Local volunteers seek grouse for Fish & Game

ROGERSON — Sometime before 6 a.m., Sarah Harris and Pat Weber peered into the darkness for the turn that would take them to their first sage-grouse lek.

"I think we passed it," Harris said, pulling out her GPS unit. A quick consultation showed the pair's sport utility vehicle was still three miles away from the site. "Go ahead, you're fine," she told Weber.

"Normally, I'm just a passenger," Weber explained, speeding up again.

The two, members of the local Audubon Society, don't usually make time on their Sundays for a drive down Magic Hot Springs Road. But this spring, Weber and Harris are two of roughly 25 volunteers helping the Idaho Department of Fish and Game count how many sage grouse call the Magic Valley home.

The grouse are easiest to find at their breeding sites, called leks, which are flat, clear areas where males strut their stuff and hope females notice them. Accurate data is vital. The birds, harmed by disease, fire and other hazards, are being considered for listing as endangered by the federal government, and a decision is expected this year.

This year is the third Fish and Game has dispatched volunteers to check on leks biologists haven't been able to visit for some time. They have a roughly two-hour window around dawn to spot the males — and even then, it can be hard to find them.

About an hour before sunrise, Harris and Weber stopped at their first lek, only to find a RV parked nearby. Crossing the South Fork of Deep Creek, two more leks proved no more fruitful, though they provided the only grouse sighting of the morning as one flew away over a ridge.

A fourth and final lek, high atop a bench, was empty, save for some grouse feces and a pile of feathers from one that presumably fell victim to a predator.

"Nada, nada, nada," Weber repeated each time.

Legislature stuck in neutral

Otter, lawmakers at impasse; session will go into next week

By Jared S. Hopkins

BOISE — Call it stuck in neutral, with half the car hanging off a cliff.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's decision to veto 25 bills Tuesday to pressure legislators into approving new transportation funding sent a jolt through the House of Representatives.

It just hasn't been the one he was aiming for.

"I would say that some, not all, but some members have become more entrenched," House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, said.

Some GOP House members opposed to fee and tax hikes during an economic downturn have dug their heels in even deeper. The defining issue of the 2009 Legislature has stretched it into the second-longest ever, at 102 days today, and lawmakers said Wednesday it will seep into next week.

CSI touts environmental programs at Twin Falls campus

Jette Morache remembers the first Earth Day in 1970.

As a junior at Borah High School in Boise, she walked to school to celebrate. Thirty-nine years later, Morache was celebrating Earth Day once again on Wednesday, this time at the College of Southern Idaho as an English professor.

She was one of about 40 people who went on an Earth Day tour of the campus that highlighted envi-

A large group led by Professor Ross Spackman got an Earth Day tour of the aspects of the college's environmental preservation efforts, including the use of geothermal wells, compost piles by the community gardens and the 14-year-old wetlands project. The project reduces sediment and pollution that otherwise would be deposited in the Snake River via the Perrine Coulee.

Nuke plant hearing stalled on comment process

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

MOUNTAIN HOME — Roughly 100 people squeezed into Mountain Home Junior High School Wednesday evening as the Elmore County Commission held a public hearing on a proposal to rezone nearly 1,500 acres of farmland for a nuclear power plant.

Commissioners announced at the start of Wednes-

"The request is about zoning, not a person."

— Commission Chairman Larry Rose to AEHI presenter Mark Pecchenino as the latter described AEHI CEO Don Gillispie's background day's meeting they would not make a decision on the rezone that night. No indication of when a decision might be made was given.

The county's planning and zoning commission voted 4-2 in November not to endorse the rezone request from Alternate Energy Holdings Inc.

On Wednesday, the greatest challenge for everyone, including county officials, seemed to be working within the rules set for the hearing. Commissioners and facilitator Jerry Mason urged people to stick to discussion of zoning and avoid debate on nuclear power. They interrupted a number of times to state people were veering off topic, starting with the applicants themselves.

"The request is about zoning, not a person," Commission Chairman Larry Rose told AEHI presenter Mark Pecchenino as

● Step back in time to learn about the Battle of Gettysburg through a class offered by the College of Southern Idaho Mini-Cassia enrichment program. Classes will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. April 30 to May 14. The course delves into one of the most important Civil War battles. Instructor Joe Colflesh will include museum-quality replicas and original items from the era. Cost is $30. Information: 678-1400.

noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free.

● Sign up to be a Wood River Trail Ambassador, who are eyes and ears of the Wood River Trail, answering questions, giving directions, assisting with basic bike repairs when possible, reporting emergencies and trail maintenance or safety issues and spreading good will. Grouse

That's not to say the desert was silent. During their hike, the Audubon members spotted buttercups and wild onion, peered at antelope through binoculars and listened to the calls of sparrows, meadowlarks and spotted towhee. For a brief second, they thought they could hear a sage-grouse hen.

It may not be a lush forest, but the dry desert is still alive, they said.

"I think that's what we have to communicate to the general population," Weber said.

Audubon members didn't visit any of the leks last year, Harris said, thwarted by wet weather. Even this year, vehicle access has just barely opened up in some areas, said Fish and Game regional wildlife manager Randy Smith on Tuesday.

"Yesterday, we had to rescue a couple volunteers from the mud," he said, on top of another whose car battery died.

Volunteers still have a couple more weeks to submit their counts, Smith said. But early feedback from conservation officers seems to indicate that grouse numbers will be down for the third year in a row on the north side of the Magic Valley.

Farther south, Weber and Harris may not have found what they sought. But the birds, they learned, hadn't disappeared: Another Audubon team stumbled on a lek just down the road and watched more than 17 fly silently away.

Suit

The bank alleges bank credit agreements were violated by wholesaling cars, millions of dollars went un-repaid to the bank through "selling out of trust," inspections were denied, and limits on older car sales were violated, according to the lawsuit.

In Idaho, the Lathams operated Latham Motors in downtown Twin Falls, which closed in October, and Hertz of Magic Valley, which opened in 2000 under the franchise name RLS Inc.

Frank was a general manager of Hertz of Magic Valley. Reeves was general manager of Latham Motors, owned by RLS Inc., and registered agent of 1-800 Finance Inc., according to court records. Latham Sr.'s lawyer, Richard Greener, of Boise, responded last week to the $6.4 million lawsuit that sent deputies on a recent collection round-up of dozens of vehicles on behalf of the bank.

"Plaintiff is barred from maintaining this action against RLS because plaintiff has failed to dispose of the personal property collateral seized by plaintiff in a commercially reasonable manner," Greener wrote in court records filed April 17 for Latham Sr. "The foregoing repossession of said assets and equipment was unnecessary in light of plaintiff's position with respect to other collateral. As a result of this conduct RLS was required to close Hertz of the Magic Valley."

Latham Sr.'s lawyer says the plaintiffs had already repossessed cars and had sufficient collateral to pay off its obligations to the bank. KeyBank did not need to repossess cars from the Hertz rental vehicle business at Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport, according to Greener. "RLS has been damaged by the destruction of the Hertz rental car business resulting from the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing as afore-alleged, and will pursue its damages at the time of trial."

While Frank recently testified in Twin Falls 5th District Court that cars were sold out-of-trust, he said the bank repossessed cars it shouldn't have that were meant for use in a rental car business.

Judge Randy Stoker recently told KeyBank he wouldn't direct them on how to dispose of the collateral obtained from the defendants, but he warned, "if you liquidate things unreasonably, it'll come back to haunt you."

KeyBank has "failed to act reasonably and fairly with RLS," Greener argues in court records. "(Keybank's) wrongful conduct prevented full performance by RLS of the terms of the parties' agreements."

Lawyers for the other defendants have yet to respond to KeyBank's lawsuit in writing to the court.

Latham Sr., Latham Jr. and Latham Motors Inc. also recently settled a two-year-old lawsuit filed by Lithia Motors in Ada County for $1.47 million.

the House to raise the gas tax, Otter continues to rail for new revenue to reduce the $240 million annual shortfall facing Idaho's roads. He told reporters on Tuesday, "I think the public ought to start calling the Legislature tonight and say, 'Pass those transportation bills and get out of town!'"

Otter's been aided by support in the Senate but can't break through a wall of conservative anti-tax Republicans.

"One bill (vetoed) would've sent a message," said Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome. "Two bills would've sent a message. A bill a day would've sent a message. But this message — the message was lost in the anger."

Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, supported all the road bills until Tuesday and is confident a solution will be reached. Still, he said, it's hard not to hear frustration. "The harder you push, the more resistance you get. That's just life!"

Otter didn't veto any bills Wednesday after stamping down 35 across Monday and Tuesday. He instead met with House members, though not leadership from either chamber.

Most Magic Valley legislators have supported raising fees or taxes for new roads revenue. However, the process is wearing on the members Otter needs to convert.

House leaders considered taking Friday off to let emotions subside but decided against it by the afternoon.

"This seems to me beyond getting a gas tax," Bell said. "It seems to me it's just total frustration and not accepting the fact that we've spoken and spoken and it isn't going to happen this year — that it doesn't appear it's going to happen this year."

While most of the Senate remains aligned with Otter, Moyle said the governor's batch of 25 Tuesday vetoes is costing him Republican votes.

Like Otter's stint, the bulk of single-term Gov. Don Samuelson's record 39 vetoes in 1967 came as Samuelson tried to address a single issue. Then, the debate was centered on the state's court system.

Samuelson called a special session. Among the issues that arose was raising new revenue to fix Idaho's roads.

Otter wasn't aware of Samuelson's tenure and he's not worried about historical precedents, said spokesman Jon Hanian.

"All of those historical facts may be interesting to you guys but he could care less," he said. "This isn't about legacy or trying to set a record. The gyroscope he's using is he's trying to do what's right and what's good for the people of Idaho. All the rest is subtext and hyperbole."

the tour started.

The first stop was at one of two geothermal wells that the campus uses for heat. After the heat is removed, the water is sent into the Perrine Coulee.

The Perrine Coulee is part of a water system that empties into the Snake River, and provides training to students.

The group also saw the wetland system of ponds that helps remove sediment from water entering the coulee. A trash removal system was running in a waterway, with wind and solar energy helping power the conveyor system that removed debris from the water.

"If you've got enough money, you can run as big of a building as you want," Spackman said of the potential of alternative energy.

The groups walked past the community garden site at CSI, pitching their apple cores into the nearby compost pile, also in the spirit of Earth Day.

Leanna Kellogg, a student majoring in environmental science, said she enjoyed seeing parts of the campus that she wasn't aware of.

"I thought it was cool," Kellogg said.

For Morache, Earth Day is a reminder to be motivated and mindful of the planet's resources.

"Overall, it means awareness, being aware, problem-solving and being appreciative," Morache said.

Judge lets lawyer see sealed police report in rape case

Times-News

As the details of an alleged rape outside a Twin Falls bar remain sealed from public view, a lawyer for the accused has gained access to the police affidavit filed in 5th District Court.

Justin Wicklund, 24, is charged with rape and was arrested April 16, hours after the alleged incident unfolded outside Woody's Bar and Grill. Police were called to the hospital, where the woman, 48, was being treated for injuries, Twin Falls Police Capt. Matt Hicks told the Times-News earlier this week.

Judge Howard Smyser sealed the "affidavit in support of warrant for arrest" in the case, containing a description of the allegations, because it "contain(s) highly intimate facts or statements, the publication of which would be highly objectionable to a reasonable person," according to court records.

Prosecutors asked the judge to seal the police affidavit, according to court records.

Smyser on Tuesday decided that Wicklund's lawyer, Joe Rockstahl, of Twin Falls, can get copies of sealed records in the case, according to court records.

Evidence heard in Blaine manslaughter case

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Twin Falls man charged with vehicular manslaughter in the death of Hailey resident Bert Redfern appeared in court on Wednesday for a preliminary hearing.

The state presented more than a dozen witnesses who testified about a series of four crashes Cody Stevens, 29, was allegedly involved in on March 10.

The evidence presented by the prosecutor, said Magistrate Judge Ted Israel, was enough to provide probable cause that Stevens' actions caused Redfern's death. Israel sent the case to district court, requiring Stevens to file a plea when he appears. No date was set for his next appearance.

Testimony on Wednesday spanned seven hours as witnesses described the series of events on a stretch of State Highway 75 between Shoshone and Hailey.

Hours after Stevens allegedly clipped the mirror of an oncoming vehicle and crashed his truck into trees south of Bellevue, he allegedly drove a rental truck into oncoming traffic, causing Redfern lose control of her vehicle before she struck and was killed by a collision with a northbound truck and trailer. On Wednesday, officers testified about Stevens' alleged intoxicated behavior when he was arrested after crashing the rental truck in Hailey. They said Stevens admitted to having taken several prescription drugs.

Defense attorney Douglas Werth argued that the first two crashes were not relevant to the case, and said that Stevens' actions could have been caused by a medical problem. Results from state lab tests of Stevens' blood are pending.

Blaine County Deputy Prosecutor Angela Nelson said the series of events throughout March 10 show that Stevens was grossly negligent.

She also argued that no alternate medical theory of the events was presented, and the judge agreed that it was "more likely than not" that intoxicating substances were a significant cause of the alleged crimes.

Twin Falls group interested in creating new museum

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

A museum that showcases the history of Twin Falls could be in the works.

The Twin Falls Historic Preservation Commission is interested in the possibility of a museum that reflects the community's history, City Councilman Lee Heider said Monday at the Twin Falls City Council meeting. Heider, the liaison between the historic commission and council, said that the commission wanted to get some feedback from council members.

"Twin Falls has a great history," Heider said.

Heider said that the commission is still in the early stages of looking into a possible museum. In an interview, Paul Smith, chairman of the preservation commission, echoed that theme, stressing that no decision has been made.

"It's very, very preliminary," he said.

The next step is to do a feasibility study, he said, adding that the results could take months to complete.

Darrell Buffaloe, a member of the historic preservation commission, said that help will come from the Idaho Museum of Natural History in Pocatello.

It can assist groups starting museums and show them what's needed to start a museum, including how to find funding and preserve and catalogue artifacts, he said.

"It could be a real fun and exciting thing," he said.

City officials praised the idea.

Councilman Don Hall said he likes the idea of a museum that recognizes the history of Twin Falls.

"I think it's a great idea," said Vice Mayor David Johnson. "The devil's in the details."

Pepstat 380® Stops Heartburn Forever

WASHINGTON—Gastrointestinal (GI) problems like acid reflux, heartburn and ulcers may be eliminated with a new type of tablet. Scientists say that GI problems are not the result of excess acid, but the body's inability to deal with it. Pepstat 380 is a patent-pending formula that contains an extract known as DGL that strengthens the body's natural defenses against acid.

Pepstat 380 goes to work immediately on acid while addressing the cause of GI problems. Scientists say the DGL in Pepstat improves the body's protective substances, increases the lifespan of digestive tract cells, and improves blood supply to the area. Articles have appeared in publications like the British medical journal The Lancet showing DGL to be as effective as Zantac® or Tagamet® and also works faster than Prilosec®. Pepstat may make these drugs obsolete because DGL has no side effects.

The problem with acid blockers is that they can interrupt the body's normal digestive process. Pepstat 380 is a natural alternative available without a prescription or call 1-800-339-3301. Now available at:

T.F. man accused of assaulting police

Times-News

A Twin Falls man is accused of aggravated assault on police, after he allegedly charged an officer with a knife and then asked for the lawman to shoot him, according to court records.

Michael C. Jones, 31, appeared in court Wednesday to hear the felony charge against him and a public defender was appointed. Bond was set at $100,000.

Jones lives with his parents, who allegedly told police April 11 that Jones is a "paranoid schizophrenic" who might harm his family or himself, according to court records. "Michael had been carrying around two large knives because he felt that law enforcement had bugged his entire house and personal clothing."

Jones allegedly charged police holding a knife after they went into his room for a welfare check, according to court records.

"I believed that Michael was going to try and harm me with his knife so I drew my service weapon and told him to drop the knife," police wrote in court records. "Michael stopped charging me and backed up several feet."

After the alleged incident with police, Jones was placed on a protective hold for evaluation because of his medical condition, police say.

He has a preliminary hearing set for May 1.

Rotarians hear presentation on mercury issues in fish

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Mercury contamination isn't a new problem anymore in southern Idaho reservoirs.

But, said Justin Hayes, program director for the Idaho Conservation League, it never hurts to remind people about it.

So on Wednesday Hayes told members of the Twin Falls Rotary Club just what is in the fish they catch.

Many southern Idaho waters now carry fish advisories warning that bass, walleye and other species carry unsafe levels of mercury. In 2004, Hayes started investigating Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir, famed for having some of the highest concentrations in the state.

Mercury, he reminded the Rotarians, is a neurotoxin that can cause lasting damage to fetuses, infants and children.

Lacking obvious sources in the water, his investigation turned to the air, centering on mining practices in northern Nevada. At the time, he said, that state had a voluntary mercury-control program that only five of 25 mines participated in. What's more, the state didn't actually monitor emissions as part of the deal.

So ICL did its own testing, Hayes said, recording mercury levels near mines more than 350 times higher than typical "background" measurements of 2 nanograms per cubic meter. Meanwhile, Idaho, Nevada and Utah all issued more fish advisories due to mercury contamination, with Utah even putting out a warning about ducks on the Great Salt Lake.

"We're still figuring out how they'll introduce catch-and-release duck hunting," Hayes joked.

Northern Nevada, Hayes said, has ended up having the highest concentration of mercury emissions in the nation. And though those emissions have been drastically cut — from 20,000 pounds per year in 2000 to 3,000 pounds today — the contamination will linger for years.

Research by the Idaho National Laboratory can now fairly directly tie mercury blown in the wind to the mines, he said. And though Nevada now has a mandatory mercury program, ICL's still not sure regulators are able to stand up to the state's powerful mining lobby.

Testing in 2006 near a mine ICL was told was mercury-free turned up the highest levels yet: 3,100 nanograms per cubic meter.

Just this spring, the Jerritt Canyon Mine 50 miles north of Elko was allowed to resume operations after having part of its equipment shut down last year — eventually leading to a full mine shutdown for financial reasons. The mine's owners have promised Nevada authorities to install new mercury equipment by the end of May, but Hayes questioned why the mine should have even restarted without the equipment installed.

