Allyn Dingel, champion of judiciary, Twin Falls grad, dies

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

BOISE - Allyn Dingel, a 1954 Twin Falls High School graduate who helped modernize Idaho's judicial system and became a longtime lobbyist at the Capitol, died Thursday from cancer. He was 72.

Dingel, an attorney known for his outgoing personality, spent decades working along Idaho state government, first as a deputy attorney general and then for most of his career as a champion of improving the judiciary and lobbyist for the insurance industry.

He was so popular among legislators, and his presence so fondly remembered, that the Legislature adopted SCR111, which commended "his good humor, his prodigious memory of persons, times and events, and his unfailing courtesy, honesty and integrity." Many offered tearful testimony on chamber floors.

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, said Dingel, years ago when Darrington became Judiciary Committee chairman, began a jovial routine by addressing Darrington as "your honor" and would offer testimony like he were speaking to a jury.

"Allyn was a unique personality. He was passionate. He gave so very much."

Dingle was born in Twin Falls and attended Twin Falls High School, where he played baseball and was the student body president. After graduating in 1954 he attended the University of Idaho and received his undergraduate degree. He received his law degree from New York University, where he served on the law review and graduated with honors.

Victor Arreaga, vice principal of Jerome Middle School, said the goal of the program is to debunk the glorification and appeal that gangs have. Awareness about the issue is important for parents as well as youth, he said. This year, Arreaga started a gang intervention program that encourages the middle school's students who are at risk to find good goals to take them down a path away from gangs.

When establishing a new lawn, we recommend a soil test for plant available nitrogen. Soil tests provide values for both ammonium-N and nitrate-N. When added together they equal the total plant available nitrogen. If your soil test indicates that there is less than 5.0 ppm plant available N in the top 8 inches of the soil, apply 0.5 pound N per 1,000 square feet. If the soil test from your soil sample indicates 5.0 ppm plant available N or more, additional N is unnecessary to establish the new lawn.

New lawns generally require greater additions of P and K than existing lawns. Phosphorus application rates based on a soil test are shown in Table 2. For best results when establishing new lawns, incorporate the fertilizer P into the top 4 to 6 inches of the soil

Jet flyover in lower Manhattan sets off panic

By Ula linytzky and Sara Kugler Associated Press writers

NEW YORK – An airliner and supersonic fighter jet zoomed past the lower Manhattan skyline in a flash just as the work day was beginning Monday. Within minutes, startled financial workers streamed out of their offices, fearing a nightmarish replay of Sept. 11.

For a half-hour, the Boeing 747 and F-16 jet circled the Statue of Liberty and the lower Manhattan skyline near the World Trade Center site. Offices evacuated. Dispatchers were inundated with calls. Witnesses thought the planes were flying dangerously low.

But the flyover was nothing but a photo op, apparently one of a series of flights to get pictures of the plane in front of national landmarks.

It was carried out by the Defense Department with little warning, infuriating New York officials and putting the White House on the defense. Even Mayor Michael Bloomberg didn't know about it, and he later called it "insensitive" to fly so near the site of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

House military office, Louis Caldera, took the blame a planes was a 747 that is used by the president.

Hagerman students gear up for art show

Hagerman School Students were busy showing their art work at various venues around the state recently.

Hannah Robinson was awarded honorable mention at the University of Idaho High School Student Art Show. Other students whose work was selected for that show were Anna Silver, Geneva Madsen, Kevin Hardesty, Adrien Salas, Janice Rudd, Chelsea Bender and Kassy Manning.

Students who recently showed work at the College of Southern Idaho Winter Symphony Concert/Magic Valley High School Student Art Show were Bayley Potter, Lauren Hampton, Dylan Turnbull, Rose Klinkenborg, Christina Lewis, Matt Conde, Tobi Bray, Christina Masonholder and Anna Silver.

The Third Annual K-12 Hagerman School District Art Show and Sale will be held in conjunction with the Spring Concert May 19 at the High School.

Every student who has produced art this year will have the opportunity to show and sell at least one work. Should their work be purchased by a parent or community member, the student will receive half of the money and the other half will go towards the purchase of a matt cutter for the art department.

Gooding students third in ISU welding competition

Not seeing clearly: Wife's vanity mars her judgment

DEAR DR. GOTT: You are my last hope. My wife has Parkinson's, but is doing well. Oddly enough, that is not our problem. The problem is her resistance to wearing glasses. Vanity has reared its ugly head, and she has opted not to use her glasses but has instead chosen to use store-bought reading glasses. Sadly, she still needs the distance glasses we paid a lot of money for. She went to an eye doctor for an exam. We bought glasses for $500, which were destroyed by one of our dogs. They could have been replaced for the price of new lenses, but that wasn't what she wanted, so we went off to another doctor for yet another exam and this time ordered a pair for the grand total of $700. Well, they aren't really what she likes, so she won't use them. I'm going crazy. She needs glasses to read and see distance. She says bifocals make her dizzy, and she refuses to wear them. I can't convince her that they take getting used to before they feel good.

