U.S. House finally passes wilderness bill

Owyhee, Auger Falls provisions await Obama's signature

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Congress has voted to set aside more than 2 million acres in nine states as protected wilderness — from the Owyhee canyonlands in southwest Idaho to the Jefferson National Forest in Virginia.

The legislation, which opponents, mostly Republicans, called a "land grab" that would block energy development on vast swaths of federal land, is on its way to President Obama for his likely signature.

The House passed the bill, 285-140, Wednesday, the final step in a long legislative road that began last year.

The vote came two weeks after the House rejected the bill amid a partisan dispute over gun rights. The bill failed to get a needed two-thirds majority there by two votes. The measure was brought up again in the Senate, and though

Wednesday's vote didn't require two-thirds of the House to pass, it got it this time.

The bill — a collection of nearly 170 separate measures — represents one of the largest expansions of wilderness protection in a quarter-century. It confers the government's highest level of protection on land

Airport mural expansion to honor veterans

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

WATCH: an interview with mural artist Gary Stone.

A mural of Magic Valley life at Twin Falls' airport is expanding again, this time to honor veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Kimberly artist Gary Stone has continued to flesh out his initial 42-foot mural since he began it in 1995. This week, he started work on an 18-foot extension that will eventually feature the names of Magic Valley soldiers killed or injured in the two wars.

Unlike the main section, where Stone charges people and businesses to appear, the veterans' piece is almost fully donated work, he said. The city of Twin Falls chipped in $5,000 in 2007 to get the project started. Thousands more in costs have been covered by Stone, who said from the start he didn't want soldiers or their families to have to pay to appear.

"I can't charge the kids for being on my mural," he said.

By Wednesday, Stone had started to flesh out the main features of the mural. On the right, U.S. and Idaho flags flew from a marked-out flagpole with the beginnings of a bald eagle perched on top. The center focus will eventually be a male and a female soldier — both are equal and should be acknowledged, Stone said.

In one corner, injured soldiers limp up to a campfire. The fire, Stone said, will be the corner of the map dedicated to the wounded.

"That's gonna have a lot of people around it," he said.

The basic piece should be done in about six months. Then, Stone said, he'll keep updating it with soldiers' names submitted to him by a group of military

The school is classified as

ISDB's overall budget — which includes federal and other ongoing sources of funding — will be reduced by about 12 percent.

Transportation Committee Chairman John McGee, R-Caldwell, called out to Edmunson across the Capitol Annex: "Way to go." Otter had told lawmakers if they didn't approve the bonds, he'd redirect more than $200 million in transportation-related federal stimulus dollars to Connecting Idaho.

Work slated to be paid for by the federal stimulus includes a U.S. Highway 93 alternate route near Twin Falls, an Interstate 86 interchange at Chubbock, planned passing lanes on U.S. Highway 20 near Henry's Lake, and rebuilding the decrepit Dover Bridge on U.S. Highway 2 in northern Idaho — all projects in the districts of legislators on the budget-writing committee, adding to the pressure.

The new bonding authority brings Connecting Idaho's total to $679 million over four years, out of a plan that eventually calls for $1 billion.

500,000 acres of Owyhee wilderness. Other measures that touch Idaho include 165 acres of federal land for a Twin Falls city park near Auger Falls and money to both study state water storage projects and compensate ranchers who lose livestock to wolves.

Crapo told the Times-News after the House vote that he plans to visit the Owyhee area in the next couple of weeks to celebrate the bill's passage, and again thanked the workgroup members who stuck with the issue over eight years of effort.

"It shows the level of commitment and the kind of character these people have," he said.

Dennis Bowyer, Parks and Recreation director for the city of Twin Falls, said the land transfer will make it less complicated for the city to develop the Auger Falls park. City officials are still working on other aspects of the development, including an agreement with one last private landowner to ensure access to the site.

"It is great news for the city to have that property under city control," he said of the federal land.

Environmental groups and lawmakers in both parties long have pushed for the bill, which several called landmark legislation that will strengthen the national park system, restore national forests, preserve wild and scenic rivers, protect battlefields and restore balance to the management of public lands. Idaho Rivers United, one of the groups involved in the Owyhee project, issued a statement celebrating the House vote.

"... in the end, our agreement and this legislation will protect the best of the best landscapes and rivers of the Owyhee-Bruneau Canyon-lands, and it will give ranchers and Owyhee County residents some of the economic certainty they've been seeking for years," said Executive Director Bill Sedivy.

Rep. Doc Hastings, R-Wash., and other Republicans complained that the measure would lock up millions of acres of land that could be explored for energy and used for other development. The bill "even locks up federal lands from renewable energy production, including wind and solar," he said.

Hastings and Rep. Rob Bishop, R-Utah, tried unsuccessfully to amend the bill to allow visitors to national parks to carry concealed, loaded weapons. A federal judge last week struck down a Bush administration rule allowing loaded guns in parks and wildlife refuges.

Fund

Cameron said. "We've simply been paying the bills without checking or questioning the bills." Indigent health care is emergency health care provided to people without insurance that addresses a wide range of needs, including mental health. Claims are submitted to counties, which cover the first $10,000 and hand the rest to the state's catastrophic health care program, also called the CAT fund. It can often be a cumbersome process that involves appeals and various challenges.

Additionally, the catastrophic fund comes entirely from the state's general fund, which means it faces the same money crunch as other agencies in this year's financial crisis. Idaho's indigent costs have risen from almost $28 million in 2004 to more than $38 million in 2007, while the number of persons who submitted claims dropped.

Meanwhile, legislation will increase the amount counties cover per claim to $11,000, which will save the state $1 million but likely drive up costs to counties. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter originally wanted the amount to increase to $15,000 but Cameron said he is comfortable with the bill proposed.

The legislation is the result of a series of meetings and negotiations between hospitals, insurance companies and local governments.

Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, who also helped craft the legislation, said the savings won't begin to show until after six months but will be substantial in the long term.

"This is the best method to start with," said Wood, a physician.

House passes revised bill to cut school budgets

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — A day after the House passed a compromise bill to cut public schools budgets, Republicans pushed through a controversial measure to revamp how the state funds transportation for schools.

The bill, which passed on a 50-20 vote, is designed to eventually save the state $4.2 million. Democrats, using a rare move, had the bill read on the floor in its entirety — a stalling tactic that lasted about 15 minutes.

Idaho's public schools budget will be set Friday and GOP lawmakers have said it's likely to face its first cut in the state's history.

The measure requires the most populated school districts to be reimbursed based on costs per student, rather than distance traveled. The move, which saves $1.7 million next year, will hit the Boise Independent School District the heaviest. The Twin Falls School District will not be affected next year, a change after the bill was revised from an earlier version.

"Granted, we in rural Idaho don't understand anything — or everything — but we do understand economies of scale," said House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley. "If there is one school district that is using everybody else's money because they are being reimbursed by the mile ... in my opinion, that's maximum unfairness."

While the bill's fiscal impact for next year is limited to just a few districts — none in the Magic Valley — reimbursement in 2011 will be distributed through block grants that will be based on enrollment sizes.

The bill also bans state reimbursements for field trips, which will save $2.5 million.

"We've got serious concerns about the dismantling of public education in this state," said House Assistant Minority Leader James Ruchti, D-Pocatello.

"Students are going to feel it. Parents are going to feel it. Teachers are going to feel it."

Idaho Fish & Game fee increase bill targets non-residents

Times-News

BOISE — The Idaho Senate on Tuesday amended a bill from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game by shifting all the fee increases to non-residents of Idaho. The amendments passed the full chamber on a voice vote. The amended bill must still clear the full Senate.

The original IDFG proposal aimed to increase license and tag fees by 15 percent. Under the amendments proposed by Sen. Jeff Siddoway, R-Terretton, no Idahoans would see fee increases. Instead, non-resident fees would be raised to increase revenue by 5 percent. The only changes affecting residents are several new tags created.

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, the only member of the Senate Resources Committee to oppose the fee increase in an 8-1 vote held in committee last week, said he was more comfortable with this measure.

"It's not affecting our residents. It's only affecting out-of-state folks," Cameron said. "I'm sure (Fish and Game is) disappointed but so are lot of people this year."

Senate panel kills bighorn bill

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Senate Resources Committee killed an effort Wednesday to make the state responsible if any bighorn sheep adversely affect sheep ranchers' herds.

The bill, proposed from Sen. Jeff Siddoway, R-Terretton, was intended to hold ranchers harmless should any disease or other side effects impact domestic sheep on public grazing land.

"The intent is so that the state of Idaho won't be able to bring suit or damage against the sheep operator," said Siddoway, a sheep rancher who began his presentation declaring a conflict of interest because of a personal gain.

It was the latest step in an ongoing battle over preserving ranching operations across the state while saving the bighorns, whose numbers have dropped due to exposure to domestic sheep grazing on public land. Locally the conflict has played out in the South Hills, where state officials say a recent agreement with ranchers has temporarily soothed the matter.

The measure, however, died on a 5-4 vote led by Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson.

"I just need some more time to study it," Brackett said.

The bill was revised after two previous bills in the session that placed authority over sheep disputes under the county commissioners were deemed overly aggressive.

Siddoway said the U.S. Forest Service is actually responsible for the problems he's trying to prevent in the bill, but he can't include the agency because it's a federal agency. He said the motive is not financial losses but rather to protect grazers.

The bill comes as Payette National Forest officials prepare ways to keep domestic sheep and bighorns away from each other. Ranchers, including Siddoway, are worried they could be put out of business, though.

"We've got two of the best sheep herders about to be pushed off the hill," Siddoway said.

FOR THE RECORD

Cassia County police reports for March 22

Joy riding:

A 16-year-old Burley male was reported by his brother to have stolen their father's car. Police told the boy that their father would have to report the theft. Police contacted the father, but "he fell back asleep."

DUI, et cetera:

Elazar Alvarado-Chavez, 28, was arrested after Deputy Doug Welch noticed the man "was stopped about thirty feet from the stop line" on 15th Street in Burley. Welch pulled the vehicle over and found an open can of beer in the driver's lap. In Spanish, Alvarado-Chavez said he had "one beer" that night. No Spanish-speaking officers were available. Alvarado-Chavez was taken to jail, where he was allegedly found to be storing cocaine inside a bandage in his pocket. Alvarado-Chavez later acknowledged that the substance was cocaine but initially said he didn't know what it was, only that he got it from a lady named Esperanza. He was charged with driving under the influence, possession of a controlled substance, open container and failure to purchase a driver's license.

Burglary:

A 20-year-old female reported that her 1992 Geo had been burglarized in Burley. Stolen items include a $300 camera, a purse, her driver's license, her Social Security card, a $5 credit card and some gum. According to the report, "The doors on the car do not lock."

Driving violations:

Deputy Matt Arthur pulled over a 16-year-old Burley male in a Ford Mustang who was reported to have "swerved off the line in Heyburn." Arthur didn't suspect any consumption of alcohol but noticed that the driver had "a swollen left eye" and a suspended driver's license. The male was arrested for driving without privileges.

Complaint:

A 51-year-old Burley female who recently moved out of her daughter's house reported that some of her property is missing. While her daughter said the woman is welcome to get the rest of her property, the woman is "afraid of the people who live there." The woman also mentioned that she doesn't know where she currently resides, only that she's "living with someone between Rupert and Paul."

KETCHUM — Nine months after fire forced the evacuation of 54 dogs and cats, the Sun Valley Animal Center is back in business with some new improvements to boot.

"We'll actually be able to do more surgeries because of the new configuration," said veterinary technician Judy Altermatt.

It's a boon for the center, as dog owners from across Idaho and the Rocky Mountain Region come to bring their pets to Dr. Randy Acker, a former Idaho State Veterinarian of the Year who invented an artificial elbow for dogs after his own Labrador, Tate, developed bad elbows. Acker started the center in 1979.

"The clinic is a busy place — we've seen 54 patients so far today," said Susan Acker, who assists her husband with surgeries.

The facility, built in 1992 a couple miles south of Ketchum off Idaho Highway 75, was gutted in early June 2008 after an autoclave — a medical sterilizing machine that the clinic had just had serviced — malfunctioned and caught fire, said Dr. Scott Acker.

members and neighbors in the surrounding area quickly responded, showing up with leashes to escort 49 dogs and five cats out of the building. Damage was estimated at more than $1 million.

New homes were found for employees in a nearby housing unit so Scott Acker could continue to treat walk-in visitors in the facility.

Randy Acker moved his surgical practice to Sun Valley Animal Center in Bellevue where a third brother — Dr. Mark Acker — offers services for horses and other large animals.

Now both Scott and Randy are back in the reopened Sun Valley clinic, which features an array of state-of-the-art equipment that enables its 22 employees to offer advanced diagnostic and surgical procedures, including orthopedic, thoracic, cardiac and reconstructive surgery.

There are new glassed-in surgery rooms and a new specialty room. There's a new anesthesia machine, orthopedic saws, ultrasound and laparoscopy machines. There's even a new fire sprinkler.

Hailey won't change affordable housing ordinances

Potential precedent overrode immediate job concerns

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council decided Monday that the long-term interests of the city in creating affordable housing, combined with the possibility of setting a dangerous precedent, were more important than jobs promised by a local developer.

John Campbell, the developer of the Old Cutters subdivision, asked the council to change its affordable housing ordinances to allow him to build all work force housing, rather than half work force and half deed-restricted housing as he is currently required to do. He said if he could build only work force housing, he would build all the units this summer, putting locals to work.

Arguing against the idea were representatives from ARCH Community Housing Trust and the Blaine County Housing Authority. They asserted that work force housing becomes part of the regular housing market within one or two owners, while deed-restricted housing permanently remains affordable to lower-income owners.

Developer representative Jim Speck said he believes work force housing has longer-term benefits than the housing groups argued, and suggested the city try it out on a larger scale than it has thus far.

He also said that because deed-restricted housing isn't as profitable to construct, there is little incentive to get it quickly built and on the market.

City Councilman Fritz Haemmerle said he wanted the city's planning and zoning commission to at least consider the idea, noting that the council wouldn't have to approve a request for different housing proportions even if they had the option available. He also said the recession makes this a timely issue to consider.

"In a normal economy, the argument made by the housing authority is a compelling argument," he said.

"My intention is putting people to work, shovel-ready, some stimulus to what is going to be a horrible construction season at best."

City Council President Martha Burke said the council likely wouldn't even have considered the idea were it not for the economy, but she eventually voted with Councilman Don Keirn and Councilwoman Carol Brown to not pursue the issue.

Mayor Rick Davis had

recused himself from the proceedings.

"I just don't like a short-term fix for a long-term problem," Keirn said, noting that he would not want to set a precedent that could limit creation of permanent affordable housing in the future.

Idaho teachers should leave the Band-Aids home

Schoolteachers in Idaho have a legitimate beef about some of the cuts in public education proposed by Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna and backed by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

But wearing bandages in the classroom to express their displeasure is unprofessional.

The Idaho Education Association, which is behind the campaign, wants the Legislature to know that teachers don't believe a bandage can cover the reduction in public school spending that Luna wants. And it's angry that Otter doesn't plan to spend federal stimulus money to make up for the shortfall in state tax revenue.

Teachers have traditionally celebrated professionalism, including drawing a line between their pay and working conditions on the one hand and what goes on in the classroom on the other. They should do so in this case.

Aside from co-workers, the only people who will see those bandages are students. Do teachers really expect those kids to go home and lobby their parents for more educational funding?

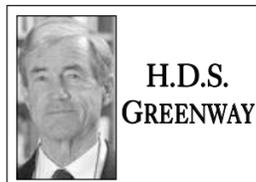

If so, that's inappropriate. Moms and dads have a role to play in influencing the Legislature's action on education funding, but the teachers' union is where educators should be concentrating their efforts.