The Rotarians had their own concerns, asking Hayes about global sources of mercury, safe areas to fish and unsafe foods to eat — fish-farm fish, for example, aren't tainted by mercury.

Hayes told them he doesn't have any ulterior motive against the mines. He just wants his kids to be able to eat the fish they catch in southern Idaho.

"That's all I want, and I don't think we should settle for anything less," he said.

Arbor Day Parade to hit T.F. streets

Twin Falls' first Arbor Day Parade will roll through the city's streets at noon Saturday.

The floats will stage and start in the 500 and 600 blocks of Main Avenue East and proceed northwest on Main Avenue. The parade ends at the intersection of Main Avenue North and Dierkes Street North.

The parade route will be closed from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

The Twin Falls Police Department wants the public to be aware of the following guidelines:

- Parents are to watch their children closely and keep them from running into the roadway. In the past, children have been injured running into the roadway to collect candy tossed from floats. Parade participants have been informed that throwing candy from floats is illegal.

- Park vehicles at least two blocks away from the parade's route without blocking driveways to homes and businesses. People needing special assistance accessing the downtown area for the parade should contact police officers and volunteers at intersections.

T.F. canal water should arrive by Saturday

Twin Falls residents who rely on water from the Twin Falls Canal Company for irrigation should have access to that water no later than Saturday, according to Gretchen Scott, assistant to the city manager.

That includes some 3,600 water users hooked up to pressurized irrigation systems in the subdivisions constructed since 1999. It also includes many other home owners throughout the city whose properties have been irrigated with canal water for decades.

Residents who use canal water should remember it is not for drinking by people or animals and should not be used for washing vehicles.

Water board expands recharge projects

The Idaho Water Resource Board and canal companies and irrigation districts along the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer are running pre-irrigation-season projects meant to recharge the aquifer.

Recharge work using the Milner-Gooding Canal began on March 20, using water diverted from Milner Dam. The canal is owned by American Falls Reservoir District No. 2. Projects in other canal systems upstream from American Falls Reservoir could have begun on April 1, but were delayed up to nine days in some systems due to unseasonably cool weather.

The various projects are possible thanks to favorable weather conditions, a good water supply and pre-negotiated agreements with canal owners, the board stated in a press release. The water used comes from the board's 1980 natural-flow right, which the companies are paid to run through their canals.

As of April 13, more than 800 cubic feet per second was being diverted for recharge, and more than 22,440 acre-feet of water had been put into the aquifer.

Gooding district declines emergency declaration

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

A special Tuesday meeting by the Gooding school board of trustees didn't result in the district using newly passed legislation to declare a financial emergency.

HB 252, signed into law by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on April 15, allows districts to negotiate with unions over pay reductions and furloughs if a declaration of financial emergency is made.

Gooding has seen student enrollment drop significantly, in part due to shifting enrollment to the North Valley Academy Charter School, said Superintendent Heather Williams.

"Because of the timelines ... we would have needed to make a declaration with in the next week or two."

— Gooding Superintendent Heather Williams

State funding to the district, expected to be cut at least 3 percent, is almost guaranteed to shrink due to the economic downturn and subsequent revenue decreases in tax coffers.

The meeting was called because if the district wanted to declare such an emergency it had to move swiftly.

"Because of the timelines ... we would have needed to make a declaration with in the next week or two," Williams said.

After careful consideration, trustees chose not to move down that path.

Board Chairman Ray Goodman said the board has a "very good relationship" with the district teachers union and using the provisions to cut salaries under the law may have caused unneeded strife.

The emergency declaration only deals with negotiation areas of salary, benefits and contract days, said Goodman, and he hopes the union and district can come to terms without utilizing the new law.

"We hope our upcoming negotiations go well," Goodman said.

The district has already taken steps to make it through the next year, including a change to a four-day school week and passage of a $325,000 supplemental levy in February, part of which is expected to help make up teacher pay cuts from the state level.

Trustee Lucinda Rogers said she wants to see how those decisions affect the district's bottom line.

"I think with the things we have in place and are moving forward on, we have some other options,"

GOODING TRUSTEES HOLD MEETING

English as a Second Language students and parents within the Gooding School District are invited to a meeting at 6 p.m., Tuesday at Gooding Middle School.

Rogers said.

Gooding may not have declared a financial emergency this year but if the economy doesn't bounce back soon the district and many others may take a closer look at the new law.

Health district approves FY 2010 budget

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Despite a veto from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, the budget planning is continuing for the South Central Public Health District.

Health district state appropriations were among the 25 bills vetoed by Otter Tuesday. Even so, the health district's board on Wednesday approved its budget for fiscal year 2010 with the anticipation that the final dollar amount won't change significantly amid the legislative wrangling.

The fiscal year 2010 budget is $7.03 million, just 2.66 percent less than the current budget of $7.2 million.

Because the health district has revenue from other sources such as contracts and fees, the final difference between the two budgets doesn't reflect how deep the state funding cuts are.

For the next fiscal year, general state funding is estimated at $1.2 million. That's about 9 percent less than this year's general state appropriation of $1.3 million. But before state holdbacks, the appropriation for the current fiscal year was expected to be about $1.42 million.

The health district also will save money by keeping vacant positions open.

The good news is that the health district's budget is balanced, Rene LeBlanc, the district's director said.

Otter chooses showdown, but can he win it?

One way or another, Gov. C.L. ‘Butch’ Otter will come out of this legislative session a different chief executive. Whether it will be as a stronger or a weaker one is an open question.

The Republican vetoed 35 bills this week — four short of Gov. Don Samuelson’s 1967 record — in an effort to force the House of Representatives to approve legislation to raise revenue for highway repairs. In so doing, he alienated most of the House Republican caucus — perhaps permanently.

The fact that the governor is right on this issue may not matter much. If he ultimately has to back down, his shaky influence on the Legislature will dwindle further — just in time for the 2010 primary election. Even a win may be pyrrhic. Politicians have notoriously long memories.

The unanswered question is how this standoff is playing with the voters. Some back the majority view in the House that any gas tax increase this year is too much. But there’s probably a larger plurality of Idahoans annoyed with all parties for spending their money at a $30,000-a-day clip and failing to resolve this issue after 102 days.

This is, after all, a matter that should — and could — have been settled in March after the House started voting down gas-tax increase proposals.

It’s true Otter could have asked what other way to raise highway money the Legislature would go for.

That’s what former Govs. Jim Risch, Phil Batt and Cecil Andrus would have done. None of them made bold gestures without counting the votes first.

Andrus, under whom Otter served as lieutenant governor from 1987 to 1995, was a master of the art of mutual advantage. The Democrat disagreed fundamentally with most of the Republican legislative leaders with whom he worked, but often managed to get his way by giving opponents something they needed.

That particular skill-set seems to have eluded Otter. During his entire political career — from the Idaho House, through the lieutenant governor’s office, through a stint in the GOP-controlled Congress and into the governor’s office — he’s always been in the majority. Simply put, he never learned how to close the deal with strong-minded politicians who have different goals.

Most Idahoans have affection for the governor and his independent, unprepossessing manner. But fewer think he’s been a good governor.

For the state’s sake, we hope Otter and the Legislature can come to a meeting of the minds. Power, like nature, abhors a vacuum, and Idaho’s interests have suffered for three years from the widespread perception that Otter can be defied with impunity.

Otter has laid down his marker on the issue of road funding. He can’t turn back.

Our view:

In his long political career, Gov. C.L. ‘Butch’ Otter hasn’t had to do much compromising with political equals. That could be a problem in resolving his standoff with the Legislature over highway funding.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Talking like a big-spending conservative

We’ve all heard liberal speeches on the economy. The central concern is inequality. Power and wealth tend to concentrate at the top of society, so government must stand as a countervailing power. It must defend the people against the powerful to ensure fairness and opportunity for all.

DAVID BROOKS

It is interesting, therefore, that when President Barack Obama summarized his economic policies in a speech at Georgetown last week, he departed from this story line and worldview. Obama’s chief concern was not inequality. It was irresponsibility. Obama didn’t sound like an economic liberal at Georgetown. He sounded like a cultural conservative.

America once had a responsible economic culture, Obama argued. People used to save their pennies to buy their dream houses. Banks used to lend by “traditional standards.” Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac used to stick to their “traditional mandate.” Companies like AIG used to limit themselves to the “traditional insurance business.”

But these traditions broke down, Obama continued. They were swamped by irresponsibility. Businesspeople chased “short-term profits” over long-term investments. Smart people spent more time manipulating numbers and symbols than actually making things. Americans consumed too much and saved too little. America became corrupted by “excessive debt,” “reckless speculation” and “fleeting profits.”

Obama vowed to end this irresponsibility and the cycle of boom and bust. It’s time to get back to basics, he said. He embraced tradition, order and authority. He quoted the New Testament and argued that it is time that the U.S. built its economic house on rock and not sand.

His administration has become a domestic IMF, consisting of teams of experts who can swoop in and provide long-term solutions when systems — finance, housing, health care, education, autos — have broken down.

If Republicans aren’t nervous, they should be. Obama is arguing for his activist agenda not on the basis of class-consciousness, which is alien to America, but as a defense of middle-class morality, which is central to it. Obama is positioning the Democrats as the party of order, responsibility and small-town values. If he pulls this mantle away from the Republicans, it would be the greatest train robbery in American politics.

His view was clear. The market is dynamic and important, but it makes people reckless, parochial and dangerously short-sighted. The market needs adult supervision — a leadership class made up of people who appreciate the market but who also have committed themselves to public service, and who therefore take the long view and are more conscious of the public good.

Obama is building this new leadership class. His administration has become a domestic IMF, consisting of teams of experts who can swoop in and provide long-term solutions when systems — finance, housing, health care, education, autos — have broken down.

When the members of this new establishment are confronted with a broken system — whether it involves hospitals, energy, air pollution or cars — their approach is the same. They aim to restructure incentives in order to channel the animal drives of the marketplace in responsible directions.

Obama is taking enormous risks. Even FDR decided to concentrate on the banking crisis in his first year and put other issues off until 1934 and beyond.

Obama is doing everything at once. And yet in this speech, and in his heart, his approach seems self-evident, reassuring and almost mundane. As explication, the Georgetown speech was a small masterpiece.

The first danger for the Obama administration, of course, is that his teams of experts may not be as far-sighted as they believe. It may not be so easy to out-think the market. His advisers are like jugglers who have thrown knives in the air. It’ll get harder when they start coming down.

Moreover, for an administration that puts responsibility at the center, it is not itself very responsible. Federal spending is the leverage the administration uses to gain control over sector after sector, and yet this money is all borrowed.

Obama imposes hard choices on others, but has postponed his own. He presented an agenda that bleeds red ink a trillion dollars at a time. Now he seems passive as Congress kills his few revenue ideas (cap and trade) and spending cuts (agricultural subsidies). Huge fiscal gaps are opening this decade that can’t be closed by distant entitlement reform. They can’t be closed by cynical Potemkin cuts, a few million at a time.

This is not a matter of economics only, but credibility. Obama understands that this is primarily an authority crisis. A system Americans have trusted — the market — has failed in important ways.

He has found a theme and bids to reassert authority. But he will seem like an impostor and a manipulator if he imposes responsibility on everybody but himself.

Government agencies abandon refugee mom

Today (April 20), I have spent hours with an African refugee looking for a way for her to be a good mother and a good citizen.

She has two children, a son barely 1 year and a daughter not quite 2. Her husband is currently (and for the past two months) in the Twin Falls County Jail on a domestic violence charge — not his first one!

Because they have been in Idaho two years, all of their refugee benefits are no longer available. After eight months, the Refugee Center basically is no longer involved or responsible. I have been informed of this by four government agencies today. She has no money, no phone, no medical coverage (except Medicaid for the kids), no transportation — and today, she has been served an eviction notice. She does have food stamps if someone will take her to the store. Her English is very limited, and she has no family in the area.

I have become involved by helping her with language and math. Our church (Methodist) has been generous, as we have seen the needs of the refugees.

However, at some point, governmental agencies must assume their responsibility for transitioning them into life in the USA.

Shutterbugs ruin an otherwise great show

Kudos to the Twin Falls High School “Jive” group for a great performance. Your program was full of energy, your singing and dancing were superb and the costumes added to the tone of the program. Well done!

Raspberries to those in the audience who continually flashed cameras through the whole program, some multiple times during a single number. It was very inconsiderate to the rest of the audience. Where are your manners?

I have attended many stage productions in Twin Falls, including the “Jive” productions. The “Jive” concert is the only one that does not ask the audience to turn off all cell phones and to not use cameras. I understand the reason that there is a difference. I get it that parents and families want to immortalize their darlings to be proudly displayed at family gatherings, etc.; however, the flashing cameras were a huge distraction from what was otherwise a great program.

Isn’t there some way to satisfy the needs of both a paying audience and dotting parents? How about inviting the cameras to the dress rehearsal to snap pictures to their hearts’ content, then discourage them at the regular performances?

It is apparent that a lot of hard work and dedication has gone into preparing for the “Jive” concert from not only the performers but from the director, choreographers and supporting parents. It is a shame to have those efforts overshadowed by so many inconsiderate boors.

Don't believe media's slant on legislative session

As the Idaho Legislature enters its 14th week in the second-longest session on record, occasional media complaints suggest legislators should wrap it up and come home with whatever can be salvaged. The session, if you would read the media reports, is a resounding failure.

Why? Well, the reasons cited are several, but they boil down to failure to pass some media-favored legislation, which is mostly liberal and mostly costly. Local-option sales tax? Every community needs 'em. Tenth Amendment sovereignty memorial? Who needs it! Most of these positions are hatched in urban quarters of the state where expansion of government is greeted as a good thing. If the state isn't doing something, well, it's just something we haven't got to yet.

But out in the Magic

READER COMMENT

Bert Brackett, Jim Patrick and Stephen Hartgen

Valley, and specifically in District 23, we think voters are more skeptical of government expansion and regulation, and more protective of genuine rights. They appreciate us passing what is necessary and saying no to what is not. Here is just six items taken up by your Legislature. Most of these have received zero to minimal coverage in the local press:

- Election consolidation. This proposal, nearly 100 pages, would consolidate elections onto just a few dates and thereby increase voter scrutiny and attention. The bill passed the House easily and is under consideration in the Senate.

- Open meetings reform. Even the media likes this reform of unworkable public meetings laws to make for easier compliance and clear notice of agendas.

- Midwifery reform. This legislation, in the works for several years, gives needed clarity to the practice of midwifery in Idaho.

- Zebra and quagga mussel prevention. These invasive species, if carried into Idaho lakes and rivers, would be devastating to irrigation canals and other waterways. A new program should help delay and maybe prevent that invasion.

- Off-road vehicles. This legislation clarifies where ATVs can be used and helps county law enforcement with some rescue costs when accidents occur.

- Catastrophic Health Care funding. This requires hospitals to notify counties when they receive a probable indigency case, thereby allowing for managed care, better utilization of medical services and reduced funding.

We also dealt with memorials to Congress on topics like state sovereignty, introduction of non-native species and the right to bear arms. Some critics think these are meaningless gestures, but we think they serve the important function of letting Washington, D.C., know when we feel strongly about our cherished rights. A right underfunded is a right soon denied. Even today, any reader of the Declaration of Independence can see the passion of the colonists in the lengthy list of particulars and grievances they lodged against George III and Parliament.

Sometimes a "no" vote is the correct one. We said "no" this year to regulations on home drainfields, a plan to hold state jobs open for employees for up to three years and a proposal to provide attorneys fees in workers compensation cases even when medical costs have been reasonably denied.

And we dealt with a state budget that is nearly 14 percent below a year ago, the effects of a persistent recession. In mid-winter, we dealt carefully with an infusion of federal stimulus funds. We have not made everyone happy, but we have approved a budget while being compassionate and even-handed to health and welfare recipients, school teachers and state workers. When we go home, we will do so with a balanced state budget, as required by the Idaho Constitution. That's not so in many states where a different agenda prevails.

Carping about this or that item from the media towers is a long-time press tradition, but it doesn't reflect the reality of how laws are passed and people's interests are defended in Idaho. As we wind up the final weeks of a long legislative session, we trust most southern Idaho constituents know how to separate the complaining from the work being done in Boise.

Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson, is serving his first term in the state Senate. Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, is serving his second term in the Idaho House of Representatives. Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, is serving his first term in the House. All three represent District 23, which covers Owyhee County and most of Twin Falls County.

A policy cocktail for controlling the HIV/AIDS pandemic

Nearly 30 years after the first cases were recognized in the United States, HIV/AIDS remains an incurable disease that is devastating large swaths of our country and the rest of the world. Globally, an estimated 33 million people carry the virus. In 2007 alone, about 2.7 million new infections occurred.

The annual number of new HIV infections in the United States — about 56,000 — has remained fairly constant for more than a decade. Clearly, our efforts at HIV prevention have been insufficient. Drastic action and new approaches are urgently needed.

Vaccines have historically been mankind's best weapon against the worst infectious diseases. But HIV's unique and formidable nature has presented challenges to the development of an effective vaccine. Although we remain committed to the research necessary to find a preventive HIV vaccine, a licensed product is not likely to be available in the near future.

In the absence of a vaccine, three bold new approaches to controlling the HIV/AIDS pandemic are being discussed by those working in medicine and public health. These approaches are still in the conceptual and testing phases, but if applied as a group, it's possible they could have a dramatic effect.

The first approach would provide a daily dose of anti-retroviral medicines to people who are not infected with HIV but are at high risk of becoming infected. This strategy, known as pre-exposure prophylaxis, or PrEP, is based on the concept that blocking HIV's replication immediately after exposure to the virus may prevent infection.

A somewhat similar strategy of treating HIV-infected mothers before and during delivery and treating their newborns for a limited time afterward has virtually eliminated mother-to-child HIV transmission in the United States.

The National Institutes of Health and other organizations are conducting clinical PrEP trials among various at-risk populations. Initial findings are expected later this year. Of course, safety and cost-effectiveness will be important factors to consider even if the approach proves effective in preventing infection.

The second approach would involve universally available, voluntary, annual testing for HIV infection and immediately providing anti-retroviral therapy to those who test positive. The potent combinations of antiretroviral medicines available today can suppress the amount of HIV in an infected person's body to extremely low levels, resulting in longer lives and better health.