She reads your column religiously, and I know if she hears the same advice from you, she would heed it and use the glasses or at least go back to her eye doctor for help.

DEAR READER: It

appears some things are within your control and others are not. Despite the fact that you care deeply, keeping your sanity must remain at the top of your priority list. Don't even bother to waste your money on another exam or glasses if she cares so little that she allows the dog to use them as a chew toy.

Share your concerns with your wife, especially if she cannot see any distance without appropriate glasses. If she refuses bifocals, suggest that she get two pairs of glasses, one for reading and the other for JFAC's ideas didn't all prevail, but they should have. Every school teacher and public employee who still has a job after July 1 has Cameron, Bell and a majority of their budget-committee colleagues to thank. Along the way, Cameron managed to craft legislation to keep the state's catastrophic health care fund solvent. And we're forever in Bell's debt for taking it personally that this session went on far too long at a cost to the taxpayers of $30,000 a day.

3. Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home. The conscience of the Senate. This truck company-owning Vietnam vet from a socially conservative district put his political career on the line last session by sticking up for the rights of gay Idahoans and by defying the all-powerful Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry. This session he championed passage of meaningful day care regulation, and he almost got it done.

Kelly's major initiative this year - co-sponsored by Senate Majority Leader Bart Davis - was requiring financial disclosure by public officials and candidates for public office. That bill passed the Senate, has significant support in the House, but is languishing in Speaker Lawerence Denney's desk drawer.

7. Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Eagle. They don't come more conservative in the House GOP caucus than this

8. Fred Wood, R-Burley. In addition to crafting legislation to preserve state

Lake

6. Sen. Kate Kelly, D-Boise. The five-year leg-

f a compromise can truly be audacious, President Obama's split-decision to release memos detailing the past use of allegedly torturous interrogation tactics, but also to promise to vigorously defend those who followed the (possibly illegal) rules was one of his most audacious so far.

This wasn't, of course, the audacity of hope but the audacity of realism – of a president trying, simultaneously, to maintain national security, preserve American credibility, follow disclosure laws without sacrificing executive privilege, and avoid a divisive legal battle.

All of this was not immediately accomplished. Obama spent the weekend taking flak from both sides -from civil libertarians who point to his obligation to prosecute torture, and from conservatives such as former CIA director Michael Hayden who felt the disclosures gave comfort to U.S. enemies.

It's hard to predict exactly where this debate will go whether Congress will push for tougher action against the CIA interrogators, or if a future event, such as a terrorist attack, will call attention to the need for socalled harsh interrogation tactics.

But the best guess is that Obama's decision will ensure that both sides will keep on debating – with civil libertarians demanding prosecutions, while conservatives insist the tactics were justified – to diminishing effect. Meanwhile, Obama will achieve his stated goal of keeping the country looking forward, not backward.

Obama is betting that full disclosure of what was done will satisfy most critics of the Bush administration. By admitting what was done, Obama also hopes to quell the conspiracy theories that are so often inspired by excessive secrecy - the assumption that the United States must have been doing much worse things to prisoners, otherwise why cover it up.

Obama alluded to that possibility in his statement that accompanied the memos.

Keeping the memos secret, he argued, "could contribute to an inaccurate accounting of the past, and fuel erroneous and inflammatory assumptions about actions taken by the United States."

In fact, few of the techniques revealed in the memos were not previously known. In many cases, they were openly discussed by members of the Bush administration.

The tactics included dousing suspects in cold water, slamming them into walls, forcing them to remain nude, isolating them in small spaces, and in some instances pouring water into their faces to simulate drowning known as waterboarding. These tactics were old news. The fact that a suspect who was known to be terrified of insects was put in a cage with an insect was new, but not necessarily worse than what was already known. (The insect was harmless.)

Still, CIA officials reportedly felt that releasing the memos would create unnecessary embarrassment and set a bad precedent of revealing sensitive methods and operations; it would diminish the CIA's mystique, and serve to reassure suspects that whatever their fears, they wouldn't be tortured by Americans.

"I think that by teaching our enemies our outer limits, by taking techniques off the table, we have made it more difficult in a whole host of circumstances I can imagine, more difficult for CIA officers to defend the nation," Hayden said on Fox News Sunday.

Obama, however, had already taken these tactics off the table – and made a point of saying so. Releasing the memos did little more than fill in a few blanks.

