A free lunch in tight times

By Ben Botkin Times-News writer

In tight economic times, every dollar counts.

Take a $2 school lunch, for example. At first blush, it doesn't sound like much. But start adding the lunches up and it's $10 a week, or $40 a month for each child.

While the economy has had better times, area school districts aren't uniformly seeing a huge spike in families signing up for the federal program that provides free or reduced lunches to students.

WATCH: A video about school lunches.

Some districts have seen increases, while others are at similar or even lower levels compared to the 2007-2008 school year. But if the economy continues its downward spiral before school lets out for the summer, districts could see more changes because families can apply throughout the school year.

In Twin Falls School District, there are now almost 300 more students in the free and reduced lunch program compared to the last school year. Currently about 3,947 students are in the program, while 3,663 students participated at this point in the last school year, said Beth Pendergrass, spokeswoman for the dis-

In the last school year, 51.4 percent of Twin Falls students were in the program and this year's percentage will be calculated in March and factor in updated enrollment numbers.

At Cassia County School District, the numbers of students in the program have actually decreased.

Currently, 2,918 students are in the program — 55.5 percent of the student body.

Senate bills, citizen committee aim to resolve conflicts

By Nate Poppino Times-News writer

It's been a big week for bighorn sheep.

Two bills introduced in the Legislature Feb. 23 would bring sweeping changes to the way bighorns are managed, ostensibly to keep domestic sheep from transmitting diseases to them.

Meanwhile, an unrelated advisory group created to help wildlife and agricultural officials find solutions to the problem held its first meeting on Thursday.

They're the next steps in an ongoing battle over saving the bighorns — decimated by exposure to domestic sheep grazing on public land while preserving ranching operations across the state. Locally, the conflict has played out in the South Hills, where state officials say a recent agreement with ranchers has temporarily soothed the matter.

Senate Bills 1124 and 1125, were submitted by Sen. Monty J. Pearce, R-New Plymouth, about one month after the Resources and Environment Committee he sits on heard a presentation from sheep ranchers in the Payette area.

Among other changes, the legislation would adjust the way bighorns and other ungulates such as deer and moose would be moved around the state and tested for diseases, and codify a policy removing bighorn sheep when seen near domestic ones. They would also shift more responsibilities for the animals from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game to the Department of $*#%+&! LA County tries for cuss-free week

By John Rogers Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Pay no attention to that eerie silence in the nation's most populous county this week; it will simply be the sound of 10 million people not cussing.

At least that's the result McKay Hatch is hoping for once his campaign to clear the air is recognized by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors. On Tuesday, the board is scheduled to issue a proclamation by Supervisor Michael Antonovich making the first week in March No Cussing Week.

That would mean no blue language from the Mojave desert, where it gets hot as $&AA in the summer, to the Pacific Ocean, where on a winter's day it can get colder and nastier than A%$A!

Not that 15-year-old Hatch expects complete compliance. When his No Cussing Club meets at South Pasadena High School on Wednesdays it's not unusual for a nonmember to throw open the door and fire off a torrent of four-letter words. He's also been the target of organized harassment by pro-cussers.

And Antonovich's county motion carries no penalties.

"But it's a good reminder for all of us, not just young people but everybody, to be respectful to one another and watch the words we use," said the supervisor's spokesman, Tony

The county isn't the first entity to try to put the lid on swearing. Hatch's hometown of South Pasadena declared itself a cuss-free zone for a week last March, and two years ago a high school in Canada threatened to suspend repeat cussers. Hatch has lofty goals.

"Next year I want to try to get California to have a cussfree week. And then, who knows, maybe worldwide," said the 10th grader, who believes if people treat each other with more civility they can better work together to solve bigger problems.

He said his campaign began to form about the time he hit seventh grade when he noticed his friends beginning to swear, something his family didn't allow.

He formed the No Cussing Club and invited others to join. Soon the group had a Web site, bright orange Tshirts, a hip hop theme song and inquiries from all over from people interested in joining. He estimates 20,000 people have formed similar clubs.

"It's not about forcing anyone to stop, just to bring awareness," he says of the movement. "If you can do a week without cussing, maybe you can do two weeks. And then maybe a month."

Crapo: Deficit skyrockets due to stimulus

Senator expects more spending bills ahead

Times-News

The federal stimulus package passed by Congress and President Obama last month has "blown the deficit way out of proportion," according to Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, who said the bill will push the annual deficit to around $1.4

"The bottom line is that is a phenomenally huge number," said Crapo in a meeting

Friday night with the Times-News editorial board.

Crapo, along with the other members of Idaho's dele-Crapo gation, voted against the $787 billion package. But even with the plan's figures, Crapo said the deficit could drop quickly in coming

He said that's because as the federal assistance begins to spend out its appropriations, the government will expect to receive more revenue from taxpayers. Tax cuts signed by President Bush in 2001 and 2003 will begin to expire in 2010. Crapo said that will help the deficit decline rapidly to around $435 billion within the next five years, and Obama has pledged to cut the deficit in half by the end of his term.

"You can do that if you just have taxes go up and don't spend a lot more ..." Crapo said. "But I think you will see more stimulus bills."

As a member of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, Crapo has heard testimony from economic leaders across all perspectives, but the current crisis has them all perplexed.

"I have concluded ... there is no consensus," he said. "They will candidly say we as a world have never gone through what we're going through now."

Crapo said much of the blame lies with "a huge credit

Former E. Idaho superintendent blames alcohol

By Casey Santee Idaho State Journal

POCATELLO — Prenatal exposure to alcohol is the reason a high percentage of American Indian students in School District 25 are identified as disabled and placed into special education programs, according to a former superintendent of Shoshone-Bannock schools. He should know.

Jody Crowe spent 18 years as an educator on four American Indian reservations during his career. He now lives in Minnesota, where he advocates for awareness of fetal alcohol spectrum disorders, previously called fetal alcohol syndrome.

Crowe said the Idaho State Department of Education, which last fall notified District 25 that it was identifying too many tribal students for special education, is off base. He said the unfortunate fact is that alcohol use by American Indian mothers is higher than average, compared with other racial or ethnic groups.

"In the tribal schools that I've worked, we've been told we shouldn't have more than 15 percent of the kids identified in special education. That's the average across the nation. (The Department of Education) says if you have more than that, you must be misidentifying students," Crowe said. "What I told them is, there's an elephant in the middle of the room and we're all talking around it. The elephant is the brain damage from prenatal exposure to alcohol."

Krissy Broncho, a licensed clinical social worker at Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Counseling and Family Services, is one of the few persons in the Western United States trained to diagnose FASD.

She said problems stemming from prenatal exposure to alcohol, which include varying degrees of mental retardation, anxiety and impulse control issues, among others, is prevalent among all racial and ethnic groups. The severity of the disorder depends not only on how much alcohol a woman consumes during pregnancy, but also in which trimester. Cognitive impairments are usually most severe when the drinking occurs within the first trimester as the brain stem is forming, she says.

"A lot of times we'll see kids, depending on the level of damage, that could be anywhere from mental retardation to pretty low IQ levels," Broncho said.

Counseling and Family Services began sending employees, including Burley, the numbers may increase, said child nutrition programs director Mary Ann Roskelley.

'We haven't noticed much change," she said. "Now, I don't know. They just closed the ethanol plant."

There's also been a decrease at Minidoka County School District. Currently, about 62 percent of students are in the free and reduced lunch program, while 65 percent were in the program in the 2007-2008 school year.

"That was surprising to me," said Superintendent Scott Rogers, adding that he's unsure why the numbers are down. "I would have guessed that we would have a slight increase in free and reduced lunches."

Rogers said one potential explanation may be the mentality of some in the rural west to get by on their own without any government assistance.

At Gooding School District, 60 percent of students are in the free and reduced lunch program, up from 55 percent in the last school year, said Anji Baumann, the district's child nutrition director.

"I would think that the economy has something to do with this," she said.

Mike Gibson, business manager of Jerome School District, said there's been a slight increase of students in the program.

"At this point, we're higher than we've been on average," Gibson said. "But it's not a huge number."

At Shoshone School District, 336 students are in the free and reduced lunch program, down from 362 students in the last school year. said Superintendent Mel Wiseman.

Agriculture and local county commissioners, and tweak the operation and use of funds from two annual bighorn tag sales — one of which, an auction, brought in $120,000 this year just for the one tag.

So far, Fish and Game officials don't seem thrilled. Preliminary analyses created for its commission members cite concerns over the vast amount of new work the bills would create. In some cases, such as the requirement to test every animal for every possible disease, analysts found the language to be vague, the goal "unobtainable" and warned the results could significantly harm animals and halt all ungulate movement within the state.

For now, Fish and Game has been instructed to just monitor the bills and not weigh in, said Commission Chairman and Magic Valley representative Wayne Wright. But Deputy Director Unsworth said the citizen advisory group is intended to solve the conflict without resorting to legislation.