It has been clearly shown that those who have less HIV in their blood are less infectious to others. In fact, when a drug regimen suppresses HIV to certain low levels, the risk that the infected person will infect another through sexual contact appears to be greatly reduced, even though the virus has not been eradicated. New modeling research suggests that implementing a voluntary "test and treat" approach could dramatically reduce new HIV cases beginning within a decade and ultimately halt the pandemic.

Universal voluntary testing and treatment potentially could have a transformational effect on public health. Before this approach can be implemented, however, we must pursue a research agenda that includes studies of feasibility, efficacy, the benefits to individual patients vs. the benefits to society, and cost-effectiveness.

The third approach relates to the lifelong treatment that most people with HIV eventually need. Certainly, this care imposes financial and other burdens on patients, their families and health-care systems. But now, for the first time, AIDS researchers are pursuing major efforts to cure HIV infection. This might entail purging all vestiges of the virus from a person's body, a difficult challenge. Perhaps more likely, though still difficult, would be a "functional cure" — therapies that suppress the virus to such low levels that an HIV-infected person would no longer need treatment because his or her immune system could keep the residual virus in check. The latter result would be more likely if therapy were initiated early in the course of infection, when significant immune function remains. The NIH plans soon to launch an initiative designed to solicit novel ideas for an HIV cure from the scientific community.

It is too early to predict the success or even the feasibility of such a three-pronged approach. Just the research to determine feasibility would be extremely costly. It is clear, however, that new methods of fighting infection must be pursued, and it is encouraging that new NIH funding provided through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act offers the chance to at least explore such an approach, with the hope that an end to the HIV/AIDS pandemic could be within our reach.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... good-times hubris

Idaho Statesman, Boise

During good economic times, Idahoans fooled themselves into declaring their state recession-proof.

Now, they're paying the price. More specifically, businesses and unemployed workers are paying the price.

Idaho's unemployment fund could dry up by early 2010. It is convenient, but also simplistic, to blame the global recession. This is also a self-inflicted problem, the product of group think and boom-time hubris.

A coalition of groups ... pushed a plan to keep Idaho unemployment tax rates artificially low. The 2005 Legislature bought in, without a single dissenting vote. Everyone involved bought into a costly conceit. They believed that Idaho could get by on about a $200 million unemployment fund, enough to weather a nine-month recession. They dismissed the notion that the state should maintain a fund twice as large, to last a downturn twice as long.

In the quest for short-term tax relief, fiscal conservatism was chucked aside like a relic from the bad old days. Consequently, businesses are facing steep and ill-timed unemployment tax increases: 70 percent in 2009, perhaps another 100 percent in 2010. With a record 53,000 Idahoans out of work, the cap on weekly jobless benefits could drop in 2010. And the state might still need to borrow money from the federal government to keep its unemployment fund whole.

The unemployment tax decision is the kind of move that gets Idaho lawmakers in trouble, time and again. When they abandon a prudent and lean tax system in favor of unsustainable cuts, they invite a day of reckoning when the economy turns ...

... no time for ethics

Post Register, Idaho Falls

JEERS to House Speaker Lawrence Denney, R-Midvale. For more than a week, he has personally held state ethics legislation hostage.

Passed earlier this month by a unanimous state Senate, a new measure would require legislators and elected state officials — and their spouses — to disclose where they make their money, identify their employers and list their major assets in this state. At least that way, voters can discern whether their public official has a conflict of interest. That's why the federal government and all but three states require this kind of financial disclosure.

If enacted, Idaho's law would be relatively modest. But Denney hasn't sent the bill to a committee for a hearing.

"I'm still thinking about what I want to do with it," he told the Spokesman-Review's Betsy Russell last week.

Translation: Denney is seeking leverage against the House — although it's not immediately clear what he wants in exchange for moving this bill along.

Either way, ethics bills should not be about political chips. Reform is the people's business. And what does it say about Denney's sense of ethics that he'd play crass politics with an ethics bill?

U.S. to spend $6 billion on Cold War weapons cleanup

By Richard Lardner
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department will spend $6 billion as part of President Barack Obama's stimulus package to clean up nuclear weapons sites at Cold War-era facilities, with more than half the money going to sites in Washington and South Carolina, a senior official told Congress on Wednesday.

The government will focus on decontaminating and demolishing tainted facilities, removing radioactive waste and trying to restore soil and groundwater, Ines Triay, the department's acting assistant secretary for environmental management, told a Senate Armed Services panel.

More than $1.9 billion will be spent on cleanup at the Hanford site, a former plutonium production complex on the Columbia River in southeastern Washington. The site produced plutonium used in the first nuclear bomb. The government said there are more than 53 million gallons of radioactive and chemically hazardous waste in 177 underground storage tanks there along with 2,300 tons of spent nuclear fuel and nine tons of plutonium.

In South Carolina, the government will spend more than $1.6 billion at Savannah River Site to shut down nuclear reactors and ship more than 4,500 cubic meters of waste out of the state.

Triay told the Senate panel that cleanup projects have been delayed to pay for more urgent programs. She said the total cost estimate for necessary cleanup is $14.3 billion.

Other states receiving parts of the $6 billion in nuclear cleanup money include:

- Tennessee: $755 million for the Oak Ridge National Laboratory to demolish and dispose of uranium enrichment plant buildings, buildings from the era of the Manhattan Project and highly contaminated uranium processing buildings; and restore soil to protect area groundwater.

- Idaho: $468 million for the Idaho National Laboratory to demolish excess nuclear and radiological facilities.

- New Mexico: $384 million for the Los Alamos National Laboratory and a waste site in Carlsbad. The money will be used to demolish buildings and for waste shipment work.

- New York: $148 million for projects at facilities in Brookhaven, West Valley and Niskayuna.

- Ohio: $138 million for demolition and remediation work at Miamisburg and Portsmouth.

- Utah: $108 million for waste removal along

Colorado River.

- Illinois: $99 million for work at Argonne National Laboratory.

- Kentucky: $79 million for work at a uranium facility in Paducah.

- California: $62 million for work at the National Accelerator Laboratory at Stanford University and the Energy Technology Engineering Center west of San Fernando Valley.

- Nevada: $44 million to install groundwater monitoring gear and demolish buildings at the Nevada Test Site.

Board names Kansas State provost new U of I president

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Duane Nellis, the Kansas State University provost who cited too little money when he earlier turned down an offer to become the University of Idaho's president, took the job Wednesday after state officials sweetened the deal.

The state Board of Education announced his hiring during a meeting on the Moscow campus, agreeing to waive a policy prohibiting multiyear contracts and the use of private funds to supplement the salaries of university presidents.

The board approved a three-year contract and annual base salary of $335,000 for Nellis. Of that, $298,000 will come from state money, with another $37,000 from the University of Idaho Foundation.

"We need to be competitive, it is not only a matter of compensation but also adding other things such as multiyear contracts," said board President Paul Agidius.

Nellis told The Associated Press last month that he declined an offer to become Idaho's president because the board rejected his salary request. Nellis said he had been willing to take less than the combined base pay of $370,354 that he and his wife, Ruthie, also a Kansas State employee, make at that school.

Former Idaho President Timothy White, who left last year to become president at the University of California, Riverside, was paid $291,912 in his fourth and final year.

After intense lobbying by influential Vandal boosters, the board restarted negotiations with Nellis three weeks ago.

Top bailed-out firms continue U.S. lobbying

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press reporter

WASHINGTON — The top 10 recipients of the U.S. government's $700 billion financial bailout spent about $9.5 billion on federal lobbying during the first three months of the year.

The biggest spender was bailed-out automaker General Motors Corp., which devoted $2.8 million to lobbying in the first quarter of 2009. It has received $13.4 billion in government loans and could get $5 billion more, according to a government report released Tuesday.

Failed insurance giant American International Group Inc. and banks Citigroup Inc. and JPMorgan Chase & Co. each reported spending more than $1 million to influence the government as they lived off federal money this year. AIG has gotten $40 billion from the bailout fund and has access to as much as $70 billion, while Citigroup has received $45 billion and JPMorgan $25 billion.

The lobbying activity was disclosed publicly in reports required to be filed with Congress. This year's first quarterly report was due Monday.

Other major recipients of money from the so-called Troubled Assets Relief Program also had substantial lobbying costs in the first three months of this year, including:

- Bank of America Corp.,
- Wells Fargo & Company, with $700,000 in lobbying costs and $25 billion in bailout money;
- Goldman Sachs, which spent $670,000 while receiving its $10 billion;
- Morgan Stanley, which spent $540,000 while also getting $10 billion in assistance;
- PNC Financial Services

Group, spent $135,000 — nearly double what it did at the end of last year — on lobbying while receiving a $7.8 billion lifeline;

U.S. Bancorp spent $170,000 on lobbying and got $6.6 billion in government aid. "They say they're not using public money for these purposes, but in effect these companies are steering taxpayer funds to lobbying and campaign contributions," said Craig Holman of the watchdog group Public Citizen. "It's completely unjustifiable."

The reports suggest that most of the bailed-out companies have beefed up their lobbying at least marginally since last year. Seven spent more to influence the government than they did in the last quarter of 2008.

The largest increases apart from PNC was Goldman, which spent 34 percent more on lobbying than it did at the end of last year.

Glanbia opens new collaboration center in T.F.

Times-News staff

Glanbia held a grand opening for its new Glanbia Collaboration Center on Wednesday with representatives from Glanbia Foods, Glanbia Nutritionals as well as local officials and Glanbia Nutritionals employees.

The company recently completed construction of the 7,000 square foot research and development facility located at 442 Falls Avenue in Twin Falls.

The Glanbia Collaboration Center is a development center that will include pilot plant equipment for developing and testing prototypes of bars, beverages, baked goods and other applications for Glanbia's dairy protein and flax ingredients.

Glanbia officials say the new center will allow the company to streamline their R&D operations into a building directly behind the analytical and applications lab already there.

The pilot plant was previously housed within Glanbia

Foods' whey processing facility in Richfield.

Glanbia's Richfield facility is the largest dedicated whey processing plant in the U.S., producing 18 million pounds of dairy ingredients annually.

Glanbia officials say they will expand its whey processing operations in Richfield, utilizing space once occupied by the pilot plant equipment.

Jeff Williams, president and CEO of Glanbia Foods, said the extra space made available in the Richfield plant will allow for development of new nutritional products.

"A majority of companies are scaling back on their R&D efforts," he said. "Yet Glanbia continues to expand in this area which will mean better customer support as well the need for additional staff to support the new Twin Falls facility."

Glanbia Foods, based in Twin Falls, is the world's largest producer of American-style cheddar cheese.

Staying put

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans who moved declined sharply last year, reaching the lowest percentage in 60 years as people grappled with fewer jobs and tighter credit.

Roughly 11.9 percent of the nation's population, or 35.2 million people, moved to a new home, down from 13.2 percent, or 38.7 million people, the previous year, according to census data released Wednesday. It was the sharpest percentage drop in U.S. mobility since the 2000 bursting of the tech bubble, which bankrupted many Internet startups and caused the dwindling of stock portfolios.

The levels of people moving have been declining for decades, more recently due to an aging boomer population that is less mobile, since hitting a peak of 21.2 percent in 1951. But the rate had generally leveled off at around 13 to 14 percent before last year's drop.

Longer-distance moves between states have dropped 36 percent since 2005 to about 4.7 million, reflecting the housing downturn.

William Frey, a demographer at Brookings Institution, said declining U.S. migration to residential magnets in the suburbs and exurbs, and particularly in

In 2008, the Northeast continued to lose the most residents, but at a slower rate than previous years. The South registered a net gain of people moving in, while the West and Midwest had declines.

The demographic numbers highlight the task ahead for the bureau, which is gearing up for next year's decennial head count that will be used to apportion House seats.

The unemployed, minorities and poor people were more likely to move, according to the data. Immigrants increasingly headed to dense urban areas rather than the wide-open suburbs compared to years past, underscoring government concerns that these groups will prove difficult to count. Geithner: Crisis unprecedented in modern times

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner addresses a breakfast meeting of the Economic Club of Washington, Wednesday in Washington.

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said Wednesday the United States bears a substantial share of responsibility for a global economic crisis that could cost the world up to $4 trillion in lost output this year alone.

While the crisis started in the U.S., Geithner said its damage has spread widely with serious challenges facing much of the globe.

Companies' disaster recovery can be emotionally taxing

When a fire destroyed the Manhattan office of Atlantis Health Plan, the company was so well prepared it lost just one day of work. But that didn't make disaster recovery easy.

Small business owners who contend with disasters find that the recovery process involves much more than finding space and getting Internet and phone service again. Relocation and disruptions in a company's routine can take an emotional and physical toll that's as hard as the disaster itself. Owners and employees can feel pushed to extremes.

An early morning electrical fire Nov. 25 wiped out everything in Atlantis' 10,000 square feet of space, Chief Operating Officer Tom Dwyer said.

"It was basically a complete loss," Dwyer said.

Their data loss was zero because Atlantis, a health insurance company, uses a Web-enabled software application hosted in Houston.

The company also had a relocation plan, having already contracted to use space in Carlstadt, N.J., near New York, that had phones and computers. The result of all this advance planning was just one missed day of work.

"By 9 a.m. on the 26th, we were back up," Dwyer said.

But there were still plenty of problems. While the main phone number was quickly switched to the New Jersey location, secondary numbers such as fax lines took as long as several weeks to be moved.

Fed tests harder on regional banks

EDITORS NOTE: This story was published April 22, but was ended prematurely. The following is the story in its entirety.

By Daniel Wagner
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The government is giving Wall Street banks a helping hand. But this time it's not a handout.

The federal bank "stress tests" rate the individual loans held by big regional banks as riskier than the complex troubled assets held by the industry titans, according to a Federal Reserve document obtained by The Associated Press.

That approach could threaten some major regional banks while making the national banks appear in better shape when the government releases the results of the tests next month.

Regulators are administering the tests to 19 large financial firms to determine which banks are healthy, which need more help and which might fail if the recession worsens.

Under one scenario, the tests assume banks will see "no further losses" on the complex securities, according to the document obtained by AP. By contrast, it estimates that individual loans will lose up to 20 percent of their value.

Obama calls for new era of energy exploration

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — President Barack Obama, standing Wednesday in the shell of a once-giant Maytag appliance factory that now houses a wind energy company, declared that a “new era of energy exploration in America” would be a crucial to leading the nation out of an economic crisis.

With pieces of wind turbine towers as a backdrop, Obama touted the small manufacturing firm as a success and as a step toward reducing the United States’ reliance on polluting fuels. But as the president on Earth Day set a goal for wind to generate as much as 20 percent of the U.S. electricity demand by 2030, legislation to make that a reality faced a challenge back in Washington in the Democratic-led Congress.

“The nation that leads the world in creating new energy sources will be the nation that leads the 21st century global economy,” Obama said in a state that launched him on the road to the White House with a surprise upset over one-time rival Hillary Rodham Clinton.

“America can be that nation. America must be that nation. And while we seek new forms of fuel to power our homes and cars and businesses, we will rely on the same ingenuity — the same American spirit — that has always been a part of our American story.”

It’s an American spirit, though, that has been damped with economic downturn and financial crisis.

The president left Washington for a few hours Wednesday to visit this small Iowa town, which took a huge economic hit when Maytag Corp. shut its doors in 2007. The Maytag plant employed some 4,000 in a town of 16,000 residents in jobs that paid about $30,000 to $40,000 a year.

In its place is Trinity Structural Towers, a 90-person manufacturing firm that makes parts of wind turbines the president hopes to expand on land and at sea through the government’s first plan to harness ocean currents to produce energy.

“Now, the choice we face is not between saving our environment and saving our economy,” Obama said. “The choice we face is between prosperity and decline. We can remain the world’s leading importer of oil, or we can become the world’s leading exporter of clean energy.”

In Washington, the president’s plan to increase alternative energy sources and create environmentally friendly jobs hit some snags despite Obama’s fellow Democrats controlling both chambers of Congress. Energy Secretary Steven Chu, EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson and Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood reinforced Obama’s message in testimony to a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on Wednesday.

The administration’s draft bill is designed to help stem the pollution blamed for climate change by capping greenhouse gas emissions and reducing the nation’s reliance on fossil fuels. The goal is to reduce greenhouse gases by 20 percent from 2005 levels by 2020, and by 83 percent by mid-century.

The White House wants to see movement on the legislation by Memorial Day. To help that along, aides said the president plans to personally make his case that the costs of dealing with climate change can be reduced dramatically by adopting programs that will spur energy efficiency and wider use of non-fossil energy such as wind, solar and biofuels.

In Newton, Obama proclaimed that “once-shuttered factories are whirring back to life,” although the facility he toured is a shadow of what it replaced here about 30 miles east of Des Moines.

Rise of backyard biodiesel refineries blamed for rash of fires, explosions

EDMONDS, Wash. (AP) — Trying to live green and beat high gasoline prices, some enterprising Americans are turning cooking oil into biodiesel in their garages. Problem is, some of these do-it-yourselfers are burning down the house.

Fire officials around the country are warning of the dangers and considering new restrictions to make sure people don’t torch the whole neighborhood.

“You won’t find a rule anywhere that says you can’t cook biodiesel in your garage,” said Bob Benedetti, a flammable-liquids engineer for the National Fire Protection Association in Quincy, Mass.

Ferocious fires and explosions blamed on backyard refining operations have been reported in Washington state, Arizona, Colorado, Massachusetts and Oregon. No deaths or serious injuries have resulted, but some fire officials say it is only a matter of time.

In recent years, many Americans have discovered that diesel cars can run on fuel made primarily from vegetable oil, and about the only drawback is a french fry smell. Some motorists are going so far as to brew their own fuel from used frying oil obtained from restaurants, which are often glad to get rid of the gunk for little or no charge.

Biodiesel is typically made by combining the cooking oil with methanol, or wood alcohol, in a mixture heated to about 120 degrees. But methanol is highly flammable. And frying oil, as any cook knows, can catch fire if it gets too hot or comes into contact with a flame.

The results can be spectacular, particularly in cases where home refiners have stockpiled tanks and barrels of material.

When a barn caught fire in 2006 outside Canby, Ore., “it was a huge column of black smoke unlike anything I’d ever seen in a typical fire,” said Canby Fire Marshal Troy Buzalsky. “We had flames that scorched nearby 70-foot trees. It was so hot that it burned aluminum and sagged metal.”

