A crowd gathered Wednesday in front of the Twin Falls County Courthouse for the Tax Day Tea Party rally — the first of two gatherings Wednesday in Twin Falls. The original Boston Tea Party occurred in 1773 when patriots from Massachusetts dressed as Mohawk Indians and dumped crates of tea into Boston Harbor to protest the British Tea Act.

Tax concerns boil over for 'Tea Party' activists

Under falling snow, they waved signs and cheered for the U.S. Constitution.

Hundreds gathered outside the Twin Falls County Courthouse at noon and 5 p.m. on Wednesday for "tea parties" that were in the spirit of the Boston Tea Party of 1773 that protested taxation without representation. There was no tea, only brewing concerns about the direction of the federal government's pattern of taxing and spending.

Attendees held signs that read: "Give me liberty — not debt" and "Born free but taxed to death."

Their message was this: Federal government has grown beyond what the Constitution intended and lacks accountability for spending that future generations will pay off.

They stressed that they were not tied to a political organization or making a stand against any one party or leader.

"If we think this is a Democrat or Republican issue, we are wrong," Rusty Satterwhite, an organizer, told the crowd, adding that the tea party was not a message to President Obama.

Sheriff's Office was first called about the case in August by the mother of two of Beede's victims, also his children, according to court records. Beede was indicted on the 10 charges on Jan. 28, but was originally charged Sept. 12, 2008, with five counts of injury to a child, involving three of the now five victims. That case was dismissed a month later because further investigation was required, according to court records.

Scott L. Beede, 27, is lodged at the Twin Falls County Jail on a $200,000 bond and faces charges of 10 counts of felony injury to children ages 5, 6, 9, 11, and 16.

Snow visits Magic Valley, surprises some

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Winter paid a return visit to south-central Idaho on Wednesday, as residents woke to snow after temperatures hit the 60s as recently as Monday.

Dave Decker with the National Weather Service in Boise said about 2 to 3 inches of snow fell in the Twin Falls area by mid-afternoon, with slightly more farther south.

Residents in the Mini-Cassia area reported varying amounts — as little as 2 inches in Burley and as much as 7 inches in Malta. The Wood River Valley, with a winter storm warning of 3 to 10 inches, saw a little snow that quickly evaporated.

Such a sudden April storm is pretty typical, Decker said. Last year, a similar storm scattered roughly 1 to 4 inches of snow across the Magic Valley, and an April 1999 storm dumped 6 inches. The average April snowfall for the desert region is 1.3 inches.

Area residents took the snow in stride. Emergency dispatchers across south-central Idaho reported only a few slide-offs and minor crashes due to the weather.

"They forget how to drive," one dispatcher noted about area drivers.

The snow contributed to a slow start for an American Red Cross blood drive at the College of Southern Idaho's gymnasium. But attendance picked up, and shortly after noon people filled most of the site's donation beds. The Red Cross makes four stops a

"Scott had put the girls in a cooler and sat on the lid to keep the girls from getting out of the cooler" according to a police report filed for the dismissed case. "Scott denied hurting his daughters or choking them ... When he realized the girls didn't like being in the box he stopped."

A police report isn't filed in court with the current, larger indictment against Beede.

One of the children told police that when she was inside the cooler she "could not breathe and was scared," according to court records for the dismissed case.

The girls also told police Beede choked them with his hands, according to that court record.

An ex-girlfriend of Beede's told police in August that Beede forced her 8-year-old son to take a hot bath that required medical treatment for burns, according to court records for the dismissed case. "Scott insisted (to police) that he did not hurt anyone and that kids may get hurt as they are playing but that was the extent of the issue."

Beede is also accused of shooting a BB gun at three boys, sons of ex-girlfriends, according to the indictment against him.

In the police report for the dismissed case against Beede, police say they found BB's lodged in two of the boy's bodies.

Police requested x-rays be taken of the children that Beede allegedly shot with BB's, court records show. "6 BB's were found in (a child victim's) buttocks and a BB was found in (another child victim's) foot and another in his knee."

Beede is scheduled for a plea hearing April 27 in Twin Falls 5th District Court.

The maximum punishment for injury to a child is 10 years in prison.

year at CSI, gathering about 330 units of blood a year, spokeswoman Debi Mahler said; about 240 units are used each day across Idaho.

"We're doing just fine," drive supervisor Bill Williard said of turnout.

Shoshone Falls, drawing crowds lately with its above-normal flows, was a bit quieter as the snow fell Wednesday morning. But those who did make the trip were rewarded with a new take on the falls as large steam clouds rose from the river beneath it.

"It just adds a different texture to it," said Roger Steen, manning the ticket booth for the Twin Falls city park. By 11:30 a.m., he said, about 20 cars had gone past.

The snow came just one week after a massive storm dumped rain and hail on the valley, especially clogging up Jerome County. The county airport measured 2.08 inches of rain, Decker said, breaking that day's rainfall record of .29 inches in 1978. It was the seventh-highest rainfall reported since the station began operating in 1915, he said.

Staff writers Laurie Welch and Ariel Hansen contributed to this report.

CLARIFICATION

An Associated Press article covering extensions for filing federal income tax returns that appeared in the Wednesday Business section was unclear about the impact on contributions to individual retirement accounts.

Taxpayers who file for an extension on their tax returns will be allowed to make 2008 IRA contributions as late as Oct. 15, 2009, well beyond the usual deadline of April 15, 2009. But the article should have explained that only certain self-employed taxpayers can make 2008 IRA contributions after April 15 by getting a tax filing extension. Most taxpayers would still have to make those contributions by April 15, regardless of whether they filed for extensions.

Budget

have discretion over in case state agencies can't reach 5 percent, said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, co-chairman of the joint budget committee. Otter doesn't need a trigger — like the economy recovering, for example — to access the $7.4 million.

The 5 percent cut is what Otter and Republican House members preferred. The House voted 51-18 earlier in the day against a Senate-backed bill with a 3 percent, or $20 million, cut to personnel costs with $7.4 of stimulus making up the additional 2 percent.

"It's a compromise," Cameron said late Wednesday after a series of meetings with lawmakers and Otter aides. "Obviously (the original bill) can't make it through so this is the next best thing."

Still, declaring a compromise at this year's session only goes so far. Weeks ago, Otter distanced himself from a document titled "governor's proposal" with 3 percent personnel cuts, causing confusion among lawmakers.

Earlier Wednesday, Otter met with lawmakers regarding budget matters.

"We had a meeting of the minds," spokesman Jon Hanian said. "We believe it was productive and we're hopeful."

Meanwhile, it's still unclear how some of the $45 million in discretionary stimulus money will be spent. The $7.4 million originally slotted to minimize the impact on state workers will instead be saved for next year.

Cameron said rather than spend about $17 million directly on local highways, the money will reach locals through a state grant process. The amount could reach $19 million depending on whether legislators want to fund the first part of the Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan. The Idaho Education Network will still receive $3 million. About $15 million for local water projects remains untouched.

GOP House leaders declined to share specifics, saying the deal wasn't final and they are meeting with Otter today. But they said the agreement is among the Senate, House and Otter and that no single party got everything it wanted.

"It's a fair compromise," House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley said.

State budget writers are expected to meet Friday.

But legislative leadership said no deal has been reached on transportation and that the session will extend into at least next week.

Increase

high predicted costs for this year, spokeswoman Stephanie McCurdy said. A typical residential customer using 1,050 kilowatt-hours of electricity a month would pay 9.3 percent more, or about $7.20 more each month.

The power cost adjustment, as it's called, was started in 1992 and changes every June 1. None of the money is company profit, and the request has to be approved by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Company officials recorded a new peak demand for power last summer, and have promoted energy-conservation measures to customers in recent years.

Hydrologists have predicted a near-average water supply this year for irrigators who rely on the Snake River. But McCurdy said hydropower forecasts still trend somewhat below the median figure for generation in the company's 17 dams. Recent high river flows may still provide some short-term benefit to customers, she said.

Besides residential customers, Idaho Power requested an 11.08-percent increase for irrigators, 12.05 percent for general-service customers and 16.37 percent for its large-power class.

The adjustment isn't always an increase; customer bills are sometimes lowered if the company had a good year. Last year, regulators approved an increase of 10.7 percent, Idaho Power's third-highest adjustment since 1993.

Earlier this year, the PUC approved a general 4 percent Idaho Power rate increase, granting $27.6 million of a requested $66.6 million.

Compared to that and other rate cases, the annual power adjustment by far has the biggest effect on rates, said PUC spokesman Gene Fadness. It's also far less flexible if the commission wants to tinker with it.

"It's basically their power bill," he said.

Fadness said the PUC will respond shortly with information on public comment and hearings on the request. Commission members may look at ways to delay some of the increase until better economic times, though that runs the risk of increasing next year's assessment, he said.

In a press release, Vice President of Regulatory Affairs Ric Gale noted that Idaho Power's rates are still low compared to other parts of the country and said the company understands the pressures on its customers.

State House kills Otter's liquor bill

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — The House voted 42-28 on Wednesday to kill a measure from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to modernize the state's liquor laws and eliminate the decades-old quota system.

Otter's latest defeat from the House — the chamber has already snubbed him on raising new revenue to fix the state's roads and bridges — came as legislators warned of the evils of alcohol and their constitutional requirement to uphold morality.

"I cannot sacrifice temperance and morality on the altar of economic development," Rep. Brent Crane, R-Nampa, told the House. "We will see an increase of substance abuse and we will see an increase in crime."

The bill — the product of more than two years of work by an Otter-appointed committee — would have transferred responsibility of granting licenses at restaurants from the state to cities and counties, while capping the approximate 1,000 licenses at bars. Currently, licenses are awarded by the state on a per-capita basis, and the process has drawn a waiting list and created a market, generally unregulated, with licenses selling for $500,000.

But lawmakers cited committee testimony from licensees in opposition and argued it would deliver a financial blow to them and strip them of a major investment.

"I just followed the wishes of my constituents," said Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, adding he listened to the PTA and Mothers Against Drunk Driving, both of which opposed the bill.

The bill passed the Senate 23-12.

Most of the opposing debate was focused on the constitutional mandate that the Legislature maintain and promote temperance, and that the bill would lead to increased consumption and alcohol abuse.

Rep. Russ Matthews, R-Idaho Falls, said there'd be such a proliferation of liquor licenses that family restaurants such as McDonald's would begin serving alcohol to children.

"They could slip a little something in there, a little nippy in there instead of a happy toy for a Happy Meal," he said.

Otter spokesman Jon Hanian said Otter was disappointed with the vote and it hasn't been decided which direction to take on the issue.

"We spent two years gathering input, bringing all the stakeholders to the table, addressing concerns," he said. "We felt we did that with this legislation and are disappointed the House didn't see it likewise."

Under the bill, the sale of the bar-only licenses would be overseen by a new independent board instead of the Idaho State Police. Servers and bartenders would have been required to pass state-approved training, and then been responsible for serving underage drinkers by a misdemeanor.

Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, who supported the bill, said it failed due to misinformation. He said the issue had been studied for several years and was supported by the Idaho Licensed Beverage Association, the licensee organization.

"It's time we change this system," Smith said afterward.

While some bills pushed by Otter have passed the Legislature — revising state retiree benefits, for example — other big-ticket items, like raising fees to fund roadwork and the liquor bill, have stalled.

"He is taking on some really difficult subjects," said GOP House Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts, R-Donnelly, who voted in favor Wednesday. "Quite frankly, the liquor bill may require another year to come back and pass."

Jerome Co. voters to be polled on new jail

Commissioner Howell supports 30-year lease-to-own plan

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

About 350 Jerome County residents will get phone calls beginning Monday inquiring if they want a new jail funded by a bond levy or a long-term, lease-to-own agreement.

Jerome County Commissioner Charlie Howell said he wants to use a Hailey contractor to facilitate financing and construction of a new jail through a lease, rather than a bond levy.

Residents will get a chance to vote on how they may want to fund a new jail after the survey is analyzed, Howell said.

Results from the upcoming, one-week phone poll of 350 registered voters will be presented to the county by its contractor Rocky Mountain Corrections (RMC) in May. RMC plans to use Moore Information of Portland, Ore., to do the poll, said RMC General Manager April Lee.

Howell said the county has spent $50,000 so far on various jail studies and consulting so far. A new jail is projected to cost between $11 million and $13 million to construct, Lee said.

The county would pay about $900,000 annually on a lease if it can make $600,000 a year leasing bed space to out-of-county inmates, said Howell. "We really feel we can afford this."

A bond levy election will be held only if the upcoming phone poll shows that to be the preferred option. If the poll shows a lease is what people want, then that will be the question posed to voters, Howell said.

Lee declined to provide the Times-News with a copy of the survey residents will take later this month.

"We don't want questions put out there ahead of time," said Lee. "I can tell you the types of questions are related to support for the potential jail facility and opinions on how to finance it."

Lee said the survey results will be statistically valid, with a 5 percent margin for error, and will cover the county's full demographics. "If you're asking the right questions that match what we would have to ask on a bond measure, I know that what comes back is very similar to what a vote looks like."

RMC is getting paid $20,000 by the county to report the poll results and handle public relations.

The company has also offered Jerome County more of its services if the county opts to lease a new jail. RMC told county leaders it could consult a lease with Municipal Capitol Markets Group, in Englewood, Colo., to finance a new jail that the county could rent and run for 30 years and then own.

"The county would own the facility at the end of the lease and would not have to raise taxes in order to construct the facility," Lee said. "The facility would be managed and operated by the Jerome County Sheriff's Office."

Allowing RMC to present the survey results that it has a potential financial interest in does not pose a conflict of interest, Howell said.

That's because the phone poll will be done by a different company, Howell said. "They're separate enough."

Howell said Wednesday he cannot speculate on what this month's poll will show, but he thinks leasing for 30 years through RMC's consulting is the best option for the county.

"The community prefers the leasing option and is leaning toward that now," Howell said, but added "The bond is a much cleaner way to do it. There's pluses and minuses to both."

Lee said a bond levy could be a hard sell. "In this economy, voting to raise taxes is a pretty serious question, is there support in Jerome County to do that?"

Hailey cuts $85K from budget, no layoffs planned

With revenue continuing to decline, the city of Hailey has announced additional cuts to its projected budget for the year. The cuts primarily affect telecom, fuel and the parks and streets department, and combined with previous cuts, reduce general fund operations by 7 percent.

In a press release, city administrator Heather Dawson reported that savings already made, and those that will be realized from positions that the city previously announced would not be filled this year, will combine to $229,500. The city must save an additional $85,000 to continue to ensure that expenses don't exceed revenues, based on second-quarter projections.

To get there, the city won't buy budgeted-for computer equipment, a vehicle, and uniforms for three departments. It will also shell out approximately half the budgeted amounts for telephone and communications, fuel, street lighting, and park building repair.

The areas where revenues were down the most in the second quarter are building permits, tax revenues from the state and county, and interest.

Blaine Co. surveys public about four-day workweek

Following in the state of Utah's footsteps, Blaine County is considering shifting from a standard five-day workweek to one that would be Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"We can extend hours, so you can either hit us before work or after work. You can make the case we'll be more accessible," said County Commissioner Tom Bowman.

The commission has posted on its Web site, www.blainecounty.org, a survey designed to solicit public opinion. Click "4 Day Work Week Public Survey" on the main page to take the survey.

The shift was recommended by Blaine Environmental, Economic and Energy Sustainability Team, known as BE3ST. That group estimates a four-day workweek would reduce the county's carbon footprint by 9.4 percent, saving 75 tons of emissions annually due to commutes and 216 tons due to building closures. The city of Bellevue has already gone to a four-day workweek, closed on Monday, but it may switch to Friday if the county opts to close at the end of the week.

Bowman said the county is seeking about 250 responses to the online survey, and he expects a public hearing will be held later this year. He said he hopes that if the shift is agreeable to county staff and public, it can be enacted by winter for optimum savings.

Online education bill clears committee to be amended

Schools could contract with private companies offering online educational courses

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — A Senate committee voted 5-4 on Wednesday to allow amendments to a bill permitting traditional public schools to contract with private companies offering online educational courses.

Currently, traditional schools offer online courses only through the Idaho Digital Learning Academy, the public online arm of the Idaho State Department of Education. There is no law that allows districts to count online course attendance, which helps determine state funding.

"The virtual part of this is something some districts have been asking for now for some time," State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, the bill's sponsor, told the Senate Education Committee. "I don't think this is the end run, if you will, to fire teachers."

The bill lets district pay for the online education with up to 5 percent of the money it receives from the state that, if gone unused, is returned to the state. Luna and Republican lawmakers said accessing additional online courses will help students in rural areas and an eventual statewide broadband network will help. Currently, online education is generally limited to only virtual charter schools.

Senate Education Committee Chairman John Goedde, R-Coeur d'Alene, proposed amending the bill to add a two-year sunset clause.

The bill also allows districts, for two years, to use stimulus money to pay for some teachers. State education officials, however, conceded to lawmakers such action could be taken on stimulus without the bill.

Both Democrats and Republicans objected, arguing the bill is coming late in the session without enough details on costs, structure or administration; is unfairly bunched with a measure they support; and could open the floodgates to firing teachers.

After speaking out against the bill during committee, Senate Minority Leader Kate Kelly, D-Boise, cast the deciding vote to send the bill to be amended. She said after the meeting sending it to be amended was a better alternative than letting the full Senate vote on it unchanged. She still wants it to die.

The bill passed the House 51-19 on Tuesday.

Feds begin inventory of local emergency resources

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

This time next week, Joe Nalder could be out counting fire trucks.

Nalder, a state contractor, is being paid through a federal grant to inventory large equipment at hospitals and police, fire, public works and emergency-medical agencies — anyone who received federal funds for equipment or other needs.

The work is being done nationwide to comply with new requirements for the National Incident Management System, said Jackie Frey, Twin Falls County emergency services director.

The end result should be a list of equipment that could be possibly called upon in times of emergency — for example, fire vehicles for when large wildfires hit the region, Frey said. The surveying, called "resource typing," is mandatory, she said. But sharing equipment in an emergency is voluntary, she added, and only done with an organization's approval using proper procedures. The listed equipment does not become federal property in any way.

"There's a protocol set up," Frey said. "Things have to be met."

Nalder began contacting agencies Wednesday, working through Frey's office. He should start his visits in a week, she said, and is also covering Jerome County.

In an e-mail sent out Wednesday morning, she encouraged Twin Falls agencies to make time for Nalder's visits. It's important, she said later, to give people time to prepare.

"They're busy too," she said.

Coroner: SV man died of heart attack

KETCHUM (AP) — The Blaine County coroner says a heart attack was the likely cause of death of a Sun Valley Co. worker who collapsed after a fight with his roommate.

Jerome James, 49, was pronounced dead Feb 6 shortly after police say he fought with 19-year-old Corey Drehmel inside their room at a Sun Valley employee dormitory.

Coroner Russell Mikel says James had a pre-existing heart condition that may have contributed to his death. Mikel says James did not die from trauma suffered in the fight.

Drehmel was initially charged with involuntary manslaughter, but it was dismissed due to challenges in determining James' cause of death.

Blaine County court records indicate prosecutors have filed a new criminal case against Drehmel. But those records for now remain sealed by the judge.

House emerges as boss of 2009 Legislature

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Who's the boss in the 2009 Idaho Legislature? Midway through the session's 13th week, the House of Representatives is clearly winning the day, using its conservative clout to kill measures favored by the Senate and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

On Wednesday morning, the House sent its first strong message of the day to the Senate: A 51-18 vote killed a plan to dole out $45 million from the federal stimulus. The Republican House majority objected to Senate-backed provisions directing that some of the money go to minimize state agency layoffs, forcing a pact later in the day where senators gave ground.

Just after noon, representatives made themselves heard again, this time with Otter.

They voted 42-28 to scuttle two years of work the Republican governor has invested in reforming Idaho's 62-year-old liquor license quotas. The governor believes the current system is cramping the state's economic growth by stymieing ambitious restaurateurs who can't get licenses; the House decided he was trying to expand drinking and turned him down.

Emboldened by his chamber's success in setting the tone so far, House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, later offered an explicit warning to the Senate not to add a gas-tax hike to a measure seeking to repeal an ethanol tax exemption. The House has passed it, but the Senate is considering changes.

"They're walking a very thin line," Moyle told The Associated Press. "The ethanol bill is a good bill. They could end up with nothing."

Repealing the ethanol tax exemption would add some $18 million to Idaho's coffers.

The Senate has held off voting on any proposed amendments.

"We're still working on a solution for transportation," said Senate Majority Leader

Bart Davis, R-Idaho Falls. "I don't currently anticipate going into the (amending) order" on Thursday.

Senate and House leaders including Dean Cameron, Senate Finance Committee chairman, did reach some common ground late Wednesday afternoon on resolving how to divvy up the $45 million from the federal stimulus.

Still, Cameron, R-Rupert, was forced to abandon using $7.4 million from the total to reduce personnel cost cuts to just 3 percent, something he said was the best way to protect public safety and preserve jobs.

The House demanded — and received — a 5 percent personnel cost cut instead, with the caveat that Otter can use his discretion to use some of Idaho's budget reserves to help prevent layoffs at agencies like the Idaho State Police and state prison guards, if it comes to that.

to characterize the agreement as a victory, though his chamber got essentially everything it wanted.

"I don't think anybody won," he said. "Everybody had to give a little ground."

Jon Hanian, Otter's spokesman, said that's what the governor has been giving up all year.

He has dropped his original $174 million, five-year plan to raise more money for road and bridge maintenance and is now asking for just "something."

So far, however, representatives have said "something" is still too much. On March 19, they voted 43-27 to kill a proposed three-year, 7-cent-per-gallon increase in the state gas tax, from 25 cents now. Last Thursday, a 2-cent-per-gallon increase plan — "piddly," one lawmaker called it — won over just five new supporters, dying 37-32.

