World verges on swine flu pandemic, WHO says

By Rob Stein
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The World Health Organization took the unprecedented step Wednesday of issuing a warning that the world could be on the verge of a pandemic, as new cases of swine flu mounted, the first death was reported in the United States and the dangerous virus appeared to arrive just outside the nation's capital.

The Geneva-based agency raised the pandemic threat alert level for the second time in three days, elevating the warning to just one notch below a full-scale pandemic, after concluding that the virus was causing sustained outbreaks in the United States and Mexico.

The heightened alert is intended to prompt every nation to activate an emergency response plan, pharmaceutical companies to increase production of antiviral drugs and help speed development of a vaccine and bankers to help poor countries afford measures to fight the virus, officials said.

The dramatic pronouncement came as

HOW THE FLU VIRUS MUTATES
The genetic machinery of the flu virus lacks a mechanism to correct errors when it replicates. As a result, it mutates at a high rate, allowing it to evade the body's natural defenses, vaccines and drugs.

Seasonal flu strains that circulate every winter generally have minor changes from those of the previous year. But people who have been exposed to flu in the past usually retain a measure of immunity.

With Senate in session and road funding unresolved, House plans to return Monday after adjourning Wednesday

BOISE — The House of Representatives adjourned its 2009 legislative session Wednesday night, despite its leaders conceding a planned return Monday to reach an agreement with the Senate and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on transportation funding.

Adjournment came shortly before 9 p.m. after a whirlwind of stop-and-go floor sessions lingered late into the evening. Along with introducing and passing new bills, the House plowed through more than three dozen budget bills, including unprecedented cuts to education.

"This motion is fitting and proper at this time. Our business is finished," said House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, prior to the motion to adjourn the session. It was not supported by Democrats, who called it unconstitutional.

The Senate, which backs Otter's campaign for new road funding, will continue to meet. But the House has resisted Otter's demands and rejected a gas tax increase six times. GOP leaders said adjournment merely reflects the conclusion of the people's work, including balancing the budget.

According to the Idaho Constitution, the House must reconvene after three days if the Senate remains in session.

In the morning, Republican Senate and House leaders met with Otter for one last House

Twin Falls school board: no emergency declaration, for now

Following in the footsteps of its Gooding neighbor, the Twin Falls School Board announced Wednesday night that it has no plans at the moment to declare a financial emergency.

A declaration, created under a new law signed earlier this month by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, would allow the district to negotiate with teacher unions to decrease salaries and benefits. The bill was a compromise supported by the Idaho Education

Plan to merge SV, Ketchum dropped

Supporters abandon idea after heavy criticism

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — It has been less than three months since Ketchum City Councilman Charles Conn and Sun Valley City Councilman Dave Chase came forward with their suggestion to merge the two cities. In that time, there has been much discussion of the merits of the idea, but also much emotional reaction.

This week, Chase and Conn called it quits, saying the tenor of the debate had gotten too rancorous to be productive.

"I don't know why in a community with so many intelligent people it's so hard to have a dispassionate discussion without name-calling," Conn said. "It just became some pretty substantial brain damage to keep fighting a battle with misinformation."

As an example of name-calling, Conn cited one attendee at a meeting of rival group Save Sun Valley last month who said Chase was a "Benedict Arnold."

There have also been calls for Chase's resignation over the issue. "To my mind, that's breathtaking, because what David was trying to do was

Montana fires warning shot over states' rights

State wants guns made there, sold there, used there to be exempt from registration

By Kahrin Deines
Associated Press writer

HELENA, Mont. — Montana is trying to trigger a battle over gun control — and perhaps make a larger point about what many folks in this ruggedly independent state regard as a meddling federal government.

In a bill passed by the Legislature earlier this month, the state is asserting that guns manufactured in Montana and sold in Montana to people who intend to keep their weapons in Montana are exempt from federal gun registration, background check and dealer-licensing rules because no state lines are crossed. That notion is all but certain to be tested in court.

The immediate effect of the law could be limited, since Montana is home to just a few specialty gun makers, known for high-end hunting rifles and replicas of Old West weapons, and because their out-of-state sales would automatically trigger federal control.

Still, much bigger prey lies in Montana's sights: a legal

Rupert Police Dept. under federal probe

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

Rupert's police department is under investigation by the U.S. Department of Labor, officials from the federal department confirmed Tuesday.

"They just opened the case. There is not anything in it yet," said Jeannine Lupton, spokeswoman for the Department of Labor in Seattle.

Lupton said the office will not release any details of the case while it is open and often it can take the department months to finish an investigation.

"If it's simpler it could be sooner but it could easily be a couple of months," Lupton said.

Lupton, who would not comment on where the complaint originated, said complaints are usually initiated through one of three sources: a current employee, a former employee or a third party.

Rupert Police Chief Randy White said no one from the Department of Labor has contacted him yet and he said he found out about the issue Tuesday afternoon after calls from the Times-News prompted city superintendent Dennis Andrew to call him.

Andrew did not return a call from the Times-News.

"I've been dealing with officers on time cards but there are no unresolved issues that I know of," White said.

White said there have been some instances when officers have not turned in their time cards by the time they're due.

"I did change one time," White said. "It's my responsibility that they turn in accurate times."

White said that there was one officer who disputed a submitted time.

"He and I resolved the issue," White said.

White said if there is an issue regarding a dispute on time cards the employee must go to the department head to try and resolve the issue. If the issue can not be resolved it is taken to the city superintendent.

"If they just went to the Department of Labor they may be in violation of (city) policy," White said.

Rupert City Councilman Todd McChie said the council strives to maintain transparency in city government and welcomes a warranted investigation. He said he was not aware of the problem but the council has shown due diligence in the past in working to rectify issues brought to it.

"These things (investigations) aren't necessarily a bad thing," McChie said. "For government they are checks and balances."

In a statement, Otter said he appreciates that lawmakers understand the need but wants a consistent and long-term package of at least $75 million.

"This plan does not entirely provide the kind of certainty required for cost-effective, efficient planning," he said. "We continue having positive and constructive discussions with legislators, and I remain hopeful for a resolution."

Unsurprisingly, the meeting was fruitless with no deal reached.

"The governor has told us all along that he believes that that's not enough and we have said all along that there is not enough support in the House chamber for a gas tax increase," said GOP Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts, R-Donnelly.

Prior to adjourning, the House raced through remaining legislation, even breaking for pizza at 6 p.m.

It cleared numerous bills, including those cutting public schools budgets and those that fund state agencies that Otter had previously vetoed; a revised effort to consolidate most of Idaho's elections to just two days; and a controversial worker's compensation bill.

It also passed, 61-5, legislation to create an interim committee to study transportation funding and methods.

John McGee, the Senate Transportation Committee Chairman, R-Caldwell, and a backer of Otter's campaign, said road funding has already been the most-studied issue for two years, and pointed to the $450,000 audit of the Idaho Transportation Department and a legislative task force on transportation.

Bedke said the committee would probably lead to compromise in the way water issues in south-central Idaho have been resolved.

"We have to use the past as an indication of the future," he said. "We've been at these impasses before."

Still, Bedke and Roberts said they are planning on the full House returning to Boise on Monday.

"It's a gun bill, but it's another way of demonstrating the sovereignty of the state of Montana," said Democratic Gov. Brian Schweitzer, who signed the bill.

Carrie DiPirro, a spokeswoman for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, had no comment on the legislation. But the federal government has generally argued that it has authority under the interstate commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution to regulate guns because they can so easily be transported across state lines.

Guns and states' rights both play well in Montana, the birthplace of the right-wing Freemen militia and a participant in the Sagebrush Rebellion of the 1970s and '80s, during which Western states clashed with Washington over grazing and mineral extraction on federal land.

Montana's leading gun rights organization, more hardcore than the National Rifle Association, boasts it has moved 50 bills through the Legislature over the past 25 years. And lawmakers in the Big Sky State have rebelled against federal control of everything from wetland protection to the national Real ID system.

earlier planning will allow them to preserve salaries — though she left a declaration an option in the future, should the district run into trouble. The board, she said, is "committed" to doing anything it can to preserve teacher pay.

"For now, we are holding the line," Ward said.

The declaration, Ward said later, came after a lengthy discussion at a previous meeting of legislation that could affect the school district. Given the schedule the district's budgeting process follows, the board decided the emergency issue needed to be explored soon.

"We're cautiously optimistic we will be okay for the next year," she said.

The option, a new tool for school districts in a year when education budgets will be cut for the first time ever, has prompted widespread discussion among school boards. Minidoka County School District officials said two weeks ago that they will likely declare a financial emergency once appropriations bills are signed.

The Gooding School District board considered declaring an emergency, but announced at a special April 21 meeting that it would not pursue the option. Board members worried that using the new provisions would sour the district's good relationship with its teachers' union and said they hope to be able to negotiate compensation issues without the emergency powers.

Earlier Wednesday, Twin Falls Superintendent Wiley Dobbs listed off steps the district has taken to save money — including changing secondary schools back to a seven-period day, attrition and cutting items like non-essential travel.

Dobbs said he's not even sure that declarations can be made yet, because companion legislation amending state law to allow school boards to cut pay hasn't passed yet.

The statement came as the district and the local teachers' union prepare for their annual salary negotiations. Bargaining teams from the district and the Twin Falls Educators Association held their first meeting Monday night, said TFEA President David Gibson.

Asked whether board members appreciate having the emergency option, Ward said it's so "dismal" that they don't. The declaration would be more useful if the district was smaller or faced declining enrollment, she said.

"It's really a step that we in this district really don't want to take," Ward said.

Merger

create better and more efficient government for his citizens. Frankly, it's unconscionable and it shows how small-minded some people are," Conn said.

The councilmen admit that their group, One Community, One Town, may have erred in proposing a petition that would have gotten the merger on the ballot as early as this fall.

"We could have done things a little different, maybe start things a little slower, but some people very quickly decided without seeing any facts that they wanted to attack this, and invented some frankly completely fake things that were sent around in e-mails and whispered rather than engaging in open and fact-based dis-ussion," Conn said.

As an example, he said, OCOT said early on that no Sun Valley funds could legally be used to pay off Ketchum debts, but that suggestion continued to circulate in the community. "I was naïve in thinking that would be the way we'd conduct the debate."

Although they are abandoning the idea of municipal merger, the two councilmen say they will continue considering suggestions of other ways their cities can save money, including potential consolidation of city services such as police or fire. However, Conn seemed pessimistic about the success of such efforts.

In an opinion piece in the Idaho Mountain Express on Wednesday announcing the disbanding of OCOT, he and Chase wrote: "Until the public demands these efficiencies, better community marketing effectiveness and public interest over self-interest from their elected officials, it won't happen. Until that day, Thomas Jefferson's comment seems apt: 'The government you elect is the government you deserve.'"

Fish farms, pumpers criticize state water officials in court

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

GOODING — Before March 26, hundreds of Magic Valley groundwater wells were a press release away from being shut off.

Then Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Dave Tuthill accepted a replacement water plan proposed by pumpers — making it effective for this year only without the hearing customarily held for long-term mitigation plans.

On Tuesday attorneys for the state, fish farms and pumpers met at the Gooding County Courthouse and debated Tuthill's right to do so.

The replacement plans and whether state law allows them was one of many topics discussed during oral testimony on a judicial review of the July 2008 final order requiring mitigation water for two Snake River Canyon trout farms.

The fish farms, which insist the plans have never properly provided water owed to them over the past four years, had looked forward to the hearing for some time. Clear Springs Foods of Buhl tried and failed last summer to convince state legislators to review IDWR's practices, and company officials, including CEO Larry Cope, attended Tuesday's hearing.

The groundwater pumpers took the opportunity to air their grievances as well, often criticizing many of the same points as the fish farms and once again arguing that other factors caused the springs to decline. On behalf of the state, Deputy Attorney General Phil Rassier rebutted both sides, defending Tuthill's order to 5th District Judge John Melanson.

Among the issues discussed:

- How much "seasonal variation," or whether a water right is able to be filled year-round, should play into a water call. Blue Lakes Trout Farm attorney Daniel Steenson criticized it as a "dramatically new standard" and "palpably absurd."

- A 10 percent "trim line" representing a margin of error in which wells should be curtailed. Both the fish farms and pumpers called it "arbitrary and capricious."

- IDWR's practice in the case of phasing in well closures and mitigation requirements over several years. "That still allows injury to be inflicted on the senior (user)," Clear Springs attorney John K.

Simpson said.

Melanson asked few questions Tuesday afternoon, asking Simpson at one point what the attorney thought he could do about past replacement plans. The judge, Simpson replied, could put a stop to the practice.

"We can say 'not anymore,'" Simpson said.

Rassier defended Tuthill's ability to order the replacement plans in an emergency, characterizing them as reactive and mitigation plans as proactive. This year's replacement plan is also being treated as a long-term mitigation plan, and will receive a full hearing sometime in the near future.

"I think a hearing after the fact is still due process," Rassier said. "You don't always have to hold a hearing in advance."

Hailey prepares to launch pot committee

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council went forward with what remains of the city's voter-approved marijuana initiatives on Monday night.

The initiatives, selected by voters in 2007 and 2008, were gutted by 5th District Court Judge Robert Elgee earlier this spring, and Hailey had held off on enacting them until the legal issues were resolved.

The portions of the initiatives that Elgee removed included: legalizing use of medical marijuana in Hailey, making marijuana enforcement the Hailey police's lowest priority and requiring individual city officials to advocate for marijuana reform. The city as a whole still must advocate for reform and must establish a committee to consider marijuana and hemp issues.

Ned Williamson, Hailey's attorney, prepared the language of the initiatives for inclusion in the city's ordinances. He left in the portions that were removed by the judge, indicating that they were struck down, to preserve the historic record.

"All I did was follow what he (Judge Elgee) did, verbatim," Williamson told the council. "Anyone looking at this 100 years from now can see what happened."

He did ask the council whether it would like to keep as part of the ordinance language the factual information included in the initiatives. He said including the "whereases" would be very unusual in the text of an ordinance.

"The whereases serve some function. Essentially those are the statements of public declaration," said Councilman Fritz Haemmerle, noting that the remaining ordinance language requires the council to make such statements as part of its advocacy for progressive marijuana policy.

The council also authorized the creation of a committee that would make recommendations to the council on marijuana and industrial hemp policy and advocacy. The seven-member committee will have one member appointed by each of five council members, the police chief, and the group that promoted the initiatives in the first place.

Each said it would be possible to come back with an appointee within 30 days, after which the committee would be formed and would meet a minimum of two times per year.

Sheriff: Hadden shooting remains unsolved

Businessman shot in chest a month ago outside home, no arrests yet

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Lincoln County Sheriff Kevin Ellis confirmed Wednesday that whoever shot local businessman Craig Hadden a month ago remains on the loose.

It was unclear Friday whether Hadden, 61, is still hospitalized after the sheriff's office said he was shot April 1 in the chest outside his Shoshone home. Authorities said they found him lying in front of his garage.

Ellis told the Times-News Wednesday that he does not know if Hadden remains hospitalized.

"There's nothing new at this point," Ellis said about the month-old case.

A call Wednesday to a phone number listed under Hadden's name was not returned.

He was listed in serious condition at Boise's Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center about a week after the shooting. But no patient with Hadden's name was not hospitalized there Wednesday afternoon, said Saint Alphonsus spokeswoman Jennifer Krajnik. She declined to say when Hadden may have been discharged, citing privacy laws.

The manager of Hadden's gas and convenience store, the Main Stop in Shoshone said Wednesday — after the Times-News spoke with Krajnik — that Hadden is still hospitalized in Boise at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center.

"He's doing better, a little bit," said the store manager, Alex Surcaro.

Hadden's security is a concern, Surcaro says, because his shooter has not been apprehended.

Ellis said Wednesday that investigators are "still interviewing" but declined to say how many suspects there may be in the unsolved shooting.

He has also said that the community is safe, despite no arrest. "There should be no concern for another shooting," Ellis told the Times-News the week of the shooting. "I think I can definitely say that."

Asked if there will be an arrest in the case, Ellis said, "we're always hopeful but that again is something I really can't talk about because of the investigation."

Surcaro and some of Hadden's other employees have said they are in the dark about who may have shot their boss.

"They (law enforcement) don't want to release information for their investigation," Surcaro said Wednesday. "Hopefully, they'll figure it out soon."

Aside from his gas and convenience store, Hadden is also associated with two other businesses in Shoshone: Hadden Realty and Idaho Yak, a business that raises the long-haired bovine for slaughter.

After the shooting, authorities searched Hadden's property "to look for any possible evidence that may have been left behind," according to a press release from Ellis.

The World Health Organization raised its pandemic threat level from 4 to 5 on Wednesday — one level below a full-scale pandemic — in response to a unique virus not seen in pigs or humans before. A look at what is known about the virus:

A Virus With Pandemic Potential

HOW THE FLU VIRUS MUTATES

The genetic machinery of the flu virus lacks a mechanism to correct errors when it replicates. As a result, it mutates at a high rate, allowing it to evade the body's natural defenses, vaccines and drugs.

Seasonal flu strains that circulate every winter generally have minor changes from those of the previous year. But people who have been exposed to flu in the past usually retain a measure of immunity.

HOW THIS FLU VIRUS IS DIFFERENT

The pandemic threat arises from another trick of the flu virus, called genetic reassortment. When different strains infect the same host at the same time, it allows them to exchange whole sections of their genetic code.

Scientists think the current virus strain combines genetic material from pigs, birds and humans. Segments from the three different viruses have created a reassorted virus that has not been seen before.

Why is this virus killing healthy people?

