Busy summer ahead

Construction on all three phases of St. Luke's expansion begins in June in Twin Falls

As construction officials reach the midway point in building a new St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, officials are also keeping their eyes on the future that lies ahead.

Work on the $220 million, 700,000 square-foot facility marches on almost two years after the project broke ground in May 2007. But construction officials say progress on the 177-bed facility, which includes work across a 40-acre area, is on schedule to open in summer 2011.

"We hope to make that work," said Dwight

Matt Knighten, right, of Boise Steel Erectors Inc., works on the diagnostic/treatment section of the new hospital Thursday.

Stoddard, a St. Luke's construction superintendent. "We had some hard winters with the wind and weather?" Jody Tremblay, director of community relations for St. Luke's, confirmed the hospital is expected to open in June of 2011. This summer will mark the busiest period of the four-year construction project, as work ensues on all three phases of the hospital construction. The phases are designed upon three separate buildings — a patient tower, diagnostic-treatment building and medical office building.

Exterior work is largely done on the first two buildings, and work on the medical office building should go into full swing within two months, according to Ken Story, also a construction superintendent for St. Luke's.

The project's work is currently being done by an

T.F.: Residents should now have canal water

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Twin Falls city residents who rely on canal water to run their pressurized-irrigation systems should finally have it, despite a slight delay in charging the system, city officials said Thursday.

In a press release issued April 21, the city announced that the 3,600 water users hooked up to the pressurized systems should have their water by last Saturday, as should other city users who rely on the canals. But the date came and went with no water available, prompting some disgruntled calls to the city and the Twin Falls Canal Co.

Those users should have their water now, city officials said. The delay, said Gretchen Scott, assistant to the city manager, was caused by a couple of factors, including the fact that the city brought some new pressurized-irrigation stations online. For example, said City Engineer Jackie Fields, one new station serving only one house leaked and had to be repaired.

Officials also departed for the first time from their habit of using potable drinking water to charge the

Sund pleads guilty to prescription fraud, conspiracy

Former T.F. detective implicated in testimony

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

A nurse practitioner admitted in court Thursday that she and a former Twin Falls police detective split a painkiller that she had prescribed for him.

Jan Sund of Twin Falls pleaded guilty to two counts of conspiracy to commit prescription fraud and two counts of prescription fraud in 5th District Court in Twin Falls. Each count carries a maximum of four years in prison and a fine of up to $30,000. The guilty pronouncements were part of a plea agreement against the 55-year-old woman scheduled for a June trial on 16 counts of prescription fraud and conspiracy to commit prescription fraud charges.

What was supposed to be a discussion of the case on Thursday turned into a change of plea hearing.

When Judge Randy Stoker asked Sund what she had done to be guilty of one conspiracy charge, she replied. "I wrote a prescription for hydrocodone and Curtis (Gambrel) filled it and split it with me."

Gambrel was still working as a Twin Falls police detective at the time of Sund's actions.

The longtime officer was named in four of the original 16 charges allegedly committed between 2006 and 2007. He resigned from the force in April 2007.

Sund also told the judge that she had divided hydrocodone with another man to whom she had written a prescription.

Related to the prescription fraud charges, Sund admitted to writing prescriptions for an opiate, oxycodone, to

Strange days: With House adjourned, Senate left to carry on

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — At 10 a.m. Thursday, senators settled in for the 109th day of the 2009 Legislature. The doors were closed, attendance was taken and they began to deliberate on nine bills.

But across the hall, an empty House of Representatives sat quiet, aside from a few members pattering on computers. Security guards hardly lifted an eye when citizens approached the chamber floor, normally a prohibited practice.

The House's Wednesday adjournment left the Legislature in the lurch, though most House members expect to return Monday to resolve the impasse over transportation funding with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

"A strange, 'Twilight Zone' feeling," is how House Assistant Minority Leader James Ruchti of Pocatello described sitting at his desk Thursday. "It doesn't feel like it's done at all."

BOISE — A cattle feedlot manager from Southern Idaho has been convicted of four counts of violating federal drinking water laws for intentionally discharging fluids into an aquifer.

A federal jury also convicted Cory Ledeal King on Thursday of one count of lying to an Idaho agriculture department inspector who was investigating the 16,000-acre Double C Farms near Burley more than three years ago.

King was convicted in a trial that lasted nearly three days in U.S. District Court in Pocatello. Sentencing is scheduled for Aug. 24 and King faces up to 14 years in prison.

Federal prosecutors and a 2008 grand jury indictment accused King of knowingly diverting fluids into irrigation wells connected to the aquifer.

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

This first Friday in May is alive with music.

• Ethan Tucker and the Grassroots All-stars perform from 6 to 9 p.m. at Rudy's - A Cook's Paradise, 147 Main Ave. W., Twin Falls. There will be wine and beer by the glass, food sampling and chef Joe Szerwo's cooking demonstrations. No cover to listen to the music.

• A performance of Felix Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah" with full orchestra, chorus and soloists highlights the Pops Concert 2009 at 7:30 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Center auditorium, 315 Falls Ave. W., Twin Falls. And you can see an exhibit of art from Magic Valley elementary students in the foyer. Tickets are $8 for adults, $7 for senior citizens and $5 for students.

• The Bar J Wranglers perform at the final event of the Mini-Cassia Community Concert season at 7:30 p.m. at the King Fine Arts Center, 2100 Park Ave., Burley. Admission is by season membership: $40 for adults, $20 for students and $110 for families. Buy next season's membership and attend the Bar J Wranglers for free. Or individual tickets are $25.

average count of 190 workers at the site daily. "That will probably double within two months," Story said. "I probably have 50 working on the diagnostic and treatment center, but when we begin the interior of the building, that will jump dramatically."

The facility will incorporate geologic features that came by blasting rock around the structure, as well as aesthetic designs of natural light in the patient tower and diagnostic-treatment center. A total of 14 elevators are to be used in the facility, with an expansive basement with tunnels and corridors allowing shipments and supplies to be brought in away from patients.

"The nice thing about this hospital is the lights in the rooms and the private rooms themselves," Stoddard said.

"This will be a state of the art hospital. Every innovation will be included."

Planners also expect growth in Twin Falls and the surrounding area to be easily accommodated at the hospital in future years. Design plans include ample area for another patient tower, and a larger emergency room facility in the diagnostic-treatment center, should the need arise.

Story added that the hospital has been aware of how to include local construction firms in the contracting phases.

"We are somewhere in the $70 million range that we have awarded out in contracts," Story said. "And approximately $20 (million) to $30 million of that went locally. We've tried to give out whatever we could to local work."

Canal

system. The change, Scott said, was meant as a water-conservation measure.

"It was a little bit of a learning year for us," Scott said, noting that only a few days late still wasn't bad.

The delay might have been fine, one city resident said, if the city had actually informed people of it.

City resident Jerry Potts, 72, said he has arthritis problems and relies on his irrigation system to take care of his yard - including a number of flowers planted last week by his visiting daughter.

Potts said earlier in the week he tried calling the city to ask about the water, but was told by someone there - he wasn't sure who - that its availability depended on the canal company. On Thursday, he said he finally had his water and Scott's explanation about the delay.

Like any other customer, the city follows a process to receive its water from the canal company. After the canals fill each spring, the city has to request a delivery through its headgates. The company then fills the city's ponds and it's up to the city from there to send water out through its system.

Water was available to the city last week had officials requested it, said Jay Barlogi, the canal company's field supervisor. The company provided water to most, if not all, of the city's pump stations by Tuesday, he said, one day before the city's official request came in.

City officials interviewed before Scott weren't entirely sure of the reason for the delay. Julie Pence, the city's public information coordinator, said the city didn't want to run the risk last week of issuing another release with another incorrect start date.

"We didn't want to say anything that we weren't sure about," Pence said.

Potts said he suggested the city provide a few more updates in future years.

"Why are you so afraid for the people to know what's going on?" he said he asked.

Health districts, state stockpile swine flu medicine

Mexican health official optimistic the worst has passed

As the H1N1 swine influenza virus continues to spread, Idaho health officials are following a series of steps they hope will help quickly address any cases in the state.

Though the virus has yet to be confirmed in Idaho, the South Central Public Health District is still making preparations. District Director Rene LeBlanc said part of a federal stockpile of the antiviral drugs Tamiflu and Relenza should arrive at his door this morning, to be eventually doled out in case of infection.

The drugs aren't being used as a preventive measure because the supply just isn't large enough, LeBlanc said. Certain triggers will allow them to be passed out to health-care providers and pharmacies.

So far, state health officials have tested 39 Idahoans for the virus. The state's first probable case surfaced in Kootenai County on Thursday, according to an Idaho Department of Health and Welfare release.

According to the release, the patient is a woman in her 60s who recently traveled to Texas.

"We are not surprised to find a probable case of swine flu in our state, and even though it is not confirmed we want to exercise caution and keep people informed," State Epidemiologist Christine Hahn said in the release.

The health district is working with its peers across the state and the Health and Welfare to stay abreast of the situation. LeBlanc sits in on daily conference calls with them, he said, and also regularly checks the Web site of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for any updated guidance on the virus. He shares new information with health providers and others, he said.

"As we know something, they know something," LeBlanc said.

The district director is also working to get information for area schools and plans to brief county commissioners in Cassia, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties on Monday when he visits for the district's annual budget talks.

Smoothing the way, the district and the state both have pandemic plans to follow, developed over the past couple of years. The district's plan - not publicly available, LeBlanc said, because it has sensitive information about hospitals and other facilities - provides a series of gradual responses to a possible pandemic.

Already, LeBlanc said, the district has an incident command system running and a hotline and phone bank standing by, should calls about the virus sharply increase.

"We are prepared to expand," LeBlanc said.

Regionally, Oregon announced its first probable swine-flu case on Thursday, one day after Nevada reported its first case. Washington state may have six cases, one of which prompted officials to close a Seattle-area school for a week. Internationally, the World Health Organization's Web site tallied 257 cases of the disease in 11 countries on Thursday. Besides Mexico and the U.S., the bug has shown up in Canada, Spain, Israel, New Zealand and the United Kingdom, among others.

There is definitely a chance the flu strain will make it to Idaho. LeBlanc noted, for example, that seasonal agricultural workers usually make their way to Idaho this time of year for jobs, many coming from states with swine-flu cases: California, Arizona, Nevada and Texas. The district, he said, is working with providers to identify and address any flu infections those workers may carry with them.

LeBlanc's advice to avoid spreading the bug isn't any different than usual: cover your sneezes, wash your hands and don't pass the flu around on the job.

"If you're sick, stay at home," he said. "Don't go to work."

Also upon questioning by the judge, Sund said she had been using hydrocodone or opiates for at least 22 months.

"There's nothing in my system now," she said.

Earlier in the hearing, she said that she was using an antidepressant.

Robie K. Probasco was once in charge of the books at Hamilton Manufacturing Inc. Now he faces multiple criminal charges for allegedly stealing more than $300,000 from the Twin Falls company.

Probasco, 47, of Twin Falls, was arraigned Thursday on two counts of grand theft, six counts of forgery, one charge of computer crime and one of money laundering.

He had been employed by the company, which produces cellulose insulation and hydrosediment products, between June 2004 and December 2007 and his duties included controller and bookkeeper. He is accused of forging several company checks and altering business records, including the company's bank statements, resulting in the theft of more than $300,000, according to the criminal complaint. Ninety-eight checks were paid to Probasco without consent of the company.

Magistrate Judge Roger Harris set bail at $10,000 and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 8. The court also asked the defendant to surrender his passport immediately.

Meanwhile in a civil case, Probasco and his wife, Kelly Probasco, are being sued for more than $306,000 by Hamilton Manufacturing Inc.

Police arrest high school student for writing note that threatened shooting

Times-News

HAILEY — The Hailey Police Department arrested on Wednesday afternoon a 15-year-old boy suspected of writing last week the note that threatened a shooting at Wood River High School in Hailey.

The boy, who is not being identified because he is a juvenile, is a student at the school.

Police have recommended charging him with a misdemeanor, threatening violence on school grounds, and he was expected to be arraigned Thursday.

"We are confident we have arrested the right person who wrote this note and there's no longer a threat from that note," said Hailey Police Chief Jeff Gunter.

The juvenile was arrested as a result of an investigation that included handwriting experts from Canyon County law enforcement and video camera footage from inside the school.

Gunter said that despite the arrest, the police will continue to maintain a daily presence at the school until the end of the school year. "We are in great shape at the high school as far as security right now," he said.

Water board approves $500,000 pipeline loan, next phase of state aquifer plan

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Two Magic Valley groundwater districts secured $500,000 in loans Thursday for a project intended to keep the state from shutting their wells off.

At a special meeting in Boise, the Idaho Water Resource Board approved a loan request from the North Snake and Magic Valley groundwater districts to pay for a pipeline that would shuttle groundwater to a trout farm owned by Clear Springs Foods of Buhl. The project, approved as a replacement water plan for this year only, averted the need for hundreds of wells across the valley to be curtailed last month.

The loans won't cover the entire project, but should pay for "a good share" of it, said Lynn Carlquist, chairman of the North Snake district. Most of the engineering work for the project is done, and most easements acquired, he said, meaning construction could start soon — and it needs to, to meet a June 1 deadline imposed by Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Dave Tuthill.

There's still a chance, however, that the loan won't be needed, said IDWR Administrator Hal Anderson. The districts have continued negotiations started earlier this year with Clear Springs to find a solution acceptable to both parties, he said, something the water board discussed before granting the loan request. The fish company requires a specific temperature and quality of water for its farm and research work, and has concerns over many parts of the pipeline plan.

"If these negotiations are successful, and who knows ... they might not need to put in the project this year," Anderson said.

Also Thursday, board members entered into a memorandum of agreement with Idaho Power Co. reaffirming the recent Swan Falls Settlement. That settlement itself reaffirmed the landmark 1984 Swan Falls Agreement, in which the electric utility surrendered water rights at its Swan Falls Dam in exchange for guaranteed daily minimum Snake River flows as measured near Murphy.

Thursday's action by the board was one of several requirements for the new settlement to be executed. A number of people testified to the board, Anderson said, and most supported the settlement — though the city of Pocatello is worried about how it might affect the river's flows, he said.

The board also instructed its consultant, CDR Associates, to move forward with the next step of a new plan to repair the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer. The plan was recently vetted and approved by the Legislature, and the board's action now clears the way for an implementation committee to start on a series of tasks to put its contents into practice.

Law & Disorder... ... in Cassia County

From April 27 police reports:

Vandalism:

Someone threw a "small black ball" through the Burger King drive-through menu display. According to the report, the ball looked like it came from a car's gear-shift handle. The damage, estimated to be $225, was discovered when an employee was changing the menu from the previous night's options to the breakfast menu.

Lost and found:

A Burley woman, 51, found a kid. The girl, estimated in the report to be 1 year old, was wandering around an apartment complex when the woman found her and called the police. When police arrived and took the child, the mother walked outside and said, "There she is." The sliding glass door had been left open and the baby temporarily escaped.

Larceny:

A 28-year-old Burley woman reported that she filled her vehicle up with gas Sunday night but half of it was missing Monday morning. She suspected someone had siphoned the gas during the night. "Upon looking at the gas door on her vehicle I could see where someone had smeared there (sic) fingers on the door and down onto the right rear tail light," the police report reads. No fingerprints were found and there are no suspects.

Runaway:

A 12-year-old Burley girl, reported as a runaway, was found at her boyfriend's house. She was handcuffed and taken to the sheriff's office.

From April 28 police reports:

Driving without privileges:

A 24-year-old man from Boise was arrested for driving without privileges. Police noticed he didn't use his blinker at a turn and failed to slow down at several intersections. When he was pulled over and asked for his driver's license, the man produced an identification card. He was discovered to be on both misdemeanor and felony probation. He showed police a note from his probation officer saying that he could be outside of Boise, but the document was expired. He gave police permission to search his vehicle for drugs. They found a Hurricane High Gravity drink in the console and a Bud Ice in the passenger seat. He was also cited for an open-container violation.

No charges for T.F. day care in baby's death

Times-News

Twin Falls police say they've wrapped up their investigation of a day-care death last month, with no criminal actions found in the case.

On March 9, staff at All About Kids Childcare at 915 Sunrise Blvd. found 8-month-old Gabriel Ramon Aragon not breathing in his crib and attempted CPR on the infant. Gabriel later died at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

Police launched an investigation into the death and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare temporarily suspended the center's license pending the investigation's results. Gabriel's family and relatives defended the day-care owner, predicting correctly that no wrongdoing would be found.

"At this point, it doesn't look like charges will be filed," Staff Sgt. Terry Thueson said Thursday.

It was not clear as of Thursday evening what action Health and Welfare will take on the suspended license.

Man to be sentenced for role in jail escape

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Arturo Daniel Flores was scheduled to be sentenced Thursday for helping Isaac Polanco escape from jail last fall, but the hearing was continued. He'll be sentenced at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Because of a plea agreement, a criminal-conspiracy charge will be dropped. The state will recommend no more than five years in prison but no less than two years. Regardless of how much time 5th District Judge Michael Crabtree imposes on Flores, it will be served concurrently with a seven-year sentence for a 2006 robbery conviction in Minidoka County.

Flores, 20, of Burley, served time with Polanco, 21, in the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center. He pleaded guilty in February to forming an escape plan with Polanco and Kalob Morrison, 21.

Polanco, then trustee at the jail, was outside sweeping sidewalks when he escaped on Nov. 5, 2008.

According to court records, Flores, who was released at the time, had been receiving money from Polanco's jail account and agreed to leave it, along with some clothes, in a car parked at Video Mexico on Overland Avenue.

When Polanco escaped, he called Flores, but Flores never left the car, the clothes or the money ($50) at Video Mexico. In fact, he told police that he spent the money as soon as he got it from Polanco.

Flores told police that Polanco planned to go to Phoenix or possibly El Salvador. Instead, he was arrested 36 hours later in Heyburn and told detectives, according to the criminal-complain affidavit, "It was the best two days of my life."

Polanco will be sentenced at 1:30 p.m. May 19.

Morrison, also charged with planning and assisting Polanco's escape, is scheduled for a May 19 pretrial conference.

Study: Grazing threatens wide variety of wildlife habitat in West

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press writer

RENO, Nev. — Conservationists say in a new report that livestock grazing poses a threat to a wide variety of fish and wildlife across more than three-fourths of their dwindling habitat on federal land in the West.

That includes practically all of the remaining habitat of the Greater sage grouse, a hen-sized game bird the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is considering adding to the list of threatened or endangered species in 11 Western states from California to Wyoming, according to the report by WildEarth Guardians, which wants the bird protected.

Using satellite mapping and federal records, the environmental group last year began a study matching wildlife habitat and U.S. grazing allotments across more than 260 million acres of federal land in the West.

"The results confirm — in graphic form — previous research finding that incessant, ubiquitous public lands grazing has contributed to the decline of native wildlife," concludes the report entitled "Western Wildlife Under Hoof." The report is scheduled to be released Friday.