Majority GOP and minority Democratic lawmakers insist a recession isn't the time to raise taxes. Idaho's unemployment is at 7.1 percent, the highest level in more than two decades. Still, Hanian said Otter won't let the House off the hook like he did a year ago, when he dismissed its proposal for $68.5 million in new roads dollars as too puny to fight over.

"It's $30,000 bucks a day for them to stay in session. We're mindful that the financial clock is ticking," Hanian said. "But there are still some substantial things to iron out."

Moyle, who insists the House isn't trying to push the Senate or Otter around, points out he wasn't enthusiastic about the gas tax hikes but still joined the House leadership team in backing them, out of deference to the governor.

"It wasn't like we said 'Hell no!' We went through the process," Moyle said. "We were trying to find a reasonable consensus everybody could agree on. We didn't find it."

On Thursday, the Legislature hits its 95th day, second-longest in history. Only the 118-day session of 2003 was longer.

Stimulus funds benefit Silver Valley

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Northern Idaho's Silver Valley is among 50 of the nation's most-polluted and hazardous waste sites that were chosen Wednesday to receive a share of the federal stimulus money.

Between $10 million and $25 million will be spent in the mining region to remove pollution from about 1,000 residential lawns contaminated by decades of mining and smelting, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said. About 100 more people will be hired to the existing work force of 125 to complete the work two years ahead of schedule.

"The whole intent was to create jobs," said Dan Opalski at the EPA's regional headquarters in Seattle. "This will allow the state to supercharge that program for a couple of years."

The new goal is to finish the project by 2013 instead of 2015, he said.

A century of mining and smelting for silver and other minerals in the narrow valley 50 miles east of Spokane created one of the nation's largest Superfund sites. The EPA has been working for years to clean up the pollution, which includes large amounts of lead and other hazardous materials that settled on lawns.

The EPA has already finished cleaning lawns in the Kellogg, Idaho, area, where giant smelters produced extensive pollution.

The lawn replacement program has now moved to outlying parts of the valley, from the town of Mullan to near Harrison, along the flood plain of the Coeur d'Alene River.

Rob Hanson of the state of Idaho said workers are ready to immediately begin the accelerated work, and that local residents are anxious to get their contaminated lawns replaced.

"Over the last few years we are getting cooperation rates of 95 to 98 percent," Hanson said.

It is not yet clear how much the accelerated work will cost, Opalski said.

While lawns contaminated with lead and other metals pose the most immediate risk to human health, it will take decades to clean up all the environmental pollution in the Silver Valley, Opalski said.

Nationally, the EPA on Wednesday announced that $528 million in stimulus money would be used to clean up the 50 sites in 28 states. The money is aimed at creating jobs for contractors, soil excavation companies, hazardous waste disposal facilities and labs that test samples.

Small plane lands on Phoenix school playground

PHOENIX (AP) — A small plane has made an emergency landing on a school playground at a west Phoenix elementary school, but no one was hurt.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Ian Gregor says a single-engine Cessna 152 with a flight instructor and student on board left nearby Glendale Municipal Airport for a practice flight Wednesday morning. The instructor reported the plane had a rough-running engine and that he didn't think they could make it back to the airport.

Gregor says the plane apparently hit a chain-link fence at Villa de Paz Elementary School while trying to land on the empty playground at about 9:30 a.m. Television images show the plane ended up with its nose stuck into the grass just feet from a jungle gym and nearby classrooms. Both pilots walked away and no one on the ground was injured.

Authorities investigate a single-engine plane that made an emergency landing near Villa de Paz Elementary School in Phoenix on Wednesday.

Regulators order First Bank of Idaho to up capital

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Federal banking regulators have ordered the First Bank of Idaho to increase its capital by about $10 million, stop making any new construction or land loans and to come up with a backup plan if it can't raise the necessary cash by the end of June.

The cease and desist order was filed by the U.S. Office of Thrift Supervision last week. First Bank of Idaho CEO Everett Covington said Wednesday that the bank has hired an investment banking firm to help raise the capital, and that it could result in the bank being sold. If the bank fails to come up with the cash or an approved backup plan, it could be forced to merge with another bank or to close its doors.

The locally owned bank will continue operating as normal, Covington said, and depositors need not worry about their money. The bank has branches in Ketchum, Hailey and Bellevue and operates under the name First Bank of the Tetons in Victor and Driggs, Idaho, and Jackson, Wyo.

"There's always that danger that someone will panic, but we have not seen any withdrawal of funds from the bank," he said. "There's no reason to do so, since we are still a full-service bank and we are still insured by the FDIC."

The bank's capital level dropped to 9.7 percent of its total risk-based capital at the end of last year — just below the federally required 10 percent minimum, Covington said, and that triggered the cease-and-desist order. The Office of Thrift Supervision is now requiring the bank to maintain 12 percent capital to reduce the risk of it dipping below the 10 percent level again.

Though First Bank of Idaho didn't take part in the subprime real estate market, it has been hard hit by declining property values in a resort region where real estate is a primary economic engine.

Legislature 2009: The session that would not die

In offering an amendment to a bill in committee on Wednesday, state Sen. John Goedde, R-Coeur d’Alene, said he hoped the measure would move the Legislature closer to adjournment.

“I think that’s a chance we need to take to move forward and have an end to this folly — session, I mean.”

That’s about right. Day 94 saw the House of Representatives spike a package of spending legislation that had passed 34-1 in the Senate, all because the House Republican majority wants its own way.

The sticking point is how much state personnel costs should be cut, and by whom. Despite weeks of work by the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, House leaders are intransigent.

This impasse threatens to send the first session of the 60th Legislature into May — at a cost to taxpayers of $30,000 per day.

Idaho lawmakers take pride in being members of a citizen Legislature whose members are still grounded in the real world because they also have jobs and lives away from the Capitol.

But retirees now dominate the Legislature, making it a body of people who who really don’t have another job or a pressing need to be somewhere else.

And there are fewer small farmers in the Legislature these days. Those who remain have employees back home work the fields.

For some lawmakers, the Legislature has become a debating club where scoring points and getting your own way are more important than the welfare and wishes of the Idaho people.

Meanwhile over in the Borah Building, nobody’s quite sure what Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter wants. He was handed another stinging defeat when the House on Wednesday, rejected his liquor-law reforms. The governor is also furious — rightly so — that the House has refused to pass any legislation for highway repair funding.

So a veto of whatever going-home bill finally emerges from the Legislature is a distinct possibility.

These folks have been in Boise since Jan. 12. They’ve had plenty of time to cut a deal on personnel cuts.

But to do that, they would actually have to talk to each other and to the governor. Compromise requires some give and take. Outside of JFAC, there’s not much of that going on.

Instead of sending 105 lawmakers to Boise this year, Idahoans would have been better off sending just 20 — the members of the budget-writing committees.

Under the astute leadership of Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, they’ve handled the state’s response to the recession skillfully, thoughtfully and sensitively.

Too bad they’re a reasoned minority afloat in a sea of stubbornness.

Maybe Idaho should raise the pay of lawmakers to make it financially feasible for more working people to serve and to restore the true citizen Legislature. After all, they’d have jobs and lives to get back to — and less interest in idling away April with grandstanding.

Our view:

State legislators have had 94 days to hash out an agreement among themselves — and with Gov. C.L. ‘Butch’ Otter — on state agency personnel cuts. Their failure is a disgrace.

What do you think?

Are gay rights organizations too wedded to the victim mindset?

Just in time for spring wedding season, gay marriage activists are celebrating a triumphant few weeks. Last Tuesday, the Vermont legislature effectively legalized same-sex unions in that state. Days earlier, the Iowa Supreme Court had ruled that a statute barring gay marriage was unconstitutional. And here in the nation’s capital, the D.C. Council voted unanimously to recognize same-sex marriages performed elsewhere.

JAMES KIRCHICK

But amid all the history being made, one gay rights organization did something really historic: It announced that it would shut its doors at the end of the year, because its mission was complete.

Formed in 1999 to lobby for the right of gay couples to adopt children in Connecticut, Love Makes a Family was the lead organization advocating for same-sex marriage in that state. It successfully lobbied lawmakers to pass a civil unions bill in 2005, but fell short of achieving its ultimate goal until last October, when the state supreme court ruled that the Connecticut constitution endows same-sex couples with the right to marry.

“Mission accomplished” is one of the most difficult things to say when your organization depends on working toward a cause, but Love Makes a Family did it. And other gay groups may soon need to follow suit. If the gay community truly wants to achieve equality, it will have to overcome a victim mindset that is slowly becoming obsolete.

Contrast the decision of Love Makes a Family with that of MassEquality, a Massachusetts organization that won equal marriage rights through a state supreme court decision in 2003. It fought off successive attempts to repeal that ruling, a battle that ended conclusively in 2007 when legislators blocked an effort to put a constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriage on the ballot. Massachusetts’s gay citizens are now equal under state law in every way, which would seem to undermine the organization’s eponymous raison d’être. Yet MassEquality continues to operate and raises money that could be directed to gay rights organizations fighting more pressing battles in other parts of the country. Today, its agenda has less to do with supporting gay rights than it does with lobbying the state government to pour more money into pre-existing, already generously funded programs such as anti-bullying measures, senior services and others.

Once the goals of an organization with a specific mission are achieved, it should relish its victory, cease operations and move on. This is the sign of communal maturity. The continued operation of a gay rights organization in the state that was the first to institute marriage equality and that has the most progressive gay rights laws in the country reflects a sense of eternal victimhood.

Gay civil rights groups have a tendency to minimize victories and exaggerate threats. When President Obama chose the Rev. Rick Warren to deliver the invocation at his inauguration, those groups complained loudly. Although Warren had campaigned in favor of Proposition 8, the California measure banning same-sex marriage, the decision to include him in a purely ceremonial position signaled no change in administration policy on gay rights. Nevertheless, his mere reading of a two-minute prayer drove gay organizations apoplectic. After all, bogeymen like Warren help with fundraising appeals.

Of course, the passage of Proposition 8 last fall highlights the fact that the struggle today remains real and that love only makes a family within clearly defined state borders. There is still important work to be done nationwide, and none of this is to downplay the daily efforts put forth by gay organizations in socially conservative parts of the country. But if the ultimate goal of the movement is to achieve equality for homosexuals, then those leading it should appropriately acknowledge progress along the way. That means accepting victory when it’s achieved, rather than trumping up opposition at every opportunity.

Why is Obama bowing to tinpot oil despot?

Americans suffered a bad-enough indignity when President George W. Bush hosted then-Crown Prince Abdullah at his Crawford, Texas, ranch in April 2005. Oil had hit historic highs above $50 a barrel that spring. Limited supplies and rising prices, it was feared, were threatening to choke off international economic growth.

The Saudi Arabian oil ministry had declared shortly before the Crawford confab that the largest crude exporter was maintaining excess capacity of 1.5 million barrels of oil per day. The Saudis had it, untapped, and the world — the United States in particular — needed it in the market.

So the leader of the nation that had for decades provided a strategic shield for Saudi Arabia against Soviet aggression, and then against Iranian revolutionary aggression, and then actually fought a war to defend it against the Baathist aggression of Saddam Hussein, took a stroll, hand in hand, with the kingdom’s de facto leader and asked him to open the spigot a little wider.

Abdullah’s response? No,

thank you very much.

It was a humiliating incident, and not primarily because decades of bipartisan negligence about U.S. dependency on foreign oil had compelled the democratically elected leader of the most powerful nation on Earth to act as a supplicant to a Middle Eastern potentate.

The real humiliation, I noted in a column at the time, was that in order to hold Abdullah’s hand and be in a position to even ask for more oil, Bush had to suppress a long list of issues that should be part of the U.S. dialogue with Saudi Arabia: human rights, religious rights, women’s rights and Saudi support for extremist groups around the globe.

Whatever the criticisms of Bush’s stroll with Abdullah in Crawford, at least they walked together as equals, not with Bush three steps behind. At the G-20 meeting in London, however, Barack Obama had State Department protocol take a curtsy.

As the American president approached King Abdullah, he bowed — deeply. So deeply, in fact, that in a video clip of the episode captured by Spanish television, he could have kissed the king’s obscured hand if he tried. Obama’s obsequiousness to the Saudi monarch stood in stark contrast to the gentle nod he gave Queen Elizabeth as they met at Buckingham Palace.

The White House’s explanation for the bow is that it didn’t happen — though the video clearly shows it did. And the apparent unnewsworthiness of the gesture in the mainstream media has allowed the incident to disappear into the same black hole as other embarrassing Obama moments. Now the president is standing tall, basking in the reflected glory of the Navy SEALs who rescued Captain Richard Phillips.

But there’s a philosophical reason American presidents do not genuflect to foreign leaders. It’s not American exceptionalism. It’s equality.

As the head of state of a nation whose founding document stipulates that all individuals are created equal, the president is accorded no lower respect — and no higher — than those of any other leader at international gatherings.

There’s a historical reason a chief executive who derives his legitimacy from the sovereignty of free people should not bow down to one whose sole claim to power rests on the divine right of kings.

And there are particular reasons an American president should not lower himself before a leader whose nation is guided by Wahhabism, an ultraconservative and chauvinistic form of Islam that despises basic Western values of gender equality, individual liberty and freedom of conscience.

Bush’s stroll with Abdullah, necessitated by U.S. dependence on Saudi oil, was the subject of broad criticism and late-night mockery four years ago. Obama’s bow, reflecting the same dependence, deserves no less censure.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

Why people do – or don't do – the right thing

Socrates talked. The assumption behind his approach to philosophy, and the approach of millions of people since, is that moral thinking is mostly a matter of reason and deliberation: Think through moral problems. Find a just principle. Apply it.

One problem with this kind of approach to morality, as Michael Gazzaniga writes in his 2008 book, "Human," is that "it has been hard to find any correlation between moral reasoning and proactive moral behavior, such as helping other people. In fact, in most studies, none has been found."

Today, many psychologists, cognitive scientists and even philosophers embrace a different view of morality. In this view, moral thinking is more like aesthetics. As we look around the world, we are constantly evaluating what we see. Seeing and evaluating are not two separate processes. They are linked and basically simultaneous.

As Steven Quartz of the California Institute of Technology said during a recent discussion of ethics sponsored by the John Templeton Foundation, "Our brain is computing value at every fraction of a second. Everything that we look at, we form an implicit preference. Some of those make it into our awareness; some of them remain at the level of our unconscious, but ... what our brain is for, what our brain has evolved for, is to find what is of value in our environment."

Think of what happens when you put a new food into your mouth. You don't have to decide if it's disgusting. You just know. You don't have to decide if a landscape is beautiful. You just know.

Moral judgments are like that. They are rapid intuitive decisions and involve the emotion-processing parts of the brain. Most of us make snap moral judgments about what feels fair or not, or what feels good or not.

We start doing this when we are babies, before we have language. And even as adults, we often can't explain to ourselves why something feels wrong.

In other words, reasoning comes later and is often guided by the emotions that preceded it. Or as Jonathan Haidt of the University of Virginia memorably wrote, "The emotions are, in fact, in charge of the temple of morality, and ... moral reasoning is really just a servant masquerading as a high priest."

The question then becomes: What shapes moral emotions in the first place? The answer has long been evolution, but in recent years there's an increasing appreciation that evolution isn't just about competition. It's also about cooperation within groups. Like bees, humans have long lived or died based on their ability to divide labor, help each other and stand together in the face of common threats. Many of our moral emotions and intuitions reflect that history. We don't just care about our individual rights, or even the rights of other individuals. We also care about loyalty, respect, traditions, religions. We are all the descendants of successful cooperators.

The first nice thing about this evolutionary approach to morality is that it emphasizes the social nature of moral intuition. People are not discrete units coolly formulating moral arguments. They link themselves together into communities and networks of mutual influence.

The second nice thing is that it entails a warmer view of human nature. Evolution is always about competition, but for humans, as Darwin speculated, competition among groups has turned us into pretty cooperative, empathetic and altruistic creatures — at least within our families, groups and some-times nations.

The third nice thing is that it explains the haphazard way most of us lead our lives without destroying dignity and choice. Moral intuitions have primacy, Haidt argues, but they are not dictators. There are times, often the most important moments in our lives, when in fact we do use reason to override moral intuitions, and often those reasons — along with new intuitions — come from our friends.

The rise and now dominance of this emotional approach to morality is an epochal change. It challenges all sorts of traditions. It challenges the bookish way philosophy is conceived by most people. It challenges the Talmudic tradition, with its hyper-rational scrutiny of texts. It challenges the new atheists, who see themselves involved in a war of reason against faith and who have an unwarranted faith in the power of pure reason and in the purity of their own reasoning.

Finally, it should also challenge the very scientists who study morality. They're good at explaining how people make judgments about harm and fairness, but they still struggle to explain the feelings of awe, transcendence, patriotism, joy and self-sacrifice, which are not ancillary to most people's moral experiences, but central. The evolutionary approach also leads many scientists to neglect the concept of individual responsibility and makes it hard for them to appreciate that most people struggle toward goodness, not as a means, but as an end in itself.

Obama to focus on outreach at summit

By Peter Nicholas
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Stepping back onto the world stage, President Barack Obama this week will meet Western Hemisphere leaders at a summit where he hopes to salvage alliances strained by grievances that the Bush administration ignored Latin America in its overriding focus on Iraq and terrorism.

Obama is a popular figure in the region and can expect an enthusiastic welcome. But he also will confront deep resentments over U.S. policies that he is reluctant to change. Other leaders want the administration to normalize relations with Cuba and resurrect a ban on the kinds of assault weapons being smuggled into Mexico, commitments Obama is unwilling to make.

Still, Obama is bound to get a better reception than George W. Bush, the least popular American president ever among Latin American countries, polls showed.

Before this week's trip, U.S. diplomats said a main U.S. goal is a modest one: showing the other nations it wants to be a collegial partner.

In that sense, Obama is sticking to a template established at the recent Group of 20 summit in London. Heeding criticism that the U.S. tended to operate unilaterally under Bush, Obama is signaling that he wants to listen, as he did in Europe.

"We see this trip as part of the process of the United States re-engaging with this hemisphere," said Jeffrey Davidow, a former ambassador to Mexico and Venezuela who is advising the White House on the trip.

What happens when nations raise the drawbridge?

We are in a race between economic recovery and economic nationalism. At last week's G-20 summit, leading nations agreed to roughly $1 trillion of additional lending, mostly through the International Monetary Fund, to help end the worldwide slump. But beneath the veil of consensus, countries are maneuvering to protect their economies and blame someone else for the crisis. Will the world economic order overcome these stresses or give way to a global free-for-all, characterized by rampant protectionism, nationalistic subsidies and preferences?

Emblematic of the tension is a recent proposal by Zhou Xiaochuan, governor of the People's Bank of China (PBOC), to replace the dollar as the world's major international currency. In a paper, Zhou argued that today's crisis reflects "the inherent vulnerabilities and systemic risks" of the dollar-based global economy. The PBOC is China's Federal Reserve; Zhou is no obscure bureaucrat.

It may surprise Americans that, up to a point, his analysis is correct. The dollarized world economy developed huge instabilities — vast trade imbalances (American deficits, Asian surpluses) and massive, offsetting international money flows. But Zhou's omissions are equally revealing. To wit: China is heavily implicated in the dollar system's failings. By keeping its currency artificially depressed — as an aid to exports — China abetted the very imbalances that it now criticizes.

The Chinese denounce American profligacy after promoting it and profiting from it. Low prices of imported goods (shoes, computers, TVs) encouraged overconsumption. From 2000 to 2008, the U.S. trade deficit with China ballooned from $84 billion to $266 billion. China's foreign exchange reserves are now an astounding $2 trillion.

It's not just that exchange rates were (and are) misaligned. American economists have argued that a flood tide of Chinese money, earned from those bulging trade surpluses, depressed interest rates on U.S. Treasury securities and sent investors searching for higher yields elsewhere. That expanded the demand for riskier securities, including subprime mortgages, and pumped up the housing bubble. So China's policies contributed to the original financial crisis, though they were not the only cause.

For decades, dollars have lubricated global prosperity. They're used to price major commodities — oil, wheat, copper — and to conduct most trade. Countries such as Thailand and South Korea use dollars for more than 80 percent of their exports. The dollar also serves as the major currency for cross-border investments by governments and the private sector. Indeed, governments hold almost two-thirds of their $6.7 trillion in foreign exchange reserves in dollars.

But overreliance on the dollar can also backfire, as it now has. Not only have countries suffered declines in exports to a slumping U.S. economy. They've also lost dollar loans needed to finance trade with third countries. "When the crisis hit, U.S. banks cut back on dollar credit lines to foreign borrowers," says David Hu of the International Investment Group.

The extra loans endorsed at last week's summit aim to offset these losses.

Given the dollar's drawbacks, why not switch to something else, as Zhou suggests? The trouble, as even he concedes, is that there's no obvious replacement. The attraction of an international currency depends on its presumed stability, what it will buy and how easy it is to invest. The euro (27 percent of government reserves) and the yen (3 percent) don't yet rival the dollar. As for China, it hasn't made its own currency (the renminbi, or RMB) automatically convertible for Chinese investments.

We're stuck with the dollar standard for a while. To work, it requires that countries with huge trade surpluses reduce the export-led growth that fed the system's instabilities. The Chinese increasingly recognize this.

"They're very aware of the need to promote consumer spending," says economist Pieter Bottelier of Johns Hopkins University. In November, China announced a 4 trillion RMB ($586 billion) "stimulus." In addition, says Bottelier, the government is improving health and pension benefits to dampen households' need for high savings.

