NAIROBI, Kenya — Navy snipers on the fantail of a destroyer cut down three Somali pirates in a lifeboat and rescued an American sea captain in a surprise nighttime assault in choppy seas Easter Sunday, ending a five-day standoff between a team of rogue gunmen and the world's most powerful military.

It was a stunning ending to an Indian Ocean odyssey that began when 53-year-old freighter Capt. Richard Phillips was taken hostage Wednesday by pirates who tried to hijack the U.S.-flagged Maersk Alabama.

The Vermont native was held on a tiny lifeboat that began drifting precariously toward Somalia's anarchic, gun-plagued shores.

The operation, personally approved by President Barack Obama, quashed fears the saga could drag on for months and marked a victory for the U.S., which for days seemed powerless

Staff Sgt. Jefferson Tews has seen war on two fronts.

After graduating from Gooding High School in 2000, he enlisted in the Army. Then came Sept. 11, 2001 — and the war on terrorism that led him on two tours in Iraq and a tour in Afghanistan near the Pakistan border in which he recently was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

A weapons squad leader, Tews supervised soldiers in convoys making stops at villages in Afghanistan. Tews served overseas in First Platoon of Charlie Company, 2-506th Battalion, part of the 101st Airborne Division.

During his time in Afghanistan, Tews saw villagers living in mud huts who received medical help Villagers live in primitive conditions, with generators for electricity and water coming from pumps. While friendly, the villagers also were aware that Taliban fighters would still be around when the soldiers left, which made it challenging to get useful information.

“They were also trying to protect themselves,” said Tews, a 26-year-old who grew up in rural Shoshone and Gooding.

He served in Afghanistan from March 2008 through last month.

During his deployment, Tews’ unit was fired on by rockets and involved in direct fire engagements with the enemy. The brown landscape and mountainous terrain reminded him of home.

Tews was involved in preparing his squad, training soldiers, and kept his soldiers physically fit for duty in the rugged landscape of Afghanistan, according to the narrative accompanying his medal.

School all year?

Education secretary thinks students need more time in classroom

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan believes that the traditional school calendar and week needs an overhaul.

American schoolchildren need to be in class more — six days a week, at least 11 months a year — if they are to compete with students abroad, Duncan recently said when visiting middle and high school students at a public school in northeast Denver.

“Go ahead and boo me,”

Duncan told the students last week during his speech. “I fundamentally think that our school day is too short, our school week is too short and our school year is too short.”

“You’re competing for jobs with kids from India and China. I think schools should be open six, seven days a week; 11, 12 months a year,” he said.

It’s a concept that would shake up what’s been the norm for American schools for decades. Area educators

Hunger battle grows in Blaine Co.

Coalition expands services in face of growing need for food

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Naomi Spence’s eyes brimmed with tears as she surveyed the line of people before her.

The Blaine County Hunger Coalition’s new mobile food bank, stationed in the parking lot outside the Ketchum YMCA in late February, was down to its last few cans of food. Yet, people kept coming.

“It was overwhelming,” said the food program manager for Blaine County’s Hunger Coalition. “In our first three days we served 200 families and handed out more than 5,200 pounds of food — what we had been giving out in one month. And you could tell people were panicked for fear we would run out before they got any. You could see that urgency in their eyes.”

When a small group of volunteers started the Blaine County Hunger Coalition six years ago, it raised a lot of eyebrows. Hunger in tony Sun Valley? It was difficult for some to concede that pockets of poverty existed amid the million-dollar trophy homes in Idaho’s wealthiest county.

But this winter the Three things to do

Pat Marcantonio

● Volunteer to help with the Crossroads United Methodist Church and the Idaho Food Bank free mobile food bank from 10:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. Tuesday at 131 Syringa Ave. in Kimberly. To lend a hand or for more information: 423-4311.

● For a taste of the historic, arrange for a visit to the Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum. Call the Jerome County Historical Society at 324-5641 to arrange a tour of the place, which features a barracks for the Japanese interred at the Minidoka Relocation camp, a poor house, "prove-up" shack, lots of farm equipment, jail and more.

● Expand your mind and skills. The College of Southern Idaho North Side Center is offering two interesting classes. "Create Your Own Success" will be held Thursday and April 23. The fee is $39 for one participant and one guest. "You're on the Air (How to Really Make it in Voice-overs)" will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. The fee is $30. gear that included ammunition, food, water and weapons.

But it wasn't his first medal. While deployed in Iraq in 2003, Tews received a Purple Heart following an injury from a car bomb that wounded 56 people. He went to Iraq a second time in 2005.

After nearly nine years in the service, Tews plans to make the Army his career.

Tews says his favorite thing about the Army is its people — like soldiers who charge down a hill with equipment during combat.

"I like doing my job," he said. "I like getting deployed."

As for the Bronze Star, Tews credits that to the dedication of the soldiers he worked with.

"If they give 100 percent, then it just kind of reflects on me," he said. "If it weren't for them, I wouldn't be getting it."

His father, Clarence Tews of Jerome, said trying to keep track of media reports can be tiring during his son's deployments.

"As for what he's doing, I don't question him because it's his job," Tews said. "You look for all the news for Iraq or Afghanistan all the time and it wears you out after several deployments. He's very professional and very good at his job. I'm really proud of him. He's done good."

say that they're open to the idea of more time for student instruction, but questions remain.

Wiley Dobbs, superintendent of Twin Falls School District, said he agrees with the concept that more time is needed, particularly for struggling students.

He said that anticipated federal stimulus funding for Title 1 programs will help provide more time for instruction.

Title 1 funding is aimed at helping student achievement, including programs that offer more instruction. Ideas under consideration for the district include lengthening its three-week summer school program and expanding after-school options.

Dobbs said expectations have been added to schools over the years without changing the traditional schedule that's been in place for decades.

Filer School District Superintendent John Graham said that more days of instruction would work better than longer days of classes.

"You look at the elementary students and if you extend the day too far, you end up losing their focus," he said. "You could theoretically decrease their instruction. I'm not saying you shouldn't look at it."

Graham said other considerations that a school district would need to consider include air conditioning, extracurricular activities, and the work students do outside school on family farms and dairies.

"I would not be opposed if you worked out the problems, and there are many, not only just for kids but for the staff and the parents," Graham said, adding that funding for additional days would be another issue.

Scott Rogers, superintendent of Minidoka County School District, echoed that theme.

"My first reaction was: I'm not opposed to extended teacher days, but who's going to fund it?" he said, noting that increasing teacher time is difficult in a time of state budget cutbacks to education funding. "Where would you get the money this year to do that?"

Wayne Rush, superintendent of Glens Ferry School District, has traveled to Japan. In that country, teachers spend more time working together and preparing lessons, he said.

"If we're going to extend it, funding is the huge issue," Rush said, adding that there isn't a "one-size-fits-all solution" for the school schedule.

to resolve the crisis despite massing helicopter-equipped warships at the scene.

Negotiations with the three pirates were growing heated, Vice Adm. Bill Gortney said.

One of them pointed an AK-47 at the back of Phillips, who was tied up and in "imminent danger" of being killed when the commander of the nearby USS Bainbridge made the split-second decision to order his men to shoot, Gortney said. Navy snipers took aim at the pirates' heads and shoulders, he said. The lifeboat was about 25-30 yards away and was being towed by the Bainbridge at the time, he said.

A fourth pirate had surrendered earlier in the day and could face life in a U.S. prison.

The rescue was a dramatic blow to the pirates who have preyed on international shipping and hold more than a dozen ships with about 230 foreign sailors. But it is unlikely to do much to quell the region's growing pirate threat, which has transformed one of the world's busiest shipping lanes into one of its most dangerous. It also risked provoking retaliatory attacks.

"This could escalate violence in this part of the world, no question about it," said Gortney, the commander of U.S. Naval Forces Central Command.

Abdullahi Lami, one of the pirates holding a Greek ship anchored in the Somali town of Gaan, said: "Every country will be treated the way it treats us. In the future, America will be the one mourning and crying," he told The Associated Press. "We will retaliate (for) the killings of our men."

Jamac Habebe, a 30-year-old self-proclaimed pirate, told the AP from one of Somalia's piracy hubs, Eyl, that: "From now on, if we capture foreign ships and their respective countries try to attack us, we will kill them (the hostages)."

"Now they became our number one enemy," Habebe said of U.S. forces.

Phillips was not hurt in several minutes of gunfire and the U.S. Navy's 5th Fleet said he was resting comfortably on a U.S. warship after receiving a medical exam.

Aboard the Bainbridge, sailors passed along a message from Andrea Phillips to her husband: "Richard, your family loves you, your family is praying for you, and your family is saving a chocolate Easter egg for you, unless your son eats it first."

Phillips himself deflected any praise.

"I'm just the byline. The real heroes are the Navy, the Seals, those who have brought me home," Phillips said by phone to Maersk Line Limited President and CEO John Reinhart, the company head told reporters. A photo released by the Navy showed Phillips unharmed and shaking hands with the commanding officer of the USS Bainbridge.

Obama said Phillips had courage that was "a model for all Americans" and he was pleased about the rescue, adding that the United States needs help from other countries to deal with the threat of piracy and to hold pirates accountable.

oalition has been at the forefront of efforts to help the jobless or underemployed in a valley that once was flush with construction, landscaping, restaurant and retail jobs. Even snowplowing and roof shoveling jobs dried up this winter with below-average snowfall.

The coalition gave nearly four times the food in 2008 that it did in 2007 — 71,897 pounds versus 18,764, said Jeanne Liston, the coalition's director. It provided 61,536 meals in 2008, compared to 14,434 the previous year.