Its members, he said, represent everyone from environmentalists to ranchers, and their work will dovetail with an ongoing management plan revision undertaken by department. Ideally, the members will make good progress toward a collaborative compromise over the next year to year-and-a-half.

The sides they represent certainly aren't of one mind regarding Pearce's bills, though most are still digesting them. Stan Boyd, executive director of the Idaho Wool Growers Association, said he likes the idea of handing more control over transplanted bighorns to county commissioners, who may better balance wildlife and economic issues.

But environmental groups criticized the bills as benefitting sheep ranchers over the bighorns. Katie Fite, biodiversity director for Western Watersheds Project, said it's "appalling" at a time of large layoffs that the Legislature is focusing on a bill to benefit a relatively small, federally subsidized "elite aristocracy of big sheep-men."

John Robison with the Idaho Conservation League warned that tying Fish and Game's hands through the legislation will only lead to federal listing and control of bighorns, and said the advisory group is the best way to develop a long-term solution acceptable to everyone.

"We've got a choice here: We can either proceed on the course that the legislation in the statehouse is on ... or we can work together," he said.

bubble globally" that has leveraged nations, corporations and individuals. "Once we went off the gold standard, and went to basically the good faith and trust of American people backing our currency, that gave us the ability in the United States to engage in a phenomenal accrual of debt ... which allowed other countries to do the same."

"The housing industry is where it probably ballooned out the most and the worst."

On other issues, Crapo said the Owyhee Initiative, the wilderness bill for southwestern Idaho that he introduced landusers, is now in the House after passing the Senate. The bill could see amend-after years of collaboration by ments. But Crapo is hopeful it will pass as part of an omnibus lands bill crafted by senators over a four-year period when both parties were in the majority.

"I have very strong confidence that the president would sign the bill.'

Crapo said he's wary of two issues that caught conservatives' ire - a new semiautomatic weapon ban, and a move to resurrect the "fairness doctrine" for broadcast-

On the first, Crapo said true assault weapons are already banned and the new legislation would seek to ban guns that look like automatic weapons. "It's an overreach," he said. The fairness doctrine, which required equal treatment on airwaves for both sides of a political issue until it was dropped in the 1980s, is a First Amendment issue that should repel Americans, Crapo said.

"I have a hard time seeing the justification for the government telling the news media in any context, how they have to write the news or present the news," he said.

Washington in 2001 to learn how to diagnose FASD when it became clear that many of the children being assessed didn't fit the criteria for other psychological disorders, such as attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder.

Dave Miner, a District 25 school psychologist and licensed professional counselor, said the district doesn't diagnose FASD. Rather, he and the other psychologists use standardized tests to screen students having trouble in the classroom before placing them in special education.

"It's not like anyone says, 'This child has fetal alcohol syndrome and is Native American.' The district is color-blind in that respect," Miner said. "It has to do with how the child performs with the curriculum."

Stanford-Binet

He said the tests, such as Intelligence Scales, are standardized for students whose primary language is English, which includes most of the Fort Hall children attending District 25 schools. However, if English is a student's second language, supplemental, nonverbal tests may be used. Officials with the State Department of Education and District 25 representatives will meet this month to discuss the content of the state's letter, which was sent in response to federal regulations set up to monitor the percentage of special education students from various racial and ethnic backgrounds.

"Pocatello was found to have significant disproportionate representation of Native Americans identified as having learning disabilities," according to the letter, which also states that District 25 needs to do a better job of distinguishing between a "difference" and a true "disability."

"General education teachers need the knowledge and skills to use classroom strategies that benefit second language learners so that students are not inappropriately referred to special education," the letter continues.

It orders the district to review its policies, procedures and practices used to identify students for special education and revise them to correct the problem. The letter also instructs the district to divert nearly $368,000 from the special education budget and use the money to set up other tiers of intervention within the classroom to "further prevent inappropriate referrals to special education."

Melissa McGrath, Department of Education spokeswoman, said the department is willing to work with district officials to resolve the issue.

Legislative listening tour makes T.F. stop

By Blair Koch Times-News correspondent

Constituents have a lot to say about today's issues and it's the job of legislators to listen said Idaho House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston.

Rusche, along with House Assistant Minority Leader James Ruchti, D-Pocatello, and Senate Caucus Chair Elliot Werk, D-Boise, made a Legislative Listening Tour stop at Idaho Pizza Company in Twin Falls on Saturday night and got an earful.

"This is an opportunity for us to listen to our constituents about what is going in on in their lives," Rusche said. "Democrats want to be aggressive in our outreach to all the people in Idaho. What's going on all, not Democrats but the Independents and Republicans as well and we want to hear from them, too."

About 50 people, including several leaders with Twin Falls County Democrats, gathered to discuss the economy, job growth and retention, health care, closed party primaries and anything else that came to mind.

James Tidmarsh, president of the Twin Falls Community Center, said he came to the event to try and get lawmaker support for gay-rights issues.

"We need to share our experiences," Tidmarsh said. "We hear a lot from our members about how they can't rent an apartment or about harassment, or things going on at work. Having a law would help."

While the event was called a listening tour, the politicians did a lot of the talking. But those in attendance paid close attention, peppering in questions intermittently.

The state budget and expected cuts to education were discussed by Werk, who told the group the party is working hard to make sure, "The ideas of a guy like Tom Luna don't take hold."

Luna's on-again, off-again proposal to make some $62 million in cuts was heavily criticized and Werk said state Democratic lawmakers will do everything they can to make sure budget pullbacks don't affect the education of Idaho's children.

However, Twin Falls resident Linda Pittman asked how Democrats' budget input will have any effect in a Legislature controlled by the Republicans.

"How can you make sure, with your numbers?" Pittman asked.

All three lawmakers agreed that although the caucus is small, it is filled with smart, motivated and determined people eager to see the party succeed.

They said the caucus would also be working together in making sure any money coming into Idaho, from the newly passed $787 billion recovery act, will have accountability measures tied to it.

"I thing what is going on with the federal recovery money is political rhetoric," Rusche said. "But when rhetoric runs into reality, that money is going to be used. People are interested in accountability with that money ... and so are we."

HAILEY — Hailey's City Council members have repeatedly said they like Quigley Canyon, the 377-lot development that features a golf course and Nordic ski center.

As much as they like the concept, though, there are details they aren't so comfortable with.

On Thursday, the council reviewed conditions the planning commission had imposed on the project, asking the developer for changes that would satisfy the spirit, if not the letter, of those conditions.

Rather than prohibiting development in two areas deep in the canyon — Deadman's Gulch and above the pond — the council suggested the developer come back to them with a plan that clusters fewer estate lots at the mouths of those areas, leaving what they felt was plenty of space for wildlife. The developer has previously said estate lots are crucial to the financial success of the project.

They also considered asking that those estate lots be significantly larger, which would require an amendment to the city's comprehensive plan, but which the council members felt would be appropriate at the city's fringes.

The lots would have a halfacre footprint with no fences, which would help wildlife and avoid what City Councilman Fritz Haemmerle described as typical county "ranchettes."

A representative from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game spoke about the importance of the area to wildlife, and he was echoed by several speakers during the public hearing and later by City Councilman Don Keirn.

"That's one of the big amenities this valley has," Keirn said, describing other gullies and canyons where development had pushed wildlife out. "It's kind of the last hurrah." However, they recognized that the land is private property and will eventually be developed.

"I worry in 20, 25 years, at some point somebody's going to develop something, and it's not going to have a golf course, it's not going to have Nordic," said Hailey resident Kathryn Graves, advising the council to approve the design because of its public amenities.

The council has scheduled two additional meetings on this project, one on April 6 to discuss details of trails, connectivity, traffic mitigation, water, wastewater and annexation fees, and one on April 28 to review the results of a fiscal impact study. It will likely be late spring or early summer before the project comes before the council for a final vote.

Cassia school nurse provides backpacks at recess

By Damon Hunzeker Times-News writer

BURLEY — Kyle Hodges has figured out an economical and creative way to spend $150 — backpacks full of firstaid supplies for elementary schools.

Hodges, a Cassia County School District nurse, noticed that teachers, supervisors, and aides on playground duty don't always have immediate access to medical help.

Without at least minimal supplies on playgrounds, aides and teachers are forced to go back into the buildings and look for bandages or whatever may be necessary. Plus, backpacks are easily transportable.

She approached the local Kiwanis club, which, in conjunction with its subsidiary group, the Builders Club, raised $150 for 24 backpacks. The majority of the gloves and bandages were donated by local hospitals.

Junior-high students from the Builders Club in the area put all of the backpack supplies together Wednesday.