The group said continued grazing in ever-shrinking habitat hampers the recovery of fish and wildlife and in some cases threatens them with extinction. Cattle and sheep trample vegetation, damage soil, spread invasive weeds, spoil water and deprive native wildlife of forage, the report said. It notes that then-Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said in 2005 that livestock grazing "is the most damaging use of public land."

Mark Salvo, WildEarth Guardians' grazing program specialist and author of the report, said the new data suggests livestock have "done more damage to the Earth than the chain saw and bulldozer combined."

Jeff Eisenberg, director of federal lands for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, criticized the findings as part of an effort to shut down grazing on federal lands.

"There's a number of environmental groups that have decided the best way to spend their time and the money of their funders is to eliminate the families and communities that have made the West what it is today," he told AP in an e-mail. "These groups don't deserve a dignified response."

Don Kirby, president of the Society for Range Management and director of North Dakota State University's School of Natural Resource Sciences, said livestock grazing is an important part of a "landscape management toolbox" that can be used to reduce wildfires and improve wildlife habitat. "Western rangelands and the wildlife species that live there have coexisted with grazing by large herbivores for tens of thousands of years," Kirby said.

The report found livestock grazing is permitted on 91 percent of the Greater sage grouse's habitat and that grazing operations are active on 72 percent of the habitat. Grazing is active on 55 percent of the federal range of the Gunnison sage grouse and is permitted on 84 percent of it.

Likewise, grazing is permitted on about 80 percent of public land in the historic range of several trout species, including 88 percent of the Lahontan and 76 percent of the Bonneville.

"The species included in our report are representative of the hundreds of wildlife species that are threatened by public lands grazing," said Salvo, whose group has offices in Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

Other species examined included:

- Mexican spotted owl, 68 percent permitted, 67 percent active
- Mexican gray wolf, 82 percent permitted, 82 percent active
- Chiricahua leopard frog, 82 percent permitted, 75 percent active
- Sonoran desert tortoise, 53 percent permitted, 47 percent active

The bulk of the federal land studied is managed by the Bureau of Land Management, which issued grazing permits and leases to 15,799 ranchers and operators covering 128 million acres of U.S. land in 2006.

BLM spokesman Jeff Krauss said the agency has not fully reviewed the report but maintains "well-managed grazing provides numerous ecological and environmental benefits."

Among other things, WildEarth Guardians recommends buying out permits from ranchers and others willing to remove their livestock from grazing land.

"There is a greater economic value in non-consumptive uses of public land — hunting, fishing, bird-watching, hiking, camping — than livestock grazing," the report said.

The Nevada Department of Wildlife shares concerns about dwindling wildlife populations but believes there is a place for grazing on public land, spokesman Chris Healy said.

If ranchers end up selling their land, it could be subdivided and lead to development even more problematic for wildlife, he said.

"It behooves us to get everybody who uses the land to be part of the solution and that's what we've been trying to do with the sage grouse. If one sector or user of the land feels like they are being ganged up on, the odds of coming up with a solution that will work are not good," he said.

Idaho reports first probable swine flu case

BOISE (AP) — State public health officials say Idaho's first probable case of swine flu has been sent to the Centers for Disease Control for confirmation.

Officials said Thursday the patient is a woman from Kootenai County in her 60s who recently traveled to Texas.

Panhandle Health District officials say she is recovering and did not require hospitalization.

Officials in Idaho have not confirmed any cases of swine flu but have alerted medical care providers to continue watching for flu-like illnesses.

Meanwhile, in Washington state, people suspected of having swine flu include a Seattle pediatrician who treated 22 patients before falling ill and a 3-year-old boy who recently traveled with his family to Mexico. Several schools announced closures as a precaution against the spread of the disease.

In addition to six cases listed as probable swine flu by the state, Dr. David Fleming, director and health officer for Public Health-Seattle & King County, on Thursday reported seven more probable cases in the Seattle area, including six children.

Several schools in Seattle, Federal Way and Everett announced closures of up to a week because of students with suspected cases or because they are related to people with suspected cases.

Officials at The Everett

Clinic, where the infected pediatrician worked, were contacting the families of her 22 young patients so they could be tested and treated if necessary.

"There's obviously a tremendous amount of anxiety and concern right now," said Dr. Yuan-Po Tu, a medical director at the clinic based in Everett, about 25 miles north of Seattle.

The state Health Department likewise cautioned that more probable cases of swine flu H1N1 virus might be found in Washington as additional tests are conducted. About 70 samples have been sent so far to the state's lab in Shoreline, Health Department spokesman Tim Church said.

Officials were waiting for tests from the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to confirm the probable cases are actually swine flu. But Dr. Gary Goldbaum, a health officer with the Snohomish Health District, said there's a 95 percent chance they are.

effort to commit the crimes," Mark Measer, supervisor for the Environmental Protection Agency's criminal division in Seattle, told the Associated Press after the verdict.

State and federal concerns about operations emerged during a routine waste inspection of the farm's 400-acre feedlot in May 2005 by a state agriculture department inspector. The inspection reviewed the farm's irrigation wells, waste containment ponds and other waste and irrigation infrastructure.

In January 2008, a federal grand jury handed down an indictment that accused King of incorrectly installing backflow valves on the irrigation wells, which allowed water in the above-ground pipes to flow backward and into the wells, according to the indictment.

The grand jury also accused King of burying an irrigation valve and lying about it to investigators and allowing surface water to leak into wells.

King was initially charged in the indictment with discharging wastewater into the aquifer. But a pretrial ruling by U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill allowed the jury to only consider if "fluids" were illegally discharged at the farm. The judge also did not provide the jury with a specific definition of fluids.

Defense attorneys maintain that King did nothing more than discharge creek water into the aquifer without proper permits. They also say it's too soon to determine if the case will be appealed.

"We are disappointed that the jury apparently concluded that Cory knew he needed a permit to recharge the aquifer with water from two creeks," Boise attorney David Lombardi told the AP.

Senate

That's because it's not. The prevailing sentiment is that the House will return Monday because state Constitution dictates adjournment can't last more than three days without the other chamber concurring.

Still, GOP House leaders say their members won't raise taxes in the current economy. But their strategy of last week — pitching an unprecedented tax shift Otter dismissed and on Wednesday proposing an interim committee the Senate said can't replace new money — hasn't led to an agreement.

And House adjournment aimed at pressuring Otter to give up his push for new transportation funding didn't faze the Senate, which conducted its usual business Thursday. Senators back Otter and called the House move "irresponsible."

Some House members are sticking around, like

Democrat Branden Durst of Boise, clad in jeans and sneakers. Russ Mathews, R-Idaho Falls, wore a T-shirt and sweat pants before hitting the road. Even House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, dressed down for negotiations with Senate leaders, ditching his tie and jacket for blue jeans and a western shirt.

By lunchtime, the Senate had finished for the day. Thursday's empty rooms and hallways free of chatter recalled typically lax Friday floor sessions when House members leave early and the Senate works in the afternoon.

"It does feel like a Friday," said Senate Minority Leader Kate Kelly, D-Boise. "It has that half-echo feeling in the hallways."

A half-operating Legislature last occurred during a regular session in 1980. But even Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, the longest-serving senator who is considered the authority on legislative history, was at a loss for words.

"It's just hard for me to describe the current circumstances," he said.

Those curious circumstances took root Wednesday as senators dripped with sarcasm, telling reporters they were "gleeful and happy" there was still no compromise with Otter.

After a fruitless meeting with Otter, house and Senate leaders emerged with wide grins on their faces. "It's a beautiful day in Boise!" GOP Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts declared. Lt. Gov. Brad Little joked the meeting didn't yield white smoke, referencing when a new pope is picked.

Later, as House members deliberated into the night, Rep. Lenore Barrett said in debate, "it's getting late and the pizza's backing up."

But perhaps the clearest sign something is amiss came when the House, as per tradition, attempted to

NC rep calls gay student slaying case a 'hoax'

By Estes Thompson
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — A North Carolina congresswoman said Thursday she chose her words poorly when she called claims that a Wyoming college student was murdered because he was gay a "hoax."

Republican Rep. Virginia Foxx said during debate in the House that Matthew Shepard's 1998 death wasn't a hate crime and shouldn't be invoked by supporters of a bill to expand the definition of such crimes to include violence motivated by sexual orientation.

"We know that young man was killed in the commitment of a robbery. It wasn't because he was gay," Foxx said during debate.

Foxx

"The bill was named for him, the hate-crimes bill was named for him, but it's really a hoax that continues to be used as an excuse for passing these bills."

Shepard died several days after he was found tied to a remote fence in Wyoming, severely beaten and robbed of $20. Prosecutors said he was lured from a bar by two men, including one whose defense attorney said he reacted violently after Shepard made a sexual advance.

The House approved the bill Wednesday despite Foxx's comments. On Thursday, after Foxx drew heated reaction from several gay rights groups and others upset by her comments, she said her words didn't convey what she meant to say.

"The term 'hoax' was a poor choice of words used in the discussion of the hate crimes bill," Foxx said in a statement. "Mr. Shepard's death was nothing less than a tragedy, and those responsible for his death certainly deserved the punishment they received."

Lawsuit targets how Idaho defends indigent

CALDWELL (AP) — A southwest Idaho law firm has sued the state and Canyon County over the way public defenders are chosen and paid.

The firm Moffatt Thomas in Boise filed the lawsuit last week in 3rd District Court, seeking to prevent Canyon County from terminating its contract with attorneys Klaus Wiebe and Scott Fouser, of Wiebe and Fouser Attorneys, who represent defendants who can't afford an attorney.

Canyon County notified Wiebe and Fouser earlier this year their contracts to represent indigent defendants were being terminated, the Idaho Press-Tribune reported.

On a broader basis, the lawsuit aims to determine whether the state spends enough money on public defenders so that indigent people accused of a crime can be fairly represented.

It alleges Idaho is violating the Sixth and 14th Amendments to the Constitution that guarantee a person accused of a crime the right to an attorney regardless of the ability to pay, and that all citizens, regardless of race, have equal rights.

It also alleges Idaho has failed to make sure each county has the money to provide effective attorneys for indigent defendants. And it contends Canyon County has adopted a process to select a new public defender that would undermine the constitutional mandate to protect those who can't afford an attorney.

Also named in the lawsuit are Canyon County commissioners David Ferdinand, Steve Rule and Kathy Alder, who revised how the county selects a public defender.

The new process seeks, by Monday, a letter of interest and resume from applicants that will be reviewed by a panel of attorneys convened by 3rd Judicial District Administrative Judge Juneal Kerrick. That panel would in turn recommend finalists to the commissioners.

Canyon County Prosecutor John Bujak said the new process will protect the rights of the accused, but doesn't mean the county is likely to save money on public defenders.

"It's a coin toss," he said. "There's real risk you could get a higher number. It's possible the board could end up paying more money out of the county coffers." He also said the county had been contracting public defenders incorrectly, and it must appoint a public defender who then hires a staff rather than selecting a law firm, as it had been doing.

No one from Moffatt Thomas, or Wiebe and Fouser Attorneys, returned calls from The Associated Press on Thursday.

The lawsuit could be part of a larger trend. Representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union testified last month before a U.S. House committee that Michigan and other states are failing to make sure they spend the money to properly represent indigent defendants. In 2005, Montana passed a Public Defense Bill, which has been applauded by the ACLU.

"A national movement is under way to protect the legal rights of poor people, and Montana is leading the charge," said Vincent Warren, a senior staff attorney with the ACLU who worked to promote the Montana law's passage. "A year ago, poor people accused of crimes in Montana regularly had the doors to justice slammed in their faces. Thankfully, for them today is a new day."

Police say suspect is L.A.'s 'largest ever' serial killer

By Thomas Watkins
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Police believe a 72-year-old insurance claims adjuster arrested earlier this month is the most prolific serial killer in the city's history, having raped and strangled as many as 30 older women over two decades.

The break in the cold case came in October when John Floyd Thomas Jr., who had twice been convicted of sexual assault, had a DNA sample taken as part of an effort to build an offender database.

Thomas was charged April 2 with murdering 68-year-old Ethel Sokoloff in 1972 and 67-year-old Elizabeth McKeown in 1976, both of whom were sexually assaulted and strangled. DNA matching Thomas' was found at three other crime scenes in the 1970s and '80s, police robbery-homicide Capt. Denis Cremins said.

Detectives now consider Thomas a suspect in at least 25 other killings, and the number could grow as detectives probe unsolved cases going back to the 1950s, Cremins said. It could not immediately be determined where the other killings took place.

"If he turns out to be the guy, he probably would be the largest ever (serial killer) in the city of Los Angeles," Cremins said.

Deputy Chief Charlie Beck said police "believe that Thomas is likely connected to many more sexually motivated murders."

Thomas was being held on $1 million bond in a county jail and could not be reached for comment. The public defender's office said he had yet to be assigned an attorney.

If convicted, Thomas faces life in prison without parole because the killings occurred before the 1977 reinstatement of the death penalty. Prosecutors may seek capital punishment if Thomas is charged in later cases.

Thomas was sentenced to six years in 1957 for burglary and attempted rape in Los Angeles. Two parole violations sent him back behind

“It really is all of humanity that is under threat during a pandemic.”

— World Health Organization Director General Margaret Chan as the potential for massive numbers of deaths worldwide from swine flu remains a possibility.

EDITORIAL

Webb leaves behind a legacy of justice, compassion in T.F.

The essential character of a community — and the things that make a place worth living — are often defined by just a few people.

Lloyd Webb, who died last week-end of cancer at age 77, was one those folks in Twin Falls. He was a gifted attorney with a prominent client list who genuinely cared about the rights of the little guy. Self-described as “one of the last progressive Republicans,” he was passionate about the law, served as a public defender and later twice as a district judge.

“Many of his clients were people without money or high station in life,” said Idaho Supreme Court Justice Roger Burdick, a former 5th District judge and longtime friend and colleague of Webb’s. “But Lloyd felt that they were wronged, and he took their cases.”

Just about the only goals that eluded Webb in a half-century career were a seat in Congress — he lost the Republican nomination in the 2nd Congressional District to Orval Hansen in 1968 — and the state Supreme Court, for which he applied four times.

He would have excelled in either job, but deprived his hometown of one of its indispensable characters in the process.

The judge will be missed.

A memorial service for Webb will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Twin Falls LDS 1st Ward Church, 847 Eastland Drive N. Viewing is one hour before the funeral.

Our view: Lloyd Webb’s attorney son Curtis describes him as “the kind of lawyer we don’t have anymore.” We couldn’t agree more.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Globalism goes viral

In these post-cold war days, we don’t face a single concentrated threat. We face a series of decentralized, transnational threats: jihadi terrorism, a global financial crisis, global warming, energy scarcity, nuclear proliferation and, as we’re reminded today, possible health pandemics like swine flu.

These decentralized threats grow out of the widening spread and quickening pace of globalization and are magnified by it. Instant global communication and rapid international travel can sometimes lead to universal, systemic shocks.

DAVID BROOKS

A bank meltdown or a virus will not stay isolated. They have the potential to hit nearly everywhere at once. They can wreck the key nodes of complex international systems.

So how do we deal with these situations? Do we build centralized global institutions that are strong enough to respond to transnational threats? Or do we rely on diverse and decentralized communities and nation-states?

A couple of years ago, G. John Ikenberry of Princeton argued that America should help build a series of multinational institutions to address global problems. The great powers should construct an “infrastructure of international cooperation ... creating shared capacities to respond to a wide variety of contingencies.”

If you apply that logic to the swine flu, you could say that the world should beef up the World Health Organization to give it the power to analyze the spread of the disease, decide when and where quarantines are necessary and organize a single global response.

If we had a body like that, we wouldn’t be seeing the sort of frictions that are emerging from today’s decentralized approach. Europe has offended the U.S. by warning its citizens not to travel across the Atlantic. Ukraine is restricting pork imports. Europe could horde flu vaccines, leaving the U.S., which has only one manufacturing plant, high and dry. Fear of a pandemic could lead to a restrictionist race, as nations compete to curtail movement and build walls.

Those dangers are all real. Yet, so far, that’s not the lesson of this crisis. The response to swine flu suggests that a decentralized approach is best. This crisis is only days old, yet we’ve already seen a bottom-up, highly aggressive response. In the first place, the decentralized approach is much faster. Mexico responded unilaterally and aggressively to close schools and cancel events. The U.S. has responded with astonishing speed, considering there are still few illnesses and just one hospitalization.

meeting. The photo is the very image of a focused, local response. People are wearing polo shirts and casual wear — intensely concentrating on the concrete incidents in their own backyard.

If the response were coordinated by a global agency, those local officials would not be so empowered. Power would be wielded by officials from nations that are far away and emotionally aloof from ground zero. The institution would have to poll its members, negotiate internal differences and proceed, as all multinationals do, at the pace of the most recalcitrant stragglers.

Second, the decentralized approach is more credible. It is a fact of human nature that in times of crisis, people like to feel protected by one of their own. They will only trust people who share their historical experience, who understand their cultural assumptions about disease and the threat of outsiders and who have the legitimacy to make brutal choices. If some authority is going to restrict freedom, it should be somebody elected by the people, not a stranger.

Finally, the decentralized approach has coped reasonably well with uncertainty. It is clear from the response, so far, that there is an informal network of scientists who have met over the years and come to certain shared understandings about things like quarantining and rates of infection. It is also clear that there is a ton they don’t understand.

A single global response would produce a uniform approach. A decentralized response fosters experimentation.

The bottom line is that the swine flu crisis is two emergent problems piled on top of one another. At bottom, there is the dynamic network of the outbreak. It is fueled by complex feedback loops consisting of the virus itself, human mobility to spread it and environmental factors to make it potent. On top, there is the psychology of fear caused by the disease. It emerges from rumors, news reports, Tweets and expert warnings.

Swine flu isn’t only a health emergency. It’s a test for how we’re going to organize the 21st century. Subsidiarity works best.

Growing number of whites feel like an aggrieved minority

I wonder what the late historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. would have made of Texas Gov. Rick Perry’s pandering to Lone Star secessionists on April 15. I’d love to hear what he’d say about Sarah Palin’s flirtation with the Alaskan Independence Party and its disdain for the rest of the United States.

Way back in 1991, Schlesinger wrote a best-selling book, “The Disuniting of America,” in which he argued that multiculturalism was threatening the integrity of the nation.

“The cult of ethnicity,” he wrote, culminated in an “attack” on a commonly shared American identity.

According to Schlesinger, the challenge came first from white “unmeltable” ethnic groups who didn’t adapt to the British foundations of U.S. culture. His primary concern, however, was with groups of non-European origin.

“Making a single society

of this diversity of antagonistic European peoples is a hard enough job,” he wrote. “The new salience of non-European, nonwhite stocks compounds the challenge. And the non-Europeans, or at least their self-appointed spokesmen, bring with them a resentment, in some cases hatred, of Europe and the West.”

