2009 grads celebrate achievements at CSI

By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

Before the solemn music began, graduates of the College of Southern Idaho put on their mortarboards, straightened their gowns and prepared for the short walk from the Fine Arts Center to the packed gymnasium at Friday's graduation ceremony.

For community college students, graduation is in a class by itself. It lacks the entry into adulthood that accompanies high school graduations. And for students planning to further their education elsewhere, it may not have the same sense of finality that comes with the final degree.

Filer principal Lanting to retire after 33 years By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

FILER - Greg Lanting's long career with Filer School District is nearing an end.

In a pep assembly on Friday, the principal at Filer Middle School reaped some farewell cheers from students. He'll step down in June after a 33-year-career which includes 17 years as principal and 14 years as a teacher.

"I am going to miss both the staff and the students," Lanting said.

Campground fees to go up Memorial Day weekend

The Sawtooth National Forest will start charging officials will enforce the 10new camping fees at some sites in the Minidoka Ranger District on Memorial Ramp and Alturas Lake's Day weekend, officials announced this week.

Schipper, Steer Basin and Diamondfield Jack campgrounds were previously all free. Camping at Schipper and Steer Basin will now cost per night, Diamondfield Jack $8 per night. Day use at the latter site's parking area will remain free.

The new fees were proposed last year and supported this spring by two Bureau of Land Management Resource Advisory Councils before being approved by the regional forester. The money will go directly to maintaining and operating the sites. The advisory councils also approved fee increases for several sites in the Fairfield Ranger District.

After many requests from the public, the district has also added more reservation sites at several popular campgrounds, including Porcupine Springs and Lower Penstemon.

Scientists launch new telescope

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - As American astronauts overhauled the aging Hubble, European scientists launched an even larger space telescope toward a far-flung orbit, hoping to help answer two questions: How did the cosmos begin and are we alone in it?

"We are seeking the origins of the universe?' said Jean-Yves Le Gall, chairman and CEO of French satellite launcher Arianespace, which Thursday on launched the Herschel space telescope and a companion spacecraft from French Guiana.

The Herschel space telescope, the largest ever launched, will observe chunks of ice and dust left over from the formation of planets, playing a "complementary" role to the versatile Hubble, said Andreas Diekmann, director of the European Space Agency's Washington office. A companion spacecraft called Planck separated from the Ariane rocket soon after launch on a mission to measure radiation from the Big Bang. Unlike Hubble, which has become famous for its breathtaking images of the heavens, Herschel and Planck work in non-visible wavelengths of light. But they will provide scientists with crucial information about planet and star formation. The Herschel telescope will allow scientists to study the birth of stars and galaxies and analyze the dustclouds around stars.

In these complicated times, life seems to come at us like a game of hardball: full of fast pitches and plenty of curveballs. That's why more than 100 million Americans rely on their local newspapers and newspaper websites to stay on top of their game. Heroism becoming routine for Oakley firefighters

CHEERS: To two volunteers awarded to somebody who from the Oakley Fire awarded to somebody who simply finds himself in a data Department, who were awarded the Idaho Metal of Honor for rescuing a Burley woman from a fiery car wreck earlier this year.

On Jan. 18, Dave Roundy and Dave Korum pulled Tenessa Papp from a burning pickup that had collided with a tanker truck.

Seconds after Roundy and Korom carried Papp to safety, the pickup exploded in flames.

Roundy's and Korom's were the third and fourth Medals of Honor that Oakley firefighters have earned since 2006.

Bill von Tagen, a deputy Idaho attorney general who serves as chairman of the Medal of Honor Commission, explained the criteria for the award.

"The Medal of Honor is not simply finds himself in a dangerous situation," he said. "It's about how they perform in that situation. These men sacrificed their own safety to save that young woman. We sometimes wonder where people like this come from. They come from Oakley, Burley, Coeur d'Alene — all over Idaho ... but I suggested Oakley put 'City of Heroes' on the sign coming into town."

But regulators moved in before the June deadline, surprising bank executives who say they had lined up investors to provide the cash.

That decision left business customers of First Bank twisting in the wind because U.S. Bank wasn't interested in honoring their lines of credit. Frantic efforts by Ketchum community leaders lined up alternate financing from other banks, but not all of First Bank's former clients got loans.

"There were about a 100 businesses without credit," Ketchum Mayor Randy Hall said. "And without financing we would have seen many of them fail."

Congressmen Mike Simpson Department of Correction and Walt Minnick want to know why OTS was in such a rush to close down First Bank.

"We are concerned that the OTS and FDIC did not give the bank enough time to capitalize properly," they wrote in a letter to John Bowman, acting OTS director.

We here in Idaho are accustomed to suffering the consequences of hasty or uninformed decision-making by the federal government. It's time that changed.

CHEERS: To Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter for trying to give the bum's rush to foreign citizens held in Idaho jails.

Otter last week sent a letter to U.S. District Judge B. Linn Winmill asking that federal deportation hearings be held before state parole hearings.

He said the Idaho could save money by not placing inmates in certain programs - such as drug or alcohol treatment — when those inmates will almost certainly be deported.

There are 355 foreign nationals in Idaho prisons costing the state more than $7 million a year.

Washington doesn't meet the Cheerios standard think it's time we applied the same advertising standards to Washington's legislative products that the feds apply to breakfast foods. The Food and Drug Administration rapped General Mills this week for making misleading claims about the benefits of Cheerios. The food manufacturer says the wholegrain O's are "clinically proven to lower cholesterol." The FDA demanded packaging changes to ensure truth in labeling.

Well, how about the bogus marketing of the fiscal "stimulus"? President Obama and the Democrats promoted the trillion-dollar package as job creation salvation. The White House claims 150,000 jobs have been "created or saved." But since February, the nation has lost more than 1.3 million jobs. The current 8.9 percent unemployment rate in the wake of the stimulus passage is worse than the 8.8 percent unemployment Obama's economists darkly predicted if Congress didn't immediately adopt their recovery plan.