One theory is that the virus triggers an excessively aggressive immune response that destroys the throat and lung tissue. Those with robust immune systems may be especially vulnerable.

How a flu virus works

The genetic code of the flu is contained in eight strands of RNA.

Fighting the Flu

PREVENTION: VACCINE

Vaccines teach the body's immune system to make antibodies to kill the virus. A weakened form of the virus is grown in hens' eggs, purified and killed with a chemical. Creating a new vaccine takes at least six months and requires hundreds of millions of eggs.

ANTIBODIES

INTERRUPTION: ANTIVIRAL DRUGS

Relenza and Tamiflu, both shown to be effective against this current virus, stop it from budding out of the cell if administered soon after symptoms appear. Antivirals can also be given to people in contact with an infected person to prevent the disease from spreading.

disease and at least 10 more were under investigation at the University of Delaware.

The first death from the disease in the United States involved a 22-month old boy from Mexico City who succumbed Monday at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston, where he had been rushed after falling ill. The child, who had unspecified "underlying health problems," according to U.S. health officials, had taken a flight with his parents from Mexico City to Matamoras, Mexico, on April 4 to visit family in Brownsville, Texas.

After developing a fever on April 8, the child was hospitalized in Brownsville and then, with his condition worsening, was transferred the next day to Houston.

While state health officials were still trying to determine when and where the boy became infected and how many people came into contact with him and his family, they said no other relatives or anyone else had fallen ill.

"Texans need to know there is no cause for panic and Texans can be assured that the state will take every necessary precaution to protect the lives of our citizens," said Gov. Rick Perry, as he issued a "disaster declaration" to help respond to the outbreak. Officials suspended high school sports events statewide until May 11 and shut more schools, sending more than 53,000 students home for at least two weeks.

President Obama offered his "thoughts and prayers and deepest condolences" to the toddler's family and to other victims and their loved ones. U.S. authorities were monitoring the spread of the virus carefully, he said, and he urged local authorities to report all suspected cases and close schools where infections are reported. Private citizens, Obama said, should take care to wash their hands frequently, stay home from work or school if they are sick and cover their mouths when coughing.

One day after being confirmed as Health and Human Services Secretary, Kathleen Sebelius stressed the government was "determined to fight this outbreak and do everything we can to protect the American people." However, she added: "We expect to see more illness, more hospitalizations and unfortunately, we're likely to see additional deaths."

Public health authorities have been worried the virus would start producing the kind of severe pneumonia and deaths that so far had been limited to Mexico, where the epidemic began. "The clinical picture in the United States is looking a bit more like the Mexican situation," said Nancy Cox, a flu expert at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The number of known cases in the U.S. hit at least 91, with infections confirmed in at least six new states: Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Arizona, Indiana, Nevada and Ohio, more than doubling the number of states with confirmed cases. A Marine stationed in California also has a suspected case of swine flu.

The WHO's action came after the agency had convened an unusual "global virtual science meeting" involving several hundred experts and officials to help the agency assess the situation. The agency raised the alert from "phase 4" to "phase 5," a move that came two days after the agency had increased the alert for the first time because the never-before-seen virus was spreading in Mexico.

Saying that influenza viruses are "notorious for their rapid mutation and their unpredictable behavior," WHO Director-General Margaret Chan told reporters, "This is an opportunity for global solidarity as we look for responses and solutions that benefit all countries, all of humanity. After all, it really is all of humanity that is under threat during a pandemic."

With the virus now clearly being transmitted person-to-person in the United States, WHO officials said the outbreak appeared to be on a trajectory toward reaching the highest alert — "phase 6" — which is marked by sustained transmission in at least two regions of the world, the agency's definition of a pandemic.

"It's clear the virus is spreading and we don't see any evidence of this slowing down at this point," said Keiji Fukuda, the WHO's assistant director-general interim for health security and environment.

Blaine Co. hires new administrator from Boise

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Blaine County commissioners have selected Derek Voss as the next administrative leader of their county. As Boise's director of administrative services and the chief risk officer for Ada County, Voss was the best candidate to help the commissioners enact policy, they said.

"Derek is simply uniquely qualified to do that for us. He's a systems guy, he understands risk management," said commission president Larry Schoen. "His care and respect for people are obvious, he really enjoys public service, and his sense of integrity came through loud and clear."

Voss, who accepted the position late Monday and will start on June 15, said he doesn't come to the position with any specific goals in mind.

"I had put together a proposed 90-day plan for the commissioners and we'll be talking more about what they want me to do between now and then," he said. "I certainly believe this position is an agent of the board, so I'll be looking to them to get my marching orders."

Schoen said Voss will help the county become more transparent and accountable, and will help improve communication with other county and state agencies as well as the state Legislature.

In the meantime, Voss said he will continue to learn all he can about Blaine County and hopes to begin availing himself of some of the local recreation.

"We plan to take full advantage of the fishing opportunities and my son and I are thinking of doing a half-Iron Man triathlon," he said.

Char Nelson will continue as interim administrator until Voss arrives, and then will return to her position as special projects manager, Schoen said.

House clears amended day care bill

Times-News

BOISE — The House voted 61-5 Wednesday night in favor of a bill to tighten regulations at small day care facilities.

The bill requires licensure of day cares with at least seven children, reduced from the current 12. It was revised after conservatives raised concerns the original bill was too intrusive.

Just four legislators spoke before the House passed the bill, which had been waiting for a full-floor vote for more than a month.

It passed just minutes before the House adjourned its 2009 legislative session.

The legislation is the most comprehensive reform for Idaho day cares in years and requires background checks on employees and sets inspection guidelines and minimum standards for first-aid.

"We cannot make it a perfect world for our children but we can make it a safer world," said Rep. George Saylor, R-Coeur d'Alene, the bill's sponsor.

Although the bill previously passed the Senate, it needs to be approved by senators again because of the amendments.

House passes revived election reform bill

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The House voted 51-15 Wednesday to simplify Idaho elections after a late-session deal revived a bill that appeared to have died last month in a Senate committee.

The bill would limit most elections to May and November, but public schools could schedule levy and bond elections on alternative dates, in March and August. The new measure, whose changes won't take effect until 2011, now goes to the Senate.

The Legislature would provide $4.1 million annually to pay for elections, as well as $1.5 million extra to help counties buy new voting equipment. The previous, failed measure included just $3.1 million in funding and required schools to pay for elections on alternative dates, something to which senators objected.

Idaho Republicans, in particular, contend the state's current system, under which as many as 450 elections can be held on multiple dates, creates "stealth" votes at obscure polling places with few taxpayers even knowing something is on the ballot. Securing more money to fund the changes was key to the measure's resuscitation, proponents said.

"The Senate colleagues felt we needed to step up to the plate," Rep. Dennis Lake, R-Blackfoot and a proponent of election consolidation, said while introducing the bill in the House Ways and Means Committee.

This is the 15th attempt since 2000 to pass an election reform plan.

Democrats opposed the measure Wednesday, as they did when the original measure passed 52-17 on March 6.

Lake has argued that more voters will take part in elections if the dates are standardized.

For instance, when the Meridian School District, the state's largest, successfully passed a supplemental $10 million levy on March 3, only 9 percent of registered voters showed up at the polls. Backers of election reform say that was due to the random date of the levy and the relatively little publicity given to the vote.

The $1.5 million set aside for election equipment — for instance, hardware and software — would come from a state budget reserve fund and would be appropriated for the fiscal year starting this July 1, according to the measure.

The $4.1 million to pay for the annual elections would be adjusted annually with the Consumer Price Index, a measure of inflation, to account for rising costs.

"It seems pretty reasonable," said Tony Poinelli, a lobbyist for the Idaho Association of Counties, which represents local election officials. "It provided some additional dollars for counties."

Secretary of State Ben Ysursa also supports the bill, his aides said.

And school officials who balked at the previous bill on grounds that districts would have borne the cost of elections on those alternative March and August dates say they can live with this new version.

"Our big deal was the funding," said Karen Echeverria, head of the Idaho School Boards Association.

House supports fee hikes at state DMV

BOISE (AP) — The House voted 52-13 to raise state Division of Motor Vehicles fees by $13.1 million, including for drivers licenses, titles and copies issued by the agency.

After clearing the chamber Wednesday, this now goes to the Senate.

Some new revenue would shore up the agency's budget in areas where it's been losing money, including on state-issued identification cards.

If there's any left, the proceeds would help address Idaho's highway maintenance backlog, something Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter is insisting on before lawmakers end the 2009 Legislature. The bill is part of a $30 million package the House has offered Otter to raise transportation revenue.

But it doesn't go far enough for the Republican governor, who is demanding lawmakers give him $75 million, including from higher gas taxes.

2 former Canyon Co. employees face embezzlement charges

CALDWELL (AP) — Two former employees of the Canyon County Division of Motor Vehicles are facing felony charges in what county officials say is an embezzlement case.

Catherine Benoit was charged in 3rd District Court on Tuesday with six counts of grand theft dating back to 2001. Shawna Maggard was charged Tuesday with one count of misusing public funds last year. Both women were longtime supervisors at the Division of Motor Vehicles.

According to court documents, Benoit is accused of stealing $37,000 last year from the county, and Maggard of taking at least $300. In the documents, Caldwell police say Benoit admitted stealing the money, saying she gave it to her adult children who were struggling financially.

"We're pretty upset," Canyon County Assessor Gene Kuehn told the Idaho Press-Tribune. "It's a sad thing."

The assessor oversees the Division of Motor Vehicles office, which issues vehicle licenses and titles through the state Department of Transportation.

Maggard was fired March 6, Kuehn said, and a subsequent investigation led to Benoit, who was fired April 16.

County Prosecutor John Bujak said the case was turned over to Caldwell police and the Ada County prosecutor to avoid a conflict of interest.

Canyon County Assessor Gene Kuehn, left, watches as Ada County Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Jonathon Medema speaks at a news conference regarding the embezzlement charges against ex-Canyon County employees Catherine Benoit, and Shawna Maggard, Wednesday at the Canyon County Courthouse in Caldwell.

"I didn't want the people of Canyon County to think these people were going to get special treatment," Bujak said. "One of the criticisms of Canyon County has been it's a good old boys club, and I didn't want any of that."

QUOTABLE

“There is definitely the possibility that this virus can establish that kind of community-wide outbreak capacity in multiple countries.”
 — Keiji Fukuda, assistant director-general of the World Health Organization on possible ways swine flu can spread.

EDITORIAL

Is there a Dick Smith in Governor Otter's future?

Eldon William “Dick” Smith was a Republican farmer from Rexburg and a two-term state senator who was appointed the Idaho Board of Education by then-Gov. Robert Smylie in 1964.

Smith was passionate about public schools, and soon became president of the state board. But in the spring of 1966, Smylie was beaten for re-election in the GOP primary by an old colleague of Smith's from the Senate, Don Samuelson of Sandpoint.

Samuelson, who went on to defeat Democrat Cecil Andrus and Independent Perry Swisher that fall, was a teach-'em-the-three-R's-and-move-'em-out conservative. Skeptical of the way education was funded in Idaho — and especially higher education — Samuelson quickly got crossways with the two politically connected college presidents, Ernest Hartung of the University of Idaho and William E. “Bud” Davis of Idaho State (Boise State didn't become part of the state higher-education system until 1969).

Smith backed Hartung and Davis and the Democratic superintendent of public instruction at the time, Del Engelking of Burley. When Smith's term on the state board expired in 1970, Samuelson refused to reappoint him.

Within weeks, Samuelson had himself a primary election opponent. Smith's slogan was “Idaho needs a governor who can both think and speak clearly.” Ouch.

More damning still, Smith charged that Samuelson was driving independents and pro-education Republicans into the arms of the Democrats.

Samuelson won 58 percent of the vote in the GOP primary that spring. But in November, Andrus beat him with 52 percent of the vote — and the help of a lot of independents and pro-education Republicans.

The animosity between Samuelson and Smith and the divisions within the Republican Party then are eerily reminiscent of what's going on now between Gov. Butch Otter and the GOP leaders of the Idaho House of Representatives.

Samuelson seriously misread the electorate in 1970, and grossly underestimated Smith. Otter seems to have miscalculated as least as badly over the issue of raising gas taxes during a recession; most Idahoans seem to be on the side of the conservative House leadership, which has refused to budge on the issue.

Worse for Otter, by dragging out the already 107-day legislative session, his differences with more than a few conservatives in the House have turned personal.

So will one of them challenge the governor in the Republican primary election next spring if, as widely expected, Otter seeks a second term?

A week ago, that would have seemed far-fetched. But the governor's political position is deteriorating alarmingly, and he doesn't seem to grasp that.

So an angry political climate among Republicans has, by turns, turned bitter and then toxic.

It's no longer enough for the governor to make his case to Idahoans whether they should spend more on roads; now he's going to have to convince them he should keep his job.

Our view:
 If Gov. C.L. 'Butch' Otter doesn't realize he's on shaky political ground over his insistence on raising the gas tax, he's in the minority.
What do you think?
 We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

One hundred days of reckless, photo-op hubris

Come on, who's surprised? The White House-engineered photo-op of low-flying Air Force aircraft that caused terror in New York City this week epitomizes the Age of Obama. What better way to mark 100 days in office than with an appalling exercise in pointless taxpayer-funded stagecraft?

The superficiality, the unseriousness, the hubris, the obliviousness to post-9/11 realities: They were trademarks of the Obama campaign, and they are the tattoos on his governance.

He never leaves home without his teleprompter. All the Obama world's a stage. Or a world ready to be staged.

So is it any wonder he would staff his White House military office with a clueless paper pusher who saw nothing wrong with spending inordinate government resources — and re-creating 9/11 havoc — to update Air Force One publicity shots? And who planned, believe it or not, to do the same in Washington, D.C., next month, where the 9/11 jihadists murdered 53 passengers and 6 crewmembers on board American Airlines Flight 77, and 125 military and civilian personnel inside the Pentagon?

All for some publicity shots.

No one should be shocked. Remember: Barack Obama is the frivolous man who concocted his own presidential-looking Great Seal before he was elected. An ego big enough to publicly display a ridiculous “Vero Possumus” (“Yes, we can” in Latin) motto and a regal eagle with the Obama campaign logo emblazoned on its chest is an ego capable of far more reckless things. Obama orchestrated a grand photo-op in Berlin, Germany, to declare his world citizenship at the Siegessäule — the Victory Column — a soaring monument of arrogance championed by Adolf Hitler and

MICHELLE MALKIN

Third Reich architect Albert Speer. He manufactured his own Open Temple of The One in Denver for the Democratic National Convention last summer, replete with fake Greek columns.

Since taking office, Obama has remained in perpetual campaign mode, idling in 9/10 gear. The photo album has filled up quickly with megalomaniacal moments. When his massive pork-filled stimulus package was in trouble, he ran to Ft. Myers, Fla., for a carefully choreographed revival meeting with his most ardent supporters. “It is such a blessing to see you. Oh! Gracious God, thank you so much!” one young booster exclaimed.

The president's famous embrace with another questioner — homeless woman Henrietta Hughes, a perpetually unemployed drifter looking for a handout — turned up on the White House online retrospective of the stimulus bill victory.

Another Kodak moment from the stimulus campaign exposed Obama's hype of the spending boondoggle's effects. Using a Caterpillar plant and workers as a backdrop, Obama grandly promised that if the stimulus passed, Caterpillar would rehire laid-off workers. It made front-page headlines. After the photo-op: Caterpillar's own CEO refuted the bogus promise and last week posted its first quarterly net loss in 16 years. After the signing, it finally dawned on pliant media outlets that the stimulus money was stupendously wasteful, and the job creation estimates, bogus. No pictures of those epiphanies.

Obama's photo-ops abroad have been more unsettling: Bowing and scraping before Saudi King Abdullah, trashing America as “arrogant” (talk about a pot and kettle moment) in front of adoring French and German students, chumming it up with Venezuelan thug-in-chief Hugo Chavez. These are the defining images of a stunt(ed) presidency blind to our enemies and in a perpetual state of (re)pose.

Obama appointed Leon

Panetta, a chief of intelligence with no intelligence experience. He gave us Hillary Clinton, a secretary of state who cackled about the Somali pirate hijacking and laughed off serious questions about the effectiveness of enhanced interrogation techniques. He installed Rosa Brooks, a radical George Soros-trained ideologue, as a top Pentagon adviser. He came close to embracing Charles Freeman as top U.S. intelligence analyst — a jihadi-sympathizing conspiracist who blamed America for 9/11.

And he appointed Janet Napolitano, the homeland secretary who can't get her facts straight about the 9/11 terrorists, poo-hooped our immigration laws, disseminated a hit job on conservatives and veterans as right-wing extremist threats, and redefined acts of terrorism as “man-caused disasters.”

“Man-caused disaster” That's a perfect description of the Scare Force One torture photo-op that took place this week and an apt summary of the last 100 days. Say cheese.

Senior thanks Obama for $250 bailout

I would like to thank the president of the United States for the one-time payment of $250 for Social Security and SSI money.

It is heart-warming that my government takes such good care of us senior citizens. Even though we received this one-time payment, it makes me feel warm all over that automakers, banks and AIG will receive billions of dollars.

They must deserve it. Through their hard work, diligence and business expertise, they must have earned it.

I, again, would like to thank the president for the $250.

Students weigh in on possible school changes

On April 13 on the front page of the Times-News, we read an article called “School all year?” by Ben Botkin.