More significantly, Hayden echoed former Vice President Dick Cheney in insisting that these tactics yielded important intelligence – an assertion that some news reports have said is not supported by interrogation records. Cheney Monday requested that the records be declassified, even as Obama advisers continued to insist the country was just as safe without the harsh tactics.

"We are absolutely confident that we have the tools necessary to get the information we need to keep this country safe," Obama's adviser David Axelrod declared Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation."

If Axelrod and Obama are right, the president's decision should eventually win broad support. Obama has been forthright in rejecting torture and insisting on transparency – believing that disclosure sends a signal of public accountability, but that any further action would only inflame a debate that's sure to rage on for decades.

That's not enough to satisfy civil libertarians, and way too much to satisfy conservatives, but in its balancing of openness and restraint, many mainstream Americans are likely to see it as an act of leadership.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A strong earthquake struck central Mexico on Monday, swaying tall buildings in the capital and sending office workers into the streets. The quake rattled nerves in a city already tense from a swine flu outbreak suspected of killing as many as 149 people nationwide. ʻİ'm scared,'' said Sarai Luna Pajas, a 22-year-old social services worker standing outside her office building moments after it hit. The quake had a magnitude of 5.6 and was centered near Chilpancingo, about 130 miles southwest of Mexico City or 50 miles from the resort of Acapulco, according to the U.S. Geological Survey. USGS earthquake analyst Don Blakeman said the quake was felt strongly in Mexico City because the epicenter was relatively shallow and the ground under the capital which is built on a former lake bed - tends to intensify shock waves.

GM plans to phase out Pontiac brand as part of new plan

By Tom Krisher Associated Press writer

DETROIT – General Motors, once the colossus of American capitalism, will become a leaner, government-owned company if the Obama administration goes along with the automaker's plan to slash jobs, close plants and eliminate the legendary Pontiac brand.

As GM laid out the proposal Monday, new agreements fell into place between Chrysler and its unions in the United States and Canada, making it apparent that the future of both companies now rests with their creditors.

General Motors CEO Fritz Henderson said the company would offer the Treasury Department more than 50 percent of its stock to absolve GM of $10 billion in government loans.

The automaker also proposed that the United Auto Workers take GM stock for at least half the $20 billion the company owes to a unionrun trust that will assume retiree health care expenses starting next year.

Combined, the union and government would own 89 percent of the centuryold automaker, which has been bleeding red ink and is saddled with more than $62 billion in debt.

"It is unprecedented, but it signifies the importance of the automobile industry," said David Lewis, a retired professor at the University of Michigan who taught business history for 43 years.

Although the government has loaned money to corporations in the past, including to Chrysler in the 1970s, Lewis could not recall a time when it had taken a majority stake in a company.

PAKISTAN Pakistani president says bin Laden 'may be dead'

ISLAMABAD - Pakistan's president said Monday his intelligence agencies believe Osama bin Laden may be dead, but he added there is no proof. Other Pakistani officials and a U.S. counterterrorism official said they thought the al-Qaida chief is alive.

U.S. officials said bin Laden is most likely hiding in the mountains along Pakistan's border with Afghanistan, in particular the lawless tribal regions.

"We continue to believe that bin Laden is alive," said the U.S. official, who declined to be named because he was not authorized to discuss the matter on the record.

Reports of bin Laden's death or of near-captures have punctuated his years on the run since the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks, only to be seemingly debunked by periodic audio and video recordings.

Raw alfalfa sprouts could have salmonella By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Government health officials are telling people to avoid eating raw alfalfa sprouts, because they could be contaminated with a strain of salmonella.

Officials have received 31 reports of illness associated with eating raw alfalfa sprouts in Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Utah and West Virginia.

The Food and Drug Administration reports that the contaminated sprouts were grown in multiple states, raising suspicion that the problem stems from the seeds for the plants.

No deaths have been reported.

The illnesses began in the middle of March and tests are still being conducted.

The FDA says the problem is probably related to an outbreak of the same salmonella strain earlier this year in Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa, Kansas and Minnesota.

CONNEAUTVILLE, Pa. – Dairy farmers are facing overwhelming odds, especially in these months of low milk prices, the tumbling economy and the unfair regulations they face in trying to feed the world.

The prices are causing farmers to scramble to find ways to keep afloat in the hopes that milk prices will rise to respectable levels. The addition stress, the workload and dealing with intend to be independent an unknown future are taking its toll on many farmers.

NEW YORK (AP) — The swine flu gave Wall Street a reason to turn cautious. The Dow Jones industrial average gave up a midday recovery and retreated about 0.6 percent Monday as the swine flu's death count in Mexico grew to about 150 people from 100.

There have been far fewer cases reported elsewhere, including the United States, and no other fatalities. Investors were also mindful of previous health scares that had only short-term jostling effects on the market including bird flu, Mad Cow disease and the West Nile virus - none of which ever escalated to into global pandemics.

