End in sight: Legislature may adjourn today

Legislators say they've reached deal on roads

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

BOISE — GOP Senate and House leaders said Wednesday afternoon they reached a deal on transportation funding with Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and could adjourn the 2009 legislative session today.

The deal cobbled together through a series of meetings this week would eventually raise around $55 million in new revenue for the Idaho Transportation Department, including more than $30 million next year. Lawmakers said they're confident the package — a combination of new and old bills — will clear the Legislature, ending the second-longest session in state history.

"Everybody seems to be OK conceptually, including the House of Representatives," said House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley, noting no lawmaker wanted to break the record for longest session. "There are still some details that need to be worked out."

Funding would go directly to ITD instead of through a formula that directs money to highway districts across the state. That would give the ITD the same amount of money it would receive if the Legislature passed $75 million — Otter's latest request — that went through the highway districts.

Singapore Air Force arrives in Mountain Home

By Nate Poppino and Ashley Smith
Times-News writers

MOUNTAIN HOME — The world outside Idaho got a little bit smaller Wednesday, as four F-15SG fighter jets flown from St. Louis by the Royal Singapore Air Force landed between rainstorms at Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Greeted by a cheering crowd of more than 100 military personnel from both Singapore and the U.S., the four jets are the first of as many as 10 that will call the airbase home for at least the next 20 years.

More than 300 active-duty and support personnel will make up the 428th Fighter Squadron and train alongside American pilots as part of a partnership between the two countries — though they will not fly on missions.

U.S. Air Force representatives haven't allowed interviews yet with the Singaporean pilots and crews. But Lt. Col. Keith Gibson, the training er, said U.S. officials have high hopes for the program.

"The base is very excited to work with the RSAF because this partnership provides important combat readiness training for our Singapore partners, and fulfills the need to train as a team in a multi-national force structure," Gibson said.

As many as 2,000 active-duty personnel from Singapore may live and work on the base over the life of the program. The squadron will be officially activated at a May 18 ceremony at the base.

Cemetery probe finds no intentional damage

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Investigators haven't found any sign that a Murtaugh-owned cemetery south of the town was intentionally or maliciously desecrated last week when workers bulldozed weeds and pulled up trees.

Murtaugh Mayor Dee Hunsaker asked farmer Darrell Funk, who owns land next to the cemetery site, to help clean up the overgrown cemetery ahead of expected rehabilitation work by a Boy Scout troop.

Locals familiar with the cemetery criticized Funk's work and the mess left behind, and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office stepped in to investigate.

On Wednesday, Capt. Don Newman said the investigation so far indicates workers didn't intentionally cause any damage, and may not have done more than fill the mud by the few remaining marked graves with bulldozer tread tracks. The grave sites sitting outside of a fenced area all had small buffers of grass around them, he said, showing that the workers did their best to go around them.

Though investigators did find a piece of concrete in debris from the site, Newman said it wasn't a headstone and didn't appear to have been set in the ground. The piece measured about 2 feet by 3 feet by 3 feet.

Pointing to an article published last year in Southern Idaho Living magazine about the history of the site, Newman said the work clearly was part of previously planned restoration efforts.

"They're doing this to make the place more presentable," he said.

State law prohibits desecration of any grave, cemetery, headstone, grave marker or similar burial area, considering it a misdemeanor. It's not clear if lawmakers at the time intended

Storms boost hopes for a good water year

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

One month after Idaho mountain snowpacks traditionally peak, hydrologists and irrigators say April storms helped reinforce a good water year in some areas while other basins will continue to struggle to meet demand.

Flood-control releases from reservoirs in the upper Snake River should draw down soon, but irrigators depending on the Snake still have plenty of unfrozen snow in Wyoming to draw from — as much as 117 percent of the normal snowpack just across the Idaho border, according to provisional data for Tuesday.

The healthy snowpack in both Idaho and Wyoming is

Burley may end early morning parking prohibition

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County cops have been busy since Sheriff Randy Kidd took over in January, but they may soon get a partial break from writing early morning parking tickets in downtown Burley.

The Burley City Council agreed Tuesday night to consider a resolution that would remove signs in the downtown corridor that prohibit parking from 4 a.m. to 6 a.m.

"I imagine they were originally put up for street sweeping and snow removal," City Administrator Mark Mitton said,

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

There's lots of music and theater to take in.

• Meanwhile in Buhl, the West End Theater Co. presents "Men are Dogs" at 7:30 p.m. at the West End Senior Center, 1010 Main St. Cost is $6.

This is an open mic night for singers, songwriters or poetry readers to share their originals. Sign up to perform at 860-1979, or rmjonescreations@aol.com, or just show up. It's free to participate and free to watch.

Parking

"but we have parking all over the city, so it's kind of an anomaly."

The issue was brought to the city's attention by Kidd. He emphasized that it doesn't matter one way or the other to him but that several people who live in the downtown apartments above the Chadwick building have complained.

"I told the city, 'If you want the signs to be there, I don't care. We'll just keep enforcing the ordinance,' but I told them they may want to look at it," Kidd said. "Things have changed in that area. There are people living in apartments. They have a small parking place in the alley but they can't get all of their cars in there."

Mitton said some of the tenants have complained that they have to wake up in the middle of the night to move their vehicles in order to avoid the $25 fine.

From January 2008 to April 2008, the city made $375 from parking tickets. Revenue increased to $5,550 during the same four-month period this year.

"The revenue does not concern me," Kidd said. "But as long as the signs are there and the ordinance is the way it is, we're going to enforce parking laws."

In general, law enforcement statistics have increased dramatically since Kidd was elected.

For example, in March 2008, six parking tickets were issued in Burley. In March 2009, 85 were issued. In March 2008, 112 traffic tickets were written. A year later, the number was 257. There were 13 misdemeanor arrests in March 2008 compared to 44 the following year.

"So it's not just parking tickets," Kidd said. "In almost every category I can track, we've increased production. The officers are working harder."

The majority of parking tickets, Kidd said, are issued in residential areas, so changing the ordinance may not affect city revenue significantly.

Repealing the parking prohibition would also allow drunk people to leave their vehicles overnight and find alternate ways to get home, but both Kidd and Mitton said they have no opinion on that aspect.

The City Council is expected to take action on the issue at the May 19 meeting.

Wednesday, Owen lamented the bulldozing work done by Funk, and alleged that farmers at one point also ran a leaky pipeline across the site that encouraged the weeds and water seepage into graves.

"You can't do that to cemeteries. That's holy ground," said Owen, who lives near Nat-Soo-Pah. "It's one of those things that shouldn't have happened, and they should be at least fined for it."

Critics of the cemetery work have hinted since the investigation started that the sheriff's office would let Funk and Hunsaker off the hook. Hunsaker's son may work for the regional dispatch center and Funk may be a prominent farmer, Newman said, but that doesn't mean investigators are ignoring any part of the case.

"Our position is to look at it from an objective standpoint," Newman said, adding that small-town politics may have played a role in the controversy but his department is staying out of those.

Hunsaker, who insisted earlier this week that no damage or offense was intended, said himself that he told deputies he would take any punishment they found applicable.

End

Funding in the plan includes:

- $16.4 million by lifting the ethanol tax exemption
- $13.1 million by raising Department of Motor Vehicle fees
- $1 million by limiting temporary truck permits
- $2 million to $5 million for out-of-state trailers to be registered in Idaho

It would also shift $16 million from gas tax revenue that goes to the Idaho State Police to highways in fiscal year 2011 — a priority from Otter since last year. More than $4 million in gas tax revenue that goes to the parks and recreation department would also shift.

Two legislative task forces would be created: one to determine a funding mechanism for the ISP funding shift and another to study the overall transportation issue, including registration fees for cars and trucks.

House leaders expect to adjourn today. The House tried ending its session last week but returned Monday with the Senate still going.

"Adjournment is likely for (today)," said House GOP Caucus Chairman Ken Roberts, R-Donnelly.

Senate leaders said it could happen but issued a word of caution.

"Historically, Friday is the day," said Senate Assistant Majority Leader Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston. "I think Friday is the more realistic expectation."

A glaring piece missing from the plan is an increase in state fuel tax. It's been a contentious issue that placed the session in stalemate; Otter made raising it a priority but the House refused six times.

"Over the weekend, various people started thinking about alternatives," Stegner said. "We started looking at a broad array of funding sources."

Roberts said a turning point came when the House made it clear that a gas tax was no longer on the table, and Bedke said the deal was the product of negotiations.

GOP House leaders said their caucus, which has grown increasingly resistant to tax increases throughout the session, was not opposed to the package. It held a late-afternoon caucus.

"There were some questions. As far as a brick wall of opposition, I did not see that," Roberts said.

Otter has made raising new revenue to fix Idaho's roads and bridges a priority since taking office in 2007.

and nearly twice the amount it got last year.

People looking at the figures shouldn't get too excited, though, cautioned Mike Beus, water operations manager for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's Upper Snake River Field Office. The percentages only equal about an average peak snowpack from two weeks ago.

That said, last month's weather nudged up Abramovich's stream-flow prediction for the Snake River, as measured near Heise, from 104 percent of average to 110 percent.

Other areas of south-central Idaho will still fall short, Abramovich said. Basins north of the Snake River received below-normal precipitation last month. And lingering drought effects in the Big Wood and Salmon Falls basins are expected to cause another tight year for irri-gators there — especially the Big Wood, where flows coming out of the parched Magic Reservoir are predicted to hit only 66 percent of average.

Water specialists and irrigators still compare this year's situation with last year, when cool weather and above-average snowpack created a healthy amount of reservoir storage and in turn boosted this year's expected flows.

Magic Valley canal operators said Tuesday that they still expect a healthy water supply this year. Right now, they're more focused on the havoc the weather — rainy one day and dry the next — is causing as farmers and other people start asking for deliveries.

Too much rain means farmers don't need the water and the canal companies then have to figure out how to avoid flooding, said

He wanted $175 million in January but as the session dragged on he lowered that amount, hoping to appeal to House members.

"I think we have a deal," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, co-chairman of the joint budgeting committee, adding that it was a compromise in which not everyone got what they wanted.

Otter spokesman Jon Hanian declined to comment on the deal's specifics but said meetings have been productive.

House Democrats who have criticized the impasse as poor governing by Republicans said they have mixed feelings about the latest package.

CAREERS ON WHEELS

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Children from Harrison Elementary School in Twin Falls check out a display of dozens of mounted animals and horns at the Idaho Department Fish and Game trailer at the Careers on Wheels fair at the College of Southern Idaho Eldon Evans Expo Center. All of these animals have been poached, said Fish and Game educator Kelton Hatch. Hatch's display was one of 50 that reached out to Twin Falls elementary students. Amid revving engines and loud sirens, children were presented information on six career paths in the arts, sciences, social services and business. Linda Widmer, a Sawtooth Elementary counselor and one of seven event organizers, said the event makes children aware of career opportunities and gives them a chance to start thinking about their future.

T.F. man sentenced for federal gun crime

Times-News

A 26-year-old Twin Falls man has been sentenced to 40 months in federal prison for unlawfully possessing a firearm, according to a press release Wednesday from the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Rafael Soto pleaded guilty to the charge in October 2008, and according to the press release, admitted to illegally selling a rifle and methamphetamine within 300 feet of Buhl High School.

Soto's more than three-year prison sentence includes a supervised release after he gets out for three more years, according to the prison term.

Soto has two felony convictions for armed robbery from 1997, which prohibited him from possessing firearms, according to the release.

The U.S. Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco Firearms and Explosives and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office investigated the case.

The prosecution was part of the state's Project Safe Neighborhoods Program, which seeks to reduce gun violence in Idaho, according to the press release.

Shoshone council approves three new stop signs

By John Plestina
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — When Shoshone resident Phillip Vaught asked the City Council to slow down traffic on North Beverly Street Tuesday night, the council responded by voting to install new stop signs at three intersections.

Following recommendations by Police Chief Jon Daubner, the council authorized the city to install two four-way stop signs on North Beverly at the intersections of East Third and East Fourth streets and a two-way stop at East Second Street and North Beverly.

Daubner said motorists use the route through the residential area to avoid stop signs on other streets.

Vaught offered to pay for the stop signs if necessary.

He told the council that East Second Street had become "a superhighway" with vehicles exceeding the speed limit in an area where children play.

"It would be nice before school is out because of the small children," Vaught said. "It's a race track now."

In other business, council meetings moved closer to becoming more user-friendly Tuesday night thanks to proposed multimedia presentations projected on a screen on a wall.

The council authorized Brent Edwards, the Shoshone School District Internet technology manager, to consult with the city at $75 per hour for an estimated four hours. The projection system is in use at Shoshone High School.

Council meetings could include documents projected onto the screen while the council discusses them.

The move toward high-tech functionality is a response to Shoshone residents requesting the change to City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett.

"Almost every classroom at Shoshone High School has one," Edwards said, adding that most teachers are familiar with the system if he were not available for assistance.

Twin Falls woman strikes it rich with $100,000 jackpot

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Mary Murray struck it rich with a lottery ticket bought at WinCo Foods in Twin Falls.

Murray won $100,000 with a purchase of an Idaho Lottery World Poker Tour ticket. She picked up the ticket on April 27.

After scratching four sevens that beat a flush, she took the ticket to the store because her eyesight makes it difficult to read tickets.

"They put it in a machine and it said: 'Go to Boise,'" said Murray, of Twin Falls.

After going to Boise Murray was finally sure that she had won $100,000, which amounts to $67,200 after taxes.

A cook and waiter at Magic Bowl, Murray said that the win came at a good time because she works more in the wintertime.

"It was just wonderful," she said.

She bought a new car and is using the rest of her winnings to pay bills and help with the college education of her three children.

Proceeds from the Idaho Lottery go to public schools and the state's permanent building fund, which pays for projects like courthouses and jails.

Because WinCo sold the winning ticket, it also receives a $12,000 prize from the Idaho Lottery.

Jerome school soaps up

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Those underappreciated containers holding soap in restrooms aren't usually the talk of a town — or school.

But that can change when the containers in a school don't have soap and there are media reports about swine flu. For Jerome Middle School, there's no longer a soap shortage this week in restrooms, which was a problem last week.

"We've got soap all over," said Victor Arreaga, vice principal of the school. "We're just swimming in soap."

Last week, some parents were upset when they found out their children were going to school without access to soap in the boys restrooms. Arreaga said the school put soap in the dispensers after the problem was brought to the school's attention.

Dan Kriz, an environmental health specialist with the South Central Public Health District, said he talked last week to the school's janitor and has been informed that soap is available in restrooms. There was only one restroom without soap, he said.

"There was soap," he said of the school's current soap status.

Complaints had prompted the health district to visit the school early last week, where no soap was found in a boys restroom.

Annie Firth, a parent with a son at Jerome Middle School, said her child went for more than a week without soap in the restroom before the problem was remedied.

"The end verdict was that they were putting it back in because there were so many of us who complained," she said, adding that her son had a cold during the soap shortage.

Firth said that there have been issues with students pumping the soap onto the floor, though she doesn't understand why the school didn't supply its students with soap.

T.F. Fire Department sees changing of guard

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

WATCH: A video about Dick Capps' retirement.

Two recent retirements at the Twin Falls Fire Department prompted a chain of promotions and hiring that affected about 20 percent of its full-time staff.

Two of the department's three battalion chiefs retired during the past four months, prompting eight staffing changes at the department of about 42 full-time employees, said Twin Falls Fire Department Fire Chief Ron Clark.

Battalion Chief of 10 years, Dick Capps, retired at the end of April following 24 years of city work that ended in a Wednesday good-bye party from the city.

Capps' retirement followed another battalion chief's December retirement, said Clark.

Significant transition happens at the department when a battalion chief retires, he said.

That's because when a captain is promoted to fill the battalion chief position, a driver is promoted to replace the captain, that driver is replaced by a promoted firefighter and a new firefighter is hired to fill the vacancy, said Clark. "Upper management affects you from the top to the bottom."

After Capps' retirement, Clark said Ron Aguirre was promoted to battalion chief, Aaron Hudson is a new captain, Rod Dixon a driver, and Jesse Bowman was hired on as a firefighter.

Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney called Capps' retirement "bittersweet."

"We lose 24 years of experience and knowledge," he said, adding that Capps started working with the city in the parks department and was involved with technology at the fire department.