In the wake of Perry’s comments — on the one hand saying we “have a great union” and on the other warning that if “Washington continues to thumb its nose at the American people ... who knows” — Schlesinger’s warning seems not only quaint but misdirected. He was, in large part, responding to militant, old-school campus racial activists, and he wildly overestimated the influence of such “professional minorities.”

But he also didn’t foresee the emergence of white grievance based on minority status.

That’s odd, given that by the early 1990s, demographers already knew that whites were on the verge of becoming a minority in bellwether California. Looking back at the three big ballot measures of the 1990s — Propositions 187 (anti-illegal immigration), 209 (anti-affirmative action) and 227 (anti-bilingual education) — it’s hard not to see in them a white backlash to the state’s demographic transition.

In 1999, in an article entitled “California and the End of White America,” even Ron Unz, the entrepreneur who spearheaded Proposition 227 and ran for governor in 1994, concluded that “this unprecedented ethnic transformation is probably responsible for the rise of a series of ethnically charged political issues.”

Unz generally agreed with Schlesinger’s premise that ethnic and racial sectarianism had the potential of tearing at the social fabric, but he didn’t exclude whites from the list of potential offenders. He argued that encouraging “minorities to exercise influence through the mobilization of ethnic or racial grievance” left the door open to “the rise of a similar ethnic grievance movement among America’s emerging white minority.”

The recent talk of secession on the political right has not been racially based per se, but it would be naive not to suspect a racial component. Just as Unz warned, there does seem to be a growing number of whites who feel — and act — like an aggrieved minority.

And the signs aren’t just coming from the far-right extreme.

Just last week, the U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in a workplace discrimination case filed by a firefighter in New Haven, Conn., who claims he was passed over for promotion because he is white. Last August, the Ocala Star-Banner in Florida published an opinion article by an immigration-restriction activist who claimed that “whites in America are going to be disempowered, assuming we remain a democracy, through a radical and rapid transformation of the nation’s demography on a scale unprecedented in world history.”

We’re likely to hear more such sentiments as the nation goes through the same demographic transition that California has experienced.

Fox News’ Glenn Beck has even posited a creepy “Bubba effect.” In February, his guest was a retired Army sergeant major who talked about the expanding ranks of survivalists, who “lose that faith and confidence within the various politicians” and “end up developing their own infrastructure, their own means to survive, to basically fend for themselves.”

I don’t want to overestimate the influence of such sentiments, but it’s disturbing to see mainstream politicians such as Perry and Palin and talk-show hosts give these ideas any credibility whatsoever.

No matter the source, at this point in the history of this extraordinarily diverse nation, we should be wary of any political movement that favors the “unum” over the “pluribus.” But be fair: The threats to the fragile bonds of cohesion in our society can no longer simply be laid at the feet of those pesky multiculturalists.

The road to hell is paved by interrogation photos

On Aug. 17, 1942, a nationally syndicated columnist wrote that she had received 'a very stern letter' after commenting about the weather, '...and so from now on I shall not tell you whether it rains or whether the sun shines where I happen to be.'

The columnist was Eleanor Roosevelt and she was referring to an article in which she had described weather conditions during one of her official visits around the country with her husband, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, during World War II," writes Michael S. Sweeney in his history of the Office of Censorship, "Secrets of Victory."

We were a nation at war and Mrs. Roosevelt had said too much.

During World War II every American was discouraged from saying, writing, or publishing anything that might aid the enemy while America pursued victory, and every citizen was reminded constantly that, "Loose lips sink ships."

My how times have changed.

In our modern confessional era, in which no emotion and no secret is to be hidden, we blab everything, caring more about our feelings and self-esteem than about defeating an enemy just as determined as the ones we fought more than 60 years ago.

In an act that would have been unheard of during World War II, the Pentagon, in response to a lawsuit by the never-vigilant ACLU, will release by the end of May photos depicting the alleged abuse of detainees in Iraq and Afghanistan by American personnel. No doubt this will make people who regard America — or at least the Bush administration — as a greater evil than al-Qaida feel better. It also is bound to encourage our enemies and discourage intelligence officers who risk their lives daily in far away places in order to protect Americans and our way of life.

In any game, much less a war, when one player plays by a set of rules and the other plays by no rules at all, it does not take a genius to conclude who will win. America's enemies know how to play us and how to use our Constitution, legal system, the media and public opinion to advance their ends, while frustrating ours.

America-haters expect the public to recoil at tactics far less severe than the ones they use. They want us to believe our behavior is directly linked to theirs and that if we don't use techniques to extract information from suspected terrorists — information that might save American lives — then they won't torture Americans who might have information they need to help them kill more of us.

Porter Goss, the former director of the CIA and former chairman of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, wrote an op-ed column for The Washington Post recently in which he said, "I feel our government has crossed the red line between properly protecting our national security and trying to gain partisan political advantage. We can't have a secret intelligence service if we keep giving away all the secrets."

Goss is not a wishful thinker: "The suggestion that we are safer now because information about interrogation techniques is in the public domain conjures up images of unicorns and fairy dust. We have given our enemy invaluable information about the rules by which we operate."

Dr. Mark M. Lowenthal, former assistant director of Central Intelligence for Analysis and Production, told Jake Tapper of ABC News the release of interrogation photos is "prurient" and "reprehensible." Lowenthal added, "We ask people to do extremely dangerous things, things they've been ordered to do by legal authorities, with the understanding that they will get top cover if something goes wrong. They don't believe they have that cover anymore."

Terrorist states and the freelancers they support can only be thinking that our "icky" feelings toward the necessities of war will give them an opening they can exploit to kill us and ruin our economy and way of life.

War is Hell and that's what we should make it for our enemies, because Hell is precisely what they intend to make for America and the West.

Releasing pictures that reveal interrogation techniques and other information can help the enemy construct that road to Hell for us, paved with our good intentions.

Stress tests for banks costing us

Brace yourselves. The gang with "too big to fail" emblazoned on its T-shirts has smartly scheduled a week of hide and seek with bankers, shareholders, investors and the financial press.

We think, but aren't sure, the stress tests of the 19 largest banks receiving TARP funds have been completed.

These are the special tests of solvency administered over the last couple of months by banking regulators. These tests, we're told, are unlike the solvency tests regulators regularly administer. The distinction we'll no doubt learn as regulators this weekend reveal the method of testing, though not specific details.

This, of course, will lead to a frenzy of speculation.

Inducing speculation about our banks didn't used to be part of a regulator's job.

We think, but don't know for sure, that sometime during the week of May 3 some details will be made public. That gives us a while of fun and games.

We've heard, but can't confirm, that we may get a composite snapshot of the 19 banks, mixing the good with the bad and the ugly to come up with a fairly bland, mostly meaningless picture. Hard to be too specific without giving away the ending — the one or two banks that might not survive as presently construed.

All this intrigue and inexplicable machinations for a failed program.

A little over a year ago, our government launched willy-nilly and without any public debate its too-big-to-fail program by rescuing Bear Stearns through an arranged marriage with JP Morgan. Since then, we have committed trillions and still have no clear plan for dealing with the troubled assets of our banks.

We are stuck now with a system that, instead of letting the marketplace determine the winners and losers,

THOMAS OLIVER

We are stuck now with a system that, instead of letting the marketplace determine the winners and losers, has the government making those decisions.

We have stress tests not to expose those banks that should be allowed to fail, but rather which banks should get more taxpayer money so they won't fail. This isn't a popularity contest. This is about what works. And this hasn't worked, as clearly revealed by the lack of confidence exhibited in the credit markets.

Thomas M. Hoening, president of the Kansas City Federal Reserve, reminded Congress last week that we have dealt with financial fiascos before and much more effectively.

In a paper titled "Success Depends on Failure," Hoening detailed the failure and resurrection of Continental Illinois in the mid-1980s.

At the time, Continental was the largest bank failure in our history. The FDIC-engineered conservatorship prevented the loss of depositors and bondholders.

However, shareholders were wiped out and the board and management were replaced. Seven hard years later, the bank was reprivatized. Total cost to taxpayers: $1.7 billion in today's money.

Nowadays, that's chump change.

America's high schools need work — now

Credit bubbles are like the tide. They can cover up a lot of rot. In our case, the excess consumer demand and jobs created by our credit and housing bubbles have masked not only our weaknesses in manufacturing and other economic fundamentals, but something worse: how far we have fallen behind in K-12 education and how much it is now costing us. That is the conclusion I drew from a new study by the consulting firm McKinsey, entitled "The Economic Impact of the Achievement Gap in America's Schools."

Just a quick review: In the 1950s and 1960s, the U.S. dominated the world in K-12 education. We also dominated economically. In the 1970s and 1980s, we still had a lead, albeit smaller, in educating our population through secondary school, and America continued to lead the world economically, albeit with other big economies, like China, closing in. Today, we have fallen behind in both per capita high school graduates and their quality. Consequences to follow.

For instance, in the 2006 Program for International Student Assessment that measured the applied learning and problem-solving skills of 15-year-olds in 30 industrialized countries, the U.S. ranked 25th out of the 30 in math and 24th in science. That put our average youth on par with those from Portugal and the Slovak Republic, "rather than with students in countries that are more relevant competitors for service-sector and high-value jobs, like Canada, the Netherlands, Korea, and Australia," McKinsey noted.

Actually, our fourth-graders compare well on such global tests with, say, Singapore. But our high school kids really lag, which means that "the longer American children are in school, the worse they perform compared to their international peers," said McKinsey.

There are millions of kids who are in modern suburban schools "who don't realize how far behind they are," said Matt Miller, one of the authors. "They are being prepared for $12-an-hour jobs — not $40 to $50 an hour."

It is not that we are failing across the board. There are huge numbers of exciting education innovations in America today — from new modes of teacher compensation to charter schools to school districts scattered around the country that are showing real improvements based on better methods, better principals and higher standards. The problem is that they are too scattered — leaving all kinds of achievement gaps between whites, African-Americans, Latinos and different income levels.

Using an economic model created for this study, McKinsey showed how much those gaps are costing us. Suppose, it noted, "that in the 15 years after the 1983 report 'A Nation at Risk' sounded the alarm about the 'rising tide of mediocrity' in American education," the U.S. had lifted lagging student achievement to higher benchmarks of performance? What would have happened?

The answer, says McKinsey: If America had closed the international achievement gap between 1983 and 1998 and had raised its performance to the level of such nations as Finland and South Korea, United States G.D.P. in 2008 would have been between $1.3 trillion and $2.3 trillion higher. If we had closed the racial achievement gap and black and Latino student performance had caught up with that of white students by 1998, G.D.P. in 2008 would have been between $310 billion and $525 billion higher. If the gap between low-income students and the rest had been narrowed, G.D.P. in 2008 would have been $400 billion to $670 billion higher.

There are some hopeful signs. President Obama recognizes that we urgently need to invest the money and energy to take those schools and best practices that are working from islands of excellence to a new national norm. But we need to do it with the sense of urgency and follow-through that the economic and moral stakes demand.

With Wall Street's decline, though, many more educated and idealistic youth want to try teaching. Wendy Kopp, the founder of Teach for America, called the other day with these statistics about college graduates signing up to join her organization to teach in some of our neediest schools next year: "Our total applications are up 40 percent. Eleven percent of all Ivy League seniors applied, 16 percent of Yale's senior class, 15 percent of Princeton's, 25 percent of Spellman's and 35 percent of the African-American seniors at Harvard. In 130 colleges, between 5 and 15 percent of the senior class applied."

Part of it, said Kopp, is a lack of jobs elsewhere. But part of it is "students responding to the call that this is a problem our generation can solve." May it be so, because today, educationally, we are not a nation at risk. We are a nation in decline, and our nakedness is really showing.

Elizabeth Edwards: John's affair made me violently ill

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Edwards writes in a new memoir to be published this month that news of her husband's affair made her vomit in a bathroom.

"I cried and screamed, I went to the bathroom and threw up," Edwards, 59, writes in her book, "Resilience."

Edwards, who is terminally ill with cancer, said her husband, John, admitted to the betrayal just days after declaring his run for president in 2006. She said she wanted him to drop out of the race to protect the family from media scrutiny, but stood by his side anyway.

"He should not have run," she wrote.

An advance copy of the book was obtained by the New York Daily News, which reported on it Thursday.

John Edwards went public with the affair in August after the National Enquirer reported he was the father of videographer Hunter's daughter. He has denied paternity, but his wife of more than 30 years doesn't address the issue in her book.

Edwards writes that Hunter's pick-up line was "you are so hot" and that when her husband first confessed, he lied and said he only had sex with Hunter once.

Edwards

Elizabeth Edwards never identifies Hunter by name. But she says that while her life may be tragic, Hunter's is "pathetic."

John Edwards, a former North Carolina senator, was laying the groundwork for a presidential campaign when he hired Hunter to shoot videos of him. Edwards said the affair with Hunter began and ended that year, although Hunter was seen on the campaign trail until the final days of 2006.

David Drake, the publicity director at Broadway Books, said her book would serve as a sort of sequel to her previous memoir, "Saving Graces," that was first published in 2006 and updated in 2007.

Edwards' initial memoir mostly focused on how she coped with the 1996 death of the couple's son Wade and her ongoing battle with breast cancer.

Since the affair was announced, Edwards has continued to advocate for health care reform by visiting Congress and making policy speeches.

The Edwardses have three children — Cate, Jack and Emma Claire. Another son, Wade, died at 16 in a 1996 car accident.

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON Source says Justice Souter to retire

WASHINGTON — Justice David Souter has told the White House that he will retire from the Supreme Court at the end of the court's term in June, a source said Thursday night.

The source spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak for Souter.

Speculation that the 69-year-old justice will be stepping down has been fueled by his failure to appoint law clerks from the fall term.

National Public Radio reported that Souter will remain on the bench until a successor is confirmed.

The Supreme Court declined to comment on the report.

Souter's retirement would give President Barack Obama his first pick for the high court. Court watchers expect him to choose a woman to join Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, currently the only woman on the Supreme Court.

Souter has never made any secret of his dislike for Washington, once telling acquaintances he had "the world's best job in the world's worst city." When the court finishes its work for the summer, he quickly departs for his beloved New Hampshire.

He has been on the court since 1990, when he was an obscure federal appeals court judge until President George H.W. Bush tapped him for the Supreme Court.

Study finds genetic diversity greater in Africans than others

WASHINGTON — Africans are more diverse genetically than the inhabitants of the rest of the world combined, according to a sweeping study that carried researchers into remote valleys and mountaintops to sample the bloodlines of more than 100 distinct populations.

The report, published Thursday in the journal Science Express, suggests that, because of historical migrations and genetic mixing across the continent, it will be hard for African Americans to trace their ancestry in fine detail. African American genealogies are increasingly popular and commercialized, but the authors of the new study cast doubt on how precise such searches can be given the complexity of the genetic makeup of Africans.

"It may be very challenging to trace back ancestry to particular tribes or ethnic groups," said Sarah Tishkoff, a University of Pennsylvania geneticist who led the international research team.

By offering a richer database than had previously been available for African genetic diversity, the new findings will help doctors and medical researchers tailor drug treatments for different groups of Africans rather than treating them as a homogenous population.

NEW YORK Penn files for legal separation from wife

NEW YORK — Sean Penn and Robin Wright apparently tried to make it work but now, it seems their marriage might be over for good.

Penn and his actress wife are separating after 13 years of marriage, citing irreconcilable differences.

The double Oscar winner filed the petition on April 23 in Marin County Superior Court in San Rafael, Calif., according to court papers.

The couple married in April 1996. Penn has requested joint legal and physical custody of their 18-year-old daughter, Dylan Francis, and 15-year-old son, Hopper Jack.

This isn't the first indication of marital strife. The Penns filed for divorce in December 2007 but dismissed their petition several months later.

They attended the Academy Awards together in February. Penn, 48, won an Oscar for his role in the drama "Milk," and neglected to thank his wife in his acceptance speech.

Egypt Saudi girl, 8, divorces 50-year-old husband

CAIRO — An 8-year-old Saudi girl has divorced her middle-aged husband after her father forced her to marry him last year in exchange for about $13,000, her lawyer said Thursday.

Saudi Arabia has come under increasing criticism at home and abroad for permitting child marriages. The United States, a close ally of the conservative Muslim kingdom, has called child marriage a "clear and unacceptable" violation of human rights.

The girl was allowed to divorce the 50-year-old man who she married in August after an out-of-court settlement had been reached in the case, said her lawyer, Abdulla al-Jeteli. The exact date of the divorce was not immediately known.

A court in the central Ojeiza region previously rejected a request by the girl's mother for a divorce and ruled that the girl would have to wait until she reached puberty to file a petition then.

There are no laws in Saudi Arabia defining the minimum age for marriage. Though a woman's consent is legally required, some marriage officials don't seek it. But there has been a push by Saudi human rights groups to define the age of marriage and put an end to the phenomenon.

ILLINOIS Man pleads guilty to aiding terrorists

PEORIA — A man who was locked up without charges for years pleaded guilty Thursday to training in al-Qaida camps and coming to the United States on a mission for the terrorist group the day before the Sept. 11 attacks.

Ali al-Marri, 43, admitted to one count of conspiring to provide material support or resources to a foreign terrorist organization. A second charge of providing material support or resources to a foreign terrorist organization was dropped.

Al-Marri faces up to 15 years in prison and a $250,000 fine at his July 30 sentencing, though he will be credited for 18 months spent in civilian custody. His attorneys say they'll argue that he should get credit for the time spent in military custody, too — more than five years.

Al-Marri's attorneys said their client, a married father of five from Qatar, chose to plead guilty to avoid the risk, if found guilty, of spending 30 years in prison.

"We thought (the plea) was the right approach to take based on the evidence the government allowed us to review over the last several weeks," attorney Andy Savage said outside the federal courthouse in Peoria.

Bankruptcy for Chrysler

Automaker will shutter factories during legal proceedings

By Stephen Manning and Tim Krisher
Associated Press writers

DETROIT — After months of living on government loans, Chrysler finally succumbed to bankruptcy Thursday, pinning its future on a top-to-bottom reorganization and plans to build cleaner cars through an alliance with Italian automaker Fiat.

The nation's third-largest car manufacturer filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in New York after a group of creditors defied government pressure to wipe out Chrysler's debt. The company plans to emerge in as little as 30 days as a leaner, more nimble company, with Fiat potentially becoming the majority owner in the future. In return, the federal government agreed to give Chrysler up to $8 billion in additional aid and to back its warranties.

"It's a partnership that will give Chrysler a chance not only to survive, but to thrive in a global auto industry," President Barack Obama said from the White House.

Chrysler said it will close all its plants starting Monday and they will stay closed until the company comes out of bankruptcy. At least three Detroit-area factories sent workers home Thursday after suppliers stopped shipping parts over fears they would not be paid.

