the oath of office as governor.

In 1881, Kansas prohibited the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages.

In 1909, the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, a precursor to Mental Health America, was founded by Clifford W. Beers.

In 1934, the U.S. Army Air Corps began delivering mail after President Franklin D. Roosevelt canceled private contracts that had come under suspicion. (The hastily arranged, ill-equipped military flights claimed the lives of a dozen pilots, sparking a public outcry before they were dropped several months later.)

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt authorized the military to relocate and intern U.S. residents, including native-born Americans, of Japanese ancestry. Japanese warplanes raided the Australian city of Darwin; at least 243 people were killed.

In 1959, an agreement was signed by Britain, Turkey and Greece granting Cyprus its independence.

In 1983, 13 people were found shot to death at a gambling club in Seattle's Chinatown in what became known as the "Wah Mee Massacre." (Two Chinese immigrants were convicted of the killings and sentenced to life in prison.)

In 1997, Deng Xiaoping, the last of China's major Communist revolutionaries, died at age 92.

Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton posthumously pardoned Henry O. Flipper, the first black graduate of West Point, whose military career had been tarnished by a racially motivated discharge.

Five years ago: Former Enron Corp. chief executive Jeffrey Skilling was charged in court with fraud, insider trading and other crimes in connection with the energy trader's colossal collapse. (Skilling was later convicted of 19 counts and sentenced to 24 years and four months in prison; a federal appeals court upheld his convictions, but vacated the prison term and ordered that he be resentenced.) The AFL-CIO endorsed Democrat John Kerry for president.

One year ago: An ailing Fidel Castro resigned the Cuban presidency after nearly a half-century in power; his brother Raul was later named to succeed him. President George W. Bush, visiting Rwanda, pleaded with the global community for decisive action to stop grisly ethnic violence plaguing other African nations like Kenya and Sudan. Barack Obama cruised past Hillary Rodham Clinton in the Wisconsin primary and Hawaii caucuses. Toshiba, creator of the HD DVD, conceded to Sony's rival Blu-ray format.