The blaze was caused by an electrical short, and the flames eventually ignited a 275-gallon plastic container of fuel.

“I took a lot of safety measures. It was pretty mind-blowing when I did have a fire,” said Jeff Brandt, the barn’s owner. He said he had even visited his local firehouse to let them know what he was doing. But the blaze hasn’t discouraged Brandt from continuing to make fuel.

In Phoenix, officials may restrict residential biodiesel production to properties of one acre or more, Fire Chief Bob Kahn said.

“We’re trying not to discourage people from doing it,” Kahn said. But “when you’re rendering in it in a garage in a family or neighborhood setting, you’re exposing an awful lot of people to this potential hazard.”

Setting up a home biodiesel operation is relatively easy. With hundreds of how-to guides posted online and kits for sale, enthusiasts can get started with less than $500.

Lyle Rudensity, who brews about 50 gallons per month in his Seattle garage to heat his home and run his car. “It’s really kind of neat to go into your garage and fill up.”

But in the classes he has taught for three years, Rudensity urges people to take precautions such as storing chemicals in metal cabinets and keeping fire extinguishers on hand. Similarly, Bill Carney, who gives workshops in Louisiana, said he tries to scare his students with horror stories and pictures of fires.

Official: Craigslist slaying suspect had victims' items at apartment

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston University medical student accused of robbing women who advertised erotic services on Craigslist, killing one of them, had items belonging to both victims in his apartment, a law enforcement official said Wednesday.

Philip Markoff is charged with killing a masseuse at the Boston Marriott Copley Place hotel, in the historic Back Bay district, on April 14. He also is charged in the robbery of a woman at another Boston hotel four days earlier.

A law enforcement official who spoke on the condition of anonymity said police found items belonging to both women in Markoff's apartment in Quincy, south of Boston. The official wasn't authorized to speak about evidence in the investigation.

The official would not confirm a report by ABC News that the items seized by police included the victims' underwear. ABC News said two unidentified law enforcement sources said Markoff appeared to be collecting underwear as "souvenirs" from the victims.

ABC News did not say how Markoff took the underwear, and he has not been accused of sexually assaulting either woman. Prosecutors have said he went through the purse of the first woman he's accused of robbing.

An unidentified man and woman embrace outside the R. G. Ortiz Funeral Home, where the wake of 26-year-old Julissa Brisman was being held, Wednesday in New York City. Philip Markoff, a 22-year-old medical student was arraigned on murder charges related to the death of Brisman, a New York woman who had advertised massage services on Craigslist.

has confirmed it is cooperating with authorities investigating Markoff's gambling habits.

Markoff was arrested on Monday on Interstate 95 in Massachusetts as he and his fiancée drove to Foxwoods.

Business at Foxwoods was brisk Wednesday as gamblers played slot machines and table games and packed the buffets. But none of the employees coming and going at a parking garage recalled seeing Markoff at the casino. Casino managers referred questions to a Foxwoods spokeswoman, who declined to comment, citing the "integrity of the investigation."

Suffolk District Attorney Daniel Conley said that he believes Markoff's original motive was robbery but that he ended up killing Brisman, 26, when she fought back.

The first woman Markoff is accused of robbing said she believes she's alive because she didn't resist.

"I just complied with everything he wanted me to do and I didn't resist him in any way, and I think that's why," she said in an interview with Boston television station WCVB.

Prosecutors have not released her name.

The 29-year-old Las Vegas woman, who also advertised as a masseuse on Craigslist, said she was attacked April 10 at the Westin Copley hotel.

NYC takes lead in setting next food target — salt

NEW YORK (AP) — First, it was a ban on artery-clogging trans fats. Then calories were posted on menus. Now the New York City health department is taking on salt.

City officials are meeting with food makers and restaurants to discuss reducing the amount of salt in common foods such as soup, pasta sauce, salad dressing and bread.

About three-quarters of the salt Americans eat comes from prepared and processed food, not from the salt shaker. That's why New York officials want the food industry to help cut back.

"It's very hard for an individual to do this on their own," said Dr. Lynn Silver, an assistant commissioner in the health department.

The department has shown its clout with bans on artificial trans fats and rules forcing chain restaurants to post calorie counts. To comply, fast food chains changed their recipes nationwide, and other cities and states have enacted similar policies.

Some manufacturers said getting rid of trans fats took work, and reducing salt has its own difficulties.

Unlike sugar, there's no substitute for salt. Cream soups — like that casserole favorite cream of mushroom — are the biggest challenge, said George Dowdley, head of research and development for Campbell Soup Co. The soup maker, which has been cutting salt for years, is in the talks with New York.

By fall, Campbell Soup plans to have more than 90 lower-sodium soups available. That includes its first soup, tomato, which will have almost a third less salt.

The industry hopes salt reduction remains voluntary. "Literally freight cars full of salt have been removed from these products gradually over time," said Robert Earl, vice president of science policy, nutrition and health for the Grocery Manufacturers Association. "It has to be done carefully — gradually and incrementally over time."

Herbert Smith Jr. never paid much attention to how much salt was in food until he developed high blood pressure. His doctor at a Harlem health center put him on medication and told him to exercise and

CUT IT OUT

Tips for reducing salt in your diet:

- Check food labels for the amount of sodium per serving. The daily recommended total is 2,300 milligrams, about a teaspoon.
- Comparison shop. Salt content can vary widely by brand.
- Use fresh ingredients whenever possible.
- Look for canned or frozen foods without added salt, or low-salt versions.
- Don't use a salt shaker at the table and limit salt while cooking.
- Use herbs, spices and salt-free seasonings instead of salt.
- Limit convenience foods like pizza and frozen dinners.
- At restaurants, ask if your food can be prepared without salt.

Investigators are looking into gambling as the possible motivation. The law enforcement official said Markoff was a "frequent visitor" to Foxwoods casino in Connecticut.

Markoff, 23, is accused in the death of Julissa Brisman, of New York City, a masseuse who was found dead in the doorway of her hotel room after being bashed in the head and shot three times. A wake for Brisman was held Wednesday in Manhattan, where her parents live.

Markoff also is accused of robbing and tying up another woman, and police have said there could be more victims.

Defense attorney John Salsberg has said Markoff isn't guilty of the charges and "has his family's support." Markoff's fiancée, Megan McAllister, insists police have the wrong man.

Foxwoods Resort Casino, in Mashantucket, Conn., watch his diet.

The 54-year-old church receptionist said he was alarmed to see how much salt was in the instant soup packages that he liked. He wants the food industry to cut down.

"For those who want to use salt, they can add it themselves," he said.

Too much salt raises blood pressure, and high blood pressure raises the risk of heart disease. A recent analysis showed that for every gram of salt cut, as many as 250,000 cases of heart disease and 200,000 deaths could be prevented over a decade.

"Very, very small changes in diet could have dramatic effects," said Dr. Kirsten Bibbins-Domingo, a researcher with the University of California, San Francisco.

For its salt initiative, New York has recruited public health agencies and medical groups across the country. The campaign — with a goal of cutting salt intake by at least 20 percent in five years — is modeled on a plan carried out in Britain. That effort set voluntary salt reduction targets for 85 categories of processed foods.

"Companies have been very innovative," said Corinne Vaughan, of Britain's Food Standards Agency. "And they have been very good at making what are quite huge reductions in salt levels."

Sources: GM to shut many U.S. plants up to 9 weeks

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. is planning to temporarily close most of its U.S. factories for up to nine weeks this summer because of slumping sales and growing inventories of unsold vehicles, three people briefed on the plan said Wednesday.

Analysts say the company could be seeing sales decline because of talk about a potential bankruptcy.

The exact dates of the closures are not known, but the people said they will occur around the normal two-week shutdown in July when changes are made from one model year to the next. None of the people wanted to be identified because workers have not yet been told of the shutdowns.

GM spokesman Chris Lee would not comment other than to say the company notifies employees before making any production cuts public.

One of the people briefed on the plan said details are still being worked out. Some of the closings could be staggered between mid-May and the end of July, but the exact number of plants to be idled has not yet been determined.

Another person said a few plants that make more popular models could remain open for part of the shutdown period, but at reduced assembly line speeds.

Thousands of workers could be laid off but would still get most of their pay because their United Auto Workers union contract requires the company to make up much of the difference between state unemployment benefits and their wages. UAW officials at several factories said they have meetings scheduled Thursday and Friday with plant managers and GM human resource officials to discuss production changes.

The shutdown could be catastrophic to many auto parts suppliers that already are near bankruptcy due to previous production cuts. During the shutdown, suppliers couldn't ship parts to GM and would lose critical revenue.

"It's one of those things we've been dreading for a long time," said Jim Gillette, director of financial services at auto-industry consultant CSM Worldwide in Grand Rapids. "It's as bad as it ever been."

He said that many suppliers are making employee cuts or forcing workers to take furloughs to reduce operating expenditures.

GM is living on $13.4 billion in government loans and faces a June 1 deadline to cut its debt, reduce labor costs and take other restructuring steps. If it doesn't meet the deadline, the company's CEO has said it will enter Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

The Treasury Department declined to comment on any effect the plant shutdowns might have on GM's restructuring plans.

Separately Wednesday, GM announced that it may miss a $1 billion bond payment also due June 1 if its debt-for-equity exchange is still in progress by then. GM also could go into bankruptcy protection, which could make the company miss the payment as well.

North Rim Park shouldn't be missed

By Mike Cothern
Times-News correspondent

If you go

North Rim Park is accessed from Highway 93 one-half mile north of the Perrine Bridge or by driving about 1.5 miles west from Exit 182 off Interstate 84. The BLM's Twin Falls 1:100,000 topographic map is helpful.

Stripped of rich topsoil by the historic Bonneville Flood, the stretch of rocky ground adjacent to the Snake River Canyon's North Rim has been often dismissed. While locals used the area for off-road motorized play, hiking, shooting and partying, the landscape was viewed by many as having little potential.

The North Rim received some attention when a daredevil with a "Skycycle" came to the valley, intent on using the open landscape as a potential landing zone. After the attempt fell short and the circus left town, the region returned to relative obscurity.

In 1994 the Bureau of Land Management even identified its portion of the land for disposal, according to Julie Thomas, resource conservation development coordinator for the Natural Resources Conservation Service. She adds that Jerome County, however, having first right of refusal, declared that the ground was too valuable to simply be sold off, essentially ending that option.

Subsequently, Thomas and a handful of others initiated an effort focused on protecting the open space and springs that supplied drinking water for Twin Falls, while also giving attention to managing recreation.

"Our outlook from the beginning was to take a thoughtful, grassroots approach by working with the local community and land management agencies," Thomas said.

Fifteen years later a formal partnership between the county and BLM was established, and more recently meetings conducted seeking input from locals concerning their activities and concerns. The product of those efforts today signifies that the North Rim Park is becoming more than just a vision. Under the agreement, nearly all historic uses will continue; an emphasis is placed on matching particular uses to specific areas in order to help minimize conflicts.

A "quiet area" along the rim a few miles below the Hansen Bridge, Thomas said, will become the first spot for a formal project. More than just bike-messenger bags

The classic bike-messenger bag has been adopted the world over as requisite equipment for two-wheel transit with goods in tow. But for me a messenger bag's single-strap setup — weight on one shoulder, the bag balanced on the arch of my back — has never felt comfortable or secure.

Instead, a backpack — two straps, a hip belt, and a balanced load — is my hauler of choice for bike trips around the corner or across town. Here's a quick look at four bike-oriented backpacks to sling on the next time you go for a ride.

Chrome Ivan: Mix a white-water dry bag with a military-surplus pack and you get the Ivan, a biking bag that's waterproof, bomber, and made to last for years. Released in 2006, the Ivan has a roll-top closure to seal off the main compartment. Another water-proof pocket that's easier to access is on the front, and it seals with a urethane-coated zipper.

Big cargo pockets on the outside store tubes, tools, and a hand pump. It has solid stainless steel hardware for clipping and cinching the pack on. The harness and belt are comfortable and strong, and at nearly 1,700 cubic inches in capacity there's enough room inside for milk, bread, fruit, granola and a six pack — plus your laptop, a layer, a rain coat . . . etc.

But the big size makes the Chrome (www.chrome-bags.com) pack unwieldy for short trips. It's warm in the summer on your back. It's pricey, too, at $200.

Finally, the bag's propped edges create corners that stand tall to cause sightline issues

Salmon fisherman Chad Dahlberg talks about the fishing season from his boat in Half Moon Bay, Calif. on April 8. The governors of Oregon and California are seeking a federal fishery failure declaration to open the way for assistance payments, since commercial salmon fishing for chinook salmon was shut down this year off California and most of Oregon.

Governors seek salmon disaster declaration

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press writer

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — The governors of Oregon and California on Tuesday asked the federal government to declare another West Coast salmon fishery failure — the third request in four years.

Commercial salmon fishing for chinook, also known as king salmon, has been closed off California and most of Oregon this year due to dangerously low returns to the Sacramento River in California, the second largest producer of salmon on the West Coast.

“Salmon are a vital component of California and Oregon’s natural resources and provide significant aesthetic, recreational, commercial and economic benefits to our state,” Gov. Ted Kulongoski of Oregon and Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger of California wrote in a letter to U.S. Commerce Secretary Gary Locke, a former governor of Washington.

Federal scientists blame the salmon collapse primarily on a combination of climatic conditions that produced very little food in the ocean, and an over-reliance on hatchery fish, which do not have the genetic diversity to cope with changes to their environment.

If approved by Locke, the declaration would open the way for Congress to appropriate aid for salmon fishermen. Congress appropriated $170 million in 2008 and $60 million in 2006.

“The guys who are still fishing could sure use it, because they are really struggling,” said Mark Newell, a Newport salmon fisherman and member of the Oregon Salmon Commission.

Salmon fishermen have been struggling since the mid-1990s, when cutbacks to protect threatened and endangered species allowed salmon farms to fill markets with low-priced fish.

Fishermen started handling their catch more carefully, offering a premium product, and prices rose until 2006, when returns to the Klamath River in Northern California plummeted, prompting the first fishery failure declaration for Oregon and California.

Seasons were generous in 2007, but catches were poor, and in 2008 forecasts up and down the coast were dire, prompting the second fishery failure declaration, this one covering California, Oregon and Washington. Fishermen, tribes and related businesses were eligible for money.

This year, the collapse focused on the Sacramento River. Returns to the Columbia River, the region’s biggest salmon producer, were on the increase. Coho returns in Oregon and points north were also on the upswing, allowing some commercial and recreational fishing off Oregon and Washington.

Many salmon fishermen with larger boats have been able to diversify into crab, albacore, black cod and rockfish, but those with smaller boats have suffered, Newell said.

A change in climatic conditions produced vast quantities of food in the ocean this year, and scientists expect more plentiful salmon returns next year, even in the Sacramento.

In Oregon, Kulongoski declared a state of emergency in coastal counties due to the fishing cutbacks.

Lab confirms isolated bird death incident

Tests at the Idaho Fish and Game Wildlife Health Laboratory in Caldwell have confirmed salmonella as the cause in the deaths of about 30 pine siskins at one property in Hailey.

The 30 pine siskins were among about 3,000 songbirds being fed from some 30 bird feeders on a one-acre property in the south central Idaho town. No human illness has been connected to the incident. Idaho Fish and Game wildlife veterinarian Mark Drew said incidents of songbird deaths are “unfortunately all too common in Idaho this time of year as snow starts to melt, exposing fecal material and molding bird seed and seed husks.”

Simple hygiene measures including cleaning feeders with soapy water and mild bleach, and removing old seeds and feces from the ground around feeders will prevent most potential diseases among birds in feeding situations. It is advisable to use gloves while doing the cleaning work.

Drew and other Fish and Game officials have been in contact with the property owner to offer advice on how to deal with the current situation and to scale down the feeding effort in future winters to minimize the potential for further problems.

Pine siskins, common in Idaho, are particularly prone to infections with salmonella around feeders because they are adapted to feed in treetops, not on the ground as they do when using some bird feeders, Drew said.

Deadly avalanche season months in the making

SALT LAKE CITY — Snow that fell in October and November laid the groundwork for this year’s deadly avalanche season in western North America.

So far 19 people have died in avalanches this winter, including eight in British Columbia, four in Utah and four in Colorado and one in Wyoming.

Avalanche experts say snow this fall created a slick slab that provided an unstable base for heavy snows that fell in December.

Dangerous conditions remain in many mountainous areas throughout the West, including the southern Gallatin and southern Madison ranges and the Lionhead area near West Yellowstone, the mountains around Cooke City and the Washburn Range in northern Yellowstone National Park.

First grouse transplanted to Antelope Island

SALT LAKE CITY — Six Columbian sharp-tailed grouse have been released at Antelope Island as part of a larger project to bolster the bird’s population in Utah.

Eventually, the Utah Division of Wildlife hopes to bring in about 60 of the prairie birds to Antelope Island State Park, which sits in the middle of the Great Salt Lake.

The six birds were released on the island Sunday, including two wearing tiny radio collars for tracking.

More may be trapped in northern Utah this week and taken to the island.

The Columbian sharp-tailed grouse is one of seven subspecies of sharp-tailed grouse in North America. It once roamed much of northern and central Utah, but as agricultural operations moved in, grassland converted to cropland and the ground-nesting bird moved out.

U.S. biologists say 3 pesticides harm salmon

By Phuong Le
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — Three pesticides used on agricultural crops jeopardize the survival of many Pacific salmon and steelhead listed as threatened or endangered in the West, federal biologists said Tuesday.

The National Marine Fisheries Service is recommending labeling restrictions, buffer zones near salmon waters for ground and aerial spraying, and a ban on the pesticides’ use in windy conditions and during storms that wash them into the waters.

The pesticides — carbaryl, carbofuran and methomyl — can kill fish outright in certain concentrations and impair the ability of fish to smell, swim, avoid predators and grow.

But the biggest effect is the harm to aquatic insects that salmon rely on for food, said Angela Somma, who heads the service’s endangered species division.

“These pesticides are designed to kill insects on agricultural crops,” she said. “But when they get into the water system, they also kill aquatic insects that salmon feed on.”