The "stimulus" was supposed to provide aid to the country's neediest areas. It's claimed that "there are no not. The Associated Press reported after reviewing 5,500 planned transportation projects that "states are planning to spend 50 percent more per person in areas with the lowest unemployment than in communities with the high-

Obama promised that Americans would be able to track "every dime" of the "stimulus" at one handy clearinghouse Web site. They won't. The Recovery.gov site data won't be fully available until next spring — halfway through the program.

Washington told us the "stimulus" projects were "shovel-ready" and would provide immediate relief. They're not. The New York Times notes that the program "has paid out less than 6 percent of the money, largely in the form of social service payments to states." Democratic leaders baldly earmarks" in the bill. But untold tens of millions of dollars are headed to pet projects such as skateboard parks, tennis and basketball court renovation, the National Zoo, the $11 million Bridge to Microsoft, and Pennsylvania King of Pork Rep. John Murtha's ghost airport to nowhere.

More falsely labeled products in the Capitol Hill pantry: How about the "Toxic Assets Relief Program"? The trilliondollar-plus banking bailout morphed from a toxic assets purchase plan to a capital injection plan, back to a toxic assets purchase plan, to a life insurance company bailout, to an auto supplier bailout, and may now be used to bail out the state of California. Supporters of that maneuver argue that TARP should be extended to every cash-strapped state and local government to guarantee their debts against default.

How about "Social Security"? There's nothing secure about it. While Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid scoffed during the Bush years that "the socalled Social Security crisis exists in only one place - the minds of the Republicans," the insolvency problem festered. Now, the Obama administration reports that both Social (In)security and Medicare are hurtling toward bankruptcy far sooner than previously estimated. The "trust funds" exist only in the minds of the deluded.

And just this week, Congress collaborated with the White House to conjure up a misleading description of Obama's $108 billion bailout of the International Monetary Fund. They're advertising the expenditure as a "line of credit" with the "hope to get the money back," according to the Wall Street Journal. "So the White House argued that the budgetary impact should be calculated at zero." That's right. Capitol Hill is officially claiming that $108 billion zero.

If Beltway spending plans were breakfast cereals, they'd be yanked from grocery stores in a heartbeat. Their promises and premises are as full of holes as a box of persecuted Cheerios.

ne word and a phrase abounded at a recent day of briefings at the State Department. The briefings, allow a small group of journalists from across the nation to hear from top diplomats and discuss a broad range of foreign policy issues.

The frequently used word was "acting" - as in one temporarily holding a rank or position. There was an acting assistant secretary for international security and non-proliferation, an acting assistant secretary of state for public affairs, an acting assistant secretary for African affairs and an acting assistant secretary for Near Eastern affairs.

In the run-up to the inauguration, Presidentelect Obama received praise for his alacrity in filling key posts and his ability to take the reins of power quickly. When he announced his national security team on Dec. 1, Obama said:

"I will be in close contact with these advisers, who will be working with their counterparts in the Bush administration to make sure that we are ready to hit the ground running on Jan. 20. Given the range of threats that we face — and the vulnerability that can be a part of every presidential transition - I hope that we can proceed swiftly for those national security officials who demand confirmation."

Four months into the Obama administration, 33 out of 45 leadership posts that require a presidential appointment remain unfilled, with 13 late nominations awaiting confirmation and 20 positions for which no nominee has yet been put forward.

Among the critical geographic and functional areas - in addition to nonproliferation — lacking a presidential appointment are assistant secretaries for: international narcotics and law enforcement affairs; diplomatic security; western hemisphere affairs; and democracy, human rights and labor.

Leaving so many positions unfilled in a dangerJONATHAN GURWITZ

ous world may not sound smart. The operative phrase in the Obama-Clinton State Department, however, is "smart power."

What is smart power? Gina Abercrombie-Winstanley, deputy coordinator in the office of the coordinator for counterterrorism, put it this way: "Smart power is the holistic approach that we have been using for several years now in our counterterrorism efforts." This shows that Obama smart power is not much different in substance from the presumably dumb power of the final Bush years. We're still firing missiles in Afghanistan and Pakistan, "air raiding villages and killing civilians" as candidate Obama once put it. We just have more articulate spokesmen defending the policy.

Another commonality between late-Bush and early-Obama foreign policy is that you hear almost nothing now about human rights and freedom. George W. Bush made a compelling case after 9-11 that international security was integrally linked with the growth of democratic institutions and individual liberty.

In pursuing a foreign policy that wasn't based solely on cold, hard national interests but also on universal values, Bush was following a rich bipartisan tradition that in recent memory encompassed Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, Scoop Jackson and Jeanne Kirkpatrick.

The realists reasserted control in the second Bush term. U.S. foreign policy is still, unfortunately, unburdened by the oppression of women, the educational impoverishment of girls, the execution of gays or the imprisonment of political dissidents.

Obama – popular and eloquent – could and should be their champion.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

By Garry Trudeau Mallard Fillmore

Doonesbury

We are on the fast track to fiscal suicide

arack Obama came to office with a theory. He believed that the country was in desperate need of new investments in education, energy and many other areas. He also saw that the nation faced a long term-fiscal crisis caused by rising health care and entitlement costs. His theory was that he could spend now and save later. He could fund his agenda with debt now and then solve the long-term fiscal crisis by controlling health care and entitlement costs later on.

In essence, health care became the bank out of which he could fund the bulk of his agenda. By squeezing inefficiencies out of the health care system, he could have his New New Deal and also restore the nation to long-term fiscal balance.

