He arrested people for 22 years, but on Wednesday, deputies booked Curtis Gambrel into the Twin Falls County Jail on felony prescription drug charges.

The retired Twin Falls Police Department detective was arraigned in Twin Falls 5th District Court for two counts of conspiracy to obtain a prescription by fraud, and three counts of obtaining a prescription by fraud. He faces up to four years in prison on each count.

Gambrel, 44, retired from the force more than two years ago. But while still a police officer, he allegedly obtained medically unnecessary prescriptions for oxycodone and hydrocodone from a former area nurse practitioner, Jan Sund, according to court records.

Gambrel allegedly split the drugs with Sund between January 2005 and April 2, 2007, according to court records.

He was charged about a week after Sund, 55, pleaded guilty on April 30 to two counts of prescription fraud conspiracy and two counts of prescription fraud. At her plea hearing Sund told the court: "I wrote a prescription for hydrocodone and Curtis (Gambrel) filled it and split it with me."

At his arraignment Wednesday, Gambrel sat beside a handcuffed female inmate and said little, but acknowledged he understood his rights and waived a reading of the charges against him.

Gambrel was summoned into court for the quick hearing, and when it ended he was immediately escorted out by a deputy for booking at the jail.

Curtis Gambrel, at right, the former Twin Falls Police detective accused of prescription drug crimes, heads to the Twin Falls County Jail Wednesday afternoon after his arraignment.

The Ada County Sheriff's Office gave the criminal complaint against Gambrel to his Boise-based lawyer, Robert Chastain, on May 14, though there was no arrest or bond set.

Because of a potential conflict of interest, Twin Falls County prosecutors asked Ada County authorities to handle the case. But it is "unknown to the court" what agency originated the case, according to court records. Twin Falls police say they learned of the allegations against Gambrel in June 2008, a year after his retirement.

According to court records, Gambrel's wife in 2005 gave the Idaho Board of Pharmacy a tip about Sund in a letter saying "Sund was over-prescribing pain medication for her

Hospital, county finalize clinic agreement

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County and St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center officials on Wednesday finalized changes to the 2006 agreement selling the hospital to St. Luke's, officially resolving a long-running disagreement over the document.

The dispute flared early last year when the county changed four locks at a St. Luke's clinic at 660 Shoshone St. E., prompting hospital officials to call the police on then-County Commission Chairman Tom Mikesell. A year and a half of discussion and three days of mediation helped cooler heads prevail; after county commissioners signed the sales amendment Wednesday morning, they cheerfully shook hands and chatted with hospital representatives.

At the root of the matter were plans to remodel the county-owned clinic building, turning it into county office space. Under the terms of the 2006 agreement, St. Luke's was required to contribute $3 million in in-kind services for the remodel at a maximum of $45 per square foot.

Both parties disagreed about just what the section required. But Wednesday's See RESOLUTION, Main 2

BOISE — Idaho Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch have requested $2 billion in federal earmarks for their state.

Despite reservations about earmarks, the two Republicans said if they don't apply for the money it will just go to other states.

"I have two choices," Risch told the Idaho Statesman. "No. 1, on a philosophical basis, I can refuse to participate, in which case, the money that I would have been able to get would go to other states. Or I can submit like everybody else does and get Idaho's share of the money that would be spent elsewhere. I

Kimberly schools move to open enrollment

Kimberly School District is opening its doors this fall to students living outside the district.

The district has decided to have open enrollment in the upcoming school year, which means that students outside the district can apply for enrollment in Kimberly schools.

The district's decision to accept applications from outside the district reverses its policy for the last two years. Superintendent Kathleen Noh said that construction projects are providing 17 additional classrooms to the district's schools.

"With the building, at this moment, we do have some extra space," Noh said. "Where we have room in a class, we would take students."

Western Days parade scheduled to go on

Number of participants down from '08

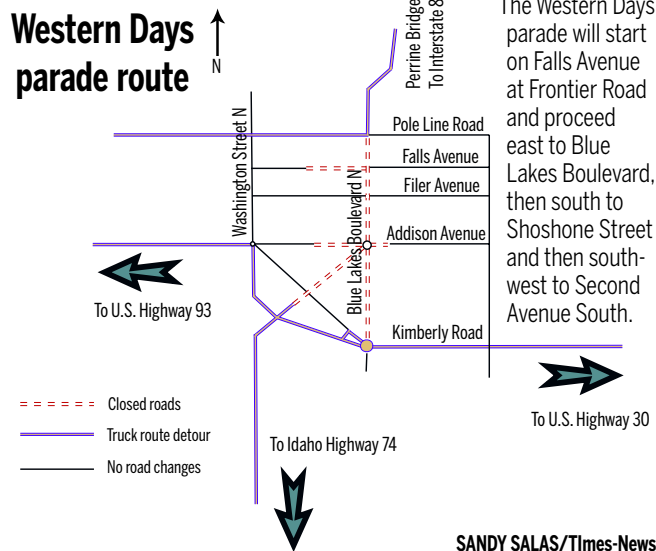

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

The parade must go on. Despite a drop in donations and participants, the Western Days parade is scheduled for this Saturday and organizers are optimistic the Twin Falls event will be a success.

The three-day Western Days event is the region's largest of the year — it's in its 28th year — drawing in 30,000 to 40,000 people and culminating in a 10 a.m. Saturday parade.

So far 85 parade entries have signed up, down from 125 last year, said Lisa Cuellar, Western Days husband, Curtis Gambrel."

The letter also said Sund was "abusing her prescribing rights" and "receiving kick-backs from patients," court records show.

The state's pharmacy board also received complaints about Sund almost seven years ago, ranging from allegations that she was "splitting prescriptions with her patients" to "practicing as a nurse practitioner while impaired," according to court records.

During Gambrel's 22-year career, he was a patrol officer, detective and D.A.R.E. instructor. D.A.R.E., or Drug Abuse Resistance Education, are classes taught by police to kids in kindergarten through 12th grade focused on "how to resist peer pressure and live productive drug and violence-free lives," according to the D.A.R.E. Web site.

Gambrel has a preliminary hearing set for June 26.

stopped about two years ago when the district ran out of space. When open enrollment stopped, students already enrolled from outside the district were allowed to continue attending. Some of those students have siblings who would like to attend in Kimberly as well, Noh said.

Transportation is not provided to students who come to school from outside the district.

Noh said the district doesn't have a goal for a specific number of out-of-district students.

"It's probably not going to be very many students," she said. "We still value keeping small class sizes. It's not just a blanket open enrollment. It's just places where we have room."

Open enrollment can potentially help school districts facing lean budgets, because state funding is dispersed based on average daily attendance of students.

"It's one way to cope with the reduction in state funding," Noh said.

That can only go so far, though. For example, adding a couple students to a class is manageable, but at a certain point, additional resources are needed, Noh said.

"If you add 10 students, then you're going to hire another teacher and you're going to buy books," she said. "Then it doesn't help your bottom line at all."

By returning an open enrollment, Kimberly School District joins other districts that already have similar policies in place.

Minidoka County School District also has an open enrollment policy, said Superintendent Scott Rogers.

With districts such as Minidoka County, which has declining enrollment, accepting students from outside the district makes sense, he said.

"It certainly helps the student population," Rogers said.

Twin Falls and Jerome school districts also have open enrollment.

Twin Falls has 27 out-of-district students who enrolled, a figure that doesn't include students at Magic Valley High School. The alternative high school does not require a transfer request for out-of-district students, who must qualify as at-risk students to attend.

Reasons for out-of-district students applying for enrollment vary, said Twin Falls Superintendent Wiley Dobbs. They include parents who work in Twin Falls, a desire for other program opportunities or a wish to participate in a higher division of athletics.

Decisions on accepting students from outside the district are made on a case by case basis, Dobbs said.

agreement made it moot: To resolve the matter, St. Luke's will now give roughly $4.6 million to the county for remodeling costs, and the county in turn will release the hospital from the previous requirements. The extra $1.6 million of that sum is new money, said hospital CEO Mark Schwartz.

Also covered by the amendment:

- It further refines what indigent medical fees and charges count toward a roughly $1 million cap on such expenses, anything over which is refunded to the county.

- It alters the sales agreement's restrictions on competition to allow Twin Falls County to develop its own inpatient adolescent mental-health program. In turn, St. Luke's — which shut down its adolescent inpatient program in August 2007 — is released from any obligation to maintain such a service.

- County officials won't

Crapo "is a fiscal conservative and wants to find ways to reduce the federal budget, but once the budget has been set, he feels it's appropriate to advocate for Idaho to get its fair share of what Congress has already approved," said his spokeswoman, Susan Wheeler.

While campaigning for the Senate last fall, Risch said earmarks should be curtailed and that it was time to give the president the line-item veto. He also promised to back legislation banning the earmark system. Now, as a first-term senator, he has co-sponsored legislation with Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C., to abolish earmarks.

The requests by Risch and Crapo include $1.1 billion for projects at the Idaho National Laboratory, $44 million for two buildings at Mountain Home Air Force Base, $36 million to widen Interstate 84 between Caldwell and Nampa, and $20 million for construction projects on U.S. 95 in northern Idaho.

Neither Crapo or Risch are on the Senate Appropriations Committee, and Risch said he's not lobbying for earmarks that are competing with requests from other senators.