But China also has a default position: promote exports. It has increased export rebates; engaged in RMB currency "swaps" with trading partners (the latest: $10 billion with Argentina) to stimulate demand for Chinese goods; and stopped the RMB's slow appreciation. China seems comfortable advancing its economy at other countries' expense. Zhou's pronouncement provides a political rationale for predatory behavior: If we're innocent victims of U.S. economic mismanagement, then we're entitled to do whatever is necessary to insulate ourselves from the fallout. Down this path lies growing mistrust.

The world economy is suspended between the lofty rhetoric of last week's summit and the gritty realities of national politics. Protectionism is rising. A World Bank study found that 17 countries in the G-20 have recently adopted discriminatory policies. Though still modest, they "open the door for a lot of other opportunistic measures," says Gary Hufbauer of the Peterson Institute. And the deeper the recession, the greater the danger.

Newsweek columnist Robert Samuelson writes about economics.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Two-faced politicians deserve resounding 'no'

In response to Sunday's paper (April 4), Rep. Simpson's request for pork pet projects for Idaho:

Rep. Simpson wants 10 appropriations worth $8 million. Amazing, talk about the breed and self party falling over themselves.

Rep. Simpson, stand up and be a true obstructionist and just say no. You haven't voted yes on anything, like Sen. Crapo, Risch, except Republican amendments. Your stance, like Crapo, obstruct, vote no on all Democratic proposals, amendments, then come with nothing to the table but tax cuts — so old school. Tax cuts and no regulation and $10 trillion in federal debt — you're the party, all right.

Now you come with an $8 million pet project request, but the stimulus bill sucks, but can you cut me some, like $8 million worth? Federal budget numbers too high? Cut, start with your $8 million, as a Republican thing to do.

You should follow Rep. Minnick's lead, who voted no on the stimulus bill and has not offered any pork pet projects. Now is not the time! Duh!

Good guilt trip, you say, invite Idahoans to weigh in on pork projects you've selected, noting that you can either secure some of the available pork (federal funding) for Idaho or allow funding to go to another state. Now you want to be a team player.

The stimulus bill was beyond your wisdom, wouldn't want our children to suffer, but $8 million here and $8 million there is good pork spending. Now you wonder why the rest of America is so "spot on."

You are the reason for the season in Washington, D.C. I hope Washington gives our court jesters a good taste of obstructionism and votes down all amendments by our two-faced elected officials.

Again, thanks for your team play and Washington savvy. Ignorance has gone to seed in Idaho — nothing new here! Recall.

Why does newspaper only pick on Christians?

I saw your Easter, anti-Christian "political" cartoon in the paper today (April 11). Very appropriate timing.

But you missed your anti-Semitic Passover "political" cartoon that should have appeared on Wednesday (April 8). In fact, where was your anti-Muslim "political" cartoon during Ramadan? Or your anti-Buddhist or anti-Hindu cartoons during their high holidays? Why haven't you published those?

Oh, I know. That would be too offensive to the people of those particular faiths.

Really, though, isn't it just easier to ridicule Christians? After all they'll just "turn the other cheek."

U.S. tax defiers cite myriad reasons not to pay

By Del Quentin Wilber
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Washington D.C. police Detective Michael C. Irving was looking for a way to keep more money in his pocket when he settled on a little-known "program" that he claimed exempted him from income taxes.

During a three-year period, while earning more than $450,000, he did not pay a dime to the U.S. Treasury or Washington D.C. government. Irving had not stumbled upon an obscure tax loophole. Authorities say the respected homicide investigator was participating in an extreme form of tax cheating that they worry could be going mainstream.

As millions of Americans sweated out their tax returns due Wednesday, federal authorities said they are keeping a close eye on a relatively small group of residents who refuse to pay any income taxes.

Known as tax defiers, deniers or protesters, they cite myriad reasons for their stance that income tax is illegal. Some argue that the 16th Amendment, which allowed Congress to collect income taxes, was never ratified. Others believe paying taxes should be voluntary. A few argue that only Washington D.C. residents or federal employees are subject to the tax laws.

The U.S. government says the theories are bogus, and the IRS recently updated a 77-page book on its Web site rebutting dozens of such arguments.

The movement had its roots in the 1960s and 1970s with angry farmers upset about losing their land, extreme libertarians and members of militia groups and white supremacist organizations, authorities and experts say. The ideas were spread in seminars and, lately, on the Internet to a nationwide audience of people interested in avoiding taxes.

In a bad economy, law enforcement officials worry that the arguments are more enticing than ever.

"This is a significant problem," said Thomas Perrelli, the Justice Department's associate attorney general. "This isn't the situation where people make a small error on their taxes. These are basically people objecting to the entire notion of the tax system."

Authorities say defiers either refuse to submit tax returns or file them with bogus information about their earnings. Many defiers list their income as zero, authorities say.

The IRS labels such returns as "frivolous." It received more than 10,000 of them last year and more than 90,000 pieces of related correspondence. Both numbers have held steady over the years. Usually, tax filers correct their returns after receiving a stern letter from the IRS, officials say.

The Justice Department has stepped up enforcement against tax defiers, and the IRS has referred more cases for criminal prosecution: 132 cases in fiscal 2008, up from 74 the previous year and 80 in 2006. The Justice Department also has filed about 100 civil lawsuits since 2001 asking judges to block defiers from promoting or selling related tax-preparation products.

Last month, the department filed a civil suit to stop a South Carolina tax preparer and his company, Reclaim Services, from filing frivolous tax returns on behalf of customers. Two machine shop owners, who pelted the government with letters extolling tax defier arguments, were convicted last month of tax evasion. On Thursday, a Mississippi man was convicted of filing false returns; he had argued that he was a citizen of his state, not the United States, prosecutors say.

Last year, the highest-profile defier, actor Wesley Snipes, was sentenced to three years in prison for failing to file tax returns for three years. He did not pay taxes on about $40 million he earned over six years, prosecutors said. Snipes claimed that he did not have to pay taxes because he was a nonresident alien, that tax collectors abuse citizens and that he had paid his

— J.J. McNabb, an insurance analyst who has testified before Congress about tax defiers taxes through "bills of exchange" drawn on a secret government bank account. Snipes is free pending appeal of his conviction.

The variety of citizens caught up in the no-taxes argument surprises some experts.

"It's shocking, really, how fast this is growing," said J.J.

McNabb, an insurance analyst who has testified before Congress about tax defiers and is writing a book about the phenomenon. The economic crisis, she predicted, "is going to drive untold numbers of people into this movement."

Nathan Hochman, former head of the Justice Department's tax division, said in an e-mail that "there are people out there who are misguided tax zealots who, to the day they die, believe their bogus theories no matter how many times courts tell them they're wrong."

"But for the bulk of people, it's now about greed," he added. "They can't even explain the theories."

Wood River Valley to receive transit stimulus funds

Money will be used to upgrade Mountain Rides

The Mountain Rides bus system in Ketchum will receive almost $1.7 million in federal money to upgrade and expand its transportation services, according to the Idaho Transit Stimulus Funding Report.

The projects were approved by a nine-member regional committee comprised of government officials, as well as nonprofit and business representatives, who reviewed requests for stimulus money to help upgrade transportation services in south-central Idaho.

"This round of projects was approved based on whether or not they were shovel ready," said Jan Roeser, regional economist with Idaho Department of Labor and a member of the regional transit stimulus committee in south-central Idaho. "Basically they needed to be able to begin work within six months after approval."

Some projects were not approved because they did not meet the federal criteria.

The largest recipient of the money was Mountain Rides — a component of the City of Ketchum that provides bus service to the Wood River Valley.

About $1.5 million of the federal stimulus money that was approved will be used to buy 11 buses or vans and to replace 10 existing vehicles for the bus service. The remainder of the money will be used to build or upgrade bus

HOUSING MARKET INDEX SOARS

Curvin Horst, left, and John Martin place part of the frame as they build a new home for Landmark Homes in Hummelstown, Pa. The National Association of Home Builders said Wednesday its housing market index posted its biggest one-month jump in five years in April as many homebuyers seized on lower prices and incentives.

Incentives, lower prices lure home buyers

By Alex Veiga
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Homebuilders are feeling a lot more optimistic that the worst housing downturn in decades may be finally starting to turn around.

An index of builders' confidence released Wednesday posted its biggest one-month jump in five years in April as many homebuyers seized on lower prices and incentives and took advantage of lower interest rates and tax credits.

The National Association of Home Builders/Wells Fargo housing market index climbed five points to 14. While still near historically low levels, the latest index reading is the highest since October.

"This is a very encouraging sign that we are at or near the bottom of the current housing depression," said David Crowe, chief economist for the Washington-based trade association.

The report reflects a survey of 360 residential developers nationwide, tracking builders' perceptions of market conditions. Index readings lower than 50 indicate negative sentiment about the market.

The index hit an all-time low of 8 in January as mounting layoffs, strict mortgage requirements and the worsening U.S. economy sapped demand for new homes.

In response, many builders stepped up sales incentives, slashed prices and trumpeted an $8,000 tax credit for homebuyers enacted in February as part of the Obama administration's economic stimulus package. Mortgage rates, meanwhile, have hovered below 5 percent for weeks, offering an additional inducement for would-be homebuyers.

As a result, homebuilders have reported an uptick in traffic in recent weeks. KB Home, a Los Angeles-based homebuilder, reported last month that new home orders jumped by 26 percent in its fiscal first quarter.

Disaster prep doesn't have to be overwhelming

The harsh weather of spring, including hard rains, flooding and tornadoes, has already hit parts of the Midwest and the South. It's a reminder to small business owners everywhere that they need to be ready when disaster strikes.

Preparing for disaster might not seem like a priority to a company owner who's trying to bring in sales and cut costs during the recession. But the kind of planning that goes into mitigating the impact of a disaster can also help your company's operations when all is well.

Donna Childs, whose financial services firm was dislocated by the attacks on the World Trade Center in 2001, said disaster planning is often neglected since "most small business owners feel overwhelmed because they see disaster preparation as a huge task."

A disaster doesn't have to be an extraordinary event wrought by nature — fires and vandalism can disrupt a business as much as the weather can. And it doesn't have to damage or destroy your premises; a road that washes out and prevents you from getting to your building can do plenty of harm to your sales and profits.

The way to ease disaster prep anxiety and get the job done is to break it down into manageable components and tackle them one by one: protecting your data, creating a backup communications network, setting up an alternative power supply.

Childs, who has written

SMALL TALK
Joyce M. Rosenberg

"Prepare for the Worst, Plan for the Best," a guide to disaster planning for small business, noted that many of the problems that occur in a disaster are also ones that could happen in the best of times. For example, she said, "a power outage can happen on a standalone basis, but it commonly follows a major disaster like a hurricane."

So, if your company has backup generators to help it through summer brownouts, it can also keep running if a hurricane or tornado knocks out power.

Childs said she had done disaster planning for her company, Childs Capital LLC, before the 9/11 attacks. She was ready to relocate because she had thought about the possibility of a fire in the subway station near her office that conceivably could have prevented her from entering her premises.

"The plan I put in place addressed that but it helped us to get through something unimaginable," she said.

Similarly, every company should be thinking about backing up its data for the most mundane reasons: an employee accidentally deletes an important file or a hard drive crashes and the data cannot be salvaged. Having an offsite data back-

Consumer prices dip unexpectedly in March

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices dipped unexpectedly in March, leaving inflation over the past year falling at the fastest clip in more than a half-century. The recession is expected to keep a lid on inflation as widespread layoffs dampen wage pressures and weak demand keeps companies from raising prices.

The Labor Department said Wednesday that consumer prices edged down 0.1 percent last month as a drop in energy prices offset the biggest rise in tobacco prices in more than a decade. It was a better performance than the 0.1 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index that economists had expected.

Over the past 12 months, consumer prices have fallen 0.4 percent, the first 12-month decline since a similar drop for the year ending in August 1955.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve said Wednesday that production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities dropped a seasonally adjusted 1.5 percent in March, the fifth straight monthly decline. That matched February's drop and was worse than the 1 percent dip analysts expected.

Factories and mines are increasingly idle, as the total industrial capacity utilization rate fell to 69.3 percent from 70.3 percent, the lowest on records dating to 1967, the Fed said.

Core inflation, which excludes energy and food, rose 0.2 percent last month, matching the gains of the past three months. It was slightly higher than the 0.1 percent rise economists expected.

Over the past 12 months, core inflation has risen 1.8 percent. While some economists have expressed fears the recession could spawn a destabilizing period of falling prices, other analysts point to the rise in core inflation as evidence that deflation remains only a distant threat.

In fact, some economists worry that all of the moves the Federal Reserve has made to fight the recession and the worst financial crisis in 70 years could be sowing the seeds for inflation troubles down the road.

In a speech Tuesday, Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke repeated assurances that the central bank is always mindful of the threats of inflation and is prepared to remove the Idaho ranks as the second lowest state in the nation in terms of energy costs, according to a recent report by the Small Business Entrepreneur Council. Idaho Department of Commerce officials say the report supports claims by state and regional economic development groups that Idaho is competitive in attracting large manufacturers and food processors — businesses that require above-average load capacities to operate.

The report looked at both electrical, fossil fuel and renewable energy sources.

The costs of energy are impacted by a variety of factors, including economic growth, investment in exploration and development of resources, energy resources being utilized, political risks, and government mandates, regulations and taxes.

“The governmental factors certainly explain part of the difference in energy prices from state to state,” the report said. “For example, what taxes are in effect?

What mandates are imposed by either the federal government or by the states that either directly or indirectly affect energy prices?”

Although not specifically citing Idaho, the report said states with the lowest energy costs typically had less legislation that limited or placed

Report warns of growing right-wing extremist threat

By Greg Miller
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The economic downturn and the election of the nation's first black president are contributing to a resurgence of right-wing extremist groups, which had been on the wane since the Oklahoma City bombing in 1995, according to a U.S. intelligence assessment distributed to state and local authorities last week.

The report, produced by the Department of Homeland Security, has triggered a backlash among conservatives because it also raised the specter that disgruntled veterans returning from the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan might "boost the capabilities of extremists ... to carry out violence."

The assessment noted that officials have seen no evidence that such groups are planning fresh attacks inside the United States. But it is the first high-level, U.S. intelligence report to call attention to an array of recent domestic developments as potential harbingers of terrorist violence.

Among the other factors cited in the report are increased prospects for gun control and immigration legislation under President Barack Obama, as well as resentment over the rising economic influence of countries such as China, India and Russia. But the assessment focuses most of its attention on animosity toward Obama and anxiety fueled by the recession.

"The economic downturn and the election of the first African-American president present unique drivers for right-wing radicalization and recruitment," the report warns.

Overall, the document describes an economic and political climate that has "similarities to the 1990s when right-wing extremism experienced a resurgence fueled largely by an economic recession, criticism about the outsourcing of jobs, and the perceived threat to U.S. power and sovereignty by other foreign powers." The unclassified report was not released publicly but was distributed widely among U.S. law enforcement agencies before it surfaced online this week. It was produced by the intelligence and analysis branch of the Department of Homeland Security.

Though it covers an array of issues, the assessment has drawn fire from conservatives over a judgment that focuses on the violent potential of returning U.S. soldiers.

"The willingness of a small percentage of military personnel to join extremist groups during the 1990s because they were disgruntled, disillusioned, or suffering from the psychological effects of war is being replicated today," the report said.

Riot police try to block Shiite protesters in Kabul, Afghanistan on Wednesday. The Shiites attacked 300 women who were protesting against a new conservative marriage law.

Afghan women protest against new marriage law

By Heidi Vogt
Associated Press writer

KABUL — Dozens of young women braved crowds of bearded men screaming "dogs!" on Wednesday to protest an Afghan law that lets husbands demand sex from their wives. Some of the men picked up small stones and pelted the women.

"Slaves of the Christians!" chanted the 800 or so counter-demonstrators, a mix of men and women. A line of female police officers locked hands to keep the groups apart.

The warring protests highlight the explosive nature of the women's rights debate in Afghanistan. Both sides are girding for battle over the legislation, which has sparked an international uproar since being quietly signed into law last month.

The law says a husband can demand sex with his wife every four days, unless she is ill or would be harmed by intercourse. It also regulates when and for what reasons a wife may leave her home without a male escort.

Though the law would apply only to the country's Shiites, who make up less than 20 percent of Afghanistan's 30 million people, many fear its passage marks a return to Taliban-style oppression of women. The Taliban, who ruled Afghanistan from 1996-2001, required women to wear all-covering burqas and banned them from leaving home unless accompanied by a male relative.

Governments and rights groups around the world have condemned the legislation, and President Barack Obama has labeled it "abhorrent." Afghan President Hamid Karzai has remanded the law to the Justice Department for review and put enforcement on hold.

A host of Afghan intellectuals, politicians and even a number of Cabinet ministers have come out against the law. But those who decry the legislation face quick criticism from conservative Muslim clerics and their followers, as Wednesday's protests showed.

THE CARLET LETTER?

New Jersey tags new teen drivers with decal

By Beth Defalco
Associated Press writer

TRENTON, N.J. — Would you drive any differently if you knew there was a teenager behind the wheel of the car in front of you?

You might find out soon. A first-in-the-nation law in New Jersey will require new drivers ages 21 and younger to display identifying decals on their vehicles.

Gov. Jon Corzine signed the law Wednesday; it takes effect next year.

The decals will probably be a small reflective rectangle attached to the front and rear license plates to help police enforce restrictions on probationary drivers, motor vehicle officials said.

Police will use them to determine whether teens are violating the state driving curfew and passenger restrictions, said Pam Fischer, director of the New Jersey Division of Highway Safety.

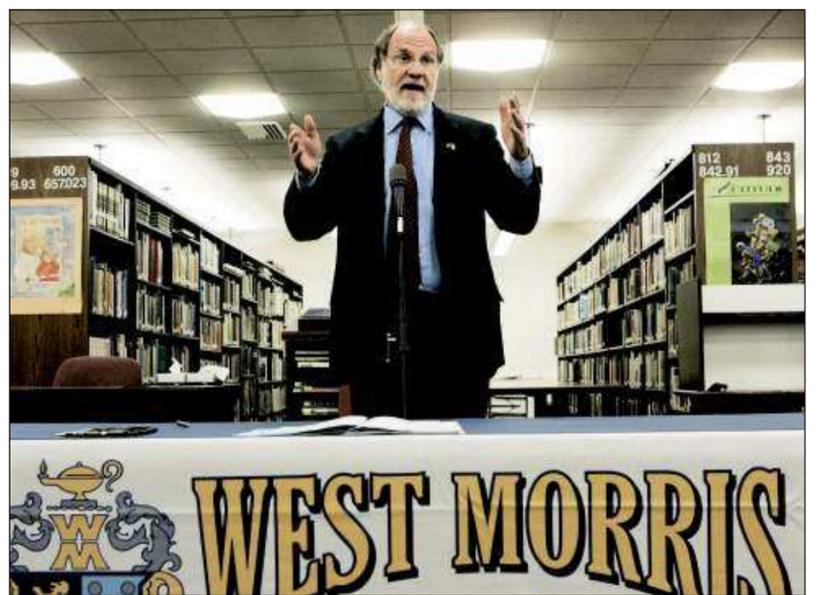

Authorities will not use the decals to target young drivers or pull them over for no reason, she said.

The decals are long overdue and will save lives, said Ron Gesualdo, owner of Gene's Driving School in Matawan.

"The parents are for it," he said. "The kids don't say anything, but you know what they're thinking."

One of those kids thinks the decals will only mean more trouble for teenagers.

"That's going to mean police are going to be bothering us even more," said Tebvon Meneil, 18, of Paterson. "They see that sticker on the car, they're just going to be pulling us over for no reason. Are there drugs in the car? That's the first thing they're going to think, because we're teenagers?"

New Jersey Gov. Jon S. Corzine speaks in the library of West Morris Central High School Wednesday in Chester, N.J., before signing a bill known as Kyleigh's Law. Named in honor of 16-year-old Kyleigh D'Alessio, the first-in-the-nation law will require new drivers to display identifying decals on their vehicles.

And not everyone thinks the new law will improve driver safety. Jennifer Collins, a 29-year-old Hamilton resident, wondered whether the stickers will distract other drivers who are looking for them in traffic.

"That really doesn't make any sense to me, honestly," she said.

Officials are considering using Velcro to attach the decals, so they can be removed by other drivers using the same car.

"It will probably be nondescript and simple, and the public at large is probably not even going to notice it," Fischer said.

The decals were among a slew of new driving restrictions Corzine signed for young adults with probationary licenses, which allow them drive unsupervised under certain conditions.

Other restrictions include changing the driving curfew to 11 p.m. from midnight; allowing only one other teenager in the car; and banning the use of cell phones, even hand-free ones.

"These restrictions are in place because they represent the things we know put teens at risk," Fischer said.

New Jersey is the first state to require the decal, although Delaware and Connecticut have toyed with the idea, said David Weinstein, spokesman for AAA Mid-Atlantic.

The Delaware Department of Transportation is considering offering residents a reflective orange magnet that says, in black, capital letters: "NOVICE DRIVER." The magnets would be voluntary, said Dawn Hopkins, department spokeswoman.

According to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, 61 percent of teenage passenger deaths in 2007 occurred in vehicles driven by another teenager. Twenty percent of all passenger deaths occurred when a teenager was driving.

New Jersey's decal law was spurred by the driving death of a 16-year-old honor student in Morris County, Kyleigh D'Alessio, who was killed in 2006 riding in a car driven by a teenager with a probationary license.

"No issue is more important than protecting our children, so these efforts are essential to that," Corzine said. "We don't want to lose the beauty and the gifts that a Kyleigh could bring to all of us, and we need to take every step possible to make it something that doesn't occur in the future."