This theory justified the tremendous ramp-up of spending we've seen over the last several months. Obama inherited a $1.2 trillion deficit and has quickly pushed it up to $1.8 trillion, a whopping 13 percent of GDP. The new debt will continue to mount after the economy recovers. The national debt will nearly double over the next decade. Annual deficits will still hover around 5 percent or 6 percent of GDP in 2019. By that year, interest payments alone on the debt are projected to be $806 billion annually, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

Obama believes these deficit levels are tolerable if he can fix the long-term fiscal situation, but he hasn't been happy about them. He's been prowling around the White House prodding his staff to find budget cuts. Some of the ideas they have produced have been significant (Medicare reforms), some have been purely political (asking Cabinet secretaries to cut $100 million in waste, fraud and abuse), and many have been gutted on Capitol Hill (cap and trade, proposed changes in charitable deductions, proposed changes to the estate tax).

In any case, these stabs at fiscal discipline haven't come close to keeping up with the explosion in spending. The government now borrows $1 for every $2 it spends. A Treasury bond auction earlier this month went poorly, suggesting the world's hunger for U.S. debt is not limitless.

Obama has been thrown back on his original theory. If he is going to sustain his agenda, if he is going to prevent national insolvency, he has to control health care costs. Health care costs are now the crucial issue of his whole presidency.

Obama and his aides seem to understand this. They have gone out of their way to emphasize the importance of restraining costs. The president has held headline-grabbing summits with business and union leaders. Unlike just about every other Democrat on the planet, he emphasizes cost control as much as expanding health cover-

So what exactly is the president proposing to help him realize hundreds of billions of dollars a year in savings? Obama aides talk about "game-changers." These include improving health information technology, expanding wellness programs, expanding preventive medicine, changing reimbursement policies so hospitals are penalized for poor outcomes, and instituting comparative effectiveness measures.

Nearly everybody believes these are good ideas. The first problem is that most experts, with a notable exception of David Cutler of Harvard, don't believe they will produce much in the way of cost savings over the next 10 years. They are expensive to set up and even if they work, it would take a long time for cumulative efficiencies to have much effect. That means that from today until the time Obama is, say, 60, the U.S. will get no fiscal relief.

The second problem is that nobody is sure that they will ever produce significant savings. The Congressional Budget Office can't really project savings because there's no hard evidence they will produce any and no way to measure how much. Some experts believe they will work, but John Sheils of the Lewin Group, a health care policy research company, speaks for many others. He likes the ideas but adds, "There's nothing that does much to control costs."

If you read the Congressional Budget Office testimony and talk to enough experts, you come away with a stark conclusion: There are deep structural forces, both in Medicare and the private insurance market, that have driven the explosion in health costs. It is nearly impossible to put together a majority coalition for a bill that challenges those essential structures. Therefore, the leading proposals on Capitol Hill do not directly address the structural problems. They are a collection of worthy but speculative ideas designed to possibly mitigate their effects.

The likely outcome of this year's health care push is that we will get a medium-size bill that expands coverage to some groups but does relatively little to control costs. In normal conditions, that would be a legislative achievement.

But Obama needs those cuts for his whole strategy to work. Right now, his spending plans are concrete and certain. But his health care savings, which make those spending plans affordable, are distant, amorphous and uncertain. Without serious health cost cuts, this burst of activism will hasten fiscal suicide.

Democrats' risky focus on torture

By Larry Margasak Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON Barack Obama warned Democrats in Congress against making a partisan cause out of the Bush administration's harsh interrogation tactics.

Analysis

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi is ignoring him loudly — and the party, from the president on down, may pay the price.

So far, it's Pelosi who's suffered the greatest harm. It may never be resolved exactly when she first learned that waterboarding had been used against terror suspects – in 2002 when was the senior

Democrat on the House Intelligence Committee or five months later after she became her party's leader. But the Democrats' claim to the moral high ground on the issue has been blemished by her explanation this week that in early 2003 she shifted her attention to winning political control of the House and didn't wage a protest against what she now calls torture.

She says the CIA and the Bush administration misled her about when the waterboarding, which simulates drowning, began. But Republicans don't have to fight that battle. They only have to keep the focus on her, and they have done that well - as evidenced by her multiple attempts to explain herself.

Before this political saga is finished months from now, both sides will score points and Democrats will have their good days. An internal Justice Department report, soon to be completed, may recommend disciplinary action against one or more of the Bush attorneys who wrote memos concluding the interrogation tactics were legal.

The biggest sign that the effort could backfire politically came from President Obama.

On April 21, addressing congressional proposals for a bipartisan commission to study the interrogations, the president said: "I do worry about this getting so politicized that we cannot function effectively and it hampers our ability to carry out critical national security operations."

If Obama is right, Democrats could be perceived as harming national security. That would be a major stumble that could give the Republicans an issue in next year's congressional elections.

he United States has just acquired a new client state one with 170 million people, nuclear weapons, an Islamist insurgency and Osama bin Laden. And that's the good news.

The country is Pakistan, and last week it officially became the Obama administration's biggest and most daunting rescue mission. For months, the administration has been inching toward a deeper commitment of American dollars, military trainers and civilian advisers to strengthen Pakistan's government and security forces - not for humanitarian reasons but to stop the country from drifting into the arms of al-Qaida and the Taliban.

Last week, at a threeway summit meeting of U.S. President Barack Obama, Pakistani President Asif Ali Zardari and Afghan President Hamid Karzai, a relationship began to look more like a long-term commitment.

"I'm not going to say we turned a corner, but I am going to say we opened a new chapter," said special envoy Richard C. Holbrooke, briefing reporters at the White House. "It exceeded our hopes."

Holbrooke and Gen. David H. Petraeus, the U.S. military commander in the region, said they now expect to see more Pakistani cooperation with the U.S.-led campaign against Taliban forces in Afghanistan and a "substantial" Pakistani military campaign against the Islamist insurgents who have taken over the Swat Valley and other parts of northern Pakistan. In return, the United States will dramatically increase aid to Pakistan, both military and civilian.

But Holbrooke, a veteran of nation-building since the Vietnam War, was careful to add a caveat: "The real question is, will it produce results?"

Pakistan have a long history. During the Cold War, the United States supported military-dominated regimes in Islamabad, seeing Pakistan as essential to containing the spread of communism. But that alliance fell into a decadelong freeze over Pakistan's pursuit of nuclear weapons.