Vice Chairman Tom LaSorda, who once ran the company when it was owned by the German automaker Daimler, said he would retire. "A lot of us are scared," said Steve Grabowski, 33, who has worked at a Warren, Mich., parts stamping plant for seven years and was sent home Thursday. "We knew something like this was going to happen, but we didn't think it would be so Chrysler's bankruptcy filing is the latest step in a drastic reordering of the American auto industry, which has been crushed by higher fuel prices, the recession and customer tastes that are moving away from the gas-guzzling SUVs that were once big money makers.

Lee Iacocca, the retired chairman and CEO who led Chrysler through a government bailout in the late 1970s, said it was a sad day.

"It pains me to see my old company, which has meant so much to America, on the ropes," he said in a written statement. "But Chrysler has been in trouble before, and we got through it, and I believe they can do it again!"

The government has sunk about $25 billion in aid into Chrysler and rival General Motors Corp.

GM faces its own day of reckoning on June 1, a date the administration has set for it to come up with its own restructuring plan. GM has announced thousands of job cuts, plans to idle factories for weeks this summer and has even offered the federal government a majority stake in the company as it races to meet the deadline.

Like at Chrysler, debt may be the stumbling block. GM has asked its unsecured bondholders to exchange $27 billion of debt for a 10 percent stake in the automaker. The creditors balked, saying that would leave them with just pennies on the dollar and they deserve a majority stake if they give up their claims.

When Chrysler emerges from bankruptcy, the United Auto Workers union will own 55 percent of the automaker and the U.S. government will own 8 percent.

Cold storage inventories chill across most of U.S.

Local inventories up as demand slows

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

There's less meat in the freezer thanks to a sharp reduction in U.S. meat production but also efforts by retailers and wholesalers to reduce freezer stocks and free up cash.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's latest survey of refrigerated warehouses was released last week and showed less pork, beef and poultry products are in freezers than a year ago.

Still, local cold storage facilities in south-central Idaho such as Henningson Cold Storage Co. say inventories have risen slightly.

"Our inventory is up a little because buyers seem to have cut back a bit," said Debra Rose, general manager of Henningson Cold Storage Co. in Twin Falls. "It just doesn't seem like we are experiencing what others are going through — our business is really staying pretty strong."

One reason for the decline in other parts of the country is economics.

Export meat sales were strong last year but shippers struggled to find empty containers to move product. Export orders that were waiting in a warehouse were counted as inventory, explained Steve Meyer with the Steve Meyer and Steiner Consulting Group.

Consumers cut spending in March

Savings grow to highest level in more than a decade

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Commerce Department said Thursday that consumer spending dropped 0.2 percent in March, worse than the 0.1 percent decline economists expected.

Incomes, reflecting persistent mass layoffs, dropped 0.3 percent, also worse than expected.

The personal savings rate rose to 4.2 percent from 4 percent in February. It stood at 4.4 percent in January, the first time in more than a decade the rate has been above 4 percent for three straight months.

Households have been cutting back on spending and boosting savings during the recession, worried that they need to replenish depleted nest eggs as job cuts mount and investment values plunge.

The fact that spending turned negative in March after two straight gains is a worrisome sign. Consumer spending in the first quarter grew at a 2.2 percent annual rate after two consecutive quarters of declines, but some analysts said that may be just a blip.

Economists closely watch consumer spending because it accounts for 70 percent of total economic activity.

New jobless numbers spark hope of recovery

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department said new applications for unemployment aid fell unexpectedly to a seasonally adjusted 631,000 last week.

That was down from the prior week's 645,000, which was revised slightly higher from the government's initial estimate. Economists had expected a small increase in new claims.

The four-week moving average of initial jobless claims, which smoothes out volatility, dropped last week to 637,250. That was the lowest level since late February, indicating to some analysts that new unemployment claims

Bankruptcies go to new lengths in newsprint

We published an average of six bankruptcy filings each month when I started as the business editor at the Times-News about two years ago.

They didn't take much space — anywhere from four to eight inches of newsprint was needed — so we used the announcements as a space filler in between stories. Times have changed.

BIZ BITES

On Sunday, we will run our monthly report on bankruptcy filings for south-central Idaho — all 84 inches of it.

That's the most space we have devoted to bankruptcies as far as we know.

We now publish bankruptcies on Sundays because it's the only day we have the space available to list the 62 bankruptcy announcements.

We are one of the few newspapers that still publishes bankruptcies besides a trade publication in Boise and a daily newspaper up north.

I tried to put a story together on the massive number of bankruptcies we receive each month, but the judge in Pocatello who works through the cases in our region was too busy.

I'm sure he is. According to his secretary, he also has to work through caseload from Idaho Falls and Pocatello — I imagine that is about 120 inches each.

The Dow fell 17.61 points, or 0.2 percent, at 8,168.12, after rallying 121 points in early trading. Broader stock indicators were mixed. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 0.83, or 0.1 percent, to 872.81, while the Nasdaq composite index rose 5.36, or 0.3 percent, to 1,717.30. The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 3.91, or 0.8 percent, to 487.56. About nine stocks rose for every seven that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 1.74 billion shares. Government bonds were narrowly mixed. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note rose to 3.12 percent from 3.11 percent late Wednesday. The dollar was mixed against other major currencies. Gold prices fell. Overseas, Japan's Nikkei stock average jumped 3.9 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 rose 1.3 percent, Germany's DAX index rose 1.4 percent and France's CAC-40 rose 1.4 percent.

Cold

That's not true this year, especially for pork. But production is also down. Meyer noted slaughter of all four major meat species (chicken, turkey, pork and beef) were all down about 10 percentage points in mid-April compared to the same week a year ago. He said it's unlikely that the U.S. has ever seen a week when slaughter of all four species fell that much. "The situation is set up for any little uptick in meat demand to cause a sharp price rally in all four species," Meyer said in his daily market analysis.

Some highlights from the monthly cold storage report include:
• Stocks of American cheese in storage increased just 1.6 million pounds from the previous month to 35.7 million pounds, 7 percent increase from a year ago. Total cheese inventory was 892.5 million pounds, 8 percent higher than a year ago.
• Butter stocks increased 5 percent to 215.2 million pounds, an increase of 10.3 million pounds from February.
• Total beef stocks at the end of March were 422.5 million pounds, 1 percent lower than a year ago but 1.7 percent higher than the five year average.
• Total pork freezer stocks as of March 31 were 593.2 million pounds, 9.8 percent lower than a year ago but still 12.1 percent higher than the five year average.
• Ham stocks fell sharply in March, partly due to smaller production volumes and possibly because of good exports to Mexico. Also, Easter Sunday this year was on April 12, so there was some drawdown in inventories at the end of March as product was processed and transferred to distribution centers and stores. Total ham stocks were 73.3 million pounds, 22.7 percent lower than a year ago but still 11.9 percent higher than the five year average.

Jobless

Still, the number of people continuing to draw unemployment benefits jumped to more than 6.27 million, the highest on records dating back to 1967. New jobless filers — as opposed to those who remain on the unemployment compensation rolls — also are closely tracked by economists for clues about the future direction of the economy. Analysts want to see a sustained decline in new applications as a sign of improved conditions. Although last week's drop in new claims was welcome, the level remains elevated and signals a troubled jobs market. The labor market usually doesn't recover until well after a recession has ended. That's because companies won't want to ramp up hiring until they feel certain any recovery has staying power. The record number of continued claims suggests that many laid-off workers are having trouble finding new jobs. As a proportion of the work force, the total jobless benefit rolls are the highest since late December 1982. The continuing claims data lag initial claims data by a week. Besides the continued claims, the report said there were 2.4 million people receiving benefits, as of April 11, under an extended unemployment compensation program enacted by Congress last year.

County fairgrounds get new electronic message center

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — A twinkling new attraction has been added on the south side of Twin Falls County Fairgrounds property next to U.S. Highway 30.

Crews completed installation of the $52,000 electronic message center, along with about $20,000 worth of power and controller equipment late last week.

"It should really be a great enhancement for the people who rent the fairgrounds," Twin Falls County Fair Manager John Pitz said. "They'll be able to advertise their events to about 10,000 cars a day."

Two years ago the Idaho Transportation Department completed a highway traffic flow survey showing a daily volume of around 9,800 cars.

The idea for a message center began to take shape in 1997, in conjunction with plans to finance and build an event center on fairground property. The sign construction bid was awarded in February to Golden West Advertising of Boise. However, a bond to fund construction of an event center has yet to win public approval.

"Most everyone thinks about the fair but we could probably have three times the use of this (fairgrounds) facility if people were aware of what it offers," said Fair Foundation grant writer Cliff Snider. "It just seems like anything we can do to improve the utilization factor will be a big boost to the whole area."

"The Fair Foundation Board put the proposal for the sign forward on a 10-year sponsorship plan that gives the option of purchasing them at $2,000 per year to cover the cost," Pitz said. "They basically went out and the funding just kind of came through this year."

The message center has two top sponsor panels that sold for $20,000 each and six bottom panels going for $10,000 each. Everton Mattress has a $40,000 sponsorship to be paid for over 10 years. Snake River Metal and Ware and Associates purchased a $10,000 sponsorship to be paid over 10 years. Filer Mutual Telephone and Les Swab each have $20,000 sponsor panels for 10 years.

Filer students raise Relay cash

The Filer Middle School has been raising money for the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life.

As part of the fundraiser, the sixth-graders teamed with Sonic to sell Sonic Value Cards. The school made a competition out of the fundraiser and the class that brought in the most money earned a field trip. In addition, individual students who sold the most cards also earned a chance to go on the field trip. Each student was given two cards worth $5 each (the cash value is worth $15 each) and asked to sell them to their parents, friends and neighbors.

The fundraiser was held March 30 through April 10.

The sixth-graders sold more than 520 cards for a total of $2,615 raised for the Filer Middle School Relay for Life team. Nearly 90 percent of the sixth-graders participated by contributing $5 or more.

An assembly was held to award the top sellers for their efforts. Four students received gift cards to Barnes and Noble for their efforts. Three students raised more than $100 each and the fourth raised more than $200. Eighteen students raised more than $50 and earned the privilege of going on a field trip with Angela Hild's first-place class. Her class raised $732.12, followed by Sheila Wubker's class, which raised $599.73.

Bluteau celebrates 90th birthday

Ima Mae McCandless Bluteau will celebrate her 90th birthday with an open house from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Filer First Baptist Church, 254 U.S. Highway 30, Filer.

She was born on April 29, 1919, in Missouri, to Ira and Ollie Hart. She married Wayne McCandless and they moved to Idaho in 1935. They had three children, Jay (Jan) McCandless, Farmington Utah; John (Andrea) McCandless, Filer; and Kathy (Dick) Storro, Spokane, Wash. She has 16 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren.

Wayne passed away in 1995 after 59 years of marriage. She met and married Hubert Bluteau in 1997.

The event is hosted by her children. The family requests no gifts.

Hole in the heart common, generally harmless

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 39-year-old daughter had a small stroke. She has been taking birth-control pills for endometriosis for several years, and following the stroke, her doctor urged her to discontinue them. However, another doctor decided that she needed an echocardiogram with a bubble test. When the test came back abnormal, mal, they found that she had patent foramen ovale. She was scheduled for surgery with a top surgeon, who closed the nickel-sized hole in her heart, and now she seems to be recovering quite well.

Can you give me any more information about this condition, its frequency in the population and the procedure she underwent to correct it?

DEAR READER: As a baby grows in the womb, there is a hole between the two upper chambers of the heart that allows blood to bypass the lungs. Since the growing fetus doesn't use its lungs in the womb, it is not a problem. Shortly after birth, this hole is supposed to close, and for many, it does. For those that don't, the diagnosis of patent foramen ovale is given. According to the National Institutes of Health, this is very common, with about one of every three or four people having the condition. While that number sounds (and is) quite staggering, it isn't serious. In fact, unless there are other heart defects, the sufferers may never know they have the condition because it does not cause symptoms. Most are diagnosed by accident during testing for other heart conditions, such as a murmur (abnormal sound).

Treatment is not necessary unless other heart abnormalities are present or the person has suffered a stroke, like your daughter.

With PFOs, complications are rare unless other conditions are present. Some studies have suggested that older patients may have a higher risk of thromboembolic (blood clots) stroke, since older people tend to develop more leg clots, which can pass easily through the hole and enter the vascular system. Your daughter may have been at a higher risk because of her long-term use of oral contraceptives, but it is hard to tell.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is lactic acidosis, and what is its connection to milk (lactose)?

I take metformin for type 2 diabetes and consume a lot of dairy products, such as milk and cheese. One of the side effects of the metformin is "possibly fatal lactic acidosis." Do I need to worry?

DEAR READER: Lactic acidosis occurs when lactic acid builds up in the bloodstream faster than it can be broken down by the liver.

Despite the name, lactic acid is not related to milk. It is, however, produced when blood oxygen levels drop too low. Most people, especially those new to exercise, will experience muscle pain after strenuous exercise. This is due to lactic-acid buildup in the muscles. After normal breathing resumes, levels return to normal and the pain generally subsides (and may be replaced with muscle ache due to over-use). Other, less common causes include certain medications (such as metformin) and diseases such as kidney or respiratory failure, cancer and sepsis.

Symptoms of lactic acidosis include rapid breathing, sweet-smelling breath, excessive sweating, cool/clammy skin, abdominal pain, nausea and vomiting.

Treatment is aimed at identifying the underlying cause.

Car slams into crowd watching Dutch royal family, kills five APELDOORN, Netherlands (AP) — Bright skies and a festive Queen's Day mood brought thousands to a street corner in this leafy Dutch town to greet their popular monarch, many of them wearing the bright orange national colors and funny orange wigs.

As Queen Beatrix and her family passed by in an open bus, a black car suddenly burst through police barriers, catapulting spectators into the air before it slammed into a stone monument.

Five people were killed and 13 wounded as the queen and her family looked on in disbelief Thursday. The speeding car passed within a few yards of their bus, but none of the royals were hurt.

Officials called it a deliberate attack on the House of Orange, the monarchy that has symbolically ruled Holland since 1815 and is widely respected if not revered.

"I think that it has become clear that this happened with premeditation," Prime Minister Jan Peter Balkenende said.

Neither he nor law enforcement agencies would give a motive. But Dutch media, citing neighbors, said the assailant was recently fired from his job and was to be evicted from his home. Police identified him as a 38-year-old Dutch man with no history of mental illness or police record, but would not release his name.

"The man said that his action was aimed at the royal family," said prosecutor Ludo Goossens. Officials in Apeldoorn said the suspect had a map of the queen's route.

Shortly before the attack, the queen, her son Crown Prince Willem-Alexander and his popular Argentine-born wife, Princess Maxima, had walked up to the crowd behind police barricades, accepting flowers and shaking hands.

Celebrations were canceled for Queen's Day, a national holiday that draws millions of people to parades, street dances, picnics and outdoor parties around the country. Flags were lowered to half staff.

A shaken Queen Beatrix extended her sympathies to the victims in a brief nationally televised address. "What began as a great day has ended in a terrible tragedy that has shocked us all deeply," she said.

The driver apparently acted alone and was not linked to any terrorist or ideological group, authorities said. No explosives were found in his car or in his home.

"From initial contact with police before the suspect was removed from the car ... we have reason to believe it was a deliberate action," Goossens told reporters.

The driver apparently tried to intercept the bus as it turned a corner to a road leading to the gates of the Het Loo palace a few hundred yards away.

Hidden Auschwitz message revives memories for survivor

ALLAUCH, France (AP) — Albert Veissid stashed stolen marmalade for six fellow prisoners in an Auschwitz bunker, a French Jew helping Polish Christians in a gesture of desperate solidarity. In thanks, they shared spare cups of soup — and etched his name alongside theirs in a note buried in a bottle for 65 years.

"I'm so very, very surprised," Veissid, now 84, said Wednesday of the bottle's recent discovery, a discovery churning up vivid memories he tried decades to ignore.

"A bit troubled, too."

A construction crew renovating a cellar in the Polish town of Oswiecim — called Auschwitz by the Nazis during World War II — discovered the bottle hidden in a concrete wall last week. Rolled up inside was a note, written in pencil on what appeared to be a scrap from a cement bag, dated Sept. 20, 1944.

"One, two, three, four, five, six — there's me at the end, the seventh," Veissid, a retired clarinet player and mason, said by telephone as he read a copy of the note. He went on: "A12063, Veissid Albert, Lyon (French)."

with age.

The note is brief, bearing the names, camp numbers and hometowns of the prisoners, six from Poland plus Veissid. "All of them are between the ages of 18 and 20," the final sentence reads.

One or two others are believed to be still alive.

Veissid's granddaughter alerted him to the discovery Monday. Since then, the memories are pouring back.

"I'm surprised that these Poles put me in this bottle," he said. "I knew their faces, but didn't remember the names."

The Poles were all

Christian, spoke simple French, and worked on building sites while Veissid worked beneath them, securing a bunker, he said. They brought him marmalade and other stolen provisions during the day, then came at night to retrieve them, he said.

In exchange, they brought him soup. "They had too much. They brought it to me, and there was still so much that I gave it to others."

That the Poles included him in their bottle message was especially poignant, he said, because of anti-Semitic chapters in Poland's past.

"I imagine they did it out of recognition that by hiding (their supplies), I risked my life," he said.

At least 1.1 million people, mostly Jews — but also non-Jewish Poles, Gypsies and others — died in Auschwitz-Birkenau's gas chambers, or from starvation, disease and forced labor, between 1940 and its 1945 liberation by Soviet troops.

Veissid has largely kept his memories to himself, though in recent years he has joined French school trips to Auschwitz.

Bob Oates, writer who covered 39 Super Bowls, dies at 93

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Oates, a sportswriter who covered 39 consecutive Super Bowls and was the last surviving member of the original Pro Football Hall of Fame selection panel, has died at 93.

Oates died Monday from age-related causes at his home in suburban Baldwin Hills, his son, Bob Jr., told The Associated Press on Thursday.

Oates covered the first Super Bowl at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum in 1967 and covered every other one through 2005.

He missed the 2006 game to stay with his wife, Marnie, who had suffered a fall a few months earlier. She died in February 2006.

Oates never attended another Super Bowl.

Oates was one of the original voters who in 1962 chose the first Hall of Fame inductees.

Born Robert Maclay Oates in Aberdeen, S.D., he came to California in 1937 and earned a master's degree in journalism from UCLA.

He was a sports writer for the Los Angeles Examiner, which later became the Herald-Examiner, before joining the Los Angeles

House passes credit card bill that helps consumers avoid debt

By Marcy Gordon
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Riding a crest of populist anger, the House on Thursday approved a bill to restrict credit card practices and eliminate sudden increases in interest rates and late fees that have entangled millions of consumers.

The legislation, dubbed the Credit Card Holders' Bill of Rights, passed by a bipartisan vote of 357-70 following lobbying by President Barack Obama and members of his administration.

The measure would prohibit so-called double-cycle billing and retroactive rate hikes and would prevent companies from giving credit cards to anyone under 18.