But watching other firefighters rise in the ranks after a retirement is refreshing, said Clark, who is eligible to retire after 33 years of service.

"I don't tell anyone what I'm thinking when it comes to retirement," said Clark. "As a chief, it makes it really nice to bring people into positions of upper management."

Capps will be missed, firefighters at the department said Wednesday during the city's farewell gathering.

"You're a great inspiration to us," said Twin Falls Firefighter Brian Rice, after giving Capps a helmet as a farewell present.

Clark agreed. "It's a double-edged sword," said Clark. "(Capps) will be missed, but on the other hand you're happy for him ... He's been an excellent battalion chief, and a good friend to all of us."

Capps' farewell party in the city council chambers included plaques, a helmet, a musical picture show and cake. He told the room full of his friends, family and city workers that you "can't ask for a better job."

Clark said he is not anticipating another immediate round of staffing changes or retirements.

Law & Disorder...

... in Cassia County

From May 2 police reports:

Stalking: A 32-year-old Burley woman reported that her male co-worker, 23, has been stalking her. According to the report, he locked her in a room at work and wouldn't let her leave until she talked to him — all while telling her he wanted to be friends. The woman told police that the man has been following her around town. "If she goes over to a friend's house, he calls her husband telling him where his wife is," the report reads.

Reckless driving: While fueling his patrol car at Mr. Gas in Burley, a deputy noticed a two-door Honda "full of people" accelerating quickly out of the parking lot. Police followed and pulled the vehicle over. The 17-year-old male behind the wheel was cited for reckless driving. "I asked him if there was any reason why he was driving in a reckless manner (sic). The driver informed he was late for work at Burgers, Etc.," the report reads.

Graffiti:

Somebody spray-painted "X3" and "(expletive) SOUTHSIDERS" on a woman's shed in Burley.

Larceny:

A 7-year-old boy and a 10-year-old boy were arrested for stealing a package of Reese's Peanut Butter Cups and something listed in the report as "a skateboard toy" from Family Dollar in Burley.

From May 3 police reports:

Driving under the influence: A 21-year-old male was arrested for driving under the influence in Burley after he was pulled over for driving without his lights on. He didn't have a driver's license and told police that "he just went to pick up his friend because his friend was drunk and could not drive." After failing one field-sobriety test, he was asked how much he had to drink. He told police he had a couple of mixed drinks two hours earlier. According to the report, he "mixed Tarantula with Rock Star."

Area school board races attract few takers

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The decisions of school board trustees can have a lasting impact.

They approve multi-million budgets that determine the quality of education for children in their school district.

They also decide if their school district will ask voters to pass bonds for new schools.

Even so, few citizens are stepping up to run in area school board elections and serve as trustees. School board elections are scheduled for May 19 but that's a date that means little, even in some of the region's largest school districts. Trustees serve as unpaid volunteers.

In Cassia County School District, there are two school board seats up for election; only one is contested. Dee Jones, the incumbent in zone 4, is facing Kathy Millar and Randy Noble. Meanwhile, Linda Peterson, the incumbent in zone 3, is running unopposed.

"It's very, very rare that we have contested races," said Helen Gochnour, the clerk of the school board.

She estimated that about 25 percent of school board elections are contested.

"A lot times, it's just uncontested," she said, echoing the trend of other school districts.

In Twin Falls School District, only the incumbent trustees, Dan King and Brian Matsuoka, filed paperwork to run for the two open seats this election.

In King's case, he grew up with parents who were teachers and his wife was involved in school parent-teacher organizations. King was appointed in June to take the open seat of Vera Redman.

"When the opening came up, it kind of seemed like it was my turn to get involved," King said.

Jerome School District doesn't have any contested board races this year, said Linda Adams, the board clerk.

"Either you have several or you have none and we're lucky to have people who have served and want to continue serving," Adams said.

Gooding School District has one contested election this year, and uncontested races were common until about two years ago, said Cathy Thompson, board clerk for the district.

Incumbent Raymond Goodman is being challenged by Joe Sliman in zone 1. Another trustee seat is uncontested.

For Filer School District, only one citizen, JudyLea Smith, entered for an open seat in zone 2. The incumbent isn't running for reelection, so there's no need to tally ballots.

Instead, the district will issue a certificate of election that declares Smith the trustee, said Kermit Leir, the district's clerk and business manager.

"She was the only candidate," Leir said. "She will be the trustee by default."

Leir said uncontested races are common.

"Unfortunately, that tends to be the rule rather than the exception in most school districts," Leir said.

A 5-mile road into Twin Falls’ future

A few months ago, the U.S. 30/93 Bypass — technically, Stage 2 of the Twin Falls Alternate Route — was barely a blip on the Idaho Transportation Department’s radar. Now, thanks to $41 million in federal stimulus money, it’s about to happen. ITD plans to advertise for bids this month or next, and start work this fall.

The bypass — covering the five miles between Grandview Drive and the Highway 30/93 junction — is the costliest enterprise on Gov. Butch Otter’s list of “shovel-ready” projects designed to create 2,800 jobs and funnel $148 million into the state economy.

When it’s completed, through traffic won’t have to navigate Blue Lakes Boulevard North. The bypass will relieve congestion on Blue Lakes and on Washington Street, but put more pressure on Pole Line Road and the bottleneck at the southern end of the Perrine Bridge.

And its completion will nearly coincide with the opening of the new St. Luke’s Magic Valley at the intersection of Pole Line and Grandview. Canyon Ridge High School and a Wal-Mart store on Washington will open this summer.

Among them, the bypass, the hospital, the high school and Wal-Mart will funnel thousands more vehicles a day into a relatively small corner of northwest Twin Falls.

The city of Twin Falls says it has done enough research to ensure that won’t be a problem, but that’s debatable.

And a moot question, at this point. The traffic is coming, ready or not.

What certainly will change are commercial development patterns in Twin Falls. Businesses are already moving farther west on Pole Line, a pattern that is likely to accelerate. Residential growth in northwest Twin Falls and adjacent areas of Twin Falls County will follow.

None of this was supposed to happen quite so fast. Before the stimulus came along, the bypass was far down the list of ITD’s priorities. But the fact that this road will link two recent ITD projects — the 93/30 interchange and Stage 1 of the alternate route — made this enterprise “shovel ready,” and a prime candidate for federal money.

We welcome the project and the jobs that will come with it. But it will change the way Twin Falls — both city and county — lives, works and gets around.

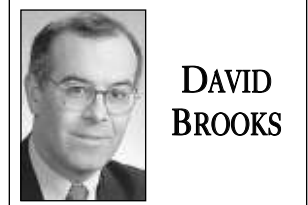

While not opposing the bypass, downtown business owners and many members of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce worry that the project will divert traffic — and shoppers — away from the city’s core. They prefer a proposal to reroute Highway 30 downtown to make the area easier to get to.

That may yet happen. But the more immediate priority is to begin a community conversation about how Twin Falls should manage the traffic that will soon clog the Perrine Bridge and its feeder streets.

Our view:
 The U.S. 30/93 Bypass — a longshot just a few months ago — will change the way people in Twin Falls city and county live, work and get around.
What do you think?
 We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Time for GOP to embrace civic virtues

Republicans generally like Westerns. They generally admire John Wayne-style heroes who are rugged, individualistic and brave. They like leaders — from Goldwater to Reagan to Bush to Palin — who play up their Western heritage. Republicans like the way Westerns seem to celebrate their core themes — freedom, individualism, opportunity and moral clarity.

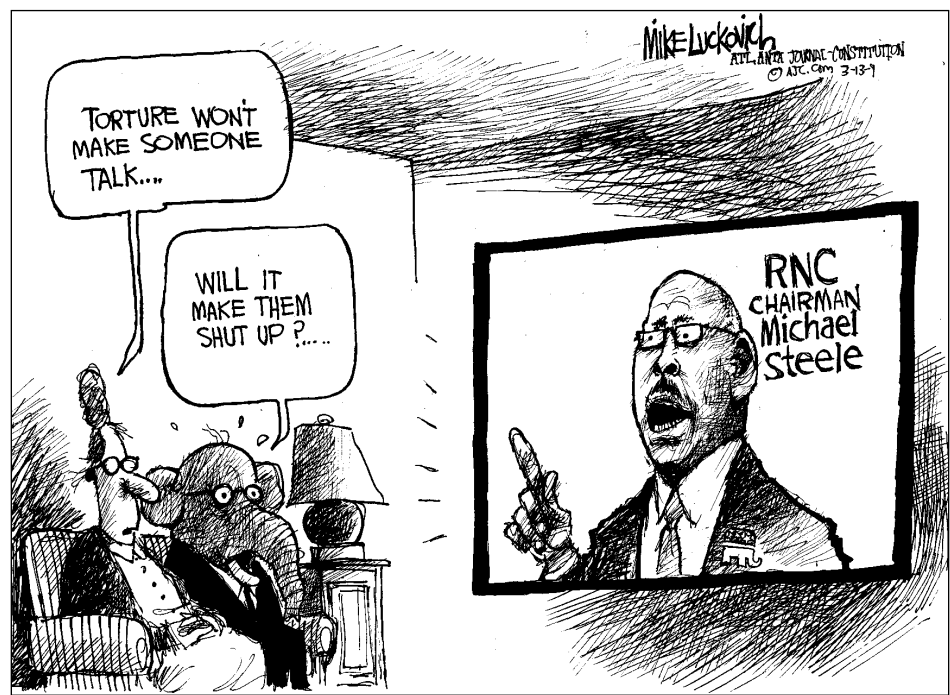

DAVID BROOKS

But the greatest of all Western directors, John Ford, actually used Westerns to tell a different story. Ford’s movies didn’t really celebrate the rugged individual. They celebrated civic order.

For example, in Ford’s 1946 movie, “My Darling Clementine,” Henry Fonda plays Wyatt Earp, the marshal who tamed Tombstone. But the movie isn’t really about the gunfight and the lone bravery of a heroic man. It’s about how decent people build a town. Much of the movie is about how the townsfolk put up a church, hire a teacher, enjoy Shakespeare, get a surgeon and work to improve their manners.

The movie, in other words, is really about religion, education, science, culture, etiquette and rule of law — the pillars of community. In Ford’s movie, as in real life, the story of Western settlement is the story of community-building. Instead of celebrating untrammelled freedom and the lone pioneer, Ford’s movies dwell affectionately on the social customs that Americans cherish — the gatherings at the local barbershop and the church social, the gossip with the cop and the bartender and the hotel clerk.

Today, if Republicans had learned the right lessons from the Westerns, or at least John Ford Westerns, they would not be the party of untrammelled freedom and maximum individual choice. They would once again be the party of community and civic order.

They would begin every day by reminding themselves of the concrete ways people build orderly neighborhoods, and how those neighborhoods bind a nation. They would ask: What threatens Americans’ efforts to build orderly places to raise their kids? The answers would produce an agenda: the disruption caused by a boom and bust economy; the fragility of the American family; the explosion of public and private debt; the wild swings in energy costs; the fraying of the health care system; the segmentation of society and the way the ladders of social mobility seem to be dissolving.

But the Republican Party has mis-learned that history. The party sometimes seems cut off from the concrete relationships of neighborhood life. Republicans are so much the party of individualism and freedom these days that they are no longer the party of community and order. This puts them out of touch with the young, who are exceptionally community-oriented. It gives them nothing to say to the lower middle class, who fear that capitalism has gone haywire. It gives them little to say to the upper middle class, who are interested in the environment and other common concerns.

The Republicans talk more about the market than about society, more about income than quality of life. They celebrate capitalism, which is a means, and are inarticulate about the good life, which is the end. They take things like tax cuts, which are tactics that are good in some circumstances, and elevate them to holy principle, to be pursued in all circumstances.

The emphasis on freedom and individual choice may work in the sparsely populated parts of the country. People there naturally want to do whatever they want on their own land. But it doesn’t work in the densely populated parts of the country: the cities and suburbs where Republicans are getting slaughtered. People in these areas understand that their lives are profoundly influenced by other people’s individual choices. People there are used to worrying about the health of the communal order.

If the Republicans are going to rebound, they will have to re-establish themselves as the party of civic order. First, they will have to stylistically decontaminate their brand. That means they will have to find a leader who is calm, prudent, reassuring and reasonable.

Then they will have to explain that there are two theories of civic order. There is the liberal theory, in which teams of experts draw up plans to engineer order wherever problems arise. And there is the more conservative vision in which government sets certain rules, but mostly empowers the complex web of institutions in which the market is embedded.

Both of these visions are now contained within the Democratic Party. The Republicans know they need to change but seem almost imprisoned by old themes that no longer resonate. The answer is to be found in devotion to community and order, and in the bonds that built the nation.

Obama talks transparency, practices opacity

Sunlight is for suckers. The New York Post reported on Tuesday that the White House will not release the $328,835 snapshots taken of the president’s Boeing VC-25A that buzzed lower Manhattan. The entire world has seen news and amateur photos and videos of the incident, but if President Obama has his way, taxpayers won’t be able to see the flyover photos they paid for with their own money.

This will make for an interesting response to my Freedom of Information Act requests. After the bizarre mission caused distress and panic among countless New York City residents who were intentionally left in the dark about the photo-op stunt, I filed public records requests with the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Staff FOIA Requester Service Center.

The first one requests any and all communication — including e-mail and other public records and including any and all correspondence between the White House Military Office, Department of Defense and other agencies. Specifically, I requested all public records related to and including the flight manifests and related to the origin of the request for the mission. The second filing requests any and all photos taken during the planned federal aerial mission approved by the White House Military Office.

What rationale could they possibly use to stifle public disclosure? National security? These were glamour shots to enhance the Air Force One photo portfolio. That’s no secret. The White House fessed up on that. Withholding the photos serves only one purpose: protecting the backsides of those involved in this botched PR mission.

From Day One, Obama has demonstrated a rather self-serving selectivity when it comes to transparency. The Obama White House rushed to reverse an 18-year ban photographing the flag-draped coffins of troops arriving back on American soil. And at the behest of the American Civil Liberties Union, his administration is set to release at least 21 classified photographs by May 28 showing detainee abuse in prisons in Iraq and Afghanistan. Openness in government is fine if it hurts America’s reputation, but not if it harms Obama’s.

Hostility to transparency is a running thread through Obama’s cabinet:

- Secretary of State Hillary Clinton for years fought disclosure of massive donations from foreign governments and corporations that filled her husband’s library and foundation coffers.

- Top Obama adviser David Axelrod ran fear-mongering campaigns in support of a huge utility rate hike — and failed to disclose that the ads were funded for Commonwealth Edison in Chicago.

- Labor Secretary Hilda Solis failed to disclose that she was director and treasurer of a union-promoting lobbying group pushing legislation that she was co-sponsoring.

- Attorney General Eric Holder overruled his own lawyers in the Justice Department on the issue of D.C. voting rights (which he and Obama support) and refused to make public the staffers’ opinion that a House bill on the matter was unconstitutional.

- And as I reported last month, Obama’s nominee for the No. 2 official at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, former King County, Wash., executive Ron Sims, has the distinction of being the most fined government official in his state’s history for suppressing public records from taxpayers.

Obama set the tone, breaking his transparency pledge with the very first bill he signed into law. On Jan. 29, the White House announced that the Lily Ledbetter Fair Pay Act had been posted online for review. One problem: Obama had already signed it — in violation of his “sunlight before signing” pledge to post legislation for public comment on the White House Web site five days before he sealed any deal.

Elizabeth Edwards shows incredible grace under pressure

I had dinner once with John and Elizabeth Edwards, when he first burst onto the national scene.

Looking across the booth at her grinning, boyish husband, she told me that it was irritating to be married to someone so comely who looked so much younger.

She was smiling, but she was telling the truth. The Edwardses reminded me of the Quayles — smooth, pretty boys married to tough, smart women they'd met at law school.

Elizabeth Edwards would have made a wonderful candidate herself. But she poured everything into John. And then John betrayed her. And then John betrayed his staffers, going ahead with the 2008 campaign, letting his disciples work around the clock because they believed in him and what he was running on, even though the Edwardses knew it could implode at any minute because of John's entanglement with Rielle Hunter.