We understand that teachers are upset about the pending, first-ever cuts to public school spending in Idaho history. But they shouldn't be using their classroom lecterns as bully pulpits.

Our view: Teachers furious about the proposed reduction in public school spending should take it up with the Idaho Legislature, not their students.

When outrage threatens democracy

One of the the worst pieces of legislation in a long time passed the House of Representatives last week when Congress voted to claw back bonuses.

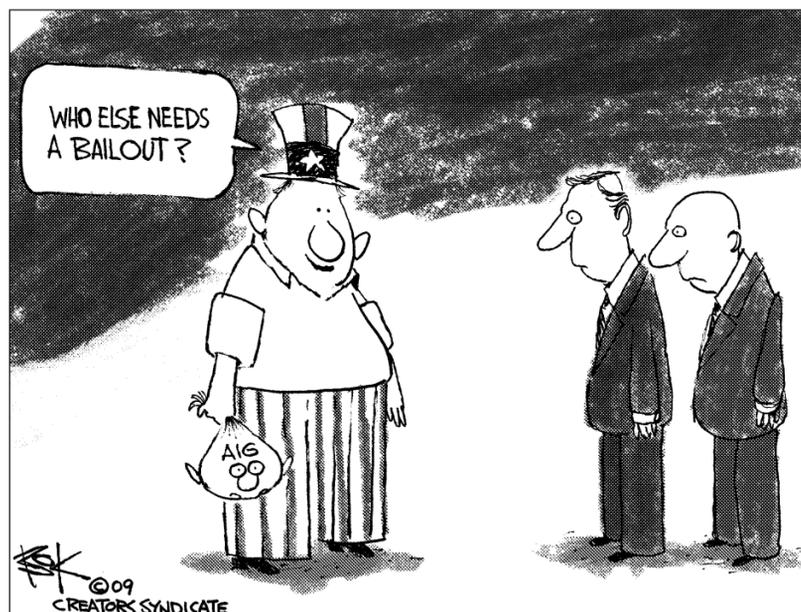

H.D.S. GREENWAY

I was as upset as anyone when I heard that the division of American International Group that had begged the insurance giant, and may have spurred on a worldwide depression, was to be rewarded with bonuses beyond the dreams of avarice. And the notion that workers and pensioners have to take devastating cuts in income, while those who got us into this mess get richer, hits at the vitals of the social contract.

But anger is no way to make law, as President Obama says. Congress got swept away in a river of emotion. The Financial Times said the response "smacks more of banana republic than good government." A punitive, retroactive raid on a single group of people that happens to be unpopular at the moment is something democracy needs to guard against.

The Founding Fathers conceptualized the Senate as the wiser and cooler body to calm the hot heads of the House, and the upper house should reject this bill out of hand. If it won't, the president should veto it.

First, not all the bonus recipients are malefactors of great wealth. In some cases they are the people AIG needs to clean up the firm. In some cases, bonuses are the primary way people are paid rather than salaries. Since the government more or less owns AIG, it is free to set the standards of how people are paid, but this needs to be done thoughtfully and individually, not by lynch-mob legislation.

Second, virtually everyone in Washington knew that restrictions on salaries and bonuses were not included in the original, hastily drawn up legislation that approved of giving taxpayers' money to companies and banks in the first place. The time to act was then, not now. The Financial Times again got it right when it said that what we are seeing is "the tyrannical principal that Congress can use the tax code to void contracts that the executive branch has consented to, after the fact and with retrospective force."

Third, the Obama administration has chosen to meet this crisis by keeping capitalism alive and enabling the financial industry to restore liquidity. Is it wise to tell this vital industry it cannot reward the people it needs now to purge the system and get back to normalcy? OK, the bonus culture and CEO salaries had gotten absurdly out of hand, but I am not happy with Congress attempting to legislate it. And this bill gathers up the innocent with the guilty into the tumbrels.

"The Constitution forbids 'bills of attainder,' which are legislative acts singling out closed classes on identified individuals, determining their guilt without trial, and meting out punishment," according to Harvard Law's Laurence Tribe. "In my view, the legislation passed by the House, whatever one might think of the emotion-driven rush to judgment it may represent, doesn't violate the ban on bills of attainder," he told me.

But just because the bill may pass constitutional muster "doesn't mean that it makes any sense, or that it's fair or decent," Tribe said. "It sweeps up a lot of people who don't deserve to be treated badly." There was a whiff of jacquerie in the air last week. What does Congress intend to do with the list of names it is demanding? There have already been death threats. Is the list to be published, or is this just a Madame DeFarge-like compilation of the condemned?

Tribe tells me that I would be wrong "to equate the current outrage about the bonuses ... with the hysteria that led to such abuses as the incarceration of Japanese Americans after Pearl Harbor." But it worries me that special laws are being passed against people who find themselves unpopular. There was enough of that in the 1930s and 1940s around the world, and when the public is angriest and most fearful is the moment we need to be the most careful about guarding our freedoms.

I fear for the republic if this is how we conduct our business in crisis.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... cutting school budgets

Idaho Press Tribune, Nampa

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna had hoped to avoid at least some of the $62 million in cuts to education spending he crafted for the budget year that begins July 1.

But as with so many hopes in the worsening economy, his goal turned out to be impractical.

Public schools stand to lose reimbursements for field trips, money for textbooks and classroom supplies and a program that offers incentives to Idaho teachers who retire early. School districts may also have to leave vacant jobs empty or eliminate teacher training days to cover a reduction in salary money in the budget. The restricted budget will give public schools, for the first time, less money than they received in the previous year.

The bottom line: Luna determined that failing to make the full $62 million cut would set schools up for an even more serious loss of funding in the budgets that begin July 2010 and July 2011.

... he doesn't minimize the effects the loss will have, admitting that all of the cuts he has proposed are bad.

But they are necessary. State revenue has dropped precipitously and shows no signs of a quick recovery. Thousands of Idaho jobs have disappeared each month — and businesses big and small have shut down. That inevitably means lower income and sales tax collections in the future.

Idaho must prepare for the possibility of even tougher days ahead even as individuals hope the nation can overcome this downturn quickly.

The state will receive $165 million in federal stimulus funding to offset cuts to the public schools budget for the current fiscal year that ends June 30 and the next two budget years. Idaho schools will receive another $104 million in grants for special education services and other programs, but this funding cannot be used to offset cuts to the state budget ...

... As the future financial picture becomes clearer, Idaho may have no choice but to cut deeper ...

... a shorter leash for ITD

Idaho Statesman, Boise

This wasn't even close enough for government work. This was an $11 million error.

Last week, the Idaho Transportation Department rushed out a bill to raise car and truck registration fees — generating a purported $44 million a year by 2013.

Not quite. Turns out the bill would raise $33 million. The error was spotted by sharp-eyed Keith Allred, director of The Common Interest, a nonpartisan good-government group.

It is disconcerting and damning when "good government" is being practiced by a citizens group, not by the government itself. Is it any wonder that the ITD has little credibility with lawmakers? ...

... The bill may well have been dead on arrival — opposed by conservatives averse to tax increases during a recession, and opposed by Democrats who are fighting Otter's proposed education cuts ... ITD's blunder certainly gave lawmakers one more reason to resist a plan to eventually raise the gas tax by $61.6 million a year.

Meanwhile, the ITD may have unwittingly given another bill a boost in momentum. John McGee, R-Caldwell, the chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee, is heading an effort to make the ITD director a gubernatorial appointee. The ITD director is now insulated from gubernatorial politics, but only to a point: The department head is hired by the Idaho Transportation Board, a panel appointed by the governor.

This doesn't establish executive oversight where none had existed. It streamlines the chain of command.

ITD needs to be on a shorter chain. The department has credibility problems years in the making. Many lawmakers remain rankled by Connecting Idaho, the program that uses bonding to pay for work on Interstate 84 and other highways, with the debt paid off with future federal highway dollars. Lawmakers believed the program was overpromised and oversold — and considering the projects that have vanished from the Connecting Idaho to-do list, they have reason to be upset.

... Critics will say McGee's bill would serve to further politicize the job of selecting and funding road projects.

At this point, we're more concerned that the ITD's director is insulated from executive oversight. This needs to change ...

... septic tanks and drinking water

Post Register, Idaho Falls

... 36 percent of Idaho homes use septic tanks ... Septic tank sewage consistently finds its way into streams and lakes in the state, according to Toni Hardesty, director of Idaho's Department of Environmental Quality.

Most homeowners try to keep their septic tank system operating in a responsible way, conscious of the health risks. But Idaho lawmakers, egged on by the powerful real estate lobby, this year refused to toughen up septic tank regulations. At 250 gallons per day, Idaho's minimum septic tank standard is the nation's weakest. Some states insist on a minimum tank capacity of 600 gallons per day. No state allows any tank smaller than 350 gallons per day.

Health districts review the location and licensing of septic tanks. But they lack the authority to go back and inspect whether those septic tanks are functioning properly — unless there's a complaint or substantial evidence linking water contamination to a malfunctioning septic tank.

The Legislature's irresponsibility has left Idaho unprotected on both sides of the septic tank issue — a questionable standard at the time of installation and no means to follow up and determine whether the tank is posing a threat to the public's drinking water supply ...

National service funding bill is $6 billion boondoogle

Maybe it's just me, but I find federal legislation titled "The GIVE Act" and "The SERVE Act" downright creepy. Even more troubling: the $6 billion price tag on these bipartisan bills to expand government-funded national service efforts.

Volunteerism is a wonderful thing, which is why millions of Americans do it every day without a cent of taxpayer money. But the volunteerism packages on the Hill are less about promoting effective charity than about creating make-work, permanent bureaucracies and left-wing slush funds.

The House passed the "Generations Invigorating Volunteerism and Education Act" — or the GIVE Act — last week. The Senate took up the companion SERVE Act this week. According to a Congressional Budget Office analysis of the Senate bill, it would cost "$418 million in 2010 and about $5.7 billion over the 2010-2014 period."

Like most federal programs, these would be sure to grow over time. The bills reauthorize the Clinton-era AmeriCorps boondoggle program and the Domestic Volunteer Service Act of 1973.

The programs have already been allocated $1.1 billion for fiscal year 2009, including $200 million from the 'porkulus' package signed into law last month. In addition to recruiting up to 250,000 enrollees in AmeriCorps, the GIVE/SERVE bills would create new little armies of government volunteers, including a Clean Energy

Corps, Education Corps, Healthy Futures Corps, Veterans Service Corps, and an expanded National Civilian Community Corps for disaster relief and energy conservation.

But that's not all. Spending would include new funds for:

- Grandparent Program ($115 million);
- Learn and Serve America ($97 million);
- Retired and Senior Volunteer Program ($70 million);
- Senior Companion Program ($55 million);
- $12 million for each of fiscal years 2010 through 2014 for "the Silver Scholarships and Encore Fellowships programs";
- $10 million a year from 2010 through 2014 for a new "Volunteers for Prosperity" program at USAID to "award grants to fund opportunities for volunteering internationally in coordination with eligible organizations"; and

• Social Innovation Fund and Volunteer Generation Fund — $50 million in 2010; $60 million in 2011; $70 million in 2012; $80 million in 2013; and $100 million in 2014.

Social Innovation Fund? It is essentially a special taxpayer-funded pipeline for radical liberal groups backed by billionaire George Soros that masquerade as public-interest do-gooders.

Especially troublesome to parents' groups concerned about compulsory volunteerism requirements is a provision in the House version directing Congress to explore "whether a workable, fair and reasonable mandatory service requirement for all able young people could be developed, and how such a requirement could be implemented in a manner that would strengthen the social fabric of the Nation and overcome civic challenges by bringing together people from diverse economic, ethnic and educational backgrounds."

Those who have watched AmeriCorps from its inception are all too familiar with how government volunteerism programs have been used for propaganda and political purposes. AmeriCorps "volunteers" have been put to work lobbying against the voter-approved three-strikes anti-crime initiative in California and protesting Republican political events while working for the already heavily tax-subsidized liberal advocacy group ACORN.

D.C. watchdog group Citizens Against Government Waste also documented national service volunteers lobbying for rent control, expanded federal housing subsidies and enrollment of more women in the Women, Infants and Children welfare program.

One vigilant House member, GOP Rep. Virginia Foxx, successfully attached an amendment to the GIVE Act to bar National Service participants from engaging in political lobbying; endorsing or opposing legislation; organizing petitions, protests, boycotts or strikes; providing or promoting abortions or referrals; or influencing union organizing.

Supporters of GIVE/SERVE are now fighting those restrictions tooth and nail, screaming censorship and demanding the provisions be dropped — which tells you everything you need to know about the true nature of this boondoggle. Taxpayers GIVE their money to SERVE a big government agenda under the guise of helping their fellow man. It's charity at the point of a gun.

Clinton needs to get past Mexico's defenses, set record straight

As Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton tours Mexico this week, she needs not only goodwill but a consistent U.S. position.

Former U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Jeffrey Davidow has compared Mexico to a porcupine because of the country's prickly nationalism, and right now its worst symptoms are on full display. After weeks of U.S. congressional hearings on Mexico's drug-related violence and front-page news stories focused on its many ills, the country is feeling badgered and bruised. Mexican President Felipe Calderon has even suggested that a concerted effort to discredit Mexico is taking place in the United States.

Mexico's quills are standing straight up, and Clinton will need to placate Mexicans with a good dose of public diplomacy. The best way to accomplish this goal would be to arrive with what has been lacking so far: a clear, unified message from the Obama administration regarding the sort of relationship it wants with Mexico.

Undoubtedly, Mexico's crime-related problems have become a focus of attention among lawmakers, law enforcement and the media in the United States. Although this sort of attention is welcome — given the seriousness of the problems — a panoply of inconsistent, disjointed, contradictory stances has generated ill will south of the border.

Mexico doesn't know whether it should pay more attention to those who advocate militarizing the border or to those who have come out against it. Mexico doesn't know whether the United States will make a concerted effort to stem the illegal smuggling of guns into its territory or whether the "right to bear arms" argument will shelve that issue. Mexico doesn't understand if it's being bashed to generate congressional support for further aid and deeper collaboration or if recent criticism is political posturing by those who would welcome a bigger wall between the two countries. Members of the U.S. government talk about the need for a "new paradigm" in the U.S.-Mexico relationship, but then they lop off $150 million from the Merida Initiative, which was designed to enhance military cooperation and intelligence sharing. Members of the Obama team talk about a "strategic partnership," but then Congress ends a demonstration project to allow some Mexican trucks onto U.S. highways, as required under the North American Free Trade Agreement. Mexico then retaliates by placing tariffs on 90 goods affecting $2.4 billion in U.S. trade.

And so the binational bickering goes on, while the Mexican porcupine moves into attack position.

Clinton needs to set the record straight and tell both the Mexican government and the Mexican people what the United States wants, what it is prepared to do and what it expects in return. The current void is being filled in a way that doesn't bode well for joint solutions to shared problems. July's midterm elections in Mexico are pushing Calderon to adopt knee-jerk nationalistic stances, because nothing unites Mexicans more than a good dose of anti-Americanism. And in the United States, the message vis-a-vis Mexico is often dominated by Republican hard-liners who would like to turn the border into the next political battleground.

Beyond issues of wounded pride south of the Rio Grande and gung-ho stances north of it, Mexico and the United States face a critical situation. U.S. efforts to help Mexico deal with drug trafficking and organized crime networks are not enough, and the problem is spilling over into U.S. cities and streets, where consumption continues unabated.

Clinton should view the crisis as an opportunity to reframe the relationship and espouse the language of commitment and co-responsibility. She should understand, as Mexican author Carlos Fuentes has suggested, that Mexico does not have a monopoly on drugs, bribes or corruption.