We think that we shouldn't have 11, 12 months of school because it adds pressure on the students and teachers. We also think five days a week is enough. We do not want 6, 7 days a week because it is ridiculous and kids and teachers need a break of at least two days a week. We do not want to compete with the kids that are in foreign schools studying for college because Americans are educating everyone, not just kids that are going to college. We do not want to be compared to India and China.

We do not want school in the summer because it cuts into our free time and kids need to relax, do chores. Having school in the summer doesn't allow them to do that.

We do not think that you need to add more or longer after-school activities because it will interfere with what students have to do after school like piano, chores, dancing classes and other activities.

Mr. Anthony, our principal, said the government would have to give us more money to do school all year.

Also, we took a survey of some fifth-graders, fourth-graders, third-graders and second-graders. In fifth grade, zero kids didn't want school all year and 24 kids wanted school the way it is. In fourth grade, six kids wanted school all year and 40 kids wanted school the way it is. In third grade, zero kids wanted school all year and 20 kids wanted school the way it is. In second grade, one kid wanted school all year and 23 kids wanted school the way it is. The total was seven kids wanted school all year and 129 kids wanted school the way it is.

So you see, Mr. Duncan, most kids want school the way it is based on our survey. The 129 kids like school the way it is because Buhl is successful in educating all students, not just the smarter kids.

What Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... Hailey's 2 fire departments

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Hailey's call for a summit meeting and independent study of consolidating its fire department with Wood River Fire and Rescue and the Blaine County Ambulance district is a much needed move on an issue that has been too long choked by smoke — the political kind.

For years, the mostly volunteer Hailey Fire Department literally has lived in the building next door to Wood River Fire and Rescue, a station staffed 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Every time someone whispered the word "consolidation," a howl would go up from Hailey officials about how utterly unnecessary it was to combine the two.

The reluctance seemed to stem from internal rivalries between the departments and the city's desire to have its own independent fire department, even though its volunteers understandably got to fires far later than the on-site professionals in the Wood River department.

But in 2006, Hailey voters changed the game when they defeated a $2.3 million bond issue for a new fire station in Woodside, in part because the consolidation question muddied the debate.

Then last month, Wood River demanded that Hailey change a mutual-aid agreement, and when the city balked, Wood River said it would leave Hailey on its own.

The sticking point was a policy that forced Wood River firefighters to go across town and retrieve a ladder truck at a second station before they were allowed to show up with other equipment at a blaze — even if it were across the street.

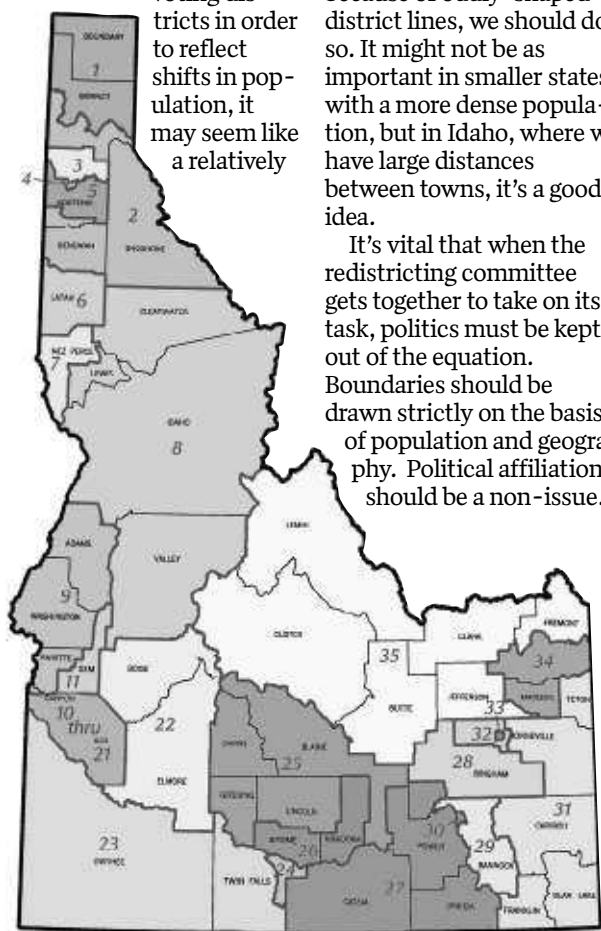

The policy sounds crazy. The departments are ripe for consolidation, and the political climate in Hailey has changed. With Mayor Rick Davis behind the call for a consolidation study, the matter has a chance to be resolved.

In today's distressed economic climate, no city, county or tax district — or any department within them — can afford to refuse to look at streamlining operations. Better to plan wisely than risk the devastation of a fully involved financial blaze.

... lines in the sand

Idaho Press Tribune, Nampa

When state legislatures take on the redrawing of voting districts in order to reflect shifts in population, it may seem like a relatively dry, mundane issue on the surface.

But in reality, it's often one of the most divisive, contentious issues you'll see raised in a legislative session.

A look at Idaho's Senate Bill 1184, which deals with that issue, shows just how polarizing it can be. The bill passed 30-5 in the Senate, and all five "no" votes were from Democrats ... In the House, it passed 50-18, and every "nay" vote except one was from a Democrat ...

The bill is sponsored by Sen. Bob Geddes, R-Soda Springs, who doesn't like the fact his eastern Idaho district is oddly configured, forcing him to make detours through Wyoming to reach some of his constituents. This legislation would require the area within a district to be linked by roads, as much as possible, and to avoid dividing counties ...

Geddes has some solid arguments. Rural districts, in particular, can be rather expansive. Idaho's lawmakers are part-time and don't get paid a lot, so many have other occupations to make ends meet. If we can prevent them from having to drive all over the place because of oddly-shaped district lines, we should do so. It might not be as important in smaller states with a more dense population, but in Idaho, where we have large distances between towns, it's a good idea.

It's vital that when the redistricting committee gets together to take on its task, politics must be kept out of the equation. Boundaries should be drawn strictly on the basis of population and geography. Political affiliation should be a non-issue.

Good riddance to Arlen Specter

CAL THOMAS

The return of Sen. Arlen Specter to the Democratic Party (he flipped in 1965 from "Kennedy Democrat" to Republican) is something that should be celebrated by Republicans, at least those who are proud to call themselves conservatives. Specter is a career politician whose first priority is himself. Specter, whose predictable lament that the GOP is not the "big tent" he had been led to believe it was, now embraces a Democratic Party that is an even smaller tent. How many pro-life Democrats exercise any influence in that party? How many opponents to same-sex marriage are in the Democratic leadership? Smaller government? Lower taxes? No leading Democrat, inside or outside Congress, subscribes to such things. And yet the big media and many pundits continue the fiction that Republicans are in electoral trouble because they do not tolerate liberal ideas.

The day Democrats embrace those holding conservative ideas and implement at least some of them will be the day Republicans can be told to water down their principles. In fact, Republicans in recent years have behaved more like Democrats than Republicans and have paid the electoral price for doing so. Republicans under George W. Bush added to the size and cost of government. Republicans created new spending programs and increased the reach of the federal government in education and other areas. The major difference between Republicans and Democrats these days is this: Democrats know how to use power when they get it; Republicans, when they gain power, spend most of their political capital trying to prove they are not mean, uncaring, racist, sexist and homophobic.

Whenever conservatives try to placate liberals and show how sensitive and caring and in touch with the feelings and concerns of the other party they are, they lose. But when Republicans stand on principles and demonstrate conviction and give evidence that their ideas work, they win.

Yes, Arlen Specter kept his word not to let his pro-abortion views get in the way of the confirmations of Justice Sam Alito and Chief Justice John Roberts. In return for that promise he was allowed to remain chairman of the Judiciary Committee. That was a triumph, not of Specter's conviction, but of pragmatism. If Specter were a pro-life Democrat, the liberal wing of the party he is now entering would have stripped him of his chairmanship. Can anyone say John Dingell? The "moderate" Michigan Democrat was removed as chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce and replaced by the ultra-liberal, Rep. Henry Waxman of California.

Democrats play for keeps. Too often, Republicans play for good reviews from those who hate them and wish to defeat their policies. Good riddance to Specter. The Republican challenge now should be to focus on what works, not ideology, though ideology should drive successful policies. Republicans can beat Democrats on that line, but they will continue losing elections if they stress only ideological purity instead of demonstrating that their principles are superior to those of welfare state Democrats.

Specter's self-serving switch ought to make it easier for the GOP, but will it?

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Hand wringing won't solve aquifer issue

There are many opinions on our bankrupt aquifer. Here is my opinion:

All the hand-wringing, litigation, mitigation, hearings, political maneuvering, studies, etc. (paid for with our taxes except for the hand-wringing, which is free), will not put our aquifer together again.

The water resources were over-allocated! The state does not strictly honor the first-in-time, first-in-line doctrine of water rights, and the cost per share of water will continue to escalate as controversy continues. The state seems pathetically inept in its ability to make the hard decisions and instead seems to seek half-baked remedies or compromises which are likely doomed to failure.

I hope that the state Legislature is acutely aware of its previous lack of oversight of water resources which led to the current debacle. They were "asleep at the switch" as the "water account" was being over-drawn, and now we pay with no relief in sight. And, we were "asleep at the switch" when we stood idly by and let the same good ol' boys and gals keep getting shooed into office. Isn't this miserable water situation a perfect example of the old adage, "We reap what we sow"?

Government leaders seem oblivious to the fact that we live on ecologically fragile high desert plains, and they forge ahead with the granting of development and expansion permits as if there is no tomorrow. Also, there is constant pressure to circumvent existing zoning ordinance and law. Perhaps when we have wall-to-wall projects like confined animal feeding operations and a trashed environment, it may occur to our leaders that there are realities like false economy and the exceeding of reasonable limits!

I wonder, would circus clowns be better managers?

Sewers and stations

Cities, county receive block grants

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Four south-central Idaho communities together will receive more than $1 million in federal grants for infrastructure projects, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter announced Wednesday.

All told, Otter announced nearly $9.2 million in Community and Rural Development Block Grant money tabbed for 25 Idaho cities and counties, including Fairfield, Hansen, Murtaugh and the Minidoka County Fire Protection District.

The fire district's $300,000 will allow it to build a new station in Heyburn, District Chief Mike Brown said, replacing the city-owned facility the district has outgrown. The city, facing its own budget crunch, has asked for the building back, he said.

"Budgets are tight. They'd like to have it back for their road equipment," he said.

And that's okay, given that the site has no room for an extra fire truck the district plans to acquire.

The new station will cover roughly 7,500 square feet, Brown said, somewhat less than first planned for but still a workable building. The district originally applied for a $500,000 grant but was told that amount

THOSE GETTING GRANTS:

- City of Fairfield, $500,000 for sewer improvements
- City of Hansen, $350,000 for a new Head Start building
- Minidoka County Fire Protection District, $300,000 for new fire station
- City of Murtaugh, $235,300 for wastewater project wasn't affordable.

Brown next has to secure an engineer and prepare bid specifications, and anticipates getting the grant funds by July.

"We'd like it in before winter's over," he said of his new digs.

Hansen will get $350,000 for a new Head Start building. And the cities of Fairfield and Murtaugh both received money for wastewater projects: $500,000 for Fairfield to improve its sewer system and $235,300 for wastewater-plant and

Key interest rate left unchanged

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve said Wednesday it sees signs the recession is easing and that the economic outlook has "improved modestly" since last month.

Against that backdrop, Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke and his colleagues left a key interest rate at a record low of between zero and 0.25 percent, and decided against taking any new steps to shore up the economy.

Aggressive action already taken — including a $1.2 trillion effort last month — should gradually help bolster economic activity, the Fed said. It did, however, leave the door open to future action if needed.

Fed policymakers offered a less dour assessment of the economy than the one provided at its previous meeting in mid-March.

"The economy has continued to contract, though the pace of contraction appears to be somewhat slower," the Fed said. The worst of the recession — in terms of lost economic activity — could be past.

The economic outlook has "improved modestly" since the March meeting, partly reflecting some easing of strains in financial markets, the Fed said. Even so, "economic activity is likely to remain weak for a time," the Fed added.

And while consumer spending has shown "signs of stabilizing," it is still being constrained by rising unemployment, falling home values and hard-to-get credit, the Fed said.

But consumer spending rose

COUNTING JOBS

A POLITICAL NUMBERS GAME

Ed Pegler, left, Jason Ramirez, and Brian Wilkins, all with American Infrastructure, work on replacing a sidewalk ramp in Silver Spring, Md. The project is part of the economic stimulus package.

Murky numbers could confuse $787 billion stimulus project

By Matt Apuzzo
Associated Press writer

SILVER SPRING, Md. — When Ed Pegler was laid off from his highway construction job four months ago, the 47-year-old father of two didn't know when he'd be back to work. Then the phone rang. There was a job, paid for by the federal stimulus law.

It's a story the White House hopes to repeat 3.5 million times, to prove that the historic $787 billion spending plan is creating jobs and putting Americans back to work.

But it's not the whole story. Pegler, of Lancaster, Pa., gets laid off every winter, once it gets too cold to lay asphalt. Every spring, he gets hired back. That's the way it goes in his business. Did the stimulus create his job this year? Did it save a job he already had?

Despite setting a high bar for success and requiring states to report every job created, the White House is still figuring out how to answer those questions. It expects to announce its formula for job-counting soon and, until then, it has cautioned against trumpeting numbers.

That hasn't stopped contractors, governors and even President Barack Obama himself from doing just that.

"This project will start this summer, creating an estimated 900 jobs right away," Obama said earlier this month, describing a Michigan construction project.

"Over 2,500 jobs will be created on Missouri's largest wind farm," he said Wednesday.

The announcements are coming faster than the jobs can be created, much less counted. Though the stimulus is moving projects through the pipeline unusually quickly, only a handful of the roughly 6,000 transportation projects announced nationwide

Economy shrinks at 6.1 percent pace in 1Q

Wall Street shrugs off report to maintain gains

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economy shrank at a worse-than-expected 6.1 percent pace at the start of this year as sharp cutbacks by businesses and the biggest drop in U.S. exports in 40 years overwhelmed a rebound in consumer spending.

The Commerce Department's report, released Wednesday, dashed hopes that the recession's grip on the country loosened in the first quarter. Economists surveyed by Thomson Reuters expected a 5 percent annualized decline.

Instead, the economy ended up performing nearly as bad as it had in the final three months of last year when it logged the worst slide in a quarter-century, contracting at a 6.3 percent pace. Nervous consumers played a prominent role in that dismal showing as they ratcheted back spending in the face of rising unemployment, falling home values and shrinking nest eggs.

In the January-March quarter consumers came back to life, boosting their spending after two straight quarters of reductions. The 2.2 percent growth rate was the strongest in two years.

Much stronger demand for big-ticket "durable" goods, including cars, furniture and household appliances led the increase. That spending rose at a 9.4 pace, the most in a year. Consumers also boosted spending on clothing, shoes, recreation services, medical care, gasoline and other energy products. But not on food, where spending dipped slightly.

Still, the consumer rebound was swamped by heavy spending cuts in virtually every other area.

Businesses cut spending on home building, commercial construction, equipment and software, and inventories of goods. Sales of U.S. goods to foreign buyers plunged as they retrenched in the face of economic troubles in their

Some malls may fall, but Magic Valley stays strong

On April 16, General Growth Properties, which owns and operates Boise Towne Square, Grand Teton Mall in Idaho Falls and Pine Ridge Mall in Pocatello, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Brent White, the general manager of the Magic Valley Mall, which is owned by the Woodbury Corporation, described to the Times-News why south-central Idaho's largest retail center is unaffected by GGP's financial challenges.

Q. The owner of the largest retail malls in Idaho announced on April 16 that it filed for bankruptcy. Has this announcement impacted the Magic Valley Mall?

A. "Since General Growth Properties has filed bankruptcy a significant number of customers have asked Magic Valley Management what will happen and how it affects the Magic Valley Mall.

"General Growth, their malls, the stores and employees in them have operated successfully for decades, even now. But ownership at the top 'bet the house' as it turns out.

"Due to growth and acquisition and without foreseeing the stock market plunge and lending crisis of 2008 General Growth now has multibillion-dollar loans maturing and refinancing options are scarce."

Q. What sets the Magic Valley Mall apart from GGP and other struggling mall owners?

A. "Magic Valley Mall is owned by an 80-year-old privately owned company, The Woodbury Corporation, which has used minimal leverage in financing, continuing in the tradition of its ownership.

"The result for General Growth is that even though its properties, in most every case, operate profitably, without refinance sources available to meet financing obligations bankruptcy became its best option.

"Nevertheless, shoppers can plan on shopping at their favorite regional mall well into the future."

Q. What does the future hold for the Magic Valley Mall?

A. "At Magic Valley Mall you will find successful existing stores, some now in operation since the doors opened in 1986 and a few new ones in 2009.

"Sales increased at the mall's stores, albeit by just half a percent in 2008, and new stores including Down East Outfitters and Spring AT&T have taken locations this year.

"Woodbury Corporation expects a few store chains may still succumb to the recession and likewise expects opportunities for new store replacements to develop."

Congress adopts budget plan endorsing Obama goals

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Democrats in Congress capped President Barack Obama's 100th day in office by advancing a $3.4 trillion federal budget for next year — a third of it borrowed — that prevents Republicans from blocking his proposed trillion-dollar expansion of government-provided health care over the next decade.

Wednesday's House and Senate votes to adopt the nonbinding budget blueprint were only a first step toward Obama's goal of providing health care coverage for all Americans. The budget plan for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 sets the parameters for subsequent tax and spending bills expected to boost clean energy programs and student aid and extend many of former President George W. Bush's tax cuts.