Like Monica and Gennifer before her, Rielle was not a discreet choice. She inspired the literary character of Alison Poole, "an ostensibly jaded, sexually voracious" New York party girl who had the lead in Jay McInerney's novel "Story of My Life" and in a short story in his new book, "How It Ended," as well as a couple of walk-ons in novels by Bret Easton Ellis.

What unimaginable stress, to learn that you were trying to make your husband president at the same time his mistress was making a baby that could well be his. And while you were raising young kids and battling deadly cancer.

"He should not have run," Elizabeth Edwards writes in her new book, "Resilience." John told her a little about Rielle a few days after he announced in 2006, and she told him to drop out to "protect our family from this woman, from his act," she writes.

She said she cried, screamed and threw up when she found out. But she ended up going along, helping sell the voters on her husband's character as a truth teller and charm as a loving husband and father. She had put so many quarters in the shiny slot machine of their mutual ambition. It was hard to walk away.

Just as it's hard to walk away from her desire to prosecute her husband and his former girlfriend now in public, while still taking the marriage "month by month."

John Edwards' political career is over, and he's being investigated by the feds about whether he used campaign funds to underwrite his affair. Nobody — except Rielle — has any interest in hearing from him again. Americans would have been relieved if the last we heard of him was that cringe-inducing "Nightline" interview last year, when he made the argument that he was a helpless narcissist and that he hit on Rielle when Elizabeth's cancer was in remission.

But now Saint Elizabeth has dragged him back into the public square for a flogging on "Oprah" and in Time and at bookstores near you. The book is billed as helping people "facing life's adversities" and offering an "inspirational meditation on the gifts we can find among life's biggest challenges."

But it's just a gratuitous peek into their lives, and one that exposes her kids, by peddling more dregs about their personal family life in a book, and exposes the ex-girlfriend who's now trying to raise the baby girl, a dead ringer for John Edwards, in South Orange, N.J.

Elizabeth said when they married, the only gift she asked John for was to be faithful.

"It didn't occur to me that at a fancy hotel in New York, where he sat with a potential donor to his anti-poverty work," Elizabeth writes in her book, "he would be targeted by a woman who would confirm that the man at the table was John Edwards and then would wait for him outside the hotel hours later when he returned from a dinner, wait with the come-on line 'You are so hot' and an idea that she should travel with him and make videos. And if you had asked me to wager that house we were building on whether my husband of then 28 years would have responded to a come-on line like that, I would have said no!"

She may be smart, but she doesn't seem to know much about men.

Like Hillary with Monica, the feminist struck out at the girlfriend, implying that Rielle was a wacky stalker.

"We're basically old-fashioned people," Elizabeth told O magazine. "So this was a pretty big leap for him. Maybe it's being so different is what was attractive?"

She's still helping her husband hedge on Rielle's baby, whom she refers to as "it," telling Oprah that she has "no idea" if the baby is John's, and adding: "It doesn't look like my children, but I don't have any idea."

Asked by Oprah in a taping for Thursday's show whether she's still in love with her husband, she replied, "You know, that's a complicated question."

The really complicated question is what she hopes to gain from this book.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... not bad for government work

Post Register, Idaho Falls

How long does it take you to make $1,000?

If you're like most eastern Idahoans, it's at least a week, more likely two.

If you're a member of the Idaho House of Representatives, you need only four days.

Better yet, if you're a Republican member of the House, you don't even need to show up.

(Last) Wednesday, the House Republicans voted to adjourn their 2009 legislative session. That's part of the chamber's standoff with Republican Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter. The governor wants a fuel tax increase to pay for roads and bridges. House Republicans have refused.

But the House adjournment is pure political theater.

Since the Senate won't concur, the House (was) forced back to Boise ...

Technically, the Republicans' departure is a recess. Because the Legislature remains in session, they'll continue to draw their $122-per-day expense payment.

Weekends included. Only when the Legislature formally concludes its business does the expense account shut down.

Lawmakers collect $16,259 a year in salary — but they earn it while working in Boise. If this session drags out to four months, that comes to $135 a day.

Here's how that breaks down:

- A fast-food cook in Rigby would have to work nearly four weeks to equal the $1,028 Rep. JoAn Wood, R-Rigby, will collect in four days on holiday.

- To match the $1,028 Rep. Lenore Hardy Barrett, R-Challis, will receive, a security guard in Idaho Falls will spend almost three weeks on the job.

- * In the time it takes Rep. Mack Shirley, R-Rexburg, to get $1,028, a school bus driver in Iona will make $365 ...

Not that these lawmakers can reject the money. The law won't let them. Convenient, though, isn't it? ...

What would you call taking government money and doing nothing in return?

Welfare? ...

... will Midvale give it back?

Lewiston Tribune

The current dysfunction in the Idaho House of Representatives ... no doubt has some Idahoans wondering how so many heedless extremists could be elected to form a majority of the chamber's ruling Republicans.

A good answer could be found last week in Midvale.

... Butch Otter visited (Midvale) ... and the conservative governor found himself dealing with angry complaints that he was forsaking ruralites and kowtowing to Uncle Sam ... some of the charges leveled at him betrayed a detachment from reality that illustrates how legislators might be more representative of voters than some think.

Midvale is the home town of the current speaker of the House, Lawrence Denney, as well as of former legislator, Congressman and U.S. Sen. Larry Craig.

During his visit, Otter was told he is too compliant with mandates from the federal government. And that included his acceptance of federal money under the government's stimulus legislation to lift the nation out of recession ...

So how many Washington County farmers have stood up and said no to federal farm subsidies? According to the database maintained by the Environmental Working Group, farmers in the county pocketed $1.7 million in direct payments between 2003 and 2005.

... Can the farmers taking that money really believe state government should turn down money for road work and other projects that put state residents to work while pumping cash through the state's economy?

And as Otter pointed out, Idahoans will have to help retire the debt that is financing those stimulus checks.

"I would have loved to have rejected the money," he said, "but I got to pay it back anyway."

"Sounds like a dictatorship to me," responded Steve Leonard of Midvale.

Perhaps only Leonard can explain how federal taxing and spending is different from state taxing and spending, or do both represent dictatorship? ...

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Obama makes Jimmy Carter look like a saint

This letter is for all the liberals, Democrats and Republicans, who voted for "Messiah" Hussein Obama.

How is your portfolio and did you get the "hope" and "change" that was promised? Whom does he think he is spouting off to the world that this nation is not a Christian? What arrogance that he can imply this nation was not founded on Judeo-Christian values? He is bowing down to tyrants and kissing their boots. I wonder if that is all he is kissing.

He and his colleagues in Congress, both Democrat and Republican, are taking us straight into socialism. His programs of taking from those who earn a living and giving it to those that are too lazy to work is asinine (or should I say "Democrat")?

They bailed out Fannie Mac and Freddy Mae. They were the ones who said these institutions were financially sound. In fact, Obama voted as a senator for the bailout, and they are the ones profiting from it.

He derides our men and women in uniform, and his administration has put them on a "watch list" as possible terrorists, along with Christians, those that believe in the Second Amendment and anyone that disagrees with his policies.

Now he and his cronies are trying to nationalize the banking, auto and oil industries. All with the support of the liberal media that get tingly and worship this "god" they created.

Jobs are being lost, homes and businesses are still being lost and yet he and his administration want to tax us more and spend our money!

Isn't it time we got the professional politicians in Congress and the liars and tax cheats in his administration out of office?

In only 100 days, this man, this administration and this Congress make Jimmy Carter look like a saint!

CALIFORNIA Governor declares emergency for wildfire

SANTA BARBARA — California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger has declared a state of emergency for a wildfire that has surged into the city of Santa Barbara.

He issued the proclamation Wednesday evening after high winds stoked the slumbering fire and homes began burning. Residents were told to leave about 2,000 homes because of the fire that started in the foothills about the coastal enclave Tuesday afternoon.

TV news helicopters showed homes ablaze but thick smoke obscured how many. County fire Capt. David Sadecki said the fire was burning quickly and winds were gusting up to 50 mph.

Schwarzenegger says he has asked federal authorities to issue an assistance grant to ensure financial resources are available for firefighting.

MONTANA Governors slam feds' brucellosis plan

BILLINGS — The governors of Wyoming and Idaho say a federal plan to create a special livestock disease management zone in the Yellowstone region would "taint" the area's cattle industry but do nothing to eliminate the disease.

Yellowstone is the nation's last reservoir of brucellosis, a disease prevalent in wild bison and elk that is sometimes passed to livestock. It can cause pregnant animals to miscarry.

To prevent the disease from re-infecting livestock herds in other parts of the country, the U.S. Department of Agriculture wants to make parts of Montana, Idaho and Wyoming a "National Brucellosis Elimination Zone."

Cattle producers in counties surrounding Yellowstone National Park would face increased restrictions when exporting their animals. That includes requirements for routine vaccinations and disease testing, now required only when brucellosis infections occur.

But Gov. Dave Freudenthal of Wyoming and Gov. Butch Otter of Idaho are asking U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack to withhold action on the proposal.

Phoenix-area mother helps bust Ecstasy ring

PHOENIX — A mother's tip to a police drug force helped put at least 10 dealers behind bars for peddling Ecstasy to teenagers and college students, police said.

The unidentified woman's call to the Maricopa County Methamphetamine Task Force last week helped detectives find the drug ring, which was coordinated and advertised through the social networking Web site MySpace, sheriff's deputy Lt. Steve Bailey said.

At least 10 of the dealers were arrested by Tuesday.

Bailey said the woman looked at her 17-year-old son's Internet activity and realized he was probably purchasing a drug. Investigators said the seller's MySpace profile included a price list and product review.

"She figured out it was Ecstasy, and put that together with how he was acting, lethargic and spacey, and called us," he said.

Detectives said they were able to buy the drug from dealers in Mesa, north Phoenix, Scottsdale, Tempe and Fountain Hills in parks, restaurants and other public places. They said they purchased more than 200 hits in their investigation and that the sellers had a combined client list of nearly 500 area high school and college students.

OREGON Obama names nominee to oversee national forests

GRANTS PASS — The Obama administration's pick to be the new agriculture undersecretary in charge of the U.S. Forest Service breaks a long-standing tradition of someone with a forest policy background.

Homer Lee Wilkes, the Mississippi state conservationist, was named late Tuesday as the nominee for undersecretary of Agriculture for natural resources and environment. He is the first black nominee for the post.

Wilkes is a 28-year veteran of the federal Natural Resources Conservation Service, which focuses on farmland conservation. The undersecretary also oversees the conservation service.

If confirmed by the Senate, Wilkes will face a list of tough national forest issues: the growing costs and threat of wildfire in a warming climate, widespread insect infestations killing wide swaths of pine forest, battles over putting millions of acres of roadless areas off-limits to logging, and whether to keep paying subsidies to rural timber counties.

Wilkes earned his bachelor's, master's of business administration and doctorate in urban conservation planning degrees from Jackson State University and lives in Madison, Miss., with his wife and three sons.

"As far back as anyone cares to recall, the undersecretary position was held by a Forest Service expert," said Andy Stahl, executive director of Forest Service Employees for Environmental Ethics.

Amex, JPMorgan, Bank of New York Mellon pass

By Daniel Wagner

WASHINGTON — Leaked results of the government's stress tests of 19 large banks are boosting investor confidence in the financial sector. American Express Co., JPMorgan Chase & Co. and Bank of New York Mellon Corp. will not be asked to raise more capital when federal officials announce the test results today, but Regions Financial Corp. will need to bolster its reserves, according to people briefed on the results. The people requested anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the results. Citigroup Inc. will need to raise about $5 billion, according to a government source who requested anonymity because he was not authorized to discuss the matter. Earlier news reports put that number closer to $10 billion. Bank of America Corp. and Wells Fargo & Co. also will be asked to raise capital, sources said earlier this week. The emerging news is bringing into focus a picture of the financial industry's strength that has had investors guessing for months. The stress tests were designed to

From textbooks to newspapers, reading device aims to increase user base

By Rachel Metz
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Amazon.com Inc. hopes a bigger version of its Kindle electronic reading device can be a hit, aiming the device at college students who are eager to save money on textbooks and avid newspaper readers. Since the Kindle debuted in 2007, it has jazzed many users and technophiles, but electronic readers are still in an early stage. Now, by offering the larger, $489 version of the Kindle and the smaller $359 Kindle 2, Amazon will try to open more avenues for digital versions of books — and other kinds of content. The New York Times, The Boston Globe and The Washington Post plan pilot programs in which they will offer the new Kindle at a discount to some readers who sign up for subscriptions to read the news on the device. In an interview, Amazon founder and Chief Executive Jeff Bezos said that because the newest Kindle has a 9.7-inch screen, it will be better suited than the 6-inch regular Kindle at showing "complex layouts" in everything from cookbooks to travel guides.

"Things like those that have a lot of layout, structure, look really good on a big screen," he said on the sidelines of a press event Wednesday at Pace University in New York. The Kindle already had features that could aid textbook reading, like the ability to highlight and bookmark passages. Users could tap the Kindle's typewriter-layout keyboard to look up words and annotate text. But in addition to a larger screen, the new version also offers more data storage — room

Senate moves toward easing mortgage terms

By Anne Flaherty
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Trying to curb home foreclosures, the Senate voted on Wednesday to make it easier for homeowners with risky credit to switch to a lower-cost mortgage backed by the government. The bill, passed 91-5, also would give banks a break by reducing fees they must pay for the government to insure deposits. While both steps put taxpayer money on the line, lawmakers say the legislation is needed to prevent the economy from getting worse. "Given the size and scope of the struggles too many Nevadans and Americans endure, it will take more time before housing normalizes again," said Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev. "But with this bill, we are working to hasten that day so that no family will ever accept losing its home as the way it is." Also on Wednesday, Democratic leaders in the House and Senate hashed out a plan to establish a $5 million, independent commission that would investigate the cause of the financial crisis and chart a path forward. The Senate bill would expand an existing $300 billion program called "Hope for Homeowners," which encourages lenders to write down an individual's mortgage if the homeowner agrees to pay an insurance premium. The program, which is set to expire in 2011, is intended to swap out a homeowner's high-interest rate for a 30-year fixed loan backed by the Federal Housing Administration. So far, the program has been a dud. When it was established last year, Congress envisioned helping some 400,000 troubled homeowners. But because eligibility requirements were so strict, one borrower has completed the refinancing process and only 51 more

BOISE — Idaho Power officials say the utility is reorganizing and eliminating up to 40 positions from its new customer division. Idaho Power spokeswoman Stephanie McCurdy says the company has notified 165 employees that they are eligible for voluntary severance, with a goal of reducing between 30 and 40 positions. She says the action is a response to the poor economy and low revenue growth. McCurdy said it was unknown as of Wednesday what areas would be affected by the cuts. She said that in February 2008 the utility's leadership team froze the salaries

Take advantage of new college savings plan

Like most parents, I'm sure my two-year-old son is destined for great things. So I created a college savings plan to give him a leg up on life. I did this because the cost of higher education is rising faster than water levels in the Palisades — I also want the tax deduction next year. According to the Idaho State Board of Education, the annual cost of college in Idaho increased about 6 percent in 2008 compared to the previous year. Here's a breakdown of increases between 2007 and 2008 in Idaho:

Joshua Palmer

• The University of Idaho charged $4,632 for tuition and fees, a 5 percent increase.
• Boise State University charged $4,630 for tuition and fees, a 5 percent increase.

• Idaho State University charged $4,664 for tuition and fees, a 6 percent increase.
• Lewis Clark State College charged $4,296 for tuition and fees, a 5 percent increase. Think twice before deciding on an out-of-state school — tuition for non-residents at my alma mater is about $20,000. Fortunately, Idaho started a 529 college savings program in 2007, known as iDeal, as part of a federal mandate for all states to help families save for college.

A plan can be opened for as little as $25 a month, which would rise to more than $6,000 over a 12-year period recording 8 percent annual growth. That's not bad, especially when you consider that the money grows tax-deferred. Parents can also benefit by getting a state tax deduction of up to $8,000 if filing jointly. # Fall vaccination campaign may include swine flu shots

By Kimberly Kindy and Ceci Connolly
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration is considering an unprecedented fall vaccination campaign that could entail giving Americans three flu shots — one to combat annual seasonal influenza and two targeted at the new swine flu virus spreading across the globe.