In recognition of its efforts, the coalition was recently named the Nonprofit of the Year for the 2009 Wood River Valley Community Awards. The awards, organized by the Sun Valley/Ketchum and Hailey chambers of commerce, will be presented during a cocktail reception at the Elkhorn Springs Restaurant on May 8.

today by honoring it with the annual Doug and Ann Christensen Humanitarian Award at the Sun Valley Inn. This is the first time the humanitarian award has been given to an organization rather than an individual, noted John Moreland, pastor of the church.

"It just seemed the right choice in light of the basic challenges that many are facing right now," he said.

"We have also partnered with the hunger coalition as an ongoing service project. We have taken ownership of their backpack program and hope to expand our involvement as the year progresses."

The backpack program is one of several new programs the coalition has started this year to address the growing need for food in the valley. Schoolchildren bring their backpacks to school on Friday, where they are stuffed with milk, cereal, oatmeal, tuna, juice, fruit cups, veggies, soup, pudding and granola bars — enough to get them through the weekend.

Last summer the coalition started Lunch Connection, which feeds children during the summer. This summer it's starting Grow a Row, where volunteers have agreed to grow extra food in their gardens this summer to donate to the coalition.

It also runs the new mobile food bank, which shuttles food to Carey and Bellevue on Mondays, Hailey on Tuesdays and Ketchum on Thursdays.

Knowledge of a growing need for food in the valley has prompted dozens of volunteers. Among them, Tony Mallane, a Hailey carpenter.

"I'm happy to have a job so I thought the least I could do was volunteer," he said. "It's tough out there."

... in Cassia County

April 8 police reports:

Aggravated battery:

Police were dispatched in Burley for a fight in progress at about noon. Deputy Matt Arthur found Corbin Bowers, 19, of Burley near the entrance to Subway on Overland. According to the report, Bowers had a red mark on his right hand and was surrounded by "a lot of bloody Subway napkins." Bowers, according to the report, admitted to hitting another male, also 19. The victim was found sitting at a table in Subway — bloody, unable to speak clearly, and unable to remember the incident. Bowers was arrested for battery. After police were informed by the hospital that the victim sustained a fracture to his right orbital socket, Arthur requested an aggravated amendment to the charge.

Burglary:

A group of people staying at the Birch Glen Campground on Rock Creek Road near Magic Mountain were awakened in the night by a noise in their camp. They discovered about $1,500 worth of camping equipment — everything from a heater to hamburger — had been stolen. Police found an open beer can on the ground but were unable to identify fingerprints because the can was wet and dirty. No suspects.

Sudden death:

A 69-year-old employee of a feedlot in Malta, who was moving cows from one pen to another, suddenly died Wednesday morning. His co-worker, according to the report, turned around and saw the man "lying face down in the dirt." He initially thought the man was "playing games with him" but then found someone who could speak English to call for help. The deceased man's wife said he had a heart condition.

Sandpoint looking at banning drive-throughs

SANDPOINT (AP) — Residents in this northern Idaho city might have to start waving bye bye to drive-through businesses.

A proposal to prohibit drive-through services recently passed the city's planning and zoning commission and goes before the city council in May.

If approved the ordinance would regulate drive-through restaurants, banks, coffee shops, pharmacies, dry cleaners and other businesses that cater to customers in cars.

Existing drive-through businesses would be allowed to continue but not rebuild.

"Conceivably, as these existing drive-throughs degrade if they're not maintained, this could lead to a Sandpoint of the future with no drive-throughs," City Planner Jeremy Grimm told the Bonner County Daily Bee.

The proposed change is one of many being considered as part of a strategy to handle new growth and reflect the city's recently completed comprehensive plan aimed at making a more attractive city.

Opponents say the drive-through ban will hurt the economy, and Dick Hutter resigned from the planning commission last week amid concerns the changes will harm the city.

"I don't agree with the direction that Sandpoint is going," he said. "I don't like the lack of parking downtown. I don't like the interference with stores and I don't like the anti-corporate nature of what's been happening."

Other possible changes include a conditional use permit for new or expanding businesses with a building footprint larger than 20,000 square feet. The businesses would be required to submit to nine new planning standards, including surface parking requirements and pedestrian circulation.

New rules also look at banning the use of fluorescent or metallic colors as part of the plan to have "exterior building materials and colors that are aesthetically pleasing."

"We're not preventing them from developing their property or building or investing in this community," said Grimm. "We're just setting some constraints on it and I think this is very far from depriving someone of the reasonable use of their property."

Councilman John Reuter introduced the ban on drive-throughs. But he said proposed changes might not make it into the permanent zoning changes, which the council hopes to have finished within a year.

"I think it makes sense for a temporary, stopgap zone to be fairly restrictive," Reuter said. "I think we need to have a serious conversation about where drive-throughs are appropriate and where they are not. At the end of that discussion maybe we'll decide that drive-throughs are never appropriate, but I don't think we're at that stage yet."

Local real-estate agent Kitty Eyestone doesn't like the proposed changes.

"Business owners are shaking their heads and asking, 'What's next?'" she said.

Rep. Simpson impressed by Glenns Ferry biodiesel facility

GLENN'S FERRY — After a quick tour of Idaho Sustainable Energy U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, said he would support the Department of Energy granting the company a loan guarantee and plans to telephone DOE officials when he returns to Washington D.C.

"This administration ... is very interested in projects like this," Simpson said.

Simpson toured the Glenns Ferry facility on Thursday as part of a number of stops along a short southwest Idaho visit.

"This does look like the perfect spot," he said.

Idaho Sustainable Energy plans to build an Advanced Biorefinery Complex to produce cellulosic ethanol, biodiesel and high value chemical products from agricultural and municipal waste, used oils and algae production.

The complex, at 118 S. Commercial St., will take advantage of existing infrastructure and utilize steam and electricity from an existing cogeneration power plant on site.

If granted, the loan guarantee will help the company obtain the $75 million needed to move forward with the project.

Brooks Agnew, vice president of ISE and an engineer with partner company Green Star, said the loan guarantee gives lenders confidence in the project. In order to be awarded the guarantee the DOE reviews the project's feasibility — both economically and technically.

The DOE guarantee doesn't come cheap — it costs $75,000 just to apply for the program. But Agnew said it is money well spent.

"We could get preferential ratings, better interest, because of the underwriting by the government," Agnew said. "It is a great product."

Glenns Ferry is still reeling from the closure of the potato processing center that accounted for 10 percent of employment in the city more than a year ago, and Mayor JoAnne Lanham said Idaho Sustainable

The existing 90,000-square foot industrial warehouse sits on 7.5 acres with more than 1,000 feet of railroad siding, scale house, eight grain silos and loading and unloading facilities for both trucks and railroad cars through a grain elevator.

The existing building will house a 16-million-gallon per year biodiesel plant already under construction by Green Star. It is expected to be completed later this year.

ISE plans on annually producing 10-million gallons of cellulosic ethanol, 3-million gallons of high value furfural per year, 17,400 tons of high-protein algae biomass for animal feed per year, 1.2-million gallons of algae oil, and allow the 10 megawatt cogeneration facility to produce power again. Additional byproducts include the production of lignin and fertilizer products.

Agnew is excited about getting the facility up and running, but hopes it helps to transform Glenns Ferry as well. The city has about 1,600 people with a median income of just over $26,000.

"This is an excellent opportunity for Glenns Ferry — from the construction funds that will be coming into town to the creation of many jobs. This is an investment in the state of Idaho and hopefully the resurrection of Glenns Ferry," Agnew said.

Green Star completed the installation of a biodiesel plant in Odessa, Wash., last year.

Salt Lake City considers payday lender restrictions

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake City is considering regulations on payday loan businesses.

The City Council is scheduled to vote April 21 on a measure to restrict the check-cashing outlets from moving closer than a half-mile from one another.

Officials hope the regulation would lead to fewer people seeking the quick cash, which can come at a very high cost from the controversial lenders.

"It is time that we send a message," councilman J.T. Martin said.

Salt Lake City has been wrestling with the issue for nearly four years. Many other cities along the Wasatch Front have already imposed regulations on payday lenders.

The city can have some control of how many payday lenders there are and where the shops can be located, but council members say it's up to the Legislature to curb payday lenders' sky-high interest rates.

"We're nibbling at the corners," councilman Van Turner said. "The real problem is the high interest."

Check-store managers defended the industry during a public hearing last week.

Saturday rollover sends man to hospital

Times-News

Idaho State Police responded to a one vehicle rollover at 8:10 p.m. Saturday near Eden.

Alan Thornock, 26, from Soda Springs, was driving westbound on Interstate 84 near mile marker 185 when he lost control of his vehicle, police said in a written release.

The vehicle, a green Pontiac Grand Prix, rolled and came to rest in the median.

Police say Thornock, who was not wearing a seat belt, was transported to St. Lukes Magic Valley Medical Center with minor injuries.

Idaho State Police are investigating.

Number of visitors to Grand Tetons decreases slightly

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Grand Teton National Park in northwest Wyoming is reporting a slight decrease in recreation visits for the 2008-09 winter season.

Grand Teton park visits dropped 2.5 percent from December 2008 to March 2009 compared with the same period in 2007-08, a difference of about 4,400 visitors.

By contrast, neighboring Yellowstone National Park reported a visitation decline of more than 13 percent this winter.

Much of Grand Teton's winter drop can be attributed to an 11.5 percent decline in December, when several weeks of poor snowfall were followed by extreme avalanche danger that kept many visitors out of the backcountry.

Visitation for January, February and March ranged between 2 percentage points compared to last year, with March increasing about 1.8 percent.

Grand Teton spokeswoman Jackie Skaggs said the slight increase last month is encouraging given the economic news in the Jackson Hole area. Jackson Hole Mountain Resort reported a 9 percent drop in business for the winter, and local hotels reported a significant drop during this year's World Championship Snowmobile Hill Climb at Snow King Mountain.