Still, Wall Street decided to hedge its bets as the U.S. cases of swine flu doubled to about 40.

Ryan Larson, senior equity trader at Voyageur Asset Management, said the flu was a "wild card" for the market. "It's still a little bit early to go into panic mode, but it's definitely something that needs to be watched closely," Larson said.

Airline and other travel-related stocks suffered the sharpest losses Monday. The European Union health commissioner advised Europeans to avoid nonessential travel to Mexico and the United States.

Cool, wet weather helping boost Kansas wheat crop

By Roxana Hegeman Associated Press writer

WICHITA, Kan. – Heavy rains across Kansas boosted the state's winter average crop. The freeze wheat crop, even as farmers got a clearer picture of damage caused by temperatures dipping below freezing earlier this month.

the Kansas Agricultural Statistics Service rated 40 percent of the crop as fair, 40 percent as good and 4 percent as excellent, after the recent wet weather. Sixteen percent of the crop is in poor to very poor condition.

Conditions varied dramatically across the state, with south-central Kansas wheat being hardest hit by frigid temperatures two weeks ago. Farmers in that major wheat-growing recent cool, wet weather that has helped wheat plants heal themselves.

Grower Scott Van Allen said he found about 30 percent of his crop was damaged as he scouted his 2,300 acres of wheat in the Clearwater area. One freeze-damaged field was turning yellow and brown, Sumner, Harper and Barber and cold weather has taken the top off." That assessment was shared by Jim Shroyer, an A report Monday from Kansas State University Extension wheat specialist. If the weather remains good, some of the plants may be able to recover and produce new heads, or tillers. "At this point we can retiller and end up with a els. fairly good yield," Shroyer said.

Since the freeze, the state has had pretty good weather for wheat. It hasn't been too cold or too hot and there has been plenty of rain.

"If this continues, there region were grateful for is a possibility of a pretty good yield," Shroyer said. "I wouldn't say great, but we may not even notice that we had ... freeze damage."

The worst of the damage appears to be around the area of Wellington, which is about 35 miles south of Wichita. There was also damage reported around rather than greening up, he counties, he said.

"The major issue has "I'm sleeping better with been the freeze," Shrover said. "It doesn't have the market concerned, but it has the producer concerned."

Meanwhile, in arid western Kansas, the recent rainfall provided much needed relief to many droughtstressed wheat fields.

The report indicated that about 93 percent of the state had adequate to surplus topsoil moisture, with 87 percent of the state reporting adequate to surplus subsoil moisture lev-

"It is very welcome," said Hoisington wheat grower Dean Stoskopf. "We went into winter with good subsoil moisture. This is what we need to keep things going."

His crops were far enough behind in development at the time of the freeze that they were still mostly below the soil and weren't damaged.

But he said it is still too early to make a guess at the size of this year's wheat crop.

"I don't think it is going to be anything spectacular," Stoskopf said.

At least 19 heritage breeds, such as the white Delaware with the mottled neck, the white-egg laying Holland and black mottled Houdan, have been designated as critically threatened, which means there are fewer than 500 left. Dozens of others are in danger of disappearing without a market to sustain them.

Designed to tit Healthy and green were Hailey couple's philosophy

By Ariel Hansen Times-News writer

HAILEY - When John and Daralene Finnell began designing their downtown Hailey home, they had three goals in mind: healthy and environmentally friendly construction, a house that fit their specific needs, and what they call good architecture.

"Which for us is inventive and personal, not of a given style," John said. "The shapes are the decoration, the shapes and the spaces."

What the Finnells went for is a design that most would describe as modern, with colors and textures that remind them of the high desert of southern Idaho. With the help of Dale Bates of Living Architecture in Ketchum, they chose materials that make the home as free of chemicals and as low in energy use as they could without spending an arm and a leg.

Though it cost a bit more than a traditionally built home per square foot, when they calculate annual energy savings and what they predict will be a high resale value, the Finnells say their investment was modest.

"This house is about what any ordinary middle-class person could do," John said.

Eiron Schofield, vice president of Living Architecture, said the firm's 25 years of experience designing and building green, healthy homes, has given the architects the expertise to make it both

John Finnell stands in the entry to the open living space in his Hailey home, in front of the spot designed to focus the eye as someone enters. The triangle created by a dropped ceiling in the far left corner, and the arc of the kitchen counter on the right, direct the view toward the hearth. Aside from the home's accents of red and blue, the color scheme mimics the high desert outdoors - which can be seen from almost every spot in the home through large windows.

"That's the fun part of the process, is being able to design a home that really fits the homeowners' lifestyle." - Eiron Schofield, vice affordable and effective. She said working with the Finnells was rewarding both personally and professionally.