"It's a budget that reduces taxes, lowers the deficit and creates jobs," House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said. "It honors the three pillars of the Obama initiatives: energy, health care and education."

Obama cheered passage of the plan, saying in a statement that it "builds on the steps we've taken over the last 100 days to move this economy from recession to recovery and ultimately to prosperity."

The budget outline also makes it plain that Democrats won't let a mountain of deficits and debt interfere with advancing Obama's ambitious but costly agenda.

It gives Democrats the option of moving Obama's health care plan through Congress without the threat of a Republican filibuster, though Democrats promise to try to find bipartisan agreement.

The Senate adopted the plan by a 53-43 vote just hours after a 233-193 House tally.

Newly-turned Democrat Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania voted against the measure as he did earlier this month when it initially passed the Senate. Three other Democrats also voted no: Ben Nelson of Nebraska, Robert Byrd of West Virginia and Evan Bayh of Indiana.

Seventeen House Democrats, mostly from GOP-leaning districts, voted against the budget.

Not a single Republican in the House or Senate voted for the measure.

Obama inherited an economy in deep recession and a financial bailout costing hundreds of billions of dollars, and even some Republicans didn't fault him for deficits rocketing to $1.7 trillion for the ongoing bud-et year and a still-stunning $1.2 trillion in 2010.

"We inherited a colossal mess," Senate Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad, D-N.D., said.

As a result, Democrats opted against extending Obama's signature $400 tax cut for most workers beyond next year and cut $10 billion from his budget for non-defense programs. Also gone are revenues from Obama's "cap-and-trade" plan for curbing global warming by auctioning permits to emit greenhouse gases.

Flu shows signs of being less deadly than previous viruses

Los Angeles Times

As the World Health Organization raised its infectious disease alert level Wednesday and health officials confirmed the first death linked to swine flu inside U.S. borders, scientists studying the virus are coming to the consensus that this hybrid strain of influenza — at least in its current form — is not shaping up to be as fatal as the strains that caused some previous pandemics.

In fact, the current outbreak of the H1N1 virus, which emerged in San Diego and southern Mexico late last month, may not even do as much damage as the run-of-the-mill flu outbreaks that occur each winter without much fanfare.

"Let's not lose track of the fact that the normal seasonal influenza is a huge public health problem that kills tens of thousands of people in the U.S. alone and hundreds of thousands around the world," said Dr. Christopher Olsen, a molecular virologist who studies swine flu at the University of Wisconsin School of Veterinary Medicine in Madison.

His remarks came the same day Texas authorities announced that a 22-month-old boy with the virus had died in a Houston hospital Monday.

"Any time someone dies, it's heartbreaking for their families and friends," Olsen said. "But we do need to keep this in perspective."

Flu viruses are known to be notoriously unpredictable, and this strain could mutate at any point — becoming either more benign or dangerously severe.

But mounting preliminary evidence from genetics labs, epidemiology models and simple mathematics suggests that the worst-case scenarios are likely to be avoided in the current outbreak.

World takes drastic steps to contain swine flu

By William J. Kole and Maria Cheng

From Egypt's order that all 300,000 pigs in the country be slaughtered to travel bans and putting the kibosh on kissing, the world is taking drastic — and some say debatable — measures to combat swine flu.

Egypt ordered the pig slaughter even though there hasn't been a single case of swine flu there and no evidence that pigs have spread the disease. Britain, with only five cases, is trying to buy 32 million masks. And in the United States, President Barack Obama said more of the country's 132,000 schools may have to be shuttered.

At airports from Japan to South Korea to Greece and Turkey, thermal cameras were trained on airline passengers to see if any were feverish.

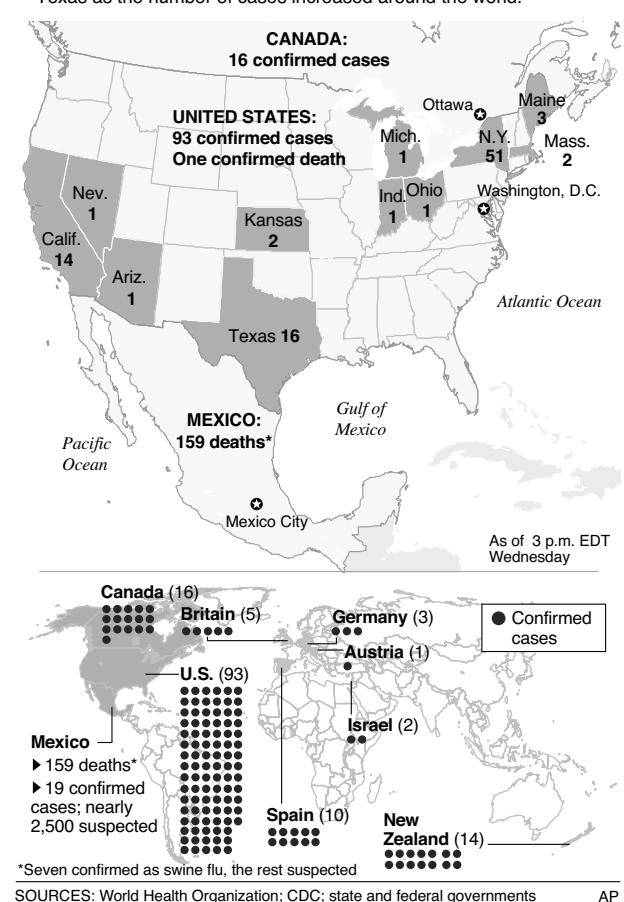

And Lebanon discouraged traditional Arab peck-on-the-cheek greetings, even though no one has come down with the virus there.

All this and more, even though world health experts say many of these measures may not stop the disease from spreading. On Wednesday, the World Health Organization raised its pandemic alert to the second-highest level, meaning it believes a global outbreak of the disease is imminent.

"Scientifically speaking, the main thing is that every virus behaves differently," said Joerg Hacker, presi-

Swine flu continues to spread

The United States reported its first confirmed swine flu death in Texas as the number of cases increased around the world.

dent of the Robert Koch Institute, Germany's top public health authority. "At the moment, the main issue is to get to know this virus, how it works."

In Germany, where officials confirmed three cases, Lufthansa said that starting Thursday it will put a doctor aboard all flights to Mexico, the epicenter of the outbreak.

Experts said that makes sense: The doctors will be able to field questions from uneasy passengers and tend to anyone who might fall ill. The World Health Organization said total bans on travel to Mexico — such as one imposed by Argentina, which hasn't had any confirmed cases — were questionable because the virus is already fairly widespread.

Roselyne Bachelot, France's health minister, said she would ask the European Union to suspend all flights to Mexico at a meeting Thursday in Luxembourg.

Waterboarding was torture, Obama says

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama said Wednesday night that waterboarding authorized by former President George W. Bush was torture and that the information it gained from terror suspects could have been obtained by other means. "In some cases, it may be harder," he conceded at a White House news conference capping a whirlwind first 100 days in office.

Obama also expressed much greater optimism now than a month ago that Chrysler could remain a "going concern," possibly without filing for bankruptcy or with a "very quick" one.

The president gave assurance that one way or another Pakistan's nuclear arsenal would not fall into the hands of Islamic extremists.

He said he was confident "primarily, initially" because he believes Pakistan will handle the issue on its own. But he left the door open to eventual U.S. action to secure the weapons if need be.

The prime-time news conference was the third of Obama's presidency.

At a town-hall style meeting in Missouri earlier in the day, Obama said progress has been made in rebuilding the economy, yet more remains to be done.

"You can expect an unrelenting, unyielding effort from this administration to strengthen our prosperity and our security — in the second hundred days, and the third hundred days, and all the days after," he said in opening his news conference.

He called on Congress to enact his ambitious all-at-once agenda, including education spending to produce a better-trained work force, greater support for renewable energy development, a high-priced system for companies to buy and sell rights to emit dangerous pollutants, a vast expansion of health insurance and new rules to rein in the riskiest Wall Street behavior.

Toilet warning wins annual prize for stating the obvious

By Ben Leubsdorf
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — A toilet seat that attaches to a trailer hitch has gained national recognition — for a warning label that says you'd better not use it while the vehicle is moving.

"The Original Off-Road Commode" won this year's "Wacky Warning Labels" contest, organizers announced Wednesday. The contest, now in its 12th year, is intended to highlight claims that frivolous lawsuits have distorted the U.S. civil justice system.

Steve Shiflett of Hampton, Ga., won $500 for submitting the toilet seat's warning that it's "not for use on moving vehicles."

Hunters are a chief target audience for the toilet seat, which is sold by Wylie, Texas-based Convenient Sports International. The company is "very pleased" with the recognition, said

Mike Willis, president of national sales.

The seat is not designed to lock onto a trailer hitch. Company officials added the warning about two years ago after learning that at least one consumer had modified their product and was driving around with it on the back of his vehicle.

"It was a concern because, 'What if, what if?'" Willis said.

Daniel Berganini of Fridley, Minn., won the second-place prize of $250 for a line in a wart-removal product's instruction guide that is unlikely to reach its targeted audience: "Do not use if you cannot see clearly to read the information in the information booklet."

Third place was a tie between a cereal bowl warning, "Always use this product with adult supervision," and a bag of livestock castration rings cautioning, "For animal use only." Michael Leonard of Yarmouth, Maine, and Freddy Krieger of Baroda, Mich., each won $100.

"Do not eat the LCD panel," warns a label on a 1-by-4-inch LCD screen, a finalist submitted by David Almerantz of Goleta, Calif.

Past winners include a small tractor that cautioned "Danger: Avoid Death," and a warning not to put people inside a washing machine.

The contest, sponsored this year by the Foundation for Fair Civil Justice, has a serious edge, said organizer Bob Dorigo Jones, of Novi, Mich.

"We want to expose how the American civil justice system is out of whack, and this contest allows us to use humor as a hook to start an important debate over how much consumers and families spend because of frivolous lawsuits, how much more they spend on everything from medicine to automobiles," he said.

Huge ice chunks break away from Antarctic shelf

By David Rising, Associated Press writer. BERLIN — Massive ice chunks are crumbling away from a shelf in the western Antarctic Peninsula, researchers said Wednesday, warning that 1,300 square miles of ice — an area larger than Rhode Island — was in danger of breaking off in coming weeks.

The Wilkins Ice Shelf had been stable for most of the last century, but began retreating in the 1990s. Researchers believe it was held in place by an ice bridge linking Charcot Island to the Antarctic mainland. But the 127-square-mile bridge lost two large chunks last year and then shattered completely on April 5. "As a consequence of the collapse, the rifts, which had already featured along the northern ice front, widened and new cracks formed as the ice adjusted," the European Space Agency said in a statement Wednesday on its Web site, citing new satellite images. The first icebergs broke away on Friday, and since then some 270 square miles of ice have dropped into the sea, according to the satellite data.

"There is little doubt that these changes are the result of atmospheric warming," said David Vaughan of the British Antarctic Survey. The falling away of Antarctic ice shelves does not, in itself, raise sea levels, since the ice was already floating in the sea. But such coastal tables of ice usually hold back glaciers, and when they disintegrate that land ice will often flow more quickly into the sea, contributing to sea-level rise. Researchers said the quality and frequency of the ESA satellite images have allowed them to analyze the Wilkins shelf breakup far more effectively than any previous event. "For the first time, I think, we can really begin to see the processes that have brought about the demise of the ice shelf," Vaughan said. He said eight ice shelves along the Antarctic Peninsula have shown signs of retreat over the last few decades. "The retreat of Wilkins Ice Shelf is the latest and the largest of its kind," he said.

RIDE SAFE

PROTECTIVE GEAR MIGHT BE HEAVY, BUT IT'S WORTH WEARING IN A CRASH

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

While racing his dirt bike at high speed last year in Paradise Valley, the throttle on Theron Thomas' bike became stuck. The incident, which happened while he was riding in fifth gear, sent him and his bike into a cartwheel.

It also sent him home with a bad case of whiplash. But he credits the neck brace and other safety gear he was wearing to having protected him from further injury.

Thomas, who's been riding dirt bikes since childhood, is a quick competitor in cross country and endurance races. But even if he's taking it easy on a leisurely trail ride, he makes sure he's wearing his gear — helmet, goggles, neck brace, chest protector, boots and gloves.

"If I don't wear my gear, it doesn't feel right. It's awkward. It's like something's missing," Thomas said.

Though not every dirt bike fan rides as hard as Thomas, he recommends they still use minimum protective gear — helmet and boots. The same for ATV users, he said.

Theron Thomas shows the inside cushions of a Fly Trophy helmet, a popular model in the Fly lineup. Dirt bike and ATV users should make sure they wear helmets, Thomas says. 'You only get one head. It's important that you protect it,' he says.

Ready to race at Rock Creek

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

After opening up the Wild West Nationals motocross race circuit in Mesquite, Nev., in early April, racers will go next to Ogden, Utah, this weekend to accumulate all the points they can.

Then on May 23 and 24 it's the Rock Creek Raceway's turn to host the adrenaline-packed event.

The weekend races are expected to bring in about 400 racers to Kimberly, said raceway owner Denis Sandrock.

"This is probably our biggest event," Sandrock said.

Riders are welcome to park their RVs, pitch a tent or sleep under the stars on raceway's expansive grounds for a nominal $10 camping/garbage service fee, he said.

"We don't have hook-ups but they're welcome to pull in and park ... Some of em' even camp out in their pickups, and that's fine with me, too," Sandrock said.

Practice before the race is open on the track from noon to 4 p.m., May 22. Sign-up follows later that day from 5:30 to 9 p.m. Racers can sign up the next morning at 5:30 a.m., as well.

Practice on May 23 begins at 7 a.m. with races starting later that morning.

Knowing about local off-road events is half the battle

Sometimes it's tough trying to come up with interesting stories for every off-road edition. I ask those I meet to inform me about off-road events or rides that they plan to participate in, but I guess they get busy and forget.

It's easy to forget. I've often wondered about that old cliché: tie a ribbon around your pinky to help remind you of a task that needs to be completed. Only thing is, with multiple projects always in the works — sometimes I'm not sure if I'm coming or going — all of my fingers would be tied in ribbons. And I'm sure that wouldn't make for easy typing on the keyboard.

Maybe it's the same for you. Perhaps you get so busy that you forget to tell me about your recent rides, favorite trails or other off-road event. I have an idea, though. How 'bout we help each other out.

The next time you plan to participate in or know about an off-road event — especially if it's more recreational in nature than sport — drop me a line to let me know about it. I can't promise we'll cover every news tip, but knowing about them is half the battle.

As you can see, this week's off-road edition features a couple of stories about rider safety. It's an important topic to remember any time of the year, but now that the weather is warming is when riders are again hopping on their machines to explore the great outdoors. And already there's been some accidents.

I'd like to hear about what protective gear, if any, you use when riding and what your opinion is on wearing helmets. Have you ever been involved in a dirt bike or ATV-related accident? If so, were you hurt? Did a helmet or other gear help protect you? Or maybe you think the whole safety issue is overblown?

Send me your thoughts and experiences in an e-mail at the address below.

GET ENERGIZED, HYDRATED WITH THE ENERVITENE PACKS

Enervit is a sports-nutrition company based in Zelbio, Italy, that pitches its line of gels, powders, and bars as being "the world's only complete, integrated, modular sports nutrition system designed expressly for elite athletes."

I certainly do not qualify as elite. But over the past two months, I have banked on one of the company's (www.enervitus.com) more unique offerings for bike races and running events. The Enervitene Cheerpack treads halfway between an energy gel and a hydration drink. It comes in a 60ml pouch with a screw cap. Untwist the top, put the plastic valve in your mouth, and wait for the sweet liquid to rush in.

Enervitene has 120 calories and 30 grams of carbohydrates per serving, which is nearly the same as a pack of GU or a ClifShot gel. But Enervitene mixes in its proprietary formula of vitamins and supplements — pantothenic acid, anyone? — for what the company touts as being "so effective, it's almost like cheating."

The packs are pricey, averaging $4 a pop. It's an elite product at an elite price.

In my test, the Enervitene packs went down easier than GU. Squeeze the pouch and liquid fills your mouth — 120 calories in a quick swallow.

The flavor, built from a base of fructose and mal-to-dextrin, is extremely sweet, like cotton candy liquefied. There is a hint of orange that I thought tasted a bit like medicine.

But on the bike, in need of energy, the Enervitene packs worked as quick fuel. It is hard to say if the company's mix of pantothenic acid, niacin, vitamin B6, and other constituents did anything more special than regular gel. There are so many factors going on with sustenance and nutrition while active that I find it difficult to have hard opinions.

Like GU or any other gel I use, Enervitene provided a dose of calories and an adequate burst of carbs for energy. The liquid consistency makes Enervitene easy to take. And the threaded plastic cap — which screws off and on easily, even gripped in your teeth — allows for small sips or big gulps on the go.

City officials nix paid hikes at Tubbs Hill

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Coeur d'Alene City Council has rejected a proposal by a commercial outfitter to provide paid, guided hikes and kayak tours of Tubbs Hill, a popular public recreation area in the city.

The council voted 4-2 on against plans submitted by ROW Adventures, which sought to offer two guided hikes per day with as many as 14 people per trip.

The company's plans drew intense opposition, and more than 900 people signed a petition urging the council to reject commercial activity at the 120-acre park on the shores of Lake Coeur d'Alene. Foes argued that allowing the paid tours would violate the public trust and set a precedent for allowing commercial activities on public land.

"You have to respect and cherish certain things," Councilman Ron Edinger said before voting against the proposal, the Spokesman-Review reported.

