SIRCOMM names three director finalists

John Moore named interim director

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

The four-county joint powers board for Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center named three finalists Thursday to interview for the dispatch director position that's been vacant since March.

The board also tapped John Moore, SIRCOMM's technical coordinator, as interim director. The position has been vacant since mid-March when former director John Shearman was placed on leave and then resigned.

The three finalists are Dave Parrish, 50, who works for the Idaho Department of Fish & Game in Boise; Camille Holladay, 57, a regional communications supervisor for the Idaho State Police in Pocatello; and dental office manager Debbie Sousa, 31, of Twin Falls, according to Jerome County Commissioner Charlie Howell, vice chairman of the Joint Powers Board, and Gooding County Commissioner Tom Faulkner.

There were 12 applicants, said Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell, who serves as board chairman.

The board agreed to send letters to the finalists Thursday and hopes to conduct interviews in about two weeks in order to fill the position within a month.

The new director will oversee all operations and management activities at the dispatch center, which handles dispatch duties for more than 40 police, fire and EMS agencies in Gooding, Jerome,

Looking down the road

Every area of CSI's Herrett Center under scrutiny to save money, bring in more visitors

By Ben Botkin Times-News writer

At the Herrett Center for the Arts & Science, visitors can experience everything from exotic, slithering snakes to a peek at the galaxy in the Faulkner Planetarium.

A popular stomping ground for youngsters on field trips and older museum enthusiasts, the Herrett Center at the College of Southern Idaho could see changes in the future. The center's staff has brainstormed ideas in recent weeks of how the center could save money as well as bring in more visitors and revenue in its long-term future.

The ideas and questions they bring are plentiful and touch on all aspects of the center's attractions. Should the Herrett Center charge an admission fee? What should be done about the planetarium's 1995 technology? Are dozens of snakes needed at the center?

"We need to think down the road," said Jim Woods, director of the Herrett Center.

Every area is under scrutiny but no final decisions have been made, Woods said. The center did its review at the request of CSI President Jerry Beck.

While state funding cuts are currently happening, Beck said he's also looking several years into the future, when the college's federal stimulus funding ends. Beck has asked all the departments across the campus to do similar planning, not just the Herrett Center.

Health coverage for all

New proposal would help families making less than $88K pay premiums

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar and Erica Werner Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — House Democrats are crafting a plan that would require all Americans to carry health insurance and would help families making less than $88,000 pay the premiums. Employers, too, would have to help foot the bill.

It's the latest development in President Barack Obama's push to fix the ailing U.S. health care system by getting the government more deeply involved.

Obama has said the final legislation must rein in costs, guarantee choice of health plans and medical providers, and ensure that all Americans have access to affordable coverage. But he's leaving it to Congress to work out the details.

Responding to a question at a town hall-style meeting in New Mexico on Thursday, Obama said he expects a plan from Congress that will be a "vast improvement" over the current system.

A document obtained by The Associated Press provides an early look at where

Bridging the problems

As Pole Line project begins, residential concerns remain

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

While construction on the Twin Falls Alternate Route is scheduled to begin this fall, some local residents are already waiting for the ribbon-cutting.

Included in the $53 million, five-mile bypass from Grandview Drive to the U.S. Highway 93/30 interchange — funded mostly by the federal stimulus — is replacing the bridge over Rock Creek.

But some residents are frustrated and have contacted ITD officials to express traffic concerns. Motorists will use Addison Avenue, about two miles south, as an official alternate road.

Tony Mayer, who lives in north Twin Falls and said he frequently uses the bridge, has been writing ITD. He said Thursday ITD could easily build a temporary bridge, and diverting traffic will lead to problems, given the growing roadwork projects in Twin Falls.

"I think it's unconscionable they would even consider shutting down this alternative route around this city and turn a blind eye to the significant safety and hazard concerns that will be caused by doing that," he said.

ITD said the bridge closure will lead to some congestion and frustration but

F&G to proceed on plan to cut pelican numbers

By Nate Poppino Times-News writer

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission adopted a new pelican management plan on Thursday, clearing the way for state wildlife managers to slash populations of the birds at two colonies.

Once on the decline, the birds have experienced tremendous recent growth. A colony on Lake Walcott in the Minidoka National Wildlife Refuge now holds an estimated 4,000 birds, while a second at Blackfoot Reservoir is home to about 2,400.

Fish and Game biologists, however, found that the birds harm cutthroat trout and sport fisheries in eastern Idaho and possibly in the Magic Valley as well. The plan seeks to cut the number of pelicans nesting at Blackfoot by 1,700 over the next five years and calls for further study of the Lake Walcott colony before likely halving it.

Pelicans are protected under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act of 1918, and the state now needs permission from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to fully implement the plan. Some aspects — most of the non-lethal actions — Fish and Game can start right away. The rest won't be doable until the department acquires the Fish and Wildlife permit, a process that will likely take a year.

Little is set to change on Lake Walcott, where Fish and Game needs to study the pelican colony and its effects on nearby fisheries before determining what harm the birds cause there, Deputy Director Virgil Moore said.

Studies are also planned for the Blackfoot population, aimed at refining fish-predation statistics and even tagging and banding birds to see how many are actually local to Idaho. A monitoring and evaluation program — something a number of public groups asked for — will help Fish and Game adapt the plan to changing population numbers and other conditions, Moore said.

Commissioners also directed Fish and Game staff to attach a summary of the public comments to the management plan, Moore said. The department

Law & Disorder... ...in Cassia County

From May 7 police reports: Resisting arrest, impersonating Jesus:

A 31-year-old man allegedly walked into the Little Flower Church in Burley and claimed to be Jesus Christ.

The man, Jose Rangel-Ruiz, has a tattoo of the Virgin Mary on his shoulder with "GRR" above it.

According to the report, Rangel-Ruiz was let in by the secretary, who assumed he wanted to pray, then walked to the front of the church, lit some candles, rearranged various items and sat on the floor with his hands gestured toward a crucifix.

Father Reginald Nwauzor arrived.

"Jose then sat on a chair and told Father Reginald that he was Jesus Christ," the report reads.

When police arrived, Rangel-Ruiz allegedly mumbled something in Spanish about Jesus and refused to provide any identification. He struggled when police attempted to place him in handcuffs until Deputy Matt Arthur threatened him with a Taser. He then complied and was arrested for obstruction.

Animal control:

A 46-year-old Burley woman reported that her neighbor's dog ran toward her, growling and barking but not attacking. She yelled at the dog and it ran off, but she insisted on pressing charges for a vicious dog at large. The dog's owner, a 61-year-old man, said the woman's two small dogs regularly come onto his property and bark.

From May 8 police reports:

Probation violation:

Police were dispatched in Burley "for a suspicious male going door to door asking for money and disturbing people." He was on misdemeanor probation and had been drinking. He was arrested for the violation.

Vandalism:

Someone let the air out of the tires on school buses parked at the bus garage in Burley — the second time it's happened in the past month.

The center's projector in the planetarium is one example. The projector system still puts on a good show, Woods said, but the system, installed in 1995, is showing signs of aging. Now, only one company produces the cathode ray tube, a part of the projector that lights up the planetarium shows.

The planetarium also has a system of smaller Kodak projectors that are no longer produced. While all the equipment is functioning, finding parts to fix the technology can be a challenge, said Rick Greenawald, the planetarium manager.

He compared the situation to trying to find parts for a classic car that still runs fine.

New projector technology, though, would cost anywhere from $400,000 and $700,000.

"I also understand the realities of the current economy," Greenawald said. "We're still working to make the planetarium the best it can be."

Woods stressed that the Herrett Center would need time to make any changes.

For example, if the center would want to be selective about the new owners of its snakes if they were given away.

"We've got 50 snakes," Woods said.

The center this fiscal year has a budget of $609,500, slightly up from the center's budget last fiscal year of $584,986.

Fees from the planetarium and observatory in the last fiscal year generated $43,843, college records show.

Besides fees from the planetarium and observatory, there is no admission cost and one idea is to charge an admission fee, Woods said.

For now, things at the Herrett Center will continue as they always have while planning continues.

"This is not something that we'll make any decisions on immediately for the Herrett Center or any of the other sections of campus," Beck said. "I'm looking more down the road."

Democratic leaders in the House are heading as they try to meet an ambitious July 31 deadline for passing their version of the legislation. The Senate is working on a similar plan, with some key differences, on the same timetable.

The plan by the House Energy and Commerce Committee would build on the current system in which employers, government and individuals share responsibility for health insurance.

But it would make major changes: Individuals and employers would face new obligations to help pay for coverage. Insurers would operate under stricter consumer protections. And the government would take added responsibilities for setting insurance rules and providing financial help to low- and middle-income families.

"It's a sensible, mainstream proposal," said Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., a member of the fiscally conservative group of Democrats known as the Blue Dogs. "If we do something along those lines we will be in the right ballpark."

But Rep. Dave Camp, R-Mich., questioned the proposed requirements that individuals get coverage and employers help pay. "Clearly the individual and employer mandates will come at great cost, and part of what we want to do is create an affordable plan for everybody," said Camp.

Momentum for a health care overhaul built this week after Obama obtained a pledge from medical providers to find $2 trillion in savings over 10 years to help pay for his plan.

Even before any legislation has been officially introduced, lawmakers are grappling with dozens of thorny issues. On Thursday, the Senate Finance Committee met behind closed doors for eight hours to debate whether their bill should include the choice of a government insurance plan for middle-income families.

Insurers, hospitals and employers oppose the concept, and so do most Republicans.

the new road and bridge would benefit everyone.

"Life will be good, but its going to be painful," ITD engineer Devin Rigby said.

The 18-month bridge closure has been decided since the state ruled out its other options, according to Rigby and a letter ITD Board Chairman Darrell Manning sent to Mayer in April.

Engineering prohibited expanding the bridge or performing a fill-in, and instead will completely replace it. Redoing the bridge also meets the mitigation requirement for wetlands.

They also point to how years ago locals protested a bypass bisecting farmland and wanted it instead to remain on the existing road.

The new road will still be two lanes but will be wide enough to eventually allow four lanes. If portions can be opened up once finished, the state will do it, Rigby said.

"As soon as we can allow those types of things to happen, yeah, we're going to do that," Rigby said.

The project was somewhat unexpected. After years of failing to receive funding from the state, the project got the green light from $41 million of the state's portion of federal stimulus funding and $12 million in additional federal funds.

But in speeding up the project, construction will add to an already packed slate of construction projects in town. Work on Blue Lakes Boulevard will last until October and Washington Street North will be torn up and widened next year.

The project will be advertised in mid-June and bids will open about a month later. Construction is expected in the fall.

received roughly 260 written comments about the plan, he said, running the gamut from arguing that the birds are "too majestic to kill" to advising commissioners that the plan doesn't get rid of enough birds.

"Most of them were not a surprise to us," Moore said.

And even along the Blackfoot River, where Fish and Game is already allowed to kill a smaller number of pelicans each year, Moore said officials will try to keep shooting the birds to a minimum. They feel the public is much more receptive to oiling pelican eggs, which suffocates the embryos. Rumors of a hunting season are false, Moore said — though Fish and Game evaluated that tactic, too many obstacles make it impractical.

"Oiling of the eggs is a very accepted management tool, even by those who really don't want the animals directly shot and killed," he said.

Blaine schools adopt suicide screening program

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A pilot program to screen Wood River High School and Middle School students for depression and suicidal tendencies will begin next fall.

The Blaine County School Board approved the use of the Columbia University TeenScreen Program Tuesday night.

The program will be reviewed at the end of the 2009-2010 school year at which time it could be expanded into the alternative school, Carey schools and The Community School in Sun Valley.

Columbia University began offering the suicide prevention program in 1999. Today it has more than 500 screening sites in 43 states and four countries.

Students with written consent of a parent or legal guardian are given a short set of questions relating to symptoms that occur in depressed or suicidal youth. Students who answer yes to a certain number of questions will be referred for a short interview with a mental health professional to determine whether they might benefit from continued assessment.

Professionals who feel a child might benefit from treatment can suggest resources to parents. Tod Gunter, Wood River Middle School social worker, says he believes at least half of students and their parents will agree to the screening.

Julie Carney, Wood River High School social worker, said she is collecting letters of support from county commissioners, the Community Drug Coalition, health care professionals and others as required by TeenScreen. Counselors also had to pass a test to be certified for the program.

"It's exciting because one of the leaders of the program back in New York called to lend her support," Carney said. "She has a niece and nephew who go to Wood River schools and has visited the valley so is willing to help in any way she can."

Erin Hart, who heads up St. Luke's Center for Community Health, said her organization is happy to connect teens and their families to resources.

"TeenScreen is a nationally recognized program that has helped other communities," she said. "... This program gives tools to schools and parents to help them get help if it's needed."

Three Creek School approaches levy deal

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

ROGERSON — The Three Creek School board made a motion to approve a resolution calling for a one-year supplemental levy election for $20,000 on Wednesday evening.

The board reviewed the voter lists for Twin Falls and Owyhee Counties within the Three Creek School District. Teacher Marylin Boss said since there are only 10 registered voters that reside inside the school district boundaries in each county, two polling sites aren't needed.

However, after the board reviewed the voter lists, there appear to be discrepancies. The board's efforts will include contacting the county courthouses to update the voter lists and contacting residents living within the district to encourage voter turnout.

Absentee ballots will be provided for registered voters at the annual Three Creek community meeting, held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Three Creek School.

The levy election is scheduled from noon to 8 p.m. June 16.

The one-year levy would add $2 of taxes to every $1,000 of taxable assessed value. The board will explore facility needs.

"We're hoping to build a gymnasium with storage in it or build a storage unit," Boss said. "It probably will not be enough, but it will be a good start."