"That's the fun part of the process, is being able to design a home that really fits the homeowners' lifestyle. It really makes people think about that, 'How do I live in my house?" Schofield said. "The design of the house is unique in that it was very specific for them and their lifestyle.... Through the design we were really able to maximize that sense of privacy and capture the views and the sun."

The Finnells bought the lot in 1994, knowing they wanted to build in downtown Hailev to have access to shops and participate in a diverse neighborhood, and to fill in an urban area. They brought in nine loads of dirt and 26 trees to landscape in 1999, and the house has been complete for three years.

During the design process, the Finnells Tall, wooden cabinets in the small kitchen of the Finnell home and the curve of the counter create a feeling of coziness. The plaster that covers the home's walls, and the poured-concrete floors that house heating elements, had color integrated into the material rather than applied afterward.

learned about materials, like the chemical-free plywood that faces their living room cabinets and the concrete and woodchip blocks that form their highly insulated walls.

They also learned about architectural elements, like high windows that let in light and offer sky views without compromising privacy, and shaping the house like a U to create what is essentially an outdoor room (where Daralene does yoga and has coffee most mornings).

But what has really made them advocates for healthy, green, personalized design is living in the home.

"It's a philosophy," Daralene said. "I couldn't think about living in a different kind of house now."

They hope that everyone who comes into their home gets a sense of that, and goes away thinking about how to apply their own philosophies to their living

"Once you have really found a way to build what you care about, the idea of making compromises other people do, it's hard to think about going back," John said. "It really feels right. It's a success I think anyone could achieve if they reached for it."

welder, John Finnell was able to create this arched entryway, which echoes the shape of the hills behind his home. He also built metal awnings on the back of the home with unique downspouts: Rain runoff flows down the outside of a hollow pipe filled with heat tape, which keeps the trickling water liquid even in the depth of a Wood River Valley winter.

The Finnell home is designed around a central courtyard that extends the house's 2,200 square feet into the outdoors, providing both views and privacy to the homeowners from almost every interior space.

Keeping the wood look on your door

DEAR JIM: My old wood front door looks bad and has warped to the point that a lot of air leaks in. I like the appearance of stained wood, so I am considering a fiberglass door. Are they more durable than wood? Holly H.

DEAR HOLLY: Before you run out and buy a new door, don't give up on that old wood door just yet. Unless the door surface is deeply scratched or the wood is rotting, you should be able to bring it back to close to its original beauty. Sanding, staining and several coats of urethane can do wonders.

Check with the door manufacturer about getting replacement weatherstripping to seal the gaps. Many home center stores also sell generic replacement door weatherstripping. Depending upon how badly it is warped, you may be able to attain a good seal with new weatherstripping. Put some modeling clay in the leaky spots and close the door to measure how warped it truly is.

If you do have to replace the door, you actually have two options for a stainable simulated wood front door. Fiberglass doors are the most common choice and, when stained and finished wood doors. Various manufacturers use different designs and materials, but they all seal very well. Stainable steel doors offer the advantage of magnetic weatherstripping similar to a refrigerator door. This weatherstripping actually clings tightly to the steel for a good long-term seal.

It is best to purchase a staining kit from the manufacturer of the door.

There are many stain colors available, and by getting it from the door manufacturer you will be assured it is compatible with the surface.

Glass panels are popular in these doors. Even though it may cost a little more, select low-e, double-pane glass. If you select a decorative glass style, select one where the decorative panel is between two outer panels. This creates two insulating air gaps, and it is easier to keep clean.

DEAR JIM: I use a woodburning fireplace pretty often. I tried running my furnace blower continuously to circulate the heat, but the air coming out of the registers was chilly. Was I saving any energy doing this? - Pat B. DEAR PAT: You really cannot make a determination based on the air feeling chilly. Even air as warm as 80 degrees blowing from a register may feel chilly. Check the air temperature with a thermometer to see how warm it is. Unless your fireplace produces a lot of heat, running the blower probably did not save much energy. A standard furnace blower motor uses a lot of electricity. Also, there often are leaks in a duct system which waste heat.

Rocks are the easiest sculptural elements to incorporate into a garden.

Rocks add color to landscaping

By Joel M. Lerner

WASHINGTON - Not so long ago, people wanted to get rid of rocks in their yards. Now they often request them as part of the trend toward more natural-looking gardens.

Rocks are the easiest sculptural elements to incorporate into a garden to create a natural-looking landscape. They add color, contrast and interest; require no maintenance; and provide a bit of surprise.

They fill another need, too - security barriers. Rocks and plantings strategically placed will keep even the smallest of vehicles from harming public and private buildings.

Rocks come in every size, from giant Stonehenge-like slabs to tiny pebbles the size of peas. They come in a natural kaleidoscope of colors, including brown, tan, red, pink, blue, green, white, black and gray.