Executions are top cause of death in Iraq

By Kim Gamel
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — Execution-style killings, not headline-grabbing bombings, have been the leading cause of death among civilians in the Iraq war, a study released Wednesday shows.

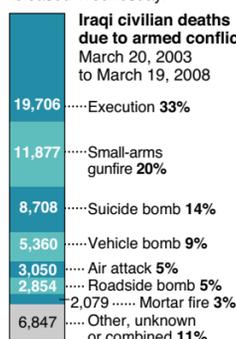

The findings, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, point to the brutal sectarian nature of the conflict, where death squads once roamed the streets hunting down members of the rival Muslim sect.

Estimates of the number of civilians killed in Iraq vary widely. The study was based on the database maintained by Iraq Body Count, a private group that among other sources uses media reports including those of The Associated Press.

The authors concede the data is not comprehensive but maintain that the study provides a reliable gauge of how Iraqis have died in the

to do with trying to get people to move out of their houses," said Michael Spagat, one of the study's authors. "It had to strike fear into people's hearts. A lot of it is just hatred and retribution."

The study covered the period from the March 20, 2003 invasion through March 19, 2008, in which 91,358 violent deaths were recorded by Iraq Body Count.

The total number of civilian deaths in Iraq is widely disputed, but the count by the London-based group is widely considered a credible minimum.

Apart from media reports, Iraq Body Count uses figures from morgues and hospitals since the war started.

However, the authors focused on only 60,481 deaths linked to specific events, excluding Iraqis killed in prolonged episodes of violence during the U.S.-led invasion and the U.S. sieges of the former insurgent stronghold of Fallujah in 2004.

The study found that 19,706 of the victims, or 33 percent, were abducted and killed execution-style, with nearly a third of those showing signs of torture such as bruises, drill holes or burns.

That compared with 16,922, or 27 percent, who died in bombings, most of them in suicide attacks.

The figures were similar to those recorded by the AP. While the study didn't assign blame for the killings, death squads largely run by Shiite militias were believed to be behind many of the bullet-riddled bodies that turned up by the dozens on the streets of Baghdad and other cities — often stripped of any identification.

Those death squads were seeking revenge for the deaths of Shiite civilians at the hands of al-Qaida and other Sunni religious extremists in suicide bombings and other attacks.

Obamas made $2.7 million in '08

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama and his wife, Michelle, millionaires from his best-selling books, made $2.7 million last year and paid just under one-third of their adjusted income in federal taxes.

While the income, mostly his, was far more than the U.S. median household income of about $50,000, it was quite a decrease from the $4.2 million the Obamas made in 2007.

Both years, nearly all of the earnings came from Obama's best-selling books. "Dreams from My Father" and "The Audacity of Hope" — brought in about $2.5 million in royalties last year, according to copies of the returns released by the White House on Wednesday, the federal filing deadline.

Obama earned $139,204 as a Democratic senator from Illinois last year before leaving his seat after winning the November election. Michelle Obama received a salary of $62,709 from the University of Chicago Hospitals, where she was an executive.

The couple's total federal tax came to $855,323. That was 32 percent of their adjusted gross income of $2,656,902.

The Obamas overpaid by $26,014, and elected to apply that amount to their 2009 taxes.

The couple's federal tax deductions included about $50,000 in home mortgage interest. Their expenses also included $47,488 to send their two daughters to the University of Chicago's elementary school.

They reported contributing $172,050 to charity last year, including $25,000 each to the CARE international relief agency and the United Negro College Fund.

GREGG MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY
 "To be a great champion you must believe you are the best. If you're not, pretend you are."
 Muhammad Ali, World Champion Boxer

Former prosecutor picked for new U.S. 'border czar'

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The job title — "border czar" — is familiar to Alan Bersin, who more than a decade ago led an effort to fight drug and human smuggling that had mixed results at best. Bersin was tapped Wednesday to oversee America's efforts to keep drugs and illegal immigrants from flowing in from Mexico. As a federal prosecutor in the Clinton administration, he headed up a border crackdown that discouraged illegal crossings in the San Diego area but drove migrants to attempt more dangerous treks through the desert. He acknowledged the difficulties of his assignment as he stood on a Rio Grande bridge linking El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, a city especially plagued by the drug violence that has killed more than 10,650 people in that country since December 2006. "I understand as a father and a former prosecutor that we need to actually deal with the problems" like the vast consumer market for drugs in the U.S. and the ease with which cash and weapons are smuggled south, Bersin said. Bersin, now the assistant Homeland Security secretary for international affairs, held a similar title from 1995 to 1998 — Justice Department special representative for the Southwest border. As he will in his new job, he worked with agencies on both sides of the border to help coordinate the U.S. government's efforts to curb the flow of drugs and illegal immigrants from Mexico. Bersin brings a deep understanding of the border, like his boss, Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano, a former Arizona governor. He rides horses on his ranch along the San Diego border, near the shanties of Tijuana, Mexico, in an area that was overrun with illegal immigrants until the mid-1990s. Bersin's legacy from that job was a U.S. government border crackdown in San Diego, called Operation Gatekeeper, launched in 1994 and modeled on a similar effort in El Paso. Heightened enforcement in those cities didn't actually change the number of immigrants coming in, but pushed them to remote mountains and deserts, mainly in Arizona, where thousands have died of exposure and thirst crossing the border. Even advocates of tough border enforcement say that strategy failed. "It demonstrated you can control the border, but the bad news is you can't just do it 14 miles here or there," said Peter Nunez, who preceded Bersin as the top federal prosecutor in San Diego and now teaches immigration policy at University of San Diego. "It's a long border, 2,000 miles long." Napolitano, introducing Bersin in El Paso before continuing a tour of the border in New Mexico, agreed that for every success in one spot, the trouble would move to another. As U.S. attorney in San Diego from 1993 to 1998, Bersin, 62, was known as an effective prosecutor with a knack for getting his bosses in Washington to devote money and attention to the border. Critics said the Brooklyn native's style was heavy-handed and uncompromising — a reputation that stuck when he was superintendent of San Diego public schools from 1998 to 2005. The school board bought out his contract a year early after repeated clashes with the teachers union and some board members. Despite his inexperience at running public schools, standardized test scores rose under his watch and supporters welcomed his focus on improving math and literacy skills.

Mexican police seize cartel weapons cache, anti-aircraft machine gun

By E. Eduardo Castillo
 Associated Press writer

MEXICO CITY — Mexican authorities arrested a woman guarding an arsenal that included the first anti-aircraft machine gun seized in Mexico, police said Tuesday, as the army announced the capture of an alleged top drug cartel lieutenant.

The arsenal belonged to a group linked to the powerful Beltran-Leyva drug cartel, federal police coordinator Gen. Rodolfo Cruz said. It also included ammunition, five rifles, a grenade and part of a grenade launcher.

Mexican drug cartels, battling a fierce crackdown by soldiers and federal police, have increasingly gotten hold of higher-powered weapons, even military-grade arms such as grenades and machine guns. That has left police — particularly state and municipal forces — grossly outgunned, and many officers have quit following attacks. Cruz said the confiscated .50-caliber, anti-aircraft machine gun can fire 800 rounds per minute and is capable of penetrating armor from more than 5,000 feet. Police on a routine patrol Monday found the gun fitted atop an SUV at a house in northern Sonora state. Authorities did not release any other details about the gun, including its make, where it was manufactured or where it was sold. The arrested suspect, Anahi Beltran Cabrera, apparently is not related to the Beltran-Leyva clan, Cruz said. The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives has traced many guns seized at scenes of drug violence in Mexico to U.S. commercial sources. But determining the source of military-grade weapons such as grenades and fully automatic machine guns is more complicated. The ATF says the grenades are mostly smuggled in through Central America, and have been traced back to the militaries of many countries, from South Korea to Spain and Israel. Some may be leftovers from the Central American civil wars. Assaults have fired on government aircraft performing anti-drug missions in Mexico in the past, but apparently never with the caliber of weapon found Monday. In 2006, a helicopter on a federal drug-eradication mission crashed while trying to escape ground fire, and a second helicopter was damaged by gunfire in the Pacific coast state of Guerrero. Mexico is upgrading its northern and southern border checkpoints in an effort to detect and seize more guns and other contraband, installing equipment that will weigh and photograph each car and truck coming into the country. President Barack Obama has promised to do more to stop gun trafficking from the United States to Mexico. He has pledged to dispatch nearly 500 more federal agents to the border, along with X-ray machines and drug-sniffing dogs. Also Tuesday, the Mexican army announced the capture of Ruben Granados Vargas, an alleged lieutenant for the Beltran-Leyva drug cartel in the Pacific coast state of Guerrero. Gen. Luis Arturo Oliver said soldiers caught Granados Vargas and two other suspects with four rifles and 2.6 pounds of opium on Monday.

Anahi Beltran Cabrera, center, who was arrested guarding an arsenal, is presented to the media Tuesday at a police base in Mexico City. Police on a routine patrol detained the 20-year-old woman guarding the arsenal, which allegedly belonged to a group linked to the powerful Beltran Leyva drug cartel, at a house in northern Sonora state.

Most-wanted Colombia drug lord caught 'like a dog'

By Caesar Garcia
 Associated Press writer

BOGOTA — Colombia's most wanted drug lord was cowering like a dog under a palm tree when he was captured Wednesday in a jungle raid involving hundreds of police officers, the defense minister said. Daniel Rendon Herrera, a far-right warlord known as "Don Mario," was taken in shackles to the capital to await possible extradition to the United States. Operating in a banana-growing region bordering Panama, he commanded a private army of hundreds and shipped some 100 tons of cocaine to the United States, authorities said. President Alvaro Uribe described Rendon, 43, as "one of the most feared drug traffickers in the world." National police director Gen. Oscar Naranjo said his organization is believed to have committed 3,000 murders in the last 18 months. The bulk of those killings occurred in turf battles with other drug lords, police said, including former lieutenants of 14 paramilitary leaders Colombia extradited to the United States last year to stand trial on drug trafficking charges. As has always occurred in Colombia's drug underworld, Rendon ascended in power as other kingpins were captured or extradited. Naranjo said that when a police dragnet tightened on Rendon earlier this year, he offered his assassins $1,000 for each police officer they killed, in hopes of evading arrest. Colombian officials had offered a reward of up to $2 million for information leading to the capture of the man whose organization, controlling key smuggling routes to Central America, is believed to have been working closely with Mexican traffickers. "This guy put bounties on the heads of government officials, so he was Public Enemy No. 1 in Colombia," said Thomas Harrigan, operations chief for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration. The U.S. wants to put him on trial in New York on charges of conspiring to distribute cocaine in the United States, outlined in a barebones, four-page federal indictment filed last July and unsealed Wednesday. Such extraditions can take months. Some 300 police officers joined the raid in the northern Colombian jungle town of San Jose de Apartado. Uribe said nine months of patient planning and intelligence work went into the operation, which he called the latest proof of Colombia's skill in combating organized crime. At the time of his capture, Rendon had been cowering "like a dog" under a palm tree for two days, Defense Minister Juan Manuel Santos said with evident satisfaction.

Outlook good for Magic Valley fishing

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

So far, so good. Fishing is decent in the Magic Valley and will remain so as long as Mother Nature cooperates. Moisture and cooler spring temperatures have done much to provide the positive outlook, according to Doug Megargle, regional fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "There's a better chance of having better reservoir fishing" because of the weather, Megargle said. Inclement weather has provided for deeper snowpack, and the cooler temperatures make for slower melting. Snowpack helps recharge the water table, which in turn feeds the streams and reservoirs. "Longer-flowing streams mean higher discharge to reservoirs," he said. "They're not drawn down, but stay full longer." Weather the last three weeks alone has helped to bring snowpack levels to 100 percent or more, he said. Anglers should hope that Mother Nature doesn't pull a fast one, causing a spike in temperatures. Gradual temperature increases are best, not the jumping to extremes.

LuxuryLite offers a unique sleeping solution

When talking about bedding in the great outdoors, the words "ultra-light" and "cot" rarely come in the same sentence. But that's exactly what LuxuryLite, a small company in Lake Jackson, Texas, proposes with its UltraLite Cot, a 72-inch bed that weighs less than three pounds.

THE GEAR JUNKIE
Stephen Regenold

Made as an alternative to a sleeping pad, the cot can keep a camper "floating above rocks, sticks, roots, water and snow," according to the company (www.luxurylite.com). The product works by stretching a sheet of three-layer laminated rip-stop fabric taut over four struts.

Unroll a sleeping bag, lie down, and the fabric cradles your frame with just a bit of flex.

Like many products from LuxuryLite, the UltraLite Cot is strange and unconventional. It is a bit of a puzzle to put together, as it comes bundled with more than a dozen small poles, eight nylon feet, and the fabric sheeting in a roll.

My first attempt at setup was a 10-minute ordeal. The main bed is easy to make — just insert the long poles in their sleeves to create the frame. But building the struts was more of a mystery. You start by linking the gold and black anodized aluminum poles — 16 of them in total — and then sliding the mated poles into the cot's round feet.

The trick to LuxuryLite's design is then in the twisting of the struts, which adds tension and flex. Flip the bed over, put your foot on the edge to steady, and snap the struts in place. The result is a solid platform that holds a supine frame hovering most of the time just an inch or so off the ground.

In my test, the cot was comfortable enough. I would not say "cushy," but sleeping on the rip-stop nylon — which won't stretch, sag, or rot, according to the company — was akin to a nice pad.

A pair of Canada Geese rest March 26 on the shores at the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area. The preserve, located on State Fish Hatchery Road off Highway 30, is a popular place for anglers, as both trout and sturgeon can be caught here. Keep an eye out, though, as anglers are not the only ones who fish the small body of water. Pelicans are often seen roaming the waterfront and its small tributaries, searching for their next meal. A variety of plants and flowers can be found around the lake, especially as the weather warms, as well as different types of birds, butterflies, otters and other wildlife.

Idaho marina owner sues builder over damaged fish beds

BAYVIEW (AP) — A northern Idaho marina owner who was fined for illegally building a dock that destroyed critical kokanee spawning ground in Lake Pend Oreille is suing his former contractor.

Bob Holland, owner of the Harborview Marina in Bayview, filed the lawsuit against Kramer Crane and Contracting, of Sandpoint, in 1st District Court, contending that the company's negligence led to the habitat destruction. He is asking for more than $1.3 million in damages, The Spokesman-Review reported.

Charlie Kramer, the owner of Kramer Crane, disputed Holland's allegations, but declined to offer any detailed comment.

"We were pretty much under their direction and working for them," he said Tuesday.

After the construction in 2007, state fisheries biologists estimated more than 290,000 eggs and young kokanee were destroyed at the Harborview site — more than 15 percent of the wild kokanee reproduction in the lake in 2006. The fish, a key-stone species in the lake, are important for the survival of many species, including bull trout. A 2003 Idaho Fish and Game study found the lake's fishery is worth an estimated $17 million annually.

Holland had hired Kramer Crane and Contracting to demolish an old dock and boathouses, and to drive pilings for a new dock and seawall. According to his lawsuit, the company parked a barge on the spawning bed, crushing eggs and young fry emerging from the gravel. The lawsuit also said that Kramer Crane failed to heed warnings from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers that the barge propeller would stir up the lake's sediment, smothering the eggs.

The dock work was done without permits from the Idaho Department of Lands. Holland contends that Kramer Crane should have verified that a permit had been issued.

Besides paying a $2,500 fine — the largest allowed under state law — Holland's company Waterford Park Homes hired underwater divers to vacuum dirt and sand from 16,000 square feet of spawning grounds. The restoration cost more than $400,000, Holland claims in the lawsuit, and he lost nearly $900,000 in income for three seasons without boat slip rentals.

Holland later obtained permits from the Department of Lands and the Corps of Engineers and the dock construction has been partly completed.

Idaho Fish and Game Regional Director Chip Corsi said the restoration efforts appear to be working.

"It was encouraging to see a good number of fish return to that site this year," Corsi said.

The gravel beds near Bayview are one of Lake Pend Oreille's last strongholds of kokanee spawning along the shoreline, Corsi said.

OUTDOORS BRIEFS

Annual F&G fur auction scheduled

The Idaho Fish and Game annual Hide and Fur Auction, set for 9 a.m. April 25, will be held at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Magic Valley regional office, 324 S. 417 E. in Jerome. A preview of the items will open at 8 a.m.

The auction includes hides, furs, antlers and horns. No folves this year.

A taxidermist-furbuyer license is required in advance to bid on bear and mountain lion parts. Resident licenses are $40 for one year, $140.75 for non-resident licenses. They can be purchased at any Fish and Game office. Buyers for personal use are not required to have a taxidermist-furbuyer license. Only checks and cash will be accepted as payment for the winning bids.

For more information or a list of auction items: 208-324-4359.

Trophy species applications due

The deadline for moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat controlled hunt applications is fast approaching.

Hunters have until April 30 to apply for these hunts. Apply at Fish and Game offices or license vendors, 1-800-554-8685 or <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/>.

Each applicant must possess a valid 2009 Idaho hunting or combination license to apply for a controlled hunt. License fees will not be refunded.

Mailed applications must be postmarked no later than April 30.

Hunters who apply for moose, goat and sheep may not apply for other controlled hunts in the same year except for unlimited controlled hunts, extra deer, elk or pronghorn hunts, controlled bear hunts or depredation hunts. Those who draw a moose, goat or sheep permit may not apply to hunt the same species for two years, even if they don't kill an animal.

For regulations and more information: 208-324-4350

CSI schedules Sports and Leisure Show

The International Business Club at the College of Southern Idaho will hold its second annual Sports and Leisure Show on May 1-3 at the College of Southern Idaho's Eldon Evans Expo Center. The show will open 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Participants include Idaho Water Sports, Idaho Walleye Unlimited, Idaho Bass Fishing Club, Dry Creek Outfitters, Xtreme Motor Sports and RV, Jorgensen Fabric Products, McClain's Avid Sportsman, Riverside Motel and Guide Service, the CSI Aquaculture Program, J&M Enterprises, Serenity's Treasures, Hells Canyon Adventures, Sportsman's Warehouse, Coca-Cola, the CSI Physical Education Department, Idaho Fish and Game, the Bureau of Land Management, Danny Cope Knives, Nazz Cart, Falls Brand, El Sombbrero Restaurant, Middlekauff Auto Group, 1,000 Springs Tours, Basics Waterlands Service, Advantage Archery, and Idaho Guide Service.

In addition, a 6,500-gallon tank stocked with fish will be available each day. Go-carts, bounce house, a fishing seminar, free hot dogs and drinks, and more.

Admission is $2 for those 12 years and older. Those younger than 12 are admitted free.

Super Hunt tickets available

Entries in the first Super Hunt and Super Hunt Combo drawings must be received at Fish and Game headquarters by May 31. The drawing is set for June 15.

Super Hunt winners can participate in any open hunt in the state — deer, elk, pronghorn or moose — including general hunts and controlled hunts.

The drawing is for eight elk, deer, antelope and one moose hunt; one "Super Hunt Combo" ticket is for one each elk, deer, antelope and moose hunt. A second drawing will be held in mid-August with tickets for two elk, two deer, and two antelope hunts and one moose hunt. Entry period for the second drawing is June 2-Aug. 11.

Hunters can take an animal or animals on their Super Hunt or Super Hunt Combo tags in addition to any general season or controlled hunt tags they also hold. All other rules of individual hunts apply.

Cost is $6 for one ticket; $4 for additional tickets. Super Hunt Combo tickets are $20 for one; $16 for additional tickets. Available at license vendors, all Fish and Game offices, or at <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/cms/hunt/superhunt/>. Or call 800-824-3729 or 800-554-8685.

N. Idaho city evicts geese from local beach

SANDPOINT — City officials in Sandpoint have teamed up with an animal hospital to lure a gaggle of belligerent geese away from a local public beach.

Dr. Robert Pierce of North Idaho Animal Hospital says all but two of the nearly 50 domesticated geese have been removed from City Beach and adopted by local farms.

The Sandpoint City Council has long fielded beach user complaints over the geese, which have proven aggressive and leave behind droppings that besides being messy, can carry salmonella and E. coli bacteria.

The city has explored options short of killing the geese to keep them out of the City Beach area, contemplating the use of explosive devices to scare the birds and encouraging community members to adopt them.

Montana man lands state record tiger muskie

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A Harlowton man has caught a state record tiger muskie at Deadmans Basin Reservoir north of Ryegate.

The fish caught by Steven Salazar last Friday weighed 32.4 pounds, breaking the old record by just over 3.5 pounds. Salazar's fish was 49.1 inches long and had a girth of 22.75 inches.

The fish's weight was confirmed on a certified digital scale at a hardware store in Harlowton.

The previous record fish, caught by Marty Storfia of Billings at Deadmans Basin in July 2006, weighed 28.87 pounds, was 46 inches long and had a 21.5-inch girth.

Salazar, 19, said he had been fishing from the east shore of the lake for several hours Friday before the big fish bit.

He fought the fish for 45 minutes, bringing the muskie close to shore four or five times, but each time the fish ran back into deep water. Another fisherman tried to help with a big net, but the muskie would not fit.

Salazar said he has been fishing at Deadmans Basin Reservoir for years. He said he and his father usually troll from a boat, but have had no success in landing a big fish.

Tiger muskies are a hybrid cross between northern pike and muskellunge, neither of which are native to Montana. Tiger muskies were brought to Deadmans Basin from Wisconsin starting in 1998 to prey on white suckers, which were competing for food with more desirable trout and kokanee salmon, according to Ken Frazer, regional fisheries manager for the Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks.

Because tiger muskies are a sterile hybrid, they will not reproduce and overrun the other species of game fish.

Chinook season opens April 25 on some rivers

Times-News

More than 105,000 Chinook are expected to return to Idaho this spring. And come April 25, anglers may try their luck at catching the salmon.