In other business, there is a scheduled power outage from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 22 in the Three Creek area for power equipment repairs.

Hagerman house will be razed for school parking lot

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman School District is accepting bids to demolish and remove a vacant house on school property to pave a parking lot.

The 1,000 square-foot house located on three-quarters of an acre at 280 Second Ave. N., south of Hagerman Elementary School was purchased about two months ago, said district Superintendent Ron Echols at Tuesday's board meeting. "There were no bids to purchase and relocate the house," he added.

Board member Chuck Steele estimated it would cost $40,000 to $50,000 to bring the house up to code and at least $17,000 to relocate and connect the house to city utilities.

Since there were no bids to purchase and relocate the house, the school board is now accepting bids to remove the structure. A separate garage and shed may be used for storage.

"It's a shame no one offered to purchase and relocate the house because it's a quaint little house," said district Clerk Bette Reed.

In other business, Principal Mark Kress said Hagerman High School staff and students were moved by the Hagerman Fire District's "Every 15 minutes" program Friday afternoon. The program included a mock funeral to help warn of the dangers of teen drunken driving.

Kress said he "hopes kids will hold on to that and be safe."

Human-caused wildfires increase in Calif.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Embers drifting from a campfire in a canyon ignite a blaze that incinerates 53 homes in Malibu.

A man driving on a dirt road in a forest stops on a swath of dry grass, and the hot engine kindles a wildfire that burns thousands of acres.

And a fire that destroys 78 homes in the Santa Barbara area is believed to have been caused by sparks from a power tool being used to clear brush.

A growing number of wildfires in California have a common back-story: people caused them.

Government statistics show that people were faulted for 5,208 wildfires in Southern California in 2008, the highest number since at least 2001. Between 2006 and 2008, Southern California was the only region of the U.S. to see a significant jump in the number of wildfires blamed on people.

Among the explanations given by experts: a three-year-old dry spell in California, the building of homes deeper and deeper into the backcountry, and perhaps better investigation and reporting of fires.

"As the drought continues in California, there are going to be more human-caused fires," said Don Smurthwaite, a spokesman for the National Interagency Fire Center in Idaho. "You can see the spread of development in virtually every area of the West," he added. "More people is always going to equate to more fires."

Nationally, about 70,000 wildfires in 2008 were attributed to human causes — a thoughtlessly flicked cigarette, a campfire left smoldering, a fallen power line, and sometimes, outright arson. That's about the same number as in 2001, although the figures fluctuate from year to year. The peak since 2001 was 80,220 wildfires in 2006.

E. Idaho woman wants murder charge dismissed for good

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A southeastern Idaho woman is appealing a judge's decision to dismiss a murder charge against her because the dismissal was done in such a way that the murder charge can be refiled.

Dorothy Jean Porter, 53, filed the appeal last week with the state Supreme Court claiming that 7th District Court Judge Darren B. Simpson violated her right to a fair and speedy trial.

Porter was charged with first-degree murder in the July 21 shooting death of her husband, Greg Porter. She says her husband committed suicide.

Dorothy Porter spent 246 days in jail before Bingham County Prosecutor J. Scott Andrew requested in March the charge be thrown out because forensic testing would not be finished in time for the April 21 trial date.

Simpson threw out the charge without prejudice, meaning it can be refiled.

Deputies found Greg Porter sitting upright in a recliner at home near the front door with a .22-caliber Ruger firearm in his lap. They said they later found blood on Dorothy Porter's right index finger and on the top of her right hand, along with gunshot residue on both of her thumbs.

Dorothy Porter concedes she had argued with her husband about the home's cleanliness but maintains she was in the bedroom when he committed suicide.

Scott Axline, Porter's attorney, asked Simpson to dismiss the murder charge with prejudice, which would have prevented it from being refiled.

Simpson denied that request, and Porter's appeal claims that is an error.

The appeal also said Simpson erred in ruling the state could test "certain items of evidence" without defense experts present as long as the procedures were videotaped.

Fifth Swine Flu case confirmed in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Idaho public health officials say tests have confirmed another case of Swine Flu in Idaho, bringing the state's overall total of confirmed cases to five.

The Centers for Disease Control validated the new case Thursday for an Ada County adult male. It's the third case in the state's biggest county.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare also identified two more probable cases Thursday, both of which are in Ada County.

The newest case involves an employee at the Boise Centre on the Grove, a convention center in downtown Boise.

Pat Rice, general manager at the Boise Centre, says the employee has not reported to work since Saturday and is recovering at home.

Otter seeks faster exit of foreign inmates from Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter wants federal judges to help change the way Idaho inmates from foreign countries go through the legal system so that the state can save money.

Otter last week sent a letter to U.S. District Judge B. Linn Winnill in Boise asking that federal deportation hearings be held before state parole hearings.

"Potentially we see this as a cost savings for taxpayers, and also a more effective use of resources," Otter spokesman Jon Hanian told the Coeur d'Alene Press.

"It would greatly enhance our ability to make appropriate parole decisions if the federal immigration hearing was conducted before a parole hearing," Otter wrote.

He said that would allow the Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole "to determine the best course of action for the inmate, victim and society."

And he said the Idaho Department of Correction could save money by not placing inmates in certain programs — such as drug or alcohol treatment — when those inmates will eventually be deported.

"That, and we may be looking for opportunities to get them out of the system altogether and back to the countries of origin," Hanian said. "What we'd like to do is have a discussion about this process. We are reaching out to him (Judge Winnill) to begin that discussion so that he can involve other federal judges who don't reside in the state of Idaho who may have impact on this decision."

Winnill, through a spokesman, said he could not comment on the letter because he is presiding over several immigration cases, creating a conflict of interest.

Sen. Mike Jorgenson, R-Hayden Lake, said he has been pushing to cut funding that he said supports illegal immigrants, and that's what spurred Otter to write the letter to Winnill.

Jorgenson said there are 355 foreign nationals in Idaho prisons costing the state more than $7 million a year.

"The issue is simply this: Foreign nationals are incarcerated, then when they're released, they're going to be deported, and we're spending a lot of money to put them through a therapy that's for naught," Jorgenson said. "It's not going to be any benefit to Idaho to invest all this money in them when we deport them when their sentences end."

It's unclear how much money the state could save if Otter's recommendations are followed.

"It really depends on the inmate," said David Hensley, legal counsel to the governor. "Some treatment and programming is more expensive than others. I can tell you drug treatment, alcohol treatment, behavioral changes, those treatments vary in costs and some of it can be extensive."

Accreditation of natural history museum in doubt

POCATELLO (AP) — The Idaho Museum of Natural History is too undermanned to properly care for its many collections and therefore won't receive accreditation, the American Association of Museums said in a report.

The association also found the staff at the museum at Idaho State University has a "universally low morale," and has little involvement in the planning process.

Museum Director Skip Lohse said he's making changes based on the report released in April and will eventually try again for accreditation.

"Pragmatically, we can get a long way down the road they've asked us to go," he told the Idaho State Journal. "Whether we can do it in a year I'm not sure. If we tell them we need more time that doesn't prejudice the process."

The association asked the museum to submit a report on its progress by Sept. 1. Besides the prestige, accreditation is needed for museums to receive many of the grants that are available.

"Weak collections management, inadequate staffing, lack of adequate planning and resources and poor facilities are all putting the collections at risk, as well as the museum's ability to meet its mission," the report said. "The problems are serious enough that we came close to denying accreditation outright."

Lohse said the museum's budget has been cut 12 percent and will likely lose another 12 percent next year.

"The reality that's hit us is we're never probably going to see any increase in the state appropriations," Lohse said. "We're going to have to diversify our portfolio. We're simply going to have to become more of a business."

Two curators have been dismissed and Lohse said he plans to put in place a system with three half-time curators who he said would be more active in obtaining grants and overseeing research at the museum. A collections manager would also be hired.

"Someone who is a half-time curator has far more time to put into it," Lohse said. "We're negotiating with people on campus now."

Also, a research group involving the sciences on campus will be made to work on projects. Lohse said research will be the main focus of the museum, though public programming will remain important.

The report also said the museum had a lack of space to display its collections. Lohse said collections that are rarely displayed could be sent to other departments within the university.

Man convicted in body parts scheme

LOS ANGELES — A man was convicted Thursday of carving up cadavers donated to UCLA's medical school and selling the parts to unsuspecting medical research companies in a $1.5 million scheme.

Jurors found Ernest Nelson, 51, guilty of eight counts, including grand theft and tax evasion. Prosecutors said Nelson could face a maximum of 12 years in prison and they want him to repay $1.5 million to UCLA.

Nelson "was willing to go into a willed body program and cut up body parts for his own personal financial gain," prosecutor Marisa Zarate said after the verdict.

Defense attorney Sean McDonald said he was disappointed by the verdict and left court without further comment.

Prosecutors said Nelson and Henry Reid, the former director of UCLA's Willed Body Program, devised the scam in 1999.

Nelson, who ran a business transporting body parts to hospitals and medical research firms, has said he thought the sales were authorized by the university.

Officials consider wolf quota of 26-165

HELENA — Wildlife commissioners establishing a Montana wolf hunt are being advised to consider the political and social sensitivities surrounding the animal as they contemplate how many wolves hunters will be allowed to kill.

The state commissioners, planning a 2009 hunt now that Montana wolves are off the federal endangered species list and management has transferred to the state level, gave tentative support Thursday to a quota that would fall between 26 and 165 wolves. Montana's wolf population at the end of 2008 was estimated at around 500. The commission plans to set the quota on July 9, after taking public comment in the coming weeks.

The higher the quota the greater the chance Montana will be portrayed as jeopardizing its wolf population, a portrayal that could help fuel more action demanding court-ordered protection for the species, wildlife manager Ken McDonald of the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks told the agency's commissioners.

"We're looking to manage these animals," Commissioner Dan Vermillion said. "We're not looking to exterminate them."

Murtaugh residents deserve answers from City Council

Murtaugh has 144 residents. Including the members of the City Council, 20 percent of them came to City Hall Wednesday night. They had questions about problems at the city-owned Artesian City Cemetery located south of Murtaugh Lake. In late April, farmer Darrell Funk — at the request of Mayor Dee Hunsaker — cleaned up the property with a bulldozer and removed trees.

Some citizens called that desecration. An investigation by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office is underway. Murtaughites are angry — one, Mychal Matthews, claims Funk's gear damaged grave-stones and perhaps even graves — and they wanted to talk to the City Council about it this week.

Council members wouldn't oblige. Bill Hollifield, Murtaugh's contract city attorney, told the elected council not answer any audience questions, citing the ongoing investigation. Matthews said during the meeting a civil suit against the city is likely, as well.

Afterward, Hollifield declined to cite legal justification for his advice to the council or whether he even knew of an investigation. So while the public sought answers about the biggest issue for generations in the tiny eastern Twin Falls County community, council members sat in stony silence.

That's unacceptable. Murtaugh council members aren't just private citizens; they're public officials sworn to uphold the interests of the community. And they have a civic responsibility to be responsive to taxpayers on an issue that's clearly in the public domain.

Council members reminded us a bit of the rogue investment bankers hauled before congressional committees earlier this year who refused to discuss their actions, citing Fifth Amendment privilege. They did their constituents a disservice by their silence.

Our view: A city council member in Idaho isn't a potted plant; he or she has an obligation to engage with constituents on legitimate issues of public concern.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Only in California, where the buck stops elsewhere

The late John Kenneth Galbraith might have had next week's California special election in mind when he described politics as "choosing between the disastrous and the unpalatable."

TIM RUTTEN

According to the most reliable polls, the state's voters already have chosen the former. All of the budget-balancing propositions that Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger and the Legislature placed on the May 19 ballot appear headed for resounding defeat — except the one allowing temporary cuts in lawmakers' salaries.

A solid majority of voters is leaning this way even though it's clear that rejection will set in motion a historic fiscal bloodletting with wholesale cuts in popular programs and vital services. To understand why so much of the electorate prefers this clear disaster, you have to understand just how unpalatable Californians find not only the budget initiatives but also the politicians who produced them.

The most recent survey by the nonpartisan Public Policy Institute of California found that Schwarzenegger's approval rating among likely voters is at a low of 34 percent. More than half of all Republicans, Democrats and independents disapprove of the job the governor is doing. The Legislature fares even worse: 80 percent of likely voters disapprove of the job it's doing, while just 12 percent approve.

There's an even more corrosive finding in the poll. For the last five years, its survey has asked this question: "Would you say that state government is pretty much run by a few big interests looking out for themselves, or is it run for the benefit of all the people?" This time, 76 percent of the respondents who are likely voters said they believe that special interests call the tune in Sacramento. And the truth is, they're right.

Corporate income taxes contribute just 11 percent of the state's annual revenue. Sales and use levies generate 35 percent. One of the reasons California's revenue picture is so catastrophic is that Sacramento now depends on the personal income tax for more than 50 percent of its annual income. Personal income is extraordinarily vulnerable to the vagaries of the business cycle, because recessions increase unemployment and downturns squeeze the high-income earners who pay a disproportionate share of the income tax. Last year, collections on capital gains fell 55 percent, and they probably will decline 10 percent more this year. The governor's budget people project that sales taxes will fall 15 percent, while property taxes will decline 4 percent.

What's most distasteful about the package of budget compromises is that Schwarzenegger and the legislators spared many of the most powerful special interests any responsibility for helping Californians cope with this crisis. The major financial backers of the budget initiatives are the interests that got their way in the negotiations — Indian casinos and a major teachers union and businesses that blocked any new taxes on their operations.

Major oil companies are among the measures' biggest backers — Chevron has given $500,000 and Occidental $250,000 — as are liquor and beer distributors and vintners, such as E&J Gallo ($100,000), and pro sports franchises, which killed a proposed ticket tax.