"We held our own," Skaggs said. "I think we might be up slightly (in March because) we are still getting some regional visitors who are trying to stay closer to home and have a more cost-effective vacation."

Skaggs said an increase in regional visitors opting for a cheaper vacation near home is likely a trend that will continue during the recession.

"Grand Teton National Park is a bargain for people who simply want to get away, but have a quality experience," she said. "We always have the beauty of the Tetons and the excitement of finding wildlife."

Even now, during the off-season, the park stays busy because people can choose to ski and snowshoe or bike on Teton Park Road, Skaggs said.

Skaggs said the drop in December visits could be attributed to poor snowfall and that the economy was just starting its downward slip.

Town rocked by arrest of Sunday school teacher in killing

TRACY — Police and residents were shocked when the suspect in the killing of an 8-year-old girl found stuffed into a suitcase turned out to be a woman, the mother of the slain girl's best friend.

The motive in the killing had not been determined.

Melissa Huckaby, a Sunday school teacher and granddaughter of a minister, was on suicide watch at the San Joaquin County Jail, where she remained in custody Sunday without bail on suspicion of kidnapping and killing Sandra Cantu.

Sandra's body was found in Huckaby's suitcase in an irrigation pond nearly a week ago, police said.

"This was an anomaly in the murder of a child," police Sgt. Tony Sheneman said at a news conference Saturday in this northern California town. "Finding out that it is a woman who is responsible for Sandra's kidnapping and murder, and then finding out it is a member of the community is another blow."

THAILAND
Rioting erupts in capital after govt. announces state of emergency

BANGKOK — Swarms of anti-government protesters attacked the prime minister's car, seized control of major intersections in the capital and commandeered buses, bringing new chaos to the Thai capital as the country's ousted leader threatened to return from exile to lead a revolution.

The government declared a state of emergency Sunday but, without the intervention of security forces, it was unclear how any bans could be enforced.

In front of the city's biggest luxury mall, demonstrators danced atop two armored personnel carriers they had forced to a stop, waving flags and shouting "Democracy." The red-shirted crowd swarmed around the vehicles and demanded the keys from the unhappy soldiers inside.

"Sorry, can't find them," came a muffled reply. The protesters drifted off, and the vehicles left.

The uncertain encounter — and others like it across Bangkok, where security forces stood by while protesters ran rampant — reinforced that three years of turmoil between alternating governments and protesters opposed to them seemed ready to peak again. As night fell, demonstrators demanding the resignation of Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva controlled many streets in the city center. Police vans at some intersections were abandoned and looted.

VATICAN CITY
Pope: reconciliation needed to solve Middle East conflict

Pope Benedict XVI sought to give a message of hope on Easter Sunday to victims of wars, poverty and financial turmoil, saying it was urgently needed to overcome the miseries that are plaguing Africa, the Middle East and other parts of the globe.

Benedict delivered his "Urbi et Orbi" message — Latin for "to the city and the world" — after celebrating Easter Mass before tens of thousands of people who packed St. Peter's Square and the boulevard leading up to it.

The piazza, decorated with yellow tulips, azaleas, apple blossoms and other spring flowers, overflowed with the faithful celebrating the most joyous and important day in the Christian church calendar, Christ's resurrection.

In his speech, Benedict said hope was urgently needed around the globe, despite mounting reasons for despair.

U.S. citizens locked up as illegal immigrants

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press writer

Pedro Guzman has been an American citizen all his life. Yet in 2007, the 31-year-old Los Angeles native — in jail for a misdemeanor, mentally ill and never able to read or write — signed a waiver agreeing to leave the country without a hearing and was deported to Mexico as an illegal immigrant.

For almost three months, Guzman slept in the streets, bathed in filthy rivers and ate out of trash cans while his mother scoured the city of Tijuana, its hospitals and morgues, clutching his photo in her hand. He was finally found trying to cross the border at Calexico, 100 miles away.

These days, back home in California, "He just changes from one second to another. His brain jumps back to when he was missing," said his brother, Michael Guzman. "We just talk to him and reassure him that everything is fine and nobody is going to hurt him."

In a drive to crack down on illegal immigrants, the United States has locked up or thrown out dozens, probably many more, of its own citizens over the past eight years. A monthslong AP investigation has documented 55 such cases, on the basis of interviews, lawsuits and documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act. These citizens are detained for anything from a day to five years. Immigration lawyers say there are actually hundreds of such cases.

It is illegal to deport U.S. citizens or detain them for immigration violations. Yet citizens still end up in detention because the system is overwhelmed, acknowledged Victor Cerda, who left Immigration and Customs Enforcement in 2005 after overseeing the system. The number of detentions overall is expected to rise by about 17 percent this year to more than 400,000, putting a severe strain on the enforcement network and legal system.

The result is the detention of citizens with the fewest resources: the mentally ill, minorities, the poor, children and those with outstanding criminal warrants, ranging from unpaid traffic tickets to failure to show up for probation hearings. Most at risk are Hispanics, who made up the majority of the cases the AP found.

"The more the system becomes confused, the more U.S. citizens will be wrong-

In this photo taken on Monday, Oct. 13, 2008, Rennison Castillo is shown at his home in Lakewood, Wash., as he holds the ID card he was issued during the seven months he was detained in 2005 and 2006 at the Northwest Detention Center in Tacoma, Wash. In a drive to crack down on illegal immigrants, the United States has locked up or thrown out dozens, probably many more, of its own citizens over the past eight years.

fully detained and wrongfully removed," said Bruce Einhorn, a retired immigration judge who now teaches at Pepperdine Law School. "They are the symptom of a larger problem in the detention system. ... Nothing could be more regrettable than the removal of our fellow citizens."

Jim Hayes, ICE director of detention and removal, said he is aware of only 10 cases of U.S. citizens detained over the past five years. Even if combined with the cases found by the AP, "that's not an epidemic," Hayes said. He refused to identify any cases, citing privacy laws.

He added that agents investigate any claims to U.S. citizenship, but they often turn out to be false. He said U.S. citizens sometimes claim to be foreign-born, and that immigration officials never knowingly hold someone they can "definitively" determine is a citizen.

It's impossible to know exactly how many citizens have been detained or deported because nobody keeps track. Kara Hartzler, an attorney at the Florence Immigrant and Refugee Rights Project in Arizona, testified at a U.S. House hearing last year that her group alone sees 40 to 50 jailings a month of people with potentially valid claims to citizenship.

The nonprofit Vera Institute for Justice found 322 people with citizenship claims in 13 immigration prisons in 2007, up from 129 the year before. That number does not include possible citizens in the nation's more than 300 other immigration prisons.

What is clear is that immigration detentions — including those of citizens — have soared in recent years. One reason is a heightened concern for security that arose out of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. Another is a political climate that encouraged a tough stance on illegal immigration, especially after Congress failed to pass immigration reform legislation almost three years ago.

After 2003, the nation launched several programs to detain more immigrants, including one that called on local police and sheriffs for help. Before 2007, just seven state and local law enforcement agencies worked with immigration. By last November, more than 950 officers from 23 states had attended a four-week program on how to root out and jail suspected illegal immigrants.

A Government Accountability Office investigation has since found that ICE did not ensure local officials properly used their authority and failed to collect data to assess the program. As a result, ICE is rewriting agreements with 67 agencies.

It was a local sheriff's office that sent Guzman out of the country.

He was picked up near his home in Lancaster, Calif., on March 31, 2007, by Los Angeles County sheriff's department officers on a misdemeanor trespassing charge. He had tried three times to board a private plane, showing lottery tickets for passage on one attempt, officers said in a report. He had also stolen a car and told officers his mother's car was broken.

A judge gave him three years' probation and three months in jail for vandalism. At the jail, Guzman told officers he was born in California, a response noted in official records. But a sheriff's employee still got Guzman to sign an agreement to leave the country without a hearing.

On the day he arrived in Mexico, Guzman called a relative to say he didn't know where he was, and asked a passer-by. The answer: Tijuana. Then the phone cut off.

Guzman was finally returned to California legally in August 2007.

Now he can no longer stand the sun because it reminds him of Mexico. His family will not let him talk about the ordeal because it upsets him. He has frequent counseling sessions, but he is shaky, stutters and seems to hear voices, according to his brother.

"He is our brother, somebody's son, that they deported," said Michael Guzman. "California is like the main capital of Latin Americans. It doesn't matter whether you are a citizen or not. If you look Hispanic, they can question you. Deportation can happen to anybody."

Neither the sheriff's office nor immigration officials would discuss the case, citing pending litigation. The family has sued Los Angeles County and the federal government.

"When the whole story is told, people will see and understand what has occurred," said Steve Whitmore, spokesman for the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office.

In the meantime, Guzman's mother, Maria Carbajal, often works the graveyard shift at a Jack in the Box because she is afraid to leave him alone during the day.

Rennison Castillo arrived early at the Seattle immigration office on Oct. 28, 1998, to take his citizenship oath. He was dressed in a freshly starched Army uniform and was eager to grab a good seat. He sat in the second row.

Born in Belize, Castillo had lived in the U.S. since he was 7 and had served two years in the Army. But his superiors told him he could not stay in the Army without citizenship. So he took the citizenship test and passed easily, missing only one question, on the name of a locally elected official.

Seven years later, the U.S. government locked Castillo in a Tacoma, Wash., immigration jail. He had been picked up at the Pierce County jail, where he had spent eight months for violating a restraining order and for residential burglary.

At the holding cell, an officer asked if he wanted to go home. He thought she meant his home in Lakewood, Wash. "Yes," he answered. "I'd love to go home."

She chained him up and told him he would be deported.