The fisheries service found that products containing the pesticides carbaryl and carbofuran jeopardize the survival of 22 listed Pacific salmon and steelhead species, including Puget Sound chinook and

SNAKE RIVER chinook.

Products containing methomyl put 18 listed species at risk, including upper Willamette River chinook and Sacramento River winter-run Chinook salmon.

The agency sent its findings to the federal Environmental Protection Agency, which has a year to implement new guidelines. The restrictions would apply to pesticide use in Oregon, Idaho, California and Washington.

The findings are the result of lawsuits that anti-pesticide groups and salmon fishermen brought against the EPA and the fisheries service, starting in 2001.

“Overall, we think this is a huge step forward in ensuring that salmon and steelhead are protected from these poisons,” said Joshua Osborne-Klein, an attorney with Earthjustice, the public interest law firm that brought the case. But “we don’t think it goes quite far enough.”

The fisheries service recommends spray buffer zones around salmon waters. They range from 600 to 1,000 feet for aerial spraying, and 50 to 600 feet for ground applications.

But the agency didn’t call for 20-foot vegetative strips near streams, which help filter out the pesticides as they near the water.

“That’s the only thing we have to catch the pollutants from moving into our waters,” said Aimee Code, water quality coordinator with the Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides, a plaintiff in the case.

The fisheries services recommended the vegetative buffer in November when it issued findings on three other pesticides — malathion, diazinon and chlorpyrifos.

Somma said the three pesticides in Tuesday’s findings tend to be shorter-lived, and the agency felt the other recommendations were sufficient.

The fisheries agency and EPA are reviewing a total of 37 pesticides under terms of the settlement of the lawsuits brought by the Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides, Wash-

A third asteroid belt may await discovery

Twenty years ago, most of the known asteroids occupied the Main Belt between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. A few (the Trojans) orbit in gravitational "dimples" along Jupiter's orbit, 60 degrees ahead of and behind the planet. The rest were scattered far and wide but didn't fall into particular orbital families.

In the early 1990s astronomers began discovering members of a second asteroid belt beyond Neptune. These Trans-Neptunian Objects comprise a family of more than 1,000 bodies, the second largest of which is Pluto. Since 1999 astronomers have been searching for a third asteroid belt.

Calculations indicate inside Mercury's orbit may lie a population of "vulcanoids" (no homage to Mr.

Vulcanoid searches demand extreme measures.

Astronomers mount telescopes on high-altitude jets and rockets to minimize twilight atmospheric glow, since objects in such small orbits would never stray far from the sun.

Big game fared well in most of Wyo. this winter

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Winter mortality rates for mule deer, pronghorn antelope and elk were below normal in most of the state, Wyoming Game and Fish Department officials said.

The mild winter and the lack of major snow accumulation in lower-elevation wintering ranges produced good conditions for the state's big game populations.

Herds are in particularly good shape in popular hunting areas, including the Casper region, south-central Wyoming and the Wyoming Range, game officials said. Good winter conditions also aided big game survival in the Jackson area, in southeast Wyoming including the Platte Valley, in the Lander region, around Cody and the Big Horn Basin, and in the Sheridan area and Big Horn Mountains.

For fall hunting season, officials said they expect deer and antelope quotas to be similar to previous years and the possibility of slightly more licenses available for elk.

The heavy spring storms that have brought cold and snow to much of the state in recent weeks have helped replenish rangelands that are still recovering from years of drought this decade. The spring storms have also killed some animals, said Daryl Lutz, Game and Fish wildlife management coordinator for the Casper region.

"I will say that if we do get another round like that with subzero temperatures we could be in trouble, but it doesn't look like that is going to happen," Lutz said. "The winter was mild and we're having a wet spring, and I think that any negatives from those wet storms that we've had in the last couple weeks will certainly be outweighed by the vegetation growth we're going to see out of it."

Keith Schoup, a Game and Fish habitat biologist in the Casper region, said the state will need more wet springs, like those of this year and last, for the range to fully recover from years of drought. It takes significant precipitation for plants to build up the nutrients that animals rely on.

"It takes awhile for the moisture to penetrate deeper into that soil profile," Schoup said. "What we need is an abundance of moisture so we can provide enough to the plants they can use for their growth. That surplus is what's important to these plants, especially trees and shrubs."

Biologist Tim Woolley of the Game and Fish Department said the Baggs deer herd in south-central Wyoming appear to be recovering from a major setback two winters ago.

Winter "conditions were open so the animals could get in and get things to eat," he said. "The late spring storms might actually help us because it really charges the soils when the fawns are hitting the ground so mom will be able to feed them and they can grow."

Game and Fish Biologist Gary Fralick said big game animals are thriving in western Wyoming, including the Wyoming Range. Southwest Wyoming, on the other hand, continues to struggle with drought conditions.

attraction and the popular motorized use near Highway 93.

"The North Rim has all sorts of nooks and crannies filled with interesting things," said Dave Freiberg, outdoor recreation planner for the BLM's Shoshone Field Office. Devil's Corral and Box Canyon are among the most well-known, having been sculpted by the ravaging Bonneville Flood as water and debris poured southward back into the Snake. While explorers should be aware that both are partially on private property, Freiberg notes that little signage exists marking those boundary lines.

The North Rim also offers unique perspectives of Shoshone Falls, and a mile below, Pillar Falls. Both are easily accessed by a short hike or quick spin on an ATV or motorbike. State land on the canyon's north edge provides a spectacular view of Pillar Falls.

Those several miles of state holdings along this stretch serve as a point of contention. According to minutes from a recent State Land Board Meeting, state officials were evaluating the area for potential development due to their mandate to manage land for its highest economic value. North Rim Park advocates countered that the land, having no water rights, holds minimal value and could be traded to the BLM for comparable land elsewhere, giving the rim property a chance to be fully incorporated into the new park.

Whether or not the state land issue is resolved easily remains to be seen, but it's not hard to appreciate the outstanding value that the North Rim Park possesses. And when those qualities are

Teen catches 'gator in Ohio lake

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — An Ohio teenager out for a leisurely day of fishing caught an alligator instead when it rose from a lake and lunged at him.

Anthony Greer says the alligator rose out of Akron's Summit Lake at about 9 a.m. on Sunday. The 14-year-old says he killed it by hitting it on the head with a brick.

The 4 feet, 2 inches long alligator has a silver colored band on its right back foot that reads "483."

Akron Zoo's manager of Living Collections, Pete Mohan, says it's possible the alligator came from an alligator farm or a pet store.

Another teenager caught another alligator at the same lake in 2007. That gator was captured alive and was adopted by an animal rescue group.

when you're hunched on your handlebars. Glance over your shoulder and you might catch the corner of a backpack for an instant, thinking it's a car.

Dakine Dispatch: New this spring, the mid-size Dispatch was my favorite pack in the bunch for quick rides around the city. With more than 1,100 cubic inches of capacity, it is the right size for all errands short of a grocery run. I liked the pack's perforated EVA foam back panel and its svelte design — the pack is rigid and sits unmoving on your back, even without a hip belt. At $90, it is a relative bargain.

The company (www.dakine.com) added a nice touch with a zip-shut lock pocket on the bottom: just unzip and your lock falls out into your hand, eliminating the need to dig around in the bag. One trouble spot: Like the Chrome Ivan, reviewed above, tall corners on the top of the bag can block vision during a quick glance back.

Banjo Brothers

Commuter: Like its name alludes, the Commuter Backpack is a no-frills utilitarian pack made for getting around town with stuff in tow. At $80, the Commuter is a good value when compared to the Chrome Ivan, a similar pack. But everything on the Banjo Brothers (www.banjobrothers.com) pack, from the fabric to the zippers, is of lesser quality.

Like the Ivan, the Commuter has a roll-top closure to make it water-proof. But Banjo Brothers employs a welded water-proof liner bag inside a nylon outer shell that sticks with Velcro to stay in place. The liner — essentially a reinforced plastic bag — does the job, and the company sells replacement liners for $10 in case your rips. At more than 1,500 cubic inches in capacity, the size medium Commuter — like the Chrome Ivan — is appropriate for errands around town, including grocery runs.

Large reflective stripes on back and a tab for a red blinking safety light are nice touches. In testing, the pack fit fine and held cargo well.

But plastic clips on the hip belt, which are added to make the belt removable, can rub wrong through a thin shirt or jersey with a lot of weight. For visibility, the Commuter sits lower on the back than the Ivan, reducing blind spots while you ride along.

Crumpler Seedybar: The fun design and quality construction of Crumpler bags (www.crumplerbags.com) is easy to like. The $115 Seedybar is no exception. This bag is neat, with quick-access from a smart design and more usable space than expected in a smallish bag (1,200 cubic inches). The main flap is weather resistant — meaning it'll be fine in all but the biggest downpours — and six pockets provide organizational ease.

I found the Seedybar's harness and belt to be less cushy and comfortable on long rides with weight when compared to the Chrome and Dakine packs. But to its favor, sightlines are uninhibited with the Crumpler thanks to a low profile on the back and rounded top corners, which don't block vision when you're looking back in a tuck.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments

Question: Julie wrote: "My home was in foreclosure. The "foreclosure solution" agency advised me to file a Chapter 13 bankruptcy pro se (without lawyer representation). Now I am receiving notices from the court that I must file additional forms or my case will be dismissed. I don't understand what forms they mean. What can I do?"

Answer: There are agencies that claim to be able to save homes in foreclosure . . . for a hefty fee. If the agency is unable to negotiate a "work out" with the lender, they typically advise debtors to file a pro se bankruptcy, and some will provide guidance and instruction on how to file. Many of these agencies are operating illegally as it is against the law to provide legal advice unless you are a lawyer. Under the new laws, bankruptcy has become extraordinarily complex and cannot be accomplished by merely filling out forms. Any bankruptcy lawyer will tell you that it is virtually impossible for a layperson to successfully file a Chapter 13 case, obtain plan confirmation and eventual discharge without the benefit of lawyer assistance because the applicable statutes and court rules are too numerous and complex for even a very intelligent layperson to understand and apply. You need to retain experienced bankruptcy counsel immediately, but be prepared for reluctance because lawyers recognize that taking over a pro se case already in jeopardy is more difficult and time consuming than preparing a case from scratch.

ITD works on Highway 25 entrance to Jerome

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The bumpy Main Street entrance to Jerome from Interstate 84 will soon be a lot smoother, Idaho Department of Transportation officials say.

ITD workers in bright orange vests and Idaho Sand and Gravel crews clad in lime green have been on the site near I-84 exit 165, where a trio of railroad tracks has created a bumpy introduction to Jerome and Idaho Highway 25.

"When we finish there will be no new signs, no driving rule changes," ITD spokesman Nathan Jerke said. "Just a much smoother drive. But for now, we want to caution drivers to slow down, take precautions and pay attention."

Jerke said traffic will be limited to one lane through the weekend as crews reconstruct the base and planking of the railroad crossing. Jerke described the work as smoothing the road by raising the pavement to the level of the rails.

"We will mill and inlay the rails," he said. "After that we will use two to three inches of asphalt plant mix. There are smaller projects toward downtown where there is a single rail crossing Main, and we are using the asphalt mix to smooth out a couple of other spots past the main intersection downtown."

According to an ISP release, the $1.1 million project contracted to Idaho Sand and Gravel includes roadwork between I-84 and Birch Street, which will begin when the railroad crossing work is completed. Also, a section of Main Street near Garfield Street will be included, tying it into previous sections of newer asphalt. Curb and gutter work, along with storm-water drainage near the railroad crossing will also be performed.

Work is expected to be completed by the end of July, the release stated.

Unresponsive osteoporosis needs a specialist

DEAR DR. GOTT: I was diagnosed with osteoporosis in 1998 following an abnormal bone-density test. I was first prescribed Evista, which I stopped after about a year due to side effects. The primary complaints I had were weight gain and hot flashes. I never had problems with menopause and didn't have hot flashes until trying the Evista. After I stopped it, the side effects disappeared.

Next, my gynecologist put me Fosamax. I took that for about five years but stopped taking it because I couldn't handle the side effects anymore. I experienced acid reflux that would come on at all times of the day and night. I had reflux problems about five days a week, but it stopped when I discontinued the Fosamax. Another problem

I had with the drug was problems with my teeth. I had several root canals and even had to have a tooth pulled, which my dentist told me came out too easily. When I next saw my gynecologist, I again told her I had stopped the medication. She ordered another bone scan, which showed that my bones had become even worse. This time she recommended Boniva. She explained that because it was taken only once a month, it should reduce my chances of having reflux problems again. I took it for a year but again experienced acid reflux. Another trip to the gynecologist and another bone scan showed little improvement, so I was again put on Fosamax but at a lower dosage. Again, the reflux came back, so I stopped it in January of this year.

I don't want to take another osteoporosis medication, but my gynecologist wants me on something to help my bones. I am currently taking two daily calcium pills that

Stimulus funds head to Yellowstone, Grand Teton

By Bob Moen
Associated Press writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Yellowstone National Park will use most of its $14.7 million in federal economic stimulus money to replace an aged wastewater treatment plant and install a small hydroelectric power generator.

The money is Yellowstone's share of $750 million that Interior Secretary Ken Salazar announced Wednesday to help restore and repair national parks.

Grand Teton National Park will get $18.8 million, mostly to consolidate several park administrative offices and replace maintenance buildings. The Devils Tower and Fossil Butte national monuments, Fort Laramie National Historic Site and the John D. Rockefeller Jr. Memorial Parkway will also receive money for projects.

Altogether, Wyoming parks account for $32 million of the stimulus funding announced Wednesday, ranking it fifth highest in money received among all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

With the Washington Monument looming in left, Interior Secretary Ken Salazar talks with a park employee after a news conference at the Interior Department in Washington, Wednesday.

"This is a major influx of money for projects that will certainly support visitors and will allow us to do a better job of protecting the park resources," Yellowstone spokesman Al Nash said Wednesday.

While the money it welcome, Yellowstone, Grand Teton and other parks still have massive backlogs in infrastructure projects that need to be done. Yellowstone has an estimated $750 million in deferred maintenance, and Grand Teton about $131 million.

Danielle Blank, Yellowstone field office coordinator with the National Parks Conservation Association, said parks like Yellowstone still need additional money just to cover their yearly operating budgets.

"This is a small dent in the infrastructure and funding needs of Yellowstone," Blank said.

But the stimulus money will help create short term jobs and help "shore up the important tourism industry in this region in the long term," she said.

Yellowstone will spend $9 million to build a new wastewater treatment plant at Madison Junction. The current plant was built 50 years ago and was never designed to operate during winter months.

"It has capacity issues; it's long outstripped its useful life and the concern is that it could fail," Nash said.

The park expects to break ground on the project this summer because planning and environmental studies are already done, he said.

The park will spend another $1.65 million on a hydroelectric power system at Mammoth Hot Springs that will save the park money on its electric bills and reduce its carbon footprint.

Grand Teton, Yellowstone's sister park to the south, will undertake a major overhaul of its headquarters site at the town of Moose by consolidating various parks offices and operations into a single existing building. The new building will be more energy efficient and more resistant to earthquakes, officials said.

Grand Teton spokeswoman Jackie Skaggs said four or five temporary buildings will be eliminated as a result.

Stimulus cash to help 3 Idaho monuments

BOISE (AP) — The Interior Department has awarded $775,000 in federal stimulus cash for repair and restoration projects at three national monuments in southern Idaho.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar announced the awards Wednesday for Craters of the Moon, Hagerman Fossil Beds and the Minidoka Internment National Monument.

Idaho's share is part of the $750 million in stimulus money awarded to parks and monuments nationwide.

The Idaho package sets aside $469,000 to install a solar energy technology at the monument's headquarters and replace a campground path. The Hagerman Fossil Beds will spend $201,000 on 12 miles of boundary fencing. The Minidoka Internment camp, which housed Japanese Americans during World War II, will get $105,000 to spruce up trails and remove safety hazards.

Twin Falls elementary school students participate at state geography bee

On Jan. 23, 10 Twin Falls elementary school students participated in a District 411 run-off, competing for the District National Geographic Bee title.

The district title went to Omar Laris of Morningside Elementary School. Katelyn Simonson, also from Morningside, finished second.

Other competitors were: Bret Burch and Kathryn Clark from I.B. Perrine Elementary School, Brad Thompson and Gabe Easterling from Harrison

Elementary School, Caden Smith and Alex Montes de Oca from Lincoln Elementary School, Caylie Hale and Joseph Sheen from Oregon Trail Elementary School, and River Minchey Sierra Norman from Sawtooth Elementary School.

The top student at each school took a written test which was sent to the state level where up to 100 top scorers from Idaho qualified for the state competition held in Boise on April 3. Laris, Thompson and Minchey were invited to participate. State qualifiers compete in an oral competition and winners are invited to National Geographic headquarters in late May to compete in the national finals for scholarships in the amount of U.S. $25,000, $15,000 and $10,000.

Julian Kessel, an eighth-grader at O'Leary Junior High School, and Austin Waddoups, a seventh-grader at Robert Stuart Junior High School, also participated in the state competition.

contain vitamin D but wonder what else I can do. It was suggested I try a medication that is given by daily injection or one that I get once a year, but I haven't heard many good things about either and worry about side effects.

DEAR READER: You clearly have a sensitivity to the side effects of anti-osteoporosis medication, and, while both the daily shot and yearly IV would bypass your gastrointestinal tract and likely eliminate the acid-reflux side effect, I wouldn't recommend you try them. I say this because of the three medications you have been on, none has provided significant improvement. In fact, the Fosamax didn't help at all, as your bone-density study revealed worsening.

I urge you to ask for a referral to an endocrinologist, who can test you for other conditions that could cause weakened, brittle bones, such as vitamin D deficiency. While you are awaiting an appointment, take calcium and vitamin D supplements.

Sandra Mae Bass

Sandra Mae Bass, 71, of Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, April 21, 2009, at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise after her courageous battle with cancer.

her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, for she was their everything.

Sandra is survived by her nine children and their spouses, Ron (Lisa)

Sandra was born May 18, 1937, in Duxbury, Mass., to Howard and Evelyn Duxbury. Sandra married at a young age and was blessed with nine children. Sandra started her life journey from Massachusetts with stops along the way in Colorado, Texas, California, Oregon and Washington, where she then found her way to her home in Twin Falls. Here she has raised her children and two of her grandchildren.