The obvious cynicism of this quid pro quo is not lost on voters, an overwhelming majority of whom told the Public Policy Institute that they are pessimistic about the California economy. In fact, just 16 percent of likely voters told the pollsters they trust Sacramento to do the right thing most of the time.

The problem here is that even though voters are drawing rational conclusions about Sacramento's incompetence and malfeasance, the reaction they're choosing is self-destructive. After these measures fail and Schwarzenegger and the Legislature begin to hysterically close a looming shortfall of more than $20 billion, they won't eliminate the obscure board that regulates Shasta County beekeepers and provides comfortable incomes for their old political cronies. They'll go after the programs that fund local government services, because what Sacramento does best is pass the pain.

L.A. County Supervisor Zev Yaroslavsky says rejection of the measures may cost the county, which provides most essential human services, several hundred million dollars. "Children, the poor, the elderly and the sick are the most politically marginalized members of our society. They don't vote, and they don't make the contributions the special interests do."

The question for voters, then, is this: Is it worth "sending Sacramento a message" when the people who ultimately are on the receiving end are our neediest and most vulnerable neighbors?

More government, but no figures on return

Debt, what debt? "A democracy cannot exist as a permanent form of government. It can only exist until the voters discover that they can vote themselves benefits from the public treasury. From that moment on, the majority always votes for the candidates promising the most benefits from the public treasury with the result that a democracy always collapses over loose fiscal policy."

Nobody knows who said it first, but it's the full-length mirror that you cannot avoid.

We give billions to other countries and expect no payment in return, billions in welfare and assistance with no anticipation that the recipients will improve their positions. We print trillions to cover money promised for high risk and unsupported programs that show no signs of equitable return or market stabilization, and I do understand the notion of failed democracy is out of the realm for most, but 10 years ago, you might have thought the same about being $12 trillion in debt. Any economic professor in 1982 would have told you the system would collapse before these numbers became an event. Well, we're still here but on life support.

I see plans on higher taxation to cover bigger government and more projects that replace failed policies, but no figures on return.

I see health care, welfare and immigration reform on the table and, without a doubt, all three are directly related to the systemic decrepitude of the other, but we cannot cut a sick calf out of the group to protect the rest of the herd for fear of alienating a group of voters. Instead, we will pour trillions of dollars and hundred of hours of legislation into a problem without a guaranteed resolution or return.

I want to see a plan to stop spending and pay the debt, but apparently, I'm just one man.

Real credit for cleanup goes to SIORA club

In the Sunday edition of the Times-News on page Main 6 titled "Volunteers clean up the canyon," you did not mention the group that started the event of cleaning up across the canyon in May 1999 called the Southern Idaho Off-Road Association or SIORA for short.

The group has organized the event for the last 10 years with the help of the Bureau of Land Management. Instead, you gave credit to a club that has only been around for a little over a year, Snake River Canyon Krawlers. The Snake River Canyon Krawlers members have only volunteered their time for the last two cleanups, but the real credit goes to the SIORA club.

Snowmobilers do their share of giving

In regard to the letter in the Opinion section dated May 5 titled "No more free-for-all in the South Hills Campground":

As a member of the Magic Valley Sno-Mobilers Snowmobile Club and past president of the club, I would like to address the above-mentioned letter. It seems to me that Samantha Anderson needs to do a little more homework before making proposals that she obviously knows little about.

The Magic Valley Sno-Mobilers, along with the Forest Service's help and permission back in the 1970s, built the Diamondfield main parking lot, bathroom and warming hut facilities that are there today for all to enjoy in the summer and the winter. Snowmobilers pay a fee of $32.50 each and every year to register each snowmobile. This fee goes to pay for the grooming of the snowmobile trails and a portion of the fees goes to help pay for the snow removal in the Diamondfield parking lot areas.

This past year, the Magic Valley Sno-Mobilers, with the help of the Forest Service and Idaho Parks and Recreation, built yet another bathroom and warming hut facility in the Bostetter Campground for all to use in both the summer and the winter.

The Magic Valley Sno-Mobilers have trail cleanups scheduled for the summer to help maintain the appearance of our great South Hills, not to mention the fact the snowmobile club is tasked with maintaining and upkeep of the new bathroom and warming hut facility.

So the idea of the snowmobilers having a free-for-all in the South Hills is kind of backward.

Samantha, you name one organization that does more for the local South Hills than the local snowmobilers do. Times-News, you should have done more research as well before publishing such nonsense.

Otter did right thing on highway funding

This legislative session was one of the longest and most difficult in our state's history. Sometimes this process is difficult to watch, but we believe the priorities as outlined by the governor regarding transportation are correct. As we continue striving for solutions to the problems that our growing state is facing, we applaud Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter for his leadership in ensuring that the maintenance and operation needs of Idaho's highways are funded at more appropriate levels to protect the safety of Idaho citizens. We are undoubtedly better off today as a result of his commitment to that goal.

While Gov. Otter has clearly articulated the life and safety issues associated with Idaho's crumbling transportation system, Idaho also must be poised and ready to take advantage of business opportunities that most certainly will present themselves as our state's economy improves. As the Voice of Business in Idaho, members of the Idaho Association of Commerce & Industry — which represents more than 300 small, medium and large employers throughout the state of Idaho — continually stress the importance of a viable and efficient transportation infrastructure as one of the primary factors for expanding or relocating their business. It is imperative that businesses throughout Idaho are able to transport both people and products to and from the marketplace.

READER COMMENT

The new influx of dollars into Idaho's transportation system represents a solid business investment that ultimately will lead to expanded job opportunities and a more diverse economic environment, enabling Idaho to lead the charge out of this economic downturn. We all must be willing to preserve and protect our ability to safely and efficiently travel through our state, and we commend the recent work of the governor and Legislative leaders to look beyond their differences to do what is right for all Idahoans.

The business community understands that, if Idaho is going to continue growing our way out of the economic crisis facing our nation, we must take proactive steps to attract new commerce and industry to this state. When businesses consider moving to a new state there are several things that are quickly assessed:

- 1. Tax structure: How does Idaho compare to other states on the corporate income tax rate and personal property tax rate?
- 2. Education of the workforce: Do people meet the education requirements for the particular business?
- 3. Transportation: Can business easily transport their products and can employees safely travel to and from work?

We applaud Gov. Otter for standing strong and affecting a solution between the House and Senate. While compromises were made all around, without the governor's leadership, Idaho transportation infrastructure would fall further into disrepair, to the detriment of the families and businesses using these roads on a daily basis.

While some in the media want to argue over the success of this year's legislative session, we must acknowledge the positive steps that were taken this year to enhance and protect the state's infrastructure. Legislation was passed for such programs as the Idaho Education Network, comprehensive aquifer management, and initial steps to address the ongoing transportation needs. IACI looks forward to the upcoming interim discussions, and we hope to continue working toward a solution to the deficit in transportation maintenance that is growing each day.

Alex LaBeau of Boise, a 1987 graduate of Twin Falls High School, is the president of the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry. This letter was also signed by Jayson Ronk, the IACI vice president.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Theater, drama, music thrive at TFHS

Bravo to the Twin Falls High School Drama department! Under the superb direction of James Haycock, the two productions just completed were spectacular.

The Children's Theater production of "Nine Tails and a Hairy Toe" was inventive and hilarious. The children that attended were listening and laughing at the same time. They were offered a taste of theater arts that must go on and on.

The tragic drama of "The House of Bernarda Alba," set in Spain in mid-1900 by poet laureate Federico Lorca, was a bold and daring undertaking for this area. The advanced acting class and several adult actresses presented a dark and haunting rendition of a serious subject.

Well done, good shows, and one of the best experiences of my life, to participate with all of you in this terrific production.

Take note, Twin Falls: theater, drama and music thrive for you to enjoy at Twin Falls High School.

What a little vitamin A can do for world's population

KOUNDARA, Guinea — I'm bouncing across West Africa in the back of a Land Cruiser with the winner of my "win-a-trip" contest, Paul Bowers, a student at the University of South Carolina, talking about wonky ways to tackle global poverty — such as vitamin A capsules.

Americans pretty much take vitamin A for granted, but many of the world's poorest people lack it. And as a result, it is estimated that more than half-a-million children die or go blind each year. There's a simple fix: vitamin A capsules that cost about 2 cents each.

I had planned this "win-a-trip" journey in part to introduce Paul to the problem of blindness as an element of global poverty. When I first visited West Africa, I was staggered and depressed by the blind beggars who circled me with outstretched palms.

So there we were, Paul and I, "enjoying" a 50-cent-per-person "breakfast" at a "restaurant" here in the town of Koundara in northern Guinea when we first came face to face with blindness on this trip.

A man named Amadou Bailo shuffled toward us, holding one end of a stick as his daughter held the other and walked ahead of him. In wealthy countries, the blind have seeing-eye dogs; in poor countries, the blind have seeing-eye children. The girl, Mariama, who thought she might be about 9 years old, has never been able to attend school because she spends her days guiding her father. Her older brother was the father's guide before that, so he never went to school either.

"His blindness has kept two of his children from going to school," noted Shawn Baker of Helen Keller International, an aid group that works on vision and nutrition issues. Baker met us, after we had crossed over from neighboring Guinea-Bissau, at such a sleepy border post that we had to wake up a border guard.

Bailo had lost his sight from an excruciating affliction called river blindness, which is caused by baby worms that infest the body and destroy the optic nerve. River blindness was once endemic in much of West Africa and seemed almost hopeless. Yet today, in one of the great triumphs of humanitarian workers, it is under control and perhaps close to being conquered.

Credit goes to former President Jimmy Carter for helping to lead the fight against the disease, to a number of aid groups and to Merck, which donated the medicines to kill the baby worms. Bailo will never recover his vision, but these days, virtually no one in West Africa is going blind from the disease.

Americans sometimes don't want to help poor countries because of doubts about whether aid works. There are legitimate doubts about the effectiveness of many aid efforts, but there also are extraordinary triumphs that don't get attention — such as the war on blindness.

Which leads us back to vitamin A.

In the major Sierra Leone city of Bo, which is about a three-day drive from Koundara, we visited the Paul School for the Blind, an audacious private institution that struggles to educate blind children in one of the world's poorest countries. Some of its students were congenitally blind but 80 percent of the students had lost their sight for reasons related to vitamin A deficiency.

According to the United Nations, half of the children in many African countries are deficient in vitamin A (which comes from liver, mangos, orange-fleshed sweet potatoes and dark, green leafy vegetables), and a disease like measles will quickly deplete their supply further and trigger blindness. The upshot is that vitamin A deficiency is the leading cause of child blindness in the world today.

Health wonks have found that vitamin A supplements reduce not only blindness, but also death from diarrhea and other diseases. A review by UNICEF and Helen Keller International reports that in areas such as West Africa where many children lack the vitamin, child mortality drops by approximately 23 percent after vitamin A capsules are distributed to children.

"Addressing vitamin A deficiency may be the most cost-effective intervention you can implement," said Baker of Helen Keller International.

Now there's a big push already under way to distribute vitamin A capsules twice a year to all children at risk, by such organizations as UNICEF, Helen Keller and the Micronutrient Initiative of Canada. By one estimate, this could lead to 600,000 children's lives saved each year in Africa — and, in the future, many fewer blind beggars being led by their children or grandchildren.

Pfizer to provide free drugs for jobless

By Linda A. Johnson and Matthew Perrone
Associated Press writers

The recession might be a little less painful for some Americans, who won't lose their prescription medications if they lose their jobs.

Pfizer Inc. said Thursday it will give away more than 70 of its most widely prescribed drugs, including Lipitor and Viagra, for up to a year to people who have lost jobs since Jan. 1 and have been taking the drug for three months or more. The announcement comes as the unemployment rate topped 8.9 percent in April.

Pfizer stands to benefit, too — by keeping its customers, and with a tax write-off that will cover much of the cost of the donations. The move also buys the world's largest drugmaker some good will as Washington looks to overhaul the health care system.

"Everybody knows now a neighbor, a relative who has lost their job and is losing their insurance. People are definitely hurting out there," Dr. Jorge Puente, Pfizer's head of pharmaceuticals outside the U.S. and Europe, told The Associated Press in an exclusive interview Wednesday. "Our aim is to help people bridge this point."

The 70-plus drugs covered in the program include several diabetes drugs and some of Pfizer's top money makers, from cholesterol fighter Lipitor and painkiller Celebrex to fibromyalgia treatment Lyrica and Viagra for impotence. Also included are some antibiotics, antidepressants, heart medications, contraceptives and smoking cessation products. Cheaper generic versions are available for most of the drugs.

The program will likely help prevent patients from switching to cheaper brands or generics through the worst of the recession and could help retain those taking top-seller Lipitor, which will begin competing with generic versions next year.

The giveaway was heralded by some as a brilliant marketing move that will generate low-cost publicity, build consumer loyalty and keep inventory from piling up.

"What are the alternatives? To slow down manufacturing operations?" asked WBB Securities analyst Steve Brozak. "This is going to go down as a Harvard Business School textbook example of what to do with product when you can't sell it." Pfizer, among other drugmakers, has seen sales fall for many drugs as people cut spending, even for essentials such as health care.

The 10 best-selling drugs included in the program accounted for more than $26 billion, or 64 percent, of Pfizer's total sales last year. Officials for New York-based Pfizer said they don't know how much the program will cost and haven't put a cap on spending for it.

Brozak said the cost would surely be far less than a national marketing campaign, which can run hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

WASHINGTON House OKs war funds despite defections

President Obama on Thursday won decisive House approval for money to escalate U.S. military involvement in Afghanistan and Pakistan, but the victory obscured anxiety within his party about the course he is taking in the war-torn region.