After the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. President George W. Bush made an alliance of inconvenience with Pakistan's military leader, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, to seek his help fighting al-Qaida and the Taliban. Under the arrangement, Pakistan's armed forces bill the Pentagon for counterinsurgency operations.

Pakistanis were annoyed that they received little American help for their shaky democratic institutions or their economy and feared that the United States loved India, their traditional enemy, more. Americans didn't see much evidence that the Pakistanis were looking for bin Laden or breaking off their intelligence service's long, deep relationship with the Afghan Taliban. Now both sides say they are serious about building a deeper, broader relationship. What's changed? Fear. Until last month, many Pakistanis dismissed the Islamist insurgencies in their western badlands as peripheral. But after a faction of Pakistani Taliban took control of the Swat Valley and began moving into adjoining regions, they finally became alarmed.

After initially making a stand. Even before Swat, Petraeus said, Pakistan's armed forces had begun putting more resources into their gritty struggle against insurgents in the west. "The Frontier Corps used to be underpaid, underfed, underclothed and underequipped," he said. "They are much more comparable now" to Pakistan's regular army.

Another key change: The intelligence chiefs of Pakistan and Afghanistan have decided to work together, even if they don't completely trust each other, with the CIA. American intelligence and military officers have long worried that Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence would tip off terrorists about planned U.S. operations; now the United States intends to let the Pakistanis know in advance of military sweeps on the Afghan side of the border, to give them a chance to intercept Taliban fighters, should they choose

The Obama administration wants the Afghans and Pakistanis, long wary of each other, to cooperate The two governments have been so distant that their interior ministers, responsible for their police forces, had in a three-way collaboration never met until they came to Washington.

There are plenty of reasons for skepticism. The problems are huge, the Pakistani government's track record is abysmal and the U.S. government's tools are few. That $7.5 billion in economic aid would come to about $9 per Pakistani per vear.

But this round could be different. Obama has taken on the problems of Pakistan as his own, but at least he has done so with his eyes open.

Air Force revamps weapons buying ahead of tanker

Government plans to hire up to 2,000 contractors

By Stephen Manning Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON – The Air Force is revamping its weapons buying methods as it prepares to award a $35 billion contract for refueling airplanes, a program the service was accused of botching last

The Air Force said Friday that its plans include filling more than 2,000 new contracting jobs, paying closer attention to costs at the early stages of weapons programs, and making sure contracting personnel are prepared for the complex defense acquisition process.

The service's weapons buying officials on Friday defended the Air Force's record, saying the vast majority of contracts are awarded without any significant problems.

But there have been noticeable exceptions, foremost among them the troubled program to replace the Air Force's aging fleet of planes that gas up other jets midflight.

The Government Accountability Office faulted the Air Force's selection last year of a team composed of Grumman Northrop Corp. and Airbus parent European Aeronautics Defense and Space Co., saying the service had unfairly slanted the process against rival bidder Boeing Co.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates subsequent ly canceled the competition, the latest delay in almost a decade of failed attempts to build a new fleet of planes. Gates plans to restart the process again this summer.

Made In Idaho files for bankruptcy

Made In Idaho, a Twin Falls business that sold products made in the Gem State, filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy last week.

The number that was listed for Made In Idaho was disconnected, so I couldn't reach the owner of the business, Michael Steinmetz.

His attorney was also unavailable for comment. It's not an unusual story during these unusual times the store's liabilities simply outweighed its assets. But it's always unfortunate to see another local shop go out of business. Local products are getting to save a few cents. fewer and farther between as consumers flock to big-

WASHINGTON -Federal prosecutors and the FBI have been investigating possible illegal insider trading by two Securities and Exchange Commission enforcement attorneys who were in a position to receive sensitive information about agency probes of public companies.

The SEC's inspector general, David Kotz, found that the frequent stock trades over a twoyear period by the pair raised suspicions of insider trading.

Earlier this year, he referred the matter to the Fraud and Public Corruption Section of the attorney's office Washington.

That office, together with the FBI, "is conducting an investigation of possible criminal and civil violations," Kotz told SEC Chairman Mary Schapiro in a memo dated March 3.

The memo and Kotz's report of his investigation were provided by the office of Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who has been an active critic of the SEC's operations.

Kotz's report also found that tremendous amount of nonpub-governing the reportin lic information they have at their trades," the statement said.

The SEC enforcement attorneys, one male and one female, each earn more than $160,000 annually and had stock portfolios estimated to be worth more than that, according to Kotz's report. They often e-mailed each other about stocks and their trades, it said. The attorneys and the companies whose stock they were said to have traded weren't named.

For example, they both traded in the stock of a large financial company after being told by a colleague about investigations of the company, a violation of SEC rules, according to the report.

"SEC attorneys are supposed to spend their time trying to that ... employees, with the ing greater clarity of our rule prosecute insider trading, not profit from it," Grassley said in a statement Friday.

Bruin girls take second at 5A track

By Dustin Lapray Times-News correspondent

BOISE – Five Twin Falls girls took turns winning gold medals Friday at the Class 5A Idaho State Track and field Championships at Bronco Stadium in Boise, taking their team from 12th place at dawn to second at dusk.

The Bruins finished with 81 points, just behind Eagle's state championship total of 90. The Twin Falls Boys finished seventh.

Brooke Wagner (four golds), Brianna Bowcut, Danielle Bowcut, Mercedes Blackwood and Madi Worst outran all comers and swept the relays Friday.

Twin Falls' 4x200-meter team (Brianna Bowcut, Wagner, Worst and Blackwood) repeated as state champions, blowing away the field and falling a mere .35 seconds short of setting a personal best with a time of 1 minute, 42.96 seconds. Twin Falls holds the state set in 2005).

BOISE - They didn't have enough experience coming back. They didn't have any power hitters. They didn't have blowit-by-you pitching.