Over and over, Castillo said, he told officers he was a citizen. He pleaded with them to check their computer files.

But officials said nothing in their records confirmed his citizenship or his military service. One officer actually recognized Castillo from their Army days at Fort Lewis, Wash., and mentioned their battalion, but told Castillo he couldn't help.

Then Castillo saw a number posted on the wall for the Northwest Immigration Rights Project. On the group's advice, he contacted a friend who pulled his military document from the trunk of his car.

Nearly eight months after he was transferred to ICE custody, Castillo was released. He discovered that immigration officials had two files on him, with different numbers, and has since filed a lawsuit. ICE declined to comment because the lawsuit is pending.

Obama wins big in first critical national security test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy is showing only glimmers of life and two costly wars remain in the balance, but President Barack Obama's "no drama" handling of the Indian Ocean hostage crisis proved a big win for his administration in its first critical national security test.

Obama's quiet backstage decision to authorize the Defense Department to take necessary action if Capt. Richard Phillips' life was in imminent danger gave a Navy commander the go-ahead to order snipers to fire on the pirates holding the cargo ship captain at gunpoint.

For Obama, the benefits were instantly clear: an American life saved and a major victory notched against an increasingly worrisome scourge of the seas off the Horn of Africa.

Obama's handling of the crisis showed a president who was comfortable in relying on the U.S. military, much as his predecessor, George W. Bush, did.

But it also showed a new commander in chief who was willing to use all the tools at his disposal, bringing in federal law enforcement officials to handle the judicial elements of the crisis.

The rescue appeared to vindicate Obama's muted but determined handling of the incident. What won't be known for some time is whether Obama will benefit politically.

When Obama campaigns for re-election, he may take Bush's approach of turning any such incident into evidence of his leadership acumen. On the other hand, Obama didn't go before the cameras Sunday to trumpet the success, instead releasing a written statement that saluted the bravery of the military and Phillips but claimed no credit for himself.

Also, this crisis, while topping the news now, may fade into distant memory by the time voters get a chance to take any new measure of Obama and his party.

Still, it goes some way toward dispelling the notion that a liberal Democrat with a known distaste for war — Obama campaigned on his consistent opposition to the Iraq invasion — doesn't have the chops to call on U.S. military power.

The sniper operation Sunday, with pirate guns aimed at Phillips, was a daring, high-stakes gambit, and it could have easily gone awry. If it had, the fallout would have probably landed hardest on Obama.

Indeed, the last Democratic president to unleash American military might against Somalis suffered miserably from the failure of that operation. Portrayed in the book and movie "Black Hawk Down," a U.S. peacekeeping mission ordered by President Bill Clinton ended with a humiliating withdrawal of troops after a deadly clash in the Somali capital of Mogadishu.

The outcome this time was vastly different.

Magic Valley Speedway opens up new season

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Norm Hatke took the checkered flag for the Budweiser Super Stocks in what proved to be one of the most intense competitions of the evening in Saturday night's season opener at Magic Valley Speedway.

Jerry McKean took possession of the bottom lane of the one-third mile track and by lap five Hatke was right at his side in the high groove. At the next lap, Eddy McKean had joined the mix positioning himself directly behind his brother Jerry. For several laps the pair effectively kept the No. 7 car of Eddy McKean behind them as Allen Williams, running in fourth, waited for his chance at an opening.

As the threesome rounded the track Eddy McKean worked at getting underneath his brother and with three laps remaining in the race, contact was made. The nudge in Turn 1 was just enough to loosen up Jerry McKean and Hatke took advantage of the situation to take over the lead. Jerry McKean did manage to hold on for a second place finish with Eddy McKean and Williams following.

"I knew he (Eddy) was back there but I didn't know if he was behind me or Norm," Jerry McKean said. "Then after he hit me and I seen Norm beside me I kind of figured who it was. I could say a lot of things but it's just racing, I guess. He said he didn't do it on purpose. My brother's a good person, he's my boss. He's a good brother."

As for Hatke, a win's a win.

"I knew we were all right there together and if somebody slipped it was going to be a mess — and it was. I was the beneficiary, but I'll take it," Hatke said.

ANGEL LIVES THE DREAM

Cabrera wins three-way playoff to earn Masters win

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The Masters delivered the show everyone wanted and a champion no one expected.

Angel Cabrera became the first Argentine to win the green jacket at Augusta National on Sunday by surviving a wild final round that began with a supercharged duel between Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson and ended with a stunning collapse by Kenny Perry.

Indeed, this Masters had it all.

Two shots behind with two holes to play, Cabrera fought his way into a three-way playoff when the 48-year-old Perry, on the verge of becoming golf's oldest major champion, bogeyed the final two holes.

Even in a playoff, Cabrera looked like the odd man out.

He drove into the trees, hit another shot off a Georgia pine, but still scrambled for par with an 8-foot putt. He won with a routine par on the 10th hole when Perry missed the green badly to the left and made yet another bogey, this one the most costly of them all.

"I may never get this opportunity ever again, but I had a lot of fun being in there," Perry said. "I had the tournament to win. I lost the tournament. But Angel hung in there. I was proud of him."

Cabrera, who won the U.S. Open at Oakmont two years ago, finally earned a green jacket for Argentina.

It was 41 years ago when Roberto de Vincenzo made one of golf's most famous gaffes, signing for the wrong score that denied him a spot in a Masters playoff.

De Vincenzo gave him a picture of a green jacket two years ago when Cabrera returned home as U.S. Open champion and told him to go for it. On this turbulent day, it took everything Cabrera had.

"This is a great moment, the dream of any golfer to win the Masters," Cabrera said through an interpreter during the green jacket ceremony. "I'm so emotional I can barely talk."

He closed with a 1-under 71 to get into the first three-man playoff at the Masters in 22 years.

HIGH SCHOOL RODEO

Adams leads District VI with fifth win

Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

FILER — Led by Tanisha Adams of Declo claiming her fifth straight win in barrel racing, the District VI high school rodeo concluded Saturday afternoon.

Katie Foreman of Minico, the fifth contestant in barrels, posted a time of 18.078 seconds and was the fastest until Adams, who was the next to last at No. 45, recorded her time of 17.718 to capture the win.

Amanda Coats of Kimberly was a double-winner on Saturday managing narrow wins in goat tying and breakaway. Coats secured the top spot in goats with a run of 7.61 seconds, besting the time of 7.68 by Kindee Wilson of Filer. In breakaway, Coats was able to just nudge the time of 2.84 by Kelli Kindig of Minico by one-hundredth of a second at 2.83.

Wyatt Holtman of Raft River concluded the weekend with back-to-back wins in steer wrestling. With many of the other competitors finding their steers flipping back and landing on top of the them in the wet and slick conditions Friday night, Holtman was able to grab the win with a run of 5.67. The closest time was a 24.14 by Raul Hurtado of Oakley. With improved conditions on Saturday, Holtman took his steer down in 5.23 seconds but was issued an extra 10-second penalty for breaking the barrier giving him a winning time of 15.23. Garrett Alger of Filer was second with an 18.92.

"I was just kinda lucky on Friday night," said Holtman. "(Saturday), it was much the same. I've had this steer before so I knew him a little better."

The Filer team of Tyler Stradley and Kindee Wilson swept the team roping by winning Saturday with a time of 7.48 bettering the duo's Friday night top run of 9.55.

On Saturday, there were successful rides in each of the rough stock events. Tyler Hanssen of Minico spurred his bareback horse for 68 points turning in the highest ride of the season. Minico teammate Tegan Nevarez made the only saddle bronc ride of the weekend scoring a 59.

Jazz need help to get out of No. 8 spot in the playoffs

SALT LAKE CITY — (AP) The Utah Jazz have put themselves in a precarious position entering the last week of the regular season.

The Jazz need to win and get some help in order to avoid a first-round playoff series against the top-seeded Los Angeles Lakers.

Utah is alone at No. 8 in the Western Conference standings at 47-33, one game behind Dallas (48-32) and two back of New Orleans (49-31). The Jazz hold tiebreakers against both teams, but that won't matter if the Hornets and Mavericks win out.

The Jazz are on a three-game losing streak and can't afford to fall further behind. Utah is at home Monday against the Los Angeles Clippers, then closes out the regular season on the road against the Lakers.

New Orleans, which pulled ahead of Dallas with a win over the Mavericks on Sunday, has games remaining at Houston and San Antonio. The Mavericks close with Minnesota and Houston.

Utah Jazz forward Andrei Kirilenko from Russia, is fouled by Dallas Mavericks forward Antoine Wright in the second half in Dallas, April 8.

Bedard takes shutout into ninth to beat A's 1-0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Erik Bedard allowed three hits pitching into the ninth inning, and Mike Sweeney's run-scoring double broke up a no-hit bid by Trevor Cahill and gave the Seattle Mariners a 1-0 victory over the Oakland Athletics on Sunday.

Bedard was within two outs of his second career shutout when he was lifted for reliever David Aardsma, who struck out Jason Giambi and got Jack Cust to line out with a pair of runners aboard for his second save of the season.

WHITE SOX 6, TWINS 1

CHICAGO — Jim Thome hit a two-run homer to break open a pitcher's duel, Mark Buehrle was dominant into the seventh inning and the Chicago White Sox beat the Minnesota Twins 6-1 on Sunday.

Carlos Quentin singled off Nick Blackburn in the sixth before Thome hit his second homer of the season, snapping a 1-1 tie. Thome also hit a three-run shot in the season opener to help the White Sox beat Kansas City.

INDIANS 8, BLUE JAYS 4

CLEVELAND — Anthony Reyes pitched six innings and the Indians earned their first victory of the season.