Some Democrats — as opponents of President George W. Bush's war in Iraq — see the same perils in the new administration's military moves. "This is a bill that I have very little confidence in," Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., an outspoken liberal, said of the $97 billion measure to finance military operations in the region. "But we have a responsibility to give a new president who did not get us into this mess the opportunity to get us out of it."

Despite qualms at the highest levels of the Democratic caucus — Obey is the powerful chairman of the Appropriations Committee — the House approved the funding, 368-60.

The 51 Democrats who voted against the bill included an amalgam of liberal lawmakers who consistently have voted against the Iraq war, critics who believe Obama's strategy in Afghanistan is too vague and others who did not want to spend so much abroad when the U.S. economy is in bad shape.

"It's time for Americans to come to our senses," said Rep. Marcy Kaptur, a Democrat from recession-ravaged Ohio. "Isn't it time to pay more attention to the fraying economy in our homeland?"

Still, the vote was a rare display of bipartisanship: It marked the first time on a major bill that Obama has relied on House Republicans to make up for defections in his own party.

Pelosi: CIA misled lawmakers on torture

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi on Thursday accused the Bush administration and the CIA of misleading Congress about waterboarding prisoners, escalating a political fight with Republicans over her knowledge of the treatment of detainees.

Separately on Thursday, the CIA rejected a request from former Vice President Dick Cheney to declassify memos that Cheney has said show the agency's severe interrogation methods were critical to getting information from detainees that helped disrupt terror plots.

The two developments underscore how the classified details of the CIA's interrogation operations are fueling political skirmishes months after the program was shut down by President Barack Obama.

In her most detailed account to date, Pelosi said that she was told during a classified briefing in September 2002 that the CIA was not engaged in waterboarding, even though records now indicate that the agency had employed the method dozens of times on an al-Qaida suspect one month earlier.

"The CIA was misleading the Congress" as part of a broader Bush administration pattern of deception about its activities, said Pelosi, D-Calif. "The only mention of waterboarding at that briefing was that it was not being employed," she said, adding, "We now know that earlier, they were."

NY air crash raises many safety concerns

WASHINGTON — After three days of testimony about pilot fatigue, failed flying tests and cockpit warning systems, the uncle of a victim of crashed Flight 3407 summed up his frustration: "No one had to die. The behavior was beyond unprofessional."

"This didn't have to happen. That's what came out of this," said Terry Stelley, uncle of Coleman Mellett, 34, a passenger on the doomed flight. Stelley watched a webcast of the National Transportation Safety Board's three-day hearing, from Cheektowaga, N.Y.

The board hasn't reached a formal conclusion about what caused the worst U.S. air crash in more than seven years — it's investigation isn't complete — but the hearing that concluded Thursday exposed a slew of safety concerns involving the pilot training, hiring, pay and fatigue.

Continental Connection Flight 3407's captain, Marvin Renslow, and copilot, Rebecca Shaw, apparently didn't realize they were traveling at dangerously low speeds as the Bombardier Dash 8-Q400, a twin-engine turboprop, neared Buffalo Niagara International Airport on the night of Feb. 12. The plane experienced an aerodynamic stall and plunged into a house below, killing all 49 people aboard and one on the ground.

GEORGIA Habitat for Humanity gets $100 million gift

ATLANTA — The housing market may be sputtering, but Habitat for Humanity International is getting a $100 million gift from an Atlanta businessman who built his fortune developing real estate and is now giving it away piece-by-piece to support affordable housing.

The nonprofit group announced Thursday it received the largest individual contribution in its history, an offering that will help Habitat build 60,000 homes around the globe.

It's one of the largest gifts in recent years to a group devoted to social services, according to the Center on Philanthropy at Indiana University. Dwight Burlingame, the center's associate executive director called it "remarkable" — especially in the midst of a gloomy economy.

The donation comes from J. Ronald Terwilliger of Atlanta, a former chief executive of housing developer Trammell Crow Residential Co. and a longtime member of Habitat's board of directors.

NEW YORK Study: Ginger eases nausea from chemo

Ginger, long used as a folk remedy for soothing tummyaches, helped tame one of the most dreaded side effects of cancer treatment — nausea from chemotherapy, the first large study to test the herb for this has found.

People who started taking ginger capsules several days before a chemo infusion had fewer and less severe bouts of nausea afterward than others who were given dummy capsules, the federally funded study found.

"We were slightly beside ourselves" to see how much it helped, said study leader Julie Ryan of the University of Rochester in New York.

Results were released Thursday by the American Society of Clinical Oncology and will be presented at the group's annual meeting later this month.

But don't reach for the ginger ale. Many sodas and cookies contain only flavoring — not real ginger, Ryan said. Her study tested a drug-like ginger root extract, and it's not known if people could get the same benefits from ginger teas or the powdered ginger sold as a spice.

Chrysler cuts ties with 3 Idaho dealerships

No south-central Idaho dealers affected

The Associated Press

BOISE — Chrysler LLC has identified three dealers in Idaho as part of a move to eliminate about a quarter of its dealerships nationwide.

The automaker identified the dealers Thursday in documents filed in bankruptcy court in New York.

The Idaho dealerships include one in Moscow and another in Sandpoint. A third, in Blackfoot, was listed as a formality after shutting down earlier this year.

Dealers named in the motion were notified Thursday. Altogether, Chrysler is seeking to eliminate up to 789 of its 3,200 dealerships nationwide by early June.

Jeff Mack, co-owner of Ambassador Auto Service in Moscow, said the news is a setback for the dealership, which has sold and repaired Chrysler vehicles for more than 75 years.

The list also names Taylor-Parker Motor Co., in Sandpoint, and Blackfoot Motor Co., in Blackfoot.

With General Motors

Corp. expected to announce it will close about 1,100 dealerships, the crisis in the auto industry is reaching the front doors of Americans who live far from Detroit.

The National Automobile Dealers Association says about 40,000 people work at the affected dealerships. Many will keep their jobs, but their dealerships will be left to sell only the other brands in their showrooms, or used cars.

Chrysler said in its filing that sales are too low at many of the dealerships. Half its dealers account for 90 percent of its sales, and the company is trying to cut poor performers that compete for the same customers.

Dealers learned their fates in letters Thursday morning. The effects will go much further than their bottom lines.

Local media will feel the pinch, too. The average car dealer spent $341,000 on advertising last year, said Paul Taylor, NADA's chief economist. About a quarter went to newspapers, which are already in a struggle for survival.

The average dealer spends $16.5 million per year in the community, including sales, payroll taxes and charitable contributions, Taylor said. On top of that, laid-off workers will spend less, and towns will suffer from lost tax revenue.

HOW MUCH HELP?

Rose Inman packs living room items in the home she is about to lose in Seattle. Inman has been laid-off twice and can no longer afford her $3,100 monthly mortgage payments and hasn't had any luck getting her mortgage bill lowered. The Obama administration expanded its mortgage aid program on Thursday.

T.F. native designs new, more modest hospital gown

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Soon, patients at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center may feel a little less of a draft when wearing their hospital gowns. And they'll have a Twin Falls native to thank for it.

Carleen Egbert, who earned her nursing degree from the College of Southern Idaho and worked at the local hospital before moving to the Boise area five years ago, and Boise anesthesiologist Dr. Brian Kerr have designed a poncho-like hospital gown that provides more modesty for patients while maintaining easy access to the body for medical staff.

The gown, Egbert said, is the product of an offhand remark to Kerr she made roughly four years ago.

"This sweet little lady was walking away from us, and her entire butt was exposed," Egbert said. "I said, 'Why can't they come up with something that covers the butt?'"

The comment apparently stuck with Kerr, who one week later brought a Barbie doll to work dressed in a rough design for a new gown.

"I immediately knew that that was a really perfect design," Egbert said. She was impressed enough, in fact, to spend three and a half years and $15,000 of her own money to patent the gown, and then another few months finding a company to make and distribute it.

She eventually made a winning pitch to medical supplier AMD-Ritmed, which now makes the gowns at a factory in China and promotes the garment's features on its Web site.

The final version of the gown is a piece of fabric draped over the head, then fastened in front with two ties that come around from the back — easier than the back ties of current gowns. Snaps hold together the shoulders, Egbert said, allowing hospital staff to pop the garment open for easy access to the chest.

"You don't have to reach behind your back (to tie the gown), because you're already not feeling good," she said.

Nurses she's shown it to certainly seem sold on the idea, often asking to keep sample garments. Both St. Luke's and Saint Alphonsus medical centers in Boise will receive some of the first shipment of gowns in June, and Egbert said she even expects some to make their way down to Twin Falls.

St. Luke's Magic Valley spokeswoman Jody Tremblay said Thursday that the hospital hasn't evaluated the garments yet, but expects to review them for use there.

"It looks like something we will definitely be looking into," Tremblay said.

Kerr — who actually holds the patent but stayed out of the process to focus on his family and new medical spa in Eagle — and Egbert both receive a share of the gown's royalties through their licensing agreement. Egbert even ended up with a new job: AMD-Ritmed now ferries her around the country to sell her product.

"It's been fun because it's my baby, but it's been a lot of work," she said.

Housing plan extended, but off to slow start

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

With less than 24 hours on the clock, Rose Inman's foreclosure was postponed late Thursday for 60 days. But after spending hundreds of dollars she couldn't afford to find an apartment and pack her things, the last-minute gesture comes too late — she is moving out of her house overlooking Seattle's Puget Sound.

For the past two months she had hoped to benefit from President Barack Obama's plan to help homeowners avoid foreclosure. Despite numerous calls, e-mails and letters to Aurora Loan Services, she was only able to have one phone conversation with a company representative.

"It's like this huge, concrete thick wall that you cannot get through," said Inman, 58, who is working as a human resources consultant, but making much less than she was before she was laid off by the City of Seattle.

On Thursday, the Obama administration said its bold mortgage assistance program launched in March is helping thousands of borrowers, though some lenders are working faster than others. So far, participating mortgage companies have made more than 55,000 offers to modify borrowers' loans, but officials could not say how many of those homeowners had in fact been helped.

And knowing that many troubled homeowners can't be, the Obama administration expanded its $50 billion mortgage aid program, announcing new measures that would help homeowners avoid a foreclosure if they don't qualify for other assistance.

The initiatives are intended to streamline the process of selling a home that is worth less than the mortgage, or transfer ownership of a home to the lender. Both options will still ding the homeowner's credit score, but less than a foreclosure.

So far, 14 companies — including Aurora Loan Services, Wells Fargo, and JPMorgan Chase — have signed up and will be paid for each loan they modify. And to further entice mortgage companies to participate, the government is offering payments totaling up to $10 billion to compensate them for the risk of falling home prices.

"The basic problem is that the program is very complicated and involved to set up," said Guy Ceca, publisher of trade publication Inside Mortgage Finance. He doesn't expect to see large volumes of loan modifications before July or August.

GM says it could sell assets to new company

Automaker says it lost $30.9 billion last year

The Associated Press

DETROIT — General Motors Corp. says it likely would sell most of its assets to a new company and liquidate the rest if it has to seek bankruptcy protection.

The company made the disclosure Thursday in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission. It has said bankruptcy is possible if it doesn't get enough takers on an offer to swap $27 billion in bond debt for stock.

The automaker also says it could seek court approval of its reorganization plan even if creditors vote against it.

GM offered last month to give bondholders 225 shares for every $1,000 worth of bonds. The company would issue 62 billion new shares and then do a 100-for-1 reverse stock split.

Bondholders would end up with 10 percent of the company's shares under the offer, which expires

May 26. But a committee representing the bondholders has counteroffered seeking a 58 percent ownership stake.

GM has received $15.4 billion in U.S. government loans and faces a June 1 deadline to finish restructuring or head into Chapter 11 reorganization.

Postal increase forces small businesses to cut even more

Small businesses already working to hold costs down during the recession have another expense to contend with: higher postal rates.

The price of a first-class stamp went up two cents to 44 cents on Monday, the latest in a series of increases this year by the U.S. Postal Service and private shippers including FedEx Inc. and United Parcel Service Inc. The price hikes have motivated small business owners to think about how they can send letters, cards and packages more cheaply.

They've made Stacie Krajchir think about whether to mail or ship at all.

Krajchir's Los Angeles-based public relations firm, The Bungalow, routinely sends product samples to magazine editors. In the past, PR companies would shower samples on journalists, sending packages to any and every news outlet in the hope that someone would give them some publicity. Now, though, Krajchir's staff is likely to call editors first to see how interested they really are.

"Are they working on a story and looking at different products to include in a story?" Krajchir said. If so, her company will send them samples.

Like other small business owners, Krajchir has also found that being creative can also keep mailing and shipping costs down. So, instead of sending several packages to different editors at a single magazine, she'll consolidate the shipments into a single box.

And when she's asked to send something to an editor or other person requesting samples, she'll ask if they have a delivery service account they'd like to use. Often, the recipient is willing to pay.

Many small business owners have also found that delivery services and the Postal Service can help cut costs. Any company opening an account with a delivery service should be able to negotiate a price, especially if it has a large number of letters or packages to mail.

Technology offers small business owners many ways to save money on mailing and shipping costs. It is easy to send printed material by e-mail, or through file transfer Web sites that can accommodate documents and files that are too large for many e-mail systems.

There are also Web sites that can help businesses comparison shop among delivery services. Small businesses are also saving by switching to Web-based or e-mail billing rather than snail-mail invoices.

Under a capital structure proposed by GM but still under negotiation, the U.S. government would get 50 percent of the company for its loans. GM has said it will need another $2.6 billion in May and $9 billion more for the remainder of the year.