"For the most part, they're lay people out there on playground duty ... On playgrounds, by virtue of where they are, kids fall off of slides, bump heads, or fall down and scrape their knees. Every once in a while, you a have a kid with a head injury," Hodges said

Hodges delivered two backpacks to small schools in the area Thursday and will deliver the remaining 22 this week.

The project isn't intended to turn anyone into a doctor.

"If a student is bleeding profusely from the head, if one of them fell down and was unconscious, somebody would probably be calling 911," Hodges said.

Hodges used to work in the Twin Falls School District and started a similar project with fanny packs.

"They didn't work because we don't all have the same abdominal girth, and the backpacks are also easier for injured students to identify."

She intends to stick with the backpack plan.

"I'm hoping we can provide similar donations and refill the packs next year," Hodges said.

The remaining backpack kits will be distributed to various elementary schools in the county throughout the week.

Ogilvy wins Match Play in a rout over Casey

Geiff Ogilvy, watches his ball drop into the cup on the 27th hole to build his lead to six-up over Paul Casey in their 36 hole finals match at the World Golf Championships Accenture Match Play Championship Sunday, in Marana, Ariz.

By Doug Ferguson Associated Press writer

MARANA, Ariz. — Geoff Ogilvy won Match Accenture Championship for the second time in four years with a 4-and-3 victory over Paul Casey of England to stake his claim Sunday as the best in the world at match play.

In a relentless performance at Dove Mountain, the 31-year-old Australian did not trail over the final 62 holes of the tournament and did not have a bogey on his card over the last 57

He took the lead with a 6-foot birdie on the first hole of a 36-hole title match, and never gave Casey a chance. Ogilvy had a 3-up lead after the morning round, then shot 31 on the front nine to pull away.

A tournament that began with so much buzz over the return of Tiger Woods ended with a newfound appreciation for the match-play prowess of Ogilvy, who ran his career record to 18-3 in this fickle format.

"The best thing I can say is I enjoy the format," Ogilvy said. "Generally, when you enjoy something, you do it

Ogilvy won his third World Golf Championship — he will defend his title in two week at Doral in the CA Championship — the most of any player besides Woods, who has won 15 of these elite events.

And while Woods is a three-time winner of the Match Play Championship, Ogilvy ran his record in this tournament to 17-2. He lost in the championship match two years ago to Henrik Stenson, and lost in the first round last year to Justin Leonard. Casey, who brought a 16-3-1 record in match play into the final, faced a 3up deficit after the morning match and knew he had to play well to get back in the game. He birdied three of his next eight holes, and Ogilvy still stretched his lead to 5 up.

"I have no excuses right now," Casey

Ogilvy closed him out with a 6-foot birdie on the 15th hole. He won $1.4 million and moves up to No. 4 in the world ranking. He became the first player this year with multiple victories on the PGA Tour, having opened the year with a wire-to-wire win at Kapalua.

This was like a home game.

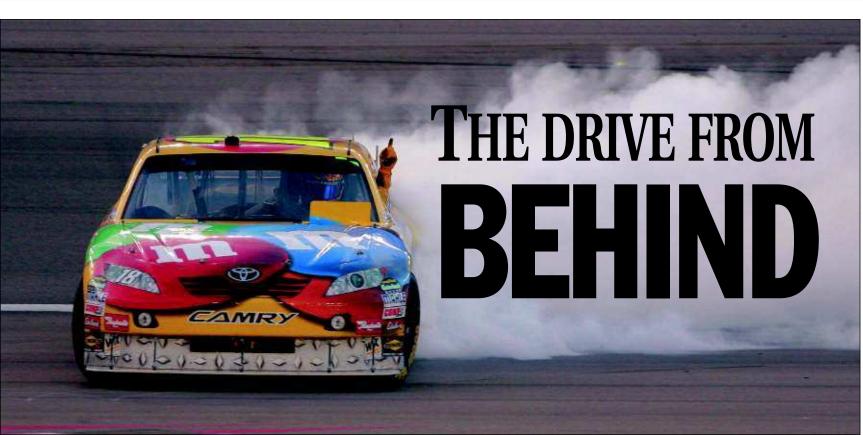

Ogilvy now has won three times in the Tucson area over the last five years, starting with a victory in the old Tucson Open in 2005, before the Australian was eligible for the 64-man field at the Match Play Championship.

Since then, Ogilvy has won a U.S. Open, three WGCs and the winnersonly Mercedes-Benz Championship.

Casey came into the final match having led 79 of the 80 holes he had played in his five previous 18-hole matches.

That amazing mark didn't last long. Ogilvy made birdie from 6 feet on the first hole, and when Casey failed to match him from 5 feet, it was the first time the Englishman had trailed all week. From there, it only got worse.

Kyle Busch does a burnout after winning the NASCAR Shelby 427 auto race at Las Vegas Motor Speedway in Las Vegas, Sunday.

Busch drives from the back to win on home track

By Jenna Fryer Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — Kyle Busch has had plenty of highlights in his short NASCAR career: setting a record as the youngest winner in series history, giving Toyota its first victory and returning Joe Gibbs Racing's flagship car to prominence. None of it compared to winning at Busch notched the biggest win of his young career Sunday by driving from the back of the field to win at Las Vegas Motor Speedway, his hometown track.

Although there are far more hallowed tracks in NASCAR, this 1.5mile oval in the desert was where "The Wild Thing" most wanted to win. He proved that with an elaborate victory celebration that ended with him on his knees, kissing the finish line.

"I tell you what, this is pretty cool," Busch said. "I didn't know exactly what it would mean, but coming to the checkered flag, there were knots in my stomach. It's bigger than winning the Daytona 500. I said it wasn't going to be, but it is."

Busch struggled in his first visit to Vegas, wrecking 11 laps into his Cup debut race and finishing 41st.

He bounced back to compete for the wins the next to seasons, but settled for second- and third-place finishes to then-teammate Jimmie Johnson. His best chance might have been last year, when he returned home leading the points for the first time in his career and won the pole. But he struggled with the handling on his JGR Toyota, and wound up 11th. This year, he wouldn't be denied. Busch came prepared at the start of the weekend, beating big brother Kurt for the pole to put brothers on the front row for the first time since 2000. But an engine change in his Toyota meant he had to drop to the back of the field at the start of the race, and Busch had to power his way through the field over 285 laps.

In a brief address to the crowd before the start of the race, he promised to get to the front.

"I just said, 'Hey, you know what? We're going to the back so get ready

2 NFL players missing

By Christine Armario Associated Press writer

CLEARWATER, Fla.— The Coast Guard was searching off Florida's Gulf Coast on Sunday for a fishing boat carrying NFL players Corey Smith and Marquis Cooper and two other men missing nearly a day in choppy seas.

Smith and Cooper were on a 21-foot vessel that left Clearwater Pass for a fishing trip Saturday morning and did not return as expected, the Coast Guard said Sunday. Crews used a helicopter and a 47-foot boat to search a 750-square mile area west of Clearwater Pass, but poor weather made the search difficult. Officials did not receive a distress signal from the missing craft.

Cooper owns the boat and he and Smith have been on fishing trips before, said Ron Del Duca, Smith's agent. The pair had been teammates on the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in 2004. Two others were aboard: Will Bleakley and Nick Schuyler, both former University of South Florida players.

Coast Guard Capt. Timothy M. Close said the weather early Saturday had been fair, but worsened toward the evening as a front still battering the area moved in. The National Weather

DT Colin Cole agrees to deal with Seahawks

The Seattle Seahawks and free agent defensive tackle Colin Cole have agreed to a five-year, $21.4 million contract that includes $6 million in guaranteed money, a person with direct knowledge of the deal told The Associated Press on

The person, who requested anonymity because the deal has not yet been announced, said Cole visited the Seahawks on Friday — the first day of NFL free agency — and the two sides agreed to terms shortly afterward.

NFL.com reported the deal earlier Sunday.

Cole, 28, played the last five seasons for the Green Bay Packers, making eight starts and earning significant playing time in Green Bay's defensive tackle rotation.

His departure is a setback for the Packers, who struggled on defense last season but could point to Cole as one of their most consistent play-

Cole is represented by Neil Cornrich of NC Sports, who also represents Packers offensive tackle Mark Tauscher. Tauscher, who is recovering from a season-ending knee injury in December, also is a free agent and is expected to be pursued by the Packers.

EAGLES MOVE ON WITHOUT DAWKINS

PHILADELPHIA Dawkins hadn't officially signed with the Denver Broncos when some Eagles fans began ordering No. 20 orange jerseys.

If there ever was a player who can get the local die-hards to turn on their beloved Iggles or simply root as hard for another team, it's Dawkins. His departure leaves a huge void in the Eagles' secondary and a bigger hole in the hearts of the Philadelphia faithful.