If enacted, the multibillion-dollar effort would represent the first time that top federal health officialists have asked Americans to get more than one flu vaccine in a year, raising serious challenges concerning production, distribution and the ability to track potentially severe side effects.

Another option, said Dale Morse, chairman of the advisory committee on immunization practices at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, is adding to the seasonal flu shot an ingredient targeted at the new virus.

Experts in and out of the administration are evaluating a raft of complicated issues, including who ought to receive an inoculation against the swine flu and whether private vaccine makers can simultaneously manufacture the standard 180 million doses as well as up to 600 million rounds of a new vaccine.

“We are moving forward with making a vaccine,” said Robin Robinson, a director with the Department of Health and Human Services who oversees pandemic response programs. Robinson said that although a formal decision about the swine flu vaccine has not been made, if the government goes ahead, it would probably produce two doses for all Americans. If the threat diminishes, he said, health officials could decide to produce doses for only a portion of the population.

Vaccine and pandemic experts are working with the administration to determine how to produce, test, track and educate the public about two different influenza vaccines in the same flu season.

“They have never tried this before, and there is going to be a great deal of confusion,” said William Schaffner, chairman of the Department of Preventive Medicine at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine.

Memories of the nation’s earlier experience with a swine flu vaccine present another challenge. In 1976, hundreds of Americans developed neurological disorders after they were vaccinated for a swine flu strain. The public was asked to receive one of two vaccines developed to combat the strain.

AROUND THE NATION

N. CAROLINA Informants allege Blackwater tried to dump weapons

RALEIGH — A defense contractor charged with trying to smuggle firearms out of Iraq claimed Blackwater guards asked him to help get rid of weapons after a deadly 2007 shooting in Baghdad, two government informants say in court documents.

The contractor told one of the informants that Blackwater guards wanted to dispose of the weapons before an investigation into the September 2007 shooting that left several civilians dead, according to a criminal complaint filed in the smuggling case. The contractor, John Houston, did not work for Blackwater.

Both informants, whose names weren’t revealed by federal investigators, were Army reservists stationed in Iraq. Houston approached them for help with smuggling, the complaint states, and one of them tipped off investigators about the scheme.

NEW YORK Wal-Mart pays $2M to avoid charges in death probe

MINEOLA — Wal-Mart agreed Wednesday to pay nearly $2 million and improve safety at its 92 New York stores as part of a deal with prosecutors that avoids criminal charges in the trampling death of a temporary worker last year.

Nassau County District Attorney Kathleen Rice said that if she had brought criminal charges against the retailer in the worker’s death, the company would have been subject to only a $10,000 fine if convicted. Rice declined to say what charges were considered against Wal-Mart, citing the secrecy of grand jury proceedings.

Instead, she said, the company has agreed to implement an improved crowd-management plan for post-Thanksgiving Day sales, set up a $400,000 victims’ compensation and remuneration fund, and give $1.5 million to Nassau County social services programs and nonprofit groups.

MAINE Gay marriage leaps ahead in Maine, N.H.

AUGUSTA — New England states signaled an increasing willingness to sanction gay marriage on Wednesday as Maine legalized the practice and the New Hampshire Legislature voted to do the same.

If New Hampshire Gov. John Lynch signs the bill or lets it become law without his signature, his state would become the sixth overall to allow gay marriage and the fifth in New England. Rhode Island would be the only state in the region without such a law.

Maine Gov. John Baldacci, a Democrat who hadn’t indicated how he would handle his state’s bill, signed it shortly after the legislation passed the Senate on a vote of 21-13 — a margin not large enough to override a veto.

Obama expresses regret for Afghan civilian deaths

By Robert Burns
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Flanked by the leaders of Afghanistan and Pakistan, President Barack Obama expressed deep U.S. regret Wednesday for civilian casualties in a deadly incident this week in western Afghanistan, promising “every effort” to avoid recurrences in the war against a rising Taliban insurgency.

Obama had a more upbeat and determined tone as he lauded “unprecedented cooperation” between the two neighbors in fighting Taliban and other extremist threats. But he cautioned that success will not come quickly.

“Along the border, where insurgents often move freely, we must work together with a renewed sense of partnership to coordinate our efforts to isolate, target, and take out our common enemy,” Obama said after a day of meetings with Afghan President Hamid Karzai and Pakistani President Asif Ali Zardari.

Obama met separately with Karzai and Zardari, followed by a three-way session that Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton portrayed as an embodiment of a central tenet of the administration’s new Afghan war strategy — that Pakistan and Afghanistan are linked problems.

The latest report of Afghan civilian casualties came at an especially awkward time for the administration, which is stepping up its military campaign inside Afghanistan while also seeking to emphasize the importance of nonmilitary efforts to stabilize the country. The U.S. has pledged, for example, a major increase in civilian expertise in farming and other specialties, along with an increase of 21,000 U.S. troops.

Obama’s strategy, unveiled in late March, already is threatened by setbacks to his goal of strengthening a shaky Pakistani government, eliminating al-Qaida and Taliban sanctuaries on the Pakistan side of the Afghan border and fighting Afghan government corruption.

Claims of U.S. culpability for civilian deaths in Afghanistan are an added burden.

Gen. Jim Jones, Obama’s national security adviser, told reporters that the president began his meeting with Karzai by addressing reports that dozens of civilians had been killed by American bombs on Sunday.

Jones said Obama commented “with great sympathy” and expressed regret for the loss of innocent life. Earlier, before her meetings with Karzai and Zardari at the State Department, Clinton said the U.S. “deeply, deeply” regrets the losses.

Both Obama and Clinton stopped short of accepting U.S. blame for the deaths.

Obama told Karzai that investigations “will be pursued aggressively with full intent to discover what in fact did happen, how it happened and how we can make sure that things like that do not happen again. And it was clear that President Karzai was moved by that ... and he thanked the president for starting off the meeting with that expression of condolence.”

Longtime secretary says Madoff staying silent to protect others

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernard Madoff’s longtime secretary said Wednesday that she believes the disgraced financier is not cooperating with authorities in order to protect others, and that he was a flirtatious boss who frequented massage parlors.

Eleanor Squillari, Madoff’s secretary of more than 20 years, told The Associated Press she thinks her former boss carefully orchestrated his arrest and that he’s protecting others who might have been involved in his multibillion-dollar scheme by not cooperating with investigators. She declined to speculate as to whom he might be protecting.

Squillari said that if she had a chance to speak to Madoff, she would ask him “to do the right thing and to let us know this happened.”

“I just can’t imagine why he’s not cooperating, why he’s saying he did it himself,” she said. “It’s not humanly possible, in my opinion.”

Squillari spoke with the AP after she appeared on NBC’s “Today” show and ABC’s “Good Morning America” to promote an account of her time working for Madoff that she co-wrote for Vanity Fair. The 59-year-old Squillari spent two months helping the FBI gather evidence against the former money manager.

China: 5,335 students dead, missing in 2008 quake

BEIJING (AP) — China said Thursday that 5,335 students died or remain missing from last year’s Sichuan earthquake, the first official tally for students in what became a politically charged issue because of allegations of shoddy school construction.

No reason was given for the release of the number now, just days before the one-year anniversary of the disaster that launched an outpouring of grief around China and united the country in a massive rescue effort.

The official Xinhua News Agency said the overall death toll for Sichuan province in the May 12 earthquake was unchanged at 68,712. Some 18,000 people are still officially listed as missing, and are presumed dead.

Relatives grieve for Texas woman with flu who died

By Christopher Sherman
Associated Press writer

HARLINGEN, Texas — This week should have been a joyous time for Judy Trunnell, a 33-year-old teacher who had just given birth to a healthy baby girl.

But the friends and relatives whose cars lined the quiet street in front of her home in a quiet subdivision Tuesday instead were mourning her, the first American citizen with swine flu to die.

Trunnell died after being hospitalized for two weeks. She slipped into a coma, and her baby was delivered by Cesarean section, said a cousin, Mario Zamora.

“She was just a beautiful person, warm at heart. She worked with disabled children as a teacher,” Zamora told WMAR-TV in Baltimore. “Those that knew her will always remember her.”

Texas health officials stopped short of saying that swine flu caused Trunnell’s death. State health department spokeswoman Carrie Williams said the teacher had “chronic underlying health conditions” but wouldn’t give any details.

Pregnant women should not be alarmed, state health department spokesman Doug McBride said Wednesday.

“There are a number of health conditions that put people in a higher risk group where they are more likely to develop serious complications should they get any type of influenza,” McBride said. “Pregnancy is not a chronic condition.”

Trunnell died early Tuesday after being hospitalized since April 19, said Leonel Lopez, Cameron County epidemiologist. She was extremely ill when she was hospitalized, said Dr. Joseph McCormick, regional dean of the University of Texas School of Public Health’s Brownsville campus.

Trunnell taught in the Mercedes Independent School District about 15 miles west of her hometown of Harlingen, a city of about 63,000 near the U.S.-Mexico border.

Mercedes school Superintendent Walter Watson said he was told early Tuesday that Trunnell died after being taken off life support.

“It brings tears to my eyes to my eyes to know she won’t be with our children or hers,” he said.

“You just don’t replace people like that,” Watson said.

Feds want 3-year term for Missouri mom in MySpace hoax

By Greg Risling
 Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — A Missouri mother should serve three years in prison for her role in a MySpace hoax on a 13-year-old neighbor who committed suicide, federal prosecutors said in court documents filed Wednesday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Krause outlined the government's position while requesting the maximum sentence for Lori Drew. Probation officials have recommended Drew receive a year of probation and a $5,000 fine.

Krause argued that Drew "coldly conceived of a scheme to humiliate" Megan Meier, a neighbor in a St. Louis suburb, by helping create a fictitious teenage boy on the social networking site and sending flirtatious messages in his name to the girl.

Drew

The fake boy then dumped Megan in a message saying the world would be better without her. She hanged herself a short time later.

Drew used her then-13-year-old daughter and a business assistant in the scheme, which played on Megan's insecurities, Krause said.

"Both the callousness of defendant's criminal conduct and the extraordinary harm it caused mandate a sentence of more than probation," Krause wrote.

Drew was convicted in November of three counts of accessing computers without authorization. Besides up to three years in prison, she could face a $300,000 fine at sentencing set for May 18.

Drew's attorney, Dean Steward, has asked U.S. District Court Judge George Wu to throw out the verdicts.

Steward said his client couldn't afford the $5,000 fine recommended by probation officials because she no longer draws income from the coupon book business she had for nine years.

During the trial, prosecutors argued that Drew violated MySpace rules by setting up the phony profile for a boy named "Josh Evans." Jurors decided Drew was not guilty of the more serious felonies of intentionally causing emotional harm while accessing computers without authorization.

The jury could not reach an unanimous verdict on a felony conspiracy charge.

Drew was not directly charged with causing Megan's death.

Some legal experts believe prosecutors are still smarting over the conviction on lesser crimes. In his filing, Krause continued to argue there is convincing evidence that shows Drew set out to inflict emotional harm to Megan.

Water and fun at Murtaugh's Caldron Linn

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

MURTAUGH — Shoshone Falls isn't the only need-to-visit destination in the Magic Valley. Before water in the mighty Snake River reaches those falls it first makes a spectacular display at Caldron Linn, near Murtaugh.

Caldron Linn — also known as Star Falls — is a lesser-known but favored spot along the river for visitors seeking the best in desert canyon scenery.

To get to the falls, created by the Snake's forced passage through an area less than 40 feet wide, visitors must first meander around towering sagebrush and river rock scattered along the land. But a well-worn dirt path makes it easy to explore. All along the path the falls offer a roaring welcome.

Before you know it the sagebrush gives way to the canyon rim — and then, Caldron Linn. Mist soars as the river slams the towering basalt.

Though Todd Okelberry grew up near Caldron Linn, the current Kimberly resident said he was surprised to see the number of cars coming from and going to the falls during a recent visit to the site.

"I've never seen this many people down here before. Usually it tops out at six cars," he said. "But this much water, it is a rare occurrence."

Okelberry said he likes the untouched nature of Caldron Linn, which likely appears much as it did when explorers and members of the Oregon Trail passed through the area.

Visitors to Caldron Linn enjoy the rushing falls during a recent weekend to the site. Caldron Linn, also known as Star Falls, is near Murtaugh. With no entry fee, Caldron Linn provides a great opportunity for affordable recreation.

Water rushing over Caldron Linn during the past several weeks has given visitors plenty to behold.

"There is history here," Okelberry said.

Falls aside, the area is a great place to spend an afternoon, said Okelberry's sister, Katy Okelberry.

"We live like two miles away, so this is just part of our growing up. It's kind of a nice Sunday drive thing," she said.

From Interstate 84 take exit 188 and travel south on Valley Road. Turn left onto 1000 East, and one mile later turn right onto 1900 South (also known as Murtaugh Road) until you get to 4575 East. Then follow the signs.

Visiting Caldron Linn isn't for the weak of heart, and it is imperative to keep your children secure: the falls aren't developed, there is no safety rail or concrete walkway along the falls. Using caution, common sense and wearing hiking shoes are important.

You won't find a parking lot, entry fees or a waiting line at Caldron Linn, but you just might find plenty of adventure.

Caves just one attraction at Great Basin National Park

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

Lehman Caves, in the northeast corner of Nevada's Great Basin National Park, contains some of nature's most spectacular artwork.

Over the centuries, water and pressure working together carved marble cavities studded with stalactite and stalagmite pillars. Since their discovery in the late 19th century, thousands of visitors have marveled at and been destructive toward this piece of living art, and the park service currently is working to restore some of the areas that have been impacted by humans.

Park Service personnel have offered guided year-round tours of the caves since the 1930s. Tour groups, limited to 20 people, have the choice of a 60- or 90-minute option. The 60-minute tour is $8 per person 16 years and older. Those who opt for 90 minutes will be charged $10. Youth ages 5 to 15 years old are charged $4 for an hour or $5 for the longer trek.

Just five miles west of Baker, Nev., the Great Basin National Park is also the perfect spot for outdoor enthusiasts looking to enjoy summer camping, fishing, hiking, rock climbing or watching for 238 different species of birds.

Maintain better posture with Opedix performance apparel

Can apparel made for athletics add support to the skeletal structure?

Yes, according to Smart Fitness Products LLC, a Vail, Colo., company that sells the Opedix line of tops and tights.

By stitching together swaths of fabric, then crisscrossing it and building it into a top and tights, the company (www.opedix.com) touts its futuristic clothing as allowing for better joint alignment, increased strength and mobility, and fuller lung capacity when you're aerobically maxed and gasping for air.

I tested two Opedix products. The Standard Crew Posture Shirt fits tight and pulls you upright to force, as its name alludes, better posture on the move. The company sells the shirt for $99.95, and it is touted to touch "specific neuro-receptors in the body that fire messages to the brain."

The effect, according to Opedix, is that the Standard Crew encourages an upright trunk, which in turn lets you fill your lungs more completely with each breath. Other claimed benefits are better shoulder alignment, potential reduced back pain, and decreased tension in the neck.

For the legs, the R1 Running Tights cost a steep $190 and incorporate a patented "anchor and sling design to provide support to the outside of the knee." This setup is made to reduce the amount of "damaging outward movement" and decrease the stress or load on the knee joint as you hike or run.

It sounds fancy, I know.

YELLOWSTONE'S OPENING DAY

Calm before the rush

Spring visitors cherish park's quiet days before summer crush

By Ruffin Prevost
Billings Gazette

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK — Baseball fans relish opening day, movie mavens line the sidewalks at Hollywood premieres and the glamorous glitterati flock to fashion week.

But for nature lovers and animal aficionados, there is no match for the first few weeks of the summer season in Yellowstone National Park.

Though May in Yellowstone seldom seems like summer, it marks a time when locals make that first dash into the park, as well as a chance for workers to gear up for the impending crush of the millions that will visit over the next few months.

Friday was the first day that auto traffic was allowed through the east gate, while some other entrances had been open for a week.

Ranger Candice Phipps was the lone worker checking visitors through the east entrance, a job that requires two or three others working multiple lanes during the height of summer, as hundreds of cars and buses stream through each hour.

But 30 minutes after opening at 8 a.m., only a dozen cars had passed through, Phipps said, including a couple of local photographers who were waiting at 7:30.