A key issue for GM is getting 90 percent of its bondholders to accept a debt-exchange offer. CEO Fritz Henderson essentially rejected the counteroffer, saying GM can't do it because it has been told by the Treasury Department that it can't give more than 10 percent equity to the bondholders.

Housing

While some mortgage companies have added staff and made preparations for the program, others are apparently lagging behind. Many housing counselors across the country complain that the program has been slow getting off the ground.

"Our experience at the ground level has been, so far, frustrating," said Michael van Zalingen, director of homeownership at Neighborhood Housing Services of Chicago, a counseling group. Entry-level employees at mortgage companies, he said, are either steering borrowers away from the plan or are entirely unaware of it.

Housing counselors say many borrowers, like Inman, who should qualify, are still losing their homes. "We offer a wide range of foreclosure prevention options to our customers," Deborah Munies, an Aurora spokeswoman, said in an e-mail, while declining to comment on Inman's case.

Leaving together

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — As Buhl City Clerk Sharon Hayes explains the reasons behind her decision to retire, Mayor Charles Sheridan can’t help but chime in.

“She’s not retiring,” he laughs. “She’s fired ... but can’t leave until July.”

By July the city should have a new clerk hired and trained. Hayes will stay on board until the new clerk has a feeling for the duties and then she and her husband, Claude Hayes, the city’s building inspector, plan on relaxing.

life,” said Sharon, 63.

Sharon has served Buhl as clerk since 1992. Prior to that she was city treasurer, a position she held since 1983.

Over the years, she said, Buhl’s residents have become more involved in local government and have good representation on the council.

“I’m going to miss the mayor and council,” she said. “We have a really good council and mayor that really try and do their best for the citizens of Buhl. I think this council and mayor are facing the biggest challenges ever posed to the city ... and are doing a good job.”

She won’t miss having to follow the ever-changing and increasing pressure placed on the city by federal mandates and regulations.

“There have been a lot of changes over the years. The federal mandates are getting horrible,” she said.

Claude, 79, has worked as the city’s building inspector since 2001, taking the position a year after selling his construction company to his son.

Looking at turning 80 is “a good reason to quit,” he said.

Claude and Sharon say they just want to enjoy time together. Although they were married three years ago their history goes back decades, as they ran in the same social circle with their late spouses.

Both widowed, they came together, Sharon said. While it has been fun seeing each other frequently on the job, they look forward to having uninterrupted time together.

“We have both lost and if we don’t take the time to enjoy each other now ... well, we know that we won’t be here forever and then it will be too late,” Sharon said.

Buhl couple ready to retire from City Hall duties

FILER — Ana Zavala has dreams of a higher education. Her dreams are now a lot closer to reality.

The Filer High School senior joined 300 students from around the state in Sun Valley on April 24-26 to participate in the annual Hispanic Youth Symposium.

The symposium, sponsored by the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory in Idaho Falls, gives deserving students with limited means the chance to interview with university representatives and compete for millions in college scholarships. Zavala, who plans on pursuing a career as a dental hygienist, unexpectedly walked away with $47,900 in scholarships from the College of Idaho and the University of Utah.

“I just went for the experience and to talk with someone from the University of Utah,” she said. “I never even thought I had a chance of getting part of the $4.4 million given away this year.”

Ana Zavala

Students who apply to attend the symposium must submit an essay telling a little bit about their background, educational goals and how they hope to give back to the community. Filer School District Superintendent John Graham, along with English as Second Language instructors Katie Brierly and Victor Vazquez, screened the essays in January. Five seniors, who later chose not to attend, were selected to represent the school. After they bowed out, Zavala was given the opportunity to attend.

“One of the points to consider in each case was a demonstration of need,” Graham said. “We obviously didn’t pick Ana’s essay the first time around, but she’s certainly a deserving young lady.”

The weekend is spent attending workshops, talent shows and listing to success stories from past seminar attendees. Vazquez, who has accompanied students to symposiums for the last 11 years, is always inspired by the energy.

“One of the presenters, who is about ready to graduate from medical school, came to the gathering about 10 years ago,” he said. “She told students that she was standing back then where they’re at right now.”

Zavala immigrated to America from north of Mexico City six years ago. On May 20 she will be the first person in her family to graduate from high school. After completing her college education, she hopes to return to Mexico and assist people who can’t afford dental care. She believes working to achieve her own goals is the best example that can be set for her younger siblings.

“I have two older brothers who came here to school for a while but they didn’t like it and dropped out,” Zavala said. “There’s nothing I can do to help them, but I have two sisters I can encourage to stay in school and have the chance of a better life.”

New camera hooked up for Hubble telescope

Deadly serious make-believe

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

A single lamp cast long shadows from the actors onto the walls during rehearsal, a week before opening night. The students, portraying teenagers murdered by a classmate, talked about what they miss most about being alive. Pizza with extra cheese and pepperoni, awkward adolescent dating, dogs.

A forgotten line and giggles broke the tension, but not before the point sunk in: "Bang Bang You're Dead," a play by William Mastrosimone, isn't meant to be a light-hearted way to spend a weekend evening.

The play — based loosely on the 1998 school shootings at Thurston High School in Springfield, Ore. — portrays Josh, a student who shoots and kills his two parents and five classmates. Throughout the play, Josh is haunted by physical manifestations of his victims.

Most of the Magic Valley High School students in this cast are too young to vividly remember the string of school shootings that happened in the late 1990s, like those at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., Heath High School in Paducah, Ky., and Thurston High. To help them understand the play, which opens tonight at College of Southern Idaho, drama teacher Jennifer Miller asked each student to research a school shooting.

In addition to the research, the students also did personal projects in-character. The projects, like letters to parents and journal entries, aren't seen in the play, but they helped the actors further understand and develop their roles.

Matt

Played by Jacob Winslow

Winslow is a late addition to the cast. The Boise State University student and Miller's former student came from Boise to fill in for actor Sam Cheney, who dropped out of the cast to focus on his personal life.

At 23, Winslow is five years older than most of the other actors and vividly remembers coverage of the Columbine High School shooting. He remembers photos of students huddled outside the school and weeping, and conjures those images while reciting some of Matt's lines.

Cheney, who is now working the lights for the play, studied five major school shootings — Columbine, Virginia Tech, Jonesboro, Paducah and Springfield — to learn more about the characters in the play. He discovered that in every case, numerous warning signs should have alerted peers and adults to an upcoming outburst.

Small lights shine onto the face of TJ Stigall during a rehearsal of 'Bang Bang You're Dead' at Magic Valley High School on a recent Friday afternoon in Twin Falls.

Katie

Played by Alika Malmstrom

Katie is Josh's ex-girlfriend and his first victim at school. For her character, Malmstrom built a memory box for Katie, then added items from her imagined life. She included a bracelet that Katie's mother gave her after getting out of rehab and the pair of earrings she wore when she had her first kiss.

Malmstrom also wrote a journal that documents her changing feelings for Josh and, soon, Michael.

"So anyway, ya that boy Josh, well we have been dating for quite some time but his mood changed," she wrote. "(He) never calls or hangs out w/ me anymore, I DK what to do di, help me!"

JUSTIN JACKSON/Times-News

Materials prepared by Magic Valley High School drama students helped them delve deep into their characters, like this journal that Alika Malmstrom wrote in the character of Katie.

Delving into the character of Josh, TJ Stigall digitally assembled this image of himself as a young hunter.

Michael

Played by Isidro Anguiano

Anguiano has a few things in common with this popular, athletic character. Like Michael, Anguiano has spent some time on the football field. In the play, Josh kills Michael out of jealousy — the jock is everything Josh wants to be, Anguiano said.

As Michael, Anguiano wrote a posthumous letter to his character's parents to apologize to them and tell them how much he misses them.

"I want you guys to know that things are OK," Anguiano wrote. "I miss when you made brownies. I don't even care that they were rock hard now."

"One day, I hope to see you guys again so I can have a second chance," he added.

Josh

Played by TJ Stigall

Josh, the show's antihero, struggles with his identity throughout the play. In one early scene, he recalls shooting his first buck with his grandfather — an event he felt guilty about. His victims use that insecurity to get through to him.

As part of his project, Stigall digitally altered a photo to show himself dressed in camouflage, holding a prize buck's head.

So how does Stigall get into his character's head?

"I don't know," he said. "I don't know how to explain it. I just kind of look inside myself, any anger that I might have, and just bring that out."

The Furies

Played by Stephanie Gallihier, Nikki Harms, Dusti Morse and Kyle Miller

The original script calls for four anonymous actors who play the voices inside Josh's head and fill in miscellaneous parts, like Josh's psychotherapist and parents. Miller had the idea to change them into Greek Furies — Megaera, Tisiphone and Alecto — and added Hecate to round out the four roles.

Onstage, the Furies mock Josh as he contemplates suicide and push him to massacre his classmates. Sometimes, they also act as props, like when they light Josh's face on the dark stage, or when they help him shoot the students in the cafeteria.

"I think of myself as the devil on his shoulder," said Gallihier, who plays Hecate.

Their projects include a comic strip by Harms that narrates Josh's realization that the voices belong to him and a drawing of a Greek drama mask by Miller. Morse made a scrapbook page. The art helps solidify the connection between the Furies and Josh.

Sun Valley Wellness Festival adds big-name performer to its herbs and healing

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Think hula hoops are just child's play? Think again.

Ketchum psychotherapist Melissa Boley believes that the hoop can be a modern tool to get in tune with what's happening within your body.

The rocking, rhythmic and spiral motion of the hoop has been used by others throughout history, including Brazilian shamans, to calm, sooth and even produce trance states, she says.

Boley will share her Holistic Hula Hooping at the Sun Valley Wellness Festival, to be held May 22-25 at Sun Valley Inn.

The 12th annual festival will offer nearly 50 lectures, workshops and hands-on sessions on a wide range of wellness practices from Pilates to Chinese herbal medicine, from yoga to a Hawaiian method of healing called a 'a ka pono and a "write your soul a letter" dance.

Keynote speakers Michael Beckwith and Robert Thurman, both of whom have been on "Oprah Winfrey" and "Larry King Live," will lead a dialogue on "The Spirit of Enlightenment" at 7:30 p.m. May 22.

Beckwith is founder of Agape International Spiritual Center — a New Thought church in Culver City, Calif. — a featured teacher in the film "The Secret" and author of several books, including "Spiritual Liberation: Fulfilling Your Soul's Purpose."

Thurman, father of actress Uma Thurman, is a professor of Indo-Tibetan Buddhist studies at Columbia University and the author of several books, including "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Real Happiness," which Publisher's Weekly called one of the best books of 1998.

New this year is a concert by three-time

The Sun Valley Wellness Festival will be held May 22-25 at Sun Valley Inn.

That weekend, Friday's and Monday's sessions are composed of three-hour workshops, which require individual tickets.

Saturday's and Sunday's lectures and movement classes, which start as early as 7:30 a.m. and continue until about 6 p.m., are accessible via a $75 one-day pass or a $135 two-day pass.

A Hands On Hall, free to the public, will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday. The hall will feature a variety of practitioners, offering such practices as Thai Yoga Massage and Soul Touch Healing. Products for sale will include Healthier Coffee Tea and Hot Chocolate, Bend Beads and a bed of amethyst crystals purported to melt stress and reduce pain, detoxify the body and reduce pain and inflammation.

MEMORIAL DAY WEEKEND

Grammy nominee Toni Childs at 7:30 p.m. May 24 in the new Sun Valley Pavilion. Concert tickets are $15 and $25.

Childs performed at two of President Obama's inaugural balls, in addition to touring with Bob Dylan and Jackson Browne. She has recorded several albums, including her newest, "Keep the Faith," released in April.

"It's the first time we've had a big-name concert," said Nick Maricich, president of the Sun Valley Wellness Institute, a non-profit corporation founded to provide wellness education through events such as the festival. "We always tried to do music on Sunday night. But this year

Three-time Grammy nominee and Emmy award-winning musician Toni Childs will launch the summer concert season in Sun Valley on May 24 in conjunction with the Sun Valley Wellness Festival.

we wanted to do something bigger."

The Wellness Festival has brought in such well-known speakers as Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and Deepak Chopra in the past. But this year's pre-sold ticket sales — in the neighborhood of 400 so far — are "way above" even the number sold the year Kennedy spoke, said festival director Ellen Gillespie.

"I think maybe it's a sign of the times," she said. "In these times people are doing a little soul-searching. But we also have a very interesting lineup. We have Lynne Twist who is speaking on 'The Soul of Money' and how you can find opportunity in the current financial crisis.

"And I just saw Marla Fries, another one of the speakers, on YouTube. She's a psychic who helps detectives solve crime cases, and she'll be showing people how to become psychic detectives. It's all so interesting."

"We always tried to do music on Sunday night. But this year we wanted to do something bigger."

JUSTIN JACKSON/Times-News

Alisha Neal plays Emily, one of the play's shooting victims.

Emily

Played by Alisha Neal

The play, written in 1998, has a few out-of-date references. (Does anyone still use a pager?) So Neal updated her character with Myspace.com.

Neal made a profile for Emily, then added blog posts and descriptions to fill out Emily's personality. Through blog posts, Emily reacts to events in the play, like the mysterious messages that appear on a classroom blackboard. Neal also listed Emily's favorite bands, including Nirvana, Tegan and Sara and Pink, and wrote that Emily's hero is her brother.

The last blog post, written from Emily's brother's perspective, is about the shooting.

"Please continue leaving your loving comments," Neal wrote. "I'm going to keep this (profile) up just for that. The memorial at our school will eventually go down, but this won't. Any time you want to say something to Emily, post it here."

Friends played along, including castmate Stigall (who is also Neal's real-life fiancee). "I love you," he wrote to Emily. "Its true. I didnt say this enough."