"There's no hope that we will get anywhere near the amount of earmarks that we've requested," he said.

mid-2011. They also said they expect to drop the remodeling plan developed around the time of the sale, noting that the county has acquired other properties and shuffled some departments to different areas since that time. The full $4.6 million may not even all be used for the project.

"I don't see it being like the original plans at all," Commission Chairman George Urie said of the remodel.

It's not yet clear how much the mediation cost the county, which relied on both the Philadelphia firm that helped write the agreement and a local attorney for its legal representation.

The amendment was also signed by Curtis Eaton, board president for the Twin Falls Health Initiatives Trust, whose group was funded through the sale but was not affected by the changes. Nevertheless, officials realized last week that the document needed his signature.

committee chairwoman. She said they are still getting last-minute entries and encouraged people to still sign up or donate money. She expects about 100 entries by the time the parade begins.

Initially, this year's parade was cancelled due to a lack of money but community support reversed the decision and led to budget adjustments. Cuellar said they've raised about $10,000, most of it through vendor fees. About $2,200 has come from donations but many people who promised never followed through, she said. The original $40,000 budget was adjusted to about $15,000 thanks to a battery of cost-saving measures such as musicians volunteering.

"The community has supported us for a lot of years and we continue to need that support," said Cuellar, one of four volunteers who put on the event.

The parade starts at Falls Avenue at Frontier Road and disperses at the 100 and 200 blocks of Second Avenue South, and will force several road closures. The Twin Falls City Council earlier this month approved a special event permit for the parade.

In a statement, police said parade participants may not throw candy from floats. Police point to a section of city code that says, "The conduct of the parade is not reasonably likely to cause injury to persons or property, to provoke disorderly conduct or create a disturbance."

"We just don't want anybody to get hurt," said Staff Sgt. Dennis Pullin. "That's the idea."

Police also urged parents to keep their kids from running into the parade unsupervised.

Controversy bypassed the parade this year because the Southern Idaho Gay, Lesbian Bisexual and Transgender Community Center didn't submit a float entry.

committee didn't let them participate. Last year they were allowed to participate on the condition they wouldn't display their organization's name on their float.

This year, the group said its resources are being used to prepared for its first pride week, beginning June 22. Instead, the group volunteered to help clean up City Park during the event.

"We wanted to lend a helping hand," said Nicki Abraham, a spokeswoman for the group. Western Days organizers sent the group an application.

T.F. P&Z approves permit for new downtown bar

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission unanimously approved a special use permit Wednesday for a property owner who wants to open a country-western bar and nightclub in downtown Twin Falls.

Commissioners cited the positive impact the new business could provide to an area that for years has struggled, and dismissed protests by the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency that the bar lacks proper parking and would delay development of a $40 million redevelopment project across the street.

"Why should urban renewal come down here and protect their value and their development when someone with planned action and funding is gonna come in and do it?" said Commissioner Erick Mikesell. "Urban renewal at the best has a wish. We haven't seen anything from them."

Brett Semple, who bought the property at 222 Fourth Ave. S. earlier this year, said he plans to open and co-manage the bar in conjunction with Daniel Fuchs, a liquor license owner who would lease the property and own the business, and John Urrutia, Jr., who owns The Cove restaurant and bar and would co-manage.

"We just thought it's a theme that's not being used well," Semple said of the western idea in an interview before the meeting. He wants to provide weekend entertainment with live music to an over-30 crowd.

The property includes a vacant 4,000 square-foot

"We are for development, we're just not for this type of business at this location."

— Tom Frank, vice chairman of the URA board building that was a warehouse and once part of the former Glove Feed and Seed and Northwest Feed buildings. But it's in desperate need of repair, and Semple estimates initially investing up to $200,000 to fix it up.

"It's got character," Semple said. "It's a spectacular place. It's just a pit right now."

But Tom Frank, current vice chairman of the URA board, opposed the permit, arguing that a "full-blown bar" would deter future developers to a future four-block mixed-used project.

"We are for development, we're just not for this type of business at this location," said Frank, a former P&Z commissioner. "The fear is if there's bar at that location, it may be too difficult to find a developer."

But commissioners drew upon the testimony of nearby businessmen — some soon to be competitors to Semple — who said the positive direction by Semple outweighs potential parking problems.

"It's a bar. It's a business," said Mikesell. "There's plenty of parking. Everybody down there walks."

Semple pointed to dozens of public parking spaces — some URA-owned — used regularly by patrons of nearby bars and restaurants and said customers would walk several blocks if they're interested in his business.

Twin Falls County Sheriff presents first Civilian Service Award

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

Wayne Vaughan of Rupert received the first Civilian Service Award for Twin Falls County on Wednesday afternoon in the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Sheriff Tom Carter presented the award to Vaughan for his assistance with an elderly man diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. The elderly man had gone missing from a Twin Falls care facility on April 10 several hours before Vaughan saw the man and stopped to help him.

While authorities were searching for the man, Vaughan observed an elderly man while driving on Fillmore Street in Twin Falls. Vaughan said the man appeared to be trying to cross Filer Avenue at rush hour. After realizing that things "just weren't right," Vaughan decided to turn around and help the man cross the street. Vaughan realized immediately that the man was extremely disoriented and confused.

"After talking to him for a second, I got the idea he didn't know where he had been or where he was going," said Vaughan.

Vaughan then helped the man to his car where he tried to get more information from him. The elderly man eventually gave Vaughan a telephone number which he called. The people who answered the call told Vaughan they would be there right away.

Soon after Vaughan made the call, the officers who had been searching for the man arrived and he was returned to his care facility unharmed.

"Unfortunately, in these days, people helping their fellow people just isn't as

Bryan Atwell admits to conspiring to commit injury to a child

By Andrea Jackson

A twice-convicted sex offender snatched up a plea offer Wednesday that takes him off the hook for an assortment of newer charges alleging sex crimes against a child.

Bryan Atwell, 47, of Twin Falls, pleaded guilty Wednesday in Twin Falls 5th District Court to a count of conspiracy to commit injury to a child.

But other charges of a sexual nature involving children were dismissed against over to his house, which "could have put the child in danger."

Police assert in court records that they found child pornography on Atwell's computer during a search of his home at 1431 Fifth Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls police seized a computer, which had 200 images of possible child erotica and 366 possible child pornography photos, court records show. Authorities say they found 22 images on Atwell's computer that were identified by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children as victims of previous child pornography cases.

Atwell was convicted in Twin Falls County in 1987 of sex abuse with a child and again in 1997 in Ada County for lewd conduct with a minor, according to the Idaho State Police Central Sex Offender Registry. Atwell is already a registered sex offender.

He also was charged in 1993 with sexual abuse of a child, but that was amended to battery and Atwell was put on probation for two years, according to online court records.

He faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted, and is set to be sentenced July 20.

Deliberations postponed on Quigley Canyon

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Extending what has already been a long process, the Hailey City Council on Tuesday postponed the start of deliberations on whether or not to annex Quigley Canyon, a large project that would include 377 homes, a golf course and Nordic center.

The council also heard public complaints that the hearing process has not been clear enough or provided enough information on the city's Web site.

Some of the complaints were about unadvertised meetings designed to give staff and the applicant additional opportunities to hash out specifics on issues like water and wastewater. The results of these meetings were described on Tuesday night, but not in great detail.

"I don't view this as full disclosure," said Marty Flannes during the public comment portion of the hearing. "I ask you to reconsider the closed-door process."

Others said that repeated cancellations and rescheduling of meetings on specific issues like water have made it difficult to make their opinions heard.

Although annexation itself doesn't require great detail, the council has said it wishes to have as much information as possible on these issues in order to make the best decision for the city. Because of the level of detail being discussed, though, some in the audience said they feel annexation is all but a given.

"There's a perception that it's not whether or not we're going to annex. The annexation's a foregone conclusion, and these discussions are just about how it's going to happen," said Pete Kramer.

Mayor Rick Davis said the council was doing due diligence, and none of the members' minds are yet made up. Council members said when they have a full quorum — Councilman Fritz Haemmerle was sick on Tuesday — they plan to begin determining the deal-breaker issues of water, wastewater, traffic and whether development will be allowed above Quigley Pond and in Deadman's Gulch.

"The rest falls away unless we can work that out," said Councilwoman Martha Burke.

Developer representative Dave Hennessey said these could be also deal-breakers for the developers, that if they aren't able to resolve certain issues, they may withdraw their application and develop instead in the county. The developer has previously said that if in the county, the development would likely not include a golf course or Nordic facility.

The council is next scheduled to meet to discuss Quigley Canyon on June 9 and 11.

Jerome County hears more on jail bond

By John Plestina
Times News correspondent

JEROME — Jerome County commissioners remained in a holding pattern Tuesday over the proposed new jail with several questions still unanswered. It now appears that a decision on whether to let voters decide if the county will go into debt to pay for the proposed $12 million facility might come Monday.

With the postponement of a planned teleconference meeting with consultant Rocky Mountain Corrections and attorneys from a bond counsel firm, County Prosecuting Attorney John Horgan recommended funding the proposed jail with a general obligation bond rather than a lease-purchase agreement.

Partly at issue and hindering a decision is advice from Mike Hornsby, an attorney representing a bond council firm, that there might be difficulty marketing bonds if there is not language authorizing a tax levy in the ballot question.

"We don't want to go out to the public and say, 'We don't want to raise your levy but we want the ability to,'" said Commission Chairman Charlie Howell. "This board has never wanted to raise taxes."

Also at issue is a pronouncement from the Idaho State Supreme Court that has raised apprehension from potential investors.