Sandra did not ask for much in life, just simple things like a nice cup of coffee, her flower garden, cartoons, a winning scratch ticket, an occasional trip to Jackpot, Nev., and, most importantly, the well-being of her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Anyone who knew Sandra, knew that she was a very special woman, young at heart and always excited about life. Sandra will be greatly missed by her friends and family, but most of all by Billodeaux, Wanda (Harlan) Flinn, Ken Billodeaux, Debbie (Nick) Brito, Cheryl Billodeaux, Bill "James" (Tammmy) Bass, Pauline (Tracy) Castleberry, Pam Bass and Shawna (Jerry) Love. Also surviving Sandra are her numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Her parents; several siblings; and her great-grandson, Chance Rowe, preceded Sandra in death.

A memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 25, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls, with Pastor Sam Fowler officiating. Visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 23, at the funeral home.

At the request of the family, special mention is made of Buds and Blooms for floral requests and in lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Sandra's name to Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

BOISE — Dolly Rose Baugh passed away Monday, April 20, 2009, at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise following a courageous battle with heart disease.

A service will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, April 24, at Summers Funeral Home, 1205 W. Bannock St. in Boise, to be followed by interment at Cloverdale Memorial Park. There will be a viewing from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursday, April 23, at Summers Funeral Homes, Boise Chapel.

Dolly was born April 4, 1936, in Twin Falls, to Victor and Dorine Goertzen. She attended school in Twin Falls until 1950, when she moved to Boise. Dolly graduated from Boise High School in 1954, but she always considered Twin Falls her hometown. She and Jim Wallace were married and, over the next 10 years, she was a homemaker and mother to four daughters. She had many good time memories from those years. In 1964, Dolly began working at Fifth and Main Market as a cashier and was the head cashier there for 18 years. Everyone she met became a friend. She then began working for the Idaho Department of Employment in 1977, retiring in 1998 as the state postal coordinator for the State Department of Labor. She then met and married the love of her life, Trevor Baugh, gained another daughter and two sons, and together they enjoyed many happy times golfing in tournaments, going fishing, taking gambling trips, going to the horse races and doing fun things with their family.

Dolly was preceded in death by her parents and husband. She is survived by her brothers, Chuck (Geri Whitlatch) Goertzen and John (Beverly) Goertzen; and her sister, Suzanne (J.D. Dunn) Goertzen. She is also survived by her daughters, Vicki Wallace, Cindy (Jere) Cochran, Becky Critchfield and Wendy Roberson, all of the Treasure Valley. Her extended family includes a daughter, Molly (Steve) Wingert; and sons, Troy Baugh of Montana and Craig Baugh of Arizona. She leaves behind many grandchildren, great-grandchildren and a lifetime of friends. "Her boys," kitties Elvis and Toy, will be lost without her, but will be loved and cared for by family. She was a kind, compassionate and generous woman who will be missed by all.

Memorials in lieu of flowers can be made to the Idaho Humane Society, 4775 Dorman, Boise, ID 83705.

Newel A. Nelson

BURLEY — Newel A. Nelson, 87-year-old Burley resident, died Monday, April 20, 2009, at the Cassia Regional Medical Center in Burley.

Newel remained active for many years in the Air Force Reserve and was awarded the rank of lieutenant colonel. Throughout his life, he continued to love flying in his own Newel August Nelson, beloved son, husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, friend and bishop, was born Jan. 23, 1922, in Mount Pleasant, Utah, to Edgar and Talula Nelson. The middle child in a family of nine siblings, he grew up helping on the family farm and was active in school drama and debate clubs. Lonely summers at the sheep camp convinced him that sheepherding was not the profession for him. In 1939, Newel joined the National Guard "to see the world outside of Utah." In March 1941, his National Guard unit was mobilized into federal service for one year, but this turned into five years and one war. While in California for training, he realized his two loves, Mariam Hansen, whom he had known in high school, and flying airplanes.

Newel and Mariam were married at Luke Air Force Base in Phoenix, Ariz., on May 22, 1942. Over the next two years, they were stationed at military bases in Wisconsin; Massachusetts; Maine; Vermont; Long Beach, Calif.; and Baffin Island in the Arctic Circle. Their first daughter, Nancy Jean, was born in Long Beach, Calif., in 1944 just before he shipped overseas for one year. Newel had the responsibility of military transport service — flying new airplanes from the factory out to the tactical units. His overseas duty was to fly the C-46 cargo plane carrying supplies between India and China. By June of 1945, Newel had completed 150 missions flying "over the hump" (the Himalayas), for which he received two Air Medals and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Upon returning home, he completed his studies at Utah State University in accounting. His first job was with M.T. Deaton in Twin Falls. While there, his son, Gary Newel, was born in 1950. In 1952, he moved to Burley and became the first CPA in Burley. His practice grew into the firm of Nelson, Sagers, Anderson and King. Newel and Mariam's youngest daughter, Sally Jo, was born in 1956 in Burley.

plane — and made his last flight on his birthday of this year. He was active in service clubs in Burley, including the Elks and the Lions, and served in several leadership positions in both. He was active with the Idaho Society of CPAs, serving as the society's president in 1967-68. Through his friend and client, G. T. (Bud) Newcomb, Newel became involved in developing desert entry land on the Bell Rapids Farm Project in Hagerman. He also acquired land in the project which was operated by his son, Gary, over the next 30 years.

Newel has been an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, serving in many callings including bishop and a counselor in a stake presidency. Most recently, he was serving in the Twin Falls Temple. Newel has also recently enjoyed volunteering at the grade schools providing loving service as a math tutor. Newel will be remembered for his gift of embracing anyone and everyone around him like his best friend. He loved being around people and welcomed each person with a warm smile and an uplifting comment.

He was preceded in death by his wife Mariam; a brother; a sister; and two grandsons. He is survived by his children, Nancy Kartchner of Burley, Gary Nelson of Hagerman and Sally Newton of Tigard, Ore. He is also survived by one brother, five sisters, 11 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at noon Saturday, April 25, at the Burley LDS 3rd and 7th Ward Chapel, 2200 Oakley Ave., with Bishop Randy Spaulding officiating. Burial will follow in the Pleasant View Cemetery, with military rites by the Mini-Cassia Veterans. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday at the Morrison Funeral Home, 188 S. Highway 24 in Rupert, and from 10:30 to 11:45 a.m. prior to the funeral Saturday at the church.

Cinematographer, director Jack Cardiff, 94, dies

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Jack Cardiff, the renowned British cinematographer who won an Academy Award for his stunning color work on the 1947 drama "Black Narcissus" and later became an Oscar-nominated director, has died. He was 94.

Cardiff, who as a cinematographer was known as a pioneer in the artistic use of Technicolor and a "master of light," died Wednesday of age-related causes at his home in Ely, England, said Craig McCall, the producer and director of a pending documentary on Cardiff.

"Jack was a great ambassador to film," McCall said. "He loved it; it was his entire life and almost all the great people that we can mention crossed paths with him."

With Cardiff having begun as a child actor in silent movies and continuing to remain professionally active until about three years ago, McCall said, "he literally almost worked for 90 years, which is quite extraordinary in an industry that is just over a hundred years old."

Once described by British director Michael Powell as "the greatest color cameraman in the world," Cardiff was the cinematographer on films such as "The Red Shoes," "The African Queen," "The Barefoot Contessa," and "Under Capricorn."

As Bush adviser, Rice gave OK for waterboarding

By Pamela Hess
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — As national security adviser to former President George W. Bush, Condoleezza Rice verbally approved the CIA's request to subject alleged al-Qaida terrorist Abu Zubaydah to waterboarding in July 2002, the earliest known decision by a Bush administration official to OK use of the simulated drowning technique.

Rice's role was detailed in a narrative released Wednesday by the Senate Intelligence Committee. It provides the most detailed timeline yet for how the CIA's harsh interrogation program was conceived and approved at the highest levels in the Bush White House.

The new timeline shows that Rice played a greater role than she admitted last fall in written testimony to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The narrative also shows that dissenting legal views about the severe interrogation methods were brushed aside repeatedly.

The Intelligence Committee's timeline comes a day after the Senate Armed Services Committee released an exhaustive report detailing direct links between the CIA's harsh interrogation program and abuses of prisoners at the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in Afghanistan and at Iraq's Abu Ghraib prison.

Both revelations follow President Barack Obama's release of internal Bush administration legal memos that justified the use of severe methods by the CIA, a move that kicked up a firestorm from opposing sides of the ideological spectrum.

According to the new narrative, which compiles legal advice provided by the Bush administration to the CIA, Rice conveyed the administration's approval for waterboarding Zubaydah, a so-called high-value detainee, to then-CIA Director George Tenet in July 2002.

Last fall, Rice acknowledged to the Senate Armed Services Committee only that she had attended meetings where the CIA interrogation request was discussed and asked for the attorney general to conduct a legal review. She said she did not recall details. Rice omitted her direct role in approving the program in her written statement to the committee.

Days after Rice gave Tenet the nod, the Justice Department approved the use of waterboarding in a top secret Aug. 1 memo. Zubaydah underwent waterboarding at least 83 times in August 2002.

Police investigate apparent suicide of Freddie Mac official

By Alan Zibel and Matthew Barakat
Associated Press writers

VIENNA, VA. — The chief financial officer of Freddie Mac, one of the mortgage giants at the heart of the nation's financial meltdown, was found dead in his basement early Wednesday morning in what police said was an apparent suicide.

David Kellermann, 41, apparently hanged himself in his suburban Washington home, said a law enforcement official familiar with the investigation. He asked not to be identified because the investigation was ongoing.

Kellermann

Kellermann was promoted last September when the government seized the mortgage company and ousted its top two executives. Neighbors said Kellermann had lost a noticeable amount of weight under the strain of the new job. Some neighbors said they suggested to Kellermann should quit to avoid the stress, but Kellermann responded that he wanted to help the company through its problems. The neighbors did not want to be quoted by name because they didn't want to upset the family.

Kellermann oversaw a staff of about 500 at Freddie Mac's McLean, Va., headquarters and was working on the company's first-quarter financial report, due by the end of May. Federal regulators closely oversee the company's books and sign off on major decisions.

That relationship has been tense and stressful, with Kellermann working long hours, a colleague said. Freddie Mac executives recently battled with federal regulators over whether to disclose potential losses on mortgage securities tied to the Obama administration's housing plan, said a person familiar with the deliberations who was not authorized to discuss the matter publicly.

Freddie Mac, which owns or guarantees about 13 million mortgages, has been criticized for financing risky loans that fueled the real estate bubble and are now defaulting at a record pace. The company lost more than $50 billion last year, and the Treasury Department has pumped in $45 billion to keep the company afloat. Last month, David Moffett, the government-appointed chief executive, resigned in frustration over strict oversight.

Kellermann worked for Freddie Mac more than 16 years, starting out as a financial analyst and auditor.

Freddie Mac and sibling company Fannie Mae have both come under fire from lawmakers because they plan to pay more than $210 million in bonuses through next year to give workers the incentive to stay in their jobs. Kellermann got $170,000 and was to receive another $680,000 over the next year.

More teens get Plan B

FDA to allow birth control pill for 17-year-olds

By Ricardo Alonso-Zalvidar
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Seventeen-year-olds will be able to buy the "morning-after" emergency contraceptive without a doctor's prescription, a decision that conservatives denounced as a blow to parental supervision of teens but that women's groups said represents sound science.

The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday it would accept, not appeal, a federal judge's order that lifts Bush administration restrictions limiting over-the-counter sales of "Plan B" to women 18 and older. U.S. District Judge Edward Korman ruled last month in a lawsuit filed in New York that President George W. Bush's appointees let politics, not science, drive their decision to restrict over-the-counter access.

Women's groups said the FDA's action was long overdue, since the agency's own medical reviewers had initially recommended that the contraceptive be made available without any age restrictions.

Korman ordered the FDA to let 17-year-olds get the birth control pills. He also directed the agency to evaluate clinical data to determine whether all age restrictions should be lifted.

The FDA's latest action does not mean that Plan B will be immediately available to 17-year-olds.

The manufacturer must

FACTS ABOUT THE PILL

NAME: Plan B.
MANUFACTURER: A subsidiary of Teva Pharmaceuticals Inc.
USE: If taken within 72 hours of unprotected sex, it can lower the risk of pregnancy by up to 89 percent.
WHAT IT IS: A high dose of a drug found in many regular birth-control pills.
WHAT IT ISN'T: It's not the same as the abortion pill RU-486. Plan B prevents ovulation or fertilization of an egg; it also may prevent the egg from implanting into the uterus, though recent research suggests that's unlikely. It has no effect on women who already are pregnant.
WHAT ELSE IT ISN'T: Everyday contraception. It's not intended for routine use.
WHO CAN BUY IT: Starting soon, women 17 and older can buy it without a prescription. Currently, they must be 18 for nonprescription sale. Anyone younger still requires a prescription.
SIDE EFFECTS: Some nausea, dizziness, breast tenderness, temporary menstrual changes.

"It's a good indication that the agency will move expeditiously to ensure its policy on Plan B is based solely on science," said Nancy Northup, president of the Center for Reproductive Rights, which filed the lawsuit.

Conservatives said politics drove the decision.

"Parents should be furious at the FDA's complete disregard of parental rights and the safety of minors," said

Global recession worst since 1930s, IMF says

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The global economy is expected to lurch into reverse this year for the first time since World War II with appalling consequences for nations large and small — trillions of dollars in lost business, millions of people thrust into hunger and homelessness and crime on the rise.

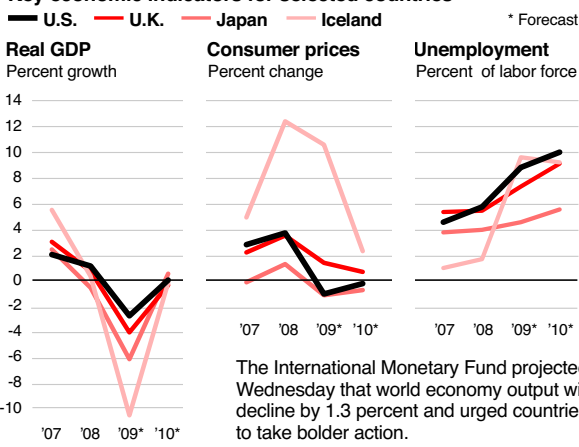

And the pain won't stop this year, the International Monetary Fund declared Wednesday, for what it said was "by far the deepest global recession since the Great Depression." To cushion the blow and head off further damage next year, the IMF is calling for more stimulus projects from the world's governments, including major spending for public works projects.

Even with many countries taking bold steps to turn things around, the global economy will shrink 1.3 percent this year, the IMF predicted in its dour forecast.

"We can be fairly confident that in 2010 or even 2011, economies will not be back to normal," said IMF chief economist Olivier Blanchard. "Which means that governments should today basically think at unemployment rates," Sinai said. "And, with the tremendous number of unemployed people comes the possibility of political unrest."

Also rising crime as millions more are forced into poverty and out of their homes, he and others said. "By any measure," the downturn is the deepest since the Great Depression of the 1930s, the IMF said in its latest World Economic Outlook. "All corners of the globe are being affected."

All told, lost output worldwide could reach as high as $4 trillion this year alone, U.S. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner estimated in a speech Wednesday.

"The world economy is going through the most severe crisis in generations," he said. "We each face somewhat different challenges and thus are not all in the same boat. But we are all in the same storm."

Geithner did not mention any further commitments the U.S. might seek on Friday at meetings with other economic powers or during weekend meetings of the IMF and the World Bank in Washington. Analysts say those discussions are unlikely to produce any further major proposals.

Colorado man found guilty of murdering transgender woman

By P. Solomon Banda
Associated Press writer

GREELEY, Colo. — A man who claimed he snapped before killing a transgender woman was swiftly convicted of first-degree murder and a hate crime Wednesday for savagely beating the woman with a fire extinguisher.

Allen Andrade, 32, of Thornton, was sentenced to life in prison without parole after being convicted of killing Angie Zapata, 18. The jury deliberated for just two hours before finding Andrade guilty.

In handing down the sentence, District Judge Marcelo Kopcow said he hoped Andrade thinks "about the violence and the brutality ... and the pain you caused not only your family, but the family of Angie Zapata."

The case was believed to be the first prosecution under Colorado's bias-crime statute for a crime involving a transgender person. Gay rights activists hope publicity from the case would pressure Congress to add sexual orientation and gender identity to a federal hate crime law.

Prosecutors had argued Andrade knew for hours that Zapata was biologically male and beat her to death because he disliked gays. They said Andrade had attended a court hearing with Zapata where court officials used her legal name, Justin.

A witness at that hearing also testified that when Zapata spoke, she sounded like a man trying to disguise his voice.

Andrade's attorney didn't deny that he killed Zapata, but said he had just learned Zapata's identity after spending hours with her and he lashed out without thinking.

Taliban militants extend hold

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Taliban militants have extended their grip in northwestern Pakistan, pushing out from a valley where the government has agreed to impose Islamic law and patrolling villages as close as 60 miles from the capital.

Police and officials appear to have fled as armed militants also broadcast radio sermons and spread fear in Buner district, just 60 miles from Islamabad, officials and witnesses said Wednesday.

Pakistan's president signed off on the peace pact last week in hopes of calming Swat, where some two years of clashes between the Taliban and security forces have killed hundreds and displaced up to a third of the one-time tourist haven's 1.5 million residents.

Critics, including in Washington, have warned that the valley could become an officially sanctioned base for allies of al-Qaida — and that it may be just the first domino in nuclear-armed Pakistan to fall to the Taliban.

"The activities in the Swat do concern us. We're keeping an eye on it, and are working daily with the Pakistan military," Maj. Gen. Michael S. Tucker told Pentagon reporters in a 35-minute videoconference call from Afghanistan.

Supporters of the deal say it will allow the government to gradually reassert control by taking away the militants' rallying cry for Islamic law.

Students collect bricks from rubble of their school that was allegedly destroyed by militants Tuesday in Mingora, capital of Pakistan's troubled Swat valley.

Many residents are grateful that a semblance of peace has returned. A handful of officials are back in Swat.

The agreement covers Swat and other districts in the Malakand Division, an area of about 10,000 square miles near the Afghan border and the tribal areas where al-Qaida and the Taliban have strongholds.