The big issue with rocks is that they can weigh a ton – really. You will need equipment and assistance to transport and place them.

Positioning is important, SO everyone involved needs to be patient.

Like other large, heavy

Large specimen rocks should complement nearby plants. Choose plants that might grow close to them in nature, such as ferns, bleeding hearts and hellebores in some shade, or grasses, black-eyed Susans and purple coneflowers in full sun. Smooth, flat rocks can be placed for natural seats.

Measure the space where you plan to include rocks so you know what size you are looking for.

properly, they are difficult to distinguish from real wood.

Fiberglass doors are also more energy efficient than a solid wood door. The core of a fiberglass door is filled with foam insulation, and there are stainable fiberglass skins over it. Fiberglass should not warp like wood can, and there is very little maintenance if it was finish properly initially.

The other door option is a stainable steel door. The steel skins are coated with a thick layer with actual grain rolled into it. This layer can be stained and finished to look similar to real wood. The ones I have seen look good, but not quite as realistic as fiberglass doors. The steel doors are filled with foam insulation, so the efficiency is similar to a fiberglass door.

Advertising Sales Director

The Elko Daily Free Press is seeking a focused, creative Advertising Sales Director with an affinity for numbers and a passion for investing in account executives that employ a relentless curiosity in discovering and meeting real customer needs. Ad Director candidates should have a track record of successful sales supervisory experience in a fast-paced business.

We need someone who will spend a significant portion of each week outside the office, calling on both current customers and non-advertisers with our account executives. The Advertising Sales Director will work to systematically increase the number of active advertisers in the Elko Daily Free Press and the frequency with which they advertise with us.

If you prefer to invest your time coaching account executives in the regular practice of needs-analysis" rather than in the creation of short-term, product-focused revenue "fixes", we want to talk to you.

The Advertising Sales Director will oversee seven retail/classified account executives, as well as several graphic artists and an experienced support staff. They will be a vital contributor to creating the online future of the newspaper and will be a collegial member of the management team charged with setting the course for future success.

The Elko Daily Free Press provides a meaningful work environment for our employees, rewards innovation and risk-taking, and offers opportunities for career development. In addition to the Elko Daily Free Press, the Advertising Sales Director will oversee sales into The Finder, Northern Nevada Real Estate, Mining Quarterly, a variety of other niche publications and our online newspaper www.elkodaily.com.

Elko is a vibrant northern Nevada gold-mining town located along Interstate 80, with an established gaming/hospitality industry, a strong community college and a thriving retail and manufacturing base. Elko has over 300 days of sunshine annually and is in close proximity to unlimited four-season recreational opportunities.

The Advertising Sales Director position offers a competitive salary, excellent benefits package, and career progression possibilities within Lee Enterprises. If interested in this excellent opportunity, please apply online at

Access to medical information is governed by complex rules

DEAR READERS: After the letter from "Frantic Mom in Philadelphia" (Jan. 30) published, several was physicians wrote to express concern that I was suggesting that doctors violate the HIPAA laws by talking to families without consent. This is not what I was suggesting. The goal of HIPAA (Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act) is to protect patient information and standardize the transmission of patient health information between health organizations.

The Health and Human Services Office for Civil Rights Web site (www.hhs.gov/ocr/hipaa) offers a variety of resources to help people understand HIPAA. The rules are complex and - like any rules can have unintended consequences. They were NOT meant to discourage doctorfamily communication, but only to give patients some control over their medical information. Doctors are well within their rights to encourage patients to give consent for sharing information with family members, and they need to explain why it's important. Collaboration is needed when families are deeply involved in their loved ones' care. Research has shown that when family members are involved, patients with serious mental illness stay better longer and have fewer

IF APRIL 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have often questioned whether you have done the "right thing" but the answer is blowing in the wind. You may have the urge to improve your life and put several key business ducks in a row during the year ahead. Put your inspirational ideas as possible into motion within the next six weeks while you have the advantage of shrewd advice from trusted counselors and general good luck with almost any business related project. You are a bit of a romantic this year, too, and may take a ride on a romantic merry-go-round in July. Anyone who is genuinely good for you will be able to get closer to you during July or December. 19):By being forthright, you changes that involve your relapses. The patient and therapist TOGETHER can specify what information can and cannot be shared.

Parents like "Frantic Mom in Philadelphia" become more anxious and depressed when they have no information on how to help their children, which creates additional family stress.

Parents who are financially supporting a child over the age of 21 may decide the conditions under which they will continue their support and pay for treatment. They may decide that one of those conditions is that they have some basic information from the patient and therapist about how they can help. I am NOT suggesting that the family should get access to their son's full records, but only that they should be given basic information on how to help and what to expect.