Travis Hafner and Mark DeRosa each hit a two-run homer for the Indians, who avoided their worst start in 95 years. Cleveland lost its first six games in 1914.

RAVS 11, ORIOLES 3

Guerrero hit his first home run of the season, leading the Los Angeles Angels to a testy 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox 5-3 on Sunday.

Dustin Moseley (1-0) was charged with three runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings and struck out three in the finale of a tragic and somber season-opening homestand for the two-time defending AL West champions.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MARLINS 2, METS 1

MIAMI — Josh Johnson's dominant outing was just enough to beat Johan Santana.

Johnson pitched a five-hitter for his second complete game in 45 career starts and the Florida Marlins scored two unearned runs to edge Santana and the Mets 2-1 Sunday, handing the New York ace his first loss since June 28.

REDS 2, PIRATES 0

CINCINNATI — Aaron Harang threw a three-hitter, Brandon Phillips hit a two-run homer and Cincinnati overcame a triple play by Pittsburgh to get the victory.

Harang (1-1) faced just three batters over the minimum while pitching his sixth shutout and 12th complete game. The right-hander threw 108 pitches, 80 for strikes. It was the first complete-game shutout of the year in the majors.

CARDINALS 3, ASTROS 0

ST. LOUIS — Kyle Lohse threw a career-best three-hitter, retiring 24 in a row after giving up a single on his first pitch, and St. Louis completed a three-game sweep.

Khalil Greene had three hits and an RBI, and Ryan Ludwick extended his hitting streak to 16 games with an RBI single for the Cardinals, who went 5-2 on their opening homestand and limited the opposition to two or fewer runs in three of the last four.

Cavaliers clobber Celtics 107-76

CLEVELAND — After every 3-pointer, every dunk and every block, LeBron James turned and glared at Boston's bench. The message was clear: Not here.

James made five 3-pointers and scored 29 points before dancing in his seat, and the Cleveland Cavaliers throttled the NBA champions 107-76 on Sunday to move within one win of matching the 1985-86 Celtics for the best home record in league history.

At 39-1, the Cavs can tie Boston's mark against Philadelphia on Wednesday night.

Equaling those Celtics of Bird, McHale and Parrish, though, won't mean anything if the Cavs can't dethrone the current guys in green sometime this spring. The Cavs led 31-9 after the first quarter, opened a 30-point lead in the second and turned a possible playoff preview into a rout.

It was Cleveland's most lopsided win ever in 173 games against the Celtics.

James didn't even have to play in the fourth quarter, getting some of the rest he'll need before the Cavs make a run at their first title. With Cleveland up by 30, James, Mo Williams and Delonte West boogied on the bench and mugged for TV cameras as the crowd roared in delight.

At the other end of the floor, the Celtics weren't enjoying themselves at all. They sat stoically waiting for the clock to expire.

Daniel Gibson scored 15 points and Williams added 13 for Cleveland, which held the Celtics to 36 percent shooting.

Paul Pierce scored 14 and Glen Davis 12 for the Celtics, who were without Kevin Garnett and Leon Powe — not that they might have made a difference.

The Cavaliers have already clinched home-court advantage throughout the Eastern Conference playoffs, and with a win on Monday in Indianapolis, they can lock up home court in the finals — if they get that far.

They may have to get past the Celtics, who beat them in a seven-game semifinal series last year, and figure to be their stiffest competition again.

On this day, though, the Cavs were untouchable.

James made three 3-pointers in the third quarter when he and the Cavs put to rest any thoughts of a big comeback. On his last 3, James spun a few feet from Celtics coach Doc Rivers and hit his long fadeaway over Boston's Tony Allen.

Home court has been vital in the budding Celtics-Cavaliers rivalry: The home team has won 15 consecutive games, including all seven in last year's playoffs.

Tempers boiled in the third quarter when Cavs forward Anderson Varejao and Ray Allen got tangled under the basket after a free throw.

RAPTORS 111, 76ERS 104

TORONTO — Chris Bosh scored 22 points, Jose Calderon had 11 points and 11 assists, and the Toronto Raptors beat Philadelphia 111-104 on Sunday night, handing the 76ers their season-high fifth straight loss.

Anthony Parker scored 18 points, Andrea Bargnani had 17 and Shawn Marion had 14 for the Raptors, who won for the first time in five games.

Louis Williams had 23 points and Andre Iguodala had 21 for the 76ers, with Samuel Dalembert adding 18 points and 12 rebounds.

HEAT 122, KNICKS 105.

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade had one more argument for MVP voters: the second-best scoring show in Miami Heat history.

Wade scored 55 points, one shy of the franchise record, and the Heat moved closer to wrapping up the No. 5 spot in the Eastern Conference playoffs by beating the New York Knicks 122-105 on Sunday night.

Wade shot 19-for-30 from the field, set a career high with six 3-pointers, and nearly topped Glen Rice's record of 56 points before leaving with 1:06 remaining.

Michael Beasley finished with 28 points and 16 rebounds for the Heat, who also got 15 points from Mario Chalmers.

HORNETS 102, MAVERICKS 92

NEW ORLEANS — Chris Paul narrowly missed his seventh triple-double with 31 points, 17 assists and nine rebounds, and the New Orleans Hornets defeated the Dallas Mavericks 102-92 on Sunday to earn a split in a key late season home-and-home series.

David West scored 31 points to help New Orleans (49-31) move a game ahead of Dallas for the sixth playoff seed in the Western Conference. Each team has two games left in the regular season.

dull and far too quiet, the roars returned in a big way. Mickelson and Woods played together in a final round of a major for the first time in eight years, and they proved to be the best undercard in golf.

Mickelson tied a Masters record with a 30 on the front nine to get into contention. Woods chased him around Amen Corner, then caught him with three birdies in a four-hole stretch that captured the imagination of thousands of fans who stood a dozen deep in spots for a view.

But it ended with a thud. Mickelson lost his momentum with a 9-iron into Rae's Creek on the par-3 12th, and when he missed a 4-foot eagle putt and a 5-foot birdie putt down the stretch.

Cody Wadsworth posted 56 points to win the bull riding but paid the price for his ride when the bull stepped on the Kimberly cowboy on his dismount.

"He stepped on my hip," said Wadsworth who already was feeling a little sore after steer wrestling on Friday night. "I'm not sure if 56 points was worth getting stepped on."

Jace Hutchison made a 25-point ride early in the bull riding competition and was given an option for a ride. Unfortunately, the Raft River cowboy got out of shape on his second bull and came off.

The next stop for the District VI is Rupert on April 17-18.

restart at lap nine. Soon Randall Sellars took the front runner position and held on to it until Waltman made a nice move to get around Sellars at the start-finish line with 10 laps remaining in the race. Waltman was then able to stay in the lead finishing just ahead of Sellars.

STROEBEL TAKES MOUNTAIN DEW MODIFIED

Shelby Stroebel, 2008 champion for the Pepsi Premier series, captured the main-event, won in the new Mountain Dew Modifieds division after holding off a relentless Rick Fowle.

Scott Gilligan started on the pole position for the 25-lap main event and was the leader early. Stroebel, who was lined up next to Gilligan, took over and held on for the remainder of the race. Fowle fought to catch Stroebel each time around the track but the driver of the No. 24 car proved too powerful to overtake, crossing the finish line 1.594 seconds ahead of Fowle.

GILLIGAN COMES OUT IN FRONT IN QUALE'S ELECTRONICS HORNETS

Bob Gilligan, 2008 champion in the Quale's Electronics Hornets division, showed everyone he's still got it as he came from mid-pack to round up the main event win.

Gilligan wasted no time making his way into the lead of the 15-lap main event race, taking over at lap two.

PITZ WINS NAPA PONY STOCKS

It was a three-horse race for the NAPA Pony Stocks and once again a reigning track champion made his way to Victory Lane.

Josh Pitz managed to maneuver around the two opponents in front of him to take the lead at lap six. A late race caution bunched the cars back together but Pitz was able to maintain his lead and soon wrapped up the win in their first competition of the season.

No corporate logo on University of Idaho's president's paycheck

Should a deep-pockets donor, say Avista or Potlatch, be directly subsidizing the salary of the president of the University of Idaho?

No, and that's why we have reservations about former U.S. Sen. Steve Symms' proposal to use private money to bolster the salary of the university's next president.

Symms and many other U of I alumni want the State Board of Education to hire Kansas State University Provost Duane Nellis as the school's fifth president in six years.

The state evidently offered Nellis a salary of more than $300,000, but Nellis said he and his wife would be taking a pay cut if they came to Moscow.

In fact, three of five finalists for the job have rejected Idaho for financial reasons.

The state is in the process of cutting support to higher education, so it's in no position to up the ante.

So Symms' idea has some merit — but only if private-sector cash goes into a blind trust that would be used to support the president's compensation.

There can't be any suggestion of a quid pro quo here. Supplementing the president's pay should get you a tax write-off, not extra say in how the university and its faculty do business or conduct research.

Booster money already goes to help pay some of the best-compensated employees on campus — the football and men's basketball coaches. That's why Boise State University football coach Chris Petersen is the highest-paid state employee.

But Petersen doesn't set policy outside Bronco Stadium, award contracts or oversee tenure decisions. The university's president, Bob Kustra, has to the power to establish the priorities and shape the character of the entire institution.

So it's important that the next U of I president doesn't know the origin of his or her sweetener. That's particularly true since the university has operations all over the state that deal extensively with the private sector — especially agriculture, forestry and engineering.

Donors have always been integral to higher education in Idaho. But in this case, they must remain anonymous.

Our view: If it's private-sector money, the president of the University of Idaho shouldn't know exactly where his salary is coming from.