Angry fans flooded the phone lines of talk-radio stations when news broke Friday that Dawkins was in Denver. They grew madder over the weekend when it became official that the seven-time Pro Bowl safety had joined the Broncos. A caller to one station Sunday suggested fans should purchase Dawkins' new jersey and wear Broncos orange to Lincoln Financial Field when Denver visits Philadelphia this year.

"I'm the biggest Eagles fan, but I'm rooting for Denver to win the Super Bowl because I love that guy," the caller said.

Radio host Ike Reese, a linebacker and special teams standout with the Eagles from 1998-2004, criticized the organization for letting Dawkins become a free agent.

"This wasn't about Brian's playing ability or the Eagles wouldn't have even offered him a contract," Reese told listeners. "This was about money, the bottom line. The Eagles wanted him back on their conditions and they didn't think he would go out there and get a better offer."

Dawkins, who turns 36 in October, signed essentially a twoyear, $9 million deal with Denver. The Eagles reportedly offered him less guaranteed money over two seasons. Dawkins agonized over his decision to leave after 13 years in Philadelphia. The Broncos made him feel more welcomed.

GIANTS SIGN FORMER SEATTLE DT ROCKY BERNARD

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New York Giants gave new defensive coordinator Bill Sheridan a little more depth, signing former Seattle Seahawks defensive tackle Rocky Bernard as a free agent.

Bernard signed what is believed to be a four-year $16 million Saturday night, hours after the Giants signed former Atlanta Falcons linebacker Michael Boley.

"He's a veteran defensive tackle with skins on the wall," Giants general manager Jerry Reese said. "He plays hard, he's stout against the run and he has to be accounted for as a pass rusher."

Fred Robbins and Barry Cofield, the starting tackles last season, both have had arthroscopic surgery in the offseason.

BRONCOS COACH FINDS HIMSELF AT ODDS WITH CUTLER

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Trade talks involving Jay Cutler have strained the relationship between the Denver Broncos' franchise quarterback and new coach Josh McDaniels.

Before Matt Cassel was traded from New England to Kansas City on Saturday, Cutler's name came up in a proposed three-way deal with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers that would have brought Cassel to Denver and landed Cutler in South Florida.

McDaniels was the Patriots' offensive coordinator last season when he helped guide Cassel, a career backup since high school, to an 11-5 record following Tom Brady's season-ending knee injury on opening weekend.

Jazz beat Warriors for 8th straight win

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mehmet Okur scored 23 points, Deron Williams had a season-high 20 assists and the Utah Jazz won their eighth straight, beating the voluntarily short-handed Golden State Warriors 112-104 Sunday night.

Ronnie Brewer scored 21 points one night after getting a careerhigh 26 for the Jazz, who moved within two games of Northwest Division-leading Denver. Utah hasn't lost since receiving a 20point thrashing from the Warriors in Oakland three weeks ago.

Corey Maggette scored 27 points and rookie Anthony Randolph had a career-high 20 for the Warriors, who rested leading scorer Stephen Jackson as part of coach Don Nelson's unorthodox plan to give more playing time to his youngsters. Golden State also is resting Monta Ellis' surgically repaired left ankle for at least two weeks as a precaution.

ATLANTA — LeBron James scored 26 points, including the winning free throw with 1.6 seconds left, and the Cavaliers won for the seventh time in eight games.

The Hawks, after rallying from a 13-point deficit, squandered a fivepoint lead in the final 1:42. Delonte West hit a jumper, Mo Williams sank a 3 and James won it for the Cavs on their final possession. He drove from the top of the key and was fouled by Al Horford.

PISTONS 105, CELTICS 95

BOSTON — Richard Hamilton had 25 points, Tayshaun Prince scored 15 and each hit a 3-pointer in the final 80 seconds to help the Pistons beat the Celtics.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Andre McGee scored a season-high 16 points as No. 6 Louisville edged No. 8 Marquette 62-58 on Sunday to keep its hopes for a Big East title alive.

Terrence Williams added 14 points, eight rebounds and seven assists for the Cardinals (23-5, 14-2 Big East), who have won five straight and can clinch at least a share of the regular-season title by winning their final two games.

Wesley Matthews led the Golden Eagles (23-6, 12-4) with 19 points, but Marquette lost its second straight despite a game effort without star Dominic James, who broke his left foot in a loss to No. 2 Connecticut last week.

Service said seas were about 2 to 4 feet Saturday morning and increased to 3 to 5 feet in the afternoon. Late Saturday night, a small craft advisory was issued, when winds were around 20 knots and seas were up to 7 feet or more. There were no thunderstorms in the area.

Close said the men were traveling in a boat manufactured by Everglades. At least one of the men was an experienced boater, and relatives provided the Coast Guard with GPS coordinates from previous fishing expeditions.

Close said there was no communication with the men even before the weather started to pick up. They were expected home by early evening. No sign of them or the boat had been spotted by late Sunday afternoon.

Poor weather conditions could be dangerous for a boat the size of Cooper's.

"A 21-foot boat is a relatively small vessel to be 50 miles off shore in bad weather conditions, certainly the current weather conditions," Close said.

The Coast Guard search was mainly taking place by air, and was hampered by the poor weather, Close said. He said there were 14foot seas offshore and wind gusts of up to 30 mph. Water depth in the area where they are searching ranges from 20 to 50 feet. Close said there was no sign yet that the men sent a distress signal.

"That's not to say they didn't send one out," he said. "We didn't receive anything."

Smith, 29, had 30 tackles, including three sacks, and an interception in 12 games last season for the winless Lions. Smith, who is 6-foot-2, 250 pounds, also played for the San Francisco 49ers and played college ball at North Carolina State. He lives in Richmond, Va.

Del Duca called Smith one of the "good guys" of the league and was planning to start visiting teams as a free agent this week. He said he has spoken with Smith's family and is also in touch with Coast Guard officials.

Holcomb pilots USA-1 to 4-man bobsled world title

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Steven Holcomb took "The Night Train" to the top of the podium at the bobsled world championships, lifting the weight of a 50-year drought from the U.S. men's team.

Mount Van Hoevenberg and piloted the USA-1 sled painted flat black to the gold medal on Sunday. It was the first triumph for the United States in four-man at world championships

Holcomb was the class of the field on all four runs of the four-man competition at since Arthur Tyler won at St. Moritz, Switzerland, in 1959. "I can't believe, finally, after 50 years we got it done," Holcomb said. "We were definitely the team to beat today. It all came together." It was another breakthrough day for the team. Seven years ago, Todd Hays and Brian Shimer won medals in four-man at the Salt Lake City Games to break a 46-year Olympic medal drought. Sunday's triumph sent another wave of emotion through the ranks of the team. Brakeman Curtis Tomasevicz was so excited he raised his arms in triumph before crossing the finish line.

"Our eyes met, and he (Holcomb) said, 'Let's do it.' It was very simple," said Shimer, now the men's coach, his voice quavering. "I don't have a whole lot of words for it. The first thing I said when Holcomb crossed the line was, 'It's over! The drought is over!' I'm so happy and proud of Steve, and doing it here on American soil."

"I don't think I breathed for the last 20 minutes," said Bob Cuneo, chief engineer and designer of the Bo-Dyn bobsleds used by the U.S. team. "That's pretty wild."

Holcomb beat defending champion Andre Lange of Germany by nearly one second, an eye-popping margin in a sliding sport, finishing with a time of 3 minutes, 36.61 seconds. Janis Minins of Latvia took the bronze, one full second behind Holcomb.

Dodgers: Ramirez talks must now start from scratch

PHOENIX — The Los Angeles Dodgers have pulled their $45 million, two-year offer to Manny Ramirez, and owner Frank McCourt said Sunday that negotiations will have to start again from scratch. The Dodgers announced last week that Ramirez had declined the team's latest offer, a $25 million one-year contract for the 2009 season with a $20 million player option for 2010. McCourt said no talks with Ramirez's representatives were scheduled for Sundav. 'We're in what I call a transition phase," McCourt said before the Dodgers lost 3-2 to the Chicago White Sox in their first game at their new spring training facility at Camelback Ranch. "We had an almost fourmonth negotiation which terminated on Thursday. Now were in a quiet period. At some point we'll pick up negotiations, but with a fresh start.'

Rodriguez 'cooperative' in 2-hour interview

SARASOTA, Fla. — Alex Rodriguez has met with Major League Baseball officials, who sought to interview the New York Yankees slugger about his admission that he used performance-enhancing drugs from 2001-03 with Texas.

The commissioner's office released a statement saying Rodriguez was cooperative in a 2-hour interview Sunday with officials from MLB's Department of Investigations and Labor Relations Department. No further details were revealed, and the statement said the commissioner's office would have no additional comment at this

Nationals general manager Jim Bowden resigns

VIERA, Fla. — Jim Bowden's final move as Washington Nationals general manager was his own resignation. Bowden abruptly stepped down Sunday morning after four seasons, leaving under the cloud of a federal investigation into the skimming of signing bonuses given to Latin American prospects. He has maintained his innocence in the matter, but said Sunday, "I've become a distraction."