The scarcity of visitors let nature take center stage over the next eight hours and 200 miles, with dozens of species of animals and ever-changing weather on display.

Nine miles inside the park, Sylvan Lake looks like a sheet of pristine, white satin, adorned with sparkling crystals.

Snow is piled and plowed on both sides of the road, often higher than passing cars. At times, the crisp edges of the neatly plowed snow resemble a giant wedding cake, smothered in white frosting.

Yellowstone Lake is invisible beyond an impenetrable fog and beneath a static gray sky.

Fishing Bridge slumbers under a thick blanket of snow, its store and other amenities closed, like many other spots in the park will be until the crowds pick up.

By 9:45, 36 miles in, a trio of sandhill cranes stands in the shallow water where Trout Creek meets the Yellowstone River. The birds take on an alien appearance in the fog, with one resembling a monstrous muppet, a silhouette of legs and shaggy feathers with no visible head.

But as the birds spread their wings, they become a scene from a Japanese watercolor before two take flight, calling out in a shrill clatter as the third crane remains.

Hunt makes up for long drive north

By Paul D. Brown
For the Times-News

We had planned the trip weeks earlier — to hunt turkeys in northern Idaho.

After work on Friday, April 17, I took my place behind the wheel of my Jimmy, which was packed to the gunwales with hunting gear, and drove east.

Once in Idaho Falls, the road north turns through Dubois, over Monida Pass to Dillon and on to Butte, Mont., before turning back west paralleling the Clark Fork River toward Missoula, Mont. Eventually the road winds out of Big Sky country and back into Idaho at Lookout Pass, through Wallace and then Kellogg, part of the famed Silver Valley detailed in a number of books about Idaho mining history. Then a low summit known as Fourth of July Pass opens up onto the shoreline of Lake Coeur d'Alene.

I arrived at my friend Cameron Hughes' Post Falls home at 2 a.m. after a time change at Lookout Pass.

He appeared at the door somewhat bleary-eyed and sleepy. After a short visit, we headed to our beds.

Giving us the slip

Four-thirty came too soon. The alarm rattled me out of a deep sleep and I reached for my camo clothing. I could hear Cameron upstairs getting into his turkey-stalking clothing as well.

After a quick stop at a 7-11, we drove an hour to the timbered drainage of the Saint Joe River, where we had planned to hunt.

Late spring snow drifts hang in this forest in places untouched by sunshine. A few miles off the asphalt a snow bank blocked our way. With the hen decoy, hen caller and scatterguns in hand we took a skid trail around the side hill for a quarter mile just as the first twilight found its way into the dark forest.

In the near distance a male Merriam turkey announced his search for a female. The tom continued his serenade several times but didn't respond to Cameron's hen call. We tried to put the stalk on one or more birds that were vocalizing their presence in the first rays of daylight, but to no avail. The toms gave us the slip.

Getting our toms

We were probably a mile away from our vehicle when another tom began his tirade several hundred yards behind us.

Its gobbles echoed off the trees and remaining snow banks. Each series of gobbles from the amorous tom was answered with the raspy screeching of the hen call Cameron executed so well.

The teasing and flirting calls back and forth continued while we located a clearing, set up the decoy and found a hiding place within shooting range of the decoy.

There was shooting light now and we had the gobbler moving toward us. We were concealed among the boughs of a fir tree and watched with fascination as two toms strutted into the far side of the clearing.

We were probably a mile away from our vehicle when another tom began his tirade several hundred yards behind us.

"There's two of them," Cameron whispered.

"OK, you take the left one and I'll take the right one," I whispered back.

The males strutted and periodically fanned their tails, making their way directly toward the hen decoy, oblivious to our presence. We watched them carefully, our hearts racing and thumbs positioned to slide the safety switch on our guns as trigger fingers grew antsy.

They came on toward the decoy — gobbling, strutting and fanning to attract the attention of the hen. They were separated by about 10 yards, each striving to persuade the female that he was the greater of the two.

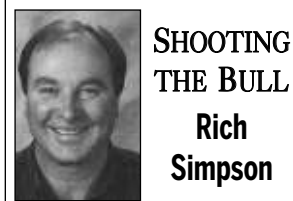

At about 30 yards Cameron blasted the one on the left with a charge of No. 5 buckshot. He toppled the tom on the left while the one on the right seemed stunned and stuck to the ground for a couple of heartbeats before he was toppled with No. 4 buckshot from my 20 gauge.

We dashed out and gathered up our bounties. They were beautiful Merriams with 8-inch beards and respectable wattles weighing about 20 pounds.

We congratulated each other and decided this was some kind of record. Both turkey tags were filled by 6:20 a.m.

An upgraded rifle and round

Though the .30-06 Springfield had faithfully served U.S. and Allied soldiers through two world wars and a Korean conflict, military planners in the 1950s and early '60s believed that a new martial cartridge better suited to semi and full automatic weapons was needed.

SHOOTING THE BULL
Rich Simpson

Initially the 7.62x51 NATO cartridge (.308 Winchester in civilian garb) housed in the sturdy M14 selective-fire rifle got the nod, but battle conditions in Vietnam strongly suggested the need for an alternative rifle and round.

After extensive testing, the Army decided to go with Gene Stoner's space-age Armalite AR15 rifle and an enlarged and higher pressure version of Remington's .222 varmint cartridge. In military guise, the black plastic-stocked selective fire rifle became known as the M16 and its high velocity small bore cartridge, the 5.56x45mm NATO.

But like all new developments, things were not perfect right out of the gate. As it turns out, the Army had changed the 5.56's performance requirements just prior to its adoption and Winchester (Olin Corp.) had scrambled to meet those new criteria by developing and charging the cases with a brand new powder.

Since Gene Stoner had not been made privy to the powder switch, the M16 went General Issue before any design modifications could be made to better cope with the new ballistic characteristics of the modified 5.56 round.

This design inconsistency coupled with the horrendous conditions of jungle warfare played havoc with our new battle rifle. Malfunctions and jams plagued the rifle and more than one GI was found dead beside his jammed and partially disassembled weapon.

Since those early days, however, the rifle and round have been considerably modified and upgraded. Today both are reshaped by the armed forces of most NATO nations, as well as tens of millions of law enforcement personnel, civilian shooters and hunters.

It has been said, "If you want to guarantee the success of a new cartridge, chamber it in a standard military firearm." This adage has proven true with such perennial favorites as the .30-06, .308 Winchester, .45 ACP, and 9mm Parabellum. The civilian version of the 5.56 NATO, the .223 Remington, has certainly maintained this tradition. Next to the ubiquitous .22 LR, the .223 is the biggest-selling small bore round in America today.

So what is it about the .223 Remington that justifies such national and universal acclaim? One is its shootability. Being a small caliber round, the .223 generates mild, manageable recoil that, with practice, all but guarantees good shooting habits. Its lightweight high velocity bullets slice through the air easily, providing a reasonably flat trajectory, fair wind resistance and adequate downrange energy for its intended target.

The .223's abbreviated size allows it to be housed in everything from single shot break-open handguns to bull-barreled target and dedicated varmint rifles. My personal favorites are a well-used Ruger Mini-14 for coyote-getting and home defense and my inexpensive but deadly accurate Stevens 200 bolt gun. This one keeps the ground squirrels and rock chucks on the lookout.

So if you're in the market for an economical precision small game, varmint, or home defense piece, you might want to consider joining the ranks of .223 Remington aficionados. Like ground squirrels these days, they seem to be everywhere. Good shooting!

F&G seeks comments on hunt proposal

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is seeking public comment of its proposal to eliminate controlled hunts for sandhill crane this year. The department proposes that tags instead would be sold over the counter for $15 on a first come, first-served basis.

Changes also include an increased total of 680 sandhill crane tags available — 400 in Caribou and Bear Lake counties, 100 each in Teton and Fremont counties, and 40 each in Bonneville and Jefferson counties.

Crane season would run from Sept 1-30 in Caribou and Bear Lake counties, and Sept. 1-15 in other areas. The daily bag limit would remain at two cranes per day and nine for the season.

Comment deadline is May 13.

Wilderness preserve near Moab to reopen after fire

MOAB, Utah — A southern Utah wilderness preserve damaged by a wildfire last fall is reopening.

Fire scorched more than 400 acres of the Scott M. Matheson Wetlands Preserve near Moab in October. It burned vegetation, portions of a boardwalk and a wildlife viewing area.

The preserve has been closed since then as The Nature Conservancy and state workers made repairs and re-seeded the area.

A reopening ceremony for the preserve is scheduled for Saturday.

The 895-acre preserve was established in 1990 and is home to more than 200 species of birds, amphibians and mammals.

Ore. Senate approves lifejacket bill

PORTLAND, Ore. — The state Senate almost unanimously approved a bill to require boaters, rafters and kayakers to wear lifejackets approved for whitewater rapids when tackling Oregon's Class III rivers.

House Bill 2079 now goes to the governor for his signature.

Rep. John Huffman, a Republican from The Dalles, sponsored the bill. Huffman says he did so on behalf of law enforcement officials who have had to respond to countless emergencies involving people who didn't wear life jackets when navigating whitewater rapids.

Sen. Ted Ferrioli, a John Day Republican, says he expects the bill to save money because communities will have to conduct fewer rescue and recovery missions. He adds that fewer missions will reduce the psychological toll on Oregon's search and rescue crews.

U. of Tenn. experts map out whitewater for good fish habitat

Morgan Simmons
The Knoxville News Sentinel

ONEIDA, Tenn. — There were plenty of rapids, but this was no recreational whitewater run. With $20,000 worth of camera equipment on board, there was a strong incentive to remain upright.

Think of it as cartography from a kayak.

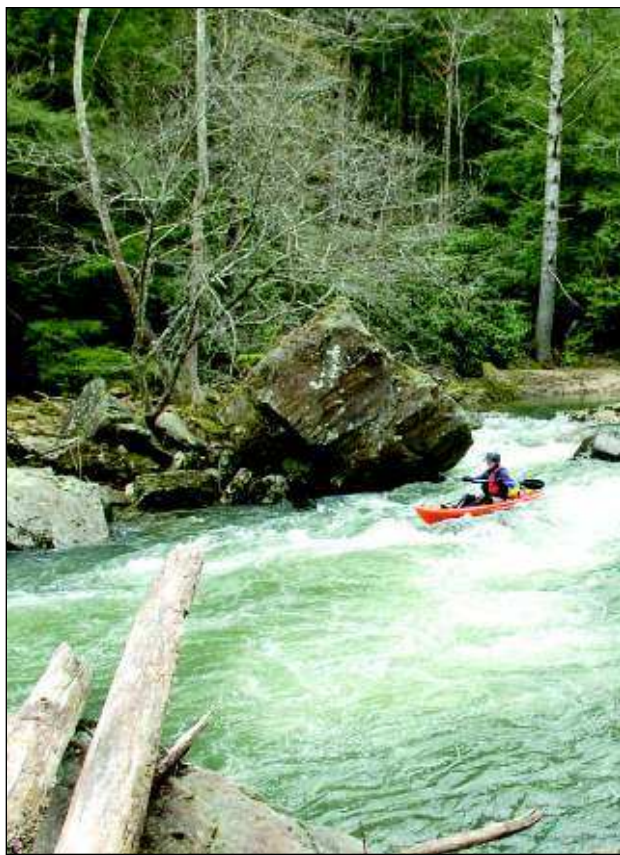

In the lead boat was an underwater video camera and a surface video camera that ran continuously while Bryan McConkey, a graduate student at the University of Tennessee, paddled down North White Oak Creek.

Following in the second kayak was Paul Ayers, a professor of biosystems engineering and soil science at UT who is working with the National Park Service to develop 21st-century maps of the streams of the Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area and the Obed Wild and Scenic River.

The purpose of the stream mapping is to identify good habitat for freshwater mussels and rare fishes. The project uses an innovative underwater video system that takes Global Positioning System (GPS) digital data and stores it continuously on the audio track of the DVD as the kayak floats down river.

Simultaneously, the river's surface features are recorded using a similar geo-referenced video camera. Images from both video cameras are downloaded into a Geographic Information System (GIS) to produce digital maps that depict the stream in minute detail, above and below the surface.

A recent morning found McConkey and Ayers on North White Oak Creek, on the Fentress and Scott County side of the Big South Fork National River and University of Tennessee professor Paul Ayers records video with a kayak-mounted camera on North White Oak Creek in the Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area on April 14, near Oneida, Tenn. Data collected by Ayers will be computerized into habitat maps that biologists can use to manage the park's species of mussels and fish, especially those that are endangered.

Recreation Area. Following alongside from the old railroad bed that parallels the stream was J.R. Candlish, another one of Ayers' graduate students.

Candlish had a walkie-talkie, and it was his job to scout the rapids from the bank for any dangerous obstacles.

So far, Ayers and his grad students have shot video of two-thirds of the streams in the Obed and Big South Fork. Both areas are managed by the National Park Service to protect their free-flowing waters. In the Big South Fork, that means 77 miles of the Big South Fork River and about 470 miles of tributaries.

The kayak also was equipped with a sonar depth finder, as well as a laser device that indicates the scale of substrate features, everything from rocks down to particles of sand.

Steve Bakaletz, biologist for the Big South Fork, said the aquatic habitat maps will be of particular help in managing the park's 10 species of freshwater mussels listed as federally endangered.

"This technology gives us dimensions for all kinds of data," Bakaletz said. "We not only know there's a riffle, but also how deep it is and what's "In the old days, maps were one-dimensional lines on a piece of paper. Now, we can superimpose layers like transparencies in a biology book. It's like Huckleberry Finn going digital."

on the bottom."

From the video footage shot so far, biologists already know that the deepest pool in the Big South Fork is 60 feet deep, and that the average depth of nearly all the pools is 35 feet.

Five habitat attributes are gleaned from the video footage: flow characteristics of the river (pool, run, riffle); the type of substrate (slab rock, cobble, gravel, sand or silt); the embeddedness of the substrate; the presence of coal contamination; and river depth.

Historically, the Big South Fork River inside the park contained 71 species of mussels. Today, 26 mussel species live in the river, along with three species of federally endangered fish.

The video footage taken from the kayak presents a virtual tour of the stream. Advocates of the system say it's an inexpensive way to map long stretches of river, and it's a lot quicker than snorkeling with an underwater camera.

"In the old days, maps were one-dimensional lines on a piece of paper," Bakaletz said. "Now, we can superimpose layers like transparencies in a biology book. It's like Huckleberry Finn going digital."

Giant spots dim the light of this fast-spinning star

In 1612 Galileo correctly interpreted sunspots as features on the sun's surface, not intervening orbiting bodies as was previously believed.

Four centuries of intervening sunspot observations have found that the largest ones typically comprise no more than 1/400th of the sun's face.

Spots are expressions of a star's magnetic field, powered in part by its rotation. The sun's magnetic field, although vastly larger than Earth's, is only a little stronger, because the sun only rotates on its axis about once per month. Faster rotating stars can have considerably stronger magnetic fields.

One example is Cor Caroli, the brightest star in the constellation of Canes Venatici, the Hunting Dogs. It's currently high overhead around 10 p.m., about 15 degrees — or three-quarters of the width of your hand at arm's length with fingers outstretched — south of the end of the Big Dipper's handle.

Cor Caroli is actually a binary star. The brighter component is the prototype of a class of variable stars known as the Alpha-2 Canum Venaticorum stars. Despite being 260 percent wider than the sun, Cor Caroli rotates almost five times faster, and its magnetic field is 1,500 times stronger. Its "star spots" are large enough to dim Cor Caroli by 15 percent. At 110 light years, or 700 trillion miles, Cor Caroli is too far away for photos to reveal its spots — their existence is inferred entirely from the

And on the run the tights and crew top do feel neat. It's nothing like a brace, but the bands of fabric add some support and elasticity to your knees.

I felt fast in these tights, which seem to spring and perpetuate each stride a bit. It's an incremental effect that can add up over a long distance.

A competing brand, Wacoal Sports Science, makes a product that applies the same kind of elastic support with its line of CW-X conditioning wear. CW-X came to market a few years back, and Opedix, while not quite a copy, makes a product that's similar in performance and design.

In the end, running in a pair of Opedix or CW-X tights, when compared to traditional athletic tights, was not a sea change for me. I had no great epiphanies while training in the high-price Opedix tights. My race times did not dramatically improve.