Denise Dresser is a columnist for the Reforma newspaper in Mexico City and a professor at the Autonomous Technological Institute of Mexico. She wrote this for the Los Angeles Times.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

There must be a better way than cutting pay

The governor is trying to balance his overdrawn budget by going after the little people. I guess in this day and age, anyone should be glad to have a job, but state workers will not get raises for a year and now a 3 percent pay decrease.

I am sure all state workers are glad to help, but does this also mean their food prices won't go up? How about their utilities? Gasoline prices? Day care?

There has to be a better way. Maybe a town meeting with the very people you are asking to make these sacrifices. These are not the high rollers of AIG with the giant bonuses. There has to be a better plan.

School transportation plan makes no sense

How can our high school students possibly learn anything in a 20-minute time frame? Very few relevant tasks can be completed in that time.

Last week's article regarding the transportation of high school students to and from both high schools not only is a waste of money but our students' time — and added expense to the taxpayers.

How can the system justify a 40-minute learning block for every class when busing is included in that learning block? Ten minutes to and from each school, then a meet and greet with the teacher — 20 minutes for what? Why can't the student receive an email for assignments from the other school to the school he attends? Answers please!

Hagerman P&Z to recommend annexation

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman Planning & Zoning Commission will recommend annexing properties outside city limits for residents who utilize city services.

The commission plans to include properties either receiving or impacting city services. It has mapped out a desired future zoning plan to serve as a guideline for uses for future annexation. Recommendations made were to increase the size of the commercial zone, which is one block on either side of U.S. Highway 30, and to consider annexing properties.

In addition, the city park will be zoned as recreation and the Hagerman schools will be zoned mainly as commercial. "Property owners who have a city service have forfeited their right to refuse annexation," said a commission member David Maestas.

Chairwoman Pat Wintner asked Maestas if he would present the updated map of Hagerman at the Wednesday Hagerman City Council meeting. Once the City Council approves the recommendations, a public hearing to give citizens an opportunity to comment will be held.

In other business, Lauren Zvonek inquired about a special use permit for a remodeled rental residence on Fifth Street, which is located in a commercial zone. It was approved by the building inspector and she has a certificate of occupancy.

Under Hagerman's Comprehensive Plan, "Residential use on the same lot as a commercial use for rental purposes, other than in a motel in which a stay is limited, shall not be allowed. Residential use on the same lot as a commercial use shall only be approved upon submission of a special use permit and the review and approval of the city council," said

Commissioner Kathleen Crist.

County Clerk Peggy Pedrow will notify property owners and residents within 300 feet of the external boundaries of the residence being considered of an April 28 public hearing regarding the permit.

Otter wants stimulus funding for livestock center

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — Turns out stimulus money is back on the table for the $36 million livestock facility slotted for the Magic Valley — at least according to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

In a Wednesday memo to members of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, Otter's budget chief, Wayne Hammon, wrote Otter wants the committee to "consider" giving $10 million to the Center for Livestock and Environmental Studies.

When Otter unveiled his stimulus recommendation earlier this month, he didn't specify how to use the $35.5 million in stimulus for higher education. In the memo, Hammon writes Otter also wants JFAC to consider $1.59 million for the Center for Advanced Energy Studies in eastern Idaho and $4 million for medical isotope production at Idaho State University.

He wants the rest of the funding — more than $18 million — to allow the schools to minimize fee increases and other budget reductions.

But JFAC co-chairman Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said the $10 million probably won't go to the center, which is being organized via the University of Idaho.

"I don't see our committee going in that direction, I just don't," he said Wednesday night. "I'm not voting to fund it. They can't even spend the $10 million in the time of the stimulus. It would not be an appropriate use of the stimulus dollars."

The decision will come today when JFAC sets higher education budgets.

Legislature approves midwifery licensing bill

By Sarah D. Wire
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The state Senate has passed a House-approved bill requiring that midwives be licensed.

A bill that would have made licensing voluntary died in the Legislature last year after objections from doctors and hospitals.

The Senate voted 32-3 Wednesday for the measure, which requires midwives to be licensed by the North American Registry of Midwives, a national organization that governs the profession. It would also require them to get extra training in suturing and pharmacology.

The bill now awaits approval from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter. Senate sponsor Shawn Keough, R-Sandpoint, said the governor has indicated his support and willingness to quickly appoint a governing board.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

IDAHO Idaho House panel backs PUC ratemaking plan

BOISE - A House panel unanimously approved a plan to shore up money lenders' confidence that regulated utilities like Idaho Power Co. will be able to recover investments in big transmission or generation projects.

So-called "pre-approved ratemaking," modeled after an Iowa law, already passed the Senate and now goes to a House vote.

Big customers of Idaho Power, the state's largest utility, objected, saying it shifts risk to customers.

But lawmakers were convinced pre-approved ratemaking will help lower future interest costs that will inevitably be borne by ratepayers.

Idaho Power already is planning a $427 million gas power plant near New Plymouth in western Idaho that could take advantage of the new rate setting,

Unified Democrats mirror Obama budget priorities

By David Espo and Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — In a spring-time show of unity, congressional Democrats welcomed President Barack Obama to the Capitol Wednesday and unveiled budget blueprints that embrace his key priorities and point the way for major legislation this year on health care, energy and education.

Even so, both the House and Senate versions lack specifics for any of the administration's signature proposals. And Democrats decided to cut spending — and exploding deficits — below levels envisioned in the plan Obama presented less than a month ago.

Administration officials and congressional leaders said any differences were modest.

"This budget will protect President Obama's priorities — education, energy, health care, middle class tax relief and cut the deficit in half," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said after the chief executive met privately in the Capitol with rank-and-file Democrats.

Earlier, White House Budget Director Peter Orszag told reporters the congressional budgets "may not be identical twins to what the president submitted, but they are certainly brothers that look an awful lot alike."

Neither house included the $250 billion that the administration seeks for any future financial industry bailout. Additionally, Both House and Senate Democrats assume in their version that Obama's $400 tax credit for most workers will expire after 2010 and fail to permanently extend relief from the alternative minimum tax.

But none of that means the tax cuts can't be kept in place in 2011 and beyond, only that lawmakers would have to find offsetting revenue to pay for them, said Kent Conrad of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The House plan calls for spending $3.6 trillion in the year that begins Oct. 1, according to the Congressional Budget Office, compared with $3.7 trillion for Obama's plan. The Senate would spend $3.5 trillion.

The House plan foresees a deficit of $1.2 trillion for 2010 but would cut that to $598 billion after five years. The comparable Senate estimates are $1.2 trillion in 2010 and $508 billion in 2014.

Obama's budget would leave a deficit of $749 billion in five years' time, according to congressional estimates — too high for his Democratic allies — and would grow to unsustainable levels exceeding 5 percent of the economy by the end of the decade.

Given the strong Democratic congressional majorities in both houses, there is little or no doubt the spending blueprints can clear both houses by the end of next month. But Republicans greeted them with criticism nonetheless.

Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., who was briefly Obama's choice to become commerce secretary earlier in the year, said the president had laid out a "blueprint to move the government dramatically to the left ... hard left." The senior Republican on the Senate Budget Committee added that Democrats were masking the true deficits left by their plans by leaving out the cost of legislation that is politically essential, such as funding to shelter doctors from cutbacks in payments they receive for serving Medicare patients.

In the House, Rep. Paul Ryan, R-Wis., said Democrats were advancing "the president's high-cost, big-government agenda in camouflage. ... Instead of simply righting the ship, this budget steers it in a radically different direction straight into the tidal wave of spending and debt that is already building."

Ryan, who is the senior Republican on the House Budget Committee, and GOP colleagues are expected to unveil an alternative on Thursday. No similar effort is expected in the Senate.

Amid clashes with people trying to help, octuplets mom tries to go it alone

By Shaya Tayefe Mohajer
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — The list of people octuplets mother Nadya Suleman has alienated from her chaotic life grows by the day: A number of public relations handlers have parted ways and Suleman fired a group of nurses providing charity care.

Despite providing good theater on stages from the "Dr. Phil" show to Web sites, her apparent attempt to go it alone raises a larger question of how the unemployed, divorced, single mother is going to bring up 14 children. While it's unclear whether Suleman can't play well with others or if she's a victim of a situation beyond her control, former members of her inner circle are lashing out.

"This woman does not care for these kids, she's in this for the media, for the paparazzi," nurse Linda West-Conforti told Dr. Phil McGraw on his TV talk show Wednesday.

Suleman responded on the show, saying she fired members of the nonprofit nursing group West-Conforti founded, because they were intolerably negative and poor communicators.

Angels in Waiting nurses who trained Suleman's nannies said Wednesday at a press conference that she hired staff who tested positive for tuberculosis and didn't speak enough English to understand the training.

West-Conforti said in a statement that Suleman told her she couldn't afford security for the home but that "Nadya was currently having a large new Jacuzzi tub installed in her master bedroom and a new dishwasher installed in her kitchen."

The constant tit-for-tat surrounding Suleman has kept the story alive two months after she made medical history as the mother of the world's longest-living set of octuplets. But it appears to have won her few friends.

Suleman has characterized herself as naive and too trusting of others, but those who have been close to her see it differently.

"They have a unique way of using people," former publicist Joanne Killeen said of Suleman and her parents. "Manipulating people, getting what they want and moving on."

No friends or relatives have come forward to publicly vouch for her. She's told psychologists who examined her for a work-related injury and news media that she's been too busy having children to maintain adult relationships.

Suleman, who has no siblings, has sparred bitterly with her mother on the Internet, and her father has questioned her mental stability.

Perhaps most notable is the absence of a father to her 14 children, who were all conceived through in vitro fertilization.

Public fascination with Suleman began to sour before she even left the hospital, as her identity was leaked and details of her life began trickling out.

Public scorn, including death threats, motivated the Killeen Furtney Group to quit handling publicity for Suleman on Feb. 14. The ties are still not totally severed, Killeen told The Associated Press. Killeen still receives packages for Suleman that she opens in her yard wearing a mask and gloves, a precaution recommended by police. A van of gifts is headed to Suleman's new La Habra home Friday.

CALIFORNIA F-22 fighter crashes in desert; pilot killed

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE — One of the Air Force's top-of-the-line F-22 fighter jets crashed Wednesday in the high desert of Southern California, killing a test pilot for prime contractor Lockheed Martin Corp.

The F-22A Raptor crashed at 10 a.m. about 35 miles northeast of Edwards Air Force Base in the Mojave Desert. The Bureau of Land Management identifies the area as Harper Dry Lake, a vast and empty expanse of sometimes marshy flat land.

The pilot was David Cooley, 49, a 21-year Air Force veteran who joined Lockheed Martin in 2003, the company said in a statement. It did not release any details of the accident, including whether Cooley attempted to eject.

A statement issued by Edwards said first responders transported Cooley from the crash scene to Victor Valley Community Hospital in Victorville, where he was pronounced dead.

Cooley, of Palmdale, Calif., was part of a team of company and Air Force pilots who conduct F-22 testing.

Study: Circumcision helps prevent 2 STDs

LOS ANGELES — Circumcision not only protects against HIV in heterosexual men, but it also helps prevent two other sexually transmitted infections, a large new study found.

Circumcised males reduced their risk of infection with HPV, or human papillomavirus, by 35 percent and herpes by 28 percent. However, researchers found circumcision had no effect on the transmission of syphilis.

Landmark studies from three African countries including Uganda previously found circumcision lowered men's chance of catching the AIDS virus by up to 60 percent. The new study stems from the Uganda research and looked at protection against three other STDs. The findings are reported in today's New England Journal of Medicine

"Evidence now strongly suggests that circumcision offers an important prevention opportunity and should be widely available," Drs. Matthew Golden and Judith Wasserheit of the University of Washington wrote in an accompanying editorial.

WASHINGTON Astronomers catch a shooting star

For the first time, scientists matched a meteorite found on Earth with a specific asteroid that became a fireball plunging through the sky. It gives them a glimpse into the past when planets formed and an idea how to avoid a future asteroid Armageddon.

Last October, astronomers tracked a small non-threatening asteroid heading toward Earth before it became a "shooting star," something they had not done before. It blew up in the sky and scientists thought there would be no space rocks left to examine.

But a painstaking search by dozens of students through the remote Sudan desert came up with 8.7 pounds of black jagged rocks, leftovers from the asteroid 2008 TC3. And those dark rocks were full of surprises and minuscule diamonds, according to a study published today in the journal Nature.

"This was a meteorite that was not in our collection, a completely new material," said study lead author Peter Jenniskens of NASA's Ames Research Center in California. For years, astronomers have been lobbying to send a robot probe to an asteroid, grab a chunk of it and return it to Earth for labs to analyze the material. Instead a piece of an asteroid dropped in their laps and the researchers were able to track where it came from and where it landed.

The asteroid, which mostly burned in the atmosphere 23 miles above the ground, is likely a leftover from when chunks of rock tried and failed to become a planet, about 4.5 billion years ago, scientists said.

North Dakota officials say more blasts needed to break ice jam

By Blake Nicholson
 Associated Press writer

BISMARCK, N.D. — Demolition crews blasted chunks of ice near a huge ice jam in the Missouri River on Wednesday in a bid to open a channel, like pulling out a giant plug to drain a flood threatening the city. Officials planned two more rounds of explosives.

Gov. John Hoeven said a second round of explosives would be set off Wednesday night and a third round

Thursday morning. Greg Wilz, the state's homeland security director, called earlier blasts on about 500 feet of ice just south of the jam "a partial success."

"The ice started moving," Wilz said. "We would like to have a controlled flush because we don't want to cause problems for people downstream."

Bismarck Mayor John Warford had said the city was "cautiously optimistic" after the first try and that water appeared to be moving but officials would have a better assessment Wednesday night.

Water backing up behind the dam of car-size ice blocks already had forced the evacuation of about 1,700 people from low-lying areas in North Dakota's capital.

Meanwhile, on the eastern side of the state, volunteers continued stacking sandbags to protect Fargo amid new concern over the rising Red River. After days of predicting a crest ranging from 39 to 41 feet, the National Weather Service settled on the higher number.

City officials said they would build their dikes a foot higher than planned, to 43 feet, and would distribute evacuation information to residents on Thursday. The river was projected to crest on Saturday afternoon.

Mayor Dennis Walaker described 41 feet as "uncharted territory." The Red's record high at Fargo was 40.1 feet in 1897. Walaker said he was still confident the city would beat the flood, but that contingency plans were needed.

Police Chief Keith Ternes urged people with disabilities to consider leaving the city, saying: "If they expect us to get to them and get them out, they should give serious consideration."

In Bismarck, the Missouri River jam was created by ice floating down the Heart River, with some chunks up to 3 feet thick and the size of small cars. The jam was about 11 miles downstream from the city.

"The ice is just solid as a rock," Assistant Water Commission Engineer Todd Sando said.

Crews from Advanced Explosives Demolition, with help from National Guard, the Army Corps of Engineers and the Coast Guard, drilled 80 holes in the ice to detonate clay-like explosives. Wilz said salt would be used to help speed the breakup and officials were considering backhoes to break up ice sheets near the river's west bank.

Kansas man builds dune buggies

By Clara Kilbourn
The Hutchinson News

COLDWATER, Kan. — Andrea Girk settled into the driver's seat of her new purple dune buggy, snapped the removable steering wheel into place and called herself a happy woman.

A scrub tech at Western Plains Regional Medical Center in Dodge City and May 2008 graduate of Hutchinson Community College, Girk is on her second buggy.

She spotted the 3.8 liter, super-charged GM V-6 model parked in the front of dune buggy builder Alan Fine's Coldwater shop and had to have it.

"I like it a lot," Girk said. "It's the season, but I'll buy the insurance before I take it out."

In the meantime, she was just keeping the seat warm, she said.