"It's an emotional decision. It saddens me. But I feel it's in the best interest of two of the things I love the most, and that's the Washington Nationals and baseball," Bowden added.

Seated at a table with Nationals president

Stan Kasten before a small contingent of reporters and team officials, Bowden read from a prepared statement, sometimes deviating from the script as he struggled to contain his emotions. No replacement was immediately

Let's make sure we know what's headed our way ecember 2016: You've suffered a medical emergency and you're in an ambulance headed for St. Luke's Magic Valley hospital on Twin Falls' northwest end. Unfortunately for you, it's 3 o'clock in the afternoon and nearby Canyon Ridge High School is sending students home for the day.

Just down the street, Wal-Mart is bustling with holiday shoppers, and at nearby College of Southern Idaho students who just got out of classes at the health sciences building are in their vehicles and trying to turn on to Washington Street North.

Oh, and the new U.S. 93/30 Bypass — constructed with the help of federal economic stimulus money that came available back in 2009 – opened recently, carrying a steady stream of trucks from Nevada down Pole Line Road toward the Perrine Bridge.

Our view: If the city of Twin Falls needs more data to accurately predict traffic loads along the northwest corridor, it should get it.

Nightmare scenario? Maybe, since we're not certain that public officials really have a handle on how much traffic is headed for Twin Falls' northwest corridor.

The city insists it has ample traffic studies and projections to make an accurate prediction, but Times-News reporter Josh Palmer couldn't find many specifics when he looked into the subject last month.

He found that the city has never done a comprehensive study of how all those new buildings will affect arterials in northwest Twin Falls, and only two of the big projects had any traffic study at all.

Independent studies were not required for most projects before the City Council and Planning and Zoning Commission approved them, Palmer learned. Only Wal-Mart and St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center were required to provide traffic counts to the city.

And even when planning commissioners questioned the accuracy of traffic estimates provided by Wal-Mart, the project was approved by the City Council without an independent study.

In a reader commentary published in the Times-News on Sunday, Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said the reporting was off-base.

"The city, the state of Idaho, Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., School District 411, North Haven Development, St Luke's Magic Valley Regional Center, the College of Southern Idaho and the North Point Ranch Homeowners Association have for years worked proactively to make sure a safe and orderly flow of traffic ensues as the area develops," he wrote. "The notion as implied in the story — that tens of millions of dollars' worth of road construction could be approved without numerous credible traffic studies is implausible."

Yet even if Courtney is right, the 93/30 Bypass probably skews the equation. The project has been off the Idaho Transportation Department's radar for the past few years, but it may actually happen in the foreseeable future because it's considered to be "shovel-ready" and thus a good candidate for federal stimulus money.

We don't know how many additional vehicles the 93/30 Bypass would bring to Pole Line Road, but we do know that traffic which now transits Twin Falls south to north (or north to south) via Blue Lakes Boulevard North, Washington Street and Eastland Drive is heavy and growing.

Our point is simply this: Before the city approves another major construction project along Pole Line Road West or Washington Street North, let's make sure traffic predictions are unassailable — even if that means spending the money to gather more data.

Because if those numbers aren't right, your ambulance ride could be a long one.

Forget Detroit; jump-start wind and solar energy

MIKE LUCKONICH ATLANTA TOWAT-CONTITUTEN &

eading the news that General Motors and Chrysler are now lining up for another $20 billion or so in government aid — on top of the billions they've already received or requested leaves me with the sick feeling that we are subsidizing the losers and for only one reason: because they claim that their funerals would cost more than keeping them on life support. Sorry, friends, but this is not the American way. Bailing out the losers is not how we got rich as a country, and it is not how we'll get out of this crisis.

THOMAS FRIEDMAN

GM has become a giant wealth-destruction machine and it is time that it and Chrysler were put into bankruptcy so they can truly start over under new management with new labor agreements and new visions. When it comes to helping companies, precious public money should focus on startups, not bailouts.

You want to spend $20 billion of taxpayer money creating jobs? Fine. Call up the top 20 venture capital firms in America, which are short of cash today because their partners are tapped out, and make them this offer: The U.S. Treasury will give you each up to $1 billion to fund the best venture capital ideas that have come your way. If they go bust, we all lose. If any of them turns out to be the next Microsoft or Intel, taxpayers will give you 20 percent of the investors' upside and keep 80 percent for themselves.

If we are going to be spending billions of taxpayer dollars, it can't only be on office-decorating bankers, over-leveraged home speculators and auto executives who year after year spent more energy resisting changes and lobbying Washington than leading change and beating Toyota.

I've been traveling all across the country on a book tour, and every evening I return to my hotel with my pockets full of business cards from inventors in clean energy. Our country is still bursting with innovators looking for capital. So, let's make sure all the losers clamoring for help don't drown out the potential winners who could lift us out of this. Some of our best companies, such as Intel, were started in recessions, when necessity makes innovators even more inventive and risk-takers even more dar-

Yes, we have to shore up the banking system, which underpins everything; and finding a fair way to prevent hardworking people, who played by the rules, from losing their homes to foreclosure is both right and essential for stability. But beyond that, let's think, talk and plan in more aspirational ways. We're down, but we're not out. As we invest taxpaver money. let's do it with an eye to starting a new generation of biotech, info-tech, nanotech and clean-tech companies, with real innovators, real 21st-century jobs and poten-solar-thermal projects at tially real profits for taxpayers. Our motto should be, "Startups, not bailouts: Nurture the next Google, don't nurse the old GMs."

To be fair, the stimulus package that the Obama team and the Democrats in Congress recently passed goes some way toward doing iust that. Hat's off for that. Now let's do more.

The renewable-energy business was almost dead in this country. Most new projects stopped last fall because they depended for their financing on selling their renewable energy tax credits to Wall Street firms. As those Wall Street firms went bust or suffered steep losses, they had no need for tax credits because they had no profits to offset. The stimulus package created a mechanism for renewable energy innovators to bypass Wall Street and monetize their tax credits directly through the U.S. Treasury, for any project that starts between now and the end of 2010.

The wind and solar industries in America "were dead in the fourth quarter," said John Woolard, chief executive of BrightSource Energy, which builds and operates cutting-edge solar-thermal plants in the Mojave Desert. Almost five gigawatts of new various stages of permitting were being held up because of a lack of financing.

"All of these projects will now go ahead," said Woolard. "You are talking about thousands of jobs ... We really got something right in this legislation.

These jobs will be in engineering, constructing and operating huge solar systems and wind farms and manufacturing new photovoltaics. Together they will drive innovation in all these areas — and move wind and solar technology down the costvolume learning curve so they can compete against fossil fuels and become export industries at the "ChinIndia price," that is the price at which they can scale in China and India.

That is how taxpayer money should be used to stimulate: limited financing, for a limited time, targeted on an industry bristling with new technology startups that, with a little push from Uncle Sam, won't just survive this crisis but help us thrive when it is over. We need, and the world needs, an America that is thriving not just surviving.

Gooding levy vote wasn't advertised enough

To Gooding County commissioners, school district and whomever else:

The reason the supplemental levies passed, for one reason, is hardly any one knew when to vote.

I kept looking for a notice as to when I could vote. I am informed that on the third or fourth page of the Times-News was a small paragraph as to when the voting was to happen. I was informed that this is the way this kind of voting is published. There were a few places to vote in Gooding, nowhere else evidently convenient to the rest of Gooding County.

I read the paper every day and this somehow I missed. I am angry because we are on a fixed income, we do not want to support these levies. Why can't Gooding County wait and see what help they will get from the government? This is a lot of money that will extend our property taxes for a long time.

Shame on all of you; this is a pretty sleazy way of getting what you want, but it is not the American way!

On another note: to all politicians, what about "there is no more money" don't you understand! We as the public do not have "deep pockets"; when there is no more money, there is no one who will bail us out. When you don't get money from taxes, etc., don't try to disguise your reach into our now-depleted pockets and hope for anything but lint. If there is no more money, do as the rest of us do, go on a budget and cut expenses. Quit the pork and earmarks, cut out the crap that makes chief executive officers rich, and do a line-by-line veto and cut out the crooks that infest the government on a local and national level.

If politicians are so hooked on getting our country back to some degree of normal, why can't they put aside their differences and act together without being Republicans and Democrats and be Americans committed to putting this country on track!

U.S. military official: Iran has fissile materials for bomb

By Steven R. Hurst Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The top U.S. military official said Sunday that Iran has sufficient fissile material for a nuclear weapon, declaring it would be a "very, very bad outcome" should Tehran move forward with a bomb.

Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, offered the assessment when questioned in a broadcast interview about a recent report by the U.N. nuclear watchdog on the state of Iran's uranium enrichment program, which can create nuclear fuel and may be sufficiently advanced to produce the core of warheads.

Mullen was asked if Iran now had enough fissile material to make a bomb. He responded, "We think they do, quite frankly. And Iran having a nuclear weapon I've believed for a long time is a very, very bad outcome for the region and for the world."

State Department spokesman Robert A. Wood said Sunday that it was not possible say how much fissile material Iran has accumuernment" on how far Iran spoke to reporters traveling has gone, Wood said. He added that while he was not suggesting Mullen was incorrect, "We just don't know" exactly how much fissile material Iran now holds.

"We are concerned they are getting close" to having enough to build a nuclear weapon, he added. Wood with Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton in Egypt.

The International Atomic Energy Agency said Iran has processed 2,222 pounds of low-enriched uranium. But the report left unclear whether Iran is now capable, even if it wanted, of further processing that material into a sufficient quantity of highly enriched uranium to arm one weapon.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates, who like Mullen appeared on the Sunday talk shows, did not go as far as Mullen. The Iranians, Gates said, are "not close to a weapon at this point and so there is some time" for continued diplomatic efforts.

And the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Susan Rice, recently told National Public Radio that the IAEA report "confirms what we all had feared and anticipated, is that remains in pursuit of its nuclear program.'

Iran, now subjected to various penalties by the U.N., the U.S. and others over its nuclear program, denies it wants to build a bomb. It asserts its program is intended to provide the country with the homegrown ability to generate electricity from nuclear reactors.

So far, the U.S. has not relented in its claims that Iran has ambitions to join the club of nuclear-armed nations. Mullen seemed to restate that position in his remarks on CNN's "State of the Union." He was not asked to elaborate.

Some good news: Fewer kids have high lead levels

By Lindsey Tanner Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — In a stunning improvement in children's health, far fewer kids have high lead levels than 20 years ago, new government research reports — a testament to aggressive efforts to get lead out of paint, water

Lead can interfere with the developing nervous system and cause permanent problems with learning, memory and behavior. Children in poor neighborhoods have generally been more at risk because they tend to live in older housing and in industrial areas.

Federal researchers found that just 1.4 percent of voung children had elevated lead levels in their blood in 2004, the latest data available. That compares with almost 9 percent in 1988.

"It has been a remarkable decline," said study coauthor Mary Jean Brown of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "It's a public health success story."

The 84 percent drop extends a trend that began in the 1970s when efforts began to remove lead from gasoline. The researchers credited continuing steps to reduce children's exposure to lead in old house paint, soil, water and other sources.

The study was being released today in the March edition of the journal Pediatrics. It is based on nearly 5,000 children, ages 1 to 5, who were part of a periodic government health sur-

The government considers levels of at least 10 micrograms of lead per deciliter of blood to be elevated, although research has shown that levels less than that can still cause problems including attention and reading difficulties. There is no known "safe" level, the study authors noted.

Caroline Cox, research director of the Center for Environmental Health, a California-based advocacy group, noted that lead poisoning "is entirely preventa-

Rare snow blankets South as East braces for storm

By Jay Reeves Associated Press writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — A potent March snowstorm blanketed much of Alabama with up to 4 inches of snow Sunday, covering Civil War statues and forcing the cancellation of hundreds of church services.

The storm headed toward the Northeast and threatened to drop up to a foot of snow in the Philadelphia area, 13 inches in New York and 15 inches across southern New England late Sunday.

In Georgia, the snowfall made roads treacherous and delayed flights, while in Alabama, more than 210 churches in the central part of the Bible Belt state had to cancel morning services.

Vonda Braswell was throwing snowballs in her front yard instead of putting on her Sunday best. "I think you can worship in this it's so rare," she said.

Up to 7 inches of snow was expected through this morning in areas of Maryland, northern Virginia and Washington, D.C., where Mayor Adrian Fenty declared a snow emergency.

In New York, Mayor Bloomberg announced more than 1.300 sanitation workers would spread salt and plow city streets to prepare for the snowfall.

"It's the first of March, which as you know is the month that we say comes in like a lion and out like a lamb," he said. "It's pretty clear that the lions are getting ready to roar."

As Wayne Letson drove Journal-Constitution.

through Alabama toward Florida on Sunday, the Michigan resident fretted about sharing the roads with Southerners unaccustomed to winter weather. The last time it snowed in Alabama was more than a year ago, in January 2008.

"This is nothing to me, but I'm worried about the other people who think they know what they're doing,' said Letson, filling up his car with gas south Birmingham.

Despite above-freezing temperatures in downtown Atlanta, a heavy curtain of snow fell on cars and caused traffic accidents on slushy streets. The unusual weather prompted Jessi Prahl and Max DiPace to take their dog, Cooper, on a walk through snow-covered Piedmont Park in Atlanta.

"You know Southerners, we all freak out when it snows," said Prahl,

Some flights were canceled at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport, where the average delay was nearly two hours, according to a Federal Aviation Administration Web site.

AirTran Airways spokesman Tad Hutcheson said flights out of Atlanta into the Northeast might also be canceled Sunday night.

"I expect the Northeast will be hit pretty hard tonight so our expectations is that people flying into Washington, D.C., and Boston will need to call or check our Web site for possible cancellations," Hutcheson told The Atlanta

Rose Barron of Candler Park walks her dogs Sapphire, left, and Link, right, through the neighborhood during a snowy Sunday, in Atlanta. A powerful March snowstorm blanketed much of Alabama and then marched across Georgia on Sunday, forcing some flight cancellations in Atlanta as the East Coast braced for a potential pummeling amid winter storm warnings.

Labor: Issues and Options for Agriculture Featuring: Craig Regelbrugge

Tuesday • March 10th • 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Red Lion Inn • Twin Falls

SNAKE RIVER FARMERS ASSOCIATION will host a special meeting featuring Craig Regelbrugge who is the national co-chairman of the Agriculture Coalition for Immigration Reform (ACIR) and has played an active role on behalf of agricultural employers in the quest for a legal and stable agricultural workforce. The issue is especially timely as a new Administration and a new Congress are called upon to address immigration reform as an urgent and important national interest. Agricultural employers are encouraged to attend.

Regelbrugge will address the realities farmers, nurserymen and dairymen face with respect to the availability of an adequate legal work force. He will review the current legislative climate, the Bush administration H-2A regulations, possible new developments on the immigration enforcement front, and thoughts on what it will take for the agricultural sector to secure a lasting labor

Marilyn Adelaide Bengtson Sederlund

FREDERIC, Wisc. Marilyn Adelaide Bengtson Sederlund, 61, of Frederic, Wisc., and formerly of Shoshone, Idaho, went home to be with our Heavenly Father on Feb. 26, 2009 after a courageous battle against cancer.

Marilyn was born to Alden and Naomi Bengtson on July 1, 1947, in Milltown, Wisc., where she grew up with a houseful of brothers and sisters, who were her very best friends. Marilyn graduated from Milltown High School in 1965, and graduated from the Polk County Teachers College. Later in her life, she continued her education by graduating from the College of Southern Idaho's Paralegal Program.

Marilyn married Gary Sederlund on Jan. 21, 1967 and moved to Lewis, Wisc. After a couple years of marriage they moved and raised two of their three children on their farm east of Lewis below Rocky Ridge Hill, until a fire destroyed their barn in 1981. The farm was a place of many happy memories, including roast beef dinners on Sundays, plowing fields, milking cows, raising pets, including "pet rocks," and lots of laughter with friends and family. After the fire, the journey began, and the Sederlunds moved to southern Idaho where their third child Mari was born in 1982. Marilyn taught kindergarten at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Jerome, and then after receiving her second degree she worked at the Twin Falls Police Department and later for Lisa Barini-Garcia, attorney at law. She loved her work in the legal field. After returning to Wisconsin in 1999, Marilyn went to work as the city clerk for the Village of Frederic, where she was well liked and very good at her job. Marilyn served on the Frederic School Board and Clam Falls Lutheran Church's Board Education because she firmly believed that children are our future and wanted to mentor in any way she could.

Idaho was a special place for Marilyn. She loved her home on the Little Wood River and also camping with her family in the mountains above Fairfield. A good campfire surrounded by her family, good conversation, and campfire coffee were at the top of her list. After returning to Wisconsin, her kitchen table replaced her Idaho campfire, and that was the gathering place for the open door to friends and family. The world's problems have been solved around that table. It never mattered if the "to do" list was long, if company stopped by, they were the number one priority.