Nobody gave the Minico Spartans a chance heading into this season. And after they started 3-9, it was officially written off as a "down year."

Look at them now. Playing with a chip on shoulder, Spartans have scrapped all the way to the Class 4A state baseball championship game. Minico (21-11) whipped

"Nobody ever thought we were going to be here, they all thought we couldn't top last year's team," said Minico junior first baseman Dylan Winmill. "People have said we're a Cinderella story, but no, we're not. We knew all along we had a good team, we just had to put it together. We knew we were going to take it from Day 1."

The seven seniors on this year's Spartan remember the past two years of state tourney disappointment. Last year's team, which set a Minico school record with 26 wins in a season, was upset in the BOISE - Raft River romped into the lead in the Class 1A girls team standings at the Idaho High School Track & Field Championships at Bronco Stadium in Boise, but Camas County ripped it away on the final event of the dav.

Mette Ericsson won the pole vault by clearing 9-6 for the Mushers. Ericsson said she only practiced the event once before the district championships. She improved her height by a full foot Friday.

"This is kind of unexpected," Ericsson said. "It's really kind of weird."

Camas County's girls led with 40.5 points, and Raft River finished in second place with 36 points through eight events. The Raft River boys lead after eight events with 31 points. Camas County is in fourth with 25.

"There are a lot of hard-working girls at Raft River," Sally Jensen said. "It's fun to be part of our team because in the practices the girls give everything they have. The girls on the team deserve to do well here."

Jensen, a senior at jump with her second jump of 17-feet-2-inches. Her personal best this season is 17-8.5.

"I knew it would be good enough to win, but it wasn't my best," Jensen said. "I was excited to win, but I really wanted to PR."

Jensen also qualified for the 100- and 400meter finals today.

The Dietrich boys at state. James McDaniel, G.W. medley (200, 200, 400, 800 meters) title in 3 minutes, 42.75 seconds. Perron trailed 500 meters into the 800 anchor leg, but surged into the lead and won by 15 meters.

"People are starting to see that you can compete [in Dietrich], showcase your talent," Stoddard said.

Jeff Ellingson, a Camas County junior made up for a poor performance at state in 2008 by taking gold in the 1A discus with his first throw (149 feet, 6 inches).

"I wanted it so bad last year," Ellingson said. "Oh, man. I wanted this one. I wasn't as scared. I felt like I was so small last year and everyone were these big huge senior guys and I was like 'okay, um.' I was just scared."

Ellingson was one of the smallest throwers in the field Friday, but his technique gave him gold.

"Kyler Shumway makes me look like a baby," Ellingson said. "I just hope my technique gets me where these guys' big scary arms got them. I'm going to try to lift more next year so I can look like these guys."

Shumway won the shot put for Prairie. Ellingson threw the disc earlier 154 feet this year, then struggled through season the redeemed himself at Braden Ottley and Bridger Barrett also finished in the top six in discus.

Camas County's relay team of Mollie McLam, Peterson, Katelyn Lindsey Peterson and Ericsson took silver in the medley, breaking a school record of 1:57.22.

"It's our fastest four girls," Lindsey Peterson said. "This is our third time here and we had never medaled."

Ellie Dalton won silver Raft River, won the long in the 3,200-meter race for Dietrich with a big kick down the final straightaway.

"I was so scared I was crying, 'cause it's so weird being here as a freshman," Dalton said. "It's so big. But once you go out there, everything goes away and it's just the race."

The grueling 3,200 (8 laps) is the longest race

"You know it's going Bailey, Jaren Stoddard to be a battle ... you and Scott Perron know you're going to defended their sprint want to die," Dalton said. "I'm already excited for next year."

Pilots steer way to 2A title tilt

Most coaches would be concerned about putting a freshman on the mound for a state semifinal game. But not Glenns Ferry coach Denis Uhl. After all, Uhl's freshman is Adrian Martinez.

Martinez struck out 11 batters and scattered five hits as the Pilots beat New Plymouth 4-2 on Friday night, earning a spot in today's Class 2A state championship game at Rodeo Park in Nampa.

"He just did an incredible job today," Uhl said of Martinez. The freshman consistently stayed ahead in the count, limiting New Plymouth to single runs in the second and fifth innings. Behind Martinez, Glenns Ferry played solid defense, committing just one error to earn Uhl's praise. Michael Crane supplied the offense, going 2-for-

2 with two RBIs. The Pilots will face Nampa Christian for the title

Phelps back in familiar spot — top of the medal stand and an old-school swimsuit, Michael Phelps sons in the NBA and later became a top jazz picked up right where he left off in Beijing. Two races. Two wins.

The world's greatest swimmer left everyone - and everything - in his wake Friday night at his first meet since a triumphant Olympics. That nine-month layoff? No problem. That embarrassing photo of him using a marijuana pipe? Time to let that one

None of it seemed to matter when Phelps dove in for two events less than an hour apart at the Charlotte UltraSwim. He started with a victory in the 200-meter freestyle and came right back to touch first in the 100 butterfly, both with times that easily broke the meet records he set three years ago.

Considering Phelps hadn't bothered to shave down and he wore a 2004 model leg suit - a real antique in the fast-changing swimsuit world – it was clear the kickoff to this final stage of his career is starting way ahead of schedule.

"I was real happy with today," Phelps said. "I think the training is working well."

Coach Bob Bowman, usually Phelps' harshest critic, was downright giddy when he saw the times. He figured Phelps would be doing well to swim the 200 free in around 1:48. He went 2 seconds faster.

The 6-foot-9 forward, with a soft left-handed touch on the court and a wide smile off it, averaged 15.3 points for his career. He was on the U.S. team that won the gold medal in the 1984 Olympics.

After basketball, he became an awardwinning jazz musician, with several albums making the top 10 on the Billboard charts.

"I don't know of any athlete at Oklahoma or any place else who was more loved by the fans who knew him than Wayman Tisdale," said Billy Tubbs, who coached Tisdale with the Sooners.