That decision, Frasier vs. Boise City, saw a taxpayer challenge the city over a new parking garage built at the Boise airport without voter approval. That case has made it more difficult for governmental entities to finance projects and raises questions about lease-purchase financing of governmental projects.

Efforts are now afloat for a state constitutional amendment that would define what county and municipal governments could or could not do in terms of financing.

Commissioner Joe Davidson said he prefers a lease-purchase option as prudent business judgment.

"Taxes are paying for us to be able to take people somewhere else," he said. "We've done it for the past 25 years and what do we have to show for it?"

While renting out jail beds to other counties, the state and possibly the federal government is a major part of the county's strategy for debt repayment, discussions included that it remains unknown how many beds other jurisdictions might fill, leaving actual income amounts unknown.

Jerome County has spent in excess of $200,000 annually in fees to other counties to house inmates that exceed the capacity of the current jail can accommodate.

The question could go before voters as early as Aug. 4. Two-thirds voter approval is required, or validation by a judge that the board of commissioners has the authority to enter into an obligation. If the commission opts to take the question before a judge there would be a 42-day challenge period.

Delling pleads guilty to Boise murder

BOISE (AP) — A man accused of killing two people and linked to the wounding of a third during a 6,500-mile road trip in 2007 has pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in one of the deaths.

John Delling entered his plea Wednesday in 4th District Court in the murder of Bradley Morse, a Boise State University student that Delling met on Internet gaming sites. In exchange for his plea, prosecutors reduced the original charge of first-degree murder and agreed to drop a charge of theft and using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Delling is still charged with first-degree murder in the fatal Moscow shooting of University of Idaho student David Boss, a former high school classmate. And investigators have linked Delling to a shooting in Tucson, Ariz., that wounded another former high school classmate, Jacob Thompson, but Delling has not been charged in that case. Thompson is scheduled to testify before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail in June, before she sentences Delling for Morse's murder.

Investigators said Morse's murder and the other crimes occurred during an erratic road trip spanning the western states over several days in the spring of 2007. According to police, Thompson was shot March 20, 2007, in Tucson, Boss was killed March 31 in Moscow and Morse died April 2 outside of Boise. Delling was arrested in Sparks, Nev., the next day.

Delling, who was 21 at the time of the shootings, met the 25-year-old Morse on Internet gaming sites and then used the Web to track him down, police have said in court documents.

The Boise case was postponed twice in 2008 because Delling, who has paranoid schizophrenia, was found unfit to stand trial. A psychologist appointed by the court, Chad Sombke, has testified that Delling hallucinated, believing he was Jesus, had millions of children and could see the future.

But in January, Bail said she was leaning toward allowing Delling to go to trial after hearing Sombke and another mental health expert say that Delling's delusions had receded and his mental health had greatly improved. At the time, Delling's defense lawyer Gus Cahill had expressed reservations about Delling's ability to fully understand the proceedings.

In bad economy, more counties join Rx discount plan

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — As the recession continues and jobless ranks swell, more U.S. counties are joining a prescription drug discount program that's saved uninsured and underinsured residents $179 million on medications since 2005, the National Association of Counties says.

Ada County, Idaho's most populous, became the latest to sign on Wednesday, joining 25 others in the state and about 1,250 across the nation already enrolled. Neighboring Canyon County, which joined Feb. 17, reports people using the drug discount cards there have saved an average of $9 per prescription, or nearly 22 percent.

The National Association of Counties, which runs the program with pharmacy giant CVS Caremark Corp., based in Rhode Island, said about 60,000 U.S. pharmacies nationwide, or 90 percent of the total, accept the cards.

There are no age or income eligibility requirements, but the cards, which are free to consumers, can't be used with other drug discount programs.

People with prescription coverage can use them for drug purchases not covered by their insurance policies. Customers can save on brand name drugs as well as generics.

They can also use them for some prescriptions for pets. Savings can be 50 percent on some generic drug purchases, but the National Association of Counties says the average is 23 percent.

Caremark negotiates the discounts directly with participating pharmacies, the counties group says. Caremark receives about $1 in transaction fees every time a card is used; pharmacies that accept the cards can get between $2.50 and $4.50 in transaction fees.

Ada County Commissioner Rick Yzaguirre said Wednesday joining at this time could give southwestern Idaho residents hurt by the sour economy a financial boost as they buy their medications.

"The unemployment rate we're seeing every day gave us further cause to get the program in place," Yzaguirre said. "Why in the world wouldn't you take advantage of it or make it available?"

Neither counties nor the National Association of Counties receives revenue from the cards, said Andrew Goldschmidt, the marketing membership director for the counties group.

He adds the idea for such a program emerged from surveys conducted by the local government group in 2000 when residents without prescription coverage said they wanted access to cheaper medications.

A 17-county pilot program was begun in 2004 and was quickly expanded, he said. From 500 participating counties in 2005, the number grew steadily, then accelerated in 2008.

After adding about 200 new counties a year in 2006 and 2007, 300 counties nationwide signed up for the program in 2008, Goldschmidt said.

The program has been used for discounts on about 15 million prescriptions nationwide.

"We're seeing five to 10 counties join per week right now," Goldschmidt said. "The interest in the program has taken off exponentially since last September, due to the economy."

Aaron King, director of consumer services at CVS Caremark, didn't immediately return a phone call seeking comment.

Program lets inmates make supplies for grade schools

POCATELLO (AP) — A new program at the Pocatello Women's Correctional Center in eastern Idaho has inmates making teaching materials for two local elementary schools from donated items.

"There are women who will be here for the rest of their lives, and they're excited to give back to the community," inmate Denise Whittle, 40, told the Idaho State Journal.

Called Teaching with Conviction, the program lets inmates make needed items for Tendoy and Jefferson elementary schools.

Tami Romriell, an administrative assistant at the prison, came up with the idea. She said many local teachers are faced with budget shortfalls and can't afford some school supplies.

"We thought we might be able to take that load off of them and be able to have the inmates stay busy with this," Romriell said.

Inmates are making items such as school supply bags, flip charts to help students learn to read, and pillows children can sit on during story time.

Whittle makes a hand-made booklet for students.

"It's a homework log," she said. "That keeps them accountable and starts teaching them responsibility at a young age, which is really important."

Another inmate, Anna Conley, 38, cut shapes from construction paper to be used as templates for puppets.

"We can do this to help teachers out and make it easier (for them) and make it easier for the kids to learn," Conley said.

Romriell said the program needs more donations to make more school supply bags and pillows.

"The real success of this program will depend on the donations we receive from the community," Romriell said. "Based on what we receive, we hope to be able to create something that students can use in the classroom."

Items needed, she said, include fabric, construction paper, and cardstock.

Hospital, county finally resolve clinic dispute

It took a lot of lawyering and a fair amount of public officials’ time, but Twin Falls County and St. Luke’s Magic Valley finally resolved their dispute Wednesday over who’s picking up the tab for remodeling the old Magic Valley Clinic and Hospital in downtown Twin Falls.

The building was transferred to the county in the 2006 sale of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to Boise-based St. Luke’s Health System.

In essence, St. Luke’s agreed to pay the county $1.6 million more than it had already committed in order to settle the clinic controversy and other issues.

So why did this dispute take 17 months, the services of a mediator and thousands of dollars in legal costs to resolve? Partly because of the complexity of the agreement that grew out of voter-approved sale of the hospital three years ago. The language of the compact didn’t foresee every contingency.

Even so, it’s clear that some egos got in the way. Matters came to a head on Jan. 11, 2008, when county officials changed the locks on four offices on the clinic’s second floor and hospital officials called the Twin Falls Police Department to escort Commissioner Tom Mikesell off the premises.

At issue was sales agreement language that required St. Luke’s to contribute $3 million of in-kind services for the remodel at a maximum of $45 per square-foot.

The parties disagreed about just what the section required, but Wednesday’s compromise made it moot: To resolve the matter, St. Luke’s will give roughly $4.6 million to the county for remodeling, and the county in turn will release the hospital from the previous requirements. The extra $1.6 million is new money, said hospital CEO Mark Schwartz.

Wednesday’s deal does resolve some potential thorny issues:

- It further refines what indigent medical fees and charges count toward a roughly $1 million cap on such expenses. Any excess is refunded to the county.
- It alters the sales agreement’s restrictions on competition to allow Twin Falls County to develop its own inpatient adolescent mental-health program. In turn, St. Luke’s — which closed its adolescent inpatient program in August 2007 — is released from any obligation for such a service.
- County officials won’t ask St. Luke’s for more money to renovate or demolish the current hospital once it’s vacated. Currently, $1.5 million is held in escrow to assist with the work.
- The official process for resolving disputes now includes an initial six-month period for both parties to work out problems before other steps are necessary.
- It releases both parties from any liability for events leading up to the revisions, and prevents future lawsuits over the matter.

The covenant was the result of hard work by hospital officials and by Commissioners George Urie and Terry Kramer, who worked to restore the lines of communication.

The result is a good deal for the county that allows St. Luke’s to concentrate on running a hospital and building its replacement.

Our view: Twin Falls County and St. Luke’s Health System resolved their issues over the old Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital building on Wednesday. But couldn’t it have been done sooner — and cheaper?

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Geezers, take note: More work, less fun ahead

There used to be a rigid structure to the workday.

You started at a certain time and ended at a certain time, and once the sweat-shop whistle blew, your time was your own.