Fine said he can pretty much guarantee he'll have visitors — locals or folks traveling through town on U.S. 183 — whenever he opens the doors to his shop.

That said, he stepped outside to greet the Jeff Ragoscake family who piled out of a pickup to check out his newest machine with its bright-yellow roll bars.

As they admired the custom paint job featuring a checkered flag with flames, Fine offered a passenger test ride. Tanner Maas, 9, of Lakin, jumped at the chance before his mother, Sheila Maas, could say no.

The duo crawled into the machine and fastened their seat belts. Fine revved the 305-horsepower motor, slammed it into gear and they took off, spitting gravel along the lane that runs beside the shop. The front wheels lifted high into the air and they headed toward the end of the test strip lane.

At the far end, Fine U-turned, moved through the dust cloud he'd just made and held a wheelie all the way back to the shop.

His buggies generally hit 60 mph, but he's seen some top 100 mph. That makes it a big-boy toy and not for the timid of heart.

"When I give rides to people who've never ridden in one, they can't believe it," he said. "It's about like a roller coaster. It gets your adrenaline going."

Fine started building dune buggies four years ago after he spotted an old one buried in the weeds at an abandoned farmstead and bought it. He makes them two at a time, one for himself and one for his wife, Ralene, using parts he buys and fabricates. They keep each buggy and ride it until it sells. The yellow one on display is the sixth he's built.

MAKING NOISE

Dylon Cunningham, 8, of Twin Falls currently rides a Cobra-manufactured dirt bike. But under the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act, which went into law Feb. 10, he cannot buy another brand of youth bike due to lead limits in some bike parts. The industry is calling for youth bikes and ATVs to be excluded from the ban, because parts such as battery terminals and tire valves unavoidably carry lead.

Youth dirt bikers concerned about federal restriction

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Spring has sprung in south-central Idaho.

Warm weather opened Rock Creek Race Track in Kimberly last weekend and riders near and far took the opportunity to ride.

But one glitch has young riders grappling with how their favorite pastime could become a thing of the past, thanks to sweeping new legislation brought forth with the February implementation of the Consumer Product Safety Commission Improvement Act. The legislation currently bans the sale of youth products, including ATVs and dirt bikes containing lead.

Eight-year-old Dylon Cunningham of Twin Falls said he fears the new law could ruin the motocross sport for him.

"All I do is ride and there are a lot of kids that ride," he said. "It isn't fair. It sucks."

For now Cunningham rides a Cobra bike, which can still be sold under the new law, according to Heath Cunningham, Dylon's father and area Cobra dealer.

"From what we've been told, all of the stuff on the Cobra bikes passes," he said. "But under the new law Dylon can't get a bigger bike made by a different manufacturer."

Cobra holds a small market share of area youth bike sales, and Cunningham said if the ban remains in place it would have serious repercussions for the entire industry.

Heath Cunningham of Twin Falls points out the painted frame on a youth-model bike. The paint, containing small amounts of lead, is one of the reasons youth bikes and ATVs have been banned under the new Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act, which went into law Feb. 10. The law is retroactive, meaning bikes sold in the past and meeting previous sales safety standards cannot be resold, serviced or repaired.

Cordell Shurtliff, 8, of Shelley and Beau Richan, 14, of Idaho Falls take a break from riding last Saturday at Rock Creek Race Track in Kimberly. Shurtliff said he's disappointed in the sales ban on youth bikes. He hopes the law changes before he needs parts or service for his bike, which also are banned as part of the sweeping Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act.

Don't count on luck, count on a helmet to save your noggin while riding

A few years back when I covered transportation issues for The Salt Lake Tribune, I wanted to investigate Utah's helmet law and compare it with what motorcyclists thought of them — both helmets and the law.

During my investigation, I came upon a rider who had been seriously injured in a motorcycle accident. He lost control of his bike and nearly lost his life.

A RIDER'S NOTEBOOK
Andrew Weeks

Good thing he was wearing a helmet.

"I'm pretty fortunate to have walked away," said Jacob Hill. "I was airborne, landed on my head, and tumbled with the bike until a fence stopped me. I have no doubt the helmet saved my life."

I don't know how Hill is doing today, but at the time he wasn't sure if he'd ever ride a motorcycle again. He was soon to be married, and obviously the crash had shaken him up.

Hill was one of the lucky ones.

According to information from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration:

Helmets are 67 percent effective in preventing brain injuries.

- Per mile, a motorcyclist is about 27 times more likely to die in a crash than someone riding in an automobile.

- Head injury is a leading cause of death in motorcycle crashes.

- Motorcycle helmets reduce the likelihood of a crash fatality by 37 percent.

- An unhelmeted motor-

- cyclist is 40 percent more likely to suffer a fatal head injury and 15 percent more likely to suffer a non-fatal injury than a helmeted motorcyclist when involved in a crash.

- Helmets are 67 percent effective in preventing brain injuries, and unhelmeted motorcyclists involved in crashes are three times more likely to suffer brain injuries than those wearing helmets.

- From 1984 through 2002, helmets saved the lives of 13,774 motorcyclists. If all motorcycler operators and passengers had worn helmets during that period, it is estimated that 9,508 additional lives would have been saved.

First Ride

NICK TELLERIA

Nick Telleria, 48, owner of Let's Ride in Burley, recently spoke with the Times-News about how he got started riding dirt bikes, what led him to open his own motorcycle shop, and his favorite rides. He also told us what he thinks about the government's restriction on youth four wheelers and dirt bikes:

Times-News: What got you started riding dirt bikes?

Nick Telleria: I got my first bike back when I was about 5 years old. We lived on a farm and we used bikes for irrigating, but that gradually evolved into more. I remember watching my first motorcycle race on TV, and thought it was cool. Later, my mom and dad took me to a local race. When I came home to my 1973 Yamaha 110, I stripped the lights and put metal plates on the front. I really fell in love with dirt bikes. I've been racing ever since.

T-N: What's your favorite kind of race?

NT: I haven't done motocross for a while. But I like endurance races. They hold those at Rock Creek Race Track (in Kimberly), here at the Rupert track, and in Idaho Falls. One of my favorites is doing the Idaho City race. That's an ISDT race. Basically, a six-hour race ... an endurance thing. You leave Idaho City and don't come back for six hours. You don't just flat out haul butt, but you have to pace yourself. It's about 100 to 130 miles long.

T-N: Do you ride with family?

NT: I took my 16-year-old son, Gage, on that ride with me last time. He's my main trail-riding buddy now. I keep riding and loving it, and now I've got him and his friends doing it too.

T-N: Why did you open your own shop?

NT: That's what I've always loved. I've always loved riding bikes ... four-wheelers. Any bikes. I always wanted a dirt-bike shop. I owned a custom-appliquer business, had it for 21 years. I'd go into the local motorcycle shop, owned by Richard Thompson, and asked him when he was going to sell. ... I bought it and got so busy I had to sell my applicator business. We changed the name to Let's Ride. ... It's been a good move. I hope it keeps going.

T-N: When there last, you had someone from Elko, Nev., buying a bike. Do you get a lot of out-of-towners?

NT: Yes, we get people from out of town all the time. We sponsor a lot of kids in motocross, and they travel through Nevada, Utah and Oregon, so we get a lot of racers who come in from out of town. We help them and give them some good deals. ... All the people who work here are enthusiasts. They know their bikes real well. A lot of time in big cities they try to sell the product, not the customer.

... I try to sell what's best for them (the customer), and I believe it's one reason for our success here. ... My wife, Gaylynn, really does a lot for the store.

T-N: What product do you sell?

NT: We sell Suzuki, KTM, Ski-Doo ... bikes, four-wheelers, snowmobiles ...

T-N: Has the government's restriction on youth bikes hampered business?

NT: Yeah, that's bad. All the little bikes — 50s, 60s 110s — were pulled off the market as of Feb 10. I still can't sell that stuff. They've brought back a few bikes we can sell to kids, the older-kid bikes like the 85s, 90s and 125s. But not the younger-kid bikes. I had one 35-year-old woman who wanted to buy a 125 for herself, and I couldn't sell it to her. I can now, but back then I couldn't. ... I thought the ban would be overturned by now, but it hasn't been. Everyone should voice their opinion about the issue.

T-N: What about four wheelers?

NT: I like dirt bikes better, but a good ATV ride is fun too. We sell more ATVs than anything. They're more family-oriented. Even though some women can outride guys, most women seem to be a little afraid of dirt bikes. Dirt bikes are a little harder to ride, so a lot of women and children are drawn to four wheelers.

T-N: Do you have a favorite place to ride?

NT: My favorite spot is up toward Stanley and Fairfield. There are a lot of good single-track trails up that way. You could ride up there all summer long and never come across the same trail twice. For ATVs, the South Hills are always a good place. One of my favorites, though, is riding from Soldier Mountain to Smiley Creek, about a 120-mile ride.

T-N: Any other comments?

NT: Biking is for everybody. Some people get the impression that you have to be a real bad ass or hellion to be a biker. But that's not the case. There are a lot of good families out there biking ... and there's a lot of country you'll never see unless you're on a bike.

Seattle Sports Co. offers audio in the outdoors

A self-powered iPod player may not make it onto your trip's list of mandatory gear. But for backpackers, canoe campers, and mountaineers wanting to bring tunes along into the wilderness — a little Neil Young around the campfire, anyone? — Seattle Sports Co.'s On the Go Audio product offers an option.

Plug your iPod or other MP3 player into this mini boombox and you get instant audio that can crank loud enough to have fellow campers calling a ranger to complain. But the main venue for this unit — which measures about 3 x 3 x 2 inches and weighs less than a pound — is in the backcountry.

It has a crank arm on the side to self-power and charge a battery.

There's a solar array on top, letting you put it in the sun while setting up a tent to store enough juice for some Led Zeppelin later on under the stars.

In my test, the unit performed as promised. It was easy to operate with my iPod or while scanning AM/FM radio stations. A third frequency range, the WB band, picks up weather and forecast information for the area.

Another nice touch is the unit's ability to charge an iPod or other USB-compatible player. A USB jack lets you mate your audio player with the On the Go Audio product. Crank the generator arm for a few minutes to add some life to your player's battery.

All this functionality fits in a carrying case, which stows an iPod, a cord, and the speaker in a zippered nylon box on a carabiner clip. It costs $50.

To me, this is a bargain of an item if you want audio outdoors. But performance and functionality are sacrificed for the low price.

To start, audio quality

THE GEAR JUNKIE
Stephen Regenold

from the tiny speaker is only mediocre. It has a limited range and can sound tinny. Don't expect to hear quiet bass lines or subtle guitar harmonics. I'd compare the sound to that heard from a low-grade laptop computer.

For charging the unit, you can use the crank arm.

But get ready to work. The amount of cranking required until full charge is silly — the company (www.seattlesportsco.com) cites 40 minutes at 180 revolutions per minute to full charge, which is an eternity while spinning a small whizzing arm. A solar charge is less efficient still. The time cited in direct sunlight to full charge is 35 hours.

I cheated and plugged my On the Go Audio into a wall outlet for a full charge before heading outdoors. The unit's lithium-ion battery stores enough electricity for seven hours of radio play.

But for longer trips, the crank arm is a nice backup. You can spin it for a few minutes to add some juice, playing songs or tuning in the radio to hear weather information until the charge drains dry.

In a tent, the volume turned low, the On the Go Audio is a cool enhancement on a long trip. Then, before a summit attempt or a hard day on the trail, crank it up for motivation. Nothing like a little Radiohead in the morning to wake you up, break that wilderness quiet, and get you moving strong.

OFF-ROAD BRIEFS

Four-wheel buggy company cuts back

NATCHEZ, Miss. — Four-wheel drive ATV manufacturer Bad Boy Buggies earlier this month reduced its work force to 20 employees in wake of declining revenues.

Jody Foster, CEO of the Natchez company, said fourth quarter sales fell 30 percent. In 2007, the company reported revenue of $22 million.

Foster said the company is looking for cost cuts anywhere they can be found.

The all-electric Bad Boy Buggy costs about $10,000.

Nevertheless, Foster said the company is releasing two new buggies this year, which should help to boost sales. One is an improved version of the baseline model, and the other is a more simplified version for around $7,000.

Cullman opens 1,456-acre park to off-road vehicles

DODGE CITY, Ala. — Cullman County has opened its 1,456-acre park for off-highway vehicles.

The March 14 opening was a little cold and muddy, but riders had no complaints while digging their tires into the trails of the $2.5 million Stony Lonesome OHV Park.

Marcus Broadway was among a half-dozen members of the Brotherhood ATV Riders, a group of men from Elkton Road Baptist Church in Athens.

They were the first paying customers at the park.

The group rides at ATV parks about once every six weeks.

Cullman county officials got federal grants to buy the land and build the park, and hope to turn Stony Lonesome into a regional tourist attraction.

Electric ATV maker hopes to tap into farmers market

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press writer

ASHLAND, Oregon — Electric all-terrain vehicles may not impress the dune- and trail-riding crowd that rides for recreation, but a few small companies expect organic farmers and vineyard growers will pay a premium to gather cattle and spray vines without the carbon footprint of a gas vehicle.

While automakers are toiling to produce electric cars that will fit the demands of American drivers, Ashland-based Barefoot Motors is on the verge of turning out heavy-duty ATVs that can go 50 miles (80 kilometers) on a charge costing about 90 cents.

"I think a lot of attention is focused on the more glamorous vehicles — the cars," said Chief Executive Max Scheder-Bieschin. "But there are lots of other applications where the strength of the technology can be focused."

Debby Zygielbaum, vineyard manager at organic Robert Sinskey Vineyards in Napa, Calif., test-drove an early Barefoot prototype last year and is eager to be an early adopter when production starts in June. She'd like to haul her spraying equipment without fogging the vines with exhaust fumes, and the ATV could get free power from the vineyard's solar panels.

"It's becoming feasible where it will actually become a working vehicle to use in the field," she said.

The Barefoot ATV's $12,000 price is 50 percent higher than a heavy-duty gas-powered ATV. But with gas around $2 a gallon and electricity averaging 11.35 cents a kilowatt-hour nationally, the cost evens out over seven years if a farmer drives 5,000 miles a year. It's even more cost-efficient for farms producing their own power from solar panels or manure digesters, and as gas prices go up.

Barefoot Motors, LLC CEO Max Scheder-Bieschin looks over the company's electric ATV production prototype without its body panels, March 11, at the company's test track in Ashland, Ore. The two DC electric motors are mounted front and back, and the lithium ion batteries are in the aluminum box under the driver's seat.

Barefoot is not the first electric ATV coming to market. Bad Boy Buggies in Natchez, Miss., has vehicles intended for hunters. Doran Electric Vehicles in Huntington Beach, Calif., has been selling the Gorilla for years. Zap Electric Vehicles in Santa Rosa, Calif. — where Scheder-Bieschin formerly worked — has a model called the Dude coming out soon.

The high price of Barefoot's model comes from the lithium iron phosphate batteries, the same technology General Motors Corp. is putting in the Chevrolet Volt electric car. To keep the price of the Dude around $5,000, Zap had to use lead-acid batteries, which charge slower and have less power.

"I think with electric vehicles, it's going to be hard, unless you use very expensive and exotic battery technology, to match the performance and price of gasoline vehicles," said Zap spokesman Alex Campbell. "Our goal was to simply make an affordable and powerful ATV that can satisfy the majority of the needs for ATV owners."

Rick Doran, president of Doran Electric Vehicles, is also skeptical that electric ATVs will replace gas-powered machines. He said his company has sold only a couple hundred at prices around $8,000. Some have gone to underground mining operations and electric utilities where the lack of exhaust and short turning radius are a plus.

"Personally, I don't think it's practical yet," he said of the technology.