Already about 1,000 of the fish have crossed the Bonneville Dam, according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Though there's not much of a Chinook population in the Magic Valley, according to Regional Fisheries Manager Doug Megargle, fisherman can cast their lines at Clearwater, Salmon, Little Salmon and parts of the Snake rivers.

According to Fish and Game, an estimated 13,341 fish will be available for non-tribal anglers in the Clearwater River, 9,700 in the Lower and Little Salmon rivers, and about 1,365 in the Snake River.

The season opens May 23 on the Lochsa River, and June 20 on the Salmon River from Shorts' Creek upstream about 25 miles to the boat ramp at Vinegar Creek.

A daily limit of four Chinook salmon has been set. No more than two may be 24 inches long. Anglers must stop fishing for salmon — including catch-and-release — when four salmon or two adult salmon of 24 inches or more have been caught, whichever comes first.

Anglers may keep 12 fish; not more than six may be 24 inches or more. The statewide limit is 40 adult Chinook during 2009.

Only Chinook with a clipped adipose fin — the small fin between the dorsal fin and tail — as evidenced by a healed scar, may be kept.

Only barbless hooks no more than five-eighths of inch from point to shank can be used.

For more information, including additional rules and regulations: 208-334-3746.

The enduring gun model of 1911

If the hallmark of a classic firearm is its ability to serve and inspire generations of shooters, then the Model of 1911 .45 Automatic Pistol has truly earned a place in that honored assembly.

SHOOTING THE BULL
Rich Simpson

Designed by John Moses Browning while employed by Colt, the M1911 served as the standard-issue U.S. military sidearm from 1911 to 1985. U.S. and Allied soldiers holstered these sturdy handguns during World War I, World War II, the Korean and Vietnam Wars.

Though officially replaced by the Beretta M9 (9mm Parabellum) due to political pressure for the U.S. to adopt a NATO-standard pistol, select Army Special Forces Groups and Marine Expeditionary Units continued to issue and carry updated 1911s during the Desert Storm, Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom campaigns.

Deferring to the somewhat anemic 9mm Beretta, one Desert Storm veteran told me, "That big .45 caliber hole in the muzzle is awful comforting when you're going into Harm's Way."

State-side the 1911 design has found favor with large numbers of police SWAT and Hostage Rescue units, as well as regular metropolitan police forces. But it is with the general public that the 1911 has found its greatest support base. Every year tens of thousands of 1911s are purchased by ordinary citizens for use as a personal defense, recreational or competitive pistol.

To cater to this swell in consumer demand, lots of small custom manufacturers have hung up their shingle and are giving the industry giants — like Colt, Sig Sauer, and Smith & Wesson — a run-for-the-money. The most noteworthy of these are: Kimber, Wilson Combat, Springfield Armory, Para-Ordinance, Ed Brown, STI, Taurus, and Nighthawk.

So what is it about the 1911's design that appeals to so many new and experienced shooters? First is the elegant simplicity and efficiency of its locked breech short-recoil operating system. This John Browning innovation utilizes the recoil force of the fired cartridge and a return spring to completely cycle the action. Requiring only a relatively small number of stout and easily replaced components, the handgun is tank-tough, extremely reliable, and accurate — perfect for a fighting or personal defense weapon. In fact, during military trials of the M1911 back in 1917, the Army ran 40,000 rounds through several pistols without breakage or malfunction. Now that's a gun you can stake your life and your family's security on!

In the opinion of many people more knowledgeable than myself, few pistols possess the balance and pointability of the 1911. Its slender frame, 7-8 round capacity, single action trigger, ergonomic grip, and easily accessed fire controls make it a highly shootable piece. And with today's improved steels and synthetic materials, refined sights, match barrels and triggers, the pistol just keeps getting better.

In addition to the 'man-stopping' .45 ACP cartridge, 1911 models can be had in .38 Super, 9mm Parabellum, .40 S&W, 10mm Auto, and .50 GI — with more to follow. My favorite iteration is Kimber's .22 LR conversion kit. For less than $200 you can drop the replacement barrel and slide onto your 1911 frame and practice to your heart's content with inexpensive .22 rimfire ammo.

So if you're in the market for a new self-defense, home security or recreational handgun, drop into your local gun shop and wrap your hands around a 1911. Be forewarned, however: if you do you'll probably be filling out the Federal paperwork before you walk out of the store.

Good shooting!

5 sentenced in Mont. antelope poaching case

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — Four Minnesota men and a Stanford man paid $8,540 in fines, restitution and court costs for killing antelope illegally over three years.

Each man also forfeited his privileges to hunt and trap in Montana for two years.

The men were originally charged with poaching 17 antelope. They pleaded guilty to killing seven animals illegally.

"This is an important case because this was premeditated, organized and an abuse of our natural resources," Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks investigator Tom Flowers said Monday.

From 2005 to 2007, the group would receive antelope licenses good in one district, then hunt illegally in another, Flowers said.

An investigation led to the Stanford area where Game Warden Bob Hammer and Judith Basin County prosecutors were able to secure guilty pleas from all five.

Michael L. Bossen, 38, of Stanford; Adrian Marsden Jr., 62, Bayport, Minn.; and Thomas M. Sanders, 51, of St. Paul, Minn., pleaded guilty to taking an antelope in the wrong district and unlawful possession of an antelope.

Edward J. Dobbs, 44, of St. Paul, pleaded guilty to taking an antelope in the wrong district by accountability and unlawful possession of an antelope by accountability.

John E. Lockner, 44, Woodbury, Minn., pleaded guilty to taking an antelope in the wrong district, two counts of unlawful possession of an antelope, two counts of taking an antelope in the wrong district by accountability and unlawful possession of an antelope by accountability.

The accountability charges are from Dobbs and Lockner taking responsibility for their teenage sons' actions.

"The nonresidents would typically apply for and receive the majority of their antelope permits in FWP's Region 5 (south-central Montana) where their chance of a successful drawing was high," Flowers said. "Then they hunted in Region 4 (north-central Montana) with the benefit and knowledge of a local resident."

The illegal activity was discovered when the Minnesota men were stopped at the Canada-North Dakota border while returning from a waterfowl hunting trip. A search of the vehicle revealed a camera with pictures of harvested antelope that didn't appear to be properly tagged. When questioned the men said the antelope were killed in Montana.

37 griz killings spark worries around Yellowstone

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — A significant rise in the number of grizzly bear deaths last year will be a principal topic as bear managers from around the Greater Yellowstone ecosystem gather today in Bozeman.

The Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team reported 48 known and probable grizzly deaths, 37 of which could be attributed to human causes. Twenty of those human-caused deaths, or 54 percent, were due to hunter conflicts.

The number is up slightly from an ecosystem count last fall, when wildlife managers reported 44 deaths.

The numbers exceeded both male and female mortality management limits.

If female deaths exceed the 15 percent threshold for one more year, wildlife managers could decide to return the grizzly to federal Endangered Species Act protection.

Grizzly bears in the Yellowstone ecosystem were delisted two years ago.

Louisa Willcox, senior wildlife advocate for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said the number of bear deaths last year rivals the days when Yellowstone National Park closed its dumps and large numbers of human-habituated and food-conditioned bears got into conflicts in and around the park.

"What happened last year is on a scale of what happened after the dumps closed," she told the Jackson Hole (Wyo.) News & Guide.

Wildlife managers take the mortality spike seriously but that one year is not cause for panic, said Chris Servheen, grizzly bear recovery coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"Indeed, we had a spike last year," he said. "We had a high number of mortalities. We don't like that. But we also know that the population continued to increase.

Servheen said that one year alone is not going to change the population trajectory, but there would be concern if the female mortality threshold is exceeded for two consecutive years.

Wildlife managers from Montana, Wyoming and Idaho have developed recommendations to address the different types of grizzly deaths that occurred in 2008. A similar effort was launched after a similar spike in deaths in 2004.

Servheen said the majority of the new recommendations will address the hunter-related deaths.

Diverse groups praise Owyhee compromises

BOISE (AP) — For the ranchers, environmentalists, tribal leaders and private property advocates who got together to protect the Owyhee Canyonlands, the biggest hurdle was the first — agreeing to even meet in the same room.

But eight years ago, with help from Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, leaders from these diverse groups agreed to set aside differences to protect a desert landscape each held dear.

“The hard work was getting people to speak to people they didn’t speak with and to get them to negotiate together,” said Fred Grant, a private property rights champion and co-chairman of the Owyhee Initiative Work Group.

On Tuesday in Boise, representatives from those groups met again with Crapo to celebrate their ultimate goal: federal wilderness protection for the Owyhee canyons, rivers, streams and the region’s ranching and tribal heritage.

Last month, President Obama signed a comprehensive public lands bill that included Crapo’s legislation to designate as wilderness 517,000 acres of the Owyhee canyons. The bill also protects 316 miles of rivers and streams under federal Wild and Scenic designation. Protected streams include the Bruneau, Garbage, Big Jacks and Little Jacks creeks and portions of the North Fork and South Fork of the Owyhee River.

Ted Howard, cultural leader for the Shoshone-Paiute tribes, said a prayer in the Shoshone language that has been spoken for thousands of years, reminding the participants of the millennia his people roamed the region alone.

“This place is still a very sacred place for us,” Howard said.

Despite their differences over the value and use of public lands, the negotiators found they shared a common respect for the land. Bill Sedivy, with Idaho Rivers United, said the key was making sure everyone at the table got some of what they’d hoped for. And for some, that was as simple as the right to remain on the land, he said.

“It will give ranchers and Owyhee County residents some of the economic certainty they’ve been seeking for years,” Sedivy said. “As is the case with any compromise agreement, no party got everything it wanted in this bill.”

The next phase of the process is implementing the land trades, sales and buy-outs that help keep the bargain for ranchers. Funding for those deals will come from the federal government, private donations and money raised by environmental groups.

Tom Dyer, the state director for the federal Bureau of Land Management, said his agency is committed to completing the deal.

“We have some tough rows to hoe on implementation, but if we approach it as a family, we can get it done,” Dyer said.

Interior chief Salazar helps dedicate Colorado’s Rocky Mountain wilderness

By Judith Kohler
Associated Press writer

ROCKY MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK, Colo. — Interior Secretary Ken Salazar joined Colorado lawmakers, business and conservation leaders last Thursday to celebrate the designation of Rocky Mountain National Park’s new wilderness area after 35 years of work.

The park and other Colorado sites were among more than 2 million acres in nine states set aside as protected wilderness in a bill signed March 30 by President Barack Obama.

Salazar told about 200 people that in other times of crisis, former presidents, including Abraham Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt, had worked to preserve the nation’s natural heritage, including creating national parks and wildlife refuges.

“It’s very appropriate, it seems to me, that at this point in our history we stand up and we say we will refuel our spirit, refuel our strengths by celebrating the landscapes of America,” Salazar declared.

Salazar, a Democrat, was a Colorado senator when he and former Sen. Wayne Allard, a Republican, announced a compromise bill in 2007 to designate about 250,000 acres — about 95 percent of the park — as wilderness.

President Richard Nixon first suggested protecting the park in 1974.

Various disputes stalled making it wilderness, including the operation of a privately owned irrigation ditch that predates the park. Surrounding communities were concerned that a wilderness designation would block public access to parts of the park and prevent logging to reduce wildfire risk.

Allard sponsored a bill in the 1980s that included wilderness designation for the park. Former Rep. David Skaggs introduced a bill in 1994 that contained much of what is in the law signed by Obama.

Steve Smith, deputy regional director of The Wilderness Society, worked on the wilderness bill while on Skaggs’ staff. He said the park is a great example of the intent of the federal wilderness act.

“It’s big country, with all its ecological robustness,” Smith said. “It’s also close to people, it’s familiar, a place that people cherish.”

The wilderness area includes 14,259-foot Longs Peak and the remote Mummy Range.

Allard accompanied Salazar Thursday, as did Colorado U.S. Sens. Mark Udall and Michael Bennet and Rep. Betsy Markey.

Udall’s grandfather Roe Emery was the first concessionaire in Rocky Mountain National Park and part owner of the historic Stanley Hotel in nearby Estes Park. Udall is an accomplished mountain climber and has skied the backcountry in the area.

“This place has taught me more than I can truly express,” Udall said.

Roughly 1,000 acres will be added to the Indian Peaks Wilderness south of the park, keeping the land free of logging, mining and vehicles.

Park spokeswoman Kyle Patterson said the wilderness designation adds a layer of protection. She said visitors won’t notice a difference: Roads and trails will stay open.

The crescent moon overtakes a crescent Venus

Last month Venus was blazing in the evening sky. Since then, it has zipped between the earth and sun, and will dominate the morning sky until December. Diligent sky watchers can spot it in broad daylight. But for an hour next week, Venus will vanish in mid-air.

The vanishing act won’t be the work of Criss Angel or David Blaine, but the moon. On Wednesday morning the thin, waning crescent will pass directly between us and Venus.

If Venus and the Moon orbited in the average plane of the solar system (the ecliptic) the moon would cover Venus once a month. Venus’s orbit tilts more than three degrees from the ecliptic, and the moon’s more than five, so meetings between them are rare. And such meetings can only be observed when it occurs above the horizon and far enough from the sun’s glare.

Next Wednesday Venus and the moon will be within 33 degrees of the Sun, which will rise while Venus is hidden. Against the bright sky the moon will barely stand out. But Venus, whose light is more concentrated, should be relatively easy to spot.

To watch it, find a spot with an unobstructed view facing due east.

Venus and the moon will rise around 5:15 a.m., but wait until about 5:30 or so when they’ve cleared the horizon. (By 6 a.m., fainter Mars will have risen, directly below Venus and the moon). Binoculars or a

Utah wildlife agency programs see funding cuts

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Cuts to next year’s budget for Utah’s wildlife agency will mean no money for coyote bounties and no payments to a sister agency that allows hunters and anglers to use its land.

The state Division of Wildlife Resources gets about 10 percent of its budget from the state’s general fund. Cuts approved by the Legislature earlier this year, though, will affect several programs.

For years, the agency has paid the state School and Institutional Trust Lands Administration to allow access for hunting and fishing on its land. The $579,000 payment for the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, is among the budget cuts.

SITLA raises money for Utah schools by selling and leasing on 3.4 million acres of state-owned land it controls. Rather than issue a permit for hunter and angler access, the agency collects an annual payment from the wildlife division.

Dave Hebertson, a spokesman for the agency, said the agreement that allows access to SITLA’s land is scheduled to be discussed in September. He said he didn’t know of any immediate decision about future access to the land because of the wildlife agency cuts.

Also getting trimmed from the wildlife budget is $100,000 that pays for a predator bounty program. The wildlife agency sends the money to the Utah Department of Agriculture and Food, which distributes it to counties.

The money has been used to pay for bounties — typically $20 per coyote — in agricultural areas where predators are causing problems for livestock.

In 2007, about 29,000 sheep were killed by predators, including about 16,000 by coyotes, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture figures.

Fishing

Quick 80-degree weather could cause rapid snowmelt, leaving little water to continue feeding streams, Megargle said.

Cooler temperatures with partly cloudy to mostly clear skies are expected in south-central Idaho the next few days, with highs reaching into the low to mid 60s by the weekend, according to the National Weather Service.

Fishing dates

Though fishing on lakes and reservoirs is open all year, some enthusiasts are waiting for the stream opener on Memorial Day weekend.

Free-fishing day will be June 13. Anglers may fish without a license that day, but all other rules and regulations apply.

For the organized fisherman, try checking out Fish and Game’s Fishing Planner. Located on the department’s Web site — <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/ifwis/fishingplanner/> — the planner offers maps, rules, stocking information and more.

“This makes it really easy to find places to go fishing,” Megargle said. “If someone wants to find where to trout fish within 25 miles of Twin Falls, for instance, they can look on the Fishing Planner and it will tell them.”

Depending on your weight and the placement of the struts on the frame, your body may have contact with the ground beneath. I weigh 180 pounds, and while laying on my back, my butt slightly brushed the dirt under the cot’s middle. It was in no way uncomfortable. But if your goal is hovering 100 percent above the ground, this cot could disappoint.

LuxuryLite touts the UltraLite Cot as strong enough for a 325-pound man. The unit is solid. I left it set up inside for days at a time, walking on it, plopping down, and laying for a few minutes to test it on a quick rest. It can take some abuse, I am saying. But 325 pounds of abuse would be interesting to see.

The cot costs $219, which is pricier than the nicest of sleeping pads.

But its weight is almost comparable to a plush inflatable mattress.

And for picky campers and backpackers who do not want to snooze right on the ground — but also don’t want to lug a traditional cot into the woods — LuxuryLite offers a unique sleeping solution.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: I have to file bankruptcy, but need to keep my only car. I owe way more than it’s worth. I think I can make the payments.

Answer: In a Ch. 7 bankruptcy, your choices are to surrender the car or to keep it and pay. If you keep it, you must agree to reaffirm your debt and continue making the monthly payments, or redeem it by paying what the car is worth instead of what you owe on it. To redeem, you ordinarily have to pay in a lump sum. Chances are, if you could afford to redeem, you would not have to file bankruptcy.

In a Ch. 13 bankruptcy, you may be able to do the equivalent of redemption by paying back only the value of the car, with reduced interest, over the life of your Ch. 13 Plan. This is called a “cram down” because you don’t pay the entire loan, only the value of the car. Your payments will probably go down because the loan term can be extended. Whether you qualify for a “cram down” depends in part on whether the loan was for the purpose of buying the car, or whether the title to the car was taken as collateral for a personal or business loan. If the loan was not for the purpose of buying the car, you probably qualify for a “cram down”. However, this is a highly technical point in a very complex body of law. An experienced bankruptcy attorney can identify the best option for you very quickly.

Jerome Co. comprehensive plan gaining traction

MARY HANSON/For the Times-News

Jerome County Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown and Assistant Planner Nancy Marshall discuss the planned major revision of the county's comprehensive plan on Wednesday.

Revision completion planned for Nov. 2010

By Mary Hanson
Times-News writer

"We will keep the public apprised all along the way."

— Jerome County Commissioner Cathy Roemer

Jerome County commissioners say they're going to roll up their sleeves and do as much of the work as they can in updating the county's decades-old comprehensive plan.

The plan, which helps direct officials on all aspects of county governance from zoning plans to dealing with future growth, was last updated in 1997 and hasn't undergone a major revision since 1970.

While the initial stages of a revision gained footing two years ago, County Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said county officials weren't able to gather the needed funding, as county monies were needed elsewhere.

Now, with consulting for the revision estimated at $125,000, Howell said commissioners will start the project in-house with the help of county departments, volunteer committees and County Prosecutor John Horgan.

Howell said a consultant may be hired if the need arises, but by doing the leg work themselves, county officials will save money.

An effort to develop six teams of volunteers drawn across different county areas and professions will be led by Commissioner Cathy Roemer, Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown and volunteers Paula Munier and Karen Rogerson.

The process of revising the plan will include the use of a Web site to help with communication along with a series of public meetings before October 2010, when commissioners expect a final draft will be formulated and sent to the Planning and Zoning Commission by November 2010.

"We will keep the public apprised all along the way," Roemer said. "We definitely want to hear from them. In fact, with the six teams of volunteering public that make up our steering committee, we feel we will have a great deal of public input."

Anyone interested in volunteering is asked to contact Brown at the Jerome County Courthouse, 644-2750.

Roemer said that volunteers need to be prepared for a time commitment that could span 18 months to two years.

"It will not take all of our time but one must know it will be a long-range commitment," she said.

Have a surgeon remove cyst, not your veterinarian

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a cyst on the top of my forehead. Now that my hairline has receded to the point where the cyst has become visible, I would like to have it removed. My insurance will not cover this, but I have a friend and neighbor who is a veterinarian. He says he will do it at cost.

Is there any reason why I

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

should not let him? After all, I trust him to treat my dog, and I love her like one of my family.

DEAR READER: Wow! I am printing and responding to your letter because it is a first. No one has ever asked me to "cross party lines" before.

Veterinarians are qualified — in their field. Many programs do not require a bachelor's degree for entrance, and prerequisites vary. Mandated classes include chemistry, biology, genetics and microbiology. A four-year degree in the field of animal science and a postgraduate degree from a recognized school of veterinary medicine are mandated. There are 28 colleges in 26 states that meet accreditation standards set by the Council on Education of the American Veterinary Medical Association. State license is required before practice can begin. Some students prefer to intern in a group practice. Others choose to go solo.

Most veterinarians diagnose problems, medicate, vaccinate, set fractures, treat and dress wounds, perform surgery when necessary, and dispense advice. They use surgical instruments, stethoscopes and diagnostic equipment. Sounds like a medical doctor, doesn't it? A big difference is that a pet cannot speak to tell his doctor what hurts. That's up to the pet's owner, but it certainly adds a vital element to the examination.

Obviously, I cannot

Health Heroes winners announced

South Central Public Health District announced the recipients of its 2009 Health Heroes Awards.

Winners of the award for Adult Health Hero are John and Sandra Sexton of Twin Falls. John and Sandra volunteer to offer free health care opportunities to the less fortunate, unemployed, or uninsured at the Mustard Seed Clinic in Twin Falls.

The Valley Chapter of FCCCLA was selected as the 2009 Youth Health Hero. The group of Valley High School students works to improve the quality of life and health in its community. The group consists of leaders like Leiloni Keele who provided smoking education and organized a Relay For Life event. Rozlynn Barnes and Connie Chaires worked with elementary students on the importance of proper nutrition and using the USDA Food Pyramid.

Ashley Kraus, Kim Miller, and Jamie Wood presented a puppet show to third graders on anti-bullying and the importance of showing kindness towards others.