Sure, sometimes you thought about the job when you weren’t there, but those moments were fleeting, and any dwelling was quickly dispatched with the same admonishment: “They ain’t paying me enough.”

The standard workday, of course, is rapidly going the way of job security and the gold watch: 9 to 5 is out; 24/7 is in, with the line between when work ends and when having a life begins being blurred beyond recognition.

A sociology professor at New York University has coined a word to identify this new melding of work and play. He calls it “weisure time.” Weisure time is not a good time.

Weisure time is fitting fun around work, rather than fitting work around fun. It’s kind of like eating lunch at your desk. We used to call people who embraced this sort of behavior workaholics. Now we call them crackberries.

Crackberries may not be in the office from dawn to “Leno,” but the office is always in them. These are the folks on the beach with the laptops; the drivers drifting in traffic with phones to their ears; the mothers texting at their daughters’ soccer games.

They are also the future.

Most people blame technology for the rise of the amorphous work schedule. I would add working from home, an arrangement that taught us you could mix work with running to the store, catching the kid’s softball game and doing laundry. Not that I ever did any of these things, particularly laundry.

Baby boomers need to come to grips with the concept of weisure time if they plan to work beyond retirement.

According to a story on the future of work in the current issue of Time, by 2019, when our offspring, Generation Y, is in charge (God help us), baby boomers will be among the 40 percent of the work force that rents itself out as consultants and independent contractors.

This is seen as a good thing because boomers will need the income, and companies will need the expertise.

They can call the new arrangement “weisure-geezzer” time.

Reforms greatly improve Open Meeting Law

You probably couldn’t tell from the piece on this page by Tom Grote on Wednesday that virtually every news media organization in Idaho supported and applauded the passage of the important reforms to the Idaho Open Meeting Law this year — in fact, we helped write them.

The bill, sponsored by Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden, fixed our open meeting law after an Idaho Supreme Court decision in 2007 blew a giant hole in it.

Here’s what happened: In State vs. Yzaguirre, an Ada County case, the Idaho Supreme Court gave a new and very different meaning to the word “knowingly” as used in the law, creating an incentive for ignorance. If a public official didn’t know the Idaho open meeting law, then he or she couldn’t “knowingly” violate it.

As a reporter for The Spokesman-Review, I filed an open meeting complaint last year against the State Board of Education. Our attorney general conducted an extensive investigation, but concluded that while the board may have violated the law, he couldn’t prove that they’d done so “knowingly” under the court’s new interpretation.

READER COMMENT

This validated the fears of many open government advocates after the Supreme Court decision — that the law had been essentially emasculated.

After the Board of Education case, Attorney General Wasden’s office contacted various stakeholders, including myself, other media representatives, representatives of local governments including cities, counties and prosecutors, and many others, to work on improvements to our open meeting law. The result was SB1142. I can’t say that I love every piece of this bill, nor do the local government interests; but I can say that on balance, it’s a good package of reforms that fixes the “knowingly” problem; clarifies exemptions that have been construed over-broadly; and clears up murky language to make clear what’s required, what’s forbidden, and what the sanctions are.

Among the media organizations endorsing the bill were the Idaho Press Club; the Idaho Allied Daily Newspapers; and IDOG, or Idahoans for Openness in Government, whose board includes representatives of the state’s broadcasters and other journalism organizations (Mr. Grote is a member of the board), as well as civic groups like the League of Women Voters.

The meat of the bill is fixing the “knowingly” problem by setting up a new two-tiered violation system. This allows all violations to be sanctioned, but sets a very low fine of up to $50 for the first-time, inadvertent violation. The more egregious, knowing or repeated violations would bring fines of up to $500.

SB1142 also makes several other changes, most of them clarifying previously unclear language. While I don’t like the idea of agendas being changed during a meeting, our current law allows them to be changed “up to and including the hour of the meeting.” Reporters in Idaho know that agendas are changed all the time, and no reason is given. The interpretation of the “hour of the meeting” language has led to agenda changes during the meeting, during the first hour of the meeting, and so forth.

The new law allows agenda changes during meetings, but only with a statement of a good-faith reason for the change, a motion, and a majority vote on the record. Good-faith is important here. It would be bad faith to change an agenda in order to make a decision without the public being present or knowing about it in advance. That would be a violation of the Open Meeting Law — a knowing violation, subject to the higher fine of up to $500. While I might prefer to allow no changes to agendas for any reason, the bill as written provides far greater transparency than our current law.

The bill passed overwhelmingly in both houses and the governor signed it into law; it takes effect July 1.

OTHER VIEWS

What Idaho newspapers are saying about ...
... who's the boss?

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Before the city of Ketchum barrels down the road of trying to change its form of government from a mayor-council system to a city manager system, it needs to do a lot of research. Voters will need a lot of education before they can make an informed decision on this one.

Just three cities in Idaho operate with city-manager forms of government. They are Lewiston, McCall and Twin Falls.

The form emerged as part of a government reform movement at the beginning of the last century. Now, as then, it is touted as a way to get "politics" out of government.

With a city manager form of government, a mayor would no longer be responsible for appointing department heads (with the approval of the council), enforcing city ordinances and policies, or keeping the council advised of the financial condition of the city and submitting a city budget for council approval each year.

Those duties and powers would fall to a city manager ...

Proponents say city-manager government gets "politics" out of government by limiting the mayor to mostly ceremonial duties by making him or her just one of a 5-member or 7-member city council.

They also argue that the city-manager form improves efficiency by moving responsibility for day-to-day management from a mayor to a professional administrator. Yet, Ketchum already employs a professional administrator, albeit one far less powerful than one under the city manager system ...

The dilemma posed by a city manager system is that it could be a system in which accountability becomes so diffuse that no one is really in charge at City Hall ...

... Rammell, loons and legislators

Lewiston Tribune

Rex Rammell's presence on the ballot in next year's Republican primary for Idaho governor, assuming he stays there, won't be much challenge for incumbent Gov. Butch Otter, assuming Otter makes the race. Most voters now see Rammell as the loosest of cannons.

But the former elk rancher and veterinarian's platform is a test for members of the party's right wing, with whom Otter jostled unsuccessfully during the recent legislative session — and for voters. Cast even the briefest glance at his list of objectives, and how much different are they from those of the people who dominate the House Republican caucus?

Rammell calls ... for forcing the federal government to stop trampling on the state's prerogatives ... So how does that differ from the resolution legislators approved this year telling Uncle Sam he'd better start respecting Idaho sovereignty? ...

(Rammell) charges that federal officials have destroyed the soundness of the U.S. dollar by delegating their authority to the Federal Reserve System. That would certainly come as news to investors around the planet who have made the dollar the world's reserve currency, and although people who know better ... pointed out its absurdity, the resolution easily passed both chambers ...

Rammell also has his sights on the wolves reintroduced to Idaho several years ago and removed this year from the federal endangered species list. He says he will rid the state of them ...

Eliminating wolves from Idaho may be an even taller order than forcing the federal government to cut Idaho more slack, but again, which is stranger: that or Rep. Phil Hart's legislation this year making it a felony for any person to introduce a dangerous animal into the state? ...

Rammell also calls for removing all illegal immigrants from Idaho, making English the state's official language and other traditional goals of the GOP's right wing.

At one time, that wing represented a minority of the state's dominant party. But as this year's legislative session and vote by rank-and-file party members to unseat party Chairman Kirk Sullivan revealed, Idaho Republicanism is becoming little different from Rammellism.

... the greening of Idaho Power

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Shareholders have spoken truth to Idaho Power Co. They told the state's preeminent electric utility to green up — and ASAP. A shareholder resolution, passed Thursday, gives Idaho Power until Sept. 30 to spell out specific plans to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Good advice ... Idaho Power has been going in this direction, but not quickly enough to suit the groups that successfully pushed the resolution. They recognized the tenuous situation facing Idaho Power — and, by extension, its 487,000 customers.

At a time when green power is becoming a national imperative, Idaho Power needs to find new sources of electricity. In 2008, the utility produced only 79 percent of its power in-house. And even though Idaho Power operates a string of hydroelectric plants along the Snake River ... the utility derives as much as 53 percent of its electricity from coal ...

... shareholders did Idaho Power a favor. This resolution should empower Idaho Power to make decisions that make sense for the company and for Idaho.

Conservation programs and green power production are best for the utility's long-term health. They will also best serve a state that must compete for jobs — while expanding an energy portfolio already struggling to meet existing demand.

... Shifting to greener power would likely result in a rate increase. But ... Idaho Power rates rank ninth-lowest in the nation ...

The issue comes down to timing. Does Idaho Power do the right thing now, or does it wait until later? Company officials have said they want to wait and see the final version of a climate change bill.

Backers of the resolution offered a better idea, urging Idaho Power to get out ahead of the ever-growing demand for renewable power. And they received a startling and unprecedented 52 percent vote of confidence ...

The rise of anti-government feeling

Americans should look carefully at the anti-politician, anti-government mood exhibited in California last week. Just as Proposition 13 and the anti-tax movement of 1978 were the forerunners of the Reagan presidential victory, so the results of Tuesday's vote are a harbinger of things to come.

The repudiation of the California establishment in the series of initiative defeats could hardly have been more decisive. Five taxing and spending measures were rejected by 62.6 to 66.4 percent of the voters. That is a consistent majority of enormous potential. An even larger majority, 73.9 percent, approved the proposition limiting elected officials' salaries when there is a deficit.