But Scheder-Bieschin said customers don't have to compromise on performance, as long as their needs fit the vehicle. Farms smaller than 1,000 acres (404 hectares) are perfect. The vehicle can work the morning, get recharged at lunch, and go back out in the afternoon, all while staying close to their power source.

"Our goal is not necessarily to replace all the million ATVs every year," he said. "There is room for a different technology. There may be people who love their noise, who love their Harleys. But a guy going up and down the rows of a vineyard doesn't like the noise, doesn't like the fumes. If we can get 10,000 of those guys every year we'll be happy."

Question: Can I file bankruptcy without an attorney to save money?

Answer: Federal law does not require you to have an attorney to file bankruptcy. However, your creditors WILL be represented by attorneys. You will also have to deal with the Bankruptcy Trustee; an individual paid a commission to take your property away for the benefit of your creditors. The new bankruptcy laws are so complex that it is my opinion that no debtor in bankruptcy should be without legal representation. In fact, I don't believe that any individual, no matter how smart, could prepare and file a bankruptcy case on their own that complied in every respect with all the laws and rules of the court. BEWARE! The consequences of saving money by representing yourself could be far more expensive than the cost of retaining a first-rate bankruptcy attorney. You could lose some things you own AND have your bankruptcy case dismissed.

"It would be detrimental. Very detrimental," he said.

Beau Richan, 14, came from Idaho Falls to the Kimberly track with his family for weekend riding.

"It would suck if I couldn't ride. It's all I do," he said. "I have to keep my grades up to ride, so after school I do my homework and run two-miles to stay in shape. If it wasn't for riding ... I don't know what I would do."

His father says he is lucky. "He just stepped up into the bigger bike," said Robi Richan. "He gives up everything to do motocross. He's the reason we ride. If he couldn't, we wouldn't ride."

That all-in-the-family attitude is already costing Magic Valley bike dealers money.

Rob Glodowski, vice-president of Action Cycles n' Sleds in Twin Falls, said his store has missed out on about 12 youth bike and ATV sales and a number of adult bike sales since the legislation went into effect.

"One man came in wanting to outfit all three of his kids with bikes. The older two were OK, but we couldn't sell a bike to the youngest one, so he decided, in order to be fair, to wait," Glodowski said.

The store has $80,000 in inventory collecting dust while the CPSC sorts out regulation details.

"At this point we are still optimistic that this provision in the law will be overturned. But it is frustrating," Glodowski said. "The biggest problem is that (CPSC) hasn't released any firm guidelines. The bikes that we have put back could actually meet the law, but we don't know yet. In the meantime, they haven't released how manufacturers can alter the bikes so they do meet guidelines."

Let's Ride in Burley is sitting on more than $50,000 worth of inventory the shop can't sell, said owner Nick Telleria.

"I haven't even totaled up the parts, accessories and other supplies," he said. "I'm scared to find out how much inventory I actually have that I can't move right now."

While area dealers are feeling a definite blow to their bottom line, Telleria said the otherwise strong agricultural market is softening the blow. Other parts of the country aren't faring so well, he said.

"I just got a big shipment of repo bikes from a California dealer," Telleria said. "I wouldn't be surprised if a lot of dealers go out because of this deal."

Telleria said he is surprised that the ban hasn't been overturned by now, but said the movement, including 90 cc-sized bikes now out from under the new law, give reason for hope.

"We just need to keep telling Congress to get this overturned. The more noise they hear the faster this will get sorted out," he said.

Find Aries, the ram with the Golden Fleece

The zodiac constellations enjoy unequaled name recognition. Their names appear in newspapers more than Lindsay Lohan's, courtesy of the horoscope column. But, as with celebrities, a constellation's fame doesn't necessarily make it a standout among its peers.

Consider Aries, the ram. Among the 12 zodiac constellations, it's the second smallest, and its brightest star Hamal is no brighter than the stars of the Big Dipper.

Mythologically, Aries represents the ram whose golden fleece inspired the voyage of Jason and the Argonauts. According to legend, the golden ram was sent by Poseidon to spirit two children away from their homicidally jealous stepmother. The girl, Helles, lost her grip on the ram's coat and fell, drowning in the narrow straight between the Aegean and Black Seas, now named the Hellespont in her honor. The boy, Phrixus, sacrificed the ram as an offering to the gods for his safe passage and hung the Golden Fleece on a tree, where it was guarded by a dragon until stolen by Jason. The ram, for its part, was honored with a constellation.

Although Aries isn't outstandingly bright, the dog-leg shape formed by its three brightest stars stands out fairly well in a dark corner of the sky. Currently, it's a bit more than one closed fist at arm's length above the west-northwest horizon at 9 p.m. On

SKY CALENDAR THROUGH THURSDAY

Planets
One hour before sunrise:
Jupiter: ESE, very low
Saturn: W, extremely low
One hour after sunset:
Saturn: ESE, mid-sky

New Moon today, 10:06 a.m.

Saturday night the waxing crescent moon will sit immediately to the left of Aries.

Seeing Aries right now should give astrology devotees pause: According to the horoscope page, if you were born between March 21 and April 20, you're an Aries (since the sun was among the stars of Aries on your birthday). While this was true thousands of years ago, the Earth's slowly shifting axis now puts the sun in Pisces during most of this period, a fact that many astrologers gloss over.

Next week: 100 hours of astronomy.

The dune buggy with Alan Fine in the driver's seat throws up a shower of gravel and a cloud of dust as the front wheels lift at the beginning of a fast-paced wheelie March 8, in Coldwater, Kan.

Buggies

People don't realize the money that goes into building a dune buggy, and he's not making much on the ones he sells, Fine said.

If he figured in his time, he might be losing money. A top performance engine can cost upward of $15,000, and he's asking $20,000 for the yellow buggy.

Back in the shop, Fine's son, Josh, 12, knows he's too young to drive a dune buggy. In the meantime, he's hoping for a four-wheeler that he's probably not going to get.

They've seen some pretty bad wrecks involving ATV riders and motorcyclists airlifted to hospitals from the Little Sahara Sand Dunes in Waynoka, Okla., where they ride dune buggies. As a testament to the safety of the buggies, he's seen wrecks that flipped the vehicle hard and the driver wound up bruised but seldom are drivers hurt badly enough to go to the hospital, Fine said.

Dune-buggy season at the Little Sahara opens the first Sunday after Easter. That means the Fines will watch a lineup of weekend drivers pulling trailers filled with dune buggies, four-wheelers and motorcycles from central Kansas on the road past their place. He's not sure he wants to ride his yellow machine there and take a chance on it getting hit.

As promised, Girk returned the next day with insurance in hand, loaded up her new purchase and hauled it to her garage, awaiting a break in the weather so she can "go play."

With 280 horsepower and weighing in at 1,600 pounds, it's a "pretty good" balance, and even if she's running on some pretty soft sand she'll be able to stay on top instead of digging in and sinking, Fine said.

In the break between building dune buggies, Fine gathers material and writes down ideas for the next one — things he can do to make it look or perform better.

Because he puts in so much time in the planning, it's hard to sell what he creates. But at the same time, he likes the challenge of making each one different. The designs evolve from trial and error.

"It's a lot of fun," he said.

Notebook

Research Institute concluded that wearing motorcycle helmets does not restrict a rider's ability to hear auditory signals or see a vehicle in an adjacent lane.

Like Utah, the Gem State requires anyone younger than 18 years old to wear a helmet when riding on a motorcycle, either as driver or passenger. Those 18 and older can choose if they wear a helmet or not.

That's good news for some riders, who say they don't want to be forced into a helmet law. I can understand that, to a point. I've driven my bike more than once without a helmet, and I won't say it's not fun. There's something to be said about wind whipping through your hair, even if you only have a little of it left.

Then I think of Jacob Hill, how he considered himself one of the lucky ones because he wore a helmet.

Lucky? Definitely. But there's no question he also was wise.

Jerome school levy goes to the polls Tuesday

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — On Tuesday, the Jerome School District will find out if it will still have $650,000 in yearly funding it has relied on for the past 10 years.

District voters will go to the polls from noon to 9 p.m. Tuesday to vote on a one-year renewal of the district's yearly $650,000 supplemental levy.

District Business Manager Mike Gibson said the district has been careful to keep the levy amount unchanged.

The levy rate will be $6.42 for every $1,000 of assessed property value. It needs a simple majority to pass.

Gibson has said that funding provided through the levy, if approved, will continue to help district technology and reading instruction, as well as remediation for students.

"We use it to keep classes lower in size for the reading program that requires each student to be reading by the third grade and we use it for reading and math programs that the state cannot fund," he said.

Jerome High School Vice Principal Eric Anderson said that the long-running levy has "provided well for the students."

"I think this supplemental levy might be more important this year than any other," he said.

Polls will be open at each of the district's schools. "We have so appreciated the voters support all these years and we are counting on them this year," Anderson said.

More information on the levy is available at the district's Web site,

Hazelton student qualifies for state geography bee

Jesse Nelson, son of Bryant and Sonya Nelson, has been named as one of the semifinalists eligible to compete in the 2009 Idaho Geographic Bee, sponsored by Google and Plum Creek. Nelson is in the seventh grade at Valley Middle School in Hazelton.

Bees for fourth- through eighth-grade students throughout the state determined each school's Geographic Bee winner. School-level winners took a qualifying test, which was submitted to the National Geographic Society. In every state, the National Geographic Society invited the students with the top 100 scores to compete at the state level. The 2009 Idaho Geographic Bee will be at Boise State University on April 3.

The state winner will receive $100, the "National Geographic Collegiate Atlas of the World" and a trip to Washington, D.C. in May to represent Idaho in the national finals at the National Geographic Society headquarters. The winner of the national finals will get a $25,000 college scholarship and a lifetime membership to the society.

Cause of muscle spasms, numbness difficult to find

DEAR DR. GOTT: Ten months ago, I woke up with numbness, tingling and muscle spasms throughout my body. The sensations lasted just over a week and then went away.

Over the next few months, they would come back occasionally in my face and head for up to a week, only to disappear again. I would describe the feeling as electrical currents running through my face and head and numbness in my nose and lips.

I went to see my primary care physician, who sent me to a neurologist. He checked my reflexes, examined my gait and sent me home. Several weeks later, I went to a different neurologist, who ordered X-rays and an MRI of my head and neck. Because of some disc misalignment, I was given exercises to do.

This helped, but I continued to have problems, now in my lower back, down into my buttocks and legs.

My sleep is affected because I have muscle spasms that run from my back, around to my stomach, and down both legs into my feet. When I wake up, I feel as though I have run a marathon. It used to only be occasionally, but now it seems like it happens every night and has progressed to the point where I requested a prescription sleep aid because I couldn't sleep at all. I don't like taking medication, but not sleeping is worse than taking too many pills.

I was referred for physical therapy but quit after three weeks because there was no significant change in my situation. Now I am frustrated and depressed because no one can tell me what is causing these symptoms and how to make them stop.

I am currently waiting to see the neurologist again. He ordered X-rays of my thoracic and lumbar spine,

Idaho teacher sells advertising space on tests

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

POCATELLO — Good morning, class, and welcome to U.S. history, brought to you by Molto Caldo Pizzeria.

In a cash-strapped Idaho high school where signs taped near every light switch remind the staff to save electricity, an enterprising teacher has struck a sponsorship deal with a local pizza shop: Every test, handout and worksheet he passes out to his students reads MOLTO'S PIZZA 14" 1 TOPPING JUST $5 in bright red, inch-high letters printed along the bottom of every page.

"I just wanted to find a way to save money," said Jeb Harrison, who teaches history and economics. "We have to sell ads for our yearbook, for our school newspaper. I don't think this small amount of advertising will change my classroom?"

School officials were not wild about the idea, but Pocatello High School Principal Don Cotant relented after Harrison explained the advertisements could help illuminate such topics as the Great Depression.

"I had concerns. I didn't know what this would open up for us," Cotant said. "But we've let this happen because it makes a point about what economic hard times can force people to do."

As school districts across the country face the worst economic outlook in decades, educators who have long reached into their own pockets to buy classroom supplies are finding creative ways to cover expenses. But selling ads on schoolwork is practically unheard of.

The 12,000-student school district in and around Pocatello — an old railroad town of about 55,000, where Idaho State University and a semiconductor plant are among the biggest employers up to $10 million next year because of expected cuts in state aid. A tax increase was voted down last month, and school officials have frozen spending on field trips, teacher training and basic supplies such as paper.

Molto Caldo Pizzeria, about a mile from the high school, agreed to supply paper for Harrison's five classes — 10,000 sheets, valued at $315, and imprinted with a pizza ad. That should be enough paper for the rest of this school year and all of the next one. On a recent day, Harrison handed out photocopies of Dust Bowl images, emblazoned with the pizza ad. The ad also appeared on an economics test he gave last week on the Depression.

"I thought it was a great idea. I mean, the levy didn't pass. We can't get enough money from the state. We've got to find some way to get it," said one of Harrison's students, 17-year-old Benjamin Simms.

Marianne Donnelly, chairwoman of the school board, said the ad apparently violates a district policy barring schools from directly promoting businesses. But she said the board considers the ad harmless and is not making an issue out of it.

"Give the teacher credit for creativity," Donnelly said. "There's no question we're in desperate financial straits."

Elsewhere, nonprofit organizations are helping teachers obtain free or discounted classroom supplies, and Web sites match educators with benefactors willing to buy materials. But Harrison's approach has at least one critic worried the idea will spread.

"It crosses a line," said Susan Linn, a Harvard psychologist and director of the Campaign for a Commercial-Free Childhood. "When teachers start becoming pitchmen for products, children suffer and their education suffers as well."

which showed normal but not significant degeneration, mild to moderate spurring and mild scoliosis. I assume the next step will be to have an MRI of these areas.

I don't know what else to do. The pain is not extreme or debilitating, but when the muscle spasms start, sleeping, standing and walking become challenging, if not impossible. My coordination is also suffering because my leg muscles have become so stressed.

DEAR READER: Your symptoms suggest to me that you have a pinched, compressed or damaged nerve somewhere in your back. Given the numbness, tingling and spasms are confined to your lower back, buttocks and legs, I would venture to guess the problem lies somewhere near your sciatic nerve.

Sciatica usually affects only one leg but on occasion can affect both. Your X-rays have shown only mild degenerative changes, but this does not mean serious damage isn't occurring because of them. If a disc slips a fraction of a millimeter in the wrong direction, it can create tremendous pain and debilitating symptoms.

I understand this is a difficult situation, but I urge you to follow your neurologist's advice. In the meantime, try low-impact exercise and stretching in an attempt to strengthen your back muscles. Stronger muscles can hold the discs and vertebrae in a better alignment. Perhaps chiropractic manipulation, acupuncture or acupressure might help.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 to Newsletter, PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. ## Delfin Ordaz BELLEVUE — Our dear companion and friend, James Delfin Ordaz, age 42, came to rest Sunday, March 22, 2009, at his home in Bellevue.

Delfin was born on March 30, 1966, in Salinas, Calif., to Shirley and Anthony Ordaz.

He is survived by his beloved Laurie Lindsey; her three daughters, Melissa (Cory) James, Ryan (Garret) Roche and Shelly Lindsey; grandchildren, Tevan and Idris James, Luella, Fionn and Ronan Roche; his mother, Shirley Ordaz; sisters, Tonnette (Jim) Kennison and Laurie (Nick) Palmer; and brother, Tom Ordaz.

Delfin's younger years were spent in California, Jerome and Montana. He moved to Ketchum when he was 18. A big fish in a small pond, he boasted he was a friend to more people in the Valley than anyone else. He loved people. Delfin was known as "The Pizza King" at Whiskey Jacques, where he worked for 12 years. Everyone in the Valley had eaten at least one "Delfin Supreme," and had traded him something for a pizza at one time or another. He prided himself on being the only person who could throw a pizza over the rafters at Whiskey's.