Winners of the Group Health Hero awards included the Twin Falls County Farm Bureau Women's Leadership Committee and the Twin Falls Lions Club.

In 2008, The Twin Falls County Farm Bureau Women's Leadership Committee sponsored Farm Safety Day for Twin Falls County residents. The event covered farm equipment safety, emergency response, animal safety, electrical safety, gun and fire safety, water safety, and large truck safety.

The Twin Falls Lions Club provides a mobile screening unit for health screenings throughout the Magic Valley. Lions Club volunteers provide diabetic screenings and donate the use of the screening unit to the Twin Falls School District for sight, hearing, and scoliosis screenings. The Lions Club screening unit has been used for 150 free diabetes screenings and approximately 3,000 school screenings.

This is the 11th year that South Central Public Health District has recognized the contributions made by area individuals and groups to the health of south central Idaho residents.

Jerome's Montgomery competes in homecoming queen competition

Rena Montgomery, daughter of Deanne Montgomery of Jerome, has been selected as a finalist for Idaho's 29th Annual Homecoming Queen Selection to be held April 25-26 at the Hampton Inn and Suites in Salt Lake City. Montgomery is the Jerome High School homecoming queen.

Idaho's 2009 homecoming queen will receive a cash scholarship plus an expense-paid trip to the national finals to compete with queens from the other states for America's Homecoming Queen. America's Homecoming Queen, Inc. is a nonprofit organization promoting education, educational travel and community service in all 50 states.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You recently discussed warfarin, the brand name of which is Coumadin. It was discovered by serendipity by Dr. Karl Paul Link at the University of Wisconsin in 1948 and developed at the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, hence the name.

 As a physician, I feel your readers might be interested in the background of how this drug got its name.
DEAR READER:
 Coumadin is an anticoagulant often prescribed for patients at risk of heart attack, stroke and some other serious medical conditions. It never occurred to me how the name came to be.

Aide who accused senator of improprieties in 1960s dies

By Patricia Sullivan
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Michael V. O'Hare, an aide to U.S. Sen. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut whose accusations of financial improprieties against his boss led the Senate to censure Dodd in 1967, died March 15 at the University of North Carolina Hospitals in Chapel Hill of complications from a stroke. He was 73.

O'Hare lived in Chapel Hill had been a Washington area resident for 45 years.

O'Hare, who began working for Dodd in 1961, was one of four staffers who copied more than 4,000 documents from Dodd's files and provided them to syndicated columnists Jack Anderson and Drew Pearson.

The files purportedly showed that Dodd, a Democrat, was doing political favors for a registered foreign agent and that he double-billed seven airline tickets and used $116,083 in political donations to pay personal expenses, including back taxes.

The accusations immediately caused a media firestorm. It was the first case to go before the newly created Senate Ethics Committee, and Dodd was the first U.S. senator to be censured for personal financial misconduct.

O'Hare went on to work as a financial officer for Big Brothers of the National Capital Area, the Overseas Development Council, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and the malaria program of the Naval Medical Research Center. But he was devastated by the initial attack against him during the Dodd uproar.

Dodd blamed the scandal on O'Hare's "sloppy bookkeeping" and in a speech on the Senate floor called him "a liar and a forger and a thief." Newspaper articles described O'Hare and his former co-workers as turncoats, and in the Senate coffee shop, Dodd's son Jeremy poked him in the chest and said, "When this thing is over I'm going to follow you to your (deleted) grave," according to a front-page account in The Washington Post in 1966.

"We believed we were witness to grave misconduct in office," O'Hare told Time magazine at the time.

Former Ill. governor wants to join reality TV show

By Christopher Wills
Associated Press writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Just when you thought the saga of ousted Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich couldn't get any stranger, it has.

Blagojevich wants to star on the NBC reality show "I'm a Celebrity ... Get Me Out of Here!" — a program similar to "Survivor" in which contestants will be plopped down in the Costa Rican jungle to perform sweaty physical tasks, scheme to avoid elimination and throw tantrums for the camera.

If a federal judge gives permission, the man who faces years in prison on corruption charges could be following in the steps of Flava Flav and Kathy Griffin — D-list celebrities willing to play the clown on TV.

Perhaps he will have to retrieve items from a crocodile-infested swamp, like one participant on an earlier version of "I'm a Celebrity ..."

"I'm sure Illinois viewers would love to see Blagojevich have to do something like that — especially if the crocodiles win," said Jenn Brasler, associate editor of the Web site RealityNewsOnline.

First, Blagojevich needs to get Judge James B. Zagel to let him leave the country with a pending criminal case. He was ordered to surrender his passport after his December arrest on charges that included trying to sell off President Barack Obama's vacant Senate seat.

Northwestern University law professor Anthony D'Amato said the judge might be willing to approve the project because of Costa Rica's strong extradition agreement with the United States — meaning Blagojevich could not just hole up there forever. But the decision is far from certain, particularly with a judge known for being strict.

Costa Rican Interior

Undersecretary Ana Duran said Blagojevich would be allowed to enter the Central American country because he has no legal charges against him there.

"If (the U.S.) lets him out, he wouldn't have any obstacles here because he doesn't have any convictions," Duran said.

Blagojevich, who pleaded not guilty on Tuesday, has plenty on his mind without adding a TV show to the mix. Illinois lawmakers impeached him and booted him from office in January.

Since his arrest, he has announced a deal to write a book, hosted a Chicago radio talk show and made the New York talk show circuit, chatting it up with everyone from David Letterman to the women of "The View."

But to people who know Blagojevich or know the business of reality TV, the idea of him appearing on "I'm a Celebrity ..." isn't terribly shocking.

Illinois Rep. Lou Lang, a fellow Democrat, said Blagojevich needs both money and attention, and television is a way to get them.

Appearing on the show will give the out-of-work former governor some much-needed cash for his legal defense, Lang said, and it will keep Blagojevich in the public spotlight, where he can repeat his claims of being an innocent man victimized by political enemies.

Blagojevich has had trouble assembling a defense team, which his attorney attributes to a lack of money.

"I can guarantee you I will not be watching. I think it's disgusting," added Lang, who was once a Blagojevich supporter.

Plenty of other people probably would watch the former governor, who once dreamed of being president and is now a national joke, the target of "Saturday Night Live" parodies and late-night monologues.

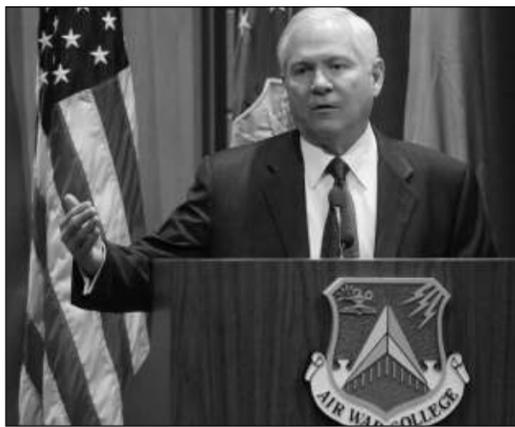

Gates warns against striking Iran

By Paul Richter
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Amid increasing suggestions that Israel may attack Iran's nuclear facilities, Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates warned this week that such a strike would have dangerous consequences, and asserted that Tehran's acquisition of a bomb can be prevented only if "Iranians themselves decide it's too costly."

Using his strongest language on the subject to date, Gates told a group of Marine Corps students that although a strike probably would delay Tehran's nuclear program one to three years, it would unify Iranians, "cement their determination to have a nuclear program, and also build into the whole country an undying hatred of whoever hits them." Israeli officials fear that the Islamic Republic may gain the know-how to build a bomb as early as this year, and several of them have warned that Israel could strike first to eliminate what it considers an existential threat.

But while the administration of President Barack Obama has not ruled out the use of military force, several officials have indicated strong opposition to using it. Last week, Vice President Joseph R. Biden Jr. said

Secretary of Defense Robert Gates speaks at the Air University at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala., Wednesday.

Israel's new conservative prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, would be "ill advised" to launch a strike.

Shimon Peres, Israel's president, said in an interview with Israel's Kol Hai radio last Sunday that Israel would attack if the Iranian leadership didn't drop its plans for its nuclear program.

"We'll strike him," Peres said in the interview.

Netanyahu has also hinted at the possibility of an Israeli attack, describing the Iranian program as an "existential threat." Obama administration officials are now exploring whether they can convince Tehran through negotiations to give up its nuclear ambitions. Officials have said they are ready to try to intensify economic and political sanctions on Iran if diplomacy doesn't work.

Gates told students at Marines Corps University in Quantico, Va., that while Obama "needs the full range of options," in his view "we need to look at every way we can to increase the cost of that program to them, whether it's through economic sanctions or other things." The defense secretary said other nations need to put more emphasis on arguments that a bomb would diminish, rather than improve Iran's security "particularly if it launches an arms race in the Middle East."

Gates' comments were delivered on Monday and first reported by the Army Times newspaper. A defense official confirmed their accuracy.

Iran responded this week to the Israeli declarations, asking the United Nations to intervene to stop the threats.

Mohammed Khazee, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, sent a letter Tuesday to the president of the U.N. Security Council denouncing "unlawful and insolent" threats of an attack. He said the threats violated international law and the U.N. Charter, and urged the organization to respond.

Israeli officials would probably seek the cooperation and approval of their American allies before carrying out any such strike, experts say.

One reason is that Israelis may want U.S. clearance to fly over Iraq, and possibly help with aircraft refueling or aspects of the operation. In addition, a strike could set off retaliatory Iranian attacks on U.S. forces in Iraq and Afghanistan, straining relations between the two allies.

But the comments of Gates and Biden suggest that in their private conversations U.S. officials are discouraging such a course, even though officials say they would never deny Israel's right to act in self defense.

Actress Maxine Cooper Gomberg, 84, dies

By Valerie J. Nelson
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Maxine Cooper Gomberg, an actress best known for playing the secretary in the 1955 film noir classic "Kiss Me Deadly," has died. She was 84.

Gomberg, who also was a social activist, died of natural causes April 4 at her Los Angeles home, her family said.

The crime thriller "Kiss Me Deadly," loosely based on the Mickey Spillane novel, marked the feature film debut of the actress, then known as Maxine Cooper, and Cloris Leachman. Gomberg was Velda, the affectionate and trusty secretary of Ralph Meeker's Mike Hammer, the antisocial private eye at the heart of the film.

"Kiss Me Deadly" is considered a "seminal film noir," said Alan K. Rode, an expert in film noir, the black-and-white shadowy films that examine the underbelly of society.

The Robert Aldrich film "was kind of a touchstone for the postwar, Cold War nuclear era, and a signpost for what was to be the end of film noir as film noir morphed into television programs," he said.

For decades, Meeker and Gomberg were at the center of a mystery surrounding the ending of "Kiss Me Deadly," which is about paranoia in the Atomic Age.

In the early 1970s, the movie's original ending, in which Velda and Mike watched a beach house explode, disappeared. In its place, prints featured a truncated finale that ended with the explosion and implied that the characters did not survive.

A film editor turned detective helped restore 64 seconds of footage in the late 1990s after tracking down Aldrich's personal print. Why the ending had been changed remains unresolved.

Aldrich cast Gomberg in "Kiss Me Deadly" after seeing her in a Los Angeles theatrical production of "Peer Gynt." She also had small roles in the Aldrich films "Autumn Leaves" (1956) and "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" (1962).

After marrying screenwriter and producer Sy Gomberg in 1957, she quit acting in the early 1960s to raise her family and rally Hollywood activists.

French raid pirate ship, U.S. seeks to freeze assets

By Elizabeth A. Kennedy and Todd Pitman
Associated Press writers

MOMBASA, Kenya — The U.S. and its allies battled Somalia's pirates on two fronts Wednesday, with French forces seizing a bandit mother ship and Washington seeking to keep the marauders from their spoils. Another U.S. freighter headed to port with armed sailors aboard after pirates damaged it with gunshots and grenades.

One pirate issued a new threat to "slaughter" Americans, and Tuesday's assault on a second U.S. cargo ship, the Liberty Sun, underscored the outlaws' ability to act with impunity despite international naval operations against them and mounting concern worldwide over how to end the escalating attacks off the Horn of Africa.

Pirates bombarded the U.S.-flagged Liberty Sun with automatic weapons fire and rocket-propelled grenades, but its American crew of about 20 successfully blocked themselves in the engine room and evaded off the attack with evasive maneuvers.

aid for hungry Africans — including Somalis — was damaged "pretty badly" on its bridge, a U.S. official said on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak on the record about the ship.

Windows were blown out and the crew had to put out a small fire, the official said, but they were still able to navigate. By the time the USS Bainbridge arrived five hours later, the pirates were gone.

Meanwhile, French naval forces launched an early-morning attack on a suspected pirate "mother ship" 550 miles east of Mombasa and seized 11 men, thwarting an attack on the Liberian cargo ship Safmarine Asia, the French Defense Ministry said. No one was injured.

The ministry said the vessel was a larger ship that pirates use to allow their tiny skiffs to operate hundreds of miles off the coast.

French Foreign Ministry spokesman Christophe Prazuck said a French helicopter in the area heard a distress call from the Safmarine Asia. He described the seized ship as a small, noncommercial vessel carrying fuel, water and food supplies.

The 11 pirates, believed to be Somalis, were being held on the Nivose, a French frigate among the international fleet trying to protect shipping in the Gulf of Aden.

France has been proactive against pirates for at least the past year, intervening to save three of its ships and spearheading a Europe-wide anti-piracy force called Atalanta. French politicians have sought to have other European countries take greater action against pirates.

Three Somali pirates in the French city of Rennes faced judicial investigation after being captured in a hostage rescue Friday. Several other pirates also have been in French custody since last year.

In Washington, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton announced new diplomatic efforts to freeze the pirates' assets and said the Obama administration will work with shippers and insurers to improve their defenses against pirates, part of a diplomatic initiative to thwart attacks on shipping.

"These pirates are criminals, they are armed gangs on the sea. And those plotting attacks must be stopped," Clinton said at the State Department.

Clinton did not call for military force, although she mentioned "going after" pirate bases in Somalia, as authorized by the U.N. several months ago.

She said it may be possible to stop boat-building companies from doing business with the pirates.

The measures outlined by Clinton are largely stop-gap moves while the administration weighs more comprehensive diplomatic and military action.

She acknowledged it will be hard to find the pirates' assets. But she wants the U.S. and others to "explore ways to track and freeze" pirate ransom money and other funds used in purchases of new boats, weapons and communications equipment.

"We have noticed that the pirates are buying more and more sophisticated equipment, they're buying faster and more capable vessels, they are clearly using their ransom money for their benefit — both personally and on behalf of their piracy," she said. "We think we can begin to try and track and prevent that from happening."

Clinton said the administration will also call for immediate meetings of an international counterpiracy task force to expand naval coordination.

T.F.'s Retmier signs on with Baylor's equestrian team

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Equestrian trainer Curt Fuller set the stage for Chelsea Retmier's big day, sharing how she wanted to ride horses since she was a little girl and how her mother supposedly agreed to buy a horse if Retmier could saddle one herself.

Fuller said it took a little help, namely that of a step-stool, but Retmier managed

Jerome QB Lammers headed for Idaho State as walk-on

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Two months ago, one of the premier football talents in the Magic Valley committed his future to Idaho State University. On Tuesday, another followed suit.

Jerome senior quarterback Jake Lammers put to rest any lingering doubt about his college future, announcing in a press release that he will attend Idaho State, joining Class 4A Player of the Year Skylar Morgan, Minico's star running back, as Bengals for 2009.

Lammers, who carries a 4.0 GPA and will receive academic scholarships to cover at least the first two years of college and will walk on and try to earn a spot at Idaho State. Given the obvious talent he displayed in Gary Krumm's pass-happy offense, the Jerome signal caller has more than a decent shot at making it at the next level.

Taking shape

Canyon Ridge gym gets scoreboards, baskets and floor

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Basketballers rejoice: the Canyon Ridge High School gymnasium interior is starting to take shape.

With the building fully enclosed and work commenced on the interior, the largest athletic facility on campus is quickly coming together. Six of the 10 basketball backboards and rims were installed by Wednesday, and scoreboards are up as well. Four more backboards are slated to go up on the second-level practice floor. After that, it's on to the hardwood floor, some of which was laid in late March.

"We want to get all of that work done before they start on the floor," Thornsberry said.

Because the scoreboards and backboards are attached either to the ceiling or high on the more than 40-foot tall walls, crews must use motorized boom or scissor lifts, which are heavy enough to possibly ruin the hardwood.

Big Sky Supplies of Missoula, Mont., began installing the second-level practice court in March and will install the main-level competition floor in late April through early May. The project will take a little more than two weeks to install given that it is a multi-faceted process. Two-by-four beams are laid on a plastic tarp to act as spacers and help give the floor a little bounce, followed by two layers of plywood and then the 2 1/4-inch wide strips of maple.

The biggest concern of laying any hardwood flooring is moisture.

"If any gets in, the wood could separate," said James Winn, who has also installed the floors at Rocky Mountain High School in Meridian and Teton High School in Driggs.

As part of the installation, Big Sky Supplies workers will also sand, seal, paint court lines and apply a layer of

Buhl Rotary track meet moved to Friday along with Monte Andrus

Times-News

Wednesday's dose of April snowfall threw a wrench into the plans of many high school athletics teams.

All of Wednesday's events were canceled or postponed and a number of events scheduled for today have been pushed back as well.

The Wood River at Jerome baseball and softball games slated for Wednesday afternoon will now be played today with baseball playing a single game in Jerome at 4:30 p.m., while softball plays a doubleheader in Hailey at 3 p.m., weather permitting.

The Kimberly vs. Wendell baseball and softball games were also postponed. Kimberly baseball coach Darin Gonzales said the contests will be made up on Friday, April 24, in Kimberly.

Wednesday's tennis match between the Community School and Gooding was cancelled and will not be rescheduled, according to Gooding athletic director Joleen Toome.

Among the events originally scheduled for today that have been moved is the 17-team Buhl Rotary Invitational track meet, which will now begin at 1 p.m., Friday.

The Monte Andrus junior varsity track meet at Twin Falls High was also pushed back a day and will begin at 1 p.m., Friday.

The Gate City Invitational at Riverside Golf Course in Pocatello will now be played on Monday instead of today. Area team's include Twin Falls, Jerome and Burley.

Former Minico QB Broadhead rehabs during spring practices

Ex-Spartan hopes to compete for starting job this fall at Carroll College

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

All Dane Broadhead wanted for Christmas was a surgically-repaired knee.

The former Minico star went under the knife during the holidays last December and is currently rehabbing while his current team, Carroll College, is participating in spring drills.

"I get to do some stuff, but I'm pretty limited," said Broadhead. "I haven't put the pads on yet. No contact right now."

Broadhead got his first taste of college football during the second game of his freshman season when Carroll's starting quarterback Gary Wagner went down with an ankle injury.

The 6-2, 210-pound lefty ended up playing in 11 games for the

Although he can't participate in spring ball, Broadhead said rehab is going well.

"I'm right where I need to be," he said. "I'm starting to run on it a little bit now, starting to get some of my strength back in the weight room, so that's good. Pretty smooth so far. I'm about a month ahead of where I should be. I haven't hit any snags so far, so I can't complain."

Wagner, who has two years of eligibility remaining, has recovered well from his ankle injury and has been taking all the first-team reps at QB this spring. The starting job seems to be Wagner's again, but that doesn't concern Broadhead for now.

"Right now I'm just focusing on my knee, just trying to get that better," Broadhead said. "Once I get back to 100 percent, then we can just go from there in the fall."

Wakefield flirts with no-hitter

OAKLAND, Calif. — Tim Wakefield took a no-hitter into the eighth inning on a day when the Red Sox desperately needed a strong start from their 42-year-old knuckleballer and finished with a four-hitter Wednesday in Boston's 8-2 victory over the Oakland Athletics.

Wakefield (1-1) got within five outs of the first no-hitter of his 17-season major league career, nearly becoming the second-oldest pitcher to accomplish the feat after Nolan Ryan.

BLUE JAYS 12, TWINS 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Aaron Hill went 4-for-5 with one of Toronto's four home runs in four innings against Minnesota starter Scott Baker, and the Blue Jays kept up their torrid hitting.

Hill and Scott Rolen hit two-run shots against Baker, who came off the disabled list to make a forgettable first start of the season.

Vernon Wells and Michael Barrett also went deep, sending Baker to an early exit.

INDIANS 5, ROYALS 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Travis Hafner's second double keyed a three-run seventh inning, and the Cleveland Indians picked up their first road win of the year while avoiding a three-game sweep.

Jensen Lewis (1-0) issued three straight walks in the bottom of the seventh but still got the victory in relief of Aaron Laffey. Kyle Farnsworth (0-2) gave up three runs while getting only one out in relief for the Royals.

YANKEES 4, RAYS 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The road-weary New York Yankees headed to their new home on a high note as Andy Pettitte pitched into the eighth inning, Robinson Cano hit a two-run homer and Derek Jeter singled in the go-ahead run in the ninth.

Jeter also doubled in the eighth and scored the tying run on Johnny Damon's double off J.P. Howell. He delivered the tiebreaking run against Troy Percival (0-1) following a one-out double to Cody Ransom.

TIGERS 9, WHITE SOX 0

DETROIT — Armando Galarraga threw 6 1-3 scoreless innings and Placido Polanco drove in three runs Wednesday.

Galarraga (2-0) gave up four hits and two walks while striking out five. He left to a standing ovation after walking Paul Konerko with one out in the seventh. Jose Contreras (0-2) yielded five runs — three earned — on five hits in 5 2-3 innings.

Detroit took a 2-0 lead in the fifth inning. Josh Anderson and Ramon Santiago walked, and after Curtis Granderson hit into a force at second, Polanco sent a shot over Brian Anderson's head in center for a two-run double.