Marilyn is survived by her husband Gary; daughter Jeri (Brian) Ahrens of Jerome, Idaho, son Jon of Frederic, and daughter Mari (Rob) Riese of Lake Havasu City, Ariz. And also by her grandchildren, who were the light of her life, Jonathon, Matthew, Christina (Nina), and Scout. Also surviving are her brothers and sisters, Kathie (Wayne) Boniface, Denise (Kevin) Robbins, Bengtson-Kim (Dan) Minnick, Albert (Sue) Bengtson, Joel (Elizabeth) Bengtson, and David (Sue) Bengtson. Marilyn is preceded in death by her parents, and sister, Joyce Dau.

Marilyn was the epitome of all that was good. Her patience, kindness, faith, and love for her neighbor, made her an example for all people to follow. The sparkle in her brown eyes will be missed. Marilyn never looked at death as a sad thing, therefore, the Celebration of Marilyn's life will be held at Pilgrim Lutheran Church, Frederic, Wisc., on Friday, March 6, at 2 p.m., with Rev. Gary Rokenbrodt officiating. In honor of Marilyn's life, her children ask that everyone do a random act of kindness in honor of her, because that is how she lived her life everyday. She felt this is what could make this world a better place. The family would like to thank everyone for all their help and support during Mom's illness. Words can't express how grateful we are to all of you. God Bless You.

Fossil footprints reflect modern humans'

By Thomas H. Maugh II Los Angeles Times

Modern humans emerged from Africa about 50,000 years ago, but modern human feet appeared much earlier — at least 1.5 million years ago, according to fossilized footprints found on the banks of a river near Ileret, Kenya.

The several sets of footprints indicate that the hominids who walked along the river shore had a height, weight and gait similar to that of modern humans, a team reported Friday in the journal Science.

More important, they had a pronounced arch, their big toe was parallel to their other toes and all the toes were shorter than those of apes — structural traits characteristic of modern humans and ones that allowed them to run faster while chasing prey.

The footprints represent the earliest evidence of a modern humanlike foot anatomy, said anthropologist John. W. K. Harris of Rutgers, the State University of New Iersey, a co-author.

Earlier footprints found in Laetoli, Tanzania, and dating from about 3.6 million years ago show a lesspronounced arch and a longer big toe splayed off to one side like those of apes, an adaptation useful for grasping tree limbs but not for running. That hominid, probably Australopithecus afarensis, also walked upright, but more slowly.

The Ileret footprints were most likely made by "Homo ergaster," more commonly known as an early form of Homo erectus and a direct ancestor of modern humans. It was the first hominid to have the longer legs and shorter arms of modern Homo sapiens.

Such footprints are extremely rare because they require a precise set of conditions: The river must flood and cover them with sand before they can be washed away or obliterated by animals, Harris said.

Suggestive dance is workout alternative

By Melissa Davlin Times-News writer

Magic Valley, it's time to spice up your workout.

California transplant Benita Conway has brought Latin and burlesque dancing classes to Body IQ and Shimmy Shakti in Twin Falls. The classes use different moves to reach the same goal: provide a sexy workout alternative for women.

Dance studios in larger cities, including Portland, Ore., San Francisco, Seattle and New York, market burlesque classes as an exercise alternative and have received attention from national media outlets like Fox News. Even Boise has a few burlesque classes.

Now it's Twin Falls' turn.

Latin Burn

Burn combines dances from an array of ⊿ Central and South American cultures. Fast-paced flamenco melds with sensual bachata. A tribal-looking Afro-Cuban dance turns into handclapping merengue. Lively Latin music pumps from the speakers while students cha-cha their way to health.

Conway said the class is wildly popular in Los Angeles, where she first learned it. Most of the students were women, she said; when men came, they rarely lasted more than one class.

The class isn't about performing, although many of her former students in California felt confident enough to hit Latin dance clubs after a few classes. Instead, the class is designed to get the heart pumping and the feet moving while introducing students to Latin dance, Conway

"So what if you didn't get a step?" Conway said. "You'll get it the next time."

Burlesque

on't know burlesque? Think Bettie Page or Gypsy Rose, sashaying on stage with feather boas and little else.

As it's taught in Los Angeles, burlesque is meant to celebrate sexuality and femininity, Conway said. She's hoping to bring the same vibe to southern Idaho.

A new fitness option for Magic Valley: Use burlesque dance moves as your exercise routine. At Shimmy Shakti yoga studio in downtown Twin Falls, instructor Benita Conway demonstrates a core-strengthening move that students learn in her new dance classes at two Twin Falls studios.

GET THE BLOOD PUMPING

Initially, Benita Conway offered classes exclusively through Shimmy Shakti. After disappointing class sizes, she arranged to offer classes at Body IQ, which are scheduled to start this week.

she said. "There's no one to criticize. Everyone is just having fun." Like with Latin Burn, the point isn't to leave ready to perform, she said. It's about moving your body, and feeling sexy while doing it. Conway admits the idea might be off-putting in conservative Twin Falls. Few people showed up to her first few classes. "I think they may think it's Dance instructor Benita Conway says burlesque dancing is about moving slowly and deliberately, and the abs get the benefit. She learned her moves from professional burlesque dancers in Los Angeles.

REPORTER'S

NOTEBOOK A shy girl tries

sexy dancing

Thile I reported this article, dance instructor Benita Conway walked me through a burlesque dance routine so I could get a taste of the fun. Between the silk gloves and the feather boa, I thought I'd feel like a caricature of a sexy woman. Even though I was clumsy with some of the moves, I loved it. I walked out of the studio feeling pretty good about my mini-workout — and my body.

This from a girl who doesn't even like wearing a swimsuit in front of other people. When I got home that night, the first thing I did was shut the blinds, don high heels and try out more moves in front of a mirror. Yowza! Not only did my abs and legs get a killer workout, but I looked dang good. If I can feel this confident with burlesque, almost anyone can.

I'm still not quite ready to prance around onstage in a garter belt and corset, but I've incorporated the sexy bicycle kicks and slow squats into my everyday workout.

In the privacy of my own home, of course.

Gym gives lifters more than a pound of flesh

By Kathleen Hom The Washington Post

If you've lost interest in lifting dumbbells and strapping on weights, consider what a London fitness center is doing to liven up workouts. Recently, Gymbox added human weights, which allow exercisers to pump, well, flesh instead of iron.

The gym's five human weights, ranging from 66 to 342 pounds, can be used as free weights or on specially adapted weightlifting equipment. Gymbox promotes the concept as a visualization tool that lets weightlifters compare what they're lifting to an everyday object. Plus, the human weights can shout out encouragement to lift exercisers' spirits.

Although lifting live weights can make different demands on exercisers than lifting dead weights, American Council on Exercise spokesman Francisco Semiao says, "it's definitely exposing you to injury." Weightlifters can drop dumbbells that get too heavy — but you shouldn't necessarily do that to a human weight, he explains. Plus, lifting people can be a bit like lifting a lopsided barbell, because a person's body weight is distributed unevenly. What's more, while you can lighten a barbell by taking off a single plate, it's not as easy to adjust a living weight.

IDAHO HOME HEALTH & HOSPICE

Idaho Home Health & Hospice knows that when it comes to providing for loved ones, trust, dependability and quality are key.

They began providing home care services over 30 years ago and were the first home health agency in Twin Falls.

Idaho Home Health & Hospice's longevity, experience, and great medical resources have given them the opportunity to maintain a unique palliative care home called The Caring Place, since 2004. The Caring Place is a 5-bed residence available to anyone with a terminal illness and a life expectancy of one year or less for whom care at home is not an option. The goal of palliative care is to provide what terminally ill patients need: emotional and spiritual support, freedom from pain and the ability to control the direction of their own care as much as possible. The Caring Place is designed to keep family members connected to one another emotionally and physically. It has a large living room, kitchen, dining space, a sunroom, a picnic area, an outdoor smoking area, and a guest

The Caring Place located at 870 Eastland Drive will host an open house Saturday March 28, 2009 from 1 to 4 pm. For information, call 734-4061.

The topic: Stroke

On-the-job stress may raise stroke risks

THE QUESTION

Might stress at work affect a person's chances of having a stroke?

THIS STUDY

It analyzed data on 6,553 workers who had never had a heart attack or a stroke and who averaged about 50 years old. In an 11-year period, 147 of them had a stroke. Men who reported having high-stress jobs — defined as jobs that place great demands on workers but allow them little control — were more than twice as likely to have had a stroke as were men with low-stress jobs (low demands and high control). No link was found between occupational stress and stroke among women workers. WHO MAY BE AFFECTED?

Working men. Each year, more than 700,000 people in the U.S. have a stroke, the third leading cause of death and the leading cause of serious long-term disability in the country.

CAVEATS

Data on job stress came from the workers' evaluations of their jobs.

Preventing lymphedema after breast cancer

By Lauran Neergaard AP medical writer

WASHINGTON — Hospitals in about a dozen states are testing whether some simple steps, such as arm-strengthening exercises, could reduce the risk of one of breast cancer's troubling legacies — the painful and sometimes severe arm swelling called lymphedema.