Our Pizza King eventually retired his toss, going to work for Erwin Excavation, where he enjoyed 11 years as a heavy equipment operator. He genuinely loved his work and fellow employees. His passions included his dogs, his garden, high school football, riding bareback bucking horses and fishing. Delfin was an animal lover and truly cherished his two dogs, Murphy and Roxy. An avid gardener, this is the time of year he would love the most, being able to see the green grass emerge and his tulips bloom.

Delfin often sported his old high school football jersey, so proud it would still fit. He was a true cowboy, and even with his bareback rodeo days well behind him, he knew there was still no horse he couldn't break. He could regularly be found at Magic either ice fishing or launching his boat, The Blue Fin. Magic Reservoir was a special place always near and dear to Delfin's heart. This is where he met Laurie one romantic summer night that lasted 12 beautiful years. His voice, his laugh and his big brown eyes will be missed forever. Here's to you, Fin: We love you forever, we will miss you deeply and we thank you for all the kindness, laughter and generosity that you gave.

Friends may call from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday, March 27, at the Wood River Chapel in Hailey and one hour prior to the memorial service, which will be at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 28, at St. Charles Catholic Church, with the Rev. Wendy Collins speaking. Cremation will follow the service under the care of Wood River Chapel of Hailey. The obituary and a guest book are available at www.woodriverchapel.com.

Distinguished historian John Hope Franklin dies at 94

By Wil Haygood
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — John Hope Franklin, one of the most prolific and well-respected chroniclers of America's torturous racial odyssey, died of congestive heart failure Wednesday in a Durham, N.C., hospital. He was 94.

It was more than Franklin's voluminous writings that cemented his reputation among academics, politicians and civil rights figures as an inestimable historian. It was the reality that Franklin, himself a black man, had seen racial horrors up close and thus was able to give his academic work a stinging ballast.

Franklin was a young boy when his family lost everything in the Tulsa race riot of 1921. The violence was precipitated by reports that a black youth assaulted a white teenage girl in a downtown elevator. In the end more than 40 people died, mostly blacks, although some reports put the death total much higher.

Franklin was among the first black scholars to earn prominent posts at America's top — and predominantly white — universities. His research and his personal success helped pave the way both for other blacks and for the field of black studies, which began to blossom on American campuses in the Sixties.

In time, a second generation of eminent black scholars — Harvard's Henry Louis Gates Jr., Georgetown's Michael Eric Dyson and Princeton's Cornel West — would follow Franklin to the heights of America's most illustrious schools.

"He gave us a common language," Gates, director of the W.E.B. DuBois Institute for African and African American Research at Harvard, said Wednesday. "As the author of a seminal textbook, 'From Slavery to Freedom,' Franklin gave us young black scholars a common language to speak to each other. He had invented a genre out of whole cloth."

Gates, a former recipient of a MacArthur "genius grant," for years was curious as to who had recommended him. He attended a dinner once with Franklin, and Franklin confided that he had been the one to recommend Gates. "And I cried at the table we were sitting at. A lot of us called John Hope 'the Prince.' He had such a regal bearing. We're all the children of John Hope."

Clinton says U.S. shares blame for Mexican drug wars

By Matthew Lee
Associated Press writer

MEXICO CITY — U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton on Wednesday pledged to stand “shoulder to shoulder” with Mexico in its violent struggle against drug cartels, and admitted America’s demand for illegal narcotics and arms markets was partly to blame.

After allowing that an “insatiable” appetite for illicit drugs in the U.S. along with relatively easy access to powerful war are drug violence in Mexico that threatens greater spill over across the border, Clinton promised to boost cooperation to improve security on both sides.

“The criminals and kingpins spreading violence are trying to corrode the foundations of law, order, friendship and trust between us that support our continent,” she told a news conference with Mexican Foreign Relations Secretary Patricia Espinosa. “They will fail.”

“We will stand shoulder to shoulder with you,” she said after lengthy talks with Espinosa and Mexican President Felipe Calderon.

On Tuesday, the Obama administration pledged to send more money, technology and manpower to secure the border in the U.S. Southwest and help Mexico battle the cartels.

Clinton said Wednesday the White House would also seek an additional $80 million to help Mexico buy Blackhawk helicopters.

All that is in addition to a three-year, $1.4 billion Bush administration-era program to support Mexico’s efforts. Congress already has approved $700 million of that. President Barack Obama has said he wants to revamp the initiative.

Obama also said Tuesday he wanted the U.S. to do more to prevent guns and cash from illicit drug sales from flowing into Mexico.

But Clinton’s remarks were more forceful in recognizing the U.S. share of the blame. In the past Mexican officials have complained that Washington failed to acknowledge the extent that U.S. drug demand and weapons smuggling fuels the violence.

“I feel very strongly we have a co-responsibility,” Clinton told reporters aboard her plane on her way to Mexico.

“Our insatiable demand for illegal drugs fuels the drug trade,” she said. “Our inability to prevent weapons from being illegally smuggled across the border to arm these criminals causes the deaths of police officers, soldiers and civilians.”

Criminals are outgunning law enforcement officials, she said, referring to guns and military-style equipment such as night-vision goggles and body armor that the cartels are smuggling from the U.S.

“Clearly, what we have been doing has not worked and it is unfair for our incapacity ... to be creating a situation where people are holding the Mexican government and people responsible,” she said. “That’s not right.”

Officials said her priorities included encouraging Calderon’s government to increase its battle against rampant corruption by promoting police and judicial reform.

N. KOREA

Clinton: Plan to fire missile ‘provocative’

MEXICO CITY — Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton on Wednesday warned North Korea that firing a missile for any purpose would be a “provocative act” that would have consequences.

North Korea is loading a rocket on a launch pad in anticipation of the launch of a communications satellite between April 4 and 8, U.S. counterproliferation and intelligence officials said.

North Korea announced its intention to launch the satellite in February, but regional powers worry the claim is a cover for the launch of a long-range missile capable of reaching Alaska.

Clinton told reporters during a visit to Mexico City that the U.S. believes the North Korean plan to fire a missile for any purpose would violate a U.N. Security Council resolution barring the country from ballistic activity. She linked a missile launch to the future of talks between the U.S., North Korea and four other nations aimed at ending North Korea’s nuclear weapons program.

“We have made it very clear that the North Koreans pursue this pathway at a cost and with consequences to the six-party talks, which we would like to see revived,” Clinton said.

MEXICO

Mexico captures another trafficker

MEXICO CITY — Soldiers captured one of Mexico’s most-wanted smugglers, a man accused of controlling the flow of drugs through the northern city of Monterrey for the powerful Beltran-Leyva cartel, the Mexican army said Wednesday.

The announcement came hours before U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton arrived in Mexico promising to do more to help Mexico crack down on drug violence that is spilling over into the U.S.

Gen. Luis Arturo Oliver said Hector Huerta was detained Tuesday in a Monterrey suburb, along with four men identified as his bodyguards. Soldiers also seized assault rifles and four grenades.

Huerta was arrested on an outstanding homicide warrant; the other four suspects were being held pending charges.

SAUDI ARABIA

Women launch lingerie shop boycott

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — A group of Saudi women — sick of having to deal with male sales staff when buying bras or panties, not to mention frilly negligees or thongs — have launched a campaign this week to boycott lingerie stores until they employ women.

It’s an irony of the kingdom’s strict segregation of the sexes. Only men are employed as sales staff to keep women from having to deal with male customers or work around men.

But in lingerie stores, that means men are talking to women about bras or thongs, looking them up and down to determine their cup sizes, even rubbing the underwear to show how stains can be washed out.

UConn to probe recruiting allegations about Miles

Alleged violations have no link to CSI program

Staff and wire reports

Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said he and the university are looking into a Yahoo! Sports report claiming the school broke NCAA rules during the recruitment of current College of Southern Idaho basketball player Nate Miles, but added Miles is not at UConn and his team remains focused on the NCAA Tournament.

Yahoo reported Wednesday that

Miles, a 6-7 guard from Toledo, Ohio, was given lodging, transportation, meals and representation by sports agent Josh Nochimson, and a UConn assistant coach knew about the relationship between the player and the agent. The story cited interviews, documents obtained under Freedom of Information laws and other sources.

Nochimson, a former student manager for UConn, was consid-

Records also show that five UConn coaches called Nochimson and text-messaged him at least 1,565 times during a nearly two-year period before and after Miles' recruitment in 2006 and early 2007. Calhoun had 16 of those communications, Yahoo reported.

"Some of this is old news as far as the agent goes," CSI head coach Steve Gosar told the Times-News. "The NCAA looked into that relationship last summer and found no improprieties.

"As far as the recruiting issues go, that's totally UConn's deal."

Miles was expelled from UConn in October without ever playing a game for the Huskies after he was charged with violating a restraining order in a case involving a woman who claimed he assaulted her. He enrolled at CSI on Oct. 22 and played nine games for the Golden Eagles after sitting out 16 weeks according to NJCAA transfer rules.

The Triple Threat

Sophomore starters are core of CSI outfield

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

They've got the most ground to cover out in the grassy wedge of Eagle Field.

One hit that blows past them to the fence could allow a run. One dropped ball could allow a run. One underthrown or overthrow ball to the bag or plate could allow a run. It's a tough job, but the No. 10 College of Southern Idaho softball team has found its best option for the outfield: Cassi Merrill, Dani Grant and Erin Olander, the sophomore starters.

Through 40 games, the three have combined for 99 putouts on 109 chances and only three errors. Against a Colorado Northwestern Community College-type team, they could probably nap through a doubleheader, but when it's time to go to work against a Salt Lake Community College or a College of Southern Nevada, the Golden Eagles (28-10-2, 21-5 Scenic West Athletic Conference) can rely on them to make plays.

"It's their willingness to go get the ball," CSI head coach Nick Baumert

This weekend's doubleheader: No. 10 College of Southern Idaho at No. 7 Salt Lake Community College; 1 p.m., Friday; noon, Saturday

CSI last week: 4-0 against Colorado Northwest Community College (W 15-0, W 17-0, W 18-0, W 8-0).

SLCC last week: 4-0 against Western Nevada College (W 13-3, W 14-0, W 9-0, W 10-0).

Last meeting: The Golden Eagles and the Bruins split a four-game series in St. George, Utah, back in early February. All games were decided by three runs or fewer.

About the Bruins: Much like CSI, Salt Lake can boast of multiple batters hitting more than .400 and pitchers with ERAs at 2.00 or under. Stacie Graham leads at the plate with a .486 average through 33 games. Lisa Riches is batting .419 with 13 home runs and 48 RBIs. Sarah Clarke (13-2) heads up the pitching staff with a 1.98 ERA and 108 strikeouts through 84.2 innings.

Nick's notes: "After a month and a half, both teams are going to look different. We were still tinkering with our lineups a bit, not that we're super set (now) but we're getting a lot closer. I saw that in the Southern Nevada weekend... I think we'll swing it a little better against their pitching, and I think we have a better idea of what they want to do to us as hitters. I think we're going to play better defense than we did at that point."

Missouri, Memphis match energy, intensity

The Associated Press

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Missouri and Memphis have much more in common than a nickname.

Energy, intensity and speed will be on display in this Tiger vs. Tiger semifinal at the NCAA West Regional Thursday night.

"You will see some things that you marvel at," Missouri coach Mike Anderson said. "You will probably see some things like 'Wow, did he do that?'"

Anderson needs everybody to keep up with the deep, talented Conference USA champions, and he got a scare Wednesday when one of his most relentless players DeMarre Carroll twisted his left ankle in practice and limped off the court. Carroll downplayed the incident.

"Trying to make a move and I tweaked my ankle a little bit," he said. "But at this point, it is the Sweet 16, I'm 100 percent."

Idaho football looks for answers in spring camp

For the Times-News

Every college football coach enters the annual rite of spring practice with questions he hopes to have answered in just 15 practice sessions. Idaho's Robb Akey is no exception.

"My expectation is to come out of this spring a better football team than we went into it," said Akey, who opens his third spring session with the Vandals today. "I want to see us get good at our base offense, our defense and our special teams. We'll start with those then expand as we go throughout spring."

Idaho's spring practices including four outings in March and 11 more in April. There are questions to be answered, including along both lines where plenty of new faces look to emerge.

Blending the defensive front is the first task at hand for new defensive line coach Eti Ena. Linebackers coach Rob Christoff, the other new face in Akey's staff, faces a challenge similar to Ena's.

The offensive line was depleted by the graduation of center Adam Korby, who started every game of his four-year career. Tackle Billy Bates, and Kris Anderson, who split time between guard and tackle, also depart.

"We need to find out what that offensive line is going to be," Akey said. "There are going to be some new faces, some new starters in that group."

The group includes senior Mike Iupati, who came back from shoulder surgery to play a solid role at left guard last season. Seniors Irv Stevens and Bryce Sinclair also saw plenty of action, which included time in starting roles. Matt

Fjeld, T.F. Bruin softball roll past Minico Spartans

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Tuesday night, Twin Falls senior Katelyn Fjeld signed a National Letter of Intent to play softball at Bethany College, a NAIA program in Kansas.

On Wednesday, Fjeld and her Bruins teammates celebrated by stomping Minico 18-3 in five innings.

Despite bitter cold and windy weather, Fjeld allowed zero runs and struck out six in three innings of work.

"It was hard to pitch with the cold," Fjeld said. "It took me almost an hour to get fully warmed up and some of my pitches weren't working as well as they could have on a better day. It was hard to get the grip because my hand was numb."

Minico starting pitcher Jena Bingham retired the first three Bruin batters in order in the first inning, but had trouble locating in the second. She walked three batters to load the bases, and then Twin Falls scored its first four runs on wild pitches.

Kelsie Bryant capped the big second inning with a three-RBI triple.

Twin Falls leadoff hitter Kim Dolecheck had four RBIs with a single, double and triple.

"I was just trying to see the ball, watching from the hip, shortening up and just stroking it," Dolecheck said. "It's really hard to see where the ball's going to go when it's blowing everywhere. I think we made good adjustments today."

The Bruins' 10 hits could have been more, but the wind blowing from left field turned deep line drives into pop-ups.

Twin Falls (4-2) coach Ken Johnson said he was pleased with his team's focus after driving through a rainstorm en route to the game, unsure whether or not it would be played.

For Minico (0-7), Tory Sanford roped a shot down the right field line and turned it into an inside-the-park home run to score the Spartans' three runs.

"This is one of our better games, mentally, of the season," said first-year Minico coach Steve Latta. "We fought off the cold and had some difficult things happen and they just stayed mentally tough."

Extra-base hits - 2B: Burley, Carli Parish, Sydnie Koch, Mills. 3B: Burley, Mills.

An emphatic 15-0 run-rule win preceded an 8-4 nightcap victory as the Burley softball team swept visiting Bonneville on Wednesday afternoon.

Molly Mills pitched two victories, including a two-hit shutout in the three-inning opener, for the 3-1 Bobcats. Burley spread the hitting around, head coach Tim Campbell said, in getting the win.

One cause for concern was the three runs Bonneville posted in the first inning of Game 2, but the Bobcats responded after appearing to switch off for a few innings.

"I don't think anyone went hitless for our team today. It was good to see everyone participating and contributing," Campbell said. "We jumped out, and Molly pitched well for us. We started slow in the second game but once we got going we were fine."

Burley is scheduled to travel to Rigby on Friday, weather permitting. The Bobcats will host Preston on Saturday.

Minico's Chavez, Burley's Smith sign with Montana-Western

Times-News

Minico's Joey Chavez and Burley's Kalen Smith each signed a Frontier Conference/NAIA Letter of Intent to play football at the University of Montana Western.