Joint support is present but subtle with these anatomically-enhanced products. Posture can be improved. Maybe my lungs are a smidge fuller on each breath. At almost $300 for the Opedix outfit, it's a lot of small improvements for a fair bit of money.

Just up the road, Cody wildlife photographer D. Robert Franz stands at a turnout with several other photographers, watching and snapping pictures of a bald eagle perched high in a tree above the river.

"We're hoping to head up toward Cooke City and circle back to Cody that way," Franz said, detailing the popular loop trip through Sunlight Basin.

Franz and other photographers were traveling through the park together, helping each other spot elusive animals along the way.

"We usually try to get in the first of every year. It's a really good time to get bear photos," he said.

At 10:15, the parking lot is empty at Artist Point, an ideal spot to view the Lower Falls in the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone River.

At Canyon Village, a summer hive of activity where visitors jockey for parking spaces in front of souvenir shops and lunch spots, only five cars sit in front of a single open store. Two are maintenance vehicles.

The road along the Gibbon River, near 196-degree Beryl Spring, shows the ravages of winter's freeze and thaw, with large sections of asphalt heaved or cratered. Repairs must wait for warmer weather.

Throughout the park, hot springs and bright sunshine do battle with ice and snow in a slow-motion, melting dribble that marks the change of season.

By noon, the temperature has climbed to 36 degrees, and 88 miles in, workers at the Old Faithful Inn are preparing for the historic hotel's opening.

John Salvato, head bellman, is watching his crew shovel snow from the hotel's rooftop observation deck, a favorite viewing spot for Old Faithful's certain show.

The work marks the end of a quiet period between the close of winter services and the start of summer in the park, a time that some Yellowstone residents dread as the end of peaceful days, and that others look forward to as the start of an active summer.

Some on Salvato's crew have spent winter in the park, while others are just arriving.

Salvato has returned from a winter trip to Antarctica, where it was summer. He worked there operating a loader at a research station.

The work was rewarding and the people were great, "but there is not a lot of scenery down there, because it's just pretty much white and flat," he said, adding that "nothing really compares to Yellowstone in the winter."

Bleachers that are crowded to overflowing during summer hold only three expectant onlookers awaiting Old Faithful's next eruption.

By 4 p.m., 150 miles into the park, the temperature has reached a high of 51 degrees at Tower Junction, where an energetic coyote hunts among the sagebrush for small prey that can no longer hide under cover of snow.

Along the side of the road in the Lamar Valley, a small group of onlookers has gathered at 4:39 to watch a wolf prowl along the river's far shore.

Photographers snap pictures while others watch through spotting scopes.

Trevor Coleman, a visitor from Idaho Falls, helps a friend's son with his binoculars. A day after his seventh birthday, Dimitri has seen not just grizzly bears and wolves, but dozens of other animals.

Coleman said his group planned to remain in the Lamar Valley for the rest of the day before heading home, adding that he preferred to visit the park in spring and fall, instead of summer.

"It's just less people and more animals," he said.

Question: Bill asked: "My wife & I divorced about 3 years ago. She was awarded the house which had a 1st & 2nd mortgage. I was ordered to pay 1/2 of the monthly payments on the 2nd mortgage until the $75,000.00 balance was paid. Last year my wife refinanced the house & paid off the 2nd mortgage. I know I owe half of the balance that was paid off, but the loss of my job has kept me from paying anything. My wife was recently killed in an accident & her father is the personal representative of her estate. He is dragging me back into divorce court to try & force me to pay the estate the money that I owed to my deceased ex-wife. Would a bankruptcy take care of this debt?"

Answer: A bankruptcy discharge eliminates your legal obligation to repay most debts. However, there are certain debts that are not discharged, including debts to a former spouse arising from a divorce. If your former wife were still alive, your bankruptcy would not eliminate your debt to her. But due to her untimely death, a bankruptcy will help you. Bankruptcy courts have ruled in similar situations that the personal representative of the estate does not have legal "standing" to challenge the discharge. Therefore, the property settlement debt to your deceased ex-wife will be eliminated in your bankruptcy.

Jerome officials racing to build livestock barn for fair

By Mary Hanson
For the Times-News

JEROME — Last summer the livestock barn at the Jerome County Fairgrounds saw its last days and was torn down after the 2008 fair.

Now several groups associated with the Jerome County Fair, along with Fair Manager Kathleen Diederich and 4-H Program Director Tina Dickard, are working to provide a facility for livestock for 2009, even if the project only has a roof.

"I expect we will move in phases," Diederich said. "I'm nervous that we will not have a place for the kids by fair time, though. Last year we had 90 head of cattle in the old barn."

This year's fair will be held Aug. 1-8.

The county is contributing $100,000 to the $160,000 cost for an enclosed 80-by-150-foot steel, clear-span barn with a dirt floor, Diederich said.

"We were hoping through grants and contributions to have a finished barn by fair time, but if not, we could build the roofed and open-sided structure with the money the county has approved," Diederich said.

"Several 4-H groups are planning fundraisers," Dickard added. "But we know with the economy we have right now the project may take longer to complete."

The large open-sided structure near where the new livestock building will be is completely full at fair time, Dickard said.

Diederich has been working with the Jerome County Commission, along with the fair's board and foundation, and said that bringing together the new barn is a slow process considering the current economy.

"We are in a time crunch right now to make sure the roofed but incomplete structure, at least, will be there to use by fair time," Diederich said.

"Even with the county's approved $100,000 there can be various hold-ups that delay using that money," she added.

Still, she's optimistic that regardless of the project's progress, this year's fair will provide the same standard that county residents are accustomed to.

"It's nerve-racking but one way or another we will accommodate the kids and their livestock," Diederich stated.

Child abuse can come from many sources

Since it is National Child Abuse Prevention month I thought I'd talk about child abuse this week.

We should all know that abuse of children includes both physical and sexual abuse, but there are other forms of abuse not commonly discussed that I believe deserve attention. Although the following is based mainly on my opinion, I also believe that many officers feel the same way.

The first form abuse I'll

POLICEMAN
DAN
Dan
Bristol

discuss involves one parent turning children of a divorce against the other parent. This is usually accomplished by constantly telling children things that are not true until the children start to believe they must be true.

This creates distrust of a good parent and if the lie is discovered it could create a future of not trusting anybody. This could create children who could grow up without the skills of adult social responsibilities, which then could be passed on to the next generation. This creates generations of narcissistic personalities, which I see a lot of in domestic violence issues, including stalking.

Another form of abuse is not telling a child that they failed (in a positive way, of course) when they did fail. Children who think they can't fail will never succeed in life when they move out if they can't handle failure. Letting children fail and teaching them to succeed is a power all its own. Children who have not dealt with failure can become high users of escaping problems by chemical means or even worse, suicide.

These children are usually enabled by "not-my-kids" parents when it comes to criminal matters. This causes the criminal behavior to continue until a judge helps them learn what a lifetime of failure really causes.

The final and worst form of abuse is the verbal bashing that children endure. These are the children that continually hear how "stupid" or "bad" they are, even when they are good children. This becomes a self-esteem issue could lead to a lifetime problem

Lack of asthma symptoms leaves triathlete wondering

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 47-year-old female amateur triathlete in very good health. I take meloxicam for chronic bursitis in my heels, but that is all. I was quite surprised at my last physical to be diagnosed with asthma, since I had no symptoms. My doctor had me get a chest X-ray, which showed inflammation. She then had me get a pulmonary-function test, which showed improvement with medication. She told me to use an inhaler as needed.

How do I know when I need an inhaler if I feel no symptoms? Is it safe to assume my asthma is not serious if I don't experience anything? Besides, if the asthma is so mild, why is it showing up in all these tests?

DEAR READER: Most people with asthma attacks experience wheezing, long-term shortness of breath, chest tightness, nasal flaring, prolonged exhalation, chest pain, abnormal breathing patterns and cough. Some may have a personal or family history of hay fever or eczema. I find it interesting that you've had no symptoms and that you remain so active.

Asthma is a chronic lung disease that is caused by airway inflammation. People of all ages can be affected; however, the condition often begins in childhood. Of the 22 million people in the United States that carry the diagnosis, more than 25 percent of them are children.

When an attack occurs, the muscles that surround the airways become tight, causing the lining of the passages to swell. This results in the familiar wheeze associated with the condition. Triggers include mold, pollen, airborne chemicals, dust, animal dander and tobacco.

Recognizing and avoiding triggers are the first steps for control. Beyond that, there are two types of medication commonly prescribed — those that provide quick relief while an attack is in process and others that provide long-term relief. Long-term medications are used regularly to help prevent attacks but are not used to treat them. An inhaler will be used for many drugs prescribed as a means of getting the medication directly into the lungs.

In conclusion, I just want to say that children are a blank canvas whose final illustration is mainly painted by parents. Stay inside the lines, our future could count on it.

You say you are on meloxicam for bursitis. By any chance, do you take aspirin? You could have what is known as aspirin-sensitive asthma. Meloxicam is not recommended for people with this sensitivity and should be used with great caution by people with asthma.

Request a referral to a pulmonologist, who can review your pulmonary function test and your lack of symptoms, discuss any possible association with the Mobic, and then make a determination about your perceived asthma. If so, you will be instructed on how best to manage it. Then, armed with the peace of mind of a second opinion, you can return to your primary-care physician with the information and proceed from there.

Louise Wright Adamson

Louise Wright Adamson, our beloved mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, age 85, of Twin Falls, passed away peacefully at her home in the early afternoon hours Sunday, May 3, 2009. She was the wife of Warren M. Adamson, who preceded her in death on Dec. 18, 1986.

Louise was born July 29, 1923, in Blackfoot. She was the seventh of eight children born to James Henry and Edith Almira (Apgood) Wright. She graduated from Buhl High School in 1940 as salutatorian of her graduating class. Louise was a child of the Great Depression and, as such, attempted to live her life free from debt and always striving to have a little "nest egg" that she and her family could fall back on. Her children are grateful that, due to her infirmities, she was never fully aware of the current economic crisis that has its depression-type grip on the country that she loved so very much.

Louise was known as an extremely hard worker and made every effort to assure that her four children had an excellent understanding of the American work ethic. Her four sons, James, Jerel, Dannis and Jon, were all college graduates of which she was very proud. Louise had a beautiful voice and she loved to sing. She would make delightful comments regarding the years that she spent with the "Singing Mothers" choral group of the Twin Falls LDS 4th Ward. She loved quality piano performances.

During the first 20 years of her 44 years of marriage, Louise was a stay-at-home mother for her four sons. However, in 1963, she started a daycare nursery program in her home so that other mothers would have a reliable place for their children to be cared for. Two years later, Louise became the office manager for Dr. Willard Clark's family physician practice, where she stayed for approximately 20 years. Due to her strong personality and work habits, it is unclear whether Dr. Clark worked for her or that she worked for him. She loved working with Dr. Clark and his nurse, Beth Zornick, and getting to know Dr. Clark's patients.

Louise was strong-willed with a healthy sense of right and wrong. As she raised her four children, it was never difficult to understand what she thought about any given topic or situation. Louise helped her husband build many beautiful homes in the Twin Falls area as well as several "get away" cabins for the family in Hailey and south of Featherville. Mom and Dad loved to get away to the cabin where mother would read her unread newspapers cover-to-cover and dad (at mother's direction) worked on the cabin they then owned or was away to the river catching fish for dinner. She loved the South Fork of the Boise River and the surrounding area.

Surviving Louise are her beloved sons, James W. Adamson (Larrie) of Spokane, Wash., Jerel H. Adamson (Teresa) of Pocatello, Dannis M. Adamson (Ruth) of Pocatello and Jon Dee Adamson (Linda) of Boise. Also surviving Louise are her nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Her parents; five sisters; two brothers; her grandson, Tim Adamson; and her loving husband, Warren, preceded her in death.

Louise's overriding desire was that she spend the last years of her life at home. She detested the idea of being placed in any type of institution near the end of life. Her desire was met but not without the loving assistance of many wonderful people that helped her to remain in her home. The family would like to thank the dedicated service of the Aspen Grove Home Health and Hospice for the service and care they rendered to Louise during the last years of her life. Also helping Louise to remain at home were the tireless efforts of her personal care-givers that provided invaluable loving care to Louise. The list is long but the following cannot be ignored. Lorina, Susan, Gloria, Martha, Tatiana, Claire, Sara and Julie spent countless hours assisting Louise. Thank you to all of you for the love and tender care.

The family will receive friends and relatives and pay their last respects to Louise between the hours of 6:30 and 8 p.m. Thursday, May 7, at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave E. in Twin Falls.

Lloyd A. Hamilton

Today, May 3, 2009 (Sunday), I passed from mortality to immortality. I have used up all my tomorrows. I always knew this would happen. I think this plan is a good one.

I was born in Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 25, 1916. This has always been all right with me. When asked why I was born in that location, I reply, "Because I wanted to be near my mother." My parents were native Idahoans serving a two-year mission at the time for our church. We came back to Idaho when I was a few months old. I grew up in Sugar City and worked in those growing years in the family farming and sheep business. In later high school years, I was attracted to Nina Madora Kinghorn. After that, I never considered marrying anyone else.

At the appropriate age, I filled a mission to Oklahoma and Missouri. Following this, Nina and I were married in the Salt Lake City Temple on April 2, 1941. Our early married years were spent in the family business. In 1946, I entered the insurance business. In 1955, we came to Twin Falls and established the Lloyd A. Hamilton Insurance Agency, which we sold in 1981.

Community and church assignments have been a member of the Boy Scout Council, Twin Falls United Fund, Board of Trustees of the College of Southern Idaho, Toastmasters, president of the Boise Temple (together with my wife, Nina), and missions to Sri Lanka, India, and the LDS Temple in Atlanta, Ga., all shared with Nina.

In addition to my sweet and beloved Nina, I am survived by seven children, Sylvia Lynne Brown (Ross), Jeanne Nielson, Barry K. (Jacque), David L. (Bonnie), Camille Holladay (Lance), Lesli Bucher (Frank) and Melanie Hamilton. Extended progeny includes 29 grandchildren (and some spouses) and 43 great grandchildren.

I am not a self-made man. I am the many-times remodeled product of a wife and seven children.

My plan is to go wherever we go from here and try to make some preparations for those of you who will follow after. Meanwhile "I'll just keep hoein' corn."

We, the family, express heartfelt gratitude to all of the fine people of all religions and personal persuasions of the Magic and Treasure valleys who have been so kind and generous with our parents and with us, rendering our lives in this area so sweet and fulfilling. Because our father always did his utmost to serve his family, his fellow man and his God, we find it particularly appropriate that he was privileged to depart this life on a Sabbath day and rest from his labors.

We further express our sincere appreciation to the staffs of St. Luke's Home Care and White Mortuary who have been so caring and sensitive with us at this poignant and challenging time, as well as the physicians and surgeons who attended to our father in his declining years.

In lieu of flowers or similar memorials, appreciated though they would be, since our father was one who quietly went about doing good, we would request that you go and do likewise. Call or write an estranged family member. Make a generous contribution of your time, means or both to your favorite charity. Do a kindly deed for your neighbor in his need. Forgive a debt. Drop a grudge. Generally be sensitive to the needs of someone else and do what you can to lift or share a burden, comfort an affliction or dry a tear. Ultimately, the finest tribute to anyone's life is to love and draw closer to one another and in doing so, also to Him whose we all are.

A visitation for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, May 7, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." The funeral is under the direction of White Mortuary and will be conducted by Bishop Adam Hodges at 11 a.m. Friday, May 8, at the Twin Falls Stake Center adjacent to the temple on Eastland Drive with additional visitation preceding the service at 10:30 a.m.

Interment will be at 1 p.m. Saturday, May 9, at the Sugar City Cemetery.

Fleeing refugees tell of Taliban crimes, abuses in Pakistan

By Haq Nawaz Khan
Special to the Washington Post

GOLRA, Pakistan — Hajji Karim and his extended family of 70 were camped in a dirt-floor stable 10 miles outside Islamabad, the Pakistani capital. It was as far as they could get from the Swat Valley, where thousands of people are fleeing from the ravages of the Taliban and the imminent prospect of war with government forces.