The owners of ROW Adventures, Peter Grubb and his wife, Betsy Bowen, planned to charge $27 for adults, $19 for youth on the hiking tour and $59 for kayaking trips.

They say the trips would have emphasized the need to protect and preserve the park, essentially an urban wilderness near the downtown of the northern Idaho resort community.

Although testimony during the recent public hearing made clear that other groups already lead tours of the park on a limited basis, Grubb needed a permit to operate a commercial venture on city property. Grubb said he was disappointed and surprised in the outcome.

The proposal also had the backing of the city's public parks department. Director Doug Eastwood said the tours would help the city police the hill, educating visitors about the ban on mountain bikes and picking flowers and plants.

"The most frustrating thing for me on all this is at the end of the day I'm on the same page as everyone who spoke so passionately on this," Grubb told the Coeur d'Alene Press. "I think people are a little misguided in the feeling that somehow having a guided tour would tarnish their experience of Tubbs Hill."

Tubbs Hill was obtained in four separate land buys over a 40-year period.

The first 33 acres were bought by the city in 1936 after voters approved a $19,000 bond to buy the land. That parcel included McEuan Field, the present site of city hall and a narrow strip of waterfront property. More acreage was added in 1969, 1974 and 1977.

Endangered Colorado River fish population surges

PHOENIX (AP) — At one time, the Colorado River humpback chub was losing the battle. Its numbers were falling so significantly that the federal government declared it endangered. But changes in the way the river is managed, the removal of predator fish and drought-related spikes in water temperature have led to a comeback for the chub.

The population of the endangered fish grew by 50 percent over the past eight years, the U.S. Geological Survey reported Monday.

"It may be that the synergy, the combined impacts of all of those, is the thing that helps humpback chub survive best," said Matthew Andersen, a USGS biologist. "We have great confidence in the population trend. We're still investigating the reasons behind it."

By the end of last year, there were an estimated 7,650 adult chub at least 4 years old near the confluence of the Colorado and Little Colorado rivers. That's up from about 4,000 fish as recently as 2000.

The chub, named for a protruding hump on its back, can grow as long as 20 inches and can live for 30 years or more.

Scientists have used the chub as a measurement of the Grand Canyon's overall condition in recent years and a symbol for groups trying to protect the canyon's resources.

After Glen Canyon Dam was completed in 1963, the chub's numbers in the lower Colorado dwindled because the dam cut off the natural flow of the Colorado River and thus altered the habitat.

Finding more fish in the river is encouraging, but work remains to ensure the species' long-term survival, environmental advocates said.

"This is not a result that should have us sitting back comfortably in our chairs," said Nikolai Lash, Colorado River program director for the Flagstaff-based Grand Canyon Trust. "It should have us leaning forward, trying to figure out how to take advantage of whatever it was that led to a small improvement."

A decision is expected in the next few weeks in a case the trust and others filed in U.S. District Court in Phoenix.

It challenges the government's management of the river and the chub habitat.

What are landowner permission hunts?

Question: "Now that the big game regulations are out I have noticed several new hunts and extra tags. Several of them have notations in the margin labeled as 'landowner permission hunts'. What is a landowner permission hunt and can I apply for this opportunity?"

Answer: Landowner permission hunts are a very special class of big game hunting opportunity targeted toward resolving agricultural damage by big game animals in areas that do not contain general hunts.

Listing them as controlled hunts in the big game brochure is very confusing to sportsmen because hunters cannot apply for these hunts.

Landowner permission hunts are used by big game managers to directly involve landowners in quickly locating hunters to remove big game animals once a depredation has been validated by department biologists.

Once a big game depredation has been identified and validated by department staff, they will allocate a portion of the available permits to a landowner or group of landowners. Landowners will designate hunters to participate in resolving the depredation by providing them with a signed department authorization form.

Hunters designated by landowners to participate in a landowner permission hunt must take the authorization form to the regional office authorizing the hunt and purchase a controlled hunt permit and big game tag. Hunters with permits for a landowner permission hunt are restricted to hunting only on the private property of the landowner(s) specified in the hunt.

Some landowner permission hunts have the same rules as controlled hunts, such as, if you accept the landowner permission hunt, you may not hunt any other hunt for that species.

If the landowner permission hunt has been designated as an extra tag, then an animal harvested during the hunt is extra, over and above other big game hunting opportunity for that species.

Previous attempts to resolve big game depredations have not always been very successful and have taken time to focus hunting effort. Landowner permission hunts are an effort to include landowners in solving the depredation and speeding up the process of removing animals doing the damage.

Remember these safety tips when you hop on your ATV

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

A woman was taken to the hospital after the ATV she and her husband were riding rolled down a hill, tumbling on top of her April 5 in the Shoshone Basin not far from Nat-Soo-Pah Hot Springs.

A similar incident with far worse results happened in Idaho's neighbor state when Utah's Rep. Bill Orton, 60, died April 18 at sand dunes in Utah's Juab County.

These are just two incidents in a world full of ATVs, injury and death.

"We are seeing injuries and deaths because machines are rolling on top of their riders," said Sonia Hayes-Pleasant, spokeswoman for the government's ATVSafety.gov.

Part of the problem stems because riders are unfamiliar with the territory where they ride or too young to safely maneuver their machines, she said.

The problems are nothing new. According to the safety organization:

- From 1982 to 2007, 114 people died in Idaho in ATV-related accidents. About 26 of the fatalities were from youth 16 years and younger.

- In 2006 there were 750 ATV-related deaths reported nationwide, though it's estimated the number could be as high as 882. About 107 involved children 16 years and younger.

- During the same year about 146,600 emergency-room treated injuries occurred.

- In 2007 it is estimated that number reached to almost 151,000.

Accidents involving youth often occur because parents allow their children to ride adult-sized machines.

"It's very important that children ride the correct size machines," Hayes-Pleasant said. She said youth 16 and younger often lack the developmental skills to handle an adult ATV, especially in unfamiliar terrain. And children age 6 and under, according to the safety organization, should never be allowed to ride an ATV of any size or ride as a passenger, she said, noting that children this young "lack the physical and mental abilities needed to safely maneuver a machine with multiple speeds and controls."

Rody Bare rides his youth ATV at the FS Flats area of the South Hills in October 2008. It's important that children and teens are properly supervised and ride their own-sized ATVs to help prevent accidents, according to the government's ATVSafety.gov Web site.

She said recent lead laws that have prohibited the sales of youth machines will likely be rescinded until 2011 to allow manufacturers time to correct the amounts of lead used in machines, allowing youth-sized ATVs to still be bought and sold.

Another factor in ATV accidents is because some people ride them on paved roads, conflicting with drivers of cars and trucks who often do not see the smaller machines.

It is a no-no to ride off-road machines on paved roadways, Hayes-Pleasant said. "ATVs are not toys," she said. "And they are meant for off-road use only."

Some things ATV users should remember:

- ATVs are not toys. They are powerful and potentially dangerous vehicles.

- ATVs can travel at speeds in excess of 60 miles per hour and can weigh in excess of 700 pounds.

- ATVs can easily roll and tip over. Their unpredictable nature in off-road conditions makes training and proper use essential.

- All riders should always wear a helmet when on an ATV.

- About one-third of ATV-related deaths and injuries involve children. Anyone younger than 16 years of age should never be on an adult ATV.

- Stay off paved roads and avoid unfamiliar terrain.

- Never carry a passenger on a single-rider ATV.

- Do not drive an ATV while under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

It's also suggested that first-time riders take a rider safety course and learn all they can about their machine before riding.

If riders do not know where to go for training in their area, they can contact the safety organization to find out, Hayes-Pleasant said.

The largest space telescope you've never heard about

In the next two weeks, if all goes according to plan, the largest space telescope ever built will be launched into an Earth-trailing orbit on a three-year mission. Yet, to date, it's hardly made the news.

The Herschel Space Observatory will image the cosmos in infrared energy, not visible light.

(Herschel's wavelength range stops just short of Hubble's, which extends into the near-infrared, just beyond the red end of the visible spectrum.) Unfortunately, telescopes operating outside the visible spectrum don't seem to command the attention that optical telescopes do, despite spectacular images returned by Hubble's space borne cousins, the Spitzer infrared telescope and the Chandra x-ray observatory.

Herschel (named after the late 18th/early 19th century astronomer William Herschel, who discovered Uranus and, fittingly, infrared energy) may also have escaped attention in the U.S. because, unlike Hubble, Spitzer, and Chandra, it's not a NASA mission. The spacecraft was built in France, will be launched from French Guyana, and will be controlled from the European Space Agency's mission operations center in Germany and science center in Spain. The telescope's on board instruments will be managed from Germany, Britain and the Netherlands, and some data processing will be handled by Caltech.

Herschel will target phenomena occurring at low temperatures, like interstellar gas and dust, the beginning and end stages of stellar life cycles, and the light of distant galaxies chilled by its passage through an expanding universe.

Herschel's 138-inch wide mirror — almost 50 percent wider than Hubble's — is necessary both to image faint infrared sources (since infrared may outfit their children with a quality helmet and boots.

Most dealers who sell the products, such as Action Cycles 'n Sleds in Twin Falls where Thomas works, will help parents choose the best fit for their children. A proper-fitting helmet is important for rider safety.

"If it's too tight, you're going to be wearing a headache," Thomas said. "If it's too loose, the inside will crumple up," not providing the snug fit of the helmet your head needs if involved in a crash.

Nick Telleria, owner of Let's Ride in Burley, said he's been involved in crashes that left him with at least three concussions.

"If I wasn't wearing a helmet, I'd be dead," he said. "Wearing a helmet should be the number one priority for every rider."

MORE PROTECTION

Most people who come into the Burley store to buy bikes or ATVs usually purchase helmets to go with them, Telleria said. But not every rider dresses appropriately for their adventures on the trails.

"You should dress for a crash, not the ride," he said. Some, especially ATV users, might be tempted to wear shorts or short-sleeved shirts and shoes, neglecting the safer, albeit heavier gear.

"Gear is heavier, it's hotter," Telleria said. "But it sure is nice to have if you're in a wreck."

Though not as popular among ATV users, boots and other protective gear is recommended among these riders as well, said Sonia Hayes-Pleasant, spokeswoman for ATVSafety.org.

"It's absolutely essential that all riders of all ages gear up every time they jump on an ATV or any other machine," she said. "It's very important they wear a helmet, over-the-ankle boots, goggles, long pants and long sleeves."

In a number of ATV-related injuries and fatalities the safety organization has investigated find the victim was not wearing a helmet, Hayes-Pleasant said.

PERSONAL PREFERENCE

Thomas admits that wearing protective gear comes down to personal preference. Some riders don't like to dress up in hot and heavy gear. They usually dress for their rides, not crashes.

Despite the number of safety tips, precautions and gear available, people are left to make their own choices.

But having been involved in a number of accidents himself, Thomas knows that when he's on the back of a bike anything can happen. He wants to be prepared.

"Things happen. Things go bad," Thomas said. "When you ride as hard as I do, you kind of expect it."

Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments

Question: I am way over my head with credit card debt. I see ads every day on TV for debt reduction and debt cure programs. Wouldn't I be better off with one of these programs rather than filing bankruptcy?

Answer: Debt reduction firms (many of which are owned by the credit card companies) promise to talk to the credit card companies and arrange better terms such as reduced fees and smaller payments. You make a monthly payment to the reduction agency and they send the money to the various credit cards. Problem is, these debt reduction firms charge hefty fees and keep all your payments until their fees are collected; only then do they send any money to the credit cards. In the meantime, the credit card companies continue to accrue late charges & fees, mess up your credit score, and engage in very aggressive collection practices, including lawsuits. Many debtors simply give up out of frustration, and of course, lose the money they have paid in. Of those who do continue in the programs, few are able to complete the programs, often ending up owing more than when they started. You should talk to Consumer Credit Management (733-2227), a genuine non-profit credit-counseling agency, to determine what is best for you.

Jerome Animal Shelter raising money for dogs

Times-News

JEROME — Jerome Animal Shelter staff and volunteers will hold a fundraiser Saturday to help pay for the care of shelter animals.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Jerome Animal Control Officer Gordon Leininger, shelter staff and volunteers will shampoo dogs for a fee. There will also be on-site animal shots and coupons provided by Pet Pals to help cover the cost of spaying and neutering animals at the Jerome Fire Station No. 2, 110 W. Yakima St.

Leininger said the shelter is working toward becoming a no-kill shelter, meaning that it finds homes and doesn't have to euthanize any incoming animals. Leininger said the shelter, which currently houses only dogs, has been able to place all of its animals since December.

Shelter founder Monica Harrison has worked to check various nonprofit animal rescue and shelter organizations to help place animals in new homes. A foster program for animals has also helped.

Leininger and Harrison both said volunteers are needed to help the current crop of 10, as College of Southern Idaho students who graduate will create a greater need.

Jerome High speech team wins state title

The Jerome High School Speech Team won its ninth state championship in 12 years by defeating 38 schools in the state speech tournament held April 17 and 18 at Skyview High School in Nampa.

The Tigers qualified 24 speakers for the semifinals (top 12), moved 13 speakers into the finals (top 6) and captured eight medals.

That's more than any other school at the tournament. Jerome outlasted the biggest schools in the state including, Eagle, Centennial and several other Class 5A teams as speech competition isn't classified like high school sports. Schools compete against each other regardless of size, with team trophies given to "big schools" (900-plus students) and "small schools" (899 students and fewer).

Foot drop is a symptom of problem, not a diagnosis

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am an 80-year-old woman who seems to be stuck with what my doctors are calling a "drop foot." I acquired this malady after caring for my husband, who passed away several months ago. I also have back problems and have had surgery and physical therapy. The foot is more of a nuisance than anything else, since I have to use a cane or a walker to avoid falling. My doctors say it could return to normal in time, but there is a chance it won't. Do you know of any other treatments for this?

ASK DR. GOTT

DEAR READER: Foot drop, or as your doctors called it, drop foot, is basically a difficulty lifting up the front part of the foot. The condition is not a disorder, but rather a symptom of an anatomical, neurological or muscular problem.

Depending on the cause, foot drop may be temporary or permanent. If the cause is trauma or nerve damage, improvement or complete recovery is often seen. If it is due to a progressive neurological disorder, it will likely be permanent.

Treatment is aimed at identifying and, if possible, repairing the underlying cause. Direct treatments are available. Most people respond well to using lightweight leg braces and shoe inserts that keep the foot and ankle in a more stable position. Exercise therapy to strengthen the muscles of the foot may also be beneficial. Permanent damage may benefit from surgically fusing the ankle and foot into a more normal walking position.

You say that you are currently suffering from back problems and have had surgery and physical therapy. Were the surgery and therapy for your back or foot? Nerve damage from surgery and spinal problems could be the cause of your foot drop.

Boise ice cream shop makes a comeback

Don Blele, right, carries a carton of vanilla ice cream into the freezer at Delsa's in Boise on April 8. Closed since its last owners declared bankruptcy in 2007, the beloved ice cream shop will reopen in May or early June using the original recipes.

By Tim Woodward
Idaho Statesman

BOISE (AP) — Delsa's Ice Cream Parlour, a Boise institution for almost half a century, has chosen the right time of year to announce that against all the odds, Delsa's is about to rise again.

Closed since its last owners declared bankruptcy in 2007, the beloved ice cream shop will reopen in May or early June using the original Delsa's recipes. Co-owner Nick West is so passionate about getting them right that he's taking ice cream-making lessons from 30-year owner Don Blele — who will be there opening day to make sure everything is just right.

West thinks of it as an investment in tradition.

"It was to save Delsa's," he said. "It wasn't money-motivated at all."

Named for late co-founder Delsa Walton, Delsa's opened at 7923 W. Ustick Road in 1961. West and business partner Tom Cushing, co-owners of the Capri Restaurant, bought it at a bankruptcy auction in December. In addition to the ice cream that made Delsa's famous locally, the shop's new menu will feature homemade soups and other fare for which the Capri is known.

The partners are reviving a business that was on the brink of death. Crews are busy painting and installing a new furnace and air conditioner. A new sign, roof and patio for outdoor seating have been added. While Cushing and his wife, Tiffany, work on the renovation, West is learning Delsa's recipes from the man who knows them all by heart.

Roughly 50 of them. "I thought he'd bring in a recipe book, but he has them all in his head," West said.

Blele and his wife, Wanda, owned Delsa's from 1971 to 2001. West made a point of finding Blele, now retired and living in Notus, to teach him the art of making the favorites — from huckleberry to Swiss orange chip — that kept ice-cream junkies coming back.

It hasn't been easy. The Spokane company that made high-butterfat cream to Blele's specifications stopped making it. "I wasn't getting anywhere until I used Don's name," West said. "Then I had it in two weeks."

Another company stopped making Blele's special vanilla. With Blele back as West's teacher, it is reconsidering.

West will spend about three weeks as Blele's "understudy."

Blele is convinced the new Delsa's will be a hit. "I feel good about it," he said.

Backflow ordinance draws residents' ire

Second meeting is Wednesday

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The people of Jerome take their sprinkler systems seriously. So when city officials held a meeting on a new irrigation ordinance, there were more than a few furled brows.

On April 22, Jerome's public works department held the first of two open-house events to explain the city's backflow ordinance, which goes into effect August 1. According to Public Works Director Walt Appell, the meeting turned into "chaos."

The ordinance requires that all residential and commercial sprinkler systems hooked up to city water service be equipped with an approved backflow prevention assembly, which keeps any water tainted by fertilizer, pesticides or other contaminants from re-entering the city water supply.