If they become law, the new provisions won't take effect for a year, except for a requirement that customers get 45 days' notice before their interest rates are increased. That would take effect in 90 days.

Similar legislation is before the Senate, where it could be taken up as early as next week.

"This is a unique opportunity to end abusive practices that afflict millions of families across the nation, to contribute to our economic recovery, and to take a stand for American consumers," Sen. Christopher Dodd, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee and the bill's primary sponsor, said after the House vote. "Now it is the Senate's turn to act."

Consumer advocates and some Democrats have unsuccessfully sought for years to bring new rules to the industry.

Supporters want to put a final congressional package under Obama's pen by Memorial Day.

They acknowledged, though, that House passage of the measure was an opening salvo and a lengthy legislative slog lies ahead, in which industry interests could prevail in getting restrictions weakened.

"The administration supports Congress' efforts to ... provide additional strong and reliable protections for consumers that ban unfair and abusive practices," the White House said in a statement following the House vote. "The nation's credit card system must have more accountability, including more effective oversight and more effective enforcement of credit card issuers who violate the law."

Obama's engagement in the issue diverged sharply from his handling of a plan to spare hundreds of thousands of homeowners from foreclosure through bankruptcy, which the Democratic-controlled Senate defeated Thursday on a 45-51 vote.

Obama had embraced the plan, but facing stiff opposition from the banking industry, he did little to pressure lawmakers who worried it would encourage bankruptcy filings and catapult interest rates higher.

Mexico health chief optimistic worst of swine flu has passed

Swine flu alert level raised
 The World Health Organization raised its alert level to Phase 5, indicating a pandemic may be imminent.

By Paul Haven and Niko Price
 Associated Press writers

MEXICO CITY — Mexico's top medical officer voiced optimism Thursday that swine flu has slowed in the nation hardest hit by the virus, but the World Health Organization cautioned there is no evidence the worst of the global outbreak is over.

The U.S. caseload rose slightly to 130 as hundreds of schools nationwide shut their doors, and the crisis even reached the White House, which said an aide to the secretary of energy apparently got sick helping arrange a presidential trip to Mexico.

European health ministers vowed to work quickly with drugmakers to produce a vaccine, but American health officials suggested inoculations could not begin until fall at the earliest.

Mexican Health Secretary Jose Angel Cordova told The Associated Press new cases have leveled off and the death rate has been nearly flat for several days. He said the next few days would be critical in determining whether the virus was truly on the decline.

"The fact that we have a stabilization in the daily numbers, even a drop, makes us optimistic," he said. "Because what we'd expect is geometric or exponential growth. And that hasn't been the situation."

The health ministry, which earlier said 168 people were believed killed by swine flu in Mexico, on Thursday would only confirm 12 of those deaths and would not say how many were suspected.

The World Health Organization's top flu official, responding to similarly hopeful remarks from other Mexican officials, sounded a more cautious note about whether the virus had peaked.

"Hopefully we'll see more of the data of what's going on there. But I expect even in Mexico you will see a mixed picture," Dr. Keiji Fukuda said in Geneva.

Mexico has imposed what amounts to a five-day shutdown of the country, beginning Friday, in hopes of slowing the virus. All but the most essential government services will be suspended, most businesses have been urged to close, and Mexicans have been urged to stay home.

On Wednesday, the WHO said swine flu threatened to become a pandemic, and for the first time it raised its threat level to Phase 5, the second-highest. Fukuda said Thursday there were no immediate signs that warranted declaring a Phase 6 pandemic.

Phase 5 means a virus has spread into at least two countries and is causing large outbreaks. Phase 6 means outbreaks have been detected in two or more regions of the world and a pandemic is under way.

The only confirmed U.S. swine flu death so far is a Mexican toddler who succumbed earlier this week in Houston. New cases of swine flu were confirmed Thursday in Europe, but no deaths have been reported outside North America.

In the United States, Vice President Joe Biden stirred concern by saying in an NBC interview that he would discourage family members from flying or even taking the subway because of the swine flu threat.

The White House insisted Biden meant to say he was discouraging nonessential travel to Mexico, and Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood was compelled to state flatly: "It is safe to fly. There is no reason to cancel flights."

What's in a name? For swine flu, it's the genes

By Seth Borenstein
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — No matter what you call it, leading experts say the virus that is scaring the world is pretty much all pig.

So while the U.S. government and now the World Health Organization are taking the swine out of "swine flu," the experts who track the genetic heritage of the virus say this: If it is genetically mostly porcine and its parents are pig viruses, it smells like swine flu to them.

Six of the eight genetic segments of this virus strain are purely swine flu and the other two segments are bird and human, but have lived in swine for the past decade, says Dr. Raul Rabadan, a professor of computational biology at Columbia University.

A preliminary analysis shows that the closest genetic parents are swine flu strains from North America and Eurasia, Rabadan wrote in a scientific posting in a European surveillance network.

"Scientifically this is a swine virus," said top virologist Dr. Richard Webby, a researcher at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis. Webby is director of the WHO Collaborating Center for Studies on the Ecology of Influenza Viruses in Lower Animals and Birds. He documented the spread a decade ago of one of the parent viruses of this strain in scientific papers.

"It's clearly swine," said Henry Niman, president of Recombinomics, a Pittsburgh company that tracks how viruses evolve. "It's a flu virus from a swine, there's no other name to call it."

Dr. Edwin D. Kilbourne, the father of the 1976 swine flu vaccine and a retired professor at New York Medical College in Valhalla, called the idea of changing the name an "absurd position."

The name swine flu has specific meaning when it comes to stimulating antibodies in the body and shouldn't be tinkered with, said Kilbourne, 88.

That's not what government health officials say.

"We have no idea where it came from," said Michael Shaw, associate director for laboratory science for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "Everybody's calling it swine flu, but the better term is 'swine-like.' It's like viruses we have seen in pigs, it's not something we know was in pigs."

On Wednesday, U.S. officials not only started calling the virus 2009 H1N1 after two of its genetic markers, but Dr. Anthony Fauci the National Institutes of Health corrected reporters for calling it swine flu. Then on Thursday, the WHO said it would stop using the name swine flu because it was misleading and triggering the slaughter of pigs in some countries.

Idaho historical society sponsors archaeology, public works presentations

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Want to find out what native people used as a refrigerator? Or how ancient bathroom waste tells archaeologists what those people ate? Perhaps you're curious what's left of the government's work projects during the Great Depression.

This month, the Idaho State Historical Society has your number. Across the state throughout May, it is sponsoring free presentations and events for Idaho Archeology and Historic Preservation Month, with a particular focus on the New Deal.

Check out this list, and find out what's happening near you. Or look for something that piques your interest, and make a trip out of it. Either way, May is the month to find out more about the people who lived here before you.

This 25-year-old photo shows then-graduate student Suzann Henrikson exploring bison-freezer caves in southern Idaho. Henrikson has continued researching the caves and will present her findings Tuesday at Burley Public Library.

BURLEY "How to keep your bison cold"

This presentation by Bureau of Land Management archeologist Suzann Henrikson is based on her 25 years of research into lava tubes near Shoshone that are cold year-round. Her research uncovered their purpose: preserving bison meat.

"What's so special about bison? If you think about the size of the groups out here, we're talking about extended families of Shoshoni taking advantage of the resources of the desert. They could probably consume a deer or two very quickly, but if you get three or four bison, you're going to want to store them," Henrikson said. "They could stop off and would have an instant food supply."

In the tubes, Henrikson's team found not only bison bones, but frozen sagebrush (what she terms "ancient Saran Wrap"), antler tips (icepicks) and smooth rocks (to pound the antler tips into the meat).

"This is just such a unique use of the Idaho landscape that I think people that live here would find this fascinating," Henrikson said.

Portions of the Little Wood River wall that was completed in 1941 are showing their age and deteriorating. Betty Hare of the Gooding County Historical Society says people have been looking for photos of the wall during construction.

GOODING The Little Wood River Retaining Wall

This display, put together by Betty Hare, vice president of the Gooding County Historical Society, covers the history of the wall from its construction in 1935 to the present. Hare said it wasn't easy gathering the information.

"There aren't names in the newspapers of the men who worked on it, very little on the Internet about it," she said. So she turned to the longest memories in town. "My aunt, who knows everybody in Gooding, knew who to ask, and we were able to find descendants of those who worked on it."

The wall was a project of the Works Progress Administration and was intended to protect Gooding from floods of the nearby river. Since it was built, the wall has suffered a lot of damage, and the Army Corps of Engineers is preparing to repair it, Hare said.

One fun fact Hare discovered researching the wall? The head of the Idaho Emergency Relief Administration, which was managing the construction, paid himself $300 a week in 1934, more than the then-governor of the state. Yep, he was removed from office.

HANSEN 25th annual Stricker Ranch celebration

Is your tomahawk-throwing arm a little rusty? You'll have a chance to limber it up at this annual celebration. Then watch the Oregon Trail Muzzle Loaders demonstrate black powder weapons and listen to their tell stories. On May 9, catch some tunes from the Gem State Fiddlers, and for a suggested donation of $8 get a traditional Texas barbecue lunch.

While you're there, wander through the house, including a room open this year for the first time — a dining room with a built-in china closet. "Everybody came there to eat, and all the family always gathered there every time they had a celebration, that's where they hung out most," said Curtis Johnson, president of The Friends of Stricker.

The Friends will be there in period costume to answer questions, including any about the oldest standing building in Twin Falls County, the store. The executive director of the state historical society, Janet Gallimore, will also be on hand.

"She's going to be talking about the importance of preserving our history, so Idahoans can see where we came from, how we evolved," Johnson said. "It's important for us to be able to keep that site maintained for future generations to look at."

11 a.m. to 3 p.m. May 9 and 10 (some events available only May 10), Stricker Ranch, 3715 E. 3200 N. (south of U.S. Highway 30 near Kimberly and Hansen).

KETCHUM CCC and Recreation Development in the Sawtooth National Forest

Idahoans love to recreate outdoors, but how did all that recreation get started?

"Before, it was quite limited who could come into the forest and utilize it, you really had to be an outdoorsman to go into the forest," said Bret Guisto, forest archeologist for the SNF. But when Civilian Conservation Corps workers became active in the area, they built roads, campgrounds, trails and other amenities. "The 1930s was the youth of the new recreational movement."

Guisto will present what he found in the SNF — the Wood River Valley as well as the South Hills and Howell Canyon — including artifacts like utensils. Remains of firepits, outhouses and pavilions also outline where the CCC camps were, as well as what Guisto calls the sites' "militaristic layout."

While the presentation's focus is recreational consequences of the CCC work, Guisto will also talk about how the work affected the economy.

"People are interested in the current economic crisis, and how the stimulus packages try to emulate what we saw in the '30s," he said.

This is an artistic photograph of desiccated human feces found in the Paisley Caves by archaeologist Dennis Jenkins and his team. DNA tests of the evidence, which dates to 14,300 years ago, shows people lived, hunted and ate near those caves.

TWIN FALLS Archaeology of America's Oldest Human Remains

It's not often that there's a serious scientific aspect to potty humor, but Dennis Jenkins, an archeologist with the University of Oregon, is pretty serious about the desiccated human feces that he and his team found in the Paisley Caves in eastern Oregon.

"You've got a letter or a story written from the human body across time to today, and we open that letter and we know what that person ate," Jenkins said. "It's just like somebody's writing home from camp, if you will, about what they're doing."

He and his team were able to DNA test the waste, and discover that the guesses a 1930s scientist made about the use of the caves were accurate. The human DNA — the oldest found in the Western Hemisphere — proves that 14,300 years ago, humans were living in the caves and hunting and eating the animals that lived out on the plains below.

"I have a lot of colorful slides and stories about the excavations that I'll be bringing forward that will make the PowerPoint presentation quite interesting," Jenkins said. Just be prepared for a few bathroom-humor chuckles.

Aaron Bradley poses after the College of Southern Idaho's comedy class face-off April 24. Bradley, 27, of Twin Falls won the face-off and will perform at an upcoming show at Pandora's restaurant in Twin Falls.

BLAIR KOCH/For the Times-News

Emerging comedian

A look at Twin Falls comedy face-off champ Aaron Bradley

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

At 6 feet 5 inches tall, wearing faded khaki pants and green T-shirt, Aaron Bradley was more resurrected Jolly Green Giant than midget — but maybe that's what made his Friday-night comedy routine so ironically funny.

The show, held at the Turf Club as the finale for the College of Southern Idaho Community Education Center's "Stand-Up Comedy" class, had five aspiring comedians clamoring for a win. Judging the event were local on-air personalities Jeff Edwards, Brad Weiser and Kelly Klaas.

Bradley introduced himself in a composed air of dry indifference. He was a midget in recovery, and the audience ate it up.

"I was the class clown, the funny guy at the family dinner," Bradley said. "I saw the ads for the class and thought, 'What the hell?'"

Then, abashed, Bradley tried sneaking out of the class. He called CSI with a lame excuse about not being able to make it.

The day the five-week course started, he changed his mind.

"It really is a one-man conversation up there ... my friends think I'm funny, but to actually do stand-up, it takes a lot of courage," he said.

Bradley, 27, of Twin Falls, seemed an unlikely competitor.

The 1999 Burley High School graduate has a master's degree in finance and is chief financial officer for a tractor company.

In keeping with lessons learned in the comedy class, taught by nationally known funnyman Danny Marona, Bradley brought his quick, dry humor on stage.

"I kept a straight face to keep the audience guessing, but in a way that connects and relates to the audience. I just exaggerated on things people have thought about but haven't said ... my approach to say what people are thinking anyway," Bradley said. "I knew it all depended on how the audience responded."

Helping hone his act was his wife, Ashley Bradley, who said she finds jokes written down and left scattered around their home.

"He is funny, and I thought his act was good. I liked it," she said. "It's something I wouldn't do ... but we laugh at stupid stuff together all the time."

Now that Aaron Bradley has gotten a few laughs on stage, he's setting his sights on the next routine, set for May 9 at Pandora's restaurant in Twin Falls. He isn't giving out hints, though.

"I've been writing some stuff and have elaborated on a few jokes. I don't

COME TO COMEDY NIGHT

Craving more stand-up comedy? Tickle your funny bone from 7 to 10 p.m. May 9 at Pandora's restaurant, 516 Hansen St. S. in Twin Falls, with a lineup of six local personalities. Great Riff Jazz Band will open the event, with music starting at 6 p.m. and continuing between 15-minute sets by comedians.

Headlining the show is Aaron Bradley, winner of the College of Southern Idaho's stand-up comedy class. Other comedians are Magic Valley's own Pat Branch, Jesse Curtis, Pete Peterson and Don Ritchie. Last year's comedy class champion, Jill Skeem of Twin Falls, will also perform.

If the evening is a success, more may be scheduled, said Skeem, who is helping to organize the event. "There are a lot of comedians in the area with no place to perform," Skeem said. "Depending on how this event goes ... it may become something bigger."

Only 140 seats are available to the first comers. There is no cover charge, and Skeem said material will be family-friendly. Stand-ups will be instructed to keep their language and comedy clean.

want to do the same act, especially if it's going to be the same crowd," he said.

After that show Bradley has one more appearance guaranteed by his win: warming up the audience for the audience for Marona's scheduled New Year Eve's performance at Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center.

The evening's second-place winner was Brian Higgins of Twin Falls.

Twin Falls resident Tim Yenne, who placed third in the comedy face-off, wants to spend more time doing stand-up.

The 31-year-old said he'll hit as many open-mic events as possible. After Friday night, he's hooked.

"I've always liked getting people to laugh ... it's what landed me my wife," Yenne said. "I've been thinking of doing stand-up for years. Actually doing it and getting the laughs just makes me want to do it more."

If the standing-room-only crowd says anything, it could be that aspiring comedians have a Twin Falls public waiting and wanting to laugh.

Back from Wyoming: Mini-Cassia's favorite cowboy singers hit the stage

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Bar J Wranglers are coming back tonight to Burley's King Fine Arts Center by popular demand. According to Mini-Cassia Community Concert series board member Karen Taylor, the group has done more for the series than any other act. The cowboy musicians fill every seat.

"The community loved the Bar J Wranglers," Taylor said. "We were kind of sliding into neverland, and they brought our Community Concerts to life. Because of them we have a lot more membership. People can't wait to see the Bar J Wranglers. They just jump-started our organization. People have come from Boise and Utah and all the surrounding area to see them."

She said the board wants to book the Jackson Hole, Wyo.-based musicians every other year.

Scott Humphrey, tenor singer and guitarist, said he is happy to be making a third appearance in Mini-Cassia in eight years, a record unequalled by any other act.

"The people in Burley are a wonderful rural audience," Humphrey said. "And you have that unique fine arts facility. We play a lot of high school auditoriums. The King Fine Arts Center definitely stands out."

He said the Wranglers will bring a new bass singer, Danny Rogers, whose voice has a rich timbre like Babe Humphrey's. Babe is in

The Bar J Wranglers perform old-time western music in the tradition of the Sons of the Pioneers. "We try not to stray too much from their arrangements," tenor Scott Humphrey says. But they go one step further, adding family-friendly cowboy humor to the music. Not entirely innocent — just lots of fun.

JOIN THE ROUNDUP

Tonight's concert is a free bonus for those purchasing next year's Mini-Cassia Community Concert season tickets before the show. Allow at least 15 minutes before the 7:30 p.m. curtain time to purchase a membership for the upcoming season, which begins Oct. 1. Prices are $40 for adults, $20 for students and $110 for families. One-time tickets for this concert only are $25, beginning at 7:15 p.m. Information: 678-1798.

So far, the recession has not hurt attendance at their performances.

"We are usually booked a year to a year and a half ahead, so at this point we haven't seen a drop in bookings," Scott Humphrey said. "We were very busy from fall through Christmas. I guess this summer we might have a taste of it. We are watching attendance numbers closely. We have read that during times like this, entertainment doesn't suffer as much as other industries — maybe because a movie, a music group, can take you to another place, away from what's worrying you."

He said the Wranglers have a regular booking in Lander, Wyo., that normally sells all 600 seats two weeks early. This year there are still 30 seats unsold.

The musicians made a priority of entertaining injured troops at Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D.C., and a veterans hospital in Richmond, Va. As a result they were invited last year to the White House and performed for then-President George W. Bush and Vice President Dick Cheney.

"It was really an honor," Humphrey said. "Kind of surreal and hard to believe."

Helen Mitchell of Paul is a dyed-in-the-wool Bar J fan.

"I've heard them at the King Fine Arts Center. I've gone to their ranch (in Jackson, Wyo.) for dinner and a show. I've gone to Preston to see them. Every chance I get, I go," she said. "They're good. They're fun. It's worth going to see them. I enjoy them just as much every time."

Artists, what's your take on fences?