When Taliban fighters first entered Karim's village last month, he recounted, they said they had come to bring peace and Islamic law, or sharia. But the next day, two of the fighters dragged a policeman out of his truck and tried to slit his throat. Horrified, a crowd rushed over, shouting and trying to shield the officer. The fighters let him go, but the incident confirmed the villagers' worst suspicions.

"We all said to each other, what sort of people have come here? And what kind of sharia is this? Cutting off people's heads has nothing to do with Islam," recounted Karim, 55, a bus driver. "The people were filled with great rage, and great fear."

Authorities in North-West Frontier Province said that with the conflict intensifying, they expect half a million people to flee the once-bucolic Swat region near the Afghan border, much of which is now occupied by heavily armed militants. Officials announced Tuesday that they plan to open six refugee camps in the safer nearby districts of Swabi and Mardan, but until then, many who leave home to escape the violence are facing the arduous task of finding their own shelter.

As the refugees begin streaming out of Swat and the neighboring Buner district in northwest Pakistan, they carry with them memories of the indignities and horrors inflicted by occupying Taliban forces — from locking women inside their homes to setting donkeys on fire — as they tried to force residents to accept a radical version of Islam.

The government has not helped, refugees said, with its erratic, seesawing efforts to both appease and fight the militants. Some said they felt confused and trapped, unsure whether to trust the peace deal forged by the government and Taliban leaders last month, or to flee in anticipation of the fighting that has now begun as the peace accord collapses.

Sher Mohammed, a property dealer from Mingora, the main town in Swat, was one of the first people to reach a new refugee camp in the Mardan district with his wife and children Tuesday night. On Wednesday, he kicked the dirt outside their tent despondently, saying that after enduring two years of fighting and Taliban abuses, he had had enough.

"I feel like I have lost my mind," he said. "I work hard to make a respectable life and educate my children. Now we are living in a camp, and my sons are talking of guns."

Mohammed said he did not understand why the country's powerful army had not been able to defeat the militants before they took over the valley. Even now, after a week of sporadic fighting, military officials have not announced an offensive against the militants who occupy much of Swat and Buner. The Taliban has repeatedly rejected government overtures to salvage the peace deal, in which the militants agreed to disarm if sharia courts were made the exclusive form of justice in Swat.

Undercover police arrest two Palestinians with ancient text

JERUSALEM (AP) — Undercover Israeli officers foiled an attempt by two Palestinian men to sell an ancient, valuable papyrus document on the black market, police said Wednesday.

The men were arrested at a Jerusalem hotel Tuesday after a sting operation lasting several weeks, police said. The 1,900-year-old Hebrew document, previously unknown and valued at millions of dollars, was rescued, and police showed it to reporters.

It was unclear where the two men obtained it, police and archaeologists said.

Similar documents have been found in caves in the Judean Desert near the Dead Sea, where they have been preserved over the centuries by the dry climate, they said.

The most famous of those are the Dead Sea Scrolls, ancient holy books and apocalyptic treatises thought to have been collected by an ascetic Jewish sect two millennia ago.

The document, six inches by six inches, contains 15 lines of Hebrew characters of a type also used in the Dead Sea Scrolls, but is a legal text apparently unrelated to the more famous scrolls.

Hard work: A Minico baseball tradition

The final out was made, gloves were jubilantly thrown in the air and the trophy was presented to the five-time Great Basin Conference West baseball champion Minico Spartans.

There was only one thing left to do on Monday night: get dirty.

In customary Minico style, the players dove head-first into the dirt between first and second base. They even coaxed the Minico coaching staff to take a dive (view a photo of grown men wallowing in dirt at www.magicvalley.com/blog/s/sports).

It's tradition. They're Dirtbags, after all. Getting their uniforms dirty is symbolic of their gritty effort and intense mental edge. At Minico, kicking up infield dust after wins is as traditional as winning itself.

But victories were harder to come by in Spartanville this season. Early on, it appeared Minico's streak of conference titles and state tournament berths was in jeopardy.

Trouble was, this year's Minico squad was inexperienced. The 2008 team, which won a school-record 26 games and finished third at state, graduated all four pitchers in its rotation and Nos. 2 through 6 in its batting order.

Consequently, Minico stumbled out of the gates, starting this season 3-9. The nine losses were more than the Spartans had tallied in the previous two years combined, and it marked the highest loss total in coach Ben Frank's seven-year tenure.

The turning point came after an embarrassing 10-2 home loss to Twin Falls on April 1.

"It was a bad loss and we took it personally. It was terrible. We were sick of losing," said sophomore Casey Christiansen.

The seniors gathered the team together.

"We said, 'We've got to start doing something different. What we're doing now isn't working,'" said senior Alex Moon.

So, as Dirtbags tend to do, they got their hands dirty and went to work. They began staying late after practice and gathering for early-morning workouts before school.

"I've never had a group do that before, meet and practice on their own early in the morning," Frank said. "This is probably the most proud I've ever been of a group."

Soon, things started to change. Early in the season, a Spartan batter would fall behind 0-2 in the count and end up striking out. Now, they're battling and putting balls into play. Early in the season, routine ground balls would turn into errors. Now the Spartans are digging those out.

There's a reason their T-shirts simply say: SCRAP.

And wouldn't you know it? The Spartans started winning. Since that Twin Falls loss, Minico has won 15 of its last 17 games and earned a trip to state. Today the Spartans will host Pocatello for the Great Basin

Tribe baseball tops Trojans, heads to state

By John Derr
Times-News writer

BUHL — Dylan Brooks pitched a no-hitter into the seventh inning, leading Buhl to an 11-7 victory over Wendell in the South Central Idaho Conference championship game.

Wednesday's win puts the Indians back in the Class 3A state tournament, where they lost the consolation championship game last season. They open play on May 14 at Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, Ore., against the second seed out of Region 1.

The Trojans still hope to make it to state as well, where they finished third last year in 2A. They will face Sugar-Salem at 4 p.m. today in American Falls. A victory there puts them up against Bear Lake on Saturday for the final 3A berth.

Things started well for Buhl Wednesday as Brooks was in total control. Marco Avelar doubled and scored on a single by Matt Hamilton in the third while Brooks walked and scored on a single by Dade Pettinger in the fourth. The lead could have been more, but Buhl stranded six runners through the first four innings, most in scoring position.

Things got a little strange. A quartet of walks and a trio of infield errors put four runs on the board for Wendell in the top of the fifth. Even without surrendering a hit, Brooks and the Indians trailed.

It didn't take long for Buhl to right the ship. Three straight walks loaded the bases while a wild pitch and error tied the score.

Pettinger, the No. 9 hitter, stepped up and belted one over the fence in center making it a 7-4 lead.

"I have hit all three of my home runs this year off the first pitch," said Pettinger. "I felt I needed to do something, but I didn't know I would hit a home run."

Brooks was happy to see it.

RECORD SETTERS

RYAN HOWE/Times-News
Minico's Breonna Phillips, left, receives the baton from teammate Hayli Worthington during the medley relay at Monday's District IV-V track and field championships at Minico High School. The Minico team, which also included Marlee Chandler and Kelcy Hamilton, won the race and set a school record in the event.

Minico's medley relay teams set mark, again

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Three weeks ago, Minico's girls 800-meter sprint medley relay team broke a quarter-century-old school record.

On Wednesday, they broke it again.

The team of Hayli Worthington, Breonna Phillips, Marlee Chandler and Kelcy Hamilton broke their own school record in the event, turning in a time of 1 minute, 51.3 seconds. Their performance highlighted the first day of the District IV-V track and field championships at Minico High School, which serve as a qualifying event for next week's Class 4A state meet in Boise.

"I've always felt we had it in us," said Phillips. "We have the most heart I've seen, but I think we surprised ourselves with how well we did right off."

What makes the Spartans' record-setting feat even more remarkable is this group has only competed together twice. Plus, it was Worthington's first meet back after suffering an injury during a powder puff football game two weeks ago.

"I think we could do well at state," Worthington said. "We've got the speed and we're all really focused."

Other event winners included Jerome's Carrie Thibault in the pole vault. The sophomore nearly cleared her personal goal of 10 feet, but came up short. However, her vault of 9 feet,

Few surprises at opening day of 3A meet

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

FILER — If there are any upsets to be had at the Class 3A District IV state track and field qualifier, they were lying in wait for today's full slate of action.

There were precious few surprises in the opening session of the two-day meet, with the usual suspects perched around the top of the final standings in the 10 events contested at Filer High School on Wednesday.

Buhl and Kimberly asserted their dominance over the girls events early in the meet, splitting four of the five wins on Wednesday. Buhl's Desiree Hepworth and Whitney Amoth took victories in the 3,200 meters and the shot put, respectively, while the Kimberly long jumper Lexa Murphy and high jumper Kalie Wright scored wins.

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Buhl's Jacob Meiers takes off with the baton in the third leg of the boys medley relay Wednesday evening at the 3A district meet in Filer. "It's nice to realize your hard work came through for ya," said Meiers after his relay won the race that will send them to state.

Hepworth, who finished with a time of 11 minutes, 56.52 seconds, led teammate Skyler Barger home in a 1-2 finish for Buhl in the 3,200, with Kimberly's Kaitlyn Gerard finishing third and also qualifying for state. Barger smashed her personal record to beat Gerard and bolster Buhl's team lead heading into today's final session (39 points to Kimberly's 29).

"In the back of our minds you think about team points but if you focus on that too much it gets into your head. But yeah, it's good for our team," said Hepworth. "This is good for me, I met my (personal record) so that gives me a lot of confidence. And Skyler shaved so much time off of her record ... we didn't think she was going to be able to do that so we're all really proud of her."

The only real surprise of the day came when Gooding's girls medley relay team upset Buhl's by four-hundredths of a second to clinch the only automatic berth to state.

Each relay district champion from around the state qualifies automatically, while the rest of the berths will be assigned to the next best district times from Districts III-VI, Buhl track assistant Bill Fields explained. The top three

CSI baseball hammers CNCC

By Justin Lawson
Times-News correspondent

CARSON CITY, Nev. — It wasn't quite the first-round bye they were looking for, but it was close enough.

The College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles walked out of the first round of the Region 18 baseball tournament with an 8-0, run-rule victory over Colorado Northwestern while barely using their bullpen.

The eight-inning win helped preserve the Golden Eagles' pitching staff, which will likely be needed against No. 2-seeded Southern Nevada when the two face off at 2 p.m., MDT, today.

"I was actually real excited to play this game," CSI coach Boomer Walker said. "Obviously, you go into your season and you want a bye in the first round, but this group of guys likes to play the game so, (with) an extra added game, hopefully we can use that to our advantage."

Starting pitcher Tyler Barrett did exactly Walker needed him to do: throw strikes. The sophomore held the Spartans to just two hits in seven innings and had four strikeouts and a walk. Walker sent in Trey Mohammed in the top of the eighth in the hopes of using Barrett again during the tournament if needed.

"My pitches were working real great," Barrett said. "I had a good week in practice."

Both of the hits Barrett gave up were in the first inning.

Twin Falls softball stays alive at tourney

The Twin Falls softball team rebounded from an 8-5 loss to Highland by winning two elimination games at the Region Four-Five-Six tournament Wednesday in Idaho Falls.

The Bruins beat Idaho Falls 4-2 and topped Madison 6-3 to earn a 1 p.m., date with Skyline today. That winner will face Highland in the championship game, where both participants will earn state seeds.

Twin Falls struck out just three times total in Wednesday's games.

"I was really impressed with that," said Bruin coach Ken Johnson.

Twin Falls outhit Highland 11-8, but gave up four runs apiece in the first and fourth innings. Katelyn Fjeld struck out seven with three walks. She fanned nine batters in the win over Idaho Falls and catcher Kalli McBride went 2-for-3 at the plate.

Brianna Bishop pitched the win against Madison, which saw Allie Johnson go 2-for-3 with a double. Bishop recorded five strikeouts.

Boston Celtics guard Rajon Rondo (9) and Eddie House celebrate during the second half of Boston's 112-94 win over the Orlando Magic in Game 2 of their NBA basketball Eastern Conference semifinal series in Boston on Wednesday.

Rondo, House come up big for Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — Rajon Rondo took the pass from Eddie House and bolted for the basket, cutting between 6-foot-11 Dwight Howard and 6-10 Rashard Lewis for a thunderous dunk.

In a crucial game for the Boston Celtics, the little guys came up big.

Rondo had 15 points, 18 assists and 11 rebounds for his third triple-double of the playoffs, and House scored a career high-shattering 31 points on Wednesday night to lead Boston to a 112-94 victory over the Orlando Magic that evened the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Howard had 12 points and 12 rebounds and Lewis had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Magic, who stole Game 1 and home-court advantage on Monday night despite blowing almost all of a 28-point lead.

Game 3 is Friday night in Orlando.

Rondo had 12 assists without a turnover at the half and finished one assist short of his career high. The only time the 6-1 point guard has had more than 18 assists was the triple-overtime Game 6 of the first-round series against Chicago in which he played 57½ minutes.

"He picked up where he left off last game," House said of Rondo. "He had a lot of energy on both ends of the court."

Ray Allen scored 22 points and Kendrick Perkins had 16 points and nine rebounds for the defending NBA champions, who avoided heading to Orlando down 0-2 and assured themselves of at least one more game in Boston.

Paul Pierce of the Celtics scored three points in 16 minutes, hitting a 3-pointer for the first basket of the game but he picked up two fouls in 50 seconds early in the first quarter and headed to the bench. He played just 2 more minutes in the second quarter before picking up his third foul, and lasted 4:07 into the third before drawing his fourth and sitting back down.

By the time he came back in — to give House a rest — Boston was nursing a double-digit lead in the last 4 minutes and the crowd was chanting "Eddie!" for the backup who helped them open a 26-point lead and coast to victory.

House went 11 for 14 from the field, making all four of his 3-point attempts and adding four 2-pointers from at least 20 feet in 27 minutes — the most he's played in a playoff game since he was a rookie with Miami in 2001. In the last three games, House is 18 for 24 from the field and 10 for 12 from 3-point range.

Spite, not love, driving Favre's potential return?

MILWAUKEE (AP) — For most of his career, he was celebrated as a tough guy playing a man's game with the joy of a little boy. Now Brett Favre stands on the verge of plunging the sports world into yet another offseason's worth of waffling on his retirement.

Does Favre really want to play for the Minnesota Vikings — or is he simply willing to jump at any chance to play against the Green Bay Packers and prove a point to the man who traded him, general manager Ted Thompson?

That doesn't seem to be a particularly important question in the Twin Cities right now, where the potential signing of Favre is seen as the final piece in an otherwise Super Bowl-ready roster. The chance to tweak a division rival makes it even juicier.

Even Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty — perhaps forgetting that he'd need to pick up a vote or two in Wisconsin if he runs for president in 2012 — called the potential Favre signing "a wonderful little salt to rub in the eyes of some of our Green Bay Packer friends" on Wednesday.

"Can you imagine Brett Favre going into Lambeau Field in Viking purple and maybe even wearing No. 4?" Pawlenty asked. "There would be audible gasps."

Right now, the collective sound emanating from Wisconsin — and anywhere else fans have tired of Favre's now-annual bouts of public indecision on his football future — is a loud, protracted groan.

The 39-year-old Favre, who is a free agent after retiring for the second time in as many years and being released by the New York Jets, is scheduled to meet with Minnesota coach Brad Childress this week to discuss the possibility of playing for the Vikings, according to several media reports.

Favre's agent, Bus Cook, did not return messages left by The Associated Press. But in an interview posted on USA Today's Web site Wednesday afternoon, Cook reiterated that Favre remains retired, said he wasn't aware of any meeting with Childress, and denied that Favre would return simply out of spite.

"Are there certain things about the Packers, how things ended there and he felt they didn't treat him right? That's true," Cook told the newspaper. "Does he have a certain vendetta against them? That's not true. If he came back, it would be because he wants another chance to win a Super Bowl."

Santana fans 10 in Mets win

NEW YORK — Johan Santana extended his dominant start to the season, striking out 10 in seven innings of two-hit ball, and the New York Mets scratched out a run Wednesday night on Pedro Feliz's throwing error for a 1-0 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

In their first visit to the Mets' new ballpark, Citi Field, the Phillies wasted an excellent performance from previously struggling starter Chan Ho Park, who allowed one hit in six shutout innings.