Jessie

Played by Codee Sterner

Sterner's character Jessie reminisces about how she will never go to college, never earn a double major, never fall in love with a fraternity boy and start a family with him.

So Sterner typed out an acceptance letter for her character, then made a to-do list for Jessie to complete before she moved away to college. She then splattered the documents with red paint, implying that Jessie carried them the day she died in the cafeteria.

Castleford native's novel wins second award

Times-News

Nautilus Book Awards said Castleford native and Utah resident Ranse Parker's epic mystery novel, "Circle of Doors," was selected as a 2009 finalist. This gives the title a national Silver standing as it goes on to the third and final round of judging for Gold, to be announced May 29.

Parker

The novel will be on display at the Nautilus Book Awards booth at BookExpo America in New York on May 29-31. Previous recipients of the award include Joel Osteen, Eckhart Tolle, Deepak Chopra, Lynda Byrne and Mariel Hemingway.

"Circle of Doors" also received the 2008 national Silver IPPY for Visionary Fiction, announced during BookExpo America in Los Angeles last year.

Ring the bells

Times-News

Performing in a handbell choir is a bit like playing in a symphony — each ringer is part of a greater whole, responding to the music, the other ringers and the director.

You can learn the skill in a pair of classes offered through the College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center.

Although music reading is not a prerequisite for the classes, a desire to learn to read a musical score is essential, and students who are able to read music will play the more challenging bells.

• "Sample Handbell Ringing," for adults, will be held 7-9 p.m. June 2 and 4 in Taylor 248. Cost is $25.

• "Handbell Ringing for Youth," for grades seven through 12, will be 4-5:30 p.m. June 1-4 in Taylor 248. Cost is $35.

Inviting the young to play

Fiddlers hope to continue tradition of 'good old-time music'

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

Shoes tap out time. Bows sway and slide.

Close your eyes. The fiddle tunes recall images of women in long dresses dancing in barns or weary pioneers listening by a campfire.

Members of the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers collectively know hundreds of what they call good old-time songs. Performing regular gigs at Bridgeview Estates and Idaho Pizza in Twin Falls, most members are grey-haired. Fingers marked by age and experience pluck guitars, move along strings or cradle a harmonica. The songs they play have traveled through generations, and their group is continuing the journey. They just hope that younger fiddlers will keep the music going.

"We do stick to the old-time fiddle music, which doesn't always appeal to the younger people," said Margie Collins of Twin Falls, a 22-year member.

"We need to have young membership because I would hate to say how many of our older musicians that we've lost in the last year," said Gary Huntington, the organization's District 6 chairman.

Their smooth old-time fiddling style is good for dancing. But younger musicians are more attracted to newer ones — such as Texas style — which are not as danceable and stress individual performance over group playing, he said.

A majority of the 15 to 20 Magic Valley members are in their 50s, 60s and beyond. The oldest is 81, and her name is Sadie Kirk. If the music went away, it would leave a big hole in her life.

"This is what keeps me up and going," said Kirk, who has played guitar since she was 16.

At 52, guitar player Chris Leazer is the "baby." As a kid, she learned songs that date to the Civil War. Even the titles denote a different time and story, such as "Crapshooters Rag" and "Watermelon on the Vine."

"People don't realize how important the music really is," Leazer said.

Statewide, there are 300 to 400 members. Continuation of old-time fiddling is why Mannie Shaw of Fairfield started the non-profit organization years ago. These days, the fiddlers entertain at nursing homes, festivals and other events.

While other districts have younger members, District 6 doesn't, said Kathy Trenkle. Maybe the answer is mentoring or working with teachers to educate the young about the old, she added.

"The music goes way, way back, and we need to keep it alive," she said.

Kirk is willing to teach people whatever she can.

"I'm thrilled if somebody wants to learn," she said.

Whether they are endangered or not, what is evident is their camaraderie.

"Let's do the 'Battle Hymn,'" Huntington called out at a Bridgeview performance and started up the familiar song. Some fiddlers joined a few notes later, but soon they were in sync. They smiled large at the applause.

Between songs, the musicians conversed with their audience as if playing in somebody's home. At one gig, two listeners pulled spoons from their purses and tapped along.

Kirk and Leazer enthusiastically sang and strummed to "Has Anybody Seen my Gal." It's clear they were having fun.

"We are a good happy group, and we enjoy the music so much and encourage young people to come and learn it," Collins said. "It's really good old-time music that we hate to lose."

This fiddler plays music of his parents

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

In his living room, Gary Huntington easily takes up his fiddle as if it's an extension of himself. His blue eyes shine with the sunlight and love of music. He concentrates, smiling only after the last notes.

In the 1980s, Huntington was shoeing a horse in Fairfield when fiddler legend and Idaho Old Time Fiddlers founder Mannie Shaw suggested he take up the instrument. In high school, Huntington played a little guitar, admittedly to attract girls. What drew him to old-time fiddling was the music.

"It's dance music. It's the music my parents use to go to all the dances and dance to," Huntington said.

Taking up Shaw's suggestion, the rest is history — Huntington's, that is. He joined the fiddlers in 1982, served as state president and is now District 6 chairman.

Huntington didn't start out as country. He was born in Iowa, moved to Idaho from Arizona, and worked in real estate. But he knew his real place in the world.

"I'm just country; that's all there is to it."

Taking no lessons, he set to playing with Shaw's help. Through the years, he has also picked up the bass, guitar and mandolin, filling in when needed at fiddlers' performances.

He loves the stories the songs tell, and the tradition they represent.

Among the eight fiddles he owns is one made in 1890 — "seasoned," he calls it. Each has its own personality, especially his oldest one, Huntington said. "It's mellow, deep sound to it. Some fiddles to me are screechy and squeaky."

Upon request, he plays one of his favorites among the 200-plus tunes that he knows "by ear." This one has the unlikely title of "Possum up a Gum Stump." There's no sheet music in sight, and Huntington believes that young musicians need to put away the sheet music.

"They can play it, but they really don't hear the music," he said. "They don't know how it sounds."

As much as the songs' danceability, he likes the tales they tell of times years ago — but not forgotten, thanks to the fiddling.

"A lot of times you can relate to the story."

Tracking down a mislaid century of American history

There was a popular song a few years back (well, maybe a few decades back) that began, "Don't know much about history..."

After reading Pulitzer-prize winning writer Tony Horwitz's "A Voyage Long and Strange: On the Trail of Vikings, Conquistadors, Lost Colonists and Other Adventures in Early America" (Picador, $18), that line takes on new meaning.

I have vivid memories of studying American history in fifth grade and, in fact, still have "The Notebook!" I poured hours into meticulously copying maps, writing biographies of the explorers, cutting pictures from — much to my mother's pain — National Geographic Magazines, and sending pleas to distant relatives for picture postcards of their states. It is beautiful! But do I remember and understand important ideas, facts and concepts? Not so much.

Horwitz confesses to a similar lack of awareness after a visit to Plymouth Rock. "I'd mislaid an entire century," he writes, "the one separating Columbus' sail in 1492 from Jamestown's founding in 16-0-something. Expensively educated at a private school and university — a history major, no less! — I'd matriculated to middle age with a third-grader's grasp of early America."

On his way home to Virginia, he resolved to undertake some remedial study and began reading and researching at his local public library. He moved from histories to letters and journals of early explorers, and began to discover just how much had happened in this New World not only between Columbus and the Pilgrims, but long before. "This wasn't a gap in my education; it was a chasm," Horwitz says.

After his initial research, Horwitz decided to go one better, and embarked on a personal exploration of the places he had read about, beginning with a visit to Newfoundland to investigate evidence of the Vikings' landing there in circa 1000. He then traveled to the Dominican Republic where the bones of Christopher Columbus are buried ... or perhaps not.

This was followed by his trek in the footsteps of Coronado through Mexico and Texas and finally to Florida and Virginia, then, three years after he began, back to Plymouth Rock.

The book is popular history at its accessible best, full of vivid characters and wild detail and a great deal of humor. While visiting Newfoundland, he joined a group of Micmac Indians for a ghastly session in one of their fabled sweat lodges. "Finally, I stopped struggling and gave in to the torment, entering a trancelike state, less from heightened consciousness than from impaired body function. What spirit I had wasn't raised; it was crushed."

Before reading this insightful and wonderfully written book, you may want to take this little test to see how much of America's history you know!

True or false:

- An English girl named Virginia Dare was the first white child born in North America.

- 260 years before Lewis & Clark, a black slave crossed the future U.S.

- Although Sir Walter Raleigh grew tobacco on his Roanoke plantation, he said smoking this foul weed was bad for a person's health, but good for profits.

- The Spanish conquistadors were stunned by the Plains Indians' skill at hunting buffalo while riding horses bareback.

- Juan Ponce de Leon was an aged conquistador searching for the Fountain of Youth, but found nothing.

No answers here — you have to read the book. History has never been so fun!

'Spirited' couple visits valley

Award-winning filmmaker comes to Twin Falls, Rupert

Times-News

Screenwriter and author Jonathan Richard Cring and musician and conductor Janet Clazzy will bring their show "Spirited, a visitation from Jonathan and Janet" to the Magic Valley.

Performances are at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Our Savior Lutheran Church, 464 Carriage Lane N. in Twin Falls, and at 7 p.m. Thursday at United Methodist Church, 605 H St. in Rupert.

Cring combines storytelling with wit, wisdom and comedy. Several of Cring's screenplays have been made into movies. He has written 10 books, 13 symphonies and the music for each of his films. He is winner of Best Screenplay at the Top Ten Films in America for the movie "Bernee" and writes a daily blog at www.jonathots.com.

Cring spends weekdays working from the film industry in writing and musical composition. On weekends he tours, performing at churches with his business partner Clazzy, conductor of the Sumner Pops Orchestra and movie scorer.

"Maybe having ancient memories of my mother forcing me to go to Sunday school, I somehow feel like a bird in the wintertime, needing to return to warmer places for my fellowship and interaction," Cring said in a press release from his home in Hendersonville, Tenn.

Cring and Clazzy perform shows of music, monologue and singing to audiences who often show up not knowing quite what to expect.

"Energy is spiritual, and when you dare to make spiritual things practical and practical things spiritual, you settle into a state that is enough to tickle every part of you. I learned a long time ago, if people agree with you they call it blessing and if they don't, they say you are controversial. So I guess I'd call what I do 'blessiversal' — just enough of each to keep us both awake," Cring said in the release.

Free admission. Information: 733-3774 (Twin Falls show) and 436-3354 (Rupert show).

Mini golf or pub tour? In Ketchum, it's hard to tell the difference

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Ketchum will turn into a miniature golf course Saturday as the town hosts its Ketchum Wide Open.

Restaurants and bars will decorate miniature golf holes in unique and challenging ways. Then it will be up to golfers and non-golfers alike to try to swing through with as few swings as possible.

The miniature golf event was a once-popular Ketchum tradition that was resurrected last year, said John Sofro of the Ketchum Events Planning Committee.

Last year the Sawtooth Club built a two-story golf hole running from its second floor through the fireplace to the first floor. Whiskey Jacques used its entire dance floor for golfers to play through. And golfers dressed up as big chickens, pirates, scuba divers, hippies, '50s girls in poodle skirts and big teased hair and, well, vintage golfers.

"Everyone had so much fun. You never knew what you were going to get because all the holes were different," said Bronwyn Patterson of the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau.

The new Sawtooth Club will have a hole, as will The Roosevelt Grille, Casino Club, Grumpy's, Lefty's, Papa Hemi's Hideaway, Rico's Pizza and Pasta, The Cellar Pub, Smoky Mountain Pizza, Sushi on Second, Whiskey Jacques and McClain's Pizza.

Registration begins at 11 a.m. at the Ketchum Town Square across from Atkinsons' Market. Tee-off is at noon.

Golfers are invited to find a partner, don a costume and belly up to the bar — or any of the participating restaurants — for their tickets, which cost $20 for a team of two. Tickets can be purchased the day of the event.

Prizes will be given for golfers with the Best Overall Score, Worst Score and Best Group Costume at an Awards Ceremony at the Ketchum Town Plaza.

Prizes include two rounds of golf at Bigwood Golf Course; dinner for two at The Roosevelt Grille and the Sawtooth Club; dinner for two with a bottle of wine at the Bigwood Grille; and a round of virtual golf at the Sun Valley Club.

Entertainment will be provided by DJ YO Mama.

Karen Bossick may be reached at kbossick@cox-internet.com or 208-578-2111.

Joe Mama's will rev up in August

Times-News

Car lovers, mark this date: Joe Mama's Car Show will be Aug. 22, according to show director Orlan Stearns of Magic Valley Early Iron Car Club, which took the wheel from show founder Joe Skaug.

The event, which promoters call the largest one-day car show in Idaho, will again include show entries of all sorts, such as 335 mph Nitro methane-burning 8,000-horsepower dragsters, funny cars, jet race cars, antiques, street machines, foreign and domestic sports cars, customs and the highly unusual from across the nation.

Also scheduled to appear is Stacey David, a nationally known car personality and ESPN TV show host and auto builder, who participated in Joe Mama's last year. Negotiations are under way to bring Spiderman from the Marvel Comic Book Series, to entertain the young and young at heart, organizers said.

"We love having car entries from our own Magic Valley area," Stearns said in a press release. "To add to that we will have entries from several other states. The show has taken on a stature that draws cars from as far away as the East Coast. The 2008 event drew nearly 16,000 spectators and 708 entries."

NAPA Auto Parts will again be the primary sponsor.

"We are proud to be associated with what has become an awesome event in the Magic Valley," said Bob Dyson of Twin Falls, owner of the majority of NAPA Auto Parts stores in Idaho. "We are able to put on display, in an up-close fashion, many of our products for our fans. Both the atmosphere and quality of the show are unsurpassed."