"We thought people might not like having to adhere to this ordinance but we weren't prepared for how upset they were," Appell said. "We did not get to properly explain that the ordinance has been on the books since 2007 and goes into effect Aug. 1, 2009."

Appell said backflow prevention hardware is a common requirement throughout the nation, and is required for all new sprinkler systems in Jerome. Irrigation fed by canal sources is exempt.

"Any potable water source should have a backflow appliance," said Jake Kuntz, with Kelley Garden Center in Twin Falls. "Twin Falls requires it."

A free "Jerome Home Irrigation Safety" hand-out is available at Jerome City Hall and the city public works office. The second meeting on the ordinance will be held from 6 to 7 p.m. Wednesday at Jerome City Hall, 152 E. Ave. A.

Appell said that meeting will be different from the first one and will include a PowerPoint program to deliver the information before a discussion is held.

"Our job is to keep city water safe," Appell said. "Our water comes from the well very pure and clean. We want to deliver that and not contaminate it."

Mary Hanson may be reached at mhansonmbd@aol.com.

Youth service group will collect toys on Saturday

The Modern Woodmen of America area Youth Service Club consists of youths ranging from 7-16 years of age.

Cheryl Noble is a volunteer for the group, which currently has five such youth clubs in the area. The clubs are encouraged to reach out and better their community through service projects each year. Among the activities the groups have participated in are assisting and honoring veterans, donating and planting three large trees at Burley High School, stained the fence at Storybook Park, held activities for children at the library and Hilland Estates, collected and donated food for the Burley Senior Center, donated funds for the Crop

Walk, and more.

This year's project will be part of a National service project known as Join Hands Day where youth service clubs and adult service clubs around the country join together on projects to help and improve their communities.

Five area youth clubs are planning on working with members of the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council to collect toys. The drive will be held from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at Dworshak Elementary School in Burley.

Christmas Council members will work with the youth groups and the toys collected will be delivered to the council at the end of the drive.

and discuss the option of a leg and ankle brace, which may eliminate your need for the walker and cane. It is important to discover the cause of your foot drop, because treating the underlying condition may in fact improve or cure your problem.

If your physician is unable or unwilling to provide you with treatment options, request a referral to an orthopedic specialist, who should be able to provide the most up-to-date treatment options and quality braces.

DEAR DR. GOTT: You recently wrote about a 45-year-old female with back pain. You were right to suggest she get a better diagnosis than notalgia paresthetica.

I am writing because I may have a possible diagnosis for her. When she described her back as being noticeably more developed on one side, my first thought was scoliosis. It's possible that she had mild, undiagnosed scoliosis for a long time that is now progressing at a faster rate.

DEAR READER: Scoliosis (curvature of the spine) is an excellent suggestion. If this is her problem, she would need to have an X-ray to confirm the deformity. Depending on the severity of the curvature, surgery to implant pins and rods to prevent further bending may be necessary.

Thank you for writing to share your possible diagnosis.

M. Allyn Dingel Jr.

BOISE — M. Allyn Dingel Jr. passed away at his home Thursday, April 23, 2009, after courageously battling lung cancer for nearly two years.

Allyn was born in Twin Falls on Oct. 10, 1936, to Allyn and Della Dingel. Allyn was a rambunctious youth and full of life. Baseball was his passion. The stories of him playing baseball growing up and in college are legendary, with his rifle arm and home-run power. Following his school days in Twin Falls, where he was student body president at Twin Falls High School, Allyn attended the University of Idaho. At the U of I, Allyn met his beloved Fran Baudek. The two, however, were not immediately love struck. School was important to Allyn and, on their dates he queried her about her grades. She was not impressed. He missed his opportunity, but destiny would later bring the two together. Allyn was active on campus with his fraternity, Phi Gamma Delta, the Vandaleers, and other student organizations.

Allyn graduated from the U of I in 1958 with a B.A. in economics. On Dr. Erwin Graue's directive, Allyn successfully applied for a scholarship to New York University Law School. He finished his first year at NYU in the top 20 of his class, entitling him to join the NYU Law Review. After graduating from NYU with an LLB in law, Allyn returned to Idaho and was admitted to the Idaho State Bar in 1961. He practiced in Twin Falls until early 1964, when he joined the Idaho attorney general's office and moved to Boise. Allyn discovered that Fran was teaching in Boise and, more importantly, that she was single. His dating skills improved, the two quickly became best friends. On Dec. 26, 1964, Allyn and Fran became lifelong partners and were married in the chapel at St. John's Cathedral. Their marriage was blessed with two sons, Bryan and Mike.

Following three years at the AG's office, Allyn went into private practice and practiced law with the same Boise firm for nearly 40 years. At age 70, Allyn's law firm retired him, but Allyn did not retire from the practice of law. His vigor for the law was never stronger. He continued practicing and shared an office with John Runft and Jon Steele for one year. During the last 12 months of his life, Allyn was a counsel with the law firm of Moore, Smith, Buxton and Turcke. Allyn's days at Moore Smith were some of the happiest in his professional life. He cherished every day he was there, and they have told the family how fortunate they were to have had him. During the last days of his life, his mind was as sharp as ever, and he was intent on continuing his practice despite the physical hardships he was enduring with his battle with cancer.

Allyn was a trial lawyer. The courtroom was his stage. His presentation before juries was not always conventional, but he had a way of communicating that made him believable. He had his own way of doing things. He had his own vocabulary. His style often resulted in humorous anecdotes, sometimes on purpose, sometimes accidental. Allyn was a lawyer's lawyer. He was well liked and respected by his colleagues in the law, young and old. Many of Allyn's courtroom adversaries were Allyn's closest friends, a reflection of his professionalism. Allyn also had many friends in the judiciary. His circle of friends from the law perpetuated throughout the United States.

Allyn provided pro bono legal services his entire legal career. Allyn was a founding member of the Idaho Law Foundation. He was a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers. He served as Idaho's lawyer representative to the 9th Circuit Conference of the United States Courts. He was a member of the Idaho Code Commission. He served as the Idaho State Bar's delegate to the American Bar Association House of Delegates. He was a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation. Allyn served as the chancellor for the Episcopal Diocese of Idaho for 25 years. He served on the executive committee of Idaho Partners Against Domestic Violence. Allyn was a member emeritus on the Advisory Board for the U of I's College of Law. The Idaho State Bar awarded him its highest attorney accolade in 2004, naming him a Distinguished Lawyer. The judges of Idaho's 4th District honored Allyn in July 2008, naming a courtroom after him. Many current and former federal and state court judges, including nearly all of Idaho's appellate judiciary, attended the courtroom dedication ceremony, a tribute of respect to Allyn's long standing service to Idaho's judiciary. Allyn was a pro bono legislative liaison and lobbyist for Idaho's judiciary and various charitable and philanthropic organizations for more than 30 years. The Idaho Legislature commended him this year with Senate Concurrent Resolution 111, honoring him for his years of service to the Idaho Legislature, the Idaho courts and for his charitable and philanthropic endeavors. Rarely a day went by where Allyn did not spend time pro bono on a charitable, community or philanthropic cause.

Allyn was a pure silver and gold Vandal. He often instigated impromptu choruses of the Vandal Fight Song. He was a baritone and sang at many weddings. He also played the violin for the Boise Philharmonic. Allyn affiliated himself with the Republican Party, but he often supported the left wing. Ensuring a balance of power in government was important to him.

Allyn's knowledge of Idaho was vast, particularly the inner workings of Idaho's three branches of government. He was generous with his story telling and the sharing of his knowledge. He had a prodigious memory and not only remembered people's names and where they hailed from, but also their background, lineage and accomplishments. It was joked that you did not talk with Allyn, you listened. Allyn did listen though, especially when people needed his support. It was a rare day that you spent time with Allyn and you did not learn something, sometimes trivial, sometimes meaningful, but often both. The family has been told countless times by young lawyers how valuable Allyn was as a mentor early in their careers. To the older lawyers, Allyn was known as a warhorse. He was also very influential in the lives of his sons as well as his sons' friends. Many of his sons' friends have told the family that Allyn was the most influential person in their life outside of immediate family. He had an eidetic memory. He did not forget. He did, however, forgive. Allyn had great compassion and the ability to find the good in people. Allyn had amazing stage presence and the ability to speak with ease in front of large groups of people, often impromptu.

There was no one more special in Allyn's life than his loving wife, Fran. They had many special trips together, as travelling was one of the passions they shared. Allyn's meandering side trips often led them to off the beaten path dirt roads and areas known only to locals. He was an adventurer. While he often worked late into the evening, he was a devoted husband, and Fran meant the world to him. He knew he was very lucky to have her, especially these last months. Allyn was a devoted father and he took great interest in his sons and their lives. Family vacations were always memorable, especially the time spent at their cabin in McCall. Allyn was especially close to his six grandchildren, whom he absolutely adored. Allyn's extended family was also very important to him, including Fran's sister, Gerrie Crook, and her late husband, Don, and their children and families. Family functions were a circus, and he was the ring-leader. He was our patriarch, our Don Corleone as he jokingly referred to himself. Our lives will never be the same, but we are blessed to have had him for the time we did, and we will cherish our memories of him.

Allyn will be remembered for his heart of gold, the resonating sound of his voice, and his enduring smile. He will be remembered for the touch of his fingers to his lips, which was his sign of love and peace. He will be remembered for his wisdom, integrity, generosity, compassion, wit, keen sense of humor, eternal optimism and unbridled enthusiasm for life. He will be remembered for his love of family.

Allyn is survived by his wife, Fran; their two sons, Bryan and his wife Valencia and Mike and his wife Lori; grandchildren, Aleksei, Jackson, Halle, Jake, Audrey and Isabelle; his sister-in-law, Gerrie Crook; and nieces and nephews.

The family gives special thanks to the staff at St. Luke's Hospital and MSTI, Boise, for their care and support.

A viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 30, at the Cathedral of the Rockies. An Episcopal memorial service will be held at 10 a.m. Friday, May 1, at the Cathedral of the Rockies, 717 N. 11th St. in Boise.

A reception will follow at Crane Creek Country Club. A private family burial service will be at Cloverdale Memorial Park.

Should friends desire, in honor of Allyn, memorial contributions may be made to the University of Idaho, College of Law, in care of Gift Administration — M. Allyn Dingel Jr. Scholarship, P.O. Box 443147, Moscow, ID 83844-3147, or the Idaho Community Foundation (www.idcomfdn.org).

Kentucky mourns passing of vet, super volunteer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A 108th birthday celebration that had been planned next month for a veteran who joined the Army just after World War I will instead be an occasion to remember him.

Robley Henry Rex died Tuesday at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Louisville, just four days short of his birthday.

He was still volunteering three days a week when he was 105 and had logged more than 14,000 volunteer hours.

Rex was presented with the Kentucky Governor's Award for Outstanding Service at his 107th birthday party last May. He was named National Volunteer of the Year in 2005 by the national Veterans of Foreign Wars organization.

Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell noted the death during a speech Wednesday in Washington.

"Robley was not only the Bluegrass State's pre-eminent veteran, he was also its pre-eminent volunteer on behalf of veterans," McConnell said.

The Kentucky senator said a birthday celebration planned next month at the VA hospital will instead be "an opportunity to remember how much Robley meant to us."

Rex was born in 1901 in Hopkinsville and enlisted in the Army when he was 18, just after World War I. He spent time in France and Germany and was discharged in 1922.

His wife, the former Gracie Bivins, died in 1992 at age 91.

Country singer Vern Gosdin dies at 74

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Vern Gosdin, who recorded country music hits like the award-winning "Chiseled in Stone" during a 30-year career, has died. He was 74.

Michael Illobre, funeral director at Mount Olivet Funeral Home in Nashville, said Wednesday that Gosdin was under hospice care and died late Tuesday at an area hospital.

The singer's administrative assistant, Dawn Hall, said Gosdin had a history of strokes and suffered the latest one a few weeks ago.

"We were quite hopeful there for a while because he was showing signs of coming back," Hall said.

Until earlier this month, she said, "He was independent and telling me what to do." He released a box set in December and was renovating his tour bus for an appearance at the Country Music Association's annual festival in June.

"Chiseled in Stone" was voted 1989 song of the year by the CMA. In the tune, an older man tells a younger man who is going through tough times, "You don't know about sadness 'til you faced life alone, you don't know about lonely 'til it's chiseled in stone."

Gosdin, who was known as "The Voice," had several other hits in the 1970s and '80s including "Set 'em Up Joe," "I Can Tell by the Way You Dance" and "I'm Still Crazy."

Attacks across Baghdad leave at least 48 dead

By Ernesto Londono and Qais Mizher
The Washington Post

BAGHDAD — Five car bombs and a roadside bomb exploded in Baghdad on Wednesday, killing at least 48 people, the latest in a series of attacks that appear designed to discredit Iraq's security forces as the U.S. military starts to withdraw from urban areas.

The day's deadliest strikes came in Sadr City, a vast Shiite district in eastern Baghdad, at approximately 4 p.m. when three car bombs detonated in quick succession, killing at least 41 people and wounding more than 60, Iraqi police officials said.

They were by far the worst attacks in Sadr City since last May, when the Iraqi army wrested control of the teeming, impoverished district, which had previously been governed and secured by clerics and militias. The deployment of government security forces there was hailed as a key turning point because militias had used it as a staging ground for attacks on the heavily-protected Green Zone.

Wednesday's attacks could prompt militiamen loyal to anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr to take up arms to defend their Sadr City resident Ahmed Yusuf said residents had been suspicious of one of the vehicles.

"We told the Iraqi soldiers when they patrolled there and it exploded minutes after they left," he said, standing next to a mangled bicycle that belonged to a child wounded in the attack.

As Iraqi soldiers approached the market after the attack, residents threw rocks and empty bottles at their trucks, prompting the troops to shoot in the air to disperse the crowd.

The attacks followed a series of suicide bombings last week that killed more than 160 people in predominantly Shiite districts. Civilian casualties have risen every month this year, according to an Associated Press tally. At least 352 Iraqis died violently this month, up from 335 in March, 283 in February and 242 in January.

The Iraqi government has blamed Sunni insurgents and members of the Baath Party for the recent attacks.

Ahmed al-Masudi, a lawmaker who serves as the Sadr bloc spokesman in parliament, offered a different theory, saying he suspected the recent bloodbath is the work of Sunni extremists aided by Western intelligence agencies that want to create a pretext to delay the U.S. withdrawal.

neighborhoods, which many have been eager to do since he imposed a cease-fire in the fall of 2007. The attacks are also likely to exacerbate sectarian tension; they are reminiscent of bombings in 2006 and 2007 that prompted Shiite militias to kill and displace Sunnis from their homes.

The vehicles were parked at the Muraidi market, located on the western side of Sadr City. The first to explode, a silver sedan, caused most of the casualties. Survivors scurried for cover behind blast walls, making the two remaining bombs largely ineffective, an Iraqi police official said. Iraqi police said they defused three more car bombs in Sadr City shortly after the blasts.

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Kassidy Gaines gets a warm reception from the dugout after making the final out during one of the last innings for the Twin Falls High School baseball team in a blowout victory over Elko Wednesday afternoon in Twin Falls.

Bruin baseball brushes aside Elko

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The young Elko (Nev.) baseball squad was at a disadvantage from the opening pitch of its doubleheader against Twin Falls at Bill Ingram Field on Wednesday afternoon.

The Bruins were honoring five seniors who were playing their final regular-season home games and were prepping to host the Region Four-Five-Six Tournament. More importantly, they were pretty peeved at the way they played in their most recent game, their first loss

“We just take the same approach every game: The only team that’s going to beat us is us, so if we just do what we can do it’s going to work out, and it did today.”

— Braden Box, one of the five T.F. seniors honored between games to an in-state team. Adrenaline and aggression worked their way out in the form of two run-rule victories for the home team, 10-0 and 15-1, both in five innings.

“It was a great day at the yard. There was great weather, and it was relaxing for us out there,” said shortstop Braden Box, one of the five seniors honored between games. “We just take the same approach every game: The only team that’s going to beat us is us, so if we just do what we can do it’s going to work out, and it did today.”

While the Bruins (23-5) were smacking the ball all around the field — to the tune of 25 runs and 24 hits — Elko (9-17) couldn’t get much going offensively at all. The Indians were held to just three hits in the doubleheader, and both of their Game 2 hits were from the same player, Sean Brown.

That was a particularly frustrating aspect of the game for Elko coach Shane Gilligan, even as the Indians were starting a five-game, three-day venture with the nonconference double-dip in Twin Falls — Elko returns to High Desert League play

I Want Revenge made early Kentucky Derby favorite

By Beth Harris
Associated Press writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — I Want Revenge was made the early 3-1 favorite for the Kentucky Derby, with Pioneerof the Nile and Dunkirk sharing second-favorite status Wednesday in the full field of 20 horses.

I Want Revenge is coming off eye-catching victories on dirt in the Gotham Stakes and Wood Memorial at New York’s Aqueduct after leaving California and the synthetic surfaces there.

“I Want Revenge should definitely go off as the favorite,” Churchill Downs oddsmaker Mike Battaglia said.

Trained by Jeff Mullins and ridden by 19-year-old jockey Joe Talamo, I Want Revenge drew the No. 13 post position.

“It ended up perfect,” Talamo said. “It’s just what we wanted — to be outside of the early speed. I think it worked out great.”

Pioneerof the Nile and Dunkirk were made the co-second favorites at 4-1. Santa Anita Derby winner Pioneerof the Nile drew the No. 16 post, while lightly raced Dunkirk will be next door in the No. 15 spot.