Santana (4-1) lowered his ERA to 0.91 and won 1-0 for the second time in six starts this year.

Carlos Delgado chugged home from first base on his bad hip when Feliz threw away pinch-hitter Fernando Tatis' infield single to third with two outs in the seventh.

BRAVES 8, MARLINS 6

MIAMI — Garret Anderson's first three RBIs this season helped the Atlanta Braves end a four-game losing streak.

Chipper Jones and Omar Infante drove in two runs apiece, and Derek Lowe (4-1) won his third start in a row despite giving up six runs in five innings.

Florida's Jorge Cantu tied a career high with five RBIs.

CARDINALS 4, PIRATES 2

ST. LOUIS — Albert Pujols homered for the fourth time in five games and Chris Duncan's two-run triple in the fourth inning was the go-ahead hit as the Cardinals snapped a three-game losing streak.

Pujols went 4 for 4 and is batting .611 (11 for 18) with two homers and three RBIs against the Pirates in five games this season.

BREWERS 15, REDS 3

CINCINNATI — Ryan Braun hit his second career grand slam off Bronson Arroyo, who couldn't make it through the second inning.

J.J. Hardy also had a three-run homer off Arroyo (4-2), who failed to retire a batter in the second inning and left with a 9-0 deficit. It

AMERICAN LEAGUE INDIANS 9, RED SOX 2

BOSTON — Carl Pavano pitched his third strong game in three weeks, Victor Martinez homered and drove in four runs and Cleveland ended Boston's nine-game home winning streak.

The right-hander allowed two runs in six innings and lowered his ERA in his last four games to 3.75. It was 16.71 after his other two starts.

CUBS 6, ASTROS 3

HOUSTON — Rich Harden pitched into the eighth inning and Reed Johnson hit a bases-loaded triple for Chicago.

Aramis Ramirez added a solo home run for the Cubs, who have won five of six.

Harden (3-1) allowed his first run with two outs in the fourth before retiring the next 10 batters.

ROCKIES 11, GIANTS 1

DENVER — Ubaldo Jimenez pitched seven strong innings to get his first win in a month for Colorado.

Todd Helton homered and had three hits, Matt Murton hit his first home run of the year and Yorvit Torrealba homered and drove in two runs for the Rockies.

ROYALS 9, MARINERS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mark Teahen had four hits and drove in three runs, and Sidney Ponson made a strong case to stay in the rotation with 7 1-3 solid innings to lead the Royals.

The Royals won their fifth straight, turning the matchup between surprising division leaders into a rout early. They battered Carlos Silva (1-3) and got 17 hits.

Mike Jacobs, who had three RBIs, and Billy Butler each had three hits as Kansas City won for the seventh time in eight games. Ponson (1-4) allowed one run on eight hits.

Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. returned the lineup and doubled in his first at-bat after missing three games with stomach pain.

RAVS 4, YANKEES 3

NEW YORK — Carlos Pena homered leading off the 10th inning, and Tampa Bay survived a sudden downpour and Mark Teixeira's tying, three-run double in the eighth.

Pena was hitless in his first three at-bats before driving a 1-0 pitch from Phil Coke (1-2) just over the right-field wall for his major league-leading 12th home run.

Pens get must-win OT victory over Caps

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Penguins finally solved Simeon Varlamov, finally controlled Alex Ovechkin for most of a game and got the victory they needed to get back into their playoff series against the Washington Capitals.

Kris Letang scored his first career playoff goal on a shot from the point after Sidney Crosby's faceoff win in overtime and the Penguins avoided going down three games to the Capitals, winning 3-2 in Game 3 of the Eastern Conference semifinals on Wednesday night.

Letang's shot deflected off a Capitals player and ricocheted past controlled Alex Varlamov, who had stopped nearly everything the Penguins threw at him. Washington scored first — on a goal by Ovechkin, who else — then let Pittsburgh control most of the way. The Penguins outshot the Capitals 42-23 and had a 7-2 edge in power plays.

Pittsburgh also got Evgeni Malkin's pivotal first goal in six games and shook off Nicklas Backstrom's late power-play goal to win their sixth consecutive overtime playoff game, five by 3-2 scores.

The victory prevented near certain elimination for Pittsburgh. No NHL team has rallied from a 3-0 playoff deficit in 34 years.

Game 4 in a series in which Washington won the first two games by one-goal margins at home is Friday night in Pittsburgh. Game 5 will be Saturday night in Washington.

HURRICANES 3, BRUINS 2, OT

RALEIGH, N.C. — Jussi Jokinen scored at 2:48 of overtime to lift the Carolina Hurricanes past the Boston

Bruins 3-2 on Wednesday night in Game 3 of the Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Sergei Samsonov scored a goal and assisted on Jokinen's winner for the Hurricanes. Carolina outshot the Bruins 41-23 to claim a 2-1 series lead with Game 4 set for Friday night in Raleigh.

Mark Recchi and Milan Lucic both scored their first goals of the playoffs for Boston. The top-seeded team in the East has lost two straight and finds itself trailing a playoff series for the first time this year.

At Players Championship, the course is the star

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Even with the strongest field in golf, The Players Championship is among the few tournaments where the biggest star is the golf course.

The Stadium Course on the TPC Sawgrass has a personality all its own.

Sure, it is renowned for its island green on the par-3 17th, perhaps the most notorious short hole in golf where players have hit 312 balls in the water over the last five years alone. But the shot is only 137 yards, a wedge for most players.

The winning score has ranged from a record 24-under 264 by Greg Norman in 1994 to 3-under 285 by David Duval in 1999.

The list of champions is as impressive as any — Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, Davis Love III, Nick Price, Fred Couples — yet no one has ever repeated as champion.

It can look easy. But it can play hard.

A small sampling of players in the days before The Players Championship showed how complex this place can be. They were asked to describe the TPC Sawgrass in one word.

"Exciting," offered three-time major winner Padraig Harrington, the only player to be runner-up in consecutive years. "What I mean by that is that it's not a big brute of a course with long, boring par 4s. There's quite a lot of short, tricky par 4s out there. And there's a lot of intimidating shots. A lot of water. It's a course that's exciting at all times.

"Even without the players this week, it would be an exciting event."

The Players Championship did not have Woods last year, the No. 1 attraction in golf, and there was excitement aplenty. It ended with a sudden-death playoff — the first playoff to start on the 17th hole — and Paul Goydos promptly hit his tee shot into the water.

"Tricky," is the word chosen by Woods.

His record is most peculiar. Woods was runner-up in 2000 to Hal Sutton, then won the next year over Vijay Singh. But he has not cracked the top 10 since then, his longest such streak of any PGA Tour event. He has never led after any round in any year except for when he rallied to win on a Monday in 2001.

The Stadium Course does not discriminate, offering winners who are power players (Woods, Norman, Couples, Mickelson) or short hitters (Fred Funk, Lee Janzen), stars (Price, Duval, Davis Love III) or unheralded winners (Craig Perks).

Only eight of the champions at Sawgrass have failed to win a major.

Most people consider The Players Championship as the fifth major, which is why Steve Stricker used "challenging" for his word.

"It not only challenges you physically, but it challenges you mentally," he said. "It's like a major. There's no letup on any hole. On every single shot, you have to be committed."

Sergio Garcia is the defending champion when The Players Championship begins Thursday, its 28th consecutive year on a course designed by Pete Dye and often described as "Dye-a-bolical," for the punishment the course metes out on whim.

Goydos earned more notoriety for his playoff loss than any of his two PGA Tour victories, in part because of his everyman personality that served as such a contrast to Garcia's illuminating career.

Some debated whether starting a playoff on the 17th hole was fair or done purely for promotional purposes, but the guy who paid the steepest price had no qualms.

Star athlete's arrogance is familiar high school story

DEAR ABBY: I am a secondary school teacher and would like to comment on the letter from "Sports Dad Down South" (Feb. 9) about his teenaged, athletic star son.

That boy has an ego problem that is out of control. I see it in the classroom every day. Many successful athletes think that only the "little" people have to do class work, be on time to class and complete homework. They have the best relationships with their coaches who "intervene" on the athlete's behalf, regardless of behavior and effort - soliciting "help" for a student who often does not deserve it.

I have watched an athlete's arrogance fed daily by those who attach the kid's value as a person to the level of his performance at that evening's game. Abby, I hope that "Sports Dad's" stellar-performing son eventually will recognize that other influences are shallow and lack the depth of his father's love.

- TEXAS TEACHER

WHO KNOWS

DEAR TEACHER: Thank you for writing. I heard from many other teachers, administrators and parents - all eager to share what they have learned in dealing with teens who are high achievers in sports.

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am also the parent of a talented athlete.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

He was popular in high school, great in football and basketball, and was wooed to university with a scholarship in hand. The problem was, in spite of our urging to buckle down and study, he admitted to us on high school graduation night that he had cheated the whole way through. Now at 21, he has thrown away his scholarship, quit the university, and is wandering around wondering why he was never picked up by the NFL.

Somewhere in high school, amid all the accolades, our son lost touch with reality. Please advise "Sports Dad" to not give up on his son while he still has a chance, and to impress upon him how important hard work and discipline are.

- MOM IN MOURNING

DEAR ABBY: We have stressed to our college baseball star son that no matter how successful any athlete is, there will come a time when he or she retires from their beloved sport. Not everyone makes it to the pros, and not all those who do have longevity or stunning success in the sport.

IF MAY 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

You might become known as a "go-getter" in the year ahead, especially during the next two months when your ability to structure your time wisely is at its height. You are hard working and may develop a nose for sound business practices, but also are willing to give in to a sense of fun at the drop of a hat. Your deep passion for success might come full circle in August, when a new friend, group or inspiration can send you in a new direction. A romantic encounter could have you humming love songs in August. You are highly ambitious this year, but must not burn any significant bridges or rush too quickly into new projects in October.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Think and act like a champion - and the next thing you know, you will be a champion. You have the ability to lay out successful strategies that makes almost any project or idea a win-win situation for everyone involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stress the benefits. In any skillful negotiation, you must offer something that will benefit both parties. You will receive respect in intimate relationships as well as business circles if you strive to be fair.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could have a hankering for a quiet retreat and some private space in which to accomplish necessary tasks. Some matters require participation within a team and maintain almost constant interaction.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Nail down the details. You can hammer out an agreement without causing anyone pain, angst or confusion even if the subject matter is somewhat delicate. Hang your hat on keeping your word.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Cooperate while you compete. You may be surprised to find that even your most fervent adversaries value your opinion and are willing to listen to what you say. Work toward a peaceful compromise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you can't escape responsibility, then sit back and enjoy it. You might feel you do not deserve rewards or opportunities. Be thankful that someone recognizes your talents and places a high value on them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Apply yourself. "Business as usual" may require a more than usual amount of time and effort. You will earn more respect - as well as Questions the youngster must consider are: (1) What will he do when he is not playing anymore? (2) How is he going to help his community and society with his talent? And most important (3) what will he do if, God forbid, he is injured?

Having an idea of what he loves besides sports is very helpful. That will help "Dad" steer him into a college and major that fit.

- BASEBALL MAMA IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: To "Sports Dad": The fact that a 17-year-old finds your limits a problem can be a good thing, depending on how unrealistic his attitude is. His dislike of your parental positions can mean you are doing a good job. Kids really do not respect a doormat. He can have many friends, but he has only one dad. - KATHY IN METAIRIE, LA.

DEAR ABBY: Has it occurred to "Sports Dad" to investigate the possibility that his son's behavior might be caused by steroids?

- KATE IN ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: That father and son remind me of a saying I heard years ago: "When they are 5 years old, they have all the questions. When they are 17, they have all the answers." I've found out through the years that this isn't far from reality.

- BURL IN DALLAS, N.C.

more money - by focusing your efforts on the finest products and practices.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you have a bottle and a genie, then start rubbing. One of your most compelling career or business wishes may come true. It may take some effort on your part to achieve your objectives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Branch out. If you want to make more money or create more long-term security then you need to be like a tree that sends extra branches out where the sun shines the brightest. Exert effort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It isn't necessary to sacrifice quality for quantity. Take pride in owning the very best and be proud of your ability to balance a desire for superlative profits with consideration and thoughtfulness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enjoy a potpourri of delightful experiences. You attract romantic glances. People are more than willing to cooperate, especially if they can assist you in achieving your business or career goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Remain available. Even if you aren't in the mood for social interchanges a certain amount of small talk may be essential to your success. Don't try to separate yourself as part of an exclusive club.

NEWSPAPER IN EDUCATION

Today is Thursday, May 7, the 127th day of 2009. There are 238 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On May 7, 1915, nearly 1,200 people died when a German torpedo sank the British liner RMS Lusitania off the Irish coast.

On this date:

In 1789, the first inaugural ball was held in New York in honor of President George Washington and his wife, Martha.

In 1833, composer Johannes Brahms was born in Hamburg, Germany.

In 1840, composer Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky was born in Votkinsk, Russia.

In 1909, Edwin H. Land, inventor of polarizing filters and Polaroid instant photography, was born in Bridgeport, Conn.

In 1945, Germany signed an unconditional surrender at Allied headquarters in Rheims, France.

In 1954, the 55-day Battle of Dien Bien Phu in Vietnam ended with Vietnamese insurgents overrunning French forces.

In 1960, Leonid Brezhnev replaced Marshal Kliment

TODAY IN HISTORY

Voroshilov as president of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

In 1975, President Gerald R. Ford formally declared an end to the "Vietnam era." In Ho Chi Minh City - formerly Saigon - the Viet Cong celebrated its takeover.

In 1977, Seattle Slew won the Kentucky Derby, the first of his Triple Crown victories. (On this date in 2002, Seattle Slew died.)

In 1984, a $180 million out-of-court settlement was announced in the Agent Orange class-action suit brought by Vietnam veterans who charged they'd suffered injury from exposure to the defoliant.

Ten years ago: NATO jets struck the Chinese embassy in Belgrade, killing three people and injuring 20; President Bill Clinton called the attack a "tragic mistake." A jury in Pontiac, Mich., ordered "The Jenny Jones Show" to pay $25 million to the family of Scott Amedure, a gay man who was shot to death after revealing a crush on Jonathan Schmitz, a fellow guest on the talk show. (However, the Michigan Court of Appeals later overturned the award, and the Michigan Supreme Court refused to hear an appeal.)

Five years ago: Army Pfc. Lynndie England, shown in photographs smiling and pointing at naked Iraqi prisoners, was charged by the military with assaulting the detainees and conspiring to mistreat them. (England was later convicted of conspiracy, mistreating detainees and committing an indecent act, and sentenced to 36 months; she served half that term.) Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld offered "my deepest apology" to abused Iraqi prisoners and warned that videos and photos yet to come could further inflame worldwide outrage.

One year ago: President George W. Bush, addressing the Council of Americas, said Cuba's post-Fidel Castro leadership had made only "empty gestures at reform" as he rejected calls for easing of U.S. restrictions on the communist island.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"We shall nobly save or meanly lose the last, best hope of earth."
— Abraham Lincoln

Today's deal raises the issue of when, if ever, to ruff in when declarer has a potential loser in a suit.

You can predict what will happen at most tables. East will cash the diamond king and ace, then lead his lowest diamond. On this trick South will pitch a club. West will ruff in and hope to score either a trump trick or a club trick later on. But he will be disappointed.

Let's rewind and consider West's defense here. Despite his possible trump trick, it must be right to lead the singleton diamond against four spades — it is partner's suit after all — planning to set up slow diamond winners or to take two ruffs.

But what about his play to the third trick? The likelihood that he will generate an extra trump trick by ruffing in is slim to none. Declarer is not likely to lose a spade finesse to West once East shows up with six diamonds to East's one.

If, instead of ruffing, West simply discards on the diamond six, dummy's queen wins the trick. Declarer must lose a trump trick to West, and there will be no parking place for declarer's remaining club loser.

Ruffing in here would be a variation of ruffing on air — it just happens to be a less obvious bad idea than usual.

ANSWER: It is tempting to bid three hearts, hoping to play game in hearts. More realistic is to look for the best result possible — playing in a club partscore, which rates to be safe enough. With slightly better hearts I would look for the 6-2 or 6-3 fit. But clubs is likely to be your side's best strain, and your high card rates to be worth nothing to your partner. It's time to pass.