This vote is the second great signal that the American people are getting fed up with corrupt politicians, arrogant bureaucrats, greedy interests and incompetent, destructive government.

The elites ridiculed or ignored the first harbinger of rebellion, the recent tea parties. While it will be harder to ignore this massive anti-tax, anti-spending vote, they will attempt to do just that.

Voters in our largest state spoke unambiguously, but politicians and lobbyists in Sacramento are ignoring or rejecting the voters' will, just as they are in Albany, N.Y., and Trenton, N.J. The states with huge government machines have basically moved beyond the control of the people. They have become castles of corruption, favoritism and wastefulness. These state governments are run by lobbyists for the various unions through bureaucracies seeking to impose the values of a militant left. Elections have become so rigged by big money and clever incumbents that the process of self-government is threatened.

Sacramento politicians will now reject the voters' call for lower taxes and less spending and embrace the union-lobbyist-bureaucrat machine that is running California into the ground, crippling its economy and cheating residents. This model of high-tax, big-spending inefficiency has already driven thousands of successful Californians out of the state. The exodus will continue.

Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger is a smart, tough, charismatic leader who has been forced to submit to policies he knows are ruining California on behalf of interests he knows are cheating the state. His failure to tame the union-lobbyist-bureaucrat machine that owns the legislature is a symptom of just how powerful it is.

Albany is even more corrupt and dysfunctional. The special interests that own the legislators in both parties have been exploiting New York for two generations. They have impoverished the Upstate region to the point where it is a vast zone of no jobs and no opportunities. Their predatory tax and bureaucratic union behavior is beginning to cripple New York City. More and more successful New Yorkers are leaving the state. In the face of multiple crises, Gov. David Paterson has shown himself incapable of carrying out reform.

In other words, the political machines in California and New York are wrecking the states' economies and driving out successful residents. But the machines don't care because all they want to do is own the wreckage.

Now President Obama, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid want to impose on the nation this style of politics in which interest groups, politicians and bureaucracies dominate. Look at their record: a $787 billion stimulus no elected official had read, 8,000 earmarks, an Environmental Protection Agency plan to control the economy through carbon regulations, the government threatening retaliation against those who would protect their property rights against theft in the Chrysler bailout — again and again, this team is moving toward a government that owns the country rather than a government that is owned by the people.

Watch Sacramento politicians and interest groups work to overrule the people of California. Watch Albany politicians and interest groups continue to undermine the economy of New York. Watch the arrogance of the elites in Washington as they impose their costs and special deals on the American people.

Then look again at the 62 percent-plus majority in California in favor of smaller government and lower taxes.

In the great tradition of political movements rising against arrogant, corrupt elites, there will soon be a party of people rooting out the party of government. This party may be Republican; it may be Democratic; in some states it may be a third party. The politicians have been warned.

Newt Gingrich, a Republican, was speaker of the House of Representatives from 1995 to 1999. He is chairman of the Gingrich Group, a communications and consulting firm, and general chairman of American Solutions for Winning the Future. He wrote this commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

Scientists use tags to track Columbia River salmon

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — Scientists are using acoustic tags to better understand how juvenile salmon and steelhead travel from John Day Dam on the Columbia River to the Pacific Ocean.

Researchers from the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory in Richland and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Portland District are tagging about 240 fish each day over the next several weeks to study why some young fish survive the ocean journey and others perish.

The tagged fish will emit high-pitched beeps that can be picked up by underwater sensors as they approach and pass the dam near Rufus, Ore., the Tri-City Herald reported.

"It tells you how fast (the fish) is moving and which route it is taking," said Geoff McMichael, the PNNL's program manager.

The corps uses the acoustic tagging system as a primary tool to assess juvenile salmon survival in the Columbia River.

Researchers said the tags, which are smaller than pencil erasers and inserted into the belly of juvenile salmon, will help improve salmon passage at the dam.

"It allows us to select the best operation of the dam," balancing demands of fish, power and recreation, said Brad Eppard, a corps fisheries biologist.

UI professor questions money spent in New Mexico

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho is spending nearly $400,000 a year to support three employees in New Mexico without any oversight, an electrical engineering professor at the school says.

"I've asked the question of three different university administrators, 'Why do we have an operation in New Mexico, and what are they doing?'" David Egolf told the Lewiston Tribune. "And I've never gotten an answer."

The money for the work in the Albuquerque office comes from the school's Center for Advanced Microelectronics and Biomolecular Research, where a 2005 audit turned up possible wrongdoing.

Jack McIver, UI research vice president, said he is scrutinizing the New Mexico operation.

"I'm looking at what they've been doing over the last couple of years, and whether that is supportable," McIver said. "I've always had problems in my previous jobs with remote sites."

He said researchers in Albuquerque work mainly on computer chip designs.

The research center is being investigated by the Idaho attorney general's office, said Bob Cooper, spokesman for the attorney general. He said he couldn't comment on an active investigation.

The investigation stems from a 2005 audit that found evidence of possible theft, computer crimes, acceptance of rewards by state employees, and criminal nepotism. The audit also found employees were failing to disclose ownership interests in another chip maker, Concise Logic Inc., based in Albuquerque.

McIver said the university now monitors such public-private partnerships more closely.

Obama promotes clean energy, stimulus in Nevada

By Charles Babington
Associated Press writer

LAS VEGAS — President Barack Obama on Wednesday hailed solar energy as a cost saver for a major Air Force base, one stop on a Western trip devoted to raising political money and promoting his economic policies.

Obama's aides had mocked reporters for making a fuss over his first 100 days in office, but the president was eager to assess the first 100 days of his $787 billion economic stimulus package.

It has "saved or created nearly 150,000 jobs," he said, including "jobs building solar panels and wind turbines; making homes and buildings more energy-efficient."

The White House job claims are difficult to verify because they are based on estimates of how bad the economy might have been without the stimulus rather than actual employment data. The country has lost 1.3 million jobs since February, a figure the Obama administration says would have been far higher if not for the recovery effort.

Obama also announced more spending for renewable energy after touring a large field of solar panels at Nellis Air Force Base, near Las Vegas. The sun-powered cells provide a quarter of the base's power needs, Obama said, speaking in a large hangar warmed by the desert heat.

"That's the equivalent of powering about 13,200 homes during the day," he said, and it will save the Air Force nearly $1 million a year.

Obama said more than

$467 million in stimulus money will be used "to expand and accelerate the development, deployment and use of geothermal and solar energy throughout the United States."

The president sandwiched the midday event between two political fundraisers: one on Tuesday night in Las Vegas for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and one set for Wednesday night in Los Angeles for the Democratic National Committee.

At Nellis, Obama addressed 400 people, including Air Force personnel, civilian workers and families living on the base.

The base's $100 million public-private solar power system covers 140 acres and generates more than 14 megawatts of electricity.

As he departed the hangar, Obama bypassed his limousine and walked a quarter-mile along the tarmac to examine fighter jets, chatting with Air Force personnel as he went.

April existing home sales rise by 2.9 percent

Higher interest on larger loans reduces demand for more costly properties

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Sales of previously occupied homes rose modestly from March to April as buyers who were brave enough to dive into the market took advantage of prices that were 15.4 percent below year-ago levels. Existing home sales in Twin Falls County slid 14.5 percent to 58 units sold in April compared to the previous year, according to the Intermountain Multiple Listing Service.

Jerome County reported a 25 percent decline to six homes sold in April, and Cassia County reported no change with four units sold in April.

The National Association of Realtors said Wednesday that home sales rose 2.9 percent to an annual rate of 4.68 million last month, from a downwardly revised pace of 4.55 million in March.

The results slightly beat economists' forecasts. Sales had been expected to rise to an annual pace of 4.66 million units, according to Thomson Reuters.

The median sales price plunged to $170,200, down from $201,300 in the same month last year. That was the second-largest price drop on record after January, when prices fell 17.5 percent.

The number of unsold homes on the market at the end of April rose almost 9 percent from a month earlier to nearly 4 million. That's a 10-month supply at the current sales pace.

"We still need a continuing and consistent rise in home sales to get the inventory down," said Lawrence Yun, the group's chief economist. Only then, economists say, will prices stabilize and eventually recover.

Another big problem, Yun noted, is the lack of activity at the higher-end of the housing market, among properties priced at $750,000 or higher.

Interest rates are much higher for loans above $730,000 that cannot be purchased by Fannie Mae or Freddie Mac. And that's sapping demand for expensive properties.

"It's just stalled, completely stalled," Yun said.

The Realtors group is pushing for the Federal Reserve to start buying up those loans, even if they are not backed by Fannie and Freddie. It also wants the higher loan limits to apply to the whole country, not just expensive areas like California and New York.

BANKRUPTCY LIKELY FOR GM

Bond offer fails; Chrysler seeking bankruptcy judgement

By Dan Strumpf
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — A General Motors Corp. bankruptcy filing seemed inevitable after a rebellion by its bondholders forced it to withdraw on Wednesday a plan to swap bond debt for company stock.

GM has until Monday to complete a government-ordered restructuring that includes debt reduction, labor cost cuts and plant closures. But a Chapter 11 reorganization is likely after the company said its offer to exchange $27 billion in unsecured debt for 10 percent of the company's stock had failed. GM has received $19.4 billion in federal loans.