Pressure mounts as Junior comes home in slump

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) -Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s fans fill the infield. He's mobbed wherever he goes at his home track. Lines wind around the corner to get into his nearby nightclub.

The brand remains strong. It's just on the track where NASCAR's most popular driver is still finding success elusive.

Welcome home, Junior. Now why aren't you winning?

Johnson wins pole for All-Star race

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Jimmie Johnson has a history of dominance at Lowe's Motor Speedway, but had never started from the pole in the All-Star race.

After a speedy, mistake-free performance Friday, the decorated driver can check off that accomplishment, too.

The three-time defending Sprint Cup points champion won five of six points races at Lowe's from 2003-05. He's in position to return to the top spot after being the star of the unusual qualifying for-

Teams had to go three laps and make a four-tire pit stop without speeding down pit road or leaving loose lug nuts.

Time penalties for those infractions cost several drivers, but not Johnson. He had a speedy first lap, but shot to the front by being the fastest out of the pits -119 mph.

He finished in 2 minutes, 1.416 seconds, then held off all challengers. Kurt Busch will start second in the 100-lap non-points shootout Saturday night that pays the winner $1 million.

"I think with track position as important as it's going to be in the race, to be where we are is a great situation," Johnson said. "We focused on it hard today and everybody did their jobs. Busch finished in 2:02.187. Matt Kenseth will start third, followed by Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Mark Martin. "Jimmie Johnson, the 48 guys are always the tough ones to beat here at Lowe's, no matter what event it is," Busch said. "But overall I'm very happy with our lap. To be starting outside pole, that's almost as good as starting on the pole here at Lowe's."

Jeff Gordon qualified sixth, followed by Bobby Labonte, Kasey Kahne, Kevin Harvick and Brad Keselowski.

Readers offer thanks during National Police Week

ast week I offered you the chance to thank an officer during National Police Week. It comes to an end today, so as promised, here are some of the notes:

It's not to often we think about law enforcement until we look in our rear view mirror and see those red and blue lights turning and the siren loudly playing its tune of "I've got you, pull over." We seldom really see the person behind the badge. Sometimes they are elusive to sight until it's too late. You don't see them and sometimes neither does the bad guy until it is too late also.

I sleep well at night knowing that law enforce-

Cops do this for pay that is close to an insult. I know many private-sector jobs that pay more money. Each day I see a sheriff's deputy drive home from her tour of duty and I know that for the last eight to 10 hours the area is clear of those who would do us harm. This deputy is Jocelyn Nunnally,

Families have kept Clover Trinity Lutheran Church an iconic site in the Magic Valley

By John E. Swayze Times-News correspondent

The rural location of Clover Trinity Lutheran Church would almost seem to defy logic. But the stained glass windows, adjacent cemetery and school are all a testament to the pioneer spirit and Christian faith that took root on the Clover tract early in the 20th century.

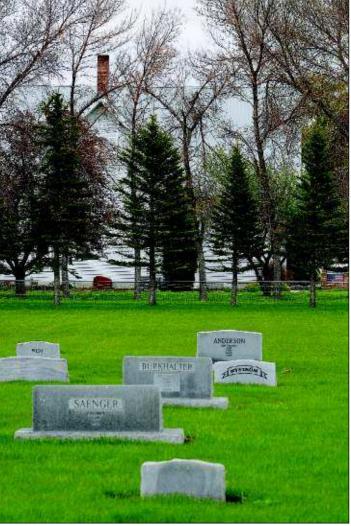

Rev. Mark Christ, who answered a call as pastor of the 300-member church in 1996, recalls his first reaction to the sturdy white structure located 16 miles southwest of Twin Falls.

"We came out from Wisconsin 12 years ago, and I remember thinking what in the world is something like this doing out here in the middle of nowhere. But I love it here," Christ said. "Families started this church and, with a few adjustments over the years, that's what has kept us going."

The Clover tract, a nine-mile long, 4,000-acre swath of desert land stretching just south of Filer to the west end of Clover, began in 1912 as a Carey Act project directed by the Boise and St. Louisbased Highline Seed Farms. Overseen by company general manager Harley J. Hooker, the Highline Canal and six pump stations were constructed to divert water and irrigate tract land above the canal.

Designs for a perspective townsite were also developed but failed to become a reality.

has collected promotional bulletins and other items detailing early settlement efforts.

"There were big plans for Clover," Meyer said. "The streets and town lots for a thriving community were all laid out and there were even plans for a street car." In 1914, the first hand-picked German Lutherans arrived by train from Nebraska to settle on this newly developed land they would buy for $160 an acre. As an added incentive to attract those of thrifty and progressive character, much of the tract was seeded with clover and settlers were guaranteed a first yield. Crops grown later would well as livestock.

"There wasn't much but dirt and sagebrush out here." Mever said. "Hooker didn't want just anybody coming out here and then deciding to go back, so they had to be tough and hardy folks?

Almost from the moment they set foot on the tract, families many of whom started out living in tents or rooming at the Clover Hotel built by Highland Seed Farms began planning for the construction of a one-room school house that could also serve as a temporary place of worship.

"That early group who started all of importance of a solid educational foundation and the need for worshiping God," Christ said. "So, they built the school before completing their own homes."