RANGERS 19, ORIOLES 6

ARLINGTON, Texas — Ian Kinsler went 6-for-6 while hitting for the cycle as the Rangers snapped a five-game losing streak.

Kinsler became the fourth player in Rangers history with a cycle, reaching the feat with a triple in the sixth inning. With his RBI double in the eighth, he became only the second Texas player with a six-hit game and then scored his fifth run, matching another team record.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

CARDINALS 12, DIAMONDBACKS 7

PHOENIX — Ryan Ludwick homered and drove in three runs to lead the Cardinals to victory.

Ludwick is batting .407 and has hit in all seven games he's played this season. He singled home a run in the third inning and added a two-run homer in the sixth.

ROCKIES 5, CUBS 2

CHICAGO — Jason Marquis hit a two-run single off Rich Harden to put Colorado ahead against his former team.

Marquis (2-0), who spent the previous two years with the Cubs, was booed during introductions before Monday's home opener and again several times Wednesday. He hit a bases-loaded single in the second and allowed one run and five hits in seven innings.

MARLINS 10, BRAVES 4

ATLANTA — Dan Uggla drove in three runs for the second straight game and the Florida Marlins beat the Atlanta Braves 10-4 on Wednesday night.

At 7-1, Florida has its best start since opening 1997 with eight wins in the first nine games.

METS 7, PADRES 2

NEW YORK — Oliver Perez rebounded from a rough season debut and the New York Mets earned their first victory at Citi Field.

Carlos Delgado homered and Perez pitched six smooth innings to help New York end San Diego's five-game winning streak.

ASTROS 4, PIRATES 1

PITTSBURGH — Mike Hampton pitched six shutout innings and the Houston Astros snapped a five-game losing streak.

Hampton (1-1) allowed four singles, walked one and struck out eight. He improved to 11-3 in his career against Pittsburgh and has won seven consecutive starts against the Pirates dating back to 2000.

BREWERS 9, REDS 3

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers' offense finally woke up, Mike Cameron hit a pair of home runs to spoil the pitching debut of Micah Owings (0-1) for the Cincinnati Reds and the Brewers avoided a series sweep.

Spurs wrap up No. 3 seed with win

SAN ANTONIO — Michael Finley hit a 3-pointer as time expired to force overtime, and Tim Duncan put on a dominating show from there, leading the San Antonio Spurs to a division-clinching 105-98 win over the New Orleans Hornets on Friday night.

Coupled with a Houston loss to Dallas, the Spurs clinched the No. 3 seed in the Western Conference. The Hornets fell to the seventh seed after letting this one slip away.

New Orleans led by five with 47.6 seconds left in the fourth period, but missed free throws gave the Spurs a chance. Finley took advantage, draining a 3-pointer as the clock ran down to zero.

MAVERICKS 95, ROCKETS 84

DALLAS — Jason Kidd notched a triple-double and Jason Terry was superb in the fourth quarter, powering Dallas to a victory that started the dominoes tumbling in the Western Conference playoff chase.

Dallas will be the No. 6 seed and play the Spurs in the playoffs. The Rockets will play Portland in a 4-5 matchup.

76ERS 111, CAVALIERS 110, OT

CLEVELAND — LeBron James watched as the Cleveland Cavaliers couldn't quite make history.

With their superstar, All-Star guard Mo Williams and other regulars resting for the playoffs, Cleveland lost for just the second time on their home floor this season.

That left the Cavs at 39 home wins — one shy of tying the 1985-86 Boston Celtics' all-time home record of 40-1.

Andre Miller scored 30 points and Andre Iguodala 24 for the Sixers, who snapped a six-game losing streak. Philadelphia earned the No. 6 spot in the Eastern Conference playoffs, where it will meet the Orlando Magic.

RAPTORS 109, BULLS 98

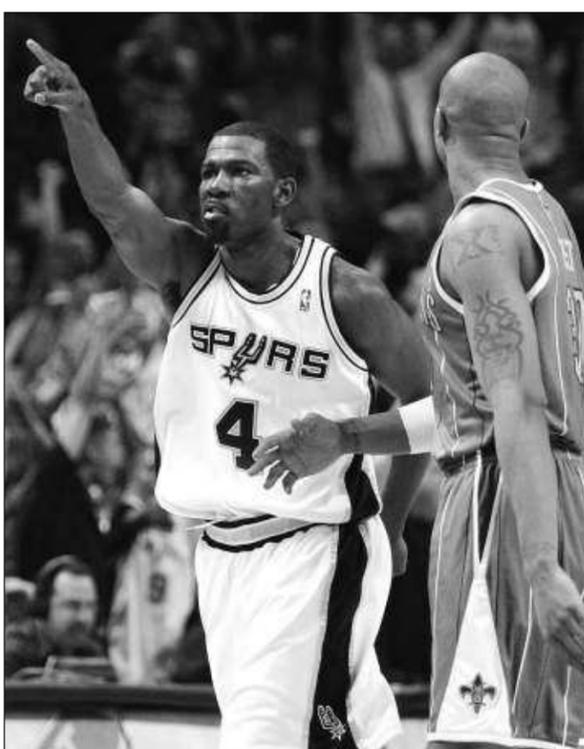

CHICAGO — Shawn Marion scored a season-high 34 points, Chris Bosh set one with 19 rebounds while scoring 21, and Toronto ended Chicago's five-game winning streak.

CELTICS 115, WIZARDS 107

BOSTON — Eddie House sank five 3-pointers in the fourth quarter and Boston beat Washington without its three top players.

Caron Butler scored a season-high 39 points but couldn't keep the Wizards from matching their worst record for an 82-game season, 19-63, last in the Eastern Conference.

MAGIC 98, BOBCATS 73

ORLANDO, Fla. — Tony Battie had 21 points, Mickael Pietrus scored 19, and Orlando tuned up for the playoffs with a victory.

Dwight Howard had 10 points and 12 rebounds in limited minutes to help Orlando snap its season-longest three-game losing streak without starting forwards Hedo Turkoglu and Rashard Lewis. The third-seeded Magic will face Philadelphia in the first round of the playoffs.

Raymond Felton had 13 points, and Nazr Mohammed added 12 for the Bobcats (35-47), who finished with the best record in franchise history.

HEAT 102, PISTONS 96

MIAMI — Chris Quinn made a 3-pointer late in overtime to give Miami the lead and Dwyane Wade wrapped the NBA scoring title while sitting out of Miami's victory.

Quinn scored a career-best 26 points.

No. 5 Miami will start the playoffs at No. 4 Atlanta.

GRIZZLIES 98, HAWKS 90

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — O.J. Mayo scored 26 points and Rudy Gay added 20 to lead the Memphis to a against mostly the Hawks' subs.

Marc Gasol finished with 19 points for Memphis, which snapped a two-

PACERS 115, BUCKS 108

INDIANAPOLIS — Danny Granger scored 35 points, and Indiana overcame a 17-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

Granger scored 16 points in the fourth quarter in his 23rd 30-point game of the season.

KINGS 97, TIMBERWOLVES 90

MINNEAPOLIS — Ike Diogu had 28 points and 13 rebounds to help Sacramento finish a sorry season with a victory.

Diogu topped 20 points in two straight games for the first time in his career and Andres Nocioni scored 17 points for the Kings (17-65), who finished with the NBA's worst record.

KNICKS 102, NETS 73

NEW YORK — David Lee had 12 points and 12 rebounds for his NBA-best 65th double-double, and the Knicks won the final pro game in the New York area this season.

New York completed its fifth straight season without a playoff appearance. The Knicks will enter next season tied with Minnesota for the longest playoff drought.

Wadsworth and Wilson continue to dominate District VI

By Diane Philbin

Times-News writers

As District VI moves into Rupert this weekend, Cody Wadsworth of Kimberly with 102 points has widened the distance between himself and second-place Raul Hurtado of Oakley (77). Chase Brice of Declo is in the third spot with 67 points.

Kindee Wilson of Filer gained 58 points in Filer last weekend pushing her first-place total to 168 points. Katie Vierstra of Filer and Amanda Coats of Kimberly are tied for second with 135.

The boys rookie race is the tightest with Jade Wadsworth of Kimberly (39) just six points ahead of Colton Baratti of Filer (33). Hitt Hagan of Declo is third with 14.

Kyndal Stradley from Filer tops the girls rookies with 91 points and Jacee Bedke of Oakley is second with 58. Stradley also sits sixth in the overall girls standings and Bedke is ninth. Both rookies compete in five events, including goats, breakaway, barrels, poles and team roping.

"I practiced all winter with my brother, Tyler and Chisum (Hughes)," said Stradley. "We didn't let our horses off."

The winter work has already paid off for Stradley with a win earlier at the College of Southern Idaho rodeo in breakaway on her 5-year old mare, Izzi.

"We'll do good as long as I do what I'm suppose to do," said Stradley. "I don't really have a favorite event. I like them all."

She is currently in fourth place in barrels and breakaway and 10th in poles and with partner Hughes, ninth in team roping.

"Goats isn't going real well so far this year, but I'm working hard at it," said the Wrangler champion with a state title in barrels and goats a year ago, which qualified the first-year cowgirl for a trip to Wrangler Nationals.

For Bedke, the Oakley

freshman says her strength is in roping so it is no surprise that breakaway is her favorite event.

"I've been roping since I was three or four," said Bedke who sits ninth in barrels and tenth in goats. "I try to practice really hard every night with my dad and probably practice the most on breakaway."

Both rookies have the same goal and that is to make it to state in at least one event.

Tanisha Adams of Declo will be going for her sixth straight win in barrels in Rupert.

Michigan could be next stop as Duke's Paulus pursues football career

DURHAM, N.C. — Greg Paulus' next home could be the Big House. The Blue Devils point guard visited Michigan to explore the possibility of transferring there to play football, Duke spokesman Art Chase said Wednesday.

Paulus' visit came Tuesday, the same day word leaked that he worked out for the Green Bay Packers in advance of the NFL draft.

Paulus thought about resuming his football career at Duke, but coach David Cutcliffe's team is set at quarterback with Thaddeus Lewis preparing for his fourth year as the starter. Paulus hasn't taken a snap in a game since 2004, when he was a high school quarterback in New York.

He would seem to fit better in Michigan coach Rich Rodriguez's read-option scheme than in the pro-style system favored by Cutcliffe, who considered trying Paulus at slot receiver.

"He's a quarterback at heart, but there was no way he was going to be able to compete and play quarterback for us," Cutcliffe said.

Paulus, who played four years of basketball at Duke but never played football there, would have one season of football eligibility.

Thomas to give 1st year salary back to FIU

MIAMI (AP) — Isiah Thomas sat in his new gym for an hour, at one point turning his gaze toward the Florida International players he'll now coach.

"There'll be a lot of ups," Thomas said, almost in a cautionary tone. "There'll be a lot of downs."

He's experienced plenty of both, of course.

Without the ups, FIU wouldn't have wanted Thomas.

Without the downs, Thomas wouldn't have needed FIU.

And so begins a surprising basketball marriage that got under way Wednesday when Thomas was introduced as FIU's new coach, three days shy of the 1-year anniversary of his firing as coach of the New York Knicks. Thomas will not accept a salary in his first season, instead donating that money back to FIU, and will earn somewhere around $275,000 in the final four years of his deal.

That doesn't count the $12 million or so the Knicks will continue paying him over the next two years.

Instead, he'll have a chance to rebuild his tarnished Hall of Fame image.

Thomas wants to move past the problems that marred his tenure with the Knicks, such as being the central figure in a sexual harassment lawsuit and, according to authorities, being found unconscious in his New York-area home last fall after someone at the residence called 911 to report someone overdosed on sleeping pills.

He was asked more than once about those events, never offering specific details on either.

Instead, he said few people in the sports and entertainment world stay on the mountaintop for long, even citing Prince and Michael Jackson as examples.

"When you rise all the way to the top of your profession, no matter who you are, the journey to the top is great," Thomas said. "And then you've got to come down."

So he came down to FIU and a program that went 13-20 this past season, has lost 20 games in three of its last four years, and made its lone appearance in the NCAA tournament 14 years ago. There's 42 banners swaying in FIU's gymnasium and only two have anything to do with men's basketball.

"I like taking something from the bottom and trying to build it to the top," Thomas said. "There's a lot of risk in that and there is a lot of reward in that."

Gonzaga's Daye to pursue NBA draft

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Gonzaga forward Austin Daye will make himself available for the NBA draft, but will not hire an agent and thus leave open his option of returning to the Bulldogs.

Daye averaged 12.7 points and 6.8 rebounds as a sophomore.

He is the son of former NBA player Darren Daye.

"Basically I want to test the waters to see what my future might entail," Daye said in a news release. "I definitely had to sit down and talk to my family about my decision. If a great opportunity presents itself, I might have to lead that path."

Daye's departure would be a big blow for Gonzaga (28-6), which is coming off a round of 16 appearance in the NCAA tournament. The Zags are already losing seniors Josh Heytvelt, Jeremy Pargo and Micah Downs. Daye was the second-leading returning scorer, after Matt Bouldin. Steven Gray is the only other returning player with significant starting experience.

Pargo said he would test the NBA road after his junior year, but decided to remain with the Zags after it appeared he would not be a high draft choice.

Daye is 6 feet 11 and 200 pounds. He averaged 10.5 points as a freshman, playing in every game.

after a stellar playing career with the Detroit Pistons, coached the Indiana Pacers for three seasons, making the playoffs each time. He had two losing seasons in New York, and his career record in the NBA is 187-223.

"I've had three successful seasons and two losing seasons," Thomas said. "So I would say that I'm up"

Rangers open playoffs with win over Capitals

WASHINGTON — With the score tied in the third period, the New York Rangers did what they do best — kill off a power play. Then Markus Naslund popped out of the penalty box and set up the winning goal.

Naslund fed Brandon Dubinsky, who made a move that left defenseman Jeff Schultz sprawled on the ice. Dubinsky then beat goalie Jose Theodore inside the near post with 8:17 remaining, lifting the Rangers to a 4-3 victory over Alex Ovechkin and the Washington Capitals in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference series.

Scott Gomez had a goal and two assists, Nik Antropov and Naslund each had a goal and an assist, and Henrik Lundqvist made 32 saves for the seventh-seeded Rangers.

Tomas Fleischmann, Viktor Kozlov and Alexander Semin scored, Ovechkin had a pair of assists, and Jose Theodore made 17 saves for Washington.

Game 2 is Saturday in Washington.

PENGUINS 4, FLYERS 1

PITTSBURGH — Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin each had a goal and an assist, and Pittsburgh shut down frustrated Philadelphia's fleet of scorers.

Penguins goalie Marc-Andre Fleury, idle for long stretches in the first two periods as his teammates controlled play at the other end, made 26 saves to help the Penguins win their fourth consecutive conference playoff series opener.

Tyler Kennedy and Mark Eaton also scored for the Penguins, who beat the Flyers in five games last year in the Eastern Conference finals. Simon Gagne scored late in the third period for Philadelphia.

Game 2 is Friday night in Pittsburgh.

DEVILS 4, HURRICANES 1

NEWARK, N.J. — Martin Brodeur made 18 saves, and Zach Parise and Jamie Langenbrunner each had a goal and an assist for New Jersey.

Defenseman Mike Mottau scored in the first period, Parise and Patrik Elias added goals in the second period, and Langenbrunner scored in the third.

Martin Brodeur, who set the regular-season record for NHL career wins last month, came within 11 minutes of tying Patrick Roy's record for career playoff shutouts at 23 before Ray Whitney scored on a rebound.

Game 2 is Friday night in New Jersey.

clear lacquer to protect the wood. In all, they're responsible for 22,000 square feet for just the gym. They'll also install the stage floor in the auditorium. In all, the project was estimated for approximately $210,800, which is part of the $49.7 million voter-approved bond.

Officials chose a simple style for the basketball boundaries and decorations. Rather than having a large Riverhawk logo at midcourt, the bird head mascot will feature near the free-throw line extended on each end of the court. Of course, cardinal red will be the prevailing color for boundaries, such as the two-foot baseline. The gym should be complete with wall pads and bleachers by late June to early July. Then crews can turn to completing the locker rooms and changing areas, the wrestling room, weight room, cardio room and trainer's room.

Other structures

Outside, two buildings are rising near the football field. One is a storage area for mowers and other athletic equipment such as football sleds and tackling dummies and the other is the concession stand and restroom area. Another smaller building also housing restrooms is going up near the baseball and softball fields.

Lights are up at the football, baseball and softball fields, with the exception of the one set of football lights that will be mounted on the coming AT&T cell tower. The school district saved more than $4,500 by not installing another pole behind where the home bleachers will set, plus it will receive $300 per month in a lease agreement for hosting the tower on school property, according to Thornsberry. All bleacher work will be finished in later months.

The track surrounding the football field and the tennis courts are awaiting the rubberized finish. Atlas Track of Oregon is schedule to perform the work for approximately $78,500, which includes the material and striping for seven tennis courts and the eight-lane track.

Administrators aim for some facilities to be ready to use during the latter half of summer break.

and have every opportunity to play, just like all the other players. It just depends on my effort and my attitude," Lammers said. "I think it's great to be in-state, it's close to home and has the degree I want."

The Idaho State athletic department could not comment on Lammers' decision due to NCAA rules, as he is not attending the school on an athletic scholarship.

Lammers turned down a scholarship offer from NCAA Division II outfit Texas A&M-Commerce, electing instead to attend a school that has his desired degree program — civil engineering. He also considered offers from lower-division schools, including Pacific Lutheran University (Wash.).

In two years as a starting quarterback at Jerome, Lammers passed for more than 5,000 yards and threw 45 touchdowns, both Jerome school records. Lammers completed 63.5 percent of his passes during that stretch — normally considered a target point for passers, the percentage was impressive considering the amount of passes thrown in Jerome's offense.

He was selected as a first-team All Great Basin Conference West and Class 4A first-team All-State quarterback this season as he led Jerome to the state quarterfinals before breaking his arm in a 28-21 win at Nampa.

The Bengals may not run a no-huddle, shotgun-spread offense, but Krumm clearly believes that Lammers can contribute at Idaho State, even if it's not right away.

that I can come in and compete right away, but it really felt like a home away from home," Retmier said. "That's a big thing coming from Twin Falls, Idaho, all the way to Texas."

The Bears are currently ranked third in the nation in equestrian and will host the national championships starting today. They have roughly 30 competitors gunning for spots in each competition lineup, Retmier said, but she didn't have any concern about her ability to compete.

And with her credentials, she shouldn't have to worry.

"I'm very excited, and a little nervous too. I'm holding myself to a high expectation that I'm going to come in and compete right away," said Retmier, who can boast Canadian Appaloosa and World Junior Appaloosa championships experience on her resume.

There's also a hidden benefit for Retmier, who teamed a heavy equestrian workload with basketball and volleyball commitments to Twin Falls High.

"Sometimes with equestrian ... it's an individual sport and you go to competing as a team in college. Some girls have trouble adjusting with that, but I've been working with other girls for a long time (in basketball and softball)," Retmier said.

While Retmier's signing is certainly another feather in Fuller's cap — his stable is nationally renowned in equestrian circles — the Twin Falls trainer is already anticipating the things he knows Retmier is capable of doing at the collegiate level.

Even if she's stepping into one of the most talented equestrian lineups in the nation.

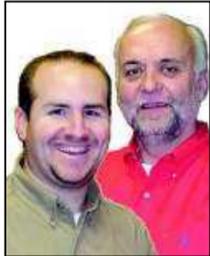

"The coaches at Baylor said that she's one of the top freshmen they're looking at to come in and compete right away," Fuller said of Retmier. "It's a huge step for her to be competing at the college level. I'm so proud of all the things she's accomplished, and I'm looking forward to the things she's still yet to accomplish."

NOTICE OF HEARING ON NAME CHANGE
Case No.: CV-2009-0000164

A Petition to change the name of Zachary Tate Jones, born June 3, 1998 in Idaho Falls, Idaho residing at 1674 E 3000 S Wendell, Idaho 83355, has been filed in Gooding County District Court, Idaho. The name will change to Tate Bryson Zampedri, because: he has not had contact with his father for approximately 11 years. Tate has already started going by Tate Zampedri. It would be much easier if he could have the name legally.

The child's father is living and his address is Bingham County Jail Pocatello, Idaho 83402.

A hearing on the petition is scheduled for 2:00 o'clock PM on May 13, 2009, at the County Courthouse. Objections may be filed by any person who can show the court a good reason against the name change.

Pay, when due and before delinquency, the entire balance of principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note. The original loan amount was $222,300.00 together with interest thereon at a variable rate, initially 9.000% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated August 24, 2006. The terms of the Deed of Trust were modified by a Modification of Deed of Trust recorded April 5, 2007 as Instrument No. 2007-007822 and further modified by a Modification of Deed of Trust recorded June 1, 2007 as Instrument No. 2007-013262 and further modified by a Modification of Deed of Trust recorded November 30, 2007 as Instrument No. 2007-028775. The loan matured on August 24, 2008 and is now in default. The principal balance as of November 14, 2008 is $222,271.99 together with accrued and accruing interest thereon. The per diem is $54,657.04. In addition to the above, there is also due any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.