The move came as crosstown rival Chrysler LLC headed to court Wednesday to ask bankruptcy judge for permission to sell the bulk of its assets to a group headed by Italy's Fiat Group SpA in hopes of saving itself from liquidation. Attorneys for Chrysler maintain that the Fiat deal is the company's only hope to avoid being sold piece by piece, but car dealers, debtholders, former employees and others are protesting.

Chrysler filed for bankruptcy protection April 30, after the government ended talks with a group of holdout debtholders. Both automakers were pulled down by overwhelming debt, high pension, health care and other labor costs relative to competitors, a global auto sales slump and a dismal U.S. housing market that pulled down demand for pickup trucks, their top-selling vehicles.

News of the failed GM bond exchange offer sent its shares down 12 cents, or 8.3 percent, to $1.32 in morning trading.

John Pottow, a professor at the University of Michigan who specializes in bankruptcy, said GM

Banks earned $7.6B in 1Q after record loss in 4Q

Troubled loans continue to pile up on banks' books

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The nation's banks turned a profit in the first quarter, but the number of problem banks jumped to the highest level in 15 years and tough conditions persist for the industry, the government said Wednesday.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said higher trading revenues and lower borrowing costs at big banks helped the industry earn a $7.6 billion profit in the January-March period, compared with a record loss of $36.9 billion in the fourth quarter. The profit was 61 percent below the $19.3 billion earned in the year-earlier period and followed the first quarterly loss in 18 years.

The 8,246 U.S. banks and thrifts set aside $60.9 billion in the first quarter to cover potential loan losses, up from $36.2 billion a year earlier. More than one of every five banks and thrifts suffered a net loss for the first quarter.

"As I see it, we're now in the cleanup phase for the banking industry," FDIC Chairman Sheila Bair said.

Troubled loans continue to pile up on banks' books and losses from soured loans "are weighing heavily on the industry's performance," FDIC Chairman Sheila Bair said. "Nevertheless, compared to a year ago, we see

Survey: Economists see recession end in '09

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — More than 90 percent of economists predict the recession will end this year, although the recovery is likely to be bumpy.

That assessment came from leading forecasters in a survey by the National Association for Business Economics released Wednesday. It is generally in line with the outlook from Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke and his colleagues.

About 74 percent of the forecasters expect the recession — which started in December 2007 and is the longest since World War II — to end in the third quarter. Another 19 percent predict the turning point will come in the final three months of this year, and the remaining 7 percent believe the recession will end in the first quarter of 2010.

"While the overall tone remains soft, there are emerging signs that the economy is stabilizing," said NABE president Chris Varvares, head of Macroeconomic Advisers. "The economic recovery is likely to be considerably more moderate than those typically experienced following steep declines."

One of the major forces that plunged the economy into a recession was the financial crisis that struck with force last fall and was the worst since the 1930s. Economists say recoveries after financial crises tend to

Rented investment properties irksome to T.F. homeowners

As the housing market works its way through a slump, an increasing number of people are buying homes for use as rental properties, according to two banks in Twin Falls.

The increase in investment property purchases in Twin Falls is estimated to be between 3 and 5 percent higher than the previous year — not a large increase, but just enough to irritate the neighbors.

George and Mary Anne

Myers, who own a home in a newer subdivision in northwest Twin Falls, say they are sick of people buying investment properties in their neighborhood.

"It's the same greedy people who come in and buy a home that's for sale, just to rent it out to anyone with cash in hand," said George Myers. "We take pride in our home, while the people renting the house next door are parking camper trailers on their lawn and leaving beer cans in the street."

He said "some guy out of California" owns four rental properties in his neighborhood.

The property manager did not respond to calls from the Times-News.

There are no reliable figures on the number of rental properties in Twin Falls.

Officials at the Twin Falls County Assessor's office say they don't ask if the applicant is filing for an investment property.

Two weeks earlier, I received a call from Erica Dorsch, formerly of Kennewick, Wash., who bought a home in March 2007 in east Twin Falls.

Less than two years later, she is trying to escape it.

"I found out pretty quick that the home next to us was a rental, and it all went downhill from there," she said. "The first family armed their six-year-old

Republicans won't filibuster – but Sotomayor battle still looms

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Republicans see little chance of blocking Sonia Sotomayor's Supreme Court nomination, a key GOP senator conceded Wednesday. But senators and advocacy groups are still girding for this summer's battle — partly with an eye toward raising money and perhaps preparing for Barack Obama's next nominee.

Jeff Sessions of Alabama, the top Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he didn't foresee a filibuster, essentially the only way Republicans could try to stop Sotomayor since Democrats control the Senate. Still, he made it clear that Republicans were ready to raise pointed questions about whether Sotomayor, the first Hispanic nominee to the high court, would let her personal life color her legal opinions — and whether that's appropriate for a Supreme Court justice.

"We have an absolute constitutional duty to make sure that any nominee, no matter what their background and what kind of life story they have, that we examine that so the American people can know that the person we give a lifetime appointment to ... will be faithful to the law and not allow their personal views to influence decision-making," Sessions said in an interview on NBC's "Today."

Organizations that have been preparing for a major confirmation battle — and that depend on such fights to raise money, motivate supporters and galvanize enthusiasm for their agendas — made it clear they don't intend to sit out the debate, filibuster or no. The debate over Sotomayor could also lay groundwork for fights over later high court nominations the president might make.

Conservative groups kicked off a broad effort to persuade the public that Sotomayor, now a federal appeals judge, is an activist who would impose personal views and ethnic and gender biases on her interpretation of the law and the Constitution.

"Equal justice under law — or under attack?" a Web ad by the Judicial Confirmation Network asks. "America deserves better" than Sotomayor, it concludes.

CIA, intelligence chiefs locked in spy turf battle

By Pamela Hess
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The nation's two intelligence chiefs are locked in a turf battle over overseas posts, forcing National Security Adviser James L. Jones to mediate, according to current and former government officials.

The jockeying between CIA Director Leon Panetta and National Intelligence Director Dennis Blair centers on Blair's effort to choose his own representatives at U.S. embassies instead of relying only on CIA station chiefs. Current and former U.S. officials described the dispute on the condition of anonymity, because of the sensitivity of intelligence issues.

Blair's office was created after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks to better coordinate intelligence gathering and make sure critical information isn't overlooked. But former and current CIA officials warn that his plan could do just the opposite — creating competing chains of command inside U.S. embassies and potentially fouling up intelligence operations. They also worry it could complicate the delicate relationships between U.S. and foreign intelligence services, and leave ambassadors confused about where to turn for intelligence advice.

Panetta

CIA station chiefs posted in American embassies have handled the national intelligence role abroad for the last four years, but Blair wants the option of designating other intelligence specialists for the job. That prompted strong objections from Panetta.

The question has been referred to Jones, President Barack Obama's national security adviser, to settle.

Blair's attempt to exert his authority complicates an already strained relationship with the CIA. The DNI's office has traditionally relied on the power of persuasion to further its mandate of fostering cooperation between the 16 disparate intelligence agencies.

Blair's plan is contained in a classified May 19 intelligence community directive, a policy document periodically issued by his office to the 16 agencies underneath him.

From the DNI's perspective, the proposal would allow Blair to tap the most relevant intelligence officer in an embassy or foreign country to serve as his eyes and ears.

In most cases that would be the CIA station chief. The station chief system has existed for 50 years, allowing the CIA to call the shots on pursuing and managing relationships with foreign intelligence and security services, and coordinating — and sometimes constraining — the work of other U.S. intelligence agencies and military forces abroad.

But in some countries the United States has few if any spies on the ground, and relies instead mostly on electronic eavesdropping to collect intelligence. A former senior intelligence official said that in those cases, Blair might want to have the senior National Security Agency officer instead of the station chief at the embassy serve as his personal representative.

The CIA last year successfully derailed a similar effort by the national intelligence director's office, then headed by former Adm. Mike McConnell.

Blair's directive was described by some government officials as an attempt to shore up both the office's authority and its ability to oversee foreign operations, which has so far been stronger on paper than in practice.

Blair told the Senate Intelligence Committee at his confirmation hearing in January that he intended to fully exercise the authorities of the DNI's office, and said if its powers proved inadequate he would ask Congress and the president to strengthen them.

Neither agency would comment officially.

DA: Missing mom, girl found at Disney World

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A suburban mother who claimed she and her daughter had been abducted and stuffed in a car trunk is in custody in Florida after the pair were found at Disney World, where they had flown hours after reporting their abduction, a prosecutor said Wednesday.

Bonnie Sweeten, 38, of Feasterville, will be charged with false reports and identity theft, both misdemeanors, Bucks County District Attorney Michelle Henry said.

"We're pleased to be able to announce that she's in custody and more importantly that her 9-year-old daughter is safe," Henry said.

Henry told reporters that

Sweeten borrowed a co-worker's driver's license and presented it as her own when she bought an airline ticket and flew to Orlando, Fla., then checked into the Grand Floridian Hotel with her daughter, Julia Rakoczy. The two were arrested at the hotel Wednesday evening, Henry said.

They had minimal luggage and the hotel was paid through Friday, Henry said. Sweeten had withdrawn about $12,000 from several bank accounts over recent days but authorities were investigating whether that money had been stolen.

"We believe that there were some domestic concerns with her husband and some financial concerns as well," Henry said.

S. Korean troops on high alert amid N. Korean threats

By Hyung-jin Kim
Associated Press writer

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korean and U.S. troops facing North Korea boosted their alert level Thursday to the highest category since 2006, after the communist regime threatened military strikes on allied troops in escalating tensions over its nuclear test.