The show has other sponsors, too, and all spectators are admitted free.

"The show is a nonprofit community venture, and we plan to keep it that way," Stearns said. "Lots of backing is very, very important if the show is to remain a top-quality event."

Show information: Stearns at 731-4469. Vendor information: Skaug at 324-8959.

Christiansen spurs Spartans to shutout

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BOISE — All the Minico Spartans showed up for the Class 4A state baseball tournament on Thursday with Mohawks under their ball caps.

Well, almost all the Spartans.

Sophomore pitcher Casey Christiansen declined to join his teammates' state tourney ritual, instead keeping his mop intact. But after his two-hit shutout in Minico's 5-0 win over Nampa at Bishop Kelly High School, he could get dreadlocks or shave steps into the side of his head and no one would care.

"That's the only part we didn't like about today," said Minico coach Ben Frank of Christiansen's non-Mohawk. "But he's money for us. He threw a gem. Even when he doesn't have his best stuff, he competes and throw strikes."

Christiansen says his parents wouldn't let him get a Mohawk, but his teammates doubt that's the real reason.

"He's a pretty guy," said senior catcher Alex Moon. "He's got to stay looking good for the ladies.

"It was a week-long conversation we had. The first three days we gave him a hard time, but then our seniors said, 'Hey, if you don't want to get it, we'll beat up anybody that gives you any crap about it.' We as seniors know how important Casey is for us this weekend."

Christiansen struck out nine and gave up only one free pass by hitting a Nampa batter. The side-throwing right hander worked the plate well against the Bulldogs' all right-handed lineup.

"I feel more comfortable facing rightys than leftys," Christiansen said. "I can run it in on their hands and then get it away from them with a slider."

Barak Frank batted 2-for-4 with an RBI single in the first, Kris Copeland was 2-for-3 with an RBI single in the second and Landon Barnes was 2-for-4 with an RBI single in the sixth. Christiansen and Pete Coats each added RBI singles in the third.

The Spartans advance to the semifinals, where they

FIRST-ROUND FOLLY

Kerns, Wolves thwart Bruins

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

BOISE — The name of the game in baseball is to get good pitching and defense, and avoid the big inning by the opposition.

Twin Falls got the first two but couldn't escape the latter, and it reduced the Bruins' state championship dreams to tatters.

Nine consecutive Timberline batters reached base in the top of the fifth inning, seven of them scoring as the Wolves blew open an otherwise tight contest to advance to the Class 5A state semifinals with a 9-2 victory at Memorial Stadium.

Tyler Knight's bases-loaded double proved the crushing blow, as he belted a Jacob Coats offering over right fielder T.J. Ellis' head and off the wall to give the Wolves (27-3) a 4-2 lead.

They would score five more times, but that lone hit was more than enough for Timberline starting pitcher and College of Southern Idaho signee Chris Kerns, who allowed just one earned run on three hits, striking out eight better.

"That was a huge inning for our team. Our offense tends to follow our pitching and defense, and I know I was overamped to start the game," Kerns said. "Once I settled down I felt in control out there, and once we relaxed at the plate we started to swing it a little."

The Bruins (25-6) were continually kept off balance by Kerns' three-pitch arsenal, and a normally disciplined batting approach gave way to anxious impatience.

Only a couple of balls, Coats' double and Zeb Sneed's triple off the left-center field wall, were really hit hard. Michael Williams' infield single was the only other hit for the Bruins.

"We had a really good game plan, I thought, but it just didn't happen today," said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir.

"Normally we're a very disciplined club at the plate, have been all season, but today we didn't show that. We didn't adjust, but you have to tip your cap to (Kerns), he pitched a great game. Jacob made just a couple mistakes too, but they capitalized on them."

Twin Falls will play Lewiston at 10 a.m. today, just to keep their season alive until Saturday.

Stadelmeir said he didn't think refocusing would be an issue.

"We came here to play for the state championship, but that didn't happen, so we need to look at the best thing we can get now," he said. "We have five seniors we want to send out the right way ... this isn't a quitting group. They'll be ready to battle."

Bruins sweep 400 prelims at 5A track

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — The 400-meter dash preliminaries belonged to the Twin Falls Bruins on Thursday at Bronco Stadium in Boise. On the boys side, it was Kylon Myers blowing away the competition in the first heat with a time of 49.95 seconds. The second heat was a close call between Myers' teammate Chase Gomez (50.64) and the heat winner Landon Watts of Eagle (50.45).

"I was planning on it this way," Myers said. "(Watts) ran the time I wanted him to run. Now he's got (lane) 5 and I've got 4, so I don't have to run scared. I get to chase him. If I'm on the outside and he catches me, I'm pretty much done. But now that I'm inside I can see where he's at and where I stand."

On the girls side, both Brianna Bowcut (58.96) and Brooke Wagner (58.91) won their heats in the 400 prelims. This pits the teammates against each other in today's final.

Wagner was supposed to be in the final, but Bowcut is one of the surprises at the first day of state.

Bowcut also qualified for

Bulldogs off to a winning start at 3A tourney

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — On an afternoon better suited for ducks than softball players, the Kimberly Bulldogs opened the Class 3A state tournament with a 3-2 win over the Snake River Panthers. All four opening games were completed, but each game included at least one rain delay.

The Bulldogs struck first in the bottom of the third when Mikki Corder singled to drive in Alex Pfefferle, who singled to reach base and advanced on a single from Kaitlyn Goetz.

They tacked on two more runs in the fifth as Pfefferle played Nellie Makings with another single. Pfefferle was then sent home courtesy of Bailey Allsop's triple. Pfefferle finished 2-for-3.

"We were struggling a little at first until we got out rhythm and spirits up," said Allsop. "And then we started hitting the ball. Their pitcher threw the ball at a decent speed and gave us a challenge. The spirit of our team is awesome."

Snake River answered with a pair of runs in the seventh but came up short. Suzie Smith connected for an RBI base hit to score Makel Martin, but Smith, who would have been the tying run, was tagged out in a rundown between first and second bases to end the game.

Bulldog pitcher Makings struck out 11 strikeouts and allowed six hits. Losing pitcher Martin had seven strikeouts and also gave up six hits.

"We never really could get going," said Kimberly coach Rich Bishop. "We'd get good hits at times but not together. We just left too many runners on base. We did get some big hits from the middle to lower part of the lineup. Hopefully the girls will relax and we'll find a way to get some more runs."

Kimberly will face St. Maries at noon, today, in the championship quarterfinals, while Timberlake gets Sugar-Salem in the elimination bracket.

ST. MARIES 11, MARSH VALLEY 8

The St. Maries Lumberjacks blew open their game by scoring six runs in the first inning and adding two more in the second, but they allowed Marsh Valley to tie it up in the fourth.

The Eagles benefited from seven walks issued by the St. Maries pitchers, a hit batter and a single.

The Lumberjacks rebounded at the plate soon after, adding three runs in the sixth for the victory. Vierra Reid led the

Miscues sink CSI at district tourney

Central Arizona run-rules Golden Eagles

By Justin Lawson
Times-News correspondent

CARSON CITY, Nev. — When the College of Southern Idaho made its last out in an 11-1, five-inning slaughtering at the hands of seventh-ranked Central Arizona, there was almost nothing for the Golden Eagles to be happy about.

They had just coughed away a game that they may have had a chance to win because they couldn't field, they couldn't hit and they couldn't pitch.

"I think (Central Arizona) came out knowing that they were going to win and I think we came out hoping we were going to win," CSI coach Boomer Walker said. "There's a huge difference in that. ... It was just one of those games where everything that could go wrong went wrong and when you play a good club and you have a dominant guy on the mound, that's usually the outcome."

CSI committed two errors that led to five runs, was held hitless by two pitchers and used two pitchers in five innings Thursday at John L. Harvey Field. The one bright spot, if there was one, is that the two pitchers are likely available to pitch again today when the Golden Eagles play Northeastern Junior College in the elimination game at 10 a.m. MDT.

Walker chastised the team after the embarrassing loss, but it was clear

Dodgers get past Phillies

PHILADELPHIA — Russell Martin hit a tiebreaking double in the 10th inning and Matt Kemp followed with an RBI double to lift the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Philadelphia Phillies 5-3 Thursday.

Chad Durbin (1-1) retired the first two batters, then walked Andre Ethier. Martin doubled for a 4-3 lead and after an intentional walk, Kemp delivered.

The Dodgers, minus the suspended Manny Ramirez, won two of three in a rematch of the NL championship series.

CUBS 11, PADRES 3

CHICAGO — Bobby Scales hit a pair of two-run doubles and Ryan Dempster excelled with both his arm and bat as Chicago took advantage of 10 walks to beat skidding San Diego.

Adrian Gonzalez homered for the fourth consecutive game but couldn't prevent San Diego from losing its 11th straight on the road, its longest skid in 38 years. Since starting the season 10-6, the Padres are 3-16.

BREWERS 5, MARLINS 3

MILWAUKEE — Prince Fielder hit a go-ahead homer and Dave Bush turned in another strong start for Milwaukee, which finished a three-game sweep of Florida.

Trevor Hoffman earned his eighth save and has yet to give up a run in nine innings this season. The Brewers have won nine of 11 and begin a nine-game road trip at St. Louis on Friday night.

ASTROS 5, ROCKIES 3

DENVER — Wandy Rodriguez struck out a career-high 11 and Michael Bourn stole home on the back end of a double steal, leading Houston over Colorado.

One of baseball's fastest runners, Bourn tied a career high with four hits and finished with two stolen bases. Carlos Lee homered for the Astros.

CARDINALS 5, PIRATES 1

PITTSBURGH — Colby Rasmus' two-run homer in the second inning gave St. Louis' slumping offense a lift and the Cardinals avoided being swept by last-place Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals had lost five consecutive games in Pittsburgh and were in jeopardy of being swept in a three-game series for the first time since Sept. 12-14, also at PNC Park.

an RBI single in the 12th inning, Torii Hunter had a two-run double and an RBI triple, and the Los Angeles Angels beat Boston.

Boston slugger David Ortiz went 0 for 7 and stranded 12 runners. He struck out three times, once with the bases loaded in the fourth, and left the bases loaded again in the 12th with a dribbler in front of the plate as his average plummeted to .208.

YANKEES 3, BLUE JAYS 2

TORONTO — Back from nagging injuries, Derek Jeter and Hideki Matsui delivered key hits to lead CC Sabathia and the Yankees to the win.

Jeter tied it with an RBI single in the seventh inning, Matsui put New York ahead with a solo homer in the eighth and Mariano Rivera worked a perfect ninth for his seventh save in eight chances.

INDIANS 11, RAYS 7

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Victor Martinez had four hits and drove in four runs, raising his batting average to .400 and helping Cleveland get the victory.

Shin-Soo Choo and Asdrubal Cabrera also had four hits apiece, with Choo driving in three runs in support of right-hander Fausto Carmona, who made it interesting after being staked to a nine-run lead.

TWINS 6, TIGERS 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Joe Crede capped

another Minnesota comeback with a two-out, two-run single in a six-run seventh inning that ruined Justin Verlander's strong start and helped the Twins finish a three-game sweep.

Crede's blooper into shallow center against struggling reliever Zach Miner, who walked Michael Cuddyer to load the bases, put the Twins ahead about 14½ hours after his grand slam in the 13th ended Wednesday night's game.

RANGERS 3, MARINERS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Chris Davis hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, lifting Texas to a three-game sweep.

The Rangers didn't score until Hank Blalock led off the ninth against closer Brandon Morrow (0-3) with a home run into the second deck of right-field stands. After David Murphy's one-out double, Davis homered to center to give AL West-leading Texas its 10th win in 12 games.

ORIOLES 9, ROYALS 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Cesar Izturis and Nick Markakis each drove in three runs and the Baltimore Orioles won again in their favorite road ballpark, beating the Kansas City Royals 9-5 Thursday night.

Baltimore has won 15 of 18 against Kansas City and is 43-15 against the Royals since 2001, including 24-7 at Kauffman Stadium.

Ochoa nine shots back after opening round

CLIFTON, N.J. — 1-ranked Ochoa can be written off yet.

Lorena Ochoa is going to have to stage one of the biggest comebacks of her career to win a fourth straight Sybase Classic.

Helen Alfredsson jump-started a career-best, 10-under 62 by holing out for eagle from 68 yards on her second hole, and took a two-stroke lead over Brittany Lincicome after the opening round on Thursday.

Ochoa, who has won this event at two different courses, was nine shots behind the long-hitting Alfredsson. Besides the eagle, the Swede had nine birdies and a bogey at Upper Montclair Country Club on a cold, damp day punctuated by an intermittent drizzle and chilling breeze.

Alfredsson's round was the lowest on tour this year, and it left Ochoa with 54 holes to play catch up. Her biggest come-from-behind win was in 2004, when she rallied from five shots down in the final round to win the Wachovia LPGA Classic.

Ochoa overcame a four-shot deficit in this event three years ago, when it was played at Wykagyl in New York.

"I had birdie chances, like on 18, that just didn't go," Ochoa said. "But I'm happy. I'm very good with the speed. I had a couple that got away and had to save par, so I feel good. Tomorrow, maybe, some of them will drop."

Only two other women have won the same LPGA event four years in a row. Annika Sorenstam won five straight Mizuno Classics in Japan from 2001-05, and Laura Davies won four straight Standard Register PING titles in Arizona from 1994-97.

That doesn't mean No.

LEONARD, GOYDOS LEAD AT TEXAS OPEN

SAN ANTONIO — Three-time champion Justin Leonard and Paul Goydos shot 7-under 63s to share the first-round lead in the Texas Open.