Black caucus tumbles for Castro's lies

Congressional Black Caucus Democrats went to Cuba to see what they wanted to see. Not since The New York Times reporter Walter Duranty traipsed around Stalin's Russia, filing cheery travelogues whitewashing communist-engineered famine, has America witnessed such disgraceful propaganda tourism.

Led around by the nose by the Castro brothers, Rep. Emanuel Cleaver declared, "If there is repression in Cuba we didn't see it." Somehow, the gulags and slums got left off the itinerary. Go figure. The CBC members saw instead a land of milk and honey. Fresh air and freedom. Shiny, happy people cared for by a kindly, benevolent leader. As Comrade Fidel himself put it in his official statement on the visit: "Persons who move on the streets in an active and almost always happy manner do not match with the stereotyped images that most of the times are portrayed about Cuba abroad."

Rep. Cleaver swallowed the Kastro Kool-Aid in one big gulp: "We've been led to believe that the Cuban people are not free, and they are repressed by a vicious dictator, and I saw nothing to match what we've been told." Cleaver unabashedly basked in the cult of Raul Castro's personality: "He's one of the most amazing human beings I've ever met."

Lord, what tools these lawmakers be.

Accompanying Cleaver were radical left-wing House Democrats Barbara

Lee, Laura Richardson, Bobby Rush, Marcia Fudge, Mel Watt and Mike Honda. Rep. Rush was enraptured by the tyrant's "keen sense of humor, his sense of history and his basic human qualities." Lee fawned over the Castros like your neighborhood tweens giggle over the Jonas Brothers. The aging dictator Fidel "looked directly into our eyes," she delighted. Where was he supposed to look? Into their ears? He "was very engaging and very energetic," she confided.

Yes, ask the dozens of independent journalists and dissidents jailed over the last six years: Fidel's a veritable fuzz ball.

It's too bad Castro's American bootlickers jetted back home (Why is it these fervent admirers of the communist regime always buy themselves return tickets?) before Easter. They might have run into someone with seeing eyes who could have reminded them of the religious oppression the kindly Castros oversee. The U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom reported last year that "(r)eligious belief and practice remain under tight governmental control in Cuba. ... Both registered and unregistered religious groups continue to suffer official interference, harassment and repression. Political prisoners and human rights and pro-democracy activists continue to be denied the right to worship." The panel compiled reports of religious leaders "being attacked, beaten or detained for opposing government actions."

The Cuban Communist Party requires religious groups to register to obtain official recognition. They must inform the regime "where they will conduct their activities" and obtain official permission to travel. The government controls the distribution of Bibles. Processions and worship services outside tightly regulated religious buildings are not allowed without permission of the local ruling official of the Communist Party. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is expressly forbidden from proselytizing. Religious schools are banned.

Two years ago, the U.S. international religious freedom panel reported, a Pentecostal preacher and his family were evicted from their home and their church demolished. A month after that, police raided the Santa Teresita Catholic Church in Santiago de Cuba, beat several persons gathered for Mass who participated in a political protest earlier that day, and detained 18 worshippers.

Every Sunday in Havana, a brave group of jailed dissidents' wives walk to a government-approved Mass at an old Catholic cathedral to pray for their husbands' freedom. They are known as the Ladies in White. The group has been harassed and bullied by Castro's henchmen at Easter time for demanding regime change. Their church is named for Saint Rita, the patroness of lost causes. The hopeless sycophants of the Congressional Black Caucus, willfully blind to Castro's systemic brutality, could certainly use the saint's intercession.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Teachers have to deal with a lot

I have read, with great interest, many articles concerning teachers in our area. I am not a teacher; however, I have input.

The job of teaching our children is not easy. Students come from all different types of backgrounds and environments, and that alone can be a challenge. Teachers are expected to make sure each student "gets it" and is often criticized when a student fails to understand or comprehend. We put far too much on our school teachers when we, as parents, should be teaching many of the early lessons in the home.

Yes, teaching a young person to be honest, responsible and loyal should begin in the home. When it does not or when parents don't have the time or make the time, that responsibility is channeled down to the school teachers. Just one more responsibility added to the many they already have every day as they deal with the challenges facing the education system during austere times.

I say with great admiration and pride that I am glad my daughter attended Declo High School and that my husband worked for Declo Elementary. After his death, I received a tremendous outpour of compassion and generosity from both the students and the staff, as well as the parents. The letters and cards from those elementary students has been a comfort to me. The letters and cards made me aware that not only do our teachers touch the academics but also those students have learned the social graces at a young age. Social graces, academics and faith, when taught to a young mind, can be a value that will remain all their lives.

I have the utmost admiration and respect for our elementary teachers and all teachers.

Proposed changes in liquor licensing law unfair

I am concerned about the pending passage of Senate Bill 1148 and the impact it may have on liquor licensees and the hospitality industry.

My partner and I have been in the restaurant business in Twin Falls for over 30 years and we have been responsible licensees from the start. We view our license as a part of the assets of our business, just like the building, the furniture and fixtures, the equipment and the land. The value of our license has increased as our other assets have. We are now approaching retirement, and eliminating the value of our license reduces our nest egg substantially.

We don't feel it is fair that the state should rob us of the well-earned, six-figure value that our liquor license has accumulated.

The state offers an additional 5 percent discount on our liquor purchases from the State Liquor Dispensary to offset this loss. At Rock Creek, we purchase about $50,000 of liquor per year for which we would receive $2,500 in discounts. This means we would have to be in business for an additional 60 years to be compensated for the current value of our license, not counting inflation. We view this rate of return as unfair. Even the State Liquor Dispensary may agree, due to the fact that they stand to lose $1.6 million per year to facilitate the discount.

READER COMMENT

The constitutionality of the new law must also be addressed. Under the Idaho Constitution, it is illegal for the state to cede direct control of liquor licensing to cities and counties. The result would be to greatly increase the number of licenses from 900 to potentially thousands. Every full-service restaurant and lodging facility could be eligible for a city or county license. I don't know how one can dramatically increase the number of licenses and expect to maintain sufficient regulation. The cities and counties do not have liquor law enforcement capabilities, and it is unlikely they could budget for additional enforcement in the current economic climate. This would leave additional enforcement up to the state, which has its own budget problems.

Most liquor licensees are experienced in the operation of bars and restaurants. We check IDs carefully, we do not serve people who have consumed too much alcohol, and if someone is too intoxicated to drive we make sure they get home safely. Even though it is lawful, I do not allow people under 21 to dispense alcohol.

If there is wholesale licensing via the cities and counties, the inexperience of new licensees could make enforcement a nightmare. Currently the state's screening of applicants and the high price of licenses help keep amateurs out of the liquor business!

A large increase in licensees could affect the current business climate for the current license-holders by flooding the marketplace with many more liquor-selling establishments. The effect might be to hurt many viable businesses during an economic downturn.

If S1148 passes, license-holders will have little recourse but legal action. Attorney Brian Donesley says the state does not have the right to "take" the value of our license by altering the original agreement. The license granted us the right to conduct business, which is a "property right." This right has been reaffirmed by the courts.

When we purchased our license, the state charged us a 10 percent transfer fee. These fees have cost purchasers thousands of dollars. If the state wants to pay us the market value of those licenses, I think most of us would not be as concerned. This buyout would probably cost in excess of $50 million, but it would enable us to start over with a new system.

Stan Thomas of Twin Falls is the president of Rock Creek Restaurant.

Veterans groups moving from halls to home

By Stephanie Reitz
Associated Press writer

TRUMBULL, Conn. — Milton Pierce's voice reverberated across the room as the former World War II bomber pilot called the roll at his monthly American Legion meeting.

It was much like any other gathering of the roughly 15,000 posts nationwide, except for one critical difference: Pierce and his fellow members were only steps away from the comfort of their own homes.

The 90-year-old veteran and his compatriots live at Middlebrook Farms, an assisted living community in Trumbull, Conn., where they are members of the state's first American Legion post stationed in a nursing care complex.

As the nation's veterans age and become less mobile, groups such as the Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars are trying to recruit and retain more members by making it easier for them to reach meetings.

In Trumbull and elsewhere, that means invoking an age-old adage: If Mohammed can't come to the mountain, the mountain must come to Mohammed. The "mountain" — in this case, American Legion Post 207 — has been steadily gaining members at Middlebrook Farms since it was launched in 2006 at the assisted living facility about 90 minutes north of New York City.

Leaders of the Indianapolis-based Legion say it's among just a few such posts among their 15,000-plus sites nationwide. Others already are in place in retirement communities for people ages 55 and older, including one about 45 miles north of Trumbull in Southbury's Heritage Village.

"What we try to do is make sure we have a post wherever our service population is, wherever our veterans are, and that means nursing homes and assisted living (communities) are a prime place for us," said Jack Querfeld, the national Legion office's internal affairs director.

Membership at the Middlebrook post started with just a handful of interested veterans in 2006. Now it has about 25 members.

They do have another option: a well-established Legion post nearby and others in neighboring Shelton, Fairfield, Stratford and Bridgeport.

But for Pierce and others like him, making the trip is a physical and organizational marathon. It means finding a ride and packing up the large oxygen tank he uses after a battle with lung cancer — all the while ensuring his breathing tube, which he jokingly calls his "nose hose," doesn't come loose.

"If I had to leave to go to meetings, I guess I just wouldn't," said Pierce, who moved to Trumbull last November from Temple, Texas, to be closer to his grown children.

"That would be a shame because I like it quite a bit, and the goals of the Legion are the same as mine so it's very easy to support," he said.

The Middlebrook post, which meets monthly in the building's community room, is a far cry from the stereotypical Legion halls where members can drop in, grab a beer with friends, jawbone for hours and rent space for parties or receptions.

Yet the camaraderie and traditions are the same, said Everett Shepard III, adjutant of the American Legion's Connecticut operations.