North Korea threatened Wednesday to attack any U.S. and South Korean ships that try to intercept its vessels and renounced a 1953 truce halting the Korean War fighting, raising the prospect of a naval clash off the Korean peninsula's west coast.

The North was responding to Seoul's decision to join a U.S.-led anti-proliferation program aimed at stopping and inspecting ships suspected of transporting banned weapons, including nuclear technology. South Korea announced it was joining after the North's underground test blast of a nuclear bomb.

On Thursday, the South Korea-U.S. combined forces command increased the surveillance to level 2 from the present level 3, Defense Ministry spokesman Won Tae-jae said. He said that was the highest level since 2006, when the North conducted its first-ever nuclear test.

The U.S. has 28,500 troops in South Korea as a deterrent against North Korea.

Won said the bolstered level means more aviation surveillance assets, intelligence analysts and other intelligence-collecting measures would be deployed to watch North Korea. He refused to disclose further details.

The North has long warned it would consider the South's participation in the U.S.-led Proliferation Security Initiative as a declaration of war against North Korea.

The North would "deal a decisive and merciless retaliatory blow" to anyone trying to inspect its vessels, according to a North Korean military statement, carried by the official Korean Central News Agency on Wednesday.

Key world powers, meanwhile, have proposed a range of expanded U.N. sanctions against North Korea in response to its nuclear as well as measures to give teeth to existing bans and ship searches against the reclusive country, a U.N. diplomat said Wednesday.

Cyclone Aila toll up to 191 in India, Bangladesh

By Manik Banerjee
 Associated Press writer

CALCUTTA, India — Heavy rains caused deadly mudslides and slowed rescue efforts Wednesday after Cyclone Aila pounded eastern India and Bangladesh, killing at least 191 people. The cyclone destroyed thousands of homes and stranded millions of people in flooded villages before it began to ease Tuesday. The death toll will likely rise in both countries as rescue workers reach cut-off areas. Mudslides in India's famed Darjeeling tea district killed at least 22 people overnight, said Asim Dasgupta, the finance minister of the worst-affected West Bengal state in India. The official death toll in India stood at 78 by Wednesday, Dasgupta told reporters, adding about 2.3 million people were affected or stranded in flooded villages. Bangladesh's Food and Disaster Management Ministry said the toll there was 113 after more bodies were found. Most victims drowned or were washed away when storm surges hit coastal areas. Soldiers have been deployed to take food, water and medicine to hundreds of thousands of people stranded in flooded villages, Bangladesh Minister Abdur Razzak told reporters Wednesday. In India rescuers evacuated more than 41,000 people by Wednesday, Dasgupta said. At least 500,000 villagers were affected or stranded, mostly by flash floods caused by tidal surges, said Ziaul Alam, the local administrator in Bangladesh's Khulna district. The cyclone also caused damage in the Sundarbans, a tangle of mangrove forests that is home to one of the world's largest tiger populations. Conservationists expressed concern over the tigers' fate. At least one tiger from the flooded reserve took refuge in a house. Forest guards tranquilized it and were planning to release it once the waters subsided, said Belinda Wright of the Wildlife Protection Society of India, which assisted in the operation.

It is believed about 250 tigers live on the Indian side of the Sundarbans and another 250 live on the Bangladeshi side. Conservationists in India said water levels were too high for ecologists and forest officials to enter the area and assess the extent of the damage. N.C. Bahuguna, a senior Indian conservation official, said water sources were likely contaminated by salt water from the sea.

ROCKY ROAD

4x4 enthusiasts gear up for rock crawl

Story and photos by Andrew Weeks • Times-News

Rock climbing may not be for everyone. But rock crawling might. Those who rock crawl, such as Kimberly resident Jon Leazer, say the recreation sport is a great way to experience the outdoors and spend time with family.

"It's very family oriented," he said. Leazer, president of the Southern Idaho Off-Road Association, often allows his three children to ride with him as he drives his 4x4 over nature's rock-strewn paths or man-made obstacle courses — such as the one set up at Advanced Suspension Design in Twin Falls.

Leazer will bring his family Saturday to watch the company's 2nd Annual Rock Crawl, even though he won't be participating as a contestant. This time he'll be helping others who get stuck in the rocks by using an excavator to lift the vehicles out.

"I'll be the retrieval guy," he said. Advanced Suspension Design hosted its first rock crawl event last fall but its owner, Jeff Trammell, this year decided to have it in the spring.

He hopes to have 24 contestants, the maximum number who can participate due to time constraints, Trammell said.

As a member of the SIORA, Trammell decided to host the event to give local off-road buffs a chance to have fun and associate with other enthusiasts without having to travel too far.

Trammell brought more rocks in this year to add to the roughly 50-foot course, which sits adjacent to his shop, making it longer and a bit more challenging. Rocks have been donated by the city of Twin Falls, he said, with many of them coming from Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport.

Though perhaps more challenging, the course shouldn't frighten away newcomers. The event will feature three race classes — street stock, super stock, and super modified. Drivers pick their own spotters to help them navigate the course.

Though the recreation sport might sound rough, it is fairly safe and is becoming a fairly popular family event in south-central Idaho, Trammell said.

"It's actually quite huge in this area," he said, noting that the only mishap he's experienced while rock crawling has been a "smashed finger."

The Saturday event will begin at 9 a.m. and last roughly until 5 p.m. Vendors and concessions will be available, Trammell said.

One first-place award — a cash prize and trophy — will be given to the participant who completes the course with the best time, he said.

IF YOU GO

Advanced Suspension Design, 317 Addison Ave. W., will host its 2nd Annual Rock Crawl beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday. Vendors, concessions and media are scheduled. A $25 entry fee is required for race contestants. For more information: 732-5334

BELOW: The 37-inch front tire of Jeff Trammell's 1997 Jeep TJ. The standard tire for rock crawling these days, he says, is in the 35- to 37-inch sizes.

Jeff Trammell, owner of Advanced Suspension Design in Twin Falls, explains about the 37-inch tires on his 1997 Jeep TJ, which he uses for rock crawling and other off-road adventures. Trammell will host the shop's 2nd Annual Rock Crawl on Saturday.

A winch is a necessity for serious 4x4 off-road travel, though it's not used as much on man-made rock crawl courses, Trammell says. If a driver gets stuck in the rocks during a crawl, an excavator is used to lift the machine off the course.

Four wheels on steady ground? Not hardly

I've heard it said that two wheelers are more difficult to ride than four wheelers.

Perhaps. Motorcycles are more technical. After all, it takes a certain amount of skill balancing the bike and maneuvering it through turns.

But four wheelers can be a challenge for some dirt bike aficionados like myself, who rarely make it

A RIDER'S NOTEBOOK
 Andrew Weeks

off two wheels for more steady ground on four.

Steady? Not for me.

I always seem to forget about what I call the "no-balancing act" of ATVs, which often has left me in a precarious, if not painful, position.

Believe me, it's happened more than once.

Being used to riding my motorcycle, it's happened like this: I jump on an ATV, thinking I can handle it without a glitch.

For the most part I can, and the riding comes easy. But just when I start to enjoy the experience, I brake, and, forgetting I'm on four wheels, put my feet down to balance the machine. The next thing I know, my legs have been run over by the ATV's back tires.

Talk about technical! While it hasn't happened to me in a while — thankfully many of today's ATVs have leg restraints and expanded footrests to prevent this from happening — the mishap has happened more times than I'd like to count.

It's not a pleasant experience and can be quite embarrassing.

Maybe it's just me. I've been known to be a little scatter-brained at times. Just ask the newsroom's copy desk.

But if anything like this has happened to you, how about letting me know about it?

C'mon, it might help me to not feel so bad.

More importantly, the next time you hop on an ATV, especially you dirt bikers, remember you don't need to throw your feet down to balance it. That's what makes it an all-terrain vehicle instead of a motorcycle: it doesn't need a kickstand.

Official views OHV impacts in New Mexico mountains

By Susan Montoya Bryan
Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The head of the New Mexico Environment Department has joined the debate over whether dozens of miles of routes in northern New Mexico's Jemez Mountains should be closed to vehicles.

A group of environmentalists and landowners has petitioned the U.S. Forest Service to close 27 routes, saying they are concerned that continued use by off-roaders would cause more erosion and have negative effects on wildlife.

Environment Secretary Ron Curry toured part of the Jemez Mountains last Friday and vowed this week to continue monitoring the area, where he said streams have been "severely damaged."

"We have concerns about the damaging effects of off-road vehicle use on water quality and streams in the Santa Fe National Forest," Curry said.

He sent a letter Wednesday to Santa Fe Forest Supervisor Dan Jiron, saying the forest must address damage to the watershed and ensure that motorized routes do not compromise the state's surface water quality standards.

"We request that the (Santa Fe National Forest) address these impacts in its closure of specific motorized routes and that decisions regarding road closures be made as quickly as possible to address these threats," the letter states.

<http://www.fs.fed.us/r3/sfe/>

Dolores Maese, a spokeswoman for the forest, said Jiron received the letter and the forest is compiling information to respond to the citizens' petition.

Landowners, environmentalists and off-roaders have been butting heads over travel management planning in New Mexico and other states as the U.S. Forest Service tries to decide which areas should be designated for travel by motorcycles, four-wheelers and other vehicles.

The Santa Fe forest is in the process of developing its travel management plan, which will include the Jemez Ranger District.