Chavez, a 5-foot-11, 205-pound linebacker, recorded 68 tackles, three fumble recoveries and an interception during his senior year to help the Spartans to their fourth consecutive Great Basin Conference West championship and the Class 4A state semifinals.

"I'm really excited about it. I'm glad I got the opportunity to play," Chavez said. "They (Montana Western) gave me a chance and I knew that football is what I want to do. I feel like I've worked hard enough and I'll keep working."

Chavez

Chavez said he spoke with the handful of former Minico players who have already gone on to play at UMW, and that aided in his decision.

"I like the fact that they work hard up there," Chavez said. "The coaches push their kids to their full potential and they're a close team."

Chavez is the son of Joe and Pauline Chavez.

Smith, a 2008 graduate of Burley High School, is a 6-foot, 165-pound wide receiver who had 40 receptions for 520 yards his senior year. He spent the past year attending College of Southern Idaho.

"It was weird how it happened, actually," Smith said of his signing with UMW. "At first I wasn't going to go play, I was just going to go to college. I had a buddy who went there and he said I should check it out."

Smith contacted the UMW coaching staff, including head coach Rich Ferris, and they liked what they saw in Smith's highlight video. He took an official visit last month and decided to become a Bulldog.

"Toward the end of high school, I was like, maybe (playing college football) is just a dream and maybe I should just get my education done. But then I came to (CSI) for school and I knew I needed to be doing something else."

Smith is the son of Tab and Tami Smith. He earned all-conference honors his senior year and also played basketball at Burley High.

Cleveland Cavaliers forward LeBron James (23) flexes his muscles after scoring against the New Jersey Nets in the third quarter Wednesday in Cleveland. The Cavs won 98-87.

Cavs set franchise record for wins

CLEVELAND — LeBron James and these Cleveland Cavaliers have risen to the top.

James scored 22 points with 11 assists and made all the right moves in the closing minutes as the too-tough-at-home Cavaliers set a franchise record with their 58th win — and 10th straight — by beating the New Jersey Nets 98-87 on Wednesday night.

With 11 games left in the regular season, the Cavs already have surpassed the club mark of 57 wins shared by the 1988-89 and 1991-92 teams. Also, James joined Hall of Famer Oscar Robertson as the only players in NBA history to post 2,000 points, 500 rebounds and 500 assists in a season at least four times.

Cleveland, which trailed 82-81 with less than 4 minutes left, also improved to an NBA-best 33-1 at home.

Vince Carter scored 20 for the Nets.

WIZARDS 95, BOBCATS 93

WASHINGTON — Antawn Jamison scored 27 points, Nick Young had 23 and short-handed Washington held off Charlotte.

Mike James and Andray Blatche added 15 points each for the Wizards, had only eight players available and rallied from a 20-point deficit.

Gerald Wallace led

Charlotte with 21 points and 11 rebounds, but missed a potential tying free throw with 6.5 seconds left.

SPURS 102, HAWKS 92

ATLANTA — Tony Parker scored 42 points and San Antonio, playing without Tim Duncan, ended Atlanta's eight-game home winning streak.

Parker enjoyed his second-best scoring total of the season. He set a career high with 55 points at Minnesota on Nov. 5.

Joe Johnson had 30 points, including Atlanta's first 11 points of the fourth quarter, but he had too little help as the Hawks suffered their first loss at Philips Arena since March 1.

PACERS 90, HEAT 88

INDIANAPOLIS — Danny Granger scored 28 points and Indiana continued its home-court mastery of cold-shooting Dwyane Wade and Miami.

Wade, the NBA scoring leader at almost 30 points a game, scored 21 but was just 5-of-24 from the field and missed a shot at the buzzer that would have tied it.

76ERS 96, TIMBERWOLVES 88

PHILADELPHIA — Thaddeus Young scored 29 points and Andre Miller had 15 to lead Philadelphia past Minnesota.

The Sixers are the worst 3-point shooting team in the NBA and hadn't made one all game until the fourth quarter. Andre Iguodala and Royal Ivey hit two apiece in the quarter to open up a double-digit lead and led Philadelphia to its third straight win.

RAPTORS 115, BUCKS 106

TORONTO — Andrea Bargnani scored 23 points, and Chris Bosh and Jose Calderon had double-doubles to lead the Raptors.

Bosh had 18 points and 14 rebounds, Calderon added 19 points and 11 assists to help the Raptors win consecutive games for the first time since Feb. 22-24. Shawn Marion scored 17 points, Anthony Parker had 15 and Jason Kapono 14.

CLIPPERS 140, KNICKS 135, OT

NEW YORK — Mike Taylor more than doubled his career high with 35 points, Zach Randolph added 33 against his former team, and the Los Angeles Clippers outlasted New York.

Al Thornton scored 21 and Eric Gordon had 19 for the Clippers, who snapped a nine-game road losing streak.

NUGGETS 101, HORNETS 88

NEW ORLEANS — Carmelo Anthony scored 29 points and Denver snapped

New Orleans' three-game winning streak.

Chauncey Billups scored 26 points, hitting four of his five 3-pointers in the second half to help the Nuggets pull away after the game was tied with a little over 7 minutes to go in the third quarter.

Chris Paul had 19 points and 13 assists, and David West scored 18 points for New Orleans.

MAGIC 84, CELTICS 82

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard blocked a potential go-ahead layup by Boston's Paul Pierce with 3.8 seconds left, and Orlando clinched its second straight Southeast Division title.

Howard had 24 points and 21 rebounds as the Magic (53-18) bumped Boston (54-19) by percentage points for second in the Eastern Conference behind Cleveland.

MAVERICKS 128, WARRIORS 106

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki and Jason Terry came back from a four-day break as sharp as ever and J.J. Barea led a late surge, helping Dallas cruise past Golden State.

Nowitzki and Terry each finished with 26 points, and Barea had 20 as the Mavericks shot 58.5 percent and scored their most points of the season.

Missouri (30-6) and Memphis (33-3) are right where they were supposed to wind up after being tabbed the No. 3 and No. 2 seed in the region, respectively.

Anderson, a disciple of Nolan Richardson at Arkansas, coached the Tigers to the Big 12 tournament championship in just his third season at Missouri. And he knows how to beat Memphis.

The last time Memphis lost a Conference USA contest — to UAB 62 games ago — Anderson was the opposing coach.

"We saw each other in the hallway out there and I said 'It is going to be another boxing match, I can just see it coming,'" John Calipari said after the teams worked out at University of Phoenix Stadium. "And he laughed, because we have had wars."

Missouri's Leo Lyons said that when Anderson first arrived in Columbia, one of the first things the new coach did was show the videotape of that UAB-Memphis game.

"And we watched that UAB tape, watched how they pushed the ball," Lyons said. "We had a major goal watching that trying to come from where we're, not knowing anything about his system, to where we are now. I think we are pretty close to where he wants us to be. We are still trying to get better every single day."

Anderson gives Calipari and Memphis the edge in pure talent, though.

"He has probably three or four guys that are going to the NBA," the Missouri coach said. "I got some guys that are 'hoping' they get into the NBA."

No program has won more games since the start of the 2005-06 season than Memphis' 137.

No mistaking Duke's mystique

BOSTON — The old Boston Garden has been torn down, and the Celtics' famous parquet will be tucked away in storage along with the NBA championship banners Gerald Henderson's father helped win.

But when the Duke guard takes the floor against Villanova in the NCAA East Regional semifinals on Thursday night, he'll be looking to leave the court the same way his dad did so often during his NBA career.

"It's pretty nice to be playing in Boston, where my dad had his best years as a pro," the younger Henderson said Wednesday. "I'm sure he'll have fun coming back here and, hopefully, watching me having some of the same success that he had."

Henderson's father — "Big Gerald," as Villanova coach Jay Wright called him — played 13 seasons in the NBA, the first five years in Boston. With the Celtics he won the 1981 and '84 NBA championships, helping secure the latter — and his place in Boston lore — with a steal in the final seconds of a Game 2 victory.

Henderson was traded to the Seattle SuperSonics after the season and he won another title with the Detroit Pistons in 1990 before retiring from the NBA the next year. (The banners commemorating his Celtics championships were removed for the weekend, per NCAA rule.)

"Little Gerald" was born in 1987, and Wright first met him when he was 9 or 10 and his father brought him to one of the big Philadelphia tournaments.

"He introduced him to me, 'This is my son. He's going to play for you someday,'" Wright, who was coaching at Hofstra at the time, recalled. "Little did I know I would be back at Villanova and recruiting him."

Henderson went to the same suburban Philadelphia school as Wright's children, and his sister stayed home to attend Villanova. But when recruiting time came around, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski lured the NBA prodigy to Durham, N.C.

"Villanova is a great place. I grew up around there," he said. "I have a lot of friends that go there, even on the team now. Coach Wright is great in recruiting and has always been good to my family. And Duke just ended up being the right place."

"Coach Krzyzewski and his vision for me as a player was something that was really intriguing to me. And Duke overall as a program and as a school really just locked it for me."

NATIONAL INVITATIONAL TOURNAMENT

Aztecs beat Saint Mary's, reach NIT semis

SAN DIEGO — Steve Fisher's San Diego State Aztecs are going to New York and Patrick Mills is heading into the off-season.

The Aztecs blew a 13-point second-half lead, then rallied to beat Mills and the Saint Mary's Gaels 70-66 on Wednesday night to reach the semifinals of the National Invitational Tournament.

Tim Shelton posted up for the go-ahead basket with 48.6 seconds left and Richie Williams made three free throws in the final 26 seconds as the Aztecs held off the Gaels.

Mills was on the bench at the final buzzer, having fouled out with 10.8 seconds to go. He scored a game-high 18 points but had a horrible night shooting, going 7-for-24 overall and 4-for-13 on 3-pointers.

Billy White scored 17 for the Aztecs (26-9), who will play Baylor (23-14) in the semifinals on Tuesday night at Madison Square Garden.

This is the deepest SDSU has advanced in a national postseason tournament in its Division I history.

Students rushed the court after the buzzer.

NOTRE DAME 77, KENTUCKY 67

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Luke Harangody had 30 points and 11 rebounds and Notre Dame hit 12 3-pointers to end a 10-game losing streak to Kentucky, beating the Wildcats 77-67 Wednesday night to advance to the NIT semifinals.

Jodie Meeks scored 18 of his 21 points in the final 12:18 as the Wildcats (22-14) used a 17-5 run to cut the lead to 67-62 on a slam dunk by Perry Stevenson with 2:42 left. But the Irish were 8-of-8 from the free-throw line over the final 1:29 to end the game on a 10-5 run to hang on.

Kyle McAlarney added 15 points and Ryan Ayers, who held Meeks to one basket until the Irish were up by 15, added 14 points on 4-of-7 3-pointers for Notre Dame (21-14).

Patrick Patterson added 18 points for the Wildcats.

The Irish will face Penn State (25-11) Tuesday night in New York.

Goodell wants longer regular season

DANA POINT, Calif. (AP) — More games that count, perhaps as early as August 2011? That's exactly what NFL commissioner Roger Goodell wants.

There are several hurdles before the league can expand its regular season from 16 to 17 or 18 games. Among them is reaching a new collective bargaining agreement with the players' union.

Still, the commissioner hopes to present a proposal to the owners in May after the matter was discussed at length this week at the owners meetings.

"It's possible that we could vote in May, but we want to have core discussions on this," Goodell said Wednesday. "Anytime you have change, there is some reluctance. But it's clear we don't need four preseason games anymore."

Goodell said the league has not seriously discussed the subject with its broadcast partners. He couldn't imagine them not being interested in more meaningful games.

"I think the quality of NFL programming, that every one of our network partners would say, if they have the chance to have more regular-season programming, they'd be interested in it," Goodell said.

"A key point is the fans also recognize players they want to see are not in those preseason games; that's why they are not attractive. They want to see those players play."

As for those players and their union, Goodell recognizes an expanded schedule will be part of CBA negotiations. Owners opted out of the current deal last year, and it expires after the 2010 schedule, which would be an uncapped season.

"Under the current agreement, additional regular-season games would not be covered," Goodell said. "I think our most important priority after we get done with our internal analysis is talking to our key partners, and that includes the players. I think we want to make sure that the right dialogue takes place before we make any final votes."

DeMaurice Smith, the NFLPA's incoming executive director, wants any decision that affects the players to happen collaboratively.

"His hope is that the concerns and interests of the players will be seriously considered," said George Atallah, a director at the public relations firm Qorvis Communications and a spokesman for Smith during his transition. "He was elected by the players to be their advocate on such issues and is more than ready to serve them."

Among the issues team owners must discuss is when the regular season would begin; how many bye weeks would be scheduled; how deep into February the playoffs and Super Bowl would go; and when the offseason programs — including the combine and the draft — would be held.

Plus, where would the extra games be played, particularly with 17 of them?

One possibility, an idea Goodell and senior vice president of sales and marketing Mark Waller first mentioned several years ago, would be 17 neutral-site games, including some aboard. That would enable the league to step up its efforts internationally, a particular goal of Goodell's.

Miles

Miles averaged 19.1 points, 4.0 rebounds, 3.0 assists and 2.1 steals for CSI.

A cell phone number used by The Associated Press to contact Miles in the past was answered Wednesday by his uncle, Thomas Pettigrew of Toledo, Ohio, who said the NCAA needs to do more to prevent recruiting violations.

"I just think he got mixed up with the wrong people," Pettigrew said. "There was a whole bunch of adults who should have been doing their job instead of doing what they did."

"That's how society is," he said. "They chew you up and spit you out. If they can use you, they use you. I think the whole situation is funny, because I'm sure there are people who are supposed to be looking over that."

Pettigrew added, "No matter what anybody says about him, my nephew is a great basketball player and a good person."

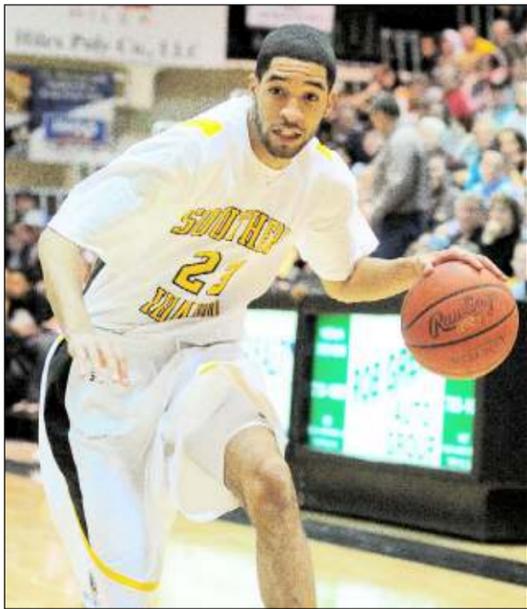

Calhoun, in Glendale, Ariz., Wednesday as the team prepared for an NCAA regional semifinal against Purdue Thursday night, did not specifically respond to the story's allegations. He pointed out that Miles is "not involved with our program" and said he is not concerned about the issue distracting the Huskies' quest for a third national title.

"We can keep our kids focused on what we're going to do, let them understand that the university ... will handle anything else that needs to be handled," Calhoun said. "We can't do anything about it. The only thing we can do is play basketball and hopefully advance our way to Saturday."

UConn is the No. 1 seed in the tournament's West Regional.

Calhoun's comments echoed a statement released by UConn Wednesday, saying that when it began recruiting Miles, it consulted its outside counsel, who worked with NCAA staff to examine everything about Miles' amateur status.

"The NCAA's Eligibility Center reviewed all information that it had concerning the student-athlete's eligibility status and determined that he was eligible for his freshman year. The student-athlete departed from the university before ever participating in athletics competition," the statement said.

The university, which said it released numerous public documents to Yahoo, said it is reviewing the article to determine whether action is required.