"They get great attendance here, a lot of times more than at some of what would once be considered traditional posts," Shepard said as he prepared to greet the Middlebrook veterans at a recent meeting.

And even though these veterans are in the same complex as their living quarters, that doesn't mean they slack off when it comes to attire.

Some arrive in wheelchairs or using walkers, some stroll in on their own. But all proudly sport dress clothes and their blue and beige Legion hats with yellow piping.

Putting their lives in jeopardy

Diabetics skimp on lifesaving care in recession

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press writer

Diabetics are increasingly risking life and limb by cutting back on — or even going without — doctor visits, insulin, medicines and blood-sugar testing as they lose income and health insurance in the recession, an Associated Press analysis has found.

Doctors have seen a drop in regular appointments with diabetic patients, if they come back at all. Patients more often seek tax-subsidized or charity care. And they end up in emergency rooms more often, patients and physicians said in interviews.

Sales of top-selling drugs and other products used to treat and monitor the disease have dropped since the economic crisis accelerated last fall, the AP analysis found. There are even signs that some patients are choosing less-expensive insulin injections over pricier pills to save money.

Meanwhile, the number of people with the disease keeps growing — another 1.6 million Americans were diagnosed in 2007 alone.

People with other health problems also are cutting back on care amid the recession, but diabetics who don't closely monitor and control the chronic disease risk particularly dire complications: amputations, vision loss, stroke — even death.

Patients' frugality comes at a tremendous cost to the already-strained health care system. The typical monthly bill to treat diabetes runs $350 to $900 for those without insurance, a price tag that's risen as newer, more expensive medicines have hit the market. Emergency care and a short hospitalization can easily top $10,000, and

In this March 9 photo, Jeff Collins watches his wife Eileen take a sample of her blood before testing the blood sugar level at their home in Indianapolis. long-term complications can cost far more.

M. Eileen Collins, 48, of Indianapolis, tried to scrimp on her medication last fall after her husband lost his job and with it their insurance. Without money for insulin, test supplies and other medicines, she asked for free samples and also got a few drugs through $4-a-month generic programs. But she stopped taking most of her drugs and cut her insulin doses in half to stretch her budget.

"I truly did not think I was putting my life in danger," Collins said. "I thought if I was just real careful with what I ate ... I'd be all right."

By Thanksgiving eve, Collins was vomiting blood and rushed to a hospital. Doctors diagnosed her as malnourished, anemic and in diabetic ketoacidosis, a life-threatening condition caused by lack of insulin and sky-high blood sugar. She spent a week in the hospital.

Her story is hardly unique.

Dr. Steven Edelman, a University of California, San Diego endocrinologist who runs a free clinic staffed by medical students, has seen a 30 percent surge the past six months in patients seeking free diabetes medicines and supplies, which the clinic has to ration. Many had been solidly middle class, but the recession took their jobs, insurance and even some homes.

"A third to a half of these people haven't been taking their meds at all," said Edelman, who also founded the advocacy group Taking Control of Your Diabetes.

Diabetes occurs when the body doesn't make enough insulin or doesn't efficiently use the hormone, which helps turn sugar from food into energy. The disease can be kept under control by monitoring blood sugar as well as exercising, improved diet, medications, testing and regular checkups.

Uncontrolled diabetes can cause fatigue, blurry vision, excessive urination, gum problems, infections and wounds that don't heal. Damage to the kidneys, liver, heart and eyes follow. Often, much of that damage isn't apparent until a stroke or heart attack strikes.

Sales of diabetes testing supplies and drugs indicate how many Americans have moved beyond scrimping and are cutting vital expenses. Several doctors said they began noticing a shift in August or September, when the financial markets melted down and layoffs accelerated.

Sales have dipped for pricey brand-name diabetes pills, blood glucose monitors and even test strips, based on industry sales figures and interviews with the top two makers of testing supplies. The strips generally cost $1 or more each; patients using insulin are supposed to test at least two to four times a day to be sure their blood sugar is in a safe range.

Most diabetics typically can control the disease for a few years with diet, exercise and pills available as cheap generics. But eventually, those pills stop working well, and patients switch to more advanced — and more expensive — medicines.

Sales of the most widely used pill, $4-a-month metformin, are up 7 percent since June, according to the AP analysis of figures from health data firm IMS Health Inc. Brand-name versions of the same drug, costing 10 times as much, are down 9 percent, on average, since then.

Recession hits students who need jobs for diploma

By Desiree Hunter
Associated Press writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — For some high school seniors, landing a job means more than extra cash for the movies or the mall — getting a paycheck means a chance to graduate.

Yet many schools that place special education students in paid jobs leading to so-called "occupational diplomas" are finding their work cut out for them: soaring joblessness means restaurants, small businesses and retailers that for years provided jobs to students with disabilities are increasingly hard-pressed to help in a sour economy.

"Times are different than they've ever been," said Butch Starnes, director of a career technical center who regularly places students in jobs in northern Alabama.

"A lot of systems are having this problem where you have teenagers competing for jobs with 40- and 50-year-olds now that are back in the job market looking for anything to help put food on the table," Starnes said.

The occupational diploma programs emerged in recent years across some Southern states — Alabama and Mississippi included — to help young people with disabilities enter the work force through paid jobs while they complete high school. Hundreds have used the programs to acquire the skills employers demand, often landing permanent jobs after graduating.

Yet this isn't a normal economy, and the work force is shrinking daily.

Tommy McWhorter, who owns a Piggly Wiggly supermarket in east Alabama's Chambers County, has employed three occupational diploma candidates on average each of the past eight years. He didn't take any students this year as his staff shriveled from 22 to 15 workers.

"It is critical that these students have this opportunity. If they cannot pursue a standard high school diploma, this is the next best thing for them."

— Special education bureau director Tanya Bradley

"When minimum wage went up, and gas went up, and plastic went up ... everything hit us at one time," he said. "We had to take cuts, and in retail the first cut is naturally payroll."

Diane Sheriff coordinates the occupational diploma program for the county, where the jobless rate is approaching 18 percent. Students in her watch were among those McWhorter had to turn away.

"We had seven students eligible and only three of the seven have been able to find jobs," she said. "So many businesses around here are laying off; they just don't need extra help."

Never mind that many would-be employers see the occupational diploma as a sign of skilled workers ready to deploy.

A 2008 survey published in the Journal of Disability Policies showed 80 percent of employers were inclined to hire those with occupational diplomas, while only 55 percent were likely to hire those with mere certificates of completion or achievement — the most common option for special education students.

Most in special education qualify under federal guidelines because of some life-impacting physical or mental impairment.

Thus when Wal-Mart recently announced that layoffs could be in the future of the world's largest retailer, those who run occupational diploma programs began worrying their students could become eventual casualties of the downturn.

"My first thought was 'Oh my goodness, I hope this isn't going to affect us,'" said one special education director, Susan Currie, in Alabama's Madison County system.

She said nearly all the county's occupational development program seniors — 20 out of 25 — have been placed in jobs this year, mostly at Wal-Mart. But she's worried about those who come next. "Our kids will be the first to go," she said.

In Mississippi, special education bureau director Tanya Bradley said school districts where jobs are scarce are providing the jobs themselves — putting the students in cafeteria posts and in-house child care work.

"It is critical that these students have this opportunity," Bradley said. "If they cannot pursue a standard high school diploma, this is the next best thing for them."

No national agencies or organizations keep track of the number of special education students seeking the occupational diplomas, nor even how many are unable to find work in the recession. Alabama and Mississippi are believed to be the only states offering those diplomas statewide this academic year. Similar programs are scattered across school districts elsewhere.

Alabama's occupational diploma requires 270 hours of paid employment and Mississippi, 580 hours. But Mississippi students also have the option of taking a two-year vocational training program starting in 11th grade and taking a test at the end to bypass the hourly work requirement.

Becky Dean, director of special education for Mississippi's Tunica County Schools, said she often encourages students to take the two-year route because it can be just as helpful in gaining post-graduation employment while avoiding problems finding work in a dismal job market.

"To me, those vocational classes carry a lot more weight," she said. "A lot of times in say a building trades class, word gets around who can do the work and who's a good performer. They get set up for jobs that way."

253 POUNDS IN NINE WEEKS

Contestants seek weight-loss CROWN

Competitors in the College of Southern Idaho's 'Lose Big, Win Big' competition — a local version of the nationally televised 'Biggest Loser' show — warm up on a recent Monday afternoon during their class at the fitness center on campus. Results are starting to show for many of the participants after the competition's halfway mark.

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

The students of College of Southern Idaho's "Lose Big, Win Big" class sat, cameras ready, listening to guest speaker Aubrey Cheney of "Biggest Loser: Couples" as she related her experiences on the weight loss reality show.

The students needed all the advice they could get.

Twenty-four of the 32 students are competing for a $1,000 first prize, awarded to whomever loses the most weight.

"Lose Big, Win Big" is the brainchild of CSI trainers See LOSE, H&F 2

Hardest workout the students have done

Transferring heavy weights from one side of the college's aerobics room to the other.

For 45 minutes, the teams ran back and forth with 25-, 35- and 45-pound weights. In the end, the Blue Team moved 20,535 pounds of weights, while the Black Team moved 22,800.

Biggest challenge for students

Incorporating the changes into their everyday lives, trainer Jaime Tigie said.

"On the 'Biggest Loser' show, they go away from their environment," she said. The show's contestants are whisked away from temptation and can focus on getting fit 24 hours a day.

The CSI students, however, get only 30 minutes three times a week. Add that to work schedules, homework, and family obligations, and the students have one of the biggest challenges of their lives.

But they're doing well, Tigie said. "They've lost 250 pounds as a team, and they're still in their same environment," she said.