The provincial government agreed to impose Islamic law in Malakand, and the Taliban agreed to a ceasefire that has largely held.

In recent days, the Swat militants have set their sights on Buner, a district just south of the valley, sparking at least one major clash with residents. The moves indicate the militants want to expand their presence beyond Swat to other parts of Malakand at the very least, under the guise of enforcing Islamic law.

Many in Buner are now too frightened to speak to reporters. However, a lawmaker from the area told The Associated Press that the militants had entered the district in "large numbers" and started setting up checkpoints at main roads and strategic positions.

"Local elders and clerics are negotiating with them to resolve this issue through talks," Istiqbal Khan said.

The militants in Buner also are using radio airwaves to broadcast sermons about Islam, and have occupied the homes of some prominent landowners, said a police official who insisted on anonymity because he was afraid of retaliation. He said the militants have also warned barbers to stop shaving men's beards and stores to stop selling music and movies.

The militants have established a major base in the village of Sultanwas and have set up positions in the nearby hills, the police official said. Militants also have taken over the shrine of a famed Sufi saint known as Pir Baba, he said.

Fidel Castro: Obama 'misinterpreted' brother Raul's words

HAVANA (AP) — Fidel Castro says President Barack Obama "misinterpreted" his brother Raul's remarks regarding the United States and bristled at the suggestion that Cuba should free political prisoners or cut taxes on dollars people send to the island.

Raul Castro touched off a whirlwind of speculation last week that the U.S. and Cuba could be headed toward a thaw after nearly a half-century of chilly relations. The speculation began when the Cuban president said leaders would be willing to sit down with their U.S. counterparts and discuss "everything, everything, everything," including human rights, freedom of the press and expression, and political prisoners.

Obama responded at the Summit of the Americas by saying Washington seeks a new beginning with Cuba. But as he prepared to leave the summit Sunday, Obama also called on Cuba to release political prisoners and reduce taxes on remittances from the U.S.

That appeared to enrage Fidel Castro, 82, who wrote in an essay published Wednesday that Obama "without a doubt misinterpreted Raul's declarations."

The former president appeared to be throwing a dose of cold water on growing expectations for improved bilateral relations — suggesting Obama had no right to dare suggest that Cuba make even small concessions. He also seemed to suggest too much was being made of Raul's comments about discussing "everything" with U.S. authorities.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton had a different perspective on Fidel Castro's essay while speaking about Cuba policy with the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Wednesday. She said that while Fidel Castro had "contradicted" his brother's previous statements about Cuba's willingness to discuss a whole range of issues with the U.S., it shows "there is beginning to be a debate" inside Cuba about how to move forward with U.S. relations.

Fidel Castro's remarks put into doubt the true meaning of his brother's statements and raised questions about Cuba's position on detente with the United States. Although he surrendered the presidency to Raul in February 2008, he retains enormous influence and remains head of Cuba's Communist Party.

Shotgun and spread puts QB prospects behind 8-ball

Missouri quarterback Chase Daniel

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

They spend their college careers rewriting record books, competing for Heismans, leading their teams into the middle of national-title conversations.

It's all great until draft day rolls around. Many don't get picked, or if they do, it's much farther down the list than they'd hoped. Some get turned into receivers. The lucky few whose stock remains high often get their two- or three-year try before they, too, find themselves labeled as disappointments or busts.

These are the quarterbacks of the shotgun, the spread, the dreaded "system" offenses that are taking over college football.

They are the Andre Wares of 10 years ago, the Alex Smiths of more recent vintage, the Graham Harrells and Chase Daniels of today.

Harrell (Texas Tech) and Daniel (Missouri) recently concluded college careers in which they threw for thousands of yards, set dozens of records, became household names. They have been rewarded by largely being left off the list of this weekend's top 100 — or 200 — draft prospects.

For them, getting drafted is not a matter of 'when,' but 'if.' And if they do get their chance with an NFL team, it won't come with many expectations.

"I'd go as far as saying that playing in that kind of offense is a gift and a curse," said Shaun King, the former spread quarterback at Tulane who actually had some success transitioning to the pros with Tampa Bay.

"The gift is, you're forced to make quick decisions, recognize a defense and understand where the football should go," he said. "The detriment is, in the shotgun, you're automatically on balance. There's no drop. It's easier to have your feet where they're supposed to be. Then, you have to do all that while coming

One instant can change so much for so many

We buried our right offensive tackle on a Friday.

I remember because when we buried our left offensive tackle a few months prior, it was also a Friday.

RYAN HOWE

We cried as a team when we lost our homecoming game, cried again when we were eliminated from the state playoffs. But sitting in the church pews listening to the eulogy, we only had glazed-over looks of shock and confusion.

We were too numb to cry, but his mother sobbed inconsolably. Surely she never thought she would say goodbye to her 18-year-old son while in the prime of his life. Parents should never have to bury their children.

The last time the whole team had been together was on graduation day. We figured the next time we'd see everyone again would be at our five-year class reunion. We didn't make it that long.

These memories came flooding back recently with news of the untimely death of Los Angeles Angels pitcher Nick Adenhardt, who was killed along with two other people two weeks ago in an automobile accident in California.

Perhaps because of my own experience of tragically losing two teammates, when I learned of Adenhardt's death, my thoughts immediately turned to Jose Arredondo.

I first met Arredondo while he played for the Orem Owlz, the rookie league affiliate of the Angels. I wrote a magazine feature article about him and his transition from his native Dominican Republic to professional baseball in the United States. Today he's a brilliant relief pitcher for the Angels.

Adenhardt threw six shutout innings against the A's just hours prior to his death. Arredondo relieved him in the seventh. Now Arredondo — along with the rest of Adenhardt's teammates, family and friends — is the one who needs the relief.

While it's always tragic to see a young life end, what makes it even more tragic was Adenhardt's death — like those of my teammates — was completely avoidable. The driver of the vehicle that ran a red light and

Tigers finish GBW play with shutout win over Minico

By Bradley Guire

JEROME — With less than two weeks to go until the District IV tournament, the Jerome softball squad finished the conference season strong Wednesday with a 9-0 home shutout of Minico.

As regular-season champs, the Tigers (13-5, 5-1 Great Basin Conference West) will host the tournament, which starts May 2.

Ashley Morrell earned the victory from the circle, allowing zero runs on six hits with no walks and eight strikeouts. The Spartans came close to scoring on the senior pitcher but a lack of timely hits again plagued Minico, which left runners stranded in scoring position four times.

"We're still having a hard time getting them around," Minico coach Steve Latta said. "We hit the ball today but right at them. We couldn't find a hole."

Tory Sanford hit 2-for-3 and came closest to scoring when she singled in her first at bat and advanced to third on a Jerome error. Jena Bingham also hit 2-for-3.

"We could have done better, but it was one of those days," Sanford said.

For the Tigers, Nicole Valle paced the team from the leadoff position, batting 2-for-4 with three runs scored.

"I thought it was a good game," the Jerome third baseman said. "We came out to play, and we knew that they were coming out to play, too. We gave it our all."

BSU coach Graham 'very excited' about Montreal

By Mike Christensen

Greg Graham remembers well what happened the last time he signed a power forward from the College of Southern Idaho. There's no doubt he's hoping for a little déjà vu.

The 6-foot-8 Montreal follows in Larry was a first-team All-Western Athletic Conference player for the Broncos during the 2007-08 season, when he led BSU to the WAC title and an NCAA Tournament appearance.

"I hope that Daequon has the same success for Boise State and himself that Reggie had," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar.

There's no doubt Graham is hoping the same.

"We're very excited to get Daequon coming to Boise State," said Graham. "He is a very versatile athlete to play in our system."

Montreal, who will likely fill the void created by the departure of BSU's all-conference forward Mark Sanchez, is the first player to sign with the Broncos this spring. Twin Falls golfers Jordan Hamblin and Derek McDowell finished 1-2 at the Falls Classic in Idaho Falls on Wednesday, but it still took a playoff before the Bruins as a team could celebrate their first Falls Classic title in 16 years.

Tied with Shelley after the full event, Twin Falls knocked off the Russets in the first playoff hole to take the boys team crown. The two teams each scored a 285 team score, the lowest team score in 16 years, but Twin Falls took the win when the Bruins netted a team score of 16 on the first playoff hole to Shelley's 18.

Hamblin shot a 67 to take the low round, while McDowell carded a 68.

Sara Federico's 76 was good enough for girls medalist honors, while the Twin Falls girls took a 32-shot victory over Shelley. Hannah McNeley was fourth with an 84 while Katherine Reed tied for fifth at 84.

CSI softball Golden Eagles finally move in NJCAA poll

The Golden Eagles are a top-10 squad once again, and all for ... uh, having a bye weekend.

Despite playing only a nonconference doubleheader last Tuesday against Treasure Valley Community College, the College of Southern Idaho softball team rose back to No. 10 in the NJCAA Division I poll. The Eagles did not play over the weekend.

The move comes after weeks of winning and remaining stagnant at No. 11. However, Salt Lake Community College, the Scenic West Athletic Conference leader, did suffer that fate as the Bruins were ranked No. 5 for the fourth straight week. North Idaho College received votes but did not crack the top 20.

There is a new No. 1 again with Indian River State College of Florida. Last week's No. 1, Chattanooga State Technical Community College, fell to No. 4.

The complete poll and SWAC standings are on Sports 3.

Former CSI student claims gold at USA Judo championships

Times-News

Former College of Southern Idaho student Michael Eldred continued his pursuit of a judo berth for the 2012 Olympic Games by winning the gold medal in the Male 73 Kg category at the 2009 USA Judo Senior Nationals Championships in San Diego last Saturday.

The win earned Eldred a spot on the 2009 World Judo Championship Team. Eldred is from Fruitland and trains with the Western Idaho Judo Institute. He recently won the bronze medal at the Pan American Championships.

In San Diego, he entered as the top seed. After a first-round bye, he beat Alfred Raymond of Rhode Island, Travis Yamanaka of Illinois and David Torres of California to reach the finals.

In the final against Massachusetts's Nicholas Delpopolo, Eldred trailed until the final seconds. Just 2 seconds from the gold medal, Delpopolo attempted an Uchimata (inner thigh throw) attack. Eldred took advantage of the attack and executed a Kosotogake (outside leg block) counter-attack, scoring a Wazaari (1/2 point) just as the buzzer sounded to steal the win.

The title is Eldred's first Senior National Championship title. He will represent the U.S. at the 2009 World Judo Championships in Rotterdam, Netherlands, in August.

Yankees beat A's in extras

NEW YORK — Melky Cabrera ended a home run-filled opening homestand at the new Yankee Stadium with a two-run drive in the 14th inning Wednesday to give New York a 9-7 victory over the Oakland Athletics.

The Yankees overcame another shaky outing from CC Sabathia on a rainy afternoon that featured five more home runs. But after Oakland tied the score in the seventh, what had been a $1.5 billion hitters' haven turned into a pitchers' park until Cabrera's drive off Dan Giese (0-2). Nick Swisher walked to start the inning.

Hideki Matsui and Cabrera hit consecutive homers in the second off Brett Anderson to start the comeback for New York, which opened 4-2 at its new ballpark after going 4,133-2,430-17 at the original Yankee Stadium. Derek Jeter also homered in the longest game of the season by innings and time (4 hours, 57 minutes).

BLUE JAYS 8, RANGERS 7, 11 INNINGS

TORONTO — Kevin Millar singled home the winning run in the 11th inning and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Texas Rangers 8-7 on Wednesday night.

Vernon Wells walked to begin the 11th and went to second on Travis Snider's sacrifice bunt. Scott Rolen was walked intentionally and C.J. Wilson (0-2) was replaced by right-hander Darren O'Day, who was claimed on waivers from the New York Mets earlier in the day.

RED SOX 10, TWINS 1, 7 INNINGS, 1ST GAME RED SOX 7, TWINS 3, 2ND GAME

BOSTON — Brad Penny pitched six solid innings after Tim Wakefield won a rain-shortened complete game, and Boston Red Sox swept a doubleheader.

Wakefield (2-1) tossed a five-hitter for his second consecutive complete game in the opener, a victory that was called after seven innings because of rain. Kevin Youkilis, Nick Green and Mike Lowell each hit a two-run homer.

Penny (2-0) allowed two earned runs in the finale of the day-night doubleheader as the Red Sox extended their winning streak to seven games after a 2-6 start.

Perfect game highlights state bowling tournament in Burley

For the Times-News

BURLEY — The 2009 Idaho State Bowling Championship Tournament in Burley has reached its mid-point and last weekend's action resulted in new leaders in five of the eight events.

The highlight of the weekend came from Robby Robinson of Mountain Home, who rolled a perfect 300 game. Robinson's big score came in the second game of a 731 series that propelled his doubles team into a brief one-pin lead, but the Salmon team of Preston Peterson and Edward Peterson and their 1,511 total easily surpassed the 1,449 of Robinson and Thomas Huggins.

Paul resident Rick Hieb leads the all events standings, while The Dreaming Team of Hailey leads the Team A Division standings.

The highest series in the tournament, both scratch and handicap, was turned in by Larry Gosack of Salmon. He entered the tournament with a 188 average and got off to a good start in the Doubles Event with a 620 series. Then he started off his singles with a 233 before adding two near-perfect games of 279 and 278. His 790 series (890 with his handicap) gave him a 59-pin lead in the A Division of the Singles Event. Gosack added a 737 handicap series in the Team Event to sit third in the All-Events category.

Marvin Harrell of Idaho Falls also had an eventful tournament. He started off with a 723 (814) series to put him and his doubles partner, Ron Ruiz, in fourth place. Although, his 669 (760) score in Singles only was good enough for 13th place, when he added a 620 (711) set in the Team Event he found himself with a 2,409 and a seven-pin lead in the Handicap All-Events.

The tournament continues another three weekends and then the prize fund, in excess of $40,000, will be awarded.

Tigers

T.J. Surrage homered for a pair of RBIs in the third inning, and Rena Montgomery notched an RBI single.

Head coach Adam Reynolds expressed concern that his team isn't adjusting to slower pitchers as fast as they should.

"That's what scares me most in the tournament," he said. "We'll see (Laura Hurtado) and then either (Burley's Molly) Mills or (Wood River's Sam) Engel after that, and that scares me because I don't know if we can make the adjustment. We've done it before, but it's taken at least half the game to do it."

"Minico's a quality program, especially on senior night they were ready to go. It's good to beat a good team like Minico," said Jerome's Cameron Stauffer, who went 3-for-4 with three RBIs.

Minico (13-11 overall, 4-1 GBW) is still in the driver's seat for the top seed in the league, and could wrap that up on Tuesday at Burley.

"We're where we need to be, but obviously we still need to take care of business," said Minico coach Ben Frank.

Minico saw its 6-0 lead collapse in the decisive fifth inning. Jerome seized control of the game by sending 12 batters to the plate and putting nine runs on the board. The outburst was fueled by a two-run double by Trey Bennett, an RBI

Minico had the tying run at the plate in the seventh, but Stauffer closed out the final inning with two strikeouts.

Jazz happy, hopeful as Lakers come to SLC for Game 3

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Still weary after yet another loss in Los Angeles, the Utah Jazz knew Wednesday was last call for optimism.

The first-round playoff series against the Lakers returns to Utah on Thursday, a game which will either get the Jazz back in it or put the put the defending Western Conference champions on the verge of sweeping the best-of-7 series.

"The series is not over. They just did what they were supposed to do — win at home," Utah point guard Deron Williams said. "Now we've got to do what we're supposed to do."

If the Jazz lose Game 3 on Thursday, anything they say about the series not being over yet will have a hollow ring. Through two games, the Lakers have shown depth well beyond reigning MVP

Game 3

Lakers at Jazz
8:30 p.m., TNT

Kobe Bryant while taking a 2-0 lead, pulling out to huge leads in both games and then dispatching the Jazz every time they rallied to make it close.

So far it's been a rerun of last year's second-round series, when the Lakers won the first two games and forced Utah to hold on at home.

The Jazz are in the same predicament almost a year later, needing home-court advantage and any other edge they can summon just to stay in the series.

"I think our fans will give us a lift there and give us a little boost, but they can't run the floor for us," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said.

The Lakers are used to being the hated rival most everywhere they go and have not been rattled in the past by Utah's home-court advantage. They clinched last year's series with a 108-105 win in Game 6 here and were one of just four teams to win at Utah during the regular season in 2007-08.

"It's just a challenge, being in a tough atmosphere where everybody's pulling against you," Bryant said. "The more they boo me, the more they heckle me, the more they relax me, the more I play better. You would think they would know that by now."

Bryant and the Lakers had reason to be relaxed before boarding the flight to Utah on Wednesday as the Jazz plotted ways to avoid a 3-0 deficit.

Utah was still uncertain Wednesday about center Mehmet Okur, who missed the first two games with a strained right hamstring and will be a game-time decision Thursday.

Okur is Utah's top 3-point threat and was second on the team in scoring in rebounds. The 6-foot-11 veteran would also be a welcome addition inside as the Jazz try to find some way to hamper Pau Gasol, Lamar Odom and Andrew Bynum, who all scored in double figures Tuesday night as the Lakers won 119-109.

The Lakers shot 86 percent in the first quarter Tuesday while scoring 41 and forced Utah into 20 turnovers in the game, leading to 34 points.

"We've got to handle the basketball," Sloan said. "When you give them 34 points off of turnovers, where does that put you? You can talk about all the stuff you want, but you've got to handle the basketball."

Utah also needs to play better defensively. The Lakers shot 58 percent in the first two games, led by Gasol going 16-for-22 with little resistance inside by the Jazz.

Lakers coach Phil Jackson said Bynum, who missed 32 games because of a knee injury and didn't return until the end of the regular season, didn't practice much Wednesday because the knee brace was bothering him.

Magic hold off Sixers, even series

ORLANDO, Fla. — Fouled out and reduced to a spectator, Dwight Howard stood on the Orlando Magic sidelines with one thought as he watched the Philadelphia 76ers erase another big lead.

"Man, I hope these boys don't come back again," Howard said. They nearly did.

Howard had 11 points and 10 rebounds before fouling out, and Rashard Lewis made a pair of big jumpers in the final minutes to help Orlando get its fourth win in five chances against Philadelphia this season.