"The University takes very seriously its responsibilities of NCAA membership and will do all that is expected to follow up on any information related to possible NCAA rules violations," the statement said.

UConn athletic director Jeff Hathaway, in Boston at the East Regional as an NCAA site representative, declined to comment and referred to the university statement.

Nochimson did not return a message seeking comment Wednesday. The NCAA declined to comment.

Gosar said Miles was "obviously worried about" the Yahoo report and accompanying media coverage. But the CSI coach had simple advice for his sharpshooting guard: "Go to class, go to counseling, go to workouts and lead a boring life."

Yahoo reported that NCAA rules allow only one phone call per month to a prospect or his family in the player's junior year of high school, but said UConn exceeded that limit from late 2006 into 2007, which may be a major recruiting violation.

Former UConn assistant coach Tom Moore, now head coach at Quinnipiac, made three calls to Miles and 27 other calls to Miles' guardian and a person Miles said was his uncle, all in December 2006, Yahoo reported.

Moore acknowledged to Yahoo Sports that he knew Nochimson had contacted Miles "a couple of times," although the documents Yahoo obtained show pages and pages of phone and text message correspondence.

Moore would have no comment. Jack McDonald, a Quinnipiac spokesman, said Wednesday that the university is cooperating even though the allegations do not involve the university. UConn did not respond to the allegations regarding improper contact.

Yahoo reported that Nochimson's relationship with Miles began on Nov. 11, 2006, at a high school tournament in suburban Chicago, and that Nochimson and Moore knew each other from Nochimson's days as a UConn basketball manager.

Moore told Nochimson that UConn was recruiting Miles as the two men sat watching Miles play, Yahoo reported. Miles was introduced to Nochimson later that day, the report said.

Moore exchanged several text messages with both Miles and Nochimson on the nights of Nov. 11 and 12, 2006, Yahoo reported. Miles committed to UConn about a week later.

Miles initially said that he had never heard of Nochimson, then said the agent advised him on his education and told him what college coaches and scouts are looking for, Yahoo said.

Calhoun, when asked about Nochimson, said, "He was with our program for six years, got his master's degree, but beyond that — while he was within our program, he was a good kid, worked hard, etc. That was my relationship with him during that particular point in time."

Nochimson also was the business manager and personal assistant for former UConn standout and current NBA star Richard Hamilton, having gone with Hamilton when he was drafted in 1999 by the Washington Wizards. But Nochimson filed paperwork in June 2008 to decertify himself as an agent with the NBA Players Association, after Hamilton fired him and accused him of stealing more than $1 million.

The NCAA views impermissible contact as a major violation because it creates an unfair advantage that, left unchecked, would lead to student-athletes being inundated with calls from recruiters.

Former Oklahoma coach Kelvin Sampson and his staff made more than 500 improper calls to 17 recruits over a five-year period, leading to Sampson being barred in 2006 from calling recruits or recruiting off-campus for one year. The university also issued self-imposed sanctions, including scholarship reductions and fewer visits to campus by prospective players.

Hendrick committed to Earnhardt Jr., Eury Jr.

CONCORD, N.C. — Team owner Rick Hendrick won't split Dale Earnhardt Jr. and his embattled crew chief despite their slow start to the season.

Tony Eury Jr. has always been under intense scrutiny as crew chief for NASCAR's most popular driver, but it has hit a new level this year as the No. 88 team has just one top-10 finish through five races. Earnhardt heads to Martinsville Speedway this weekend ranked 19th in the standings.

"Both Junior and Tony have told me that if they thought they needed to be split, that they understood," Hendrick said Wednesday in a national teleconference. "That's my call, and I'm not ready to make that call. Not even close. I am convinced that they're better together."

"We've got the right combination, and I think we're going to be able to prove that to you guys soon."

Hendrick said Earnhardt, a notorious late riser, was at the shop early Wednesday morning and participated in a three-hour team meeting aimed at turning the season around.

"He's all over it," Hendrick said. "Dale is as focused, maybe even more focused than I've seen since he's been here. Dale's taken all the suggestions that anyone has to heart, and we've got to give him the best stuff out there."

STUDY: DARLINGTON BRINGS IN $54 MILLION TO AREA

COLUMBIA, S.C. — A new study says that the South Carolina track that's "Too Tough To Tame" has an economic impact that's hard to ignore.

Darlington Raceway brings in $54 million to the state each year and is responsible for creating 874 jobs in the region, according to the report commissioned by the track and released Wednesday by The Washington Economics Group.

The last time the raceway, now in its 60th season, took a comprehensive look at its economic footprint was in 2000, track president Chris said. That survey found that Darlington had about a $60 million impact on the state and region. However, that was with two Sprint Cup weekends, including a lucrative Labor Day race.

Darlington has since been cut back to one race and given what was thought to be a horrible weekend for racing, the Saturday before Mother's Day. Even so, Darlington has sold out the past four years and has seemingly shored up its once shaky future.

said. "Whether the ball is in between the infield and outfield, kind of that 'tweener, or in the gap or at the fence, it's just their willingness to go get the ball. Sometimes, outfielders are a little tentative and don't say, 'I can go make that play, I think that's one thing these three have done — to say, 'I can go make that play, and I'm going to.'"

Cassi: The experience

Merrill is the outfielder's only returning starter, having played left field for most of last season. To her, it was fairly clear that this combination would work.

"The first couple of games we played, it worked really well — us in our spots — and so I think (Baumert) said, 'I think I'll keep it this way,'" she said. "When things work well, you don't want to change them."

Her fellow outfielders haven't let her down yet. Merrill cited a particular inning against Southern Nevada that stuck out to her as "an outfielders' inning."

During the second game of the March 13 home doubleheader, Southern Nevada batter Katelyn Bley singled to right in an attempt to drive in Tiffany Parker, who doubled to reach base. Olander was able to scoop up the ball and fire it home, allowing catcher Megan Zimmerman to tag out Parker to end the inning. The Golden Eagles won 2-0, the shutout saved with that play.

"We were all pumped up," Merrill said.

Erin: The leadership

Olander came to Twin Falls after spending a season with the Brigham Young University Cougars and provides leadership to a young squad as the right fielder. Fitting in with a new team wasn't a problem, though she described playing the outfield as a "work in progress."

"I'm a pretty easy-going person, and I think I'm easy to get along with," she said. "So far, it's worked pretty good. We've worked a lot on communication."

The fearlessness of Merrill and Grant to try for daring, diving catches has not ceased to impress her.

"Those are my favorites, always," Olander said.

Dani: The enthusiasm

Grant, who was on the verge of cracking the starting lineup as a freshman, is a lifelong outfielder. She's played all three positions at some point in her life, and now she's comfortably planted in center. Her confidence is evident in the energy with which she speaks of Merrill and Olander.

"I've always felt really comfortable with Cassi and 'E' on either side," she said. "It's trusting that when somebody calls it, we know that she'll get it. We know each other's boundaries. I'm better at getting short balls, and they're better at going behind me and getting the long balls. We know how each other plays."

"I just think that our outfield is freaking legit," Grant said. "I really do."

Idaho

Cleveland was expected to play a significant role but a broken ankle before the opener sidelined him. Tyrone Novikoff got his feet wet as a redshirt freshman but he, too, had injury issues that slowed his progress. Junior college transfer Tevita Halaholo could make his way into the starting lineup.

Junior quarterback Nathan Enderle has two years under his belt. Behind him, Justin Morales has a year of redshirt experience, while transfer Brian Reader, who spent his redshirt freshman season at Arkansas, will take part in spring ball.

"We fixed the depth scenario at quarterback," Akey said. "Competition makes everything better. I told Nate I have confidence in him. I told him, 'I expect you to keep the job.' I told Brian and Justin 'I expect you to compete and win the job.' Either way, it's a good scenario."

Two-year starter Deonte' Jackson returns at running back. He's joined by Princeton McCarty, Troy Vital, Kama Bailey and Corey White — all sophomores-to-be.

"We have some numbers and we have some guys who are good players," said Akey, adding that senior Devon Sturdivant and Washington State transfer De'Maundry Woolridge could figure into the mix.

The receiving corps is led by senior Max Komar and junior Quin Ashley. They're joined by Preston Davis, Maurice Shaw, Eric Greenwood, Marsel Posey, Robert Hatchett and Dewey Hale, who comes over from the defensive side.

"It's time we started seeing somebody showing up and making some things happen," Akey said. "We should be able to come up with some receivers out of that group. We're talking about guys with some speed. Let's get these guys competing against each other and find out who's going to be where he's supposed to be so the quarterback can get him the ball."

Defensively, the line was hit by graduation but boasts returning players Jonah Sataraka, Mike Cosgrove and Oga Faumui.

Linebackers JoJo Dickson (shoulder) and Tre'Shawn Robinson (knee) return after successful rehabs. Robert Siavii played in all 12 games last year and had four tackles for loss. He joins Paul Senescall, another returner with 27 tackles in 10 games.

Team captain Shiloh Keo is back at safety along with Jeromy Jones, Virdell Larkins, Shelton Miles and Brandon Artz.

As for the corners, three veterans — Isaac Butts, Kenny Patten and Eric Hunter return, along with promising redshirt freshman Andre Robinson and receiver-turned-corner Steve Brown.

"I think we'll see some good competition back there," Akey said.

Redshirt freshman Bobby Cowan aims to take over for punter T.J. Conley, while grayshirt Trey Farquhar fills the placekicking roles of Tino Amancio and Vicente' Rico.

As he assesses his players, Akey's enthusiasm for his team remains high.

"We're talking about some guys who have a lot of playing experience," he said. "We won't be just snout-nosed football team. They've got a good spirit around them. This team is starting to get some personality."

"We have a Vandal family that has to go out there and take on everyone else. We are developing some strong leadership with this family, within this team. They're all looking out for what we need to do to have some success."

Family swimming in baby gifts should invest in child's future

DEAR ABBY: I would like to offer a suggestion to "Tired Mom in the City" (Jan. 17), whose baby's eight grandparents have overloaded the family with unneeded and redundant gifts. That mother should harness the generosity of those loving grandparents.

"Tired Mom" and her husband should set up a 529 college savings plan for their baby girl if they haven't already done so. It's a wonderful program that helps parents, family members and friends to save toward a child's college education. Those loving and obviously generous grandparents can contribute to the fund.

By contributing to their granddaughter's 529 fund, the grandparents will be giving a lifelong gift rather than an item that will be discarded or outgrown. They will be providing a college education for the child, and the parents will not be burdened by huge loans.

— MOM OF TWO
IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR MOM OF TWO: Thank you for an excellent suggestion. Readers who are interested in setting up a 529 plan should consult their financial adviser or bank officer.

Read on:
DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had the same problem

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

with four sets of grandparents. We handed the duplication of gifts by having the grandparents keep them in THEIR homes so when it was their turn to baby-sit, or we visited them, they would have all the necessities at hand. "Tired Mom" might consider suggesting something similar.

— L.M.
IN GREENWOOD, MO.

DEAR ABBY: My children received many gifts, but what they remember the most is the time they spent with their grandparents. Having a book read to them, visiting the aquarium, being pushed in a stroller for a walk around town and hearing the birds and smelling the flowers — even the loving greeting one grandmother gave my little girls at the door when they visited — these, not material things, were the "gifts" that counted the most.

— NO LONGER
A TIRED MOM

DEAR ABBY: I set up an education account for each of my nine grandchildren.

There is no better gift than a solid education that will enable my grandchildren to provide for themselves when they are grown.

My grandfather gave me stock when I was a child. I didn't appreciate it at the time, but the dividends from that stock paid for summer camp, college tuition and, eventually, a down payment on a house. What better way to establish your grandchildren and help them to achieve a better life?

— NANA OF NINE
IN KENTUCKY

DEAR ABBY: My grandparents were generous, too. What they lavished me with was time and attention. At Christmas and on birthdays, I received a small gift. But the really great gift — which I didn't totally understand when I was young — was a savings bond in my name. Those bonds added up over the years and helped to fund my college education.

I am 46 now. I remember how much they loved me and how concerned they were about my future. I still have some of the bonds my grandparents gave me tucked away for a rainy day. My husband and I are now continuing the tradition with our granddaughters.

IF MARCH 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Tap into inspirational matters through books, tapes or lectures this year. It is important to find an anchor to keep you grounded in the coming months because you are fascinated by the unusual, provocative, and unconventional. If you are firm about your basic values the changes you implement will not adversely affect your life, but enrich it. Other than October, when you should avoid making commitments, promises or financial decisions, you can look forward to an exciting year full of pleasant surprises.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today's new moon in your sign might serve to open your eyes to your personal worth. In the upcoming month you may be grateful for having helpful connections who hold you in the highest esteem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lead the way. The uncomfortable feeling that someone doesn't trust you could actually act as a protective device. You will tend to explain things in detail so that no lingering doubts tamper with results.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Think the best of everyone. The mind is like a beacon that attracts whatever signals it emits. If you beam with contented, satisfied, happy, and energetic thought waves you will attract good things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Today's new moon places emphasis in your career sector and may bring matters that have to do with your reputation to the forefront. You may spend more time in public during the upcoming month.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Certain rituals in your organization or group may be undergoing alteration in the month to come. You may be asked to adjust your schedule to accommodate new members or special interest groups.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Look closely and you will see a benefit. Take time to get to know your adversary or a potential client. Negotiations can't succeed unless you are willing to let others profit as much as you do from an exchange.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's new moon places a spotlight on how you interact with others. In the month ahead you may receive an opportunity to achieve a dream or meet someone who can help you attain your goals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take your place in line. Others in your circle seem to get all the glory, and the spotlight, but this does not diminish your own brightness. Remember that you add something unique.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): No one can differentiate between friendliness and sincerity. People may find that your well-meant advice, or genuine interest in their affairs, is a friendly gesture when you are just acting naturally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take the lead. Your refusal to let any obstacle bar your way is something that others admire. You will be respected for your stamina and resilience. Unflagging enthusiasm is a valuable commodity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get out hammer and nails and mend fences. If something has been nagging at your conscience, this is a good time to be forthright. You will find that your openness will create unanticipated improvements.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let your hair down a bit. If you relax, you will put others at ease and they can look at you from another perspective. Part of becoming well known and liked entails allowing others into your inner sanctum.

Today is Thursday, March 26, the 85th day of 2009. There are 280 days left in the year.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Too early seen unknown, and known too late!"
— William Shakespeare

The record may sound stuck by now, but it is nonetheless true that you must plan your play of the hand at trick one. If you do not, it may well be too late by the time you stop to think.

To take just one example, when you are planning to ruff losers in dummy, ask yourself how many hand entries you need and make appropriate provisions.

In today's deal, you have reached the giddy heights of four spades and West leads the heart
10. You plan to ruff three diamonds in dummy, eventually conceding two clubs and a spade. Win the opening lead in DUMMY, play to your diamond ace and ruff a diamond, return to the heart king, and ruff another diamond. Now for the key play. Ruff the heart jack with the spade ace and ruff your fourth diamond in dummy.
This way you will lose two clubs and one spade, but have guaranteed your contract.

There are two easy mistakes you might make here. The first is to win the opening lead in your hand; if you do that, you can kiss your game goodbye.

The second pitfall is to fail to appreciate your trump spots when planning to take ruffs in one hand or both. If you have all the middle cards, as here, you may elect to ruff a loser with a high trump (here, the ace) to avoid the embarrassing overruff by West followed by the trump return that would reduce 10 tricks to nine.

ANSWER: This double is for take-out, suggesting both minors and a good hand. In context, you have an excellent hand for your initial pass. Maybe you are worth more than a jump to three clubs, but the bad trump spots should persuade you not to go past the three-level. A bid of two clubs would be an enormous underbid.