Times-News

In conjunction with The Community Library's presentation of the Smithsonian touring exhibition "Between Fences," the Sun Valley Center for the Arts is opening up its Hailey center to local photographers, illustrators, painters and printmakers to present their take on the fences that inhabit our landscape, our community and our neighborhoods.

The open exhibition, titled "Idaho's Fences," will run from June 5 through Aug. 31.

Guidelines include: All work submitted must be framed, flat work, including photography, drawing, painting or original printwork. Work must be delivered to the Sun Valley Center for the Arts' Ketchum location, at 191 Fifth St. E., by 5 p.m. May 22. The center will display works in groups of 30 (up to 90 total, in two or three 4- to 6-week exhibitions over the course of the summer). Only the first 90 works submitted will be displayed.

For information, submission forms and more guidelines: 726-9491 or www.sunvalleycenter.org.

Old friends, new roles

On stage with West End Theatre Co.

By Erica Littlefield
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — When my high school friend AJ Hoffman called and asked me to be in a play she was going to direct, I just couldn't refuse.

So for the past six weeks I've been rehearsing, memorizing lines and searching for costumes as part of the West End Theatre Co's production of "Men Are Dogs," a comedy by Joe Simonelli.

It's a rare treat for me to be on stage. When I get the chance to work on a smart show with a director like AJ and some of my other high school friends, it makes the experience that much sweeter.

Don't miss opening night of our production, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the West End Senior Citizen Center in Buhl. The show runs through May 9.

Although the title makes the show sound a little one-sided, it's not. "Men are Dogs" isn't just about women bashing men — the men get in their side of the story, too. The play centers around Dr. Cecelia Monahan, a relationship therapist who has trouble keeping her own love life in line, much less those of her patients. I play Madeline, a successful literary agent. Madeline comes to Dr. Monahan because the only reason men date her is to slip her their manuscripts in hopes of getting them published. Needless to say, she's a little frustrated.

Being a part of "Men Are Dogs" has been like a mini high school reunion. I know almost everyone in the cast from my days at Buhl High School, doing plays with the drama department there. I'd kept in touch with some of them, like AJ, and done other shows with them over the years. I hadn't seen some of them since I graduated almost seven years ago. Even Cathe Woods, who plays Dr. Monahan's nosy but well-meaning mother, Rose, was the secretary at the high school while I was there.

Rehearsals have gone like clockwork, partially because we already know each other. That familiarity means it's easier to feel comfortable and trust each other on stage. Cast members Bonnie Berks and Brian Avelar have let us use their houses for rehearsals, and we bring snacks to rehearsal for everyone to share.

AJ has a strong, clear vision for the show, which helped us all get on the same page. (The characters are sailboats afloat in a sea, AJ told us, trying to find their way.

So watch for the nautical motifs on stage.) She explained the reasoning behind her set design (the doc's desk is on a raised platform, reflecting her separation from others). And AJ said that when she decided to direct the show, she also decided to hand-pick her cast.

"That's why I wanted you guys in the show," AJ has told us more than once. "I chose you because you have a pure love of theater."

My favorite part of being in a play is delving into my character, and we've dedicated a good chunk of rehearsal time working on character development. (Madeline, we decided, is feminine, strong, concerned for others.)

AJ asks us thought-provoking questions that help us go beyond the script and make interesting acting choices.

For one rehearsal, AJ had everyone come up with their character's favorite beverage, and what color best represents them. I choose a light, fruity cock-

I studied theater in high school and college, but I knew it would never be my career. That doesn't mean I wanted to give it up and never tread the boards again. I am so grateful that there are opportunities in our community for anyone, whether they have years of experience or none at all, to do quality theater.

Singing janitor headlines Burley Music Club's talent show

Times-News

BURLEY — Burley Music Club will present a talent show starring Mini-Cassia performers at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the King Fine Arts Center's Little Theater.

Proceeds will go to a fund providing scholarships for outstanding junior and senior high school students in Mini-Cassia, plus scholarships to the College of Southern Idaho Music Fest and to Rise Up And Sing! held at Minico High School in July. Talent show tickets are $5 per person and $10 per family, at the door. Featured will be Thom Stimpson, The Singing Janitor from Rupert, who has been a professional singer for eight years. While working at Minico, he discovered good hallway acoustics and began singing. A student dubbed him The Singing Janitor; a DJ picked up the name and it stuck.

Stimpson, whose stage name is Trey Michael Warren, has performed locally and around the country. He has recorded six CDs and was the opening act for country western singer Jana Jae when she appeared at Wal-Mart in 2003. He has done many Mini-Cassia benefits and is always ready to lend a hand for a charitable project.

Stimpson starred in "Countdown to Destruction" and "Surviving Old FruitCakes," two movies filmed in Gooding in 2005.

Also performing will be young Jordan Nilsson, who starred as Oliver in the recent Oakley Valley Arts Council play of the same name. He will appear along with other members of the cast.

Inspired CHAOS

Story and photos by Blair Koch/For the Times-News

Twin Falls High thespians prepare pair of plays

Catina Crum is a girl on a mission, with a handful of tools scattered around her: retractable tape measurer, pencil, utility blade.

Her black jeans are speckled with dust, wood chips and statically charged particles of the foam being used in creation of a set for the Twin Falls High School drama department's presentation of "The House of Bernarda Alba" and its fifth annual children's show, "9 Tails and a Hairy Toe."

With "Bernarda" opening tonight and the children's theater showing next week, the drama department has been scrambling. As set designer, Crum is responsible for creating a stage suitable for the Spanish-themed "Bernarda" and the more modern arrangement of "9 Tails."

Between measuring white styrofoam for the set's columns and referring to her set drawing earlier this week, Crum explained her theory of work.

"We needed an almost timeless set, so it would work for both productions," Crum said.

Utilizing mostly clean shapes salted with arched walkways, large wooden doors and Spanish nuance in the wall columns and high window, Crum feels her vision is coming along nicely.

In "Bernarda," four sisters find themselves living at home, captive to a well-meaning yet controlling mother. All adults, they long for suitors and a chance to live their own lives.

To reflect that situation, Crum built the walls as high as she could. The set, like the costumes and props, will be completely black and white.

"I wanted the characters to seem really small in relation to the home they are basically prisoners of," Crum said. "The large doors are central... very visible but seldom used."

While Crum oversaw spackling, painting and

In preparation for '9 Tails and a Hairy Toe,' Twin Falls High School students created masks and puppets, like this creature. The process was painstaking, but the accomplishment was worth it. The clay masks are custom fitted for their wearers and gave students an opportunity to try the craft.

Twin Falls High School student Catina Crum works with classmate Dalton Mortensen in building a stage which features columns — a Spanish architectural flourish for 'Bernarda,' set in Spain.

stage construction, another group of drama department students prepared masks for "9 Tails," in a utility room behind the stage.

The task of creating the 30 custom masks necessary for the readers theater style of "9 Tails and a Hairy Toe" wasn't an easy one.

First students made plaster molds of their faces — a sticky, dirty and time-intensive process using paper towels and petroleum jelly. Then layers of papier-mache were applied to the molds, building the basic facial structures for characters ranging from cats to wolves to menacing-looking fictional creatures.

Working off drawings produced by show director and Twin Falls High drama department head James Haycock, students sculpted the characters with a hard, gray clay.

Seventeen-year-old Tim Hafer had never sculpted before this assignment. Surprisingly, Hafer has a knack for the art. An inventory of the clay masks shows that other drama students completed the task well, too.

"I started with the face," Hafer said while smoothing a dime-sized portion of clay onto the base of a cat's ear, creating lifelike texture. "At first it didn't really look like anything, but as I kept going and adding clay it just kind of came together."

For classmate Jene Johnson, the process wasn't so natural.

"I can do the papier-mache but can't sculpt at all," Johnson said. "But it has been an experience."

For "9 Tails," drama department members chose 10 of their favorite children's folklore: "The Boy Who Drew Cats," "Cat You Better Come Home," "The Turnip," "How She Kept Her Geese Warm," "The Crane Maiden," "Piggie Pie," "Russell The Sheep," "The Boy Who Cried Wolf," "The Wolves in the Wall" and "The Hairy Toe."

As readers theater, the show features narrators for each tale. Drama students in masks and basic costuming Catina Crum takes a quick phone call while working on set design for the Twin Falls High School productions of 'The House of Bernarda Alba' and '9 Tails and a Hairy Toe.' Crum used modern and Spanish architectural elements so the set would be suitable for both. In her hand is a drawing of how she hopes the completed stage will look.

Twin Falls High School students Nerveta Bektic, front, and Tim Hafer use papier-mache to build up facial features for masks to be used in the children's show '9 Tails and a Hairy Toe.'

PLAN TO GO!

"The House of Bernarda Alba," by Federico Garcia Lorca, will be presented by Twin Falls High School's drama department at 7:30 p.m. today, Saturday, Tuesday, Thursday and May 8-9 at Roper Auditorium. Tickets are $7, at the door. The department will present its fifth annual children's show, "9 Tails and a Hairy Toe," at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, plus a matinee at 2 p.m. May 9. Admission is $5 for adults, and $2 for children 11 and younger. Student discount with activity card. Tickets at the door.

will act out the stories.

Bekir Mustafic gets to portray a wolf in a couple of tales. While the mask remains the same, Mustafic will change up the wolves' characteristics.

"It's exciting to be able to express different aspects," Mustafic said. "In one the wolf is more scary, and in another story he is more relaxed, and I want to have fun with that."

Lynnaya Luttrell, left, David Beach, center, and Amber Wagner of the Random Acts of Theatre Players rehearse for 'Murder Me Always,' April 24 at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Auditorium. The play is about a theater company doing, of course, a murder mystery. But during the performance the director is shot and the hunt is on for a perpetrator among the cast and crew. Audience interaction helps a detective discover whodunit.

New festival tackles difficult pieces

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Ostensibly, this is slack time in the Wood River Valley — when business is slow between ski season and summer.

But choral director Dick Brown isn't cutting his singers any slack.

Brown is taking advantage of slack to start what he hopes becomes an annual music festival. And he's tackling some difficult pieces, both for singers and musicians.

The festival kicks off this weekend with two free performances by Caritas Chorale. It continues Thursday with a harpsichord concert and concludes May 9 with a Mother's Day Eve concert by Anam Cara.

At 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, a 60-voice Caritas

Chorale backed by 13 instruments will sing "Bach Cantata No. 4 'Christ lag in Todes Banden'" and George Frideric Handel's "Coronation Anthem No. 4" at St. Thomas Episcopal Church on Sun Valley Road.

Handel wrote the anthem for King George II, but it has been used at every coronation since. "It's Handel at his most pompous and glorious," Brown said.

The cantata is an extremely mature work that taxes both instrumentalists and singers, Brown said. Each movement ends in "Alleluia," creating a separate mini-resurrection in each movement, Caritas Chorale member Rae DeVito said. The cantata is written in German, marking the first time most of the choir members have sung in German.

"The English translation is included so we know what we're singing even if it's not word for word," choir member Ann Taylor said. "It's a very beautiful composition."

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Boise harpichordist David Tacher, a freelance concert musician and a member of the Boise Baroque Ensemble, will play music composed by Scarlatti, a contemporary of Bach and Handel. The program at St. Thomas Episcopal will be in a lecture recital format where Tacher, who built his own harpichord, will explain how the harpichord works.

It's a benefit concert for Choral Music and Arts in Idaho, so organizers request a donation of $20. No one will be turned away for lack of money, however.

On May 9, a 23-voice Anam Cara will sing

"Music of the Teachers and Predecessors of Bach" at 3 p.m. at St. Thomas Episcopal. The free concert will focus primarily on the music of Heinrich Schultze, of whom Bach was a great admirer.

Interestingly, three of the featured composers of the week — Bach, Handel and Scarlatti — were born in 1685, DeVito said. But while Bach and Handel lived close to each other, they never met. Handel traveled extensively and was wealthy. "Bach ... not so much on either account."

All the concerts except the harpichord concert are free. But donations will be accepted to help pay for the orchestra musicians, sheet music and other expenses.

Karen Bossick may be reached at kbossick@cox-internet.com or 208-578-2111.

Save a few bucks on a summer series of surprising music

Times-News

Knock a few dollars off. The Sun Valley Center for the Arts has put together a variety of ticket packages for its outdoor summer concerts, and tickets go on sale online today.

This summer's lineup:
 • Alex Cuba on June 19 at The Center in Hailey.

• Salsa Celtica on July 18 at Hop Porter Park in Hailey.

• Donavon Frankenreiter and Mishka on Aug. 15 at Atkinson Park in Ketchum.

"If these acts have anything in common, it's that they all subvert traditional expectations of what Cuban music is, or what Scottish music is, or reggae," Kristine Bretall, the center's marketing director, said in a release. "And also that despite their differences, they all play very fun, positive, upbeat music. You may have heard some of these performers and not even known it, but after you hear them, you'll be demanding a CD of your own."

Alex Cuba's trademark island-sweet melodies, pop-soul hooks and rock chords subtly subvert commonly held notions of what Cuban music is. This concert is presented with College of Southern Idaho as the final event of the Summer Spanish Institute. The taco truck will be there, and beer and wine will be available.

Salsa Celtica is an 11-musician Scottish group famed for championing a fusion of salsa music with traditional Scottish sounds played on an eclectic mix of instruments that includes brass, bagpipes, fiddles and congas.

For Donavon Frankenreiter and Mishka's show you'll want to get out your flip-flops, grab a beach blanket, pack up the picnic basket, strap it to your bike and prepare to spend an evening with these two singer-songwriters who have spent a lot of time on beaches.

Ticket packages include: all three concerts, $55 (for kids 12 and younger, $15); and the two July and August concerts, $45 (for kids 12 and younger, $10). Also, the center is, for the first time, offering ticket packages that combine concerts with Wine Auction events. Details are online.

Individual concert tickets: Alex Cuba, $10 ($5 for kids); Salsa Celtica, $20 ($5 for kids); and Frankenreiter/Mishka, $30 ($10 for kids).

Tickets: www.sunvalley-center.org or 726-9491, ext. 10.

BRUINS' BEST YET

T.F. girls blow out golf foes, boys sneak past

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

No matter which way the pendulum swings, the momentum seems to always be in favor of the Twin Falls girls golf team.

On the strength of their best team score this season, the Bruins dominated a Region Four-Five-Six meet against Highland, Skyline, Idaho Falls and Madison as they prepare for the Class 5A state qualifier next week in Pocatello.

Twin Falls' score of 312 was 42 strokes better than runner-up Idaho Falls and 94 better than third-place Highland.

"This is probably our lowest team score we've had all season," said Sara Federico, who was not quite sure of the mark at the time. She shot 75, likely her third best score of 2009, to lead the Bruins. Teammate Hannah McNeley shot 77 to place second, Jenna Sharp's 79 tied for third and Allison Federico's 81 was fifth, giving the Bruins four of the top five scores.

"We're excited going into (the state qualifier)," Federico added. "We really want to win this year again."

The Twin Falls boys team won by a much narrower margin than the girls. The Bruins shot 285 to edge Highland by two strokes. Highland's Brady Smith carded 68 to medal, while teammate Quinn Carbol and Bruins Jordan Hamblin and Derek McDowell tied for second with 69s. Difficulty on the greens made the difference in this meet, according to Carbol.

"I hit the ball good, but I putted like garbage," he said. "I missed a couple of five-footers for birdie. I misread a few, pushed a few. It just wasn't very good putting today."

McDowell had the same assessment about the greens playing hard and fast.

The Buhl Indians haven't forgotten 2007. With that in mind, they're hoping history doesn't repeat itself.

Two seasons ago, Filer entered the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference tournament as the bottom seed, but managed to upset both Buhl and Kimberly, earning a berth to the Class 3A state tournament despite a 9-17 record.

Once again, Filer enters tournament play as the underdog, visiting top-seeded Buhl at 5 p.m., today in a first-round matchup. Despite a 0-6

Fjeld day

Senior pitcher throws Bruins past Bobcats

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

The next time Twin Falls and Burley meet on the softball diamond there will be conference standings on the line.

But for one final go-around on Thursday, the two teams clashed for non-conference bragging rights and the Bruins celebrated senior day with a 4-1 victory.

Katelyn Fjeld allowed no earned runs on three hits while striking out 13 and walking one.

The Bruins (17-9) got on the board with Kelsie Bryant's two-run triple in the first.

Bryant, who has been back just two days after suffering wrist and rib injuries, has had four extra-base hits in three games since returning.

"I'm really sore, actually. I'm just getting back into playing mode," said Bryant, a senior. "Defensively I could probably be better. Offensively I'm seeing the ball really well right now and am able to drive it."

Twin Falls scored two more runs in the second, but Burley shut them down from there.

"We did the same thing (Wednesday) against Highland, scored runs the first inning then just kind of shut it off. We can't do that," said Twin Falls Ken Johnson. "We really have to focus. We talked about just going through the motions and mailing in some at bats."

Fjeld and the Bruin defense retired the first 11 Buhl batters in order. The Bobcats spoiled the shutout in the sixth when Erika Doman reached on Bryant's throwing error, then scored on Tayler Bowers' double.

Twin Falls loaded the bases with no outs in the fifth inning, but came away with no runs.

"We played good, but we need to keep our intensity up and not shut down after three innings," Bryant said. Burley (17-8) pitcher Molly Mills struck out eight, scattered seven hits and walked two.

"We weren't really strong with our bats," said Burley coach Tim Campbell. "We've got some work to do (Friday) night in practice to get ready for our conference tournament on Saturday. We'll be ready to go."

The Bobcats plays Wood

River in the first round of Great Basin Conference West tournament at Jerome High School on Saturday.

BUHL - As has been the case all season, there was simply no stopping the Raft River Trojans on Thursday.

The tracksters from Malta sprinted and jumped their way to a sweep of the team championships at the Southside Conference meet, with the girls winning in particularly impressive style.

Raft River won the girls meet with 204.5 points, more than second place Shoshone (101) and third place Castelford (80) combined to earn. The Trojans were led by their usual suspect - senior Sally Hansen, who swept the sprints and easily won the long jump competition.

Hansen's long jump of 17 feet, 8.5 inches matched her season best, and with a swirling wind it was something of a comfort to at least match her best, though she admitted she wasn't wholly satisfied with a jump that would rank her near or at the top of the Class 1A leaderboard.

"You try not to think about things like that, but it really does affect you," Hansen said of the stiff breeze, which came from her back at one moment and across the runway the next. "You can really tell if it's getting to me in the way I hit the board. Usually I'm consistent and today I was scratching and just not hitting it well. All things considered it's good to match it, but I have a goal (to break 18 feet) and I'm not going to be satisfied until I get it."

CeAnn Carpenter and Whitney Holtman also helped grab an additional 50 points for the Trojans, teaming with Kassie Ottley and Hailey Higley to win three relays and each taking an individual event as well. Carpenter won the high jump and Holtman took the 300 hurdles.

Taylor Astle of Shoshone, defending state champion in the 3,200, won both long-distance races.