"They want me to shoot the jump-shot," Lee said. "Knowing that Dwight's so dominant down low, it's up to me to make shots when he's double-teamed."

Andre Miller had 30 points, and Andre Iguodala scored 20 of his 21 points in the second half for the Sixers, who closed the gap to five points and almost erased the same deficit they faced in the series opener. Game 3 is Friday in Philadelphia.

HEAT 108, HAWKS 93

ATLANTA — Dwyane Wade scored 33 points, 13 straight to close the first half before he banked in a 3-pointer with 2½ minutes left to finish off the Hawks in a victory that helped Miami even the series before it headed to south Florida.

The Hawks should have known this wouldn't be their night when "Spirit," an actual hawk that flies down from the rafters during the pre-game introductions, decided to hang around for the start of the game. The game had to be halted for a couple of minutes when the fierce-looking bird landed on the top of the backboard; he finally flew to his handler and was led out of the building.

Mike Bibby led the Hawks with 18 points, but the home team shot only 44 percent from the field and struggled at the foul line, making 19-of-30.

Seventh-seeded Rangers take 3-1 lead on Capitals

NEW YORK — Henrik Lundqvist made 38 saves, half of them in the second period, and the seventh-seeded New York Rangers put the Washington Capitals on the brink of elimination with a 2-1 victory Wednesday night.

Lundqvist, who had a 1-0 win in Game 2, was on top of his game all night as the Capitals controlled play from the second period to the end — outshooting New York 39-21. But it's the Rangers who hold a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Paul Mara staked the Rangers to the lead with 6:05 left in the first period, scoring just the second goal against Simeon Varlamov, the rookie who has stopped over for Jose Theodore after New York's 4-3 win in Game 1.

Chris Drury added his first goal of the series for the Rangers.

Varlamov got Washington back into the series with a 4-0 win Monday night, after the Rangers posted a pair of road wins, but now the Capitals — the No. 2 seed in the Eastern Conference — could be out of the playoffs Friday night when they host Game 5.

Alex Ovechkin scored for Washington early in the third period.

BRUINS 4, CANADIENS 1

MONTREAL — Former Montreal forward Michael Ryder scored twice and assisted on — outshooting New York 39-21. But it's the Rangers who hold a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

David Krejci's goal to help Boston complete a four-game sweep.

Tim Thomas made 26 saves, and Phil Kessel also scored in Boston's first series victory in 10 years. The top-seeded Bruins had lost five straight series — falling to Montreal in 2002, '04 and '08 — since beating Carolina in the first round in 1999.

Bulls' Rose is voted NBA rookie of the year

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — Like most good point guards, Derrick Rose rarely gives anything away. This time, he couldn't resist.

After learning Wednesday he is the NBA's rookie of the year, Rose let a little secret slip: He wanted the award. Badly.

"When I first came into the season, my biggest thing was to get this award," Rose said. "I was telling you all that I didn't care, but I did. You really do want this award. There was a lot of talent out there that I had to go against."

Rose, who led his hometown Bulls to the playoffs and restored hope to a franchise in disarray, was the runaway pick.

"For Derrick to take the ball from Day 1, to lead our basketball team, to play at the level he played at is really, really significant and certainly means that as we go forward here, we've got the guy that we are going to build around," general manager John Paxson said.

Rose became the third Bulls player to win the award Wednesday, joining Michael Jordan and Elton Brand. He received 111 first-place votes and 574 points from a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters; runner-up O.J. Mayo of the Memphis Grizzlies received five first-place votes and 127 points.

Rose's selection was hardly a surprise, after the No. 1 overall draft pick led all rookies with 6.3 assists per game and was second in scoring average at 16.8, and established himself as the franchise's first true cornerstone since Jordan.

"I think there are very few people in the NBA who could do what he did this year," teammate Joakim Noah said. "You tell me another No. 1 pick who got to the playoffs in their hometown, especially in a big city with so many distractions and so many things going on. I mean, he's all about one thing and that's winning basketball games, and that's what I respect about him."

The only other players who received first-place votes were Brook Lopez of the New Jersey Nets and Russell Westbrook of the Oklahoma City Thunder. Eric Gordon of the Los Angeles Clippers rounded out the top five.

Draft

from under center. It takes some significant athleticism to make the change."

Ask 100 draft experts why the so-called system QBs never pan out and you will get 100 variations on the same theme: Spread offenses don't give quarterbacks opportunities to read defenses while making the three-five-or-seven-step drops so prevalent in the NFL; they only require the quarterback to read one side of the field; they allow quarterbacks to pad stats by getting big chunks on bubble screens and low-risk throws; they don't subject the thrower to the physical (or mental) pounding he'll take in the NFL; and there are footwork issues.

The good news for these quarterbacks is that one constant has stayed the same, whether the player works in the wishbone, the shotgun or anything in between: If they have size, talent, arm and brains, eventually they will find their way into a lineup.

"If you have the skill level, you can make it no matter what," said ESPN draft guru Mel Kiper. "But if you take a Matthew Stafford and you put him at Texas Tech, it's going to make for a tougher evaluation."

As it turned out, evaluating Stafford hasn't been that difficult, in part because he played in a pro-style offense at Georgia that served him well, even if the Bulldogs didn't reach their full potential. Ranked first at the beginning of last season, Georgia lost an ugly game at home to Alabama in September and was out of the national title hunt by Nov. 1.

Still, Stafford is widely projected as the best quarterback in the draft.

Meanwhile, Missouri and Texas Tech spent the last two years shaking up the Big 12 and giving themselves a chance at the national title much deeper into the season.

In his second season after taking over for Brad Smith, a multiple record setter at Mizzou who is now playing receiver for the Jets, Daniel led the Tigers to a No. 1 ranking heading into the Big 12 title game in 2007.

Last November, Harrell made what might go down as the most memorable throw of the season, the 28-yard touchdown to Michael Crabtree on the sideline with 1 second left that gave the Red Raiders a 39-33 win over Texas. Texas Tech moved to No. 2 in the polls after that win.

Harrell threw for 5,111 yards last season, becoming the first college player to break the 5,000-yard mark twice.

Daniel finished with 13,256 yards of total offense, a Missouri record.

But barring some kind of draft-day miracle, neither will be picked on the first day and both will likely be waiting until the end to see if their name gets called at all.

"You can forget about the statistics and the yardage that's accumulated," said former Bucs and Raiders coach Jon Gruden, who now works for the NFL Network. "The question is, can they make NFL throws under center under the gun? If they've fallen on draft boards, it's because the times they've been seen, people have come away with questions about their physical status and their arm strength."

Those questions seemed to have been answered about Alex Smith in 2005, when he was drafted first out of Utah. But these days, Smith serves as the poster boy for the modern-day spread-offense quarterback gone bust.

Smith led coach Urban Meyer's Utah team to the Fiesta Bowl in 2004 and into the heart of the national title conversation.

In the pros, Smith has been through three major injuries, four offensive coordinators and now, a reworked contract for significantly less money as his quest continues to prove he can play in the NFL.

plowed into the car Adenhardt and his friends were riding in had a blood-alcohol level almost three times the legal limit. What's more, the guy had lost his license for a previous DUI.

Stupid. Irresponsible. Senseless.

Of course, none of us would have heard about Adenhardt's death if he hadn't been a Major League pitcher. Sports tend to place athletes in the public eye. When the heroes of yesterday's sports page wind up on today's front page, it's hardly ever good news.

Last September, Minico High senior football player Braun Catmull was credited in the Times-News sports pages for a key quarterback sack during the fourth quarter of the Spartans' win over Century.

The next time Catmull's name made the newspaper it was on the front page following a tragic auto accident in January. Catmull survived, but the driver of the other vehicle, Steven Damron, did not.

Catmull, 18, is now facing felony vehicular manslaughter charges. At the time of the accident, Catmull and the passenger in his vehicle were allegedly speeding away from pulling a juvenile prank.

Montreal averaged 15.9 points and 8.9 rebounds for the 22-9 Golden Eagles and was named to the All-Region 18 first team. The native of Syracuse, N.Y., did all that despite battling ankle and foot injuries and playing with a hernia the last half of the season.

"I had a great experience," Montreal said of his time in Twin Falls. "I don't regret anything about it." Montreal is set to graduate from CSI next month and said he is undecided on the degree he'll pursue at BSU. He verbally committed to Graham on Sunday night after a three-day campus visit.

"I felt comfortable with the system and the coaches and I got a good vibe from the guys when I was there," he said.

Advertising Sales Director

The Elko Daily Free Press is seeking a focused, creative Advertising Sales Director with an affinity for numbers and a passion for investing in account executives that employ a relentless curiosity in discovering and meeting real customer needs. Ad Director candidates should have a track record of successful sales supervisory experience in a fast-paced business.

We need someone who will spend a significant portion of each week outside the office, calling on both current customers and non-advertisers with our account executives. The Advertising Sales Director will work to systematically increase the number of active advertisers in the Elko Daily Free Press and the frequency with which they advertise with us.

If you prefer to invest your time coaching account executives in the regular practice of "needs-analysis" rather than in the creation of short-term, product-focused revenue "fixes", we want to talk to you.

The Advertising Sales Director will oversee seven retail/classified account executives, as well as several graphic artists and an experienced support staff. They will be a vital contributor to creating the online future of the newspaper and will be a collegial member of the management team charged with setting the course for future success.

The Elko Daily Free Press provides a meaningful work environment for our employees, rewards innovation and risk-taking, and offers opportunities for career development. In addition to the Elko Daily Free Press, the Advertising Sales Director will oversee sales into The Finder, Northern Nevada Real Estate, Mining Quarterly, a variety of other niche publications and our online newspaper www.elkodaily.com.

Elko is a vibrant northern Nevada gold-mining town located along Interstate 80, with an established gaming/hospitality industry, a strong community college and a thriving retail and manufacturing base. Elko has over 300 days of sunshine annually and is in close proximity to unlimited four-season recreational opportunities.

The Advertising Sales Director position offers a competitive salary, excellent benefits package, and career progression possibilities within Lee Enterprises. If interested in this excellent opportunity, please apply online at <http://www.elkodaily.com/workhere/>

Duped brides discover they were taken to the cleaners

DEAR ABBY: Believe me, I sympathize with "Duped in California" (Feb. 2). After my wedding in 1979 I sent my gown to a recommended dry cleaner and got the precious box back after waiting more than a month. It was sealed, with instructions to keep it sealed to preserve it.

A couple of months later I had a nagging feeling that something might be wrong and decided to look inside. Although I did get my dress back, it was far more soiled than when I took it to the cleaners. There were stains down the front and dirt along the hemline. I don't think the dress was ever cleaned, and even worse, I suspect it was worn by someone else.

My advice to brides: Send your gown to be cleaned, but check it before leaving the dry cleaners.

— DUPED IN CHIPPEWA FALLS, WIS.

DEAR DUPED: Thank you for your input, which was echoed by many other former brides. Wedding season is coming, and that's why I am urging brides-to-be to take your suggestion to heart. What happened to you appears to be a dirty little secret in the dry-cleaning industry.

To avoid being victimized, ask someone in the salon where your wedding gown is purchased to recommend a preservation specialist in your area. Then contact the Better Business Bureau to ensure that no complaints have been filed.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Read on:
DEAR ABBY: After my wedding, my mother had the good sense to suggest we inspect my dress after it was cleaned, but before it was boxed. To our horror, the dress appeared to have been run through a washing machine. Also, there were spots all over the dress. We were informed that the spots were alcohol stains, which wouldn't show up until after the dress was cleaned. But, Abby, no alcohol had been served at my reception.

— BRIDE IN CHAPEL HILL, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Duped in California" wasn't the first time I have heard of a dress going missing after it was supposedly returned from the cleaners. A TV personality was doing her talk show on weddings and presented her dress on the air to her audience only to discover — to her shock and horror — that her veil was the only thing in the box. Because the dress is returned in a sealed box, most people don't think to check it, and this scam is commonplace and very lucrative for the thieves. Reputable cleaners should request that their customers inspect their gowns before the box is sealed so the disreputable ones can be weeded out from the ones who are honest.

— WENDY H. ANTIOCH, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: "Duped" is not alone. There have been many incidents of empty preservation boxes and stories of stolen or missing gowns, bridal veils and other family treasures.

Your readers can protect themselves by choosing a specialist who processes the gown LOCALLY, and by asking to inspect it personally before it is put into the container — which should be completely acid-free and lined with fabric or acid-free tissue.

For more tips on gown care and information about safe storage, your readers should visit our Web site, www.WeddingGownSpecialists.com.

IF APRIL 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Your area of the cosmic pie will receive visits from Saturn late in the year. Saturn has a reputation as a tough taskmaster, so it is wise to get all your ducks in a row long before challenges appear on the horizon. You are at your best with business, career and finances during the next six weeks. June and July are delightful months for new friends, romance and travel. Remain responsive, conscientious about fulfilling your obligations, and avoid beginning anything of importance in October through December. Look for the silver lining within clouds of worries in late December and early January when you become more ambitious and focused on success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Bring along the warm fuzzy slippers for a friend, as doubts and misgivings could cause someone to get cold feet. A temporary change of feelings can be overcome with patience and thoughtfulness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): People who change their minds can waste your time. You may need patience to deal with what might be a losing proposition. It is a good day to list priorities and concentrate fully on the top ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are a real force to be reckoned with. Your sterling reputation may become even more polished as you handle difficult tasks with ease. Focus on achieving a large range of goals with dedication.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Misunderstandings could briefly turn your plans inside out. Wise counsel from a close friend, however, can help you mend fences and get everyone back on the same team.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Live the way you would live if you had the money and credentials. This doesn't mean running up a credit card bill bigger than the national debt. It means being honest, sincere and trustworthy with everyone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Contracts may require further review. This is not a good time to make alterations, but unexpected information could alter your opinion. Follow the rules, stick to who and what you trust, and make no change.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow no carrots; something may lure you away from your already successful plans. It could be a brief quarrel with a loved one or a too-good-to-be-true offer that has some hidden strings attached.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Change not, fail not. You already have put certain key matters into motion that will help you attain your objectives. Changing your plans at this juncture can only create disruptions and mistrust.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): To enjoy prosperity you must stick to your purpose. Ignore interruptions and focus on doing what you should be doing. You may be overly eager to make changes or easily influenced others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Every mountain comes to a peak. Conflicting emotions may force you to consider ending an association. Sound business sense, not emotions, should be your guide when making key decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The cruel light of day might show you a fatal flaw. Luckily, this gives you a chance to redeem yourself. Take the time to make suitable fixes and then everything will fall in place as planned.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You don't need to outdo or outmaneuver anyone. What you perceive as a challenge might just be a kindness. If someone offers to do a favor, don't let your pride get in the way.

Today is Thursday, April 23, the 113th day of 2009. There are 252 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
April 23, 1564, is believed to be the birthday of English poet and dramatist William Shakespeare; he died 52 years later, also on April 23.

On this date:
In 1789, President-elect George Washington moved into the first executive mansion, the Franklin House, in New York.

In 1791, the 15th president of the United States, James Buchanan, was born in Franklin County, Pa.

In 1896, the Vitascopes system for projecting movies onto a screen was publicly demonstrated in New York City.

In 1940, about 200 people died in the Rhythm Night Club Fire in Natchez, Miss.

In 1954, Hank Aaron of the Milwaukee Braves hit the first of his then-record 755 home runs, in a game against the St. Louis Cardinals. (The Braves won, 7-5.)

In 1968, student protesters began occupying buildings on the campus of Columbia University in New York; police put down the protests a week later.

In 1969, Sirhan Sirhan was sentenced to death for assassinating New York Senator Robert F. Kennedy. (The sentence was later reduced to life in prison.)

In 1985, the Coca-Cola Co. announced it was changing the secret flavor formula for Coke. (Negative public reaction forced the company to resume selling the original version.)

In 1988, a federal ban on smoking during domestic airline flights of two hours or less went into effect.

In 1998, James Earl Ray, who'd confessed to assassinating the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and then insisted he'd been framed, died at a Nashville, Tenn., hospital at age 70.

Ten years ago: On the first day of a 50th anniversary NATO summit in Washington, Western leaders pledged to intensify military strikes against Yugoslavia and vowed "no compromise" on demands that Slobodan Milosevic withdraw his troops from Kosovo.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush eased Reagan-era sanctions against Libya in return for Moammar Gadhafi's giving up weapons of mass destruction. South African President Thabo Mbeki was elected unopposed for a second term.

One year ago: Bush, pushing for a Mideast peace agreement, met at the White House with Jordan's King Abdullah II. Defense Secretary Robert Gates announced that Army Gen. David Petraeus would be nominated by Bush to be the next commander of U.S. Central Command. The Supreme Court unanimously affirmed that police have the power to conduct searches and seize evidence, even when done during an arrest that turns out to have violated state law. The Chicago Cubs won their 10,000th game, joining only the Giants franchise in reaching that mark with a 7-6 victory in 10 innings at Colorado.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Panics in some cases have their uses; they produce as much good as hurt."

— Thomas Paine

Many beginners find it easier to learn the basics of card play than of bidding. Bidding is an imprecise science at best, and it is not only beginners who occasionally land in silly contracts because they have bid badly.

In today's auction South should have bid three no-trump, not three spades. North could not have four spades, so introducing a weak suit here was pointless. The call should be used to show values in spades, asking North to bid three no-trump with a club stopper.

It is important not to panic when the contract you find yourself in is far from ideal, because a clear head can often find a way to succeed. The final contract was ridiculous, three no-trump or five diamonds being much superior, but curiously, on the lie of the cards, four hearts cannot be defeated on any lead.

At the table West led the club 10, thinking from the bidding that perhaps North and South were short of club stoppers. Declarer won dummy's club queen and played the heart king. Suppose East wins and returns a heart. Declarer wins in the dummy and plays diamonds from the top. East has to follow helplessly, so declarer ruffs the fourth diamond with the heart nine. He then cashes the heart queen, followed by the ace and king of clubs and ace of spades. That makes 10 tricks: one spade and three tricks in each of the other suits. The defenders take their spade and trump tricks together at the end.

ANSWER: This was the start of the bidding in our featured auction. But here South should simply bid three no-trump. It is unlikely that the defenders can take five spade tricks; if they cannot, your side should have enough values to give three no-trump decent play.