The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $222,271.99, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGES TO WATER RIGHTS

Notice is hereby given that several applications have been filed with the Idaho Department of Water Resources concerning water rights within Minidoka County, Cassia County, Jerome County and Gooding County. *Transfer No. 75364 filed by ADTD FARMS LLC, 246 E 300 S; BURLEY ID 83318 proposes to dry up land outside of pivot sprinklers so new pivots can be installed on another farm about 2 miles south of the present place of use. The new pivots will use waste water from the nearby Ida-Gold Farms dairy. An existing irrigation well will also provide water for the new pivots; no new wells will be drilled. The pivots will be located about 11 miles north and 1 mile east of Malta. *Transfer No. 74314 filed by BIG SKY DAIRY, PO BOX 407; JEROME ID 83338 proposes to tie several existing farms and 6 existing wells together in a common irrigation system. No new wells will be drilled. The property is located about 5-6 miles south and from 1 1/2 miles west to 1 1/2 miles east of Burley Butte. *Transfer No. 75332 filed by CORY S. THAIN, PO BOX 1024; BURLEY ID 83318 proposes moving a 43 acre (0.61 cfs & 172 afa) portion of a groundwater right from pivot corners on a farm located approximately 14.0 - 15.0 miles north and 2.5 - 3.0 miles east of Rupert to a farm located approximately 6.5 - 6.75 miles north and 5.3 - 6.0 miles east of Rupert. An existing well located approximately 0.25 mile north of the farm located approximately 6.5 - 6.75 miles north and 5.3 - 6.0 miles east of Rupert will serve as the point of diversion for the transferred portion of the right. *Transfer No. 75334 filed by GREG S. THAIN, 580 E 700 N; RUPERT ID 83350 proposes moving a 43 acre (0.86 cfs & 172 afa) portion of a groundwater right from a farm located approximately 6.5 - 6.75 miles north and 5.3 - 6.0 miles east of Rupert to pivot corners on a farm located approximately 14.0 - 15.0 miles north and 2.5 - 3.0 miles east of Rupert. The transfer also proposes modifying the recorded place of use for a 260 acre (3.71 cfs and 1040 afa) portion of a groundwater right currently appurtenant to the farm located approximately 14.0 - 15.0 miles north and 2.5 - 3.0 miles east of Rupert to reflect acres irrigated by two pivot sprinkler systems. An existing well on the farm located approximately 14.0 - 15.0 miles north and 2.5 - 3.0 miles east of Rupert will serve as the point of diversion for the transferred portion of the rights. *Transfer No. 75438 filed by WEBB BROTHERS LAND & LIVESTOCK LLC, 22 N YALE RD; DECLO ID 83323 proposes to move a 40 acre portion of two groundwater rights from a farm located approximately 8.2 to 9.2 miles east and 5.8 to 6.3 miles south of the Interstate 84 and 86 junction, to two separate 20 acre pivots. One 20 acre pivot is located approximately 13.2 to 13.4 miles east and 3.5 to 3.8 miles south of the Interstate 84 and 86 junction. The other 20 acre pivot is located approximately 13.5 to 13.7 miles east and 6.1 to 6.3 miles south of the Interstate 84 and 86 junction. The application proposes to divert the water (0.78 cfs) for the two new pivots from a system of five interconnected existing wells located approximately five miles to the east of the currently authorized diversion location. *Transfer No. 75439 filed by GARNER LAND LLC, 22 NORTH YALE; DECLO ID 83323 proposes to move a 36 acre portion of two groundwater rights from a farm located approximately 8.2 to 9.2 miles east and 5.8 to 6.3 miles south of the Interstate 84 and 86 junction to a farm located approximately 11.5 to 11.7 miles east and 5.6 to 5.8 miles south of the Interstate 84 and 86 junction. The application proposes to divert the water (0.71 cfs) from two existing wells located approximately three miles to the east of the currently authorized diversion location. *Transfer No. 75339 filed by A & B IRRIGATION DISTRICT, PO BOX 675; RUPERT ID 83350-0675 proposes adding seven new wells to be drilled within the A & B Irrigation District system. Currently 12 water rights allow for the diversion of up to 1100.0 cfs from 188 wells located in Jerome and Minidoka Counties for the irrigation of up to 66,686.2 acres within the system. The seven new wells will be located approximately 14.25 miles west and 4.1 miles north of Rupert, approximately 12.15 miles west and 2.25 miles north of Rupert, approximately 12.15 miles west and 3.25 miles north of Rupert, approximately 2.0 miles west and 5.75 miles north of Rupert, approximately 0.8 miles west and 6.35 miles north of Rupert, approximately 0.8 miles west and 7.25 miles north of Rupert, and approximately 3.25 miles east and 7.85 miles north of Rupert. The seven new wells are being added to allow for the diversion of water from any of 195 authorized points of diversion to maintain the overall production capacity of the A & B Irrigation District system. *Transfer No. 73548 filed by PETE & JANE REITSMA LIVING TRUST, 3453 S 1950 E; WENDELL ID 83355 proposes to dry up nearby irrigated land to provide water for a dairy expansion. It also ties 3 existing wells together, and ties the existing dairy and a small feedlot together under a common water system. No new wells will be drilled. The dairy is located 5 miles south and 1/2 mile west of the Wendell city center. For specific details regarding an application, please contact IDWR Southern Regional Office at 208-736-3033 or visit the website for the Department at <http://www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFiling.asp> Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Sec 42-222, Idaho Code. Protests against approval must be filed with IDWR, Southern Region, 1341 Fillmore St.-Suite 200; Twin Falls, ID 83301 with a protest fee of $25.00 for each application on or before May 4, 2009. Children under the age of eighteen.

THE STATE OF IDAHO SENDS GREETINGS TO:
CHAD MEYER
403 Orchard Dr.
Twin Falls, Idaho 83301

YOU ARE NOTIFIED THAT:

An Order Expanding Juvenile Corrections Act, a copy of which is attached, has been filed in the above-entitled matter in the Magistrate's Division of the District Court of Twin Falls County, Idaho, by the Prosecuting Attorney, alleging that the above-named child comes within the Court's jurisdiction under the Child Protective Act.

You are hereby directed to appear personally for a Review Hearing at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, 425 Shoshone Street, Twin Falls, Idaho, on May 28, 2009 at 9:30 AM.

You are notified that service of the attached Order Expanding Juvenile Corrections Act upon you, as the parent(s), guardian, or custodian of the children, confers personal jurisdiction of the court upon you and subjects you to the provisions of the Child Protective Act.

You are notified that if you fail to appear without reasonable cause, the Court may proceed in your absence or you may be proceeded against for contempt of Court.

You are notified that the parent(s), guardian, or a custodian may be financially liable for the support and/or treatment of the children.

You are further notified that the child and parent(s), guardian, or custodian have the right to be represented by an attorney of your choosing, or if financially unable to pay, have the right to have an attorney appointed by the court to represent the parent (s), guardian, or custodian at county expense. If you request to have an attorney appointed at county expense, you must appear before the date of the hearing given above, at which time the Court shall consider appointment of an attorney for the children and inquire whether the parent(s), guardian, or custodian require the separate appointment of an attorney.

You are further notified that there shall be a rebuttable presumption that if a child is placed in the custody of the IDHW and was also placed in out of the home care for a period not less than fifteen (15) out of the last twenty-two (22) months from the date of Adjudication, the IDHW shall initiate a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights. This presumption may be rebutted by a finding of the court that the filing of a Petition for Termination of Parental Rights would not be in the best interest of the child and their family, or that the child is placed permanently with a relative.

WITNESS MY HAND AND SEAL of said Magistrate Court this 10th day of April, 2009.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGE TO WATER RIGHTS

Notice is hereby given that seven (7) Applications for Transfer have been filed with the Idaho Department of Water Resources for changes to water rights within Southern and Eastern Idaho. The following three applications (3) involve water rights located within Cassia County and Jerome County. Application No. 74396 was filed by WENDY STOKER, LAVEL STOKER, BRENT STOKER, and MARLA STOKER, 707 E 500 S; BURLEY ID 83318. Transfer application proposes changing the place of use and points of diversion for two groundwater rights currently used to irrigate a farm located approximately 4.0 mi. north and 11 mi. east of the city Declo. Transfer proposes to dry up 120 acres at the current place of use to be used at a farm located approximately 2.1 mi. to 5.5 mi. south and 0.75 mi. east to 2.0 mi west of the city of Declo. Application proposes to use nine existing wells at the farm, found approximately at the following locations from the city of Declo: 2.2 mi. S & 0.1 mi. E, 2.2 mi. S & 0.3 mi. E, 3.2 mi. S & 0.3 mi. E, 3.0 mi. S & 0.8 mi. W, 4.1 mi. S & 1.0 mi. W (three wells), 5.1 mi. S & 1.7 mi. W, and 3.6 mi. S. Upon approval of this transfer, these rights will bring an additional 1.36 cfs, 440.8 AFA, and 120 acres of irrigation to the existing rights at the farm for a total of 28.4 cfs, 8099.2 AFA, and 2034.6 acres of irrigation. Application No. 74719 was also filed by WENDY STOKER, LAVEL STOKER, BRENT STOKER, and MARLA STOKER, 707 E 500 S; BURLEY ID 83318. Transfer application proposes changing the place of use, points of diversion, period of use, and nature of use for groundwater rights currently used to irrigate a farm located approximately 4.0 mi. north and 11 mi. east of the city Declo. Transfer proposes to dry up 124.6 acres at the farm to be used year round for stockwater and commercial purposes at an existing dairy located approximately 4.5 mi. south and 1.2 mi. west of the city of Declo. Application proposes to use three existing wells at the dairy, located approximately 4.5 mi. south & 1.2 mi. west (two wells) and 4.6 mi south & 1.0 mi. west from the city of Declo. Upon approval of this transfer, these Rights will bring an additional 1.41 cfs and 370 AFA for a total of 3.55 cfs and 765.9 AFA, when combined with other rights at the facility. Application No. 74781 was filed by ALLIANCE LAND & LIVESTOCK LLC, 707 E 500 S; BURLEY ID 83318. Transfer application proposes moving water rights from three different farms to a farm and CAFO located approximately 3.1 to 5.0 miles south and 4.0 to 8.0 miles west of the center of Burley (the intersection of Overland and Main). The transfer proposes converting a 45.5 acre portion (0.51 cfs) of two irrigation rights currently appurtenant to a farm located approximately 3.0 miles north and 20.0 miles east of the center of Burley to stock water and commercial use associated with the CAFO facility located southwest of Burley mentioned above. The application also proposes to transfer a 0.37 cfs and 28.1 acre portion of four ground water irrigation rights from a farm located approximately 11.5 miles north and 7.5 miles west of the center of Burley to the farm located southwest of Burley mentioned above for additional irrigation use. The application also proposes to transfer a 0.24 cfs and 11.9 acre portion of a ground water irrigation right from a farm located approximately 6.2 miles north and 13.8 miles west of the center of Burley to the farm located southwest of Burley mentioned above for additional irrigation use. The application also proposes to modify existing ground water rights that allow for the diversion of 30.11cfs and 8678.5afa at the farm and CAFO located approximately 3.1 to 5.0 miles south and 4.0 to 8.0 miles west of the center of Burley by adding additional authorized points of diversion (wells) and modifying their authorized place(s) of use. Upon approval of this transfer, 11 interconnected wells (10 existing wells and one new well to be drilled) on the existing farm and CAFO located southwest of the center of Burley will be used to divert up to 31.23 cfs and 8973.5 af of water to be used in the CAFO and used to irrigate up to 2283.4 acres within a 3088.3 acre permissible place of use.The following transfers, 74093, 74094, 74095, 74096, 74396, 74719 and 74781, are being processed as a group because they are related by ESPA ground water model analysis. The transfers are being advertised simultaneously in their respective counties. In the event that any one transfer is protested, then final administrative action on the group of transfers will be delayed until a decision can be issued for each transfer. To see a full description of these rights and proposed transfers, please see: www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearchWRFiling.asp Protests must be submitted based on the criteria of Sec 42-222, Idaho Code. Any Protest against approval of Application Nos. 74396, 74719 or 74781 must be filed with IDWR, Southern Region, 1341 Fillmore St., Suite 200, Twin Falls, ID 83301 with a protest fee of $25.00 for each application on or before April 27, 2009. The protestant must also send a copy of the protest to the applicant.

PUBLIC COMMENTS SOUGHT ON LOW-INCOME WEATHERIZATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

The State of Idaho will accept public comment on its American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funding plan for the U.S. Department of Energy's Low-income Weatherization Assistance Program. The ARRA State Plan is available for review at Community Action Partnership Association of Idaho, located at 5400 W. Franklin Rd., Suite G in Boise, Idaho. A public hearing on the plan will be held from 9:00-12:00 pm on Wednesday April 22, 2009 in Boise at El Ada Community Action Partnership, 2250 Vista, Boise, Idaho.

The Weatherization Assistance Program assists low-income families through the installation of weatherization measures in their homes. The measures include insulation, air sealing, and heating systems improvements that enhance the energy efficiency of the homes. Program services help eligible families reduce their heating costs, promoting the health and safety of the family and conserving energy resources. Summary of changes to the 2009 State Plan:

- Increase in the average allowable weatherization expenditure per unit as directed by DOE
- Development of Ramp Up plan to increase weatherization production statewide
- Development of standardized processes for program delivery and training
- Utilization of ARRA funds over a two year period

Public comments for written testimony on the State Plan will be accepted from April 12, 2009- April 22, 2009. Send or deliver comments to:

SUMMONS

Petitioner,

MARIA MINERVA,

Respondent.

NOTICE: YOU HAVE BEEN SUED BY THE ABOVE-NAMED PETITIONER. THE COURT MAY ENTER JUDGMENT AGAINST YOU WITHOUT FURTHER NOTICE UNLESS YOU RESPOND WITHIN 20 DAYS. READ THE INFORMATION BELOW.

TO: MARIA MINERVA, Respondent:

You are hereby notified that in order to defend this lawsuit, an appropriate written response must be filed with the above designated Court within 20 days after service of this Summons on you. If you fail to so respond, the Court may enter judgment against you as deemed by the petitioner in the Petition. A copy of the Petition is served with this Summons. If you wish to seek the advice or representation by an attorney in this matter, you should do so promptly so that your written response, if any, may be filed in time and other legal rights protected.

An appropriate written response requires compliance with Rule 10(a)(1) and other Idaho rules of Civil Procedure and shall also include:

1. The title and number of this case.
2. If your response is an Answer to the Petition and other defenses you may claim.
3. Your signature, mailing address, and telephone number, or the signature, mailing address and telephone number of your attorney.
4. Proof of mailing or delivery of a copy of your response to petitioner's attorney, as designated above.

To determine whether you must pay a filing fee with your response, contact the Clerk of the above-named Court.

DATED This 27th day of February, 2009.

Resolution 1758
Fair Housing Resolution (Population of 5,000 and Up)

LET IT BE KNOWN TO ALL PERSONS OF the City of Twin Falls that discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, gender or national origin in the sale, rental, leasing or financing of housing or land to be used for construction of housing or in the provision of brokerage services is prohibited by Title VIII of the 1968 Civil Rights Act (Federal Fair Housing Law).

It is the policy of the City of Twin Falls to encourage equal opportunity in housing for all persons regardless of race, color, religion, gender or national origin. The Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 expands coverage to include disabled persons and families with children. Therefore, the City does hereby pass the following Resolution.

BE IT RESOLVED that within the available resources the City will assist all persons who feel they have been discriminated against because of race, color, religion, gender, national origin, disability or familial status to seek equity under federal and state laws by filing a complaint with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Office of Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity, Compliance Division.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the City shall publicize this Resolution and through this publicity shall encourage owners of real estate, developers, and builders to become aware of their respective responsibilities and rights under the Federal Fair Housing Law and amendments and any applicable state or local laws or ordinances.

SAID PROGRAM will at a minimum include: 1) publicizing this policy and other applicable fair housing information through local media and community contacts; 2) distributing posters and flyers to inform the public of their respective responsibilities and rights concerning equal opportunity in housing; and 3) preparing of an analysis of impediments to fair housing choice and actions to mitigate such impediments.

EFFECTIVE DATE

This Resolution shall take effect September 7, 2004.

This Resolution was reaffirmed on April 6, 2009.

Sister pays the price for her brother-in-law's deception

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago, my brother-in-law sent my sister "Rita" and me on an all-expense-paid weekend trip to Canada. He asked me to tell Rita that I had "won" it for outstanding performance at my job and wanted her to accompany me.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

To make a long story short, it turned out he did it in order to cheat on his sister. Because we had problems with the arrangements he had made, Rita and I had to return a day early. When she opened her front door and walked in, she caught her husband red-handed.

Because you were part of the deception, she has displaced the anger she should be aiming at her husband and has directed it at you because it is "safer."

we are family!" I am a younger member of this family who occasionally spends holidays with friends or traveling. When I do, I am severely chastised by these three relatives, who say I have "no right" to skip family gatherings. If they were nicer people, I would want to spend more time with them. I want to do the right thing, but what do people who have the same ancestry "owe" each other when there is no connection of friendship or goodwill?

Ever since that unfortunate incident, Rita has cut off our entire family. She acts as though WE cheated on her, and remains married to this despicable man even though he lives with the other woman.

Until she finds the strength and courage to accept that her marriage is over, her behavior will probably continue. I'm advising you to go on with your life until she is ready to change hers.

— RELATED IN NAME ONLY IN SAN JOSE, CALIF.

I don't understand why my sister has pushed away all of the people who love her while maintaining a relationship with a man who cheats on her. I don't know what to do. Any advice?

DEAR ABBY: Most of my extended family are pleasant and enjoy each other's company when we meet at family gatherings several times a year. But three of them (all from the same side of the family) are just plain rude. Every event becomes an uncomfortable exercise in bracing oneself for the verbal attacks that come from these critical, judgmental people.

DEAR RELATED: I know of no rule of etiquette that states you are compelled to attend every family event. Good manners dictate that you treat those around you courteously. But that does not mean that you must engage in anything more than casual, superficial chit-chat with those who are critical, judgmental and rude.

— MISSING MY SISTER
DEAR MISSING: Your sister may feel that she deserves the treatment she's getting from her husband, or is still hoping that her wandering spouse will return.

We have tried talking about it, but hear the same refrain — "I'm not changing," "Accept me as I am," and, "You have no choice but to put up with me because Because these get-togethers involve extended family, spend the majority of your time with the relatives who make you feel welcome, supported and loved. P.S. One thing you do NOT owe these folks is an explanation regarding your absence when you choose to avoid them.

IF APRIL 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your most romantic notions could be fulfilled this year, especially this spring when people think you are bit more attractive than you really are and new friendships or a luxurious vacation may widen your horizons. The next few months are ideal for travel, study and making changes that will improve your future. In October make no crucial changes, investments or decisions — but be sure to remain vigilant about your responsibilities. At the same time, you may find that the reward for your hard work is there for the taking. If you listen to wise advice you can apply for a new job, make a career change, or make a smart business choice.

please someone, you might lose your balance and not show your best side.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stir things up. A brash, in-your-face approach could wake up and invigorate people you meet through business or work that are suffering from lethargy. This is a good time to show off your know-how.

Someone's promises may be merely a carrot. Your tendency to exaggerate needs and desires could upset the very people you wish to impress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Too much of a good thing is just that. Under these stars, unwise spending sprees could put a dent in your wallet. Don't sign contracts or make a promise as you might bite off much more than you can chew.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The tendency to pursue peace at any price can cost believability. Someone may promise anything in order to avoid a confrontation. Don't rush into a compromise if the facts are not there to back it up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The thing you really want is right under your nose. Certain minor events and comments may lead you to believe there is something greener on the other side of the fence. Be content with what you have.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You might receive your marching orders. The problem is that they are framed in such a complimentary way that you don't realize just what has happened. Gifts might have an unacceptable price tag.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You don't need to dash

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Walk, don't run. Family matters seem to take up more than their fair share of your time and energy, so you may want to settle something quickly. You should know all the facts before jumping to conclusions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you look too closely at something, you may only see the pores or dots. However, when it comes to spending money you might ignore the finer details and be swept along in enthusiasms.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sugar is sweet and so are you. The problem is that you might overindulge your sweet tooth today. If you bend over backward to VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take things one step at a time if you want to achieve something enduring. Suffer through a brief period of boredom for your own good. Indulging in a taste for flings, fun or fads could cause regrets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can afford to let your hair down, but can't afford to loosen the grip on your credit card. You might yearn to own very old or very new things, but will waste money if you yield to impulses.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will feel invigorated if you try something new or take a break from routines.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The tendency to pursue peace at any price can cost believability. Someone may promise anything in order to avoid a confrontation. Don't rush into a compromise if the facts are not there to back it up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will feel invigorated if you try something new or take a break from routines. Take advantage of this positive energy by being a dynamic leader at work or play. You're more popular than usual.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt; Nothing's so hard but search will find it out." — Robert Herrick

A rubber bridge player at the Dyspeptics Club never really knows what he is letting himself in for. Yet he can always rely on South to hold far more than his share of the high cards, though South will claim that he doesn't but simply plays them better.

In today's deal North was an outsider. With a difficult call at his third turn, he suggested that he had three-card spade support, and that was enough to get South into the stratosphere via Blackwood.

On the lead of the heart queen, South won in hand, unblocked the club ace, then took the spade ace and king. Next, he accurately cashed the club king, pitching a heart, and ruffed a club, preparing to clear the trumps and claim the rest. However, West overruffed and, after prolonged thought, shifted to a diamond. South had no choice but to run this to his hand; when his diamond queen won, he drew trumps and took the balance.

While North was congratulating his partner, West made the mistake of saying there was nothing he could have done to set the slam. That gave East the chance to tell him that while there was nothing HE could have done, anyone who understood bridge would have prevailed on defense. Do you see why?

When in with his trump trick, West must shift to the diamond KING. This dislodges dummy's entry, and eventually the defenders collect a diamond or trump trick whatever South does.

ANSWER: It is easy to decide you have a bad hand — but remember that partner knew that you were weak when he invited game. In that context you have a GREAT hand. Bid four hearts, confident that you have something to spare.