The Raft River boys won by just seven points over Oakley, but the drama was far from limited to the final team standings - in fact, it started with the first race of the day.

Trojan distance runner Colten Gilbert led for all but about 250 meters of the 3,200-meter race, but Castelford's Houston Horner - who sat tucked behind Gilbert for most of the race - bolted midway through the final lap, racing well past Gilbert to win in a time of 11 minutes, 26 seconds.

Horner said his plan was to let Gilbert lead the charge into the wind for most of the race, hoping it would sap some energy for the closing stages when Horner made his move. The NASCAR-style slingshot draft move paid off when Gilbert couldn't reply to Horner's dead sprint over the closing meters.

"At that point, you're feeling really sick and tired but you've got to put everything into it," Horner said. "Honestly, I was surprised that (Gilbert) didn't beat me in that one, but once I got past him I just thought about running all the way to the end."

Gilbert got the last laugh, however, beating Horner to

There will be no repeat of last year.

If Kimberly wins the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference tournament, as it did in 2008, the Buhl softball squad won't get the opportunity to upset its rival when it matters most. The Indians won't get to defend their Class 3A state championship.

This year, District IV only gets one state berth. If the Tribe wants to upset the Bulldogs, who went

CSI baseball on deck

This weekend's doubleheaders: Eastern Utah (17-30, 12-23 SWAC) at CSI (28-22, 21-15 SWAC), 1 p.m., Friday; noon, Saturday.

CSI last week: 4-0 at Colorado Northwestern (W 16-1, W 15-5, W 7-1, W 15-8).

CEU last week: 1-2 vs. Southern Nevada (L 9-4, L 9-4, W 4-1, Game 4 suspended due to rain).

Last time they met: CSI swept Eastern Utah in four slugfests in Price, Utah, five weeks ago, winning 22-10, 18-7, 9-7 and 10-7.

About the (other) Golden Eagles: CEU is no slouch, as evidenced by a pair of wins against Southern Nevada this season, including one during last weekend's three-game set (the fourth was suspended due to rain with Southern Nevada leading 17-0 in the fourth inning). The Golden Eagles are led offensively by Brett Nigbur, a catcher with a .375 batting average and 11 doubles, and third baseman Eric Morgan, who has belted five home runs. Lefty Brennan Hallows leads the starting rotation with a 4.17 ERA and a 5-2 record. If CEU can get the ball to closer Cameron Schmidt, who has six saves and a 3.04 ERA, with the lead, the Golden Eagles can prove tough.

Boomer's breakdown: "I don't look at this weekend as having nothing to play for (even though CSI will finish third no matter what). We'll play these four games just like we have the last 50. We've been telling the players that they can't feel like there's no more room for improvement, because there is, and we want to be playing well heading into the region tournament next week."

— CSI head coach Boomer Walker

On deck: CSI opens the Region 18 Tournament (likely in Carson City, Nev.) against Colorado Northwestern on Wednesday.

Recruiting news: CSI inked its eighth recruit for 2009-10, signing P/B Caleb Olson of Juan Diego Catholic High School in Draper, Utah, to a NJCAA National Letter of Intent. Walker also told the Times-News that current sophomores Tyler Curtis and Alex Hancock have committed to BYU.

Zimmerman named NJCAA player of the week

College of Southern Idaho sophomore Megan Zimmerman was named the NJCAA Division I Softball Player of the Week for her performance last week against Western Nevada College.

The catcher/short-stop hit five home runs last week to break the young program's season home run record. She leads the Scenic West Athletic Conference and NJCAA Division I with 23 home runs and is one away from tying the NJCAA Division I record. She batted .785 last week with 11 hits, 10 runs and nine RBIs, moving her record-setting season total to 80. In addition to the five home runs, Zimmerman had two doubles, five stolen bases and a walk.

This weekend's doubleheader: No. 10 College of Southern Idaho (41-15-2, 32-10 SWAC) at College of Southern Nevada (31-19, 26-15 SWAC); 1 p.m. Friday; noon Saturday

CSI last week: 4-0 against Western Nevada College (W 9-0, W 21-0, W 6-3, W 11-1)

Southern Nevada last week: 1-2 against Snow College (L 5-1, W 3-2, L 4-3, fourth game cancelled)

Last meeting: The Golden Eagles swept CSN back in early March, earning two shutouts for the first day's doubleheader.

About the Coyotes: CSN has fallen on hard times lately. The Coyotes have lost four of their last five games after back-to-back sweeps of Colorado Northwestern Community College and Western Nevada College. Allison Barr and Janice Damo are batting over .400, and Damo has 44 RBIs. She (8-6) and Mandy Tapia (12-8) have ERAs over 3.30.

Nick's notes: "The first few years we've been down there, it's a place where we haven't played very well. It's kind of nice to have that weekend to get our kids through the fire before the region tournament. That's an exciting weekend. We'll see two good pitchers in Tapia and Damo. That's good going into the region tournament as well, to see some quality pitching. Southern Nevada always plays good defense, so I think it'll be a good test for us this weekend."

— CSI head coach Nick Baumer

On deck: CSI will vie for its second Region 18 Tournament title next week in Salt Lake City.

Wadsworth, Wilson dominating in District VI

Times-News

Cody Wadsworth of Kimberly and Kindee Wilson of Filer are two of the most consistent rodeo participants in the Magic Valley. Wilson has held the top spot in the girls overall standings in the District VI since the opening weekend and Wadsworth moved into first place following the second rodeo in Buhl in early April.

Katie Vierstra of Filer (179) remains in the runner-up position in the girls standings, trailing Wilson (203) by 24 points and Amanda Coats of Kimberly is third with 164.

In the boys overall standings, Raul Hurtado (104) of Oakley trails Wadsworth (135) by 31 points and Wyatt Holtman of Raft River is third with 96.

In the girls rookie race, Kyndal Stradley of Filer leads with 120 points. Jade Wadsworth of Kimberly leads the boys' rookie race.

The District VI is in Burley today and Saturday with performances at 7 p.m., today and 1 p.m., Saturday.

SENIORS AND FRESHMAN TOP ALL-AROUND DISTRICT V STANDINGS

The overall standings in the District V have taken on some interesting scenarios. Two senior cowboys are vying for the all-around cowboy and two freshman girls are currently competing for the top all-around cowgirl.

Cy Eames is first in the boys overall standings with 111 points, giving the senior cowboy a 36-point lead over Gooding teammate Justin Parke (75). Eames has 36 points and is the No. 1 steer wrestler but only two points separate Eames from Luke Hubert of Dietrich (34).

The girls overall race and girls rookie race is a tight one with freshman Haillie Taylor of Wood River with holding only a two point margin (96-94) over Valley freshman Valene Lickley.

Kimberly boys, girls claim Dairyman's titles

Times-News

On the strength of their relay teams, the Kimberly boys and girls raced past the field to win team titles at the Dairyman's Invitational in Gooding on Thursday.

Kimberly won five of the eight relays in total, and the girls picked up some important wins in the distance races (winning the 400, 800 and 1,600) and the jumping events (long jump, triple jump). Only Lexa Murphy was a repeat winner in those five events, winning the 400 and the long jump.

Buhl freshman Clara Comer won the 100 and 200.

For the Kimberly boys, Keegan Brady won the long jump and finished second in the 100 and 200, both losses coming to Spanish speedster Bertrand Alcaraz Garcia of Buhl.

Nathan Ormond of Wendell won the high jump and the triple jump.

Bulls top Celtics in three-overtime thriller

CHICAGO — One more thriller, and now, the Chicago Bulls and Boston Celtics will play a decisive seventh game. Derrick Rose scored 28 points and blocked Rajon Rondo's potential game-winner, John Salmons scored 35, and the Bulls beat the defending champions 128-127 in triple overtime Thursday night to tie the first-round series at three games apiece.

Ray Allen scored a career playoff-high 51 points for the Celtics, but the series will go back to Boston for Game 7 on Saturday after another classic battle in a series that had already seen its share of drama.

Three of the first five games went to overtime, including one that needed two extra periods. Another came down to the wire in regulation, but this easily trumped them all. Rondo penetrated and pulled up on the left block with 8 seconds left and turned, only to be rejected by Rose. The rookie of the year then missed two free throws with 3.2 seconds remaining, before Rondo launched a harmless heave from beyond midcourt.

That ended the game. The series, however, continues.

Tied at 123 in the third OT, Joakim Noah stole the ball and broke upcourt for layup, got fouled by Paul Pierce and hit the free throw with 35.5 seconds remaining. Eddie House quickly answered with a corner jumper, his feet on the 3-point arc, to pull the Celtics within 126-125, but Chicago's Brad Miller then hit two free throws to get the lead back up to three with 28 seconds left.

The Celtics weren't finished, though.

A driving Rondo put back his own miss to make it a one-point game, and then he got a break when Kirk Hinrich missed a layup with Rondo's hand in the cylinder — which would have been goaltending. But the Bulls prevailed in the end.

Allen was simply spectacular for Boston, finishing

ROSE, MAYO UNANIMOUS ALL-ROOKIE PICKS

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie of the Year Derrick Rose of the Chicago Bulls and Memphis guard O.J. Mayo are unanimous selections to the All-Rookie team. Rounding out the first team announced Thursday were Oklahoma City's Russell Westbrook, New Jersey center Brook Lopez and Miami forward Michael Beasley.

three points shy of John Havlicek's club playoff record and tying the NBA playoff mark with nine 3-pointers. Glen Davis added 23 points and Pierce scored 22.

ROCKETS 92, TRAIL BLAZERS 76 HOUSTON — For the first time in 12 years, the Houston Rockets advanced in the NBA playoffs.

Ron Artest scored 27 points, Yao Ming had 17 points and 10 rebounds and Houston reached the second round for the first time since 1997, beating the Portland Trail Blazers 92-76 in Game 6 on Thursday night.

Aaron Brooks scored 13 points and Shane Batter tied a career playoff-high with nine rebounds as the Rockets won for the first time in their last seven first-round series. They lost Game 6s the last two seasons, both to Utah.

Houston put this one away with a big second quarter and moves on to play the top-seeded Los Angeles Lakers on Monday night at the Staples Center. The Lakers won all four meetings in the regular season.

MAGIC 114, 76ERS 89 PHILADELPHIA — Playing without suspended star

Dwight Howard and injured guard Courtney Lee, Orlando beat Philadelphia in Game 6 to advance to the second round of the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Howard, who was suspended one game by the NBA for his elbow on Sixers center Samuel Dalembert in Game 5, will return when the Magic play the winner of the Boston-Chicago series.

Rashard Lewis scored 29 points and Rafer Alston had 21 to help the Magic win on the road for the second time this series. The Magic's decisive run came early when they made 12 of their first 19 shots.

Alston hit two 3-pointers during the Magic's fast start that put them up 15 and quickly negated the home crowd. J.J. Redick made all three 3-point attempts in the first half and ably filled in for Lee, who had surgery on his fractured sinus Thursday and could possibly be out two more weeks.

Nearly perfect: Gaza leads Rays past Sox

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Tampa Bay's Matt Garza took a perfect game into the seventh inning and Evan Longoria homered and drove four runs to help the AL Championship Series MVP shut down the Boston Red Sox 13-0 on Thursday night.

Jacoby Ellsbury fouled off an 0-2 pitch and took two balls before hitting a squibber past Garza leading off the seventh. The crowd of 20,341 gave the pitcher a standing ovation, and the right-hander got back on track by getting Dustin Pedroia to ground into a double play.

Garza (2-2) threw 75 of his 108 pitches for strikes, walked one and struck out 10.

Longoria had a three-run double off Josh Beckett (2-2) and hit his sixth homer of the season — a solo shot in the sixth inning — off Hunter Jones. Michel Hernandez also hit first career homer off Beckett, who allowed seven runs and 19 hits in 4 2-3 innings.

ROYALS 8, BLUE JAYS 6 KANSAS CITY, Mo. — John Buck tripled twice and drove in five runs, and the Royals tied a club record by turning six double plays in beating the Blue Jays.

The Royals took three of four from the Blue Jays, who hit town on Monday leading the AL East with the best record in the majors. Toronto, for the first time in team history, had started the year by winning six consecutive series of at least three games.

YANKEES 7, ANGELS 4 NEW YORK — Melky Cabrera spoiled Angels manager Mike Scioscia's strategy, hitting a tiebreaking single in the eighth that led the Yankees to their third straight win.

After an intentional walk to Nick Swisher loaded the bases with one out, Cabrera hit an RBI single on the first pitch from Justin Speier (0-1) for a 5-4 lead. Ramiro Pena followed with a two-run double for his first RBIs in the majors.

ATHLETICS 4, RANGERS 2 ARLINGTON, Texas — Dallas Braden pitched five scoreless innings and Ryan Sweeney made a game-saving catch for Oakland.

The Rangers had two on in the eighth when Ian Kinsler hit a towering flyball to straightaway center. Sweeney retreated, leaped and stuck his glove above the wall to make the play.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MARLINS 8, CUBS 2, 10 INNINGS CHICAGO — Jorge Cantu hit a three-run double in the 10th inning after Florida tied it on a throwing error by Carlos Marmol in the eighth and the Marlins beat the Chicago Cubs.

Alfredo Amezaga doubled and scored on a Ryan Theriot's fielding error for the go-ahead run in the 10th and Cantu homered and drove in four runs for the Marlins. Florida tied it in the eighth when Marmol threw away Maybin's sacrifice attempt.

BREWERS 4, DIAMONDBACKS 1 MILWAUKEE — Milwaukee jumped on Arizona's bullpen for a four-run seventh after being shut out for six innings by Max Scherzer, then held on to win.

It was another momentum-building victory for the Brewers, who got their longest — and best — out-inning of the season from starter Jeff Suppan. Coming off a three-game sweep of Pittsburgh, Milwaukee has won eight of its last nine games after a rough start to the season.

CARDINALS 9, NATIONALS 4 WASHINGTON — Rick Ankiel hit a tiebreaking RBI double in St. Louis' five-run ninth inning and the Cardinals beat Washington for their eighth victory in 10 games.

Chris Duncan sparked the decisive rally with a one-out walk off Julian Tavarez (0-2). Ankiel then sliced a double into the left-field corner and the ball bounced away from Adam Dunn as Duncan scored. — The Associated Press

A-Rod hits homer, mum on allegations

NEW YORK (AP) — A new, unflattering biography of Alex Rodriguez reportedly says he may have used steroids as early as high school and even after he joined the New York Yankees.

Rodriguez admitted in February to using steroids while with the Texas Rangers from 2001-03, but insisted he stopped before he was traded to the Yankees in February 2004. He brushed off a question Thursday about details from Sports Illustrated writer Selena Roberts' upcoming book "A-Rod" that cast doubt on his earlier statements.

"I'm not going there," he said after homering in an extended spring training intrasquad game in Tampa, Fla. Rodriguez has been rehabbing from hip surgery in March and hasn't played for the Yankees this season.

"I'm just so excited about being back on the field and playing baseball. My team has won two games (in a row) up there and hopefully I can come back and help them win some more," he said.

The Daily News reported Thursday that Roberts' book portrays the three-time AL MVP as a needy personality who wanted his ego stroked constantly and a player who tipped opponents to pitches in blowout games, hoping the favor would get returned someday.

The paper didn't say how it obtained a copy of the Harper Collins book, scheduled for release Monday.

A high school teammate of A-Rod's told Roberts that the future No. 1 draft pick was on steroids as a prep player and his coach knew it — an allegation the coach, Rich Hofman, denied.

"What would be alarming is if somebody didn't work and got a lot bigger," Hofman told The Associated Press on Thursday night. "But the fact is, he was the hardest-working guy around. No reason to be alarmed. I was in the weight room, I was in the classroom, I was in the field every day that he was there. And the work ethic was definitely there."

But, Hofman said it would be "far-fetched" to say that he kept track of his star player's every movement.

"I didn't follow him home everyday," he said. "I wasn't his parent. I took care of him at school, I gave him the best advice I could give him about how to live his life. And after that, it's up to him."

Rodriguez said he wasn't worried that the steroids issue was being brought up again.

"No. Not really," he said. "I'm in a good place. I think more importantly physically I feel like I'm getting better everyday. We've had a great week here. We've worked extremely hard, and I'm just very anxious to do what God put me on this earth to do, to play baseball."

mark in SCIC games, the Wildcats' recent history means Buhl coach Troy Ruhter and his players won't be taking Filer lightly.

"That's something we're very aware of," Ruhter said of Filer's improbable run to state two seasons ago.

Still, the real focus for the Tribe is inward as the Indians work to correct what Ruhter calls "our Achilles' heel."

"We need to cut down on our errors and play a clean game," he said. "We can't beat ourselves."

Do that, and Buhl (14-9, 5-1 SCIC) should have a good chance to advance. But second-seeded Wendell and No. 3 Kimberly won't be easy outs.

Wendell comes in 10-5 overall and 4-2 in conference play, having split with both Buhl and Kimberly during the regular season.

"I know we can play with those teams," said Wendell coach Jesse Koopman.

Buhl and Wendell would meet in the semifinals on Saturday if each wins today. Both squads look forward to the potential matchup, especially after the Indians edged the Trojans 6-5 on April 23 behind the pitching of James Leckenby.

Koopman said his ace, Nolan Stouder (2.25 ERA), struggled in that game. If Stouder gets the nod on Saturday and is back to his usual form, "I think we can match up well," Koopman said.

But first things first, namely, today's openers. For Wendell, that means a tough test against Kimberly, which beat the Trojans 7-1 in Wendell on March 24. Wendell eked out an 8-7 win at Kimberly on April 24, but will have its hands full today.

The top-seeded Tribe didn't lose a single SCIC game in 2008 and nearly repeated that feat this year. Leckenby hit .389 with 27 RBIs, while recording five home runs, five triples and four doubles. Sophomore Matt Hamilton hit .415 as one of five Buhl players batting better than .300. He had three homers and eight doubles to go with 18 RBIs.

Markus Lively is expected to start on the mound for Buhl today. Leckenby has been recovering from mid-season arm issues and could continue to play the role of closer. If that happens, he'll likely relieve Dylan Brooks in Saturday's game.

"He really shuts the door on guys and produces a lot of ground balls," said Ruhter of Leckenby.

As for Wendell, Keith Mowery (3.19 ERA) and Gary Koopman (1.17 ERA) both have reliable arms to complement Stouder and his 74 strikeouts. At the plate, five members of the Trojans' regular rotation hit .313 or better, topped by Ryan Slade, who is batting .556 with a team-high 14 RBIs. Stouder hits .444, while catcher Jasper Peterson is batting .357.

"Filer proved that a lower seed can still make a lot of noise," said Jesse Koopman, referencing the 2007 tournament. "Baseball's a funny thing and really anything can happen."

Baffert back at Derby with serious contender

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bob Baffert had so much success in his early years at the Kentucky Derby he thought it would go on forever. Three wins in six years will do that. Then karma caught up and sent him into a humbling slide.