If an adult child objects to doctor-family communication, many families wrote to let me know that NAMI, the National Alliance on Mental Illness, offers a wealth of information and support for families and friends of people coping with the challenges of mental illness.

DEAR ABBY: Over the past few years I have noticed a trend in the recorded phone messages of businesses I deal with over the course of a day. It is the use of the phrase, "We'll get back to you at our earliest convenience."

Abby, is it just me, or does that phrase imply that it's about their convenience and not their customers'? There was a time when the sentiment was, "We'll help you as soon as possible." Am I being too literal here?

– BOB IN COSTA MESA, CALIF.

DEAR BOB: Many businesses rely on automated phone answering systems as a cost-saver because it means they don't have to hire someone to do it. It also allows the business owners to budget their time as they wish - regardless of the "needs" of the caller.

The fact that this offends you enough that you have written to me indicates that you are old enough to remember when customer service came first. Younger people may not be as sensitive to it as you are. But I agree with you that given a choice I, too, would prefer to deal with a human being.

Today is Tuesday, April 28, the 118th day of 2009. There are 247 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On April 28, 1789, there was a mutiny on HMS Bounty as the crew of the British ship set Capt. William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific. (Bligh and most of the men with him managed to reach Timor in 47 days.) On this date:

In 1758, the fifth president of the United States, James prevail in Vietnam." Monroe, was born in Westmoreland County, Va.

In 1788, Maryland became the seventh state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1918, Gavrilo Princip, the assassin of Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria and the archduke's wife, Sophie, died in prison of tuberculosis.

In 1945, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress, Clara Petacci, were executed by Italian partisans as fire on tourists on the they attempted to flee the country.

In 1952, war with Japan officially ended as a treaty signed in San Francisco the year before took effect.

In 1958, the United States conducted the first of 35 nuclear test explosions in the Pacific Proving Ground as part of Operation Hardtack L rejected, on a tie vote of 213-Vice President Richard Nixon 213, a measure expressing support for NATO's fiveweek-old air campaign against Yugoslavia; the House also voted 249-180 to limit the president's authority to use ground forces in Yugoslavia. Actor Rory Calhoun died in Burbank, Calif., at 76.

Five years ago: First photos of the Abu Ghraib prisoner abuse scandal were shown on CBS' "60 Minutes II." A Spanish judge indicted Amer Azizi, a Moroccan fugitive, on charges of helping to plan the Sept. 11th hijackings. The U.N. Security Council put terrorists, black marketeers and crooked scientists on notice that they faced punishment for trafficking in weapons of mass destruction. Cable giant Comcast Corp. dropped its twomonth-old unsolicited bid for The Walt Disney Co.

One year ago: The first tax rebates were direct-deposited into bank accounts from a $168 billion stimulus package. In a defiant appearance at the National Press Club in Washington, Democrat Barack Obama's longtime pastor, the Rev. Jeremiah Wright, said criticism surrounding his fiery sermons was an attack on black churches, and he rejected those who'd labeled him unpatriotic.

ANSWER: Bid three diamonds. Whether you are a passed hand or not, the modern style is to use a jump to three diamonds as preemptive and a cuebid of two spades to show a limit raise or better in diamonds. You want to raise as high as possible with a weak hand and support, thus making your opponents' lives much harder.

RAPIDS WIN MULTIPLE TITLES AT CANYON RIM CLASSIC

Times-News

he Twin Falls Rapids youth soccer club earned multiple titles in different divisions at its home Canyon Rim Classic soccer tournament, held last weekend at Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls. Championships were won by the boys U-10 squad, boys U-14 and girls U-11. The Rapids also took home a consolation victory in girls U-15/16.

Complete results are on Sports 2.

For the Times-News

University of Idaho tight end Eddie Williams spent last weekend, like a lot of college football players, glued to the television watching the NFL Draft.

A phone call interrupted his Sunday viewing. It was his agent, asking if he'd like to move to Washington, D.C. Then his named was announced by the Washington Redskins.

"Anyone who's played football thinks about playing in the NFL," said Williams, who led the Vandals in n the grand scheme of things, it's no big deal. District IV's proposal to adjust the classification cutoff numbers for the 2010-12 cycle doesn't change much, but what could change is for the best.

A few weeks ago, the Idaho High School Activities Association released a proposal to fudge the numbers just a bit when it comes to divisional cutoff numbers, and the classification committee is reviewing it. It doesn't seem to change much in the general cutoff numbers from the projection based on current cutoffs (a full breakdown is in the shaded box below).

So, which schools would be affected by the change? Well, Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge are still set to be Class 4A programs, Gooding and Wendell still look to be on the way to 2A ... in fact, no schools in District IV, at least directly, should be affected.