Biggest challenge for instructors

For trainer Scott Rogers, it's learning how to be compassionate. "He doesn't like excuses," Tigie said. He's starting to learn, though, that life can get in the way of fitness, she added.

And for Tigie? "Dealing with Scott," she laughed.

Biggest surprise

Teamwork. "I have to say that I have never, ever seen so many people come together and just motivate," Tigie said. She and Rogers expected a lot more competition between the students. Instead, they're cheering each other on.

Weight lost

Among the 32 students, they have lost 253 pounds as of Friday. That's in just nine weeks, Tigie added.

Studies of 'good' fat could help with weight loss

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press writer

Fight fat with fat? The newest obesity theory suggests we may one day be able to do just that.

Just like good and bad cholesterol, there apparently are good and bad types of body fat. Scientists until recently believed this good fat, which spurs the body to burn calories to generate body heat, played an important role in keeping infants warm but by adulthood was mostly gone or inactive.

Now three studies — from researchers in Boston, Finland and the Netherlands — show that some good fat remains in adults, affecting metabolism and potentially offering a target to help people shed pounds.

Dr. Francesco Celi, an endocrinology and metabolism researcher at the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases, said the studies show this fat burns large amounts of energy.

"So it could be used as a target" for a pill that would somehow rev up the fat, he said.

Dr. Louis Aronne, former president of the Obesity Society and a weight control expert at Weill Cornell Medical Center in New York, said the findings are the most conclusive evidence so far of the role of such fat in regulating body temperature and weight.

"I don't want to use the word 'exercise-in-a-pill,'

Three studies show that some good fat remains in adults, affecting metabolism and potentially offering a target to help people shed pounds.

but it's doing something (that's) getting rid of calories," he said, adding that any obesity treatment developed around the fat could be a potential treatment for diabetes as well.

The studies were published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The good fat is actually brownish, while the more predominant bad fat is white or yellow. Brown fat is stored mostly around the neck and under the collarbone. White fat tends to concentrate around the waistline, where it stores excess energy and releases chemicals that control metabolism and the use of insulin.

Here's what the scientists learned about brown fat:

- Lean people had far more than overweight and obese people, especially among older folks.
- It burns far more calories and generates more body heat when people are in a cooler environment.
- Women were more likely to have it than men, and their deposits were larger and more active.

• Among people who sleep less than six hours a night, there is a 66 percent increased prevalence of hypertension.

Lose

Jaime Tigie and Scott Rogers. Tigie and Rogers chose the 24 contestants from student and faculty applicants, each wanting to lose weight and change their lives. (Eight others enrolled in the class to learn about healthy living and aren't part of the competition.)

Starting in January, the students began their three-part weight loss regime, which includes exercise, nutritional guidance and education. They split into two teams: the Black Team, led by Tigie, and the Blue Team, led by Rogers. A third, the Green Team, includes the non-competing students.

On Wednesday, the students listened intently as Cheney gave advice and shared stories. Many nodded in solidarity as she described her struggles in balancing weight loss with raising children, the embarrassment of being mistaken for a pregnant woman, and letting herself give in to temptation once a week.

Their progress has surpassed all of Tigie's expectations. One student, Dan Hird, reached his weight loss goal of 35 pounds in less than eight weeks. He raised his goal to 45 pounds and is about to surpass that, too.

"He's like the godfather of the class," Tigie said, noting that Hird encourages everyone and keeps them laughing. Weight problems aren't the only challenges the students face. One is a single mother who is trying to balance raising a child and getting herself healthy. Most others are full-time students.

But the students keep succeeding, giving Tigie and Rogers hope for their pupils.

And good news: The trainer team plans to offer the class again next spring.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Make haste! The tide of Fortune soon ebbs."
 — Silius Italicus

In today's problem, from the fertile mind of Eddie Kantar, note that North's jump to game facing a game-forcing hand with the majors shows three trumps and a BAD hand. With more you would bid three spades and hope partner could cue-bid now.

Now to the play in four spades, after ruffing the third diamond. When your side suit (here, hearts) has a third- and possible fourth-round loser and you are cursed with only low trumps in the dummy, you have to choose the right time to give up the lead.

Your main problem is how to dispose of your fourth heart. Let's look first at what does not work. Drawing all the trumps leaves you with two heart losers; drawing two rounds of trumps before playing on hearts lets East win and play a third trump. And if you play three rounds of hearts at once, West gets to ruff the fourth heart with a higher trump than dummy's.

Instead, duck a heart at once, win any return, and play the spade ace-king, leaving a low trump at large. Only now do you cash the top hearts. If hearts divide 3-3, draw the remaining trump and claim. If hearts are 4-2, hope that the player with the odd trump also has four hearts (as in the diagram). If so, you can ruff your heart in dummy. If the player with the two hearts has the long trump, tomorrow is another day.

ANSWER: The choice is between the heart king and a spade. I can see how the heart lead might cost, but bear in mind that your partner is relatively weak. Since he has bothered to come in, he ought to have a decent suit; so lead a heart. If for no other reason, that ought to keep partner happy!

Siblings strive to stay out of parents' marital combat

DEAR ABBY: My parents have been married for 60 years. My father has always been physically, verbally and mentally abusive to my mother. My mother is also verbally and mentally abusive to my father.

Because of the violence, Dad is now on probation for two years. They will not divorce or live separately, but continue with their sick relationship. I know we can't help them, but what can we do to save ourselves from being drawn into it? They are both masters at drawing us into it.

- DEVASTATED ADULT CHILDREN OF CRAZY PARENTS

DEAR CHILDREN: As loving, caring children you cannot, at least on some level, avoid being drawn in to some extent. However, it may be less wrenching for you if you consider that both your parents have been getting something out of this sick relationship or it would have ended years ago.

Some people mistake pain and violence for love and passion, and your folks may fall into this category. But if their dysfunctional relationship is preventing you from enjoying your own lives, then what you should do is talk about it with a psychotherapist, because at this late date, your father and mother aren't going to change.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22, and a year and a half ago I was diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes. I must inject myself with insulin four times a day. If I am going to be away from home for more than a few hours, I must bring my insulin and other supplies with me.

When I'm in public - like in a restaurant - I feel as though going off alone to inject myself is denying a part of who I am, so I choose to remain visible when I inject. What is your take on this? I have never seen anyone else do it in plain view, but I would like to because diabetes is nothing to be ashamed of. People often ask questions when I do it, and I'm happy to answer them and to spread awareness.

Do you agree that accepting a disease like this is more easily achieved when one is not isolating oneself?

- UNASHAMED

IN SOUTH CAROLINA DEAR UNASHAMED: Yes, I do - and I have seen someone with diabetes inject himself while seated at a dinner table. My initial reaction was one of concern, and I am sure that is how others would react as well. Having a disease like diabetes is nothing to be ashamed of, and whether you choose to inject your insulin in public is a personal choice, depending upon how comfortable a person feels about it.

DEAR ABBY: What is the proper way to eat bacon in a restaurant? My son says that bacon is finger food and can be picked up with your fingers.

I like to cut the bacon strips into bite-sized pieces that can fit on a fork to be eaten without getting my fingers greasy.

- MOTHER KNOWS BEST

DEAR MOTHER: It depends upon how you like your bacon cooked. According to Emily Post, bacon can be eaten as a finger food "when it is dry, crisp and served whole. If the bacon is broken into bits, served in thick slices (as with Canadian bacon) or limp, eat it with knife and fork as you would any other meat."

IF APRIL 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your part of the cosmic pie should be filled by peace and prosperity during the greatest part of the coming year. You can count on having the luckiest of lucky stars to guide you for the next several months. Be particularly alert during July and August for a chance to alter your life for the better. Your popularity glows like a beacon and a whirlwind romance could turn out to be the real thing. In late August through mid-September, you could be given the opportunity of the lifetime or make a large mistake. Rely upon advice from trustworthy advisors to make the right decision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Incongruity can disturb and enlighten at the same time. You may encourage change while doing the "same old thing" yourself, or you might act quite independently in a surprising area. People sit up and take notice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The pendulum swings both ways. Authority figures in your life such as a boss or teacher may appear unpredictable - but you might surprise them, as well. Smooth the way by extending gentle understanding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Let your imagination be your divining rod. Keep the lines of communication open with a significant other. It is far better to drift along than to steer things in the wrong direction and make a large error.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Every turtle withdraws into its shell when sensing something is out of the ordinary. Someone is playing the knock-knock game with your shell and you really need to provide an answer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): With the tax deadline right around the corner, it is tempting to delay or ask for an extension. Don't do anything with your money that might be underhanded or devious, as you are sure to get caught.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't force an issue; finesse it. The appropriate answer will eventually rise to the surface if you focus on being gentle rather than being right. People will remain vague rather than risk igniting a spat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You know a good thing when you see it. Grab an opportunity to capitalize on a business connection or sound advice from a friend. Loved ones are somewhat more sympathetic to your needs than usual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The most mystifying questions might be answered by your own intuitions. You could be challenged to discuss something that you prefer to keep under your hat. You must share information to preserve trust.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Practice what you preach. This is the time to take the appropriate steps to achieve your long-term goals, but you can't merely pay lip service to lofty goals. Prove that you mean what you say.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Love is always more appealing if it is mysterious. But it is all too easy to mistake a shiny bauble for a diamond or a fledgling friendship for love if you do not take the time to examine it closely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Find ways to please them and appease them. You sense there is something unexplained or left unsaid, but you instinctively do just the right thing. Bind romantic knots a bit tighter under these stars.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Rally round the flag. Do your patriotic best to defend your home turf, friends or future prospects. This might mean passing up a business deal or ignoring a challenge to your sense of right and wrong.