He's hoping to change his luck Saturday, when he saddles Pioneerof the Nile, the early co-second choice in the morning line. The colt is Baffert's first serious contender since he won his third Derby in 2002.

"He has the fight in him," he said.

For the first time in a while, so does Baffert.

"I've been obsessed with the Derby, but how can you not be? Any trainer that doesn't want to win the Derby needs to take another job," he said.

Baffert nearly won America's most famous horse race in his first try in 1996. Cavonnier lost by a nose to Grindstone and trainer D. Wayne Lukas, igniting a rivalry between the veteran and the brash newcomer.

"There was a time we just couldn't stand each other," Baffert said. "He raised the bar and I was trying to get to it."

It didn't take long. Baffert won the following year with Silver Charm and repeated in 1998 with Real Quiet.

"I've spoiled myself," he said. "It was getting to the point where I thought,

Baffert

KENTUCKY DERBY
2 p.m., Saturday, NBC

"Oh, this is easy!" Then the Derby gods intervened.

Baffert kept finding a way to show up on the first Saturday in May, failing each time to get anywhere near the winner's circle.

"I've been in the paddock and saddled horses and just felt nothing," he said. "I told my wife Jill, 'I'm not going to bring a horse up here if I feel like I don't have a chance.' It's just not fun for me."

Baffert hit rock bottom in 2001 after Point Given, sent off as the 9-5 favorite, was second turning for home and wound up fifth. His other horse, Congaree, led with a quarter-mile to go only to get beaten by four lengths. In 2002, he picked up War Emblem three weeks before the Derby and the colt scored a gate-to-wire victory, finally returning Baffert to a familiar spot and the joy of hoisting that gold cup.

"Every time you win one, it's like winning your first," he said. "Your whole life passes in front of you." Small wonder, then, that Louisville feels like home to the Southern California-based trainer. He met Jill, his second wife, at Churchill Downs and now their 4-year-old son, Bode, returns with them.

Woods jumps out to the lead at Quail Hollow

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Masters is over. The Tiger & Phil show might just be getting started.

Tiger Woods matched the course record with a 30 on the front nine, where he closed with three straight birdies Thursday morning to finish off a 7-under 65 at the Quail Hollow Championship. Phil Mickelson followed in the afternoon by chipping in for eagle and making a remarkable par save from under a video board for a 5-under 67 that put him in a tie for second.

They did not play together, as was the case three weeks ago in an electric final-round pairing at Augusta National. But on a warm and breezy afternoon in Carolina, it seemed as though they were never far apart.

A few fans taunted Woods early in his round, calling out, "Let's go, Phil!" as he walked by.

Mickelson couldn't escape a familiar name even as he lumbered to the finish, as fans called out, "You're only two shots behind Tiger!"

Even so, the Quail Hollow Championship served up quite an appetizer on a course that even was reminiscent of Augusta with virtually no rough and slick greens.

Tiger Woods chews on his pencil following his first round in the Quail Hollow Championship golf tournament at the Quail Hollow Club in Charlotte, N.C., Thursday. Woods finished the round at 7-under par.

The emphasis was not accuracy off the tee as much as wizardry with the short game, and both players were up to the task.

Woods was plodding along the back nine, failing to birdie either of the par 5s, until he ran off six birdies and two splendid par saves on the front nine. After twice putting himself in tough positions, he hit a low pitch out of a swale on the second hole to a foot, then hit another wedge that stopped a few inches next to the cup on the fourth.

"I hit a couple of loose shots here and there, but I really putted well," Woods said. "I had a couple of key saves — made a nice little up-and-down at 2 and just a really good save at 4 that kept the round going. It's always nice when you birdie the last three."

undefeated in conference play again, they'll have to do it now.

The Indians (17-4, 4-2 SCIC) are led by freshman Kendyl Hamilton, who is batting .516 with seven home runs and a .552 on-base percentage and 93 percent fielding as second baseman. Shortstop Mercedes Pearson is hitting .407 with 21 bases stolen, and center fielder Autumn Yturbe has recorded a .410 average with 19 stolen.

The Bulldogs (20-3, 6-0) look as strong as they did last year, when they put together a 26-0 record heading into the state bracket. Head coach Rich Bishop said that it's difficult to compare the situation with last year.

"It's hard to tell," he said. "We're not as senior-laden as last year. We don't have that experience. I don't know what that does for us, but we have strong kids. We're playing better now than last year. Young kids are starting to play well. We're playing better, but I don't know if we're a better team."

Averie Schroeder leads the Bulldogs with a .507 batting average, 37 runs scored and 32 RBIs. Alex Pfefferle, Nellie Makings, Whitney Carlton and Jandy Altomose are all hitting more than .400. Ace pitcher Makings is 13-1 this season with a 0.26 ERA and 128 strikeouts. She's surrendered just three earned runs and walked eight.

Then there's Wendell and Filer, two teams that were bounced around by Kimberly and Buhl all season. But they're not deterred as it only takes a few victories to become a spoiler and put another team out of contention.

Buhl coach Shelly Hart said that Filer was the first order of business and can't be overlooked.

"Obviously, we're playing two very tough teams," Filer coach Todd Marsing said. "It makes it a tough deal, but I believe if we come to play, we can play. We've got a team that's well rounded. We've just struggled with the bats this year. If we can get the bats going, we can play with anyone. I'm excited about it."

2009 SATURN SKY ROADSTER

THE INSTANT CLASSIC!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media
Corporation

The rear-wheel drive Saturn Sky roadster has helped to usher in an impressive product renaissance at GM's "Different kind of car company" division. What's new for the Saturn roadster for the 2009 model year includes: OnStar 8.0 hardware which includes Bluetooth hands-free phone connection (std Red Line, opt included in Premium Trim Package); new 18-inch aluminum alloy wheel in three finishes; Ruby Red Limited Edition and Hydro Blue Limited Edition promotional packages include new split spoke wheel; new exterior colors Evening Blue, Ruby Red and Hydro Blue (replaces Midnight Blue, Bluestone and Carbon Flash).

The base Sky roadster is powered by an Ecotec 2.4L four-cylinder engine with variable valve timing (VVT) and mated to an Aisin MA5 five-speed manual gearbox. A Hydramatic 5L40 electronic five-speed automatic is an available option.

For those who desire more performance, there is the Sky Red Line. With power supplied from an Ecotec 2.0L direct injection turbo engine, the Sky Red Line is GM's highest specific output engine ever at 2.1 hp per cubic displacement and the most powerful production engine in the Ecotec family.

Exterior differences for the Red Line compared to the base Sky roadster features: dual polished aluminum exhaust outlets, 18-inch polished aluminum alloy wheels, a unique front lower fascia which includes functional brake cooling vents and a larger mesh pattern for improved air flow.

The Red Line headlamp appearance is also different, with black bezels replacing the Sky's bright chrome.

The Sky roadster starts with a near 50/50 weight distribution, which delivers wonderfully balanced performance and handling in spirited driving. Control hardware includes a four-wheel independent short/long arm suspension with Bilstein coil-over monotube shocks, and front/rear hollow stabilizers bars with ball-joint links.

The Sky Red Line is equipped with a performance-tuned suspension that includes large stabilizer bars, stiff springs and unique shock tuning.

Inside the cabin, the Sky's interior is driver-focused, with integrated controls and displays and premium materials. Creative use of contemporary, upscale black and chrome finishes combine with available leather seats and technical grains to emphasize richness and precision. Jeweled detailing on the HVAC and other controls is executed with tight fits, highlighting the attention to detail.

The roadster's manual fabric top is easy to operate. The rear hinged deck lid closes over the entire mechanism, hiding everything in a seamless flow of sheet metal; with no visible evidence the vehicle has a top neatly stowed in its rear compartment.

2009 Saturn Sky Roadster By The Numbers

PRICING
The base Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price (MSRP) for the 2009 Saturn Sky roadster starts from $27,595 for the base model and $31,905 for the Red Line. Destination charges add $620.

When this deal occurred in the European Open Tournament in Menton, the South players were split between opening three clubs, four clubs and five clubs. Where the opening bid was five clubs, West doubled and East sat it out, collecting 200.

By contrast, after a three-club opening, West could double, bid three hearts, or bid three no-trump. There is a lot to be said for the winning action of three no-trump because the pre-emptive opening has warned about poor breaks, and here West has very soft values.

But the sure winner, as an opening bid, was four clubs. West had little choice but to double. As this double is usually more take-out oriented than a double of a five-level contract, all the Easts bid four spades. This resulted in 500 in the other direction.

Had the East players passed the double, they would have scored even worse, since four clubs would have scored plus 710 for North-South, but only if South was careful. On a top-heart lead, South wins and must ruff a spade rather than a heart to hand, then lead out the club queen (just in case there is a bare jack). Now declarer can ruff another major-suit card to hand to draw trump, losing just two clubs and a diamond. Note that if South ruffs a heart to hand at trick two, West can win the first trump and lead a third heart to score his side's remaining trumps separately.

ANSWER: Which did you open with, one heart or one no-trump? It is a fair rule of hand valuation to treat a five-card suit as worth an extra point. On that basis this hand might equate to an 18-count and be worth a one-heart bid. But the hand has two significant negatives: there are no intermediates in the long-suit, and the doubleton club honors are not pulling their full weight. That puts you back to a one-no-trump bid.

Case No. CV 09-1708
 AMENDED NOTICE OF HEARING ON NAME CHANGE
 In Re:
BROOKLYN ROSE REILLY
 Legal name of child.

A Petition to change the name of Brooklyn Rose Reilly, born February 3, 2009 in Twin Falls, Idaho, residing at 3651 N 3100 E, Twin Falls, State of Idaho, has been filed in Twin Falls County District Court, Idaho.

The reason for the name change is because Mr. Denton is the biological father of the minor child; he is responsible for child support and wishes for the child to share he and his other daughter's last name.

The child's father is living.
 The child's mother is living.

A hearing on the petition is scheduled for 9:00 AM on the 18th day of May, 2009, at the County Courthouse. Objections may be filed by any person who can show the court a good reason against the name change.

SALES

www.elkodaily.com

Advertising Sales Director

The Elko Daily Free Press is seeking a focused, creative Advertising Sales Director with an affinity for numbers and a passion for investing in account executives that employ a relentless curiosity in discovering and meeting real customer needs. Ad Director candidates should have a track record of successful sales supervisory experience in a fast-paced business.

We need someone who will spend a significant portion of each week outside the office, calling on both current customers and non-advertisers with our account executives. The Advertising Sales Director will work to systematically increase the number of active advertisers in the Elko Daily Free Press and the frequency with which they advertise with us.

If you prefer to invest your time coaching account executives in the regular practice of "needs-analysis" rather than in the creation of short-term, product-focused revenue "fixes", we want to talk to you.

The Advertising Sales Director will oversee seven retail/classified account executives, as well as several graphic artists and an experienced support staff. They will be a vital contributor to creating the online future of the newspaper and will be a collegial member of the management team charged with setting the course for future success.

The Elko Daily Free Press provides a meaningful work environment for our employees, rewards innovation and risk-taking, and offers opportunities for career development. In addition to the Elko Daily Free Press, the Advertising Sales Director will oversee sales into The Finder, Northern Nevada Real Estate, Mining Quarterly, a variety of other niche publications and our online newspaper www.elkodaily.com.

Elko is a vibrant northern Nevada gold-mining town located along Interstate 80, with an established gaming/hospitality industry, a strong community college and a thriving retail and manufacturing base. Elko has over 300 days of sunshine annually and is in close proximity to unlimited four-season recreational opportunities.

The Advertising Sales Director position offers a competitive salary, excellent benefits package, and career progression possibilities within Lee Enterprises. If interested in this excellent opportunity, please apply online at <http://www.elkodaily.com/workhere/>

Mother of groom makes big trouble for small wedding

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice — fast! My daughter, "Julie," is being married in July to a wonderful young man I'll call "Denny," who is also an only child. Julie and Denny planned a small, intimate wedding with close friends and family to be held in our prize-winning flower garden. The guest list was limited to 50, so my sister is catering the happy day.

Now, suddenly, Denny's mother bought another 200 invitations and mailed them out! At last count, we have 180 guests! I thought the guest list was up to the bride and groom. Not only is there not enough room in our garden, but no parking! We live in a small, gated community, and our covenants do not allow for that many cars. Must we find another venue for the wedding or can we tell mom-in-law-to-be she was out of line?

— FUTURE MOTHER-IN-LAW
DEAR FUTURE M.I.L.: What Denny's mother did was extremely presumptuous. However, this is not your problem, so please don't make it so.

Inform Denny's mother that entertaining more than 50 wedding guests on your property is forbidden by the codes, covenants and restrictions in your community and that she must now call every one of the guests she invited and rescind the invitation. Then alert the security personnel that only those on the original guest list are to be admitted. Please understand that you and your daughter have my deepest sympathy, because this is only the opening salvo in the power struggle that's to come with this nery woman — so be prepared.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 years old and, aside from my wedding day, I have never worn makeup. Several people have told me that "every woman needs makeup." I have pretty good skin, so I just brush them off and continue going without.

Lately, however, I have noticed that my cheeks and forehead are a bit more red than the rest of my face, and I would like to try some foundation or something to help even out my complexion. I'm not looking to go from zero to 60; I just want to start with the basics. I'm just not sure where to start.

I am wary of beauty consultants who will try to sell me overpriced stuff that I don't need. Also, I am afraid my husband, who has been fine with my "au naturel" appearance, will wonder why I'm all of a sudden interested in makeup. We have a great marriage, but he has mentioned in the past how glad he is that I don't wear makeup because it is messy and time-consuming. Can you give me some advice?

— MAKEUP-CHALLENGED IN TEXAS

DEAR MAKEUP-CHALLENGED: I'll gladly share some important beauty advice with you. It's something I learned in my 20s.

When it comes to your skin, your best friend is a good dermatologist. He or she can determine whether this change in your complexion is "cosmetic" or a symptom of an underlying medical problem. It could be something as simple as an allergy to the soap you are using, but you need to find out what is causing the irritation rather than trying to cover it up.

DEAR ABBY: You once published a beautiful short poem having to do with the value of reading to children. Encore, encore!

— MOMMY INTACOMA

DEAR MOMMY: With pleasure. It is from a poem titled "The Reading Mother" and was written by Strickland Gillilan.

"You may have tangible wealth untold;

"Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.

"Richer than I you can never be —

"I had a mother who read to me."

IF MAY 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Important opportunities could entail extra responsibilities. Put key ideas or business plans into motion before the end of this month and people will tend to respect your credentials and astute handling of financial matters. In July you might be a bit gullible about a certain relationship because you are floating on a sea of romance; it is a good month for a vacation or travel. It is best to wait until August or December to make decisions that will affect your future or to evaluate a new love interest. During those months your judgment is better than usual and others will be very generous with their praise, as well as their wallets, so it is a good time to ask for favors or advancement.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concentrate on work, career and reputation, even if a partner is in relentless pursuit. There will be plenty of time for amorous appointments later this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You might suffer through a brief period of boredom, but it is for your own good. Everything will work out for the best if you carefully ignore a passing GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep everything above-board and open, rather than hiding worries. You will find that praise and compliments are more valuable than criticism.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have a knack for detail so pay the bills or balance the checkbook. Spend time in intense soul searching; be sure you don't desire something just because someone else has it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): One-on-one relationships might remain tense for another day. Don't push important issues or tempt fate by forcing a compromise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can't successfully call in favors now. If you try to buy your way into someone's good graces or show off your success, you will end up paying through the nose.

Today is Friday, May 1, the 121st day of 2009. There are 244 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: One hundred years ago, on May 1, 1909, Walter Reed General Hospital (later a part of Walter Reed Army Medical Center) in Washington, D.C., admitted its first patients.

On this date: In 1707, the Kingdom of Great Britain was created as a treaty merging England and Scotland took effect.

In 1786, Mozart's opera "The Marriage of Figaro" premiered in Vienna.

In 1884, construction began on the first skyscraper, a 10-story structure in Chicago built by the Home Insurance Co. of New York.

In 1893, the World's Columbian Exposition opened to the public in Chicago.

In 1898, Commodore George Dewey gave the command, "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley;" as an American naval force destroyed a Spanish squadron in Manila Bay during the Spanish-American War.

In 1931, New York's 102-story Empire State Building was dedicated.

In 1960, the Soviet Union shot down an American U-2 reconnaissance plane near Sverdlovsk and captured its pilot, Francis Gary Powers.

In 1963, James W. Whitaker became the first American to conquer Mount Everest as he and a Sherpa guide reached the summit.

In 1978, Ernest Morial was inaugurated as the first black mayor of New Orleans.

In 1982, the 1982 World's Fair opened in Knoxville, Tenn.

Ten years ago: Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic agreed to hand over three captured U.S. soldiers to the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Despite protests, the National Rifle Association held its annual meeting in Denver 11 days after the Columbine shootings.

The Liberty Bell 7, the Mercury space capsule flown by Gus Grissom, was found in the Atlantic 300 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral, Fla., 38 years after it sank. An amphibious boat (known as a "duck") sank at Hot Springs, Ark., killing 13. Charismatic, a 30-1 shot, charged to victory in the 125th Kentucky Derby.

Five years ago: Attackers stormed the offices of coupons from the newspaper. In the long run, simple thriftiness will help you achieve the basic security you crave and desire.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You might feel pressured to put your money where your mouth is, to your disadvantage. Don't let any confidential cats out of the bag in an effort to impress an attractive someone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is very difficult not to meddle with an investment or fidget under the adoring gaze of an attractive someone. Control your urges or you will burn through money and emotions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have a tendency to give in to a childish attitude where money and love are concerned. The consequences of juvenile actions might not seem fair.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you get caught up in a purple passion and abandon loved ones or successful routines, you run the risk of being crushed like a grape.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remain fully focused on things that engage your long-term interest. Don't be distracted by passing passions or costly thrills.

Houston-based ABB Lumps Global Inc. in Yanbu, Saudi Arabia, killing six Westerners and a Saudi; all four attackers were killed after an hour-long police chase in which they dragged the body of an American from the bumper of their car. Smarty Jones won the Kentucky Derby, becoming the first unbeaten Derby winner since Seattle Slew in 1977.

One year ago: Three dozen people were killed in a double suicide bombing during a wedding procession in Balad Ruz, Iraq. A military jury at Fort Hood, Texas, acquitted Army Sgt. Leonard Trevino of premeditated murder in the death of an unarmed Iraqi insurgent. A U.S. missile strike in central Somalia killed the reputed leader of al-Qaida in Somalia. President George W. Bush imposed new sanctions against property owned or controlled by the military junta in Myanmar. Deborah Jeane Palfrey, convicted of being the "D.C. Madam," hanged herself in Tarpon Springs, Fla. Philipp Freiherr von Boeselager, believed to be the last surviving member of the inner circle of plotters who attempted to kill Adolf Hitler, died in Altenahr, Germany, at age 90.