Indirectly is another story. According to Declo athletic director Jay Darrington, an IHSAA board member and classification committee member, the point of these subtle changes has more to do with addressing the 1A situation. Nearly 70 schools are projected to align as Class 1A Division I or Division II. District IV has its fair share, but the conferences keep taking in orphans from other districts, ones that don't have enough schools to form their own conferences. CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Despite injuries to fans from flying debris, NASCAR's satisfied with its safety standards, saying the fence at Talladega Superspeedway did what it was supposed to do – keep Carl Edwards' car out of the grandstands.

In a spectacular last-lap accident, Edwards' car sailed upside-down into the frontstretch fence, which bowed but held, before the battered vehicle returned to the track. Blake Bobbitt, one of seven injured by debris, remained hospitalized Monday with a broken jaw.

The New Orleans Arena was mostly empty by the end of the third quarter, when Denver led 89-50 on its way to matching the most lopsided victory in NBA playoff history. The Minneapolis Lakers beat the St. Louis Hawks 133-75 in 1956.

Looking twice as quick as the Hornets on both ends of the court, the Nuggets stifled Hornets All-Star Chris Paul, whose four points and six assists amounted to one of the worst games of his career.

The Nuggets can close out the series at home in Game 5 on Wednesday night.

"It would give them a league, and they wouldn't have to travel (to District IV)," Darrington said.

And there's the key: Travel. A school like Hagerman has a 326-mile round trip to play Challis for football. At the approximate $1.50 per mile rate for a bus, as quoted by the Hagerman School District, the Pirates have to shell out $489. Then there's the travel for volleyball and basketball. Athletic director Kevin Cato said he's in favor of the proposal.

"The way the economy's quite a bit of money." The committee will meet next week and will have the final of the two enrollment counts to get a definite idea of where every school stands for the 2010-12 cycle. From there, it can make a recommendation to the board to either vote for change or vote for keeping what's in place. The board will vote later this year on whether or not to adopt the chosen proposal.

This one looks like a keeper.

Cops take ex-NBA star Jayson Williams to hospital

NEW YORK – Police say they stunned former New Jersey Nets star Jayson Williams with a Taser in a New York City hotel room after reports that he was suicidal and violent.

Police said Monday that Williams was taken to a hospital for a psychiatric evaluation.

Police responding to a call around 4 a.m. say Williams was found intoxicated and agitated in the Manhattan hotel room. They say there empty bottles of prescription pills were strewn around.

Officers stunned him with a Taser, handcuffed him and took him to the hospital.

Williams played nine seasons in the NBA before retiring in 2000. He was convicted in 2004 of trying to cover up the shooting death of his hired driver.

S O C C E R CONCACAF cancels U-17 tourney over swine flu

NEW YORK - CONCACAF says it is canceling the rest of its Under-17 championship because of concerns about swine flu. The tournament was being played in Mexico, the epicenter of the outbreak.

CONCACAF also will delay the second leg of its Champions League final between CD SC Cruz Azul and Atlante FC, both Mexican clubs, for two weeks, until May 12. Costa Rica, Honduras, Mexico and the United States had clinched spots in Wednesday's semifinals of the U-17 tournament, which was being played in Tijuana. But after the Mexican government announced it was closing schools nationwide, CONCACAF decided to abandon the tournament "to safeguard the health of players, officials and fans."

FOOTBALL Seahawks moving on without linebacker Hill

RENTON, Wash. - The Seahawks are moving on, still without starting outside linebacker Leroy Hill.

Seahawks president Tim Ruskell said Monday the team is having "just conversations" with Hill's agent on a possible longterm contract.

Seattle rescinded its 2009 franchise tag on Hill hours after it selected outside linebacker Aaron Curry fourth overall in the NFL draft Saturday. That made Hill a free agent instead of guaranteeing him $8.3 million in Seattle.

Ruskell said the move gives the team flexibility to sign other veteran free agents.

The Seahawks have already hosted cornerback Ken Lucas, who was released last month by Carolina in a salary-cap move. The 30-year-old played his first four NFL seasons with Seattle from 2001-04.

Perry upgraded to fair condition in S.C. hospital

AIKEN, S.C. - Former Chicago Bears defensive lineman William "The Refrigerator" Perry has been upgraded to fair condition in a South Carolina hospital.

The 46-year-old Perry has been hospitalized for two weeks to deal with complications from Guillain-Barre (gee-LAN' bah-RAY') Syndrome, a chronic inflammation disorder of the peripheral nerves. He had previously been listed in serious condition.

Perry's relatives have said he was expected to recover.

Aiken Regional Medical Center spokeswoman Melissa Summer said Monday she could offer no additional details about Perry's hospital stay.

The 300-pound-plus defensive tackle played for the Bears' 1985 Super Bowl team and helped lead Clemson to the 1981 national championship.