Zimmerman, Skinner honored at CSI banquet

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

On a night held to recognize its sophomore student-athletes, the College of Southern Idaho gave its highest honor to softball star Megan Zimmerman and rodeo cowboy Aaron Skinner.

The two were recipients of the CSI President’s Golden Eagle Athlete Award, given annually to one male and one female sophomore athlete.

Saying that Zimmerman “defines a student-athlete,” CSI president Jerry Beck honored the sophomore catcher and shortstop from Lehi, Utah, at Wednesday night’s 2008-09 CSI Award Banquet.

Zimmerman carries a 3.5 GPA as an NJCAA academic All-American and has starred on the diamond where she leads the nation in home runs with 23 this season.

The Utah Valley University signee has a .438 batting average with 80 RBIs, leads the Scenic West Athletic Conference in multiple categories and owns six program records.

Skinner is also a national leader, sitting first in the men’s all-around standings and calf roping rankings. He claimed the all-around title for the Rocky Mountain Region.

Skinner went to school at Idaho State and then began working as a welder. He lost both of his parents to death in a short span and returned to school at CSI to seek a career as a high school agriculture teacher.

“He represents the essence of what community college can do for someone,” said Beck, who added that Skinner has “risen above the odds” in achieving greatness at CSI.

Twin Falls softball splits with Highland

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

A doubleheader sweep at the hands of Skyline cost the Twin Falls softball team any chance of finishing as the top seed for the Region Four-Five-Six Tournament. After splitting a pair of 6-4 decisions at home with Highland on Wednesday, No. 2 is out the window as well.

The Bruins started fast and held off to beat the visiting Rams in the first game, scoring five in the first inning, but Highland found a way to rally and take the second one to move to 5-3 in the league and sew up the second seed for the region tournament.

Karly Hudelson and Kim

Dolecheck led off the home half of Game 1’s first inning with back-to-back singles followed by a 2-run double to center field off the bat of Kelsie Bryant. After Highland pitcher Steeli Norton hit catcher Kalli McBride, both runners were advanced on a sac bunt by pitcher Katelyn Fjeld. Darian Cantu plated Bryant and McBride on a single up the middle and scored on a throwing error by the Highland infield.

“I was seeing the ball really well,” said Bryant, who added a double in the fifth inning. “I could see her pitches in her delivery.”

After giving up four hits in the first inning, Norton settled down and scattered five hits for the remainder of the game in taking the loss. The Rams left seven runners on base but Highland coach Tisha Colvin wasn’t as disappointed with that stat as she was with the Bruins’ five runs in the opening inning.

“In the first inning, (Norton) just wasn’t hitting her spots,” said Colvin. “We had our chances. We got the leadoff runners on base and had the opportunities to score. But I was pleased overall with our defense and how we kept plugging away.”

The Rams (19-5, 5-3 Region Four-Five-Six) kept plugging away, indeed, rallying from a 3-0 deficit in Game 2 by scoring three times in the fourth inning, twice in the fifth and once in the seventh. Twin Falls had 15 hits in the nightcap, but couldn’t find a way to plate runners in the big situation.

Twin Falls (16-9, 3-4) hosts Burley today for Senior Day.

Could it happen here? Swine flu outbreak forces Texas high school officials to halt spring sports seasons

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas officials on Wednesday postponed all public high school athletic and academic competitions until May 11 because of the swine flu outbreak.

The move suspends the baseball and softball seasons and eliminates the regional track championships that were to start Friday, said Charles Breithaupt, executive director of the University Interscholastic League. He said league officials acted on the recommendation of public health officials.

“The health and safety of our student activity participants is of the utmost importance,” Breithaupt said. “Taking every possible precaution to prevent the further spreading of this disease is an important contribution to the welfare of our great state, and altering the schedule of our events is a way to keep our participants safe.”

With Magic Valley area high schools set to take part in district and state tournaments in the coming days and weeks, the question is, could the same thing happen in Idaho?

“It is a possibility,” said Valley High School principal Rod Malone, president of the District IV board of control. “Right now I know that it’s a real hot topic among the schools. But we’re not anywhere close to a panic stage right now where we’re looking at having it interfere with our activities.”

John Billetz, executive director of the Idaho High School Activities Association echoed that sentiment. “We have no plans to cancel anything,” he said.

That would only change, Billetz said, if there were confirmed cases in Idaho or its bordering states and public health officials recommended canceling or postponing events.

“The healthy and safety of our students and our spectators is No. 1 with us,” said Billetz. “That would overrule any state championship or anything like that. ... There’s no life worth any state championship.”

School officials in Texas say 53,000 students are out of school due to concern over the virus, and dozens of schools were closed to be sanitized.

The state golf and tennis championships are scheduled to begin May 11. The state track meet, one of the largest high school track and field competitions in the country, has been extended from its normal two days to three and is scheduled for May 14-16.

All UIL academic competitions, including a state meet that was to begin May 7, were also postponed and will be rescheduled later. If something similar happened in Idaho, “it would sure upset everything,” according to Malone.

With 16 confirmed cases of swine flu in Texas, Gov. Rick Perry announced a disaster declaration Wednesday for the entire state. The declaration will allow officials to begin emergency protective measures and seek reimbursement from the federal government.

White Sox rally past Mariners

CHICAGO — Slumping Carlos Quentin and Jermaine Dye hit consecutive home runs in the seventh inning, leading the Chicago White Sox to a 6-3 win over the Seattle Mariners on Wednesday.

A.J. Pierzynski also homered as the White Sox rallied from a 3-1 deficit and avoided what would have been their first losing April since 2001.

Matt Thornton (1-1) pitched a one-hit seventh in relief of Gavin Floyd. Scott Linebrink followed and Bobby Jenks pitched a 1-2-3 ninth for his fifth save in five chances.

Adrian Beltre had four hits and Ken Griffey Jr. hit a two-run double for Seattle, which will lead the AL West at the end of a month for the first time since July 2003.

YANKEES 8, TIGERS 6

DETROIT — Nick Swisher hit two homers and Joba Chamberlain gave up a run in seven innings, leading New York. The Yankees won two straight in Detroit by a combined score of 19-6 after losing the series opener and three in a row at Boston for a season-high four-game skid.

RED SOX 6, INDIANS 5, 10 INNINGS

CLEVELAND — Jonathan Van Every hit his first major league home run in the 10th inning to cap Boston's comeback win.

Van Every, who played in the Indians' minor league system from 2000-07, hit a 1-1 pitch from Jensen Lewis (2-3) to center with two outs. Van Every got his first big league hit this season, an RBI single, during Boston's three-run rally in the eighth.

TWINS 8, RAYS 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Nick Blackburn breezed through seven innings, and Minnesota roughed up Scott Kazmir from the start.

Blackburn (2-1) gave up two runs and eight hits and Justin Morneau had three hits, a walk and an RBI for the Twins, who took two of three from the defending AL champions.

ANGELS 3, ORIOLES 2

BALTIMORE — Torii Hunter and Kendry Morales hit consecutive homers off Koji Uehara in the seventh inning and Shane Loux earned his first win since 2003 as Los Angeles swept the two-game series.

ROYALS 11, BLUE JAYS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Zack Greinke gave up an earned run for the first time in 43 innings, but Billy Butler backed him up with two homers and Kansas City used a 15-hit barrage to rout Toronto.

National League

REDS 3, ASTROS 0

CINCINNATI — Edinson Volquez ended the longest current streak of domination in the majors by allowing only one hit through eight innings. The Astros had won their last 11 games at Great American Ball Park since late in the 2007 season, the best such streak in franchise history. They had won 16 of 17 in Cincinnati over the last three years.

NATIONALS 4, PHILLIES 1

PHILADELPHIA — Scott Olsen pitched into the sixth inning and Washington's beleaguered bullpen held on to snap Philadelphia's five-game winning streak.

CARDINALS 5, BRAVES 3

ATLANTA — Adam Wainwright overcame five walks and drove in a run during a four-run fifth inning for St. Louis.

The Cardinals won two of three in the series against the Braves, who have scored three runs or fewer in 11 of 15 games after scoring at least four runs in each of their first six games.

BREWERS 1, PIRATES 0

MILWAUKEE — Yovani Gallardo struck out a career-high 11 and homered in the seventh inning as Milwaukee got its 15th straight win over the Pirates.

MARLINS 4, METS 3

NEW YORK — Cody Ross hit a two-run single off J.J. Putz in the eighth inning, Jorge Cantu cracked his third homer in two games and the Florida Marlins rallied to beat the New York Mets.

ROCKIES 7, PADRES 5

DENVER — Aaron Cook pitched seven strong innings for his first win of the season and Todd Helton and Chris Iannetta each drove in three runs as the Colorado Rockies beat the San Diego Padres.

DIAMONDBACKS 10, CUBS 0

PHOENIX — Doug Davis allowed two hits over seven innings while Chad Tracy and Justin Upton each drove in three runs in the Arizona Diamondbacks' rout of the Chicago Cubs.

Argyle's heroics help boost Jerome softball to sweep

Final-inning heroics from Colby Argyle gave the Jerome softball team a pair of victories Wednesday to close out the regular season at home. The Tigers defeated Century 2-1 and 10-8.

Tied 1-1 with two out in the bottom of the seventh of the opener, Megan Traugber singled to reach base, and T.J. Surrage walked to put runners on. An RBI single from Colby Argyle put the game away. In Game 2, the Tigers were down 8-7 when Argyle belted a three-run walk-off homer for the win.

"The seniors played all of the first game and a few of the second, and it was nice to win two and get them some rest as well," Jerome head coach Adam Reynolds said.

Surprise! Little movement for Region 18 teams in softball poll

Times-News

If the No. 1 spot didn't change so frequently, it would be hard for Region 18 teams to tell one week from the next in the NJCAA Division I softball poll. The College of Southern Idaho remained at No. 10, while Salt Lake Community College spent its sixth straight week at No. 5 in the latest rankings, released Wednesday. The Golden Eagles came in 10th for the second week in a row, following a three-week span at No. 11. North Idaho College received votes but did not crack the top 20. The new No. 1 is Yavapai College. It's not the first time Yavapai has taken the top spot, however this is the fifth straight week a new No. 1 has been crowned. The Golden Eagles finish the Scenic West Athletic Conference season this weekend with a pair of doubleheaders at the College of Southern Nevada. The Region 18 Tournament begins next Thursday in Salt Lake City.

DECLO SWEEPS BUHL JV

Rallies in the late innings led to the Declo softball squad's doubleheader sweep of the Buhl junior varsity Wednesday. The Hornets won 8-5 and 8-7 on the road.

Declo fell behind in each contest only to score four runs in the top of the seventh in the opener, and in Game 2 notched seven hits for five runs.

Brinlee Breshears hit 3-for-4 with two doubles in Game 1 for Declo, while Catherine Blakeslee and Dallis Pickup also batted 3-for-4 in Game 2. Sarah Silcock belted a two-run

"The girls came out kind of flat but picked up the intensity when they needed to and got some clutch hits," Declo coach Kari Osterhout said.

WOOD RIVER SWEEPS POCATELLO

On senior day, the Wood River softball team put together two of its best games of the year, sweeping visiting Pocatello 5-0 and 7-1.

Sam Engel tossed a two-hit shutout in Game 1, striking out 13, and then allowed just one run in the nightcap while fanning a whopping 16.

"It was a great win for the seniors," said Wood River coach Dale Martin. "Especially coming against Pocatello, which is one of the top teams in the state."

Johnson scores 25 in Hawks' 106-91 win

ATLANTA (AP) — Dwyane Wade banged his head on the court. Al Horford hobbled to the locker room. Jamaal Magloire doled out a shove, and Josh Smith pushed back.

On a night of hard fouls, plenty of banging and staredowns galore, the Atlanta Hawks moved closer to reaching the second round of the NBA playoffs for the first time in a decade, beating Miami 106-91 Wednesday to take a 3-2 lead in the series.

They can only hope they've got enough players left to finish off Wade and the Heat.

Joe Johnson had his best game of the postseason with 25 points, and the Hawks took control during a couldn't-miss second quarter that pushed them to a 63-40 halftime lead. Flip Murray added 23 points off the bench.

Wade had 29 points but didn't get going until the game was already decided.

While the outcome was never really in question, there was plenty of extracurricular activity to spice up the fifth straight game decided by a double-figure margin.

Early on, Wade collided with Smith and banged the back of his head on the floor, leaving him sprawled out for several minutes. He finally staggered to the locker room for treatment, holding a towel to his head. Not long after the NBA's leading scorer returned, Horford was fouled hard by James Jones and fell into Wade on the way down, landing awkwardly on his right foot.

Horford managed to shoot two free throws, but it quickly became apparent he couldn't go on. The Hawks' second-year center was helped to the locker room, his arms draped around two trainers, and didn't return. Instead, he began treatment for what was described as a moderate ankle sprain.

After all, Game 6 is Friday night in Miami.

missing starting forward Marvin Williams, who sat out his third straight game with a sprained right wrist. When Mike Bibby picked up his fourth foul, Atlanta played much of the third quarter with only two regular starters on the court. Solomon Jones and Mario Wade was already bothered by back spasms that contributed to a dismal 9-of-26 shooting performance in Game 4, which the Hawks won 81-71 to reclaim home-court advantage.

Golden Eagle athletic director Joel Bate also gave out the inaugural "Rudy" award, which went to baseball sophomore Cameron Cushing of Caldwell.

"This award is given to the kind of people we make movies about," said Bate, such as those who through work ethic and determination overcome obstacles to become a college athlete and make a team better.

Cushing fits that bill, having blasted four home runs on the season, including a grand slam against Eastern Utah.

The sophomores from each CSI squad — dance and cheer, men's basketball, women's basketball, volleyball, rodeo, softball, and baseball — were recognized at the banquet. Women's basketball head coach Randy Rogers announced that three of his sophomores have verbally committed to four-year programs, with Soana Lucet and Maddy Plunkett both headed to Arizona and LaCale Pringle-Buchanan joining Utah State.

All three are expected to sign National Letters of the Intent in the next few days.

with a three-game series at home with Wooster starting today.

"Twin Falls is a great team, and any time you can play a team like this and see how the program is built, that's going to be a good learning experience for our guys," Gilligan said. "Hopefully we can come back in the future and be more competitive ... I hoped we would show a little better than we did today."

Twin Falls threatened to run away with Game 1 early, but baserunners seemed unsure of what to do and ran into some outs.

At the plate, however, the Bruins had no such misfortune, and Brodie Hall busted it wide open when he ripped a middle-in fastball over the left field wall for his first-ever grand slam in the bottom of the third. Hall also doubled and scored in the fifth.

That carried over through the rest of the first game and all through the nightcap as the Bruins never let control of the doubleheader slip away.

"The important thing (about the grand slam) was that it gave us the momentum. Whether it's a home run or a stolen base, that's what we care about," said Hall, who recently signed a letter of intent to play baseball at Treasure Valley Community College next season.

"Of course it doesn't get much better than that, because you get runs on the board and you have the momentum at the same time."

That momentum, the Bruins hope, will carry straight into the regional tournament, which they kick off on Tuesday by hosting the yet to be determined No. 5 seed for a direct berth in the championship game.

Friesan Fire was the fourth choice at 5-1, while the other 16 entries carried double-digit odds.

Friesan Fire will leave from the No. 6 hole.

Larry Jones, the colt's trainer, saddled filly Eight Belles to a second-place finish last year behind Big Brown. She broke both ankles past the first turn and had to be euthanized on the track.

"This horse is going to have a whole lot of the same style as Eight Belles," Jones said. "She had a wonderful trip in there, hopefully we can repeat that. Hopefully we'll be in a running position and be able to go turning for home."

This year's draw returned to Churchill Downs after being conducted in front of a huge crowd in downtown Louisville in recent years and shown on ESPN.

The draw began with a traditional "pill pull" where the horses' entry blanks were drawn simultaneously with a numbered pill to determine what order the horses' connections picked their position in the starting gate.

After a five-minute break to strategize, the actual posts were selected by representatives of each of the 20 starters.

Track can't run from doping problem, retests show

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

With a gold medalist in one its top events busted for doping at the Beijing Games, the troubled sport of track and field is once again at the center of an Olympic drug scandal.

Bahrain's Rashid Ramzi, the 1500-meter champion and his country's first gold medalist in track, was among three track athletes — and a half-dozen Olympians — snagged in the latest game of cat-and-mouse between cheaters and those who try to nail them.

The twist in the nabbing of Ramzi and the rest was their drug of choice. It's called CERA, a new form of EPO, which increases endurance by stimulating production of red blood cells.

AP photo

Bahrain's Rashid Ramzi, right, reacts after winning the gold Aug. 19, 2008, in the men's 1500-meter in Beijing. The Bahrain Olympic Committee said Wednesday that Ramzi tested positive for doping at the Beijing Games and may be stripped of his gold medal.

Olympic drug testers recently came up with a way to detect CERA. They called for retesting of 948 samples taken from the Beijing Olympics; many of those retests were looking for CERA.

Six came back positive. One was from weightlifting, two from cycling — including a silver medalist — and three from track.

Of the four medals that have already been stripped for doping violations from Beijing, three were from track and field. Ramzi's would make it four. Granted, there are more athletes and more tests in track than other sports. Still, this is hardly the news that the sport hopes to generate after decades of continually trying to reinvent itself as clean.

"Honestly, track and field didn't need another blow like this," said Dee Dee

Olympic champion Bolt in crash in Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Olympic champion sprinter Usain Bolt was in a car crash Wednesday in Jamaica, but police and his manager said he was not seriously injured.