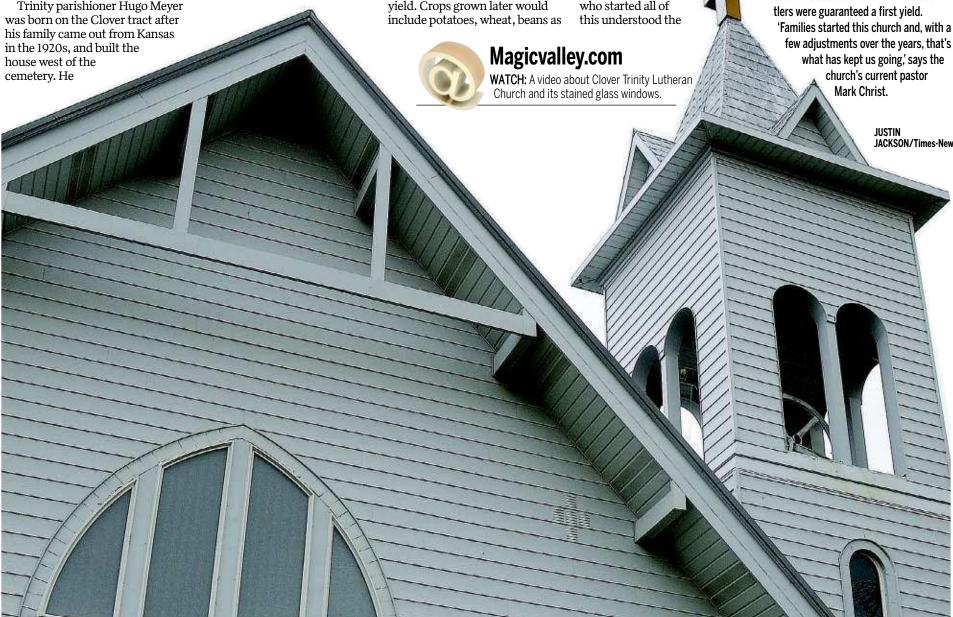

The first houses built were tworoom dwellings constructed with 2x4 studs and shiplap siding. These were later replaced by more substantial homes and often converted to work sheds.

Clover and continued in that capacity until his death in 1951. Since that time, a total of 10 pastors have worked to nurture the congregation's spiritual growth through gospel study.

Hugo Meyer's sister, Helen Meyer, came out to Clover when she was 6 months old. Now living in Buhl, she keeps her church membership and continues to draw strength from a lifetime of studying the gospel message.

"We have been very fortunate to have good Bible teaching pastors who practice their faith," she said. "Faith grows and the Lord is in control of everything. but along with our parents, pastors have been like our life blood."

The Clover congregation has shown itself willing to put the word into practice in many ways. One of these is a desire to plant the seed of new churches. In 1937 a mission church in Buhl was founded. By 1843 St. John's Lutheran Church had bloomed into a flourishing body of believers. And in December 1962, another mission was started that would become Peace Lutheran Church in Filer.

The church building, which has stood firm in Clover for more than 90 years, was completed in August 1918.

Though most building projects have been undertaken using volunteer labor, this was one where the congregation decided to use the services of a contractor.

"We hired a contractor and crew, but I'm sure men in the congregation volunteered to help lift some of those heavy beams in place," Meyers said. "I've been up in the attic and they are massive. Not a knothole in a one of completed building was dedicated to God on Aug. 15, 1915. It would later be expanded to two rooms and remain in service as a school until 1948. At that time it was sold to a church in Buhl and replaced by the current school. Helen Meyer remembers how school students performed plays on a sawhorse stage, ate their lunches on the canal bank and marched back and forth between the church and the store-hotel in parade with the Clover Trinity Band.

"My father started the band in around 1921 and it lasted until 1926," Meyer said. "He could almost play any wind instrument there was."

That tradition of music has been carried on through the years by vocal, hand bell and chime choirs as well as instrumental quartets.

Clover Trinity Lutheran School, funded through tuitions and the annual Octoberfest dinner that brings in around $12,000, offers a kindergarten through eighth-grade education based on biblical principles. Past students seem to hold onto the tradition and memories of Sunday worship or a Wednesday morning chapel service. As a result, some return home to give a little back. This year the school has three of its alumni in teaching or administrative positions.

Brenda Tews, who graduated from Clover in 1976, said she feels as if she has come full circle in coming back to teach secondthrough fourth-grade students.

"It's an easy transition, because this is like going back to my childhood," Brenda said. "This school gave me a strong spiritual, emotional and academic foundation and I wouldn't change a thing."

This summer, the school hopes to make a transition of its own by offering child care to working mothers. School Administrator Marcus Lutz, another graduate, sees the service as a way to get parents to consider Clover as an educational option for their children.

"If we can get them here at a younger age and parents see what we have to offer," Marcus said, "maybe it'll be easier to keep them coming back."

Pope gunman says he wants to convert to Christianity

By Suzan Fraser Associated Press writer

ANKARA, Turkey -The man who shot Pope John Paul II says he would like to convert to Christianity at a baptism ceremony at the Vatican soon after his release from prison in January, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Over the years, Mehmet Ali Agca has made frequent claims that he is the Messiah or Jesus Christ, raising questions about his mental health and leading to speculation that he had converted to Christianity.

"Agea is not formally a Christian," lawyer Haci Ali Ozhan told The Associated Press. "When he converts, he would like a baptism ceremony at the Vatican," Ozhan said, relaying comments Agca made during a recent prison meeting.

He declined to comment on Agca's mental state. Agca shot and seriously wounded John Paul in St. Peter's Square 28 years ago, on May 13, 1981.

The late pope met with Agea in an Italian prison in 1983 and forgave him.

So OK, there is no poetry in my soul. I can at least celebrate great poetry on National Limerick Day and almost any time I visit a public restroom.

In fact, there were plenty of things to celebrate this week. According to the Holidays.net Web site, May 13 was both National Receptionists Day and Root Canal Appreciation Day. If you are a receptionist for an oral surgeon who does root canals, May 13 is like Christmas. Only instead of jingle bells, you have the high-pitched whine of the dentist's drill. And - you know - agonized screams and stuff.

If you're not a receptionist and you don't particularly appreciate root canal, vou still have Stevie Wonder to celebrate on May 13. It's his birthday. Try to imagine a world without "You Are the Sunshine of My Life." Then again, why would you want to imagine such a place?