The 44-year-old Goydos, who publicly opened up this month about the death of his ex-wife in January and raising his two teenage daughters, had the lead for most of the day until Leonard birdied three of his last four holes in the afternoon.

Leonard, a former University of Texas star, won the event in 2000, '01 and '07.

Jeff Maggert, Marc Leishman and Ted Purdy were a stroke back, Englishmen Brian Davis and Greg Owen shot 65s, and major winners David Duval, Lee Janzen and Corey Pavin topped a group at 66.

Red Wings beat Ducks in Game 7 on Cleary's goal

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings were pushed to the brink of elimination on home ice by the Anaheim Ducks.

Dan Cleary came through, though, scoring a tiebreaking goal with 3 minutes left that lifted Detroit to a 4-3 win on Thursday night that sent the defending Stanley Cup champions to the Western Conference finals for the third straight year.

"Most teams that have won the Stanley Cup don't even get here," Red Wings coach Mike Babcock said. "For us to be in this situation is a real positive, but we have a hungry Chicago team waiting for us."

Detroit will host the Blackhawks in Game 1 on Sunday, matching up the Original Six teams in the playoffs for the first time since the conference finals in 1995.

"It should be fun," Babcock said.

Before Detroit did it, Colorado was the most recent NHL team to reach the conference finals after hoisting the Cup. The Avalanche lost to Detroit 7-0 in the deciding game in 2002.

The previous two Cup champions met for the third time since the NHL expanded in 1967, and all three series went the distance.

The Edmonton Oilers needed overtime to get past Calgary in 1991, and Montreal beat Boston by two goals in 1971.

Unlike those winners, second-seeded Detroit was at home against eighth-seeded Anaheim, which knocked off the top-seeded San Jose Sharks in the first round.

Four of the games were decided by a goal, including Game 2 in triple overtime.

"It was the best series I've been in," Babcock said.

HURRICANES 3, BRUINS 2, OT

BOSTON — Scott Walker scored his first NHL playoff goal 18:46 into overtime to send the Carolina Hurricanes into the Eastern Conference finals with a 3-2 win over the Boston Bruins on Thursday night.

Byron Bitz gave Boston a 1-0 lead at 7:42 of the first period, and Carolina captain Rod Brind'Amour tied it six minutes later. Sergei Samsonov put the Hurricanes ahead 2-1 at 7:45 of the second period, but Milan Lucic tied it for the Bruins at 6:19 of the third.

Carolina will face the Pittsburgh Penguins, who beat the Washington Capitals in Game 7 of that series on Wednesday, in the East finals.

Phelps ready for first race since Beijing

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Michael Phelps wanted to bring more attention to swimming.

He's sure doing that.

Phelps' accomplishments in the pool — and shaky judgment on dry land — has brought plenty of notoriety to what has always been a once-every-four-years sport.

On Thursday, he caught an early morning flight to Charlotte for his first meet since winning a record eight gold medals at the Beijing Olympics. He'll be competing in front of capacity crowds and media from as far away as Japan, France and Britain — hardly the norm for a Grand Prix meet in a non-Olympic year.

"With the positive and the negative things, there's a lot more attention being brought to the sport," Phelps said at a news conference shortly after touching down in North Carolina. "That's something this sport needs and something it deserves."

Of course, he would've preferred the focus remain on his accomplishments in Beijing, not what he did during a party in right-down-the-road South Carolina three months after the Olympics. That's where someone took that infamous photo of Phelps inhaling from a marijuana pipe, a picture that wound up on the front page of a British tabloid and led USA Swimming to give him a three-month suspension.

Whether he likes it or not, Phelps has clearly crossed the threshold from superstar athlete to cultural icon. He's recognized everywhere he goes and become a fixture in the tabloids, though he insists nearly everything written about his life outside the pool — from supposed wild partying to an adventurous love life — is untrue.

2010 HYUNDAI GENESIS COUPE

PURPOSE-BUILT PERFORMANCE!

First Look!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corporation

Following the introduction earlier this year of the all-new rear-wheel drive Genesis sport sedan, Hyundai introduced its all-new purpose-built Genesis coupe. As the most dynamic performance car ever built by the Korean automaker, the Genesis coupe shares the same flexible rear-wheel drive architecture originally developed for the Genesis sedan.

Power for the new Hyundai sport coupe is provided by a choice of two performance-focused engines: 2.0L turbocharged four-cylinder or an all-aluminum DOHC 3.8L V6. Torque is communicated to the street through the standard six-speed manual gearbox. The four-cylinder turbo offers a five-speed automatic transmission with SHIFTRONIC, while the six-cylinder is available with a ZF six-speed automatic with

Motor News Media Corporation Photos

SHIFTRONIC. "We think our entry-level Genesis Coupe 2.0T, with its unique combination of rear-wheel drive and four-cylinder turbo power, offers an intriguing alternative to existing front-wheel drive sport coupes," said John Krafcik, president and CEO, Hyundai Motor America. "The 3.8-liter version of the Genesis Coupe takes driving to an even higher level, rivaling the capability of premium-performance coupes like the Infiniti G37." Control hardware for the Genesis coupe starts with a MacPherson strut dual-link suspension in front and a five-link setup at the rear. The front suspension is mounted to the body via a solid subframe which is lighter and stronger than a multi-piece component.

To reduce body roll, 24-mm diameter front and 19-mm diameter rear stabilizer bars are used. The high-performance Genesis Coupe Track models feature a suspension with stiffer front/rear spring rates and unique shock valving. Additionally, the Track models deliver an increase in roll control when compared to the other Genesis Coupe models.

Inside the cabin, the Genesis Coupe boasts a cockpit designed to enhance the driving experience. An information display screen features an outside temperature reading and audio system information. Analog gauges include a large speedometer and tachometer positioned so the driver can immediately access critical driving information. The instrument cluster features Hyundai's signature blue gauge illumination. Bucket front seats with large side bolsters offer excellent lateral support for enthusiastic driving. Other refinements are an Infinity audio system and front seat warmers. The Genesis Coupe also offers the convenience of a Proximity Key and push-button starter.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"There is no dignity quite so impressive, and no independence quite so important, as living within your means."
 — Calvin Coolidge

In today's deal from the Cavendish teams you may want to cover up the East-West cards so that you can sympathize fully with declarer. You bid to four spades and are happy to receive the lead of the heart ace. You ruff and draw trumps in three rounds, pitching a heart from dummy. It looks right to pass the club nine now, and RHO wins the king to play a diamond.

Your safest route to 10 tricks is to win the diamond in hand with the ace, preserving dummy's entry. The next club loses to LHO's ace, and he knocks out the diamond king. You cash the heart king (pitching a diamond), ruff a heart to hand, and take the club finesse to make your game. Nicely played, but it is time to look at the full deal. When the club jack turns up offside, you are held to eight tricks.

Note what happens if the defenders had taken the club jack. They can now either cash their clubs to set up two discards for your diamonds, or exit with a diamond to let you rely on the diamond finesse after you pitch a club on the heart king.

Which defender found the play of the club king on the first round of the suit? That was Zia Mahmood, motivated by more than his usual devilishness. He was trying to establish some psychological one-upmanship over his partner-to-be in major events, Bob Hamman.

ANSWER: You have more than enough in hand for a call of two diamonds. Since you have little defense to spades, you certainly do not want to sell out now. Even though there is a strong suggestion that diamonds may not be splitting, your values (and decent diamond spots) should protect your partner at the two-level.

Woman living back at home wants nights with boyfriend

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old woman who just moved back home after two years of living and learning on my own. My family has been wonderful to accept me back into their home until I finish my studies in a few months, after which I assume I'll be getting a job and my own place.

DEAR ABBY: I am a man who, for 46 years, has been celebrating my birthday on Aug. 31. I recently took a trip to Northern California to visit my older sister. While we were talking about our birthdays and our late parents, my sister dropped a bombshell. She informed me that my birthday was NOT Aug. 31, but actually Sept. 1 - like hers.

I have an amazing boyfriend, "Jordan," with whom I would love to spend some nights. I'm afraid if I do I would be disrespecting my parents' wishes - my father is a preacher - but at the same time I feel restricted because I got used to being on my own and doing what I wanted.

Jeanne Phillips

I know a few months doesn't sound like a long time, but what if I can't get a job right away and have to stay longer? Jordan and I aren't ready to move in together, but we'd like some overnight visits. What do you think?

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in October and asked my matron of honor's daughter "Crystal" to sing at my wedding. However, she has not yet bothered to learn the song we requested. Another young woman at our church has a much better voice, already knows the words and has offered to sing for us. I want to tell my friend that Crystal isn't taking this seriously and I would like to hire the other singer, but I'm afraid she will be offended. How do I approach this subject?

DEAR GROWN-UP GIRL: Have your parents met Jordan? Do they like him? If they have and they do, it would make things easier on you. You should definitely respect your father's position and sensitivities. A more acceptable compromise than spending "nights out" might be for you and Jordan to arrange some weekend getaways together. Of this I am certain: Young love will find a way.

As you can imagine, I was shocked. Why would my own mother lie to me about something as important as my own date of birth? Mom even went so far as to have the doctor change the date on my birth certificate! My two older brothers confirmed it.

I am devastated at the dishonesty. Why would a mother do such a thing? Celebrating my birthday will never be the same again.

DEAR SEARCHING FOR ANSWERS IN SYRACUSE: If I had to guess, I'd say your mother was trying to do you a favor. She didn't want you and your sister to have to share a birthday; she wanted each of you to

IF MAY 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

You have some important choices to make in the year ahead. Right now your dreams of the future are tempered by common sense. But as the summer unfolds you may feel that you are helpless to fight circumstances beyond your control. By sticking to your responsibilities and remaining focused on "doing the right thing" you will come out wiser and stronger. It is important to remember this during July, August, and September when you may experience misunderstandings with loved ones or desire to make an unwise change. Wait until October when the stars will be on your side to make a successful change in your life.

HOROSCOPE

bring all the parties together for a meeting of the minds. Mutual trust can be achieved. It might be a good weekend to light some romantic fires.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Forge the bonds of affection with the heat of passion. A friend could become more than a friend or a current significant other could become closer than ever before. Your romantic side will rise to a higher plane.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow your heart as it becomes entwined with another. The stars above will shine happily on lovers tonight. Ride whimsically on the wind toward romantic fulfillment with the special someone of your dreams.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Come out of your shell and strut your stuff. A night out on the town with friends could yield a chance meeting with an exciting someone. A relationship that has been floundering could catch fire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look forward to an evening of romantic pleasures and sensual delights. Play your cards right and passions will be pleasantly satisfied. This is a good evening for parties, TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Relationships will shine on center stage. It is a good time to be sociable, as you could find an exciting new acquaintance at a public function or party. There is little to be gained from spending time alone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can see clearly now the rain is gone. It is time to entertainment and love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Springtime excursions will shine as brightly as the stars above. Couples will find hours of romantic bliss to share and singles should be on the lookout for the "one" who may be waiting just around the corner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't hold back. Speak whatever is on your mind and in your heart. Your charms will be in full bloom tonight and you can look forward to playing amorous games with a certain special someone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pleasures soar to new heights. Your evening should center on enjoying time with friends and lovers. New encounters with the opposite sex will be a delight without considerations of the outcome.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cast out the nets and snare the object of your affection. When trolling the waters of romance, tonight's stars could illuminate quite a catch. You are alluring and at the peak of your attractiveness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Find your own private hideaway. Steal away to a private corner or nook and whisper into your loved one's ear. New love will find easy success and existing relationships will be rejuvenated.

Today is Friday, May 15, the 135th day of 2009. There are 230 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 15, 1911, the U.S. Supreme Court ordered the breakup of Standard Oil Co., ruling it was a monopoly in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

On this date: In 1859, Nobel Prize-winning physicist Pierre Curie was born in Paris.

In 1909, actor James Mason was born in Huddersfield, Yorkshire, England.

In 1929, a fire at the Cleveland Clinic claimed 123 lives.

In 1930, registered nurse Ellen Church, the first airline stewardess, went on duty aboard an Oakland-to-Chicago flight operated by Boeing Air Transport (a forerunner of United Airlines).

TODAY IN HISTORY

attacked by Transjordan, Egypt, Syria, Iraq and Lebanon.

In 1963, astronaut L. Gordon Cooper blasted off aboard Faith 7 on the final mission of the Project Mercury space program.

In 1969, Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas resigned amid a controversy over his past legal fees.

In 1972, George C. Wallace was shot by Arthur Bremer and left paralyzed while campaigning in Laurel, Md., for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In 1975, U.S. forces invaded the Cambodian island of Koh Tang and recaptured the American merchant ship Mayaguez. (All 40 crew members had already been released safely by Cambodia; some 40 U.S. servicemen were killed in the operation.)

Ten years ago: Russian President Boris Yeltsin triumphed over his Communist foes, surviving an impeachment vote in the Russian parliament. Charismatic won the Preakness, finishing 1 1/2 lengths ahead of Menifee.

Five years ago: A 40-ton steel girder dropped from a freeway overpass construction site into morning traffic in Golden, Colo., crushing one car and killing a family of three. Col. Robert Morgan, commander of the famed Memphis Belle B-17 bomber that flew combat missions over Europe during World War II, died in Asheville, N.C., at age 85. Kentucky Derby winner Smarty Jones posted a record 11 1/2 length victory in the Preakness (however, the horse failed to win the Belmont Stakes).

One year ago: President George W. Bush, addressing the Israeli Knesset, gently urged Mideast leaders to "make the hard choices necessary for peace" and condemned what he called "the false comfort of appeasement." California's Supreme Court declared gay couples in the state could marry - a victory for the gay rights movement that was overturned by the passage of Proposition 8 the following November.