Bolt was apparently speeding on a rain-slicked highway when he lost control of the BMW M3 and it went off the road, police Sgt. David Sheriff told The Associated Press. Sheriff was the first officer to arrive at the scene in St. Catherine parish and found the car heavily damaged.

An official at Spanish Town Hospital confirmed Bolt appeared to have only scratches. The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because of privacy concerns, said Bolt was "very calm" and that doctors were examining him to make sure there were no other injuries. The official said Bolt would be required to provide a statement to police.

Trotter, a 2004 American gold medalist who runs the anti-doping Web site Test Me I'm Clean. "Our reputation is truly depleting and it doesn't help when fans who have long loved the sport begin to doubt what they see."

Though the 1,500-meter race isn't immensely popular in America, in international circles, it is considered right up there with the 100 meters as the most popular race. It's the metric mile, a distance the common man runs for recreation and a long-standing test of both speed and endurance at the elite level.

The fact that Bahrain got its first Olympic track gold in the event made it that much more special. Calls to Ramzi and his coach seeking comment were unanswered.

If Ramzi's positive test is upheld through the appeals process, the medal will go to Asbel Kipruto Kiprop of Kenya, one of Africa's more traditional running powerhouses.

"But that's one of the worst things about it, is that they'll send it to him in the mail," Trotter said.

"You want your time to shine. You can't get that back. You never take that victory lap, never enjoy that moment the way it was designed for the winner to enjoy it."

NHL PLAYOFFS

One rink for 3-ring circus of hockey stars

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Alex Ovechkin doesn't like Sidney Crosby. Neither does Alexander Semin, who calls Crosby an overrated product of the NHL's hype machine. Ovechkin disliked Evgeni Malkin, too, but now appears to like him again.

Oh, but there's much for the hockey world to like in this Penguins-Capitals matchup, beginning Saturday when the Eastern Conference semifinal series begins in Washington.

The main attraction is flashy enough — the NHL's three biggest names under one big top for up to two weeks — but the sideshows are intriguing and figure to be entertaining. With the NHL's last two MVPs and last three scoring champions in the same series, plus a noticeable edginess whenever the teams meet, there should be plenty of subplots and sound bites.

"There's more to stars meeting here, great hockey players meeting, there's great personalities, strong personalities, there's faces of the league that are clashing," Penguins coach Dan Bylsma said Wednesday. "That's great for the league, great for the postseason."

Clashing is an apt description.

In only four Penguins-Capitals meetings this season (Washington won three), an agitated Ovechkin — apparently motivated by an off-ice dispute involving an agent — lined up Malkin several times for hits. Later in the season, Ovechkin and Crosby went at it, exchanging pushes and yapping at each other Feb. 22 in Washington.

To the Capitals, Crosby is more than the face of the league, he's also the mouth of it — they accuse of him of talking too much and whining to the officials.

A Masters post-mortem at Quail Hollow

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A tip of the hat and handshakes for Masters champion Angel Cabrera.

A pat on the back for Chad Campbell.

And for Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson, reflections of a green jacket that got away from them.

Except for Kenny Perry, the leading characters from the Masters return to competition this week at the Quail Hollow Championship, their first time seeing their peers and the press since that memorable Sunday afternoon earlier this month at Augusta National.

Only one of them had reason to celebrate.

Cabrera scrambled for par from the trees at No. 18 in a playoff, then won on the second extra hole to defeat Perry and Campbell and capture his second major. Four days later, he was feted at what amounts to a club championship at his home club in Argentina.

"It was incredible to go back to my country and to be with my people, just was really a special, special feeling," Cabrera said through his Houston-based swing coach, Charlie Epps.

And it got even better when he arrived at Quail Hollow, the tree-lined course with a major championship atmosphere.

"It's very nice that my fellow professionals have congratulated me the way that they have," Cabrera said.

Woods still commanded all the attention Wednesday, partly because of his status as the No. 1 player and a 14-time major champion, and partly because of the company he kept. Woods played with Peyton Manning, the three-time MVP quarterback of the Indianapolis Colts, and both sides of the fairway were lined with spectators as they finished the round.

Despite not taking advantage of some easy scoring conditions at Augusta National, and now going a career-long four years without winning another green jacket, the time off gave Woods some perspective on the state of his game.

since his eight-month lay-off due to reconstructive knee surgery. He won at Bay Hill, and he has finished in the top 10 in all of his stroke-play events.

"I've had people remind me to look at it that way," he said with a smile. "I have a hard time looking at it that way. It's just the nature of how I am. You want to try and win every event you play in, and obviously, I haven't done that this year."

Imagine how Campbell

feels. He was in the middle of the 18th fairway in the play-off, a 7-iron in his hand, when he hung it out to the right and into a bunker and wound up missing a 5-foot par putt that knocked him out of the playoff.

Campbell enjoyed being away, but it was almost too much time.

"The longer I had off, the more I started thinking about things I should have done or could have done," he said. "It's nice to be back out here playing, and maybe put that tournament behind me a little bit."

THE CITY OF RUPERT DRINKING WATER REPORT

This is the City of Rupert's annual Consumer Confidence Report (CCR) on your drinking water system. The most recently required sampling results have been gathered to inform customers about their tap water. With this information, we hope you will learn more about your water and will help protect the water for future use.

Este informe contiene información muy importante sobre su agua beber. Tadjuzco/o halbe con alguieu que lo enteda bien. Sources of drinking water: both tap water and bottled water originate as "surface water" from rivers and lakes or as "ground water" from springs and wells. As water travels over the surface of land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material. Water picks up wastes from both human and animal activities. Surface water is usually filtered and disinfected to remove bacteria, viruses and protozoa. Ground water is usually filtered naturally.

Contaminants that may be present include: Microbial contaminants such as bacteria, viruses and protozoa are very small living creatures that may be natural and harmless, or harmful if originating from septic systems, agricultural livestock operations or wildlife. Inorganic contaminants, such as heavy metals, can be naturally-occurring or result from urban storm water runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges. Pesticides and herbicides may come from agriculture and residential use. Radioactive contaminants are naturally occurring.

Organic chemical contaminants are usually manmade (synthetic) and vaporize easily (volatile). Petroleum products and degreasers are examples of gas station and dry cleaner water transported by storm water and sewers. Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune systems disorders, some elderly and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Crypto spordium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791).

EPA ensures that tap water is safe to drink by writing regulations that limits both natural and man made contaminants. We follow both state and federal regulations. Interstate bottled water is regulated by the U.S Food and Drug Administration. Your drinking water comes from ground water from the Eastern Snake Plains Aquifer. We have three wells: Wells #1 and #2 are located downtown. Well # 6 is located on the west side of town.

Source Water Assessment: The state of Idaho has completed this assessment plan for our wells which includes a map of where the water comes from, possible sources of contamination, and a review of the susceptibility of the source for contamination. This plan is available for public review.

INFORMATION (Refer to sampling results table)  Alpha Radiation testing continues on a quarterly basis. We combine all three of our wells to provide a lower level of Alpha Radiation. WE HAD NO VIOLATIONS!

HEALTH TIPS
• Flush your faucet by running the water for about ten seconds or until cold before drinking.
• Avoid using hot water taps for cooking.

MONTHLY MEETINGS
• First and third Tuesday of every month, 7:00 pm at City Hall
If you have any questions or emergencies please call James Taylor at 208-436-9600 or 431-8046

City of Rupert's Drinking Water Report 2008 Sampling Results
We provide quality drinking water that meets all federal and state requirements. During recent years we have sampled for many different chemicals and have found very little contamination. Contamination is anything other than pure water. We sampled total coliform bacteria as an indicator of microorganisms (bacteria, viruses and other small creatures) that should not be present. The table below lists all the drinking water contaminants that we detected during the past calendar year or in our most recent tests as noted. Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling (208) 436-9600 or U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA's) Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791). EPA's website is www.epa.gov/safewater.

Terms and abbreviations
Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in the drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.
Action Level (AL): The Concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.
na: Not applicable nd: Not detectable at testing limit ppm: Parts per million or milligrams per liter ppb: Parts per billion or micrograms per liter pCo/L: Pico curies per liter (a measure of radiation)

REGULATED	MCLG	MCL	OUR WATER	SAMPLE DATE	VIOLATION	TYPICAL SOURCE OF CONTAMINANT
Alpha Radiation (pCi/L)	0	15	4.4*	3-31-2005	No	Naturally occurring

Total Trihalomethanes (TTHM) (ppb)	Na	60	0.6	8-28-2008	No	Disinfection byproduct

*Alpha Radiation: We combine all three of our wells to provide a lower level.
VIOLATION
Nitrate is required by the state to be tested annually. We tested for well #1 and well #6 with no contaminants detected. Well #2 was not being used and offline during this time so was not tested, however, the test was completed in March 2009.

ORDINANCE NO. 516

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF HEYBURN, IDAHO, VACATING A PORTION OF "20th" STREET; PROVIDING FOR SUSPENSION OF RULE FOR THREE SEPARATE READINGS AND DECLARING THIS ORDINANCE ADOPTED AFTER ONLY ONE READING; AND, PROVIDING FOR EFFECTIVE DATE.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Even brothers should keep careful accounts."
— Chinese proverb

In three years out of four, World Championship fields are restricted to qualifying teams, but in even-numbered non-leap years, such as 2002, each country can send as many participants as wish to compete.

Today's deal is from the 2002 teams event in Montreal, showing the Hackett brothers of England at work.

Against four hearts (reached after characteristic aggression from North), West started with the club 10. Declarer, Justin Hackett, ran this to his queen, East playing the eight to show a doubleton.

Now declarer played a spade to dummy, a heart to the king and ace, and a second spade. West went in with the ace and exited with what seemed to be a passive spade. Declarer won in dummy, discarding his certain diamond loser, crossed to hand with the diamond ace, and played the heart nine. West won and got off play with his only remaining exit card, the diamond queen. Hackett ruffed and played the heart queen and another heart. Now, with nothing but clubs left, West had to lead away from his king, and four hearts was made.

Do you see how declarer could have made the hand if West had exited with a diamond instead of a spade? Declarer takes the ace, crosses to the club ace to cash his spade winner, ruffs a diamond, then gets off play with his club loser. He ruffs the return, and exits with the heart nine, end-playing West to lead trumps into declarer's tenace at trick 12.

ANSWER: Your partner's call of one spade is constructive, but not forcing. With your extra heart length, a simple call of two hearts should suffice. To jump to three hearts, you would need an extra trick (say, the heart jack instead of the six). A spade raise would require a third trump.

Daughter's close call is dire warning to 'invincible' teens

DEAR ABBY: Prom and graduation season has arrived with all of the celebrating that goes along with it. So please print my letter for parents and teens to read — perhaps together.

My daughter was an honor student all through high school. We had a close relationship. I always made sure she knew she could come to me with any problem, whether it be her grades, alcohol or sex. On the issue of drinking and driving, I made her understand that wherever she was, I would gladly pick her up — no questions asked. I have heard that many parents make the same offer to their children.

I firmly believed that my daughter would call me if she needed to. However, she recently decided she could drive home after drinking what she considered to be "a safe amount of alcohol." Unfortunately, she struck a utility pole on a sharp turn and flipped her car over. By the grace of God, she and her friend escaped with minor injuries. But, as you know, many people don't survive such a horrific accident.

Abby, many parents say, "It won't happen to my child." Teens think they are invincible, but tragedy happens to people from all walks of life and all kinds of families. I feel blessed that both girls are still alive to appreciate their second lease on life, but it makes me sad to think about how many kids don't return home each night. Can you comment, Abby?

— GRATEFUL MOM IN CONNECTICUT
DEAR GRATEFUL MOM: Not a year goes by that we don't hear news reports about drinking-and-driving tragedies — and they are not limited to teens. Because of that, I am pleased to print your letter.

What happened to your daughter illustrates that people who have been drinking are not always aware to what extent it has impaired their judgment. And it's not limited to drinking and driving. People under the influence have been known to make more than one kind of life-changing miscalculation because they are tipsy.

Your daughter and her friend were indeed lucky. Not only could one or both of them have been killed, either of them could have suffered a lifelong injury from that escapade.

Parents: Please discuss this letter with your teen today!

IF APRIL 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Sail through the year ahead as though you are traveling on calm waters. You might already be in tiptop physical condition, but could easily begin an exercise regimen this summer that keeps you in peak shape. Since you work hard and deserve the best, don't be surprised if in August you receive a beneficial opportunity as a reward for your executive abilities. Life may offer you a chance to make permanent improvements to your health and happiness this fall. Have faith that everything you wish for — and deserve — will be handed to you on a silver platter by next spring.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A passion for perfection may push you to perform at the peak of excellence. You are in step with the major trends, but someone might be more than a wee bit jealous of your admirable accomplishments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't come unglued if emotions enter the picture. You might notice that possessiveness or lust emerges during what should be rational analysis. Draw people together to achieve long-term goals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A sense of concern might dampen the fun and games. The question on your mind is whether a certain relationship deserves unconditional commitment or could have unacceptable strings attached.

HOROSCOPE

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good manners have their place. Don't hesitate to give someone a hug if you sincerely think a hug is needed. You may be overly concerned with how things look rather than how you make others feel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Read the fine print. It is easy to overlook terms and conditions that are designed to confuse and cost you money. It is probably better to keep your credit cards in your wallet than to risk making an error.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Inquiring minds want to know. You've become accustomed to a system that teaches you to recite answers, not to devise questions. It is a good time to question everyone and everything.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good relationships withstand the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune. Jealousy or possessiveness can rip open a scab that discretion built on top of long-

DEAR ABBY: I am worried about our little ones who hear bad language on a daily basis. How is that going to go over when they reach school age?

I'll give you an example. My 3-year-old great-grandson called his mother a "dork." When I commented that at child care, she said, "No, he heard it from me." I was appalled.

Then there was the adorable, precocious 2-year-old who said, "Oh, #@*%!" when I dropped something. I looked at her grandmother, who informed me that the little girl hears it from her other grandma all the time.

How can the parents of these precious little children allow this to happen? How do you think it will go over when they call their teacher a "dork" or use expletives in the classroom and on the playground?

— RED-FACED GRAMMA

McHENRY, ILL.

DEAR GRAMMA: For better or worse, children model their behavior on what they hear at home. You can't blame children for not knowing what they haven't been taught. But I can tell you this, no teachers worth their salt will allow a student to be disrespectful in the classroom and let it go. And the person who will suffer is the student.

running wounds. Bad relationships may get worse.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stay in the frying pan. You won't land in the fire if you don't initiate key changes. If you appear friendly and outgoing, others may drop a valuable idea in your lap or help you achieve key objectives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cynicism is called for if your heart or wallet is at stake. Consider carefully who and what you can trust in order to maintain your peace of mind. Don't sign contracts or agreements.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The tides may turn quickly where peace and harmony are concerned. A family member may push all your buttons and create a rift. Enjoy unique experiences, but don't put your money on the line.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use common sense. Remain aloof and professional in social situations when the boss is watching, but let your hair down with close friends after business hours. Steer clear of investments or gambling.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The past might lay out a pattern for the future. It is in your best interests to take care of existing obligations and avoid taking on new ones. Be diligent about meeting deadlines and fulfilling promises.

Today is Thursday, April 30, the 120th day of 2009. There are 245 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

One hundred and fifty years ago, on April 30, 1859, the Charles Dickens novel "A Tale of Two Cities" was first published in serial form in the premiere issue of All the Year Round, a literary magazine owned by Dickens. (The novel was presented in 31 weekly installments.)

On this date:
In 1789, George Washington took office in New York as the first president of the United States.

In 1803, the United States purchased the Louisiana Territory from France for 60 million francs, the equivalent of about $15 million.

In 1812, Louisiana became the 18th state of the Union.

In 1904, the Louisiana Purchase Exposition opened in St. Louis.

In 1909, Juliana, queen of the Netherlands from 1948 to 1980, was born in The Hague.

In 1939, the New York World's Fair officially opened with a ceremony that included an address by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In 1945, as Russian troops

TODAY IN HISTORY

approached his Berlin bunker, Adolf Hitler committed suicide along with his wife of one day, Eva Braun.

In 1948, the Charter of the Organization of American States was signed in Bogota, Colombia.

In 1970, President Richard M. Nixon announced the U.S. was sending troops into Cambodia, an action that sparked widespread protest.

In 1973, Nixon announced the resignations of top aides H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, along with Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst and White House counsel John Dean.

Ten years ago: A bomb exploded at a gay pub in London, killing three people and injuring more than 70. (David Copeland, a white supremacist, was later convicted of murder for a series of bombings in London and sentenced to six life sentences.) The Rev. Jesse Jackson met with each of the three U.S. soldiers being held prisoner by Yugoslavia.

Five years ago: Arabs expressed outrage at graphic photographs of naked Iraqi prisoners being humiliated by U.S. military police; President George W. Bush condemned the mistreatment of prisoners, saying "that's not the way we do things in America." On ABC's "Nightline," Ted Koppel read aloud the names of 721 U.S. servicemen and women killed in the Iraq war (the Sinclair Broadcast Group refused to air the program on seven ABC stations). Michael Jackson pleaded not-guilty in Santa Maria, Calif., to a grand jury indictment that expanded the child molestation case against him. (Jackson was acquitted at trial.) Former NBA star Jayson Williams was acquitted of aggravated manslaughter in the shotgun slaying of a limousine driver at his New Jersey mansion, but found guilty of trying to cover up the shooting. (Williams faces retrial on a reckless manslaughter count.)

One year ago: The Federal Reserve cut interest rates for a seventh straight time, reducing the federal funds rate a quarter-point to 2 percent. An avalanche in Italy's northwestern Alps killed five French ski-mountaineers.