Or you may want to hold off until May 15, during which we will celebrate International Virtual Assistant's Day, National Bike to Work Day, National Defense Transportation Day and Nylon Stockings Day. I know, I know these collective days just cry out for some sort of simultaneous observation although I can't for the life of me figure out a way to link computers, bikes, bombs and nylons (although it does sort of remind me of the diagnostic trail on a recent episode of "House").

Maybe you don't need a proclamation to tell you what to celebrate in your life and in the world around vou. Sure, everyone wants to celebrate limericks, receptionists and root canal, and we can do that together — nationally. We also celebrate the birthdays of those who are important to us, and significant anniversaries in our lives. And God, family and country deserve - and hopefully receive — their fair share of celebratory observance from most of us, too.

But what about the little things that make us happy? For me that list would include Diet Dr. Pepper, "Law & Order," meatloaf, the color blue, Celtic music, family reunions, "How Great Thou Art," nice people, power tools that actually work and listening to my children sing. I'm sure you have a similar list, don't you? Do we just consume these things, or do we truly enjoy them - respect them – appreciate them – celebrate them?

I'm not saying we have to have a Personal Meatloaf Day - although that isn't a bad idea, now that I think about it. I'm simply suggesting that we keep our hearts and minds open to the little blessings — the "tender mercies," if you will - that bring smiles to our faces and warmth to our souls. Don't take them for granted. Enjoy them. Savor them. Appreciate them.

Whether or not there's a National Day of Appreciation.

Prosecutors seek to block bogus bidder's defense

SALT LAKE CITY -Prosecutors say the college student indicted for submitting bogus bids at an oiland-gas lease auction shouldn't be able to tell a jury he was acting to protect the world from climate change.

Prosecutors acted to block DeChristopher's planned defense in a motion filed Friday with U.S. District Judge Dee Benson.

Lawyers for the 27-yearold University of Utah economics major say they plan to argue a lessor-of-twoevils defense.

Prosecutors say that's no excuse for breaking the law. DeChristopher grabbed a bidder's paddle at the Dec. 19 auction of public lands. He ran up prices and safeguarded some parcels between Arches and Canyonlands national parks.

Gifted student feels alone among her average friends

DEAR

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 and in seventh grade. I have the highest GPA of my six close friends. Sometimes they call me "Freaky Genius Girl." When I make jokes, none of my friends comprehend what I'm saying.

Right now I am tutoring three of them and often get calls from the others asking me how to do the homework. I like my friends, but I wish I had someone other than my mother to have an intellectual conversation with. Should I find new pals or tone down my abilities when I'm with them?

TOO SMART FOR FRIENDS?

DEAR TOO SMART?: Rather than try to "dumb yourself down" with your classmates, ask your mother to help you find a special interest group where you can interact with other girls and boys who are also intellectually advanced. Many school districts offer special classes for gifted students. In addition, explore activities where you can simply let yourself go and have some fun — like sports, music, drama or art. You're a bright girl and you deserve some time to simply be carefree.

and sizes. It wasn't easy choosing a dress that would fit them all. I thought I was being fair by choosing the skirt length and letting them select from a few different styles of tops.

One of the girls is now telling me she refuses to wear what I selected. She says it is "ridiculous" to make her wear it, and it will make her look stupid. (They are normal-looking dresses, Abby, not outdated or too trendy.)

She has e-mailed me several pictures of dresses she likes, but I don't care for them. Am I being a Bridezilla, or does she need to learn some wedding etiquette? Should I stand my ground - after all, it is my day - and risk losing a friendship?

 BRIDE-TO-BE IN MINNESOTA BRIDE-TO-BE: You would not be a Bridezilla to remind this young woman whose wedding it is. And when you do, tell her you do not want her to be uncomfortable and you will "understand" if she wishes

DEAR ABBY: My motherin-law bought me a pair of shoes while we were out shopping one afternoon. The boutique was pricey, but she insisted I get them. The next day I got a phone call from her saying she had "borrowing rights" because they cost more than she had expected. I was shocked about the price, too.

Now I'm embarrassed and wonder if I should reimburse her for half the cost, which I'm willing to do. What should I do?

STEPPING OUT IN SAN ANTONIO DEAR STEPPING OUT:

Your mother-in-law bought WHOM a pair of shoes? Unless her feet are the same size or smaller than yours, I do not recommend sharing them. Once you do they will be stretched and will no longer fit you properly.

Because she has let you know she covets the shoes, consider giving them to her. Alternatively, if they have never been worn, consider returning them to the shop where they were purchased. That way your impulsive M.I.L. can get her money back or a store credit.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

"Thou art slave to fate, chance, kings, and desperate men."

John Donne

The early rounds of the first session of the Cavendish pairs offer players a chance to test the waters to see if their luck is in. In today's deal Bart Bramley and John Kranyak duly bid a marginal heart slam, daring their opponents to beat them.

On the diamond lead, Bramley was under no pressure. He won perforce in dummy, led a heart to his 10, ruffed a diamond, and played a heart to his queen. Now he could give up a trump and claim 12 tricks.

How would you play the slam if West starts with a spade lead? Best is to unblock the diamond king at trick two, then lead winning clubs, overruff the third club, and ruff a diamond. Now you lead the fourth club. When East ruffs in, you pitch your spade loser and can later ruff a diamond to dummy to take the heart finesse. This line works whenever diamonds split normally and the heart king

That looks safe enough, but Billy Pollack told me what happened to him here. He played slam on the lead of the spade six after East had doubled a spade call. He cashed the diamond king and then three rounds of clubs, Bob Hamman (East) ruffing in. Had he ruffed low, Pollack would have pursued the recommended and winning line. But Hamman ruffed the first club with the heart king! Can you blame Pollack for discarding now, planning to ruff two diamonds in dummy and then to drop the jack of hearts? I can't.

ANSWER: Partner's sequence suggests six spades and a weakish hand — but he could still easily have as much as a 10-count. That said, you cannot drive the hand to game, but it would be cowardly to let him play two spades without showing some signs of interest. Raise to three spades and let him take charge from there (or make the last mistake!).