Lymphedema has long been a neglected side effect of cancer surgery and radiation: Many women say they never were warned, even though spotting this problem early improves outcomes.

And while less invasive surgical techniques mean fewer breast cancer patients today than just a few years ago should face lymphedema, it's a lingering threat for tens of thousands of survivors because it can strike two decades after their tumor was treated.

"I have ladies tell me the lymphedema is much worse than their cancer because the cancer's cured," says Dr. Electra Paskett, an epidemiologist at Ohio State University who is leading the first-of-itskind research into possible protective steps.

Among them: Wearing elastic sleeves to counter temporary swelling during things like airplane flight or heavy lifting, and doing special exercises with light weights designed to help keep open the lymph channels that allow fluid to drain through the body.

When lymph nodes under a breast cancer patient's arm are removed or damaged by biopsy, surgery or radiation, lymph fluid can build up and cause anything from mild swelling to a ballooning of the arm.

Lymphedema isn't just a legacy of breast cancer treatment. The leg can swell if groin nodes are damaged from other cancers, including gynecologic cancer. Melanoma treatment left former presidential candidate John McCain with facial swelling. Occasionally, rare diseases can trigger a different form of lymphedema.

But lymphedema among breast cancer survivors may be most common. It's been estimated to affect between 20 percent and 30 percent of patients who have 10 or more under-the-arm nodes examined, called an "axillary lymph node dissection."

Early care is key, as Anne Holman of Washington, D.C., can attest. In 2006, doctors found cancer in eight of 18 lymph nodes. She was undergoing chemotherapy to shrink her tumor before an eventual mastectomy when one day her arm turned red and itchy. Come in right away, said Minna Manalo, a nurse practi-Georgetown tioner at University Hospital's breast cancer unit.

Along with a skin inflammation, Manalo diagnosed lymphedema — Holman's arm was just starting to swell. Daily for two weeks, she underwent what's called complete decongestive therapy, where a machine massaged fluid from her arm and it then was tightly bandaged to counter swelling. Once her arm shrank, Holman was prescribed a lifelong therapy: A tight elastic sleeve and fingerless glove to wear regularly, especially during her job as an international flight attendant, plus arm exercises to help push out returning fluid.

the first place. Women recovering from a large node removal are randomly assigned to either a regimen including personalized arm exercises, or just lymphedema education.

Results aren't due until 2012. Meanwhile, cancer groups

 Obesity and arm injuries are additional risk factors. So watch your weight; avoid injections in the affected arm; clean cuts and seek care for infections promptly; wear gardening gloves and oven mitts; and avoid temperature extremes, such as hot tubs.

Question:

What are the current recommendations regarding mammogram screening?

Answer:

Unfortunately, the #1 risk factor for breast cancer is simply getting older. As a result, mammogram screening recommendations change as a woman ages and are also dependent on other co existing risk factors. In general the American Cancer Society recommends an annual clinical breast exam and mammogram beginning at age 40 for low and average risk women. High risk patients should initiate screening earlier and may benefit from additional testing with an MRI. Your doctor can determine your risk at the time of your annual well-woman exam.

Headache Re

If you have tried everything, but you have not tried chiropractic care, headache relief may be a phone call away. The purpose of chiropractic care is to improve the alignment and function of the neck; reducing irritation to the nerves and blood vessels that may play a role in headaches.

Here's what our patients have to say:

"I suffered with headaches so badly I was unable to properly do my job. I work as an accountant and imagine trying to do calculations with headaches all the time. A co worker told me about Dr. Fox. I was amazed at the quality of care. Within two weeks my headaches reduced and I was back to feeling hope. I have not had a headache for 3 months -- work and home life is fantastic." Kevin

" I had no idea chiropractic was so technical and scientific till I went to Dr. Fox. He analyzed my spine and nerve systems and amazingly I was out of balance. The headaches I had for over 12 years are gone. I have not found anything work as well as chiropractic care done in a gentle specific approach. I would recommend Fox Chiropractic to anyone. They really care." Jimmy

Compatible relationships are built on respect, not argument

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a wonderful man I'll call "George for the past 14 months. We have never had an argument or even a disagreement. We both have good jobs, like doing the same things, and we see each other every weekend. Our co-workers and family members have commented that we seem remarkably happy as a

Don't get me wrong. George and know what we like and dislike in life. We talk about things, have serious discussions and deal with whatever comes our way. But for some reason, my sister insists that by now my boyfriend and I should have had at least one good argument. She thinks it's weird that we haven't, and says we are "trying too hard" to make each other happy. She says George and I are ignoring things that could cause unhappiness.

My sister is younger, married, works full-time and has three kids. I think she may be secretly jealous of our relationship. So I ask you, Abby, DO all couples have to argue or have disagreements?

— "MISS BLISS" IN N.Y.C.

DEAR "MISS BLISS": No, they do not. Some couples have a higher compatibility quotient than others. Intelligent, mature people do not necessarily agree on everything. However, they respect each other's right to disagree without it degenerating into an argument.

It appears that you and George

Dear

DEAR ABBY: Our 10-year-old son, "Harry," is a sore loser. If we play a sport or a board game with him, he ends up in tears if he doesn't win. Sometimes he will cheat if he thinks it will help him win. He even becomes upset when his favorite NHL hockey team loses a game.

We have told Harry repeatedly that games are supposed to be fun, but he seems unable to grasp the concept. We do not know what else to do. Can you help?

HAVING NO FUN IN CANADA

DEAR HAVING NO FUN: Learning to handle and channel frustration is part of growing up. Nobody likes to lose, yet winning and losing are a part of every competition. If you catch Harry cheating, there should be a penalty, and you should let him know you are disappointed in him.

Continue to impress upon your son that the most important aspect of sportsmanship (or gamesmanship) is learning not only to be a gracious winner but also to be gracious in defeat. Tiger Woods is a glowing example of sportsmanship at its best. A cheat may win a game, but when the deed is discovered, no one respects the person. It's sad to say, but we have seen examples of that, too, in professional sports in recent years.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that men, no matter their ages, are jerks? I am a single mom and have been divorced for two years. I date occasionally, and when I do, I try to date good guys who could possibly become more.

Abby, I never get a second date! I am sweet and can carry on a conversation. I go out with them or cook for them. I just don't understand why they never give me a second chance.

—HURT

IN ROSWELL, N.M.

DEAR HURT: Not all men are 'jerks." Because you are consistently getting the same reaction from every man you date, it is time to seriously consider what you might be doing to chase them away. A good place to start would be by having a frank talk with some of your male relatives and/or platonic friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug, 22): Don't dawdle, doodle or drift from the subject. Those with whom you interact are looking for precise responses or may have a deadline in mind. Don't disappoint someone who hopes for a quick turnaround.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Explain yourself and reign supreme. You might set the bar very high, but once you explain the reasoning behind any specific request others will be happy to comply. You are particularly adept with details.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Remain focused on the most significant goals. You could be briefly discouraged by the need to comply with rules, regulations or conventional attitudes that are at odds with your long term objectives.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take your time and be thorough. The sharpest tack always pins down a situation neatly and securely. You are certainly smart enough to know that slipshod work won't earn you any Brownie points.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't be weighed down by fear even though you might have to speak in public. You will be left behind if you can't keep up with the crowd. Keep your ears open to gain some useful knowledge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Bypass unimportant obstacles and ignore minor errors. You don't need to be a bully about perfection. You will be just as happy if you turn a blind eye to insignificant mistakes and petty inconveniences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Where love is concerned, you could be subconsciously in search. of the flavor of the month. They say that variety is the spice of life, so you may be happiest if you stick to a "just friends" situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Embrace responsibility as though it is your best friend. Don't give anyone reason to find fault with your work or actions. You can avoid a misunderstanding by listening carefully to an explanation or presentation.

"A good decision is based on knowledge and not on numbers." — Plato

Today's deal has two lessons. The first is that it is often right to lead trumps when you suspect dummy will be short in declarer's first or second suit. But if partner may be overruffing dummy, the trump lead might be countereffective. The second lesson? I'll leave that till you have looked at the

This deal was from my early bridge-playing days, but nearly 40 years later, I still feel annoyed by

Perhaps my trump lead at trick one was not inspired, but I wanted to try to kill ruffs if dummy had a singleton. A club lead would have worked equally well, so long as I remembered to shift to a trump when in with the diamond ace. What would not work was for me to lead a trump and see my partner put up the queen. Now declarer could ruff the third diamond in dummy with impunity and come to 10 tricks.

So now we come to the second lesson of the deal. Third hand plays high is all very well if we have a realistic chance to win the trick or to create winners for partner. But rules must not be followed blindly: here, the heart queen had an important role to play. Sacrificing it for nothing was pointless. It should have been kept to overruff dummy on the third round of diamonds.