Kevin Stillman, one resident who signed the petition, argued there are existing areas in the Jemez Mountains that are off-limits to vehicles but people continue to use those routes.

"You can't go anywhere without seeing tracks and trails. You can't go anywhere without hearing them. Every where you look you see signs," he said. "It's not just the dirt bikes, it's the four-wheelers, the people in general and it's just a free for all."

Off-road enthusiasts contend the routes targeted by the petition — which they say is full of "wild accusations" — make up only a fraction of the Santa Fe Forest's surface area. They also argue erosion is a natural process and can be found on other parts of the forest that see no motorized vehicles.

Other residents who use the trails for hiking and biking are concerned that if motorized users — specifically motorcyclists — are kept out of the area, the trails will fall into disrepair. Many of the motorcyclists who frequent the Jemez Mountains are known for maintaining the area's hundreds of miles of trails.

"The image that was created by that petition was that it's this road-warrior place where people are out of control and it's nonstop motorized vehicle use. That's not true," said Beth Perry, a resident who with her husband, Lee, enjoys running and biking the trails.

Perry noted the forest is managed for many uses and said it's enjoyed in different ways by different types of people.

"While I have certainly seen evidence of OHV enthusiasts who have misbehaved, I have encountered just as many ill-mannered hikers, hunters, mountain bikers, equestrians and picnickers," she wrote in a recent letter to the editor. "To me, the correct approach to protecting our trails and forest is not to ban those who a vocal minority views as distasteful, but to educate everyone in trail etiquette and environmental responsibility."

In the deep universe, distance is a tricky concept to grasp

At the College of Southern Idaho's Centennial Observatory, the farthest object visible with our 24" telescope is 3C273, an active galactic nucleus, or quasar, which appears as a faint, bluish, star-like dot. But quantifying that distance is somewhat difficult.

For example, Twin Falls and Boise are about 130 miles apart. We might also describe Boise as being two hours away, by which we mean it takes two hours to get there by driving the speed limit.

However, the distance to 3C273 in light years and the time it takes light to reach us are two different numbers.

The reason is because the universe is expanding, causing the distances between objects on extragalactic scales to constantly increase. So, in our terrestrial analogy, replace the solid earth with a giant "earth-balloon" being steadily inflated. Then, we could speak of the distance between Twin Falls and Boise in four different ways.

SKY CALENDAR THROUGH THURSDAY

Planets:	One hour after sunset:
One hour before sunrise:	Saturn: SW, high
Mars: E, very low	Moon: First quarter Saturday,
Venus: E, very low	9:22 p.m. Below Saturn
Jupiter: SSE, low	Sunday night.

SKYWATCH
Chris Anderson

First is the length of the highway between Twin Falls and Boise as the time we start the journey. Second is the time it takes to make the trip, given that the road on balloon-earth gets longer throughout the journey.

Third is the final reading on our odometer at the end of our journey on an ever-lengthening road. And fourth is the distance between the two cities as of the time we arrive in Boise.

In the case of 3C273, an observer sees the light that left it when the quasar was 1.82 billion light years away. That light, traveling at 670 million miles per hour, took 1.96 billion years to reach us. During its journey, the light traversed 2.10 billion light years of expanding space. And when the light arrives, 3C273 has moved to a point 2.44 billion light years away.

If this seems mind-numbing, hang on to your hat. The volume of space encompassed by a sphere with earth at the center and 3C273 at its outer edge still comprises a minuscule fraction of the observable universe.

Next week: A star plays lunar peek-a-boo.

Roughing it up at off-road motorcycle school in California

By Dan Neil
Los Angeles Times

My ride to RawHyde Adventures' off-road motorcycle school in Castaic in Southern California is typically heroic: daring and expert lane splitting, fistfuls of throttle and clutch, spectacular knee-dragging cornering. I even pop a wheelie or two. My riding skills astound me.

So imagine my surprise when, having left the asphalt to turn into the ranch's gravel driveway and going all of about 10 feet, I fall off my borrowed BMW F800GS in a spray of loose rock and liberated motorcycle parts ... Hey, whoa, what the ... ker-RASSHH! Pain and humiliation mingle inside my helmet. I have not dropped a bike ever, and yet here I am, resting gently on my face. The marquee lights around my motorcycle-riding ego suddenly go dim. The squirrels laugh. Gravel tastes funny.

So begins my five-day education in off-road riding. A half-mile up the hill, Jim Hyde, the founder and owner of RawHyde, is waiting for me under a canopy of camo netting, near a cluster of the school's BMW motorcycles. Hyde — a fit, barrel-chested 52-year-old with a red face and a white goatee — is sympathetic, sort of. At least he doesn't laugh.

"You know, we've had more people spill in the driveway than anywhere else," he says, smiling. Uh-huh. I suppose some sort of warning sign is out of the question?

RawHyde teaches something called "adventure riding," which involves piloting ridiculously large and powerful motorcycles — so-called dual-sport bikes such as the BMW R1200GS, KTM 990 Adventure, Ducati Multistrada and Moto Guzzi Stelvio — in the bush. Dirt roads, sandy desert whoops, rock-strewn switchbacks, water crossings, you name it. After a couple days' instruction, students can put their new skills to the test on an expedition to what Hyde calls Base Camp Alpha, a 400-plus-mile round-trip ride into the Mojave desert through some of the most dramatic and inaccessible terrain in California. That's why I'm here.

With their tall saddles and more limber suspension, dual-sport bikes are the SUVs of motorcycling; and as with SUVs, relatively few owners take advantage of the bikes' off-road abilities.

"People can be intimidated by these bikes," Hyde says. And not unrealistically. For one thing, they are expensive. A BMW R1200GS Adventure — the gold standard for this kind of riding — lists at $16,750, and that's before all the panniers, fog lights, crash bars, navigation and communication systems that flush-with-cash owners typically bolt on. For another, the bikes are heavy. The same BMW weighs 563 pounds, without gear. To drop one on the trail is to oblige yourself to pick it up again, which is, in Hyde's words, "tiresome."

And if you go off-road, eventually, you'll drop it. That's RawHyde Adventures' Lesson No. 1.

With sales of high-performance sport bikes and Harley-Davidsons falling victim to the credit crunch, dual-sports are the hottest segment in motorcycling. Buyers are typically older and wealthier, which is to say, they don't need credit. Dual-sports are also the quintessential midlife crisis bikes, and male menopause is always a growth industry. For guys — and we are talking about guys here, almost exclusively — who want to take that epic three-month road trip of man-discovery to find their inner Fonda, a big dual-sport bike is the only choice.

"It's cheaper than a divorce and a girlfriend," says riding instructor Mark Stickelmaier, 52, a theatrical equipment contractor by trade. Riding these bikes — my F800GS weighs nearly 500 pounds — resembles nothing so much as judo because riders have to leverage their weight against the far greater weight of an opponent (the bike). "These bikes are way too big to try to muscle them around," Stickelmaier says. The trick — far easier said than done — is to stand on the foot pegs and counter-balance your weight against the motorcycle, which wants to fall in whatever direction it's turning. The posture is strange, with the rider's one foot lifted off the bike entirely and a knee jammed into the fuel tank, almost as if he's trying to jump off sideways. But it works. Soon all of the students are able to turn figure-eights on the bikes at walking speed.

A couple of students struggle. Patrick Presley, a bridge inspector for the city of Phoenix, is riding his 2000-model-year F1150GS, a huge bike about 100 pounds heavier than a new F1200GS. Presley graduated out of Harleys — "I got sick of the pose," he says — so he knows a heavy bike when he lifts one. He drops the big yellow bike over and over until, on Sunday afternoon, his face is ashen from the effort. I ask him whether he's considering getting a newer, lighter bike. "That was the plan all along," he says, smiling wearily.

Some riders, meanwhile, are simply gifted. During the last exercise on the second day, in the school's sand pit, I bury my front wheel and slam into the ground. Sitting up, slightly dazed, I feel as if I've been swiped by a dragon's tail but, slipping a hand under my riding gear, am pleased to discover I haven't broken my collarbone.

When I stand to get my diploma on Sunday night, I've got a bag of ice bandaged to my shoulder. On Monday morning, the riders heading to Base Camp Alpha pack a duffel to throw in the chase truck. Langford, Stickelmaier, safety rider Jeff Irvin and Mike Myers, a Ventura County, Calif., paramedic, lead a gaggle of 20 or so riders split into two groups. After a quick, roaring ride up Interstate 5, we turn off California 138 and head up Liebre Mountain/Pine Canyon Road, a snared 20-mile trail of rock, dirt and broken concrete following the contours of Portal Ridge like a high-water mark to Hughes Lake. This was the old route out of the Antelope Valley during the 1920s. In the switchbacks, deep sand — my nemesis — has collected in awful wallows. I topple off my bike again, falling on my bruised shoulder, which is by now turning wondrous colors of purple and yellow.

As we gain altitude, the air cools and the road ropes through a thick, lovely pine forest and mountain meadows golden with wildflowers.

It soon becomes clear that my group, led by Stickelmaier, is quicker than the second group. And we don't wait. Soon we're riding hellbent on the Aqueduct Road, a fun and fast desert dirt road running parallel to a concrete-capped aqueduct, William Mulholland's original water works. Before long we see the turbines of the Oak Creek Wind Farm in the distance.

From Mojave, we take the Randsburg Red Rock Road until we reach Last Chance Canyon Road, a silty uphill scramble that leads to William Henry "Burro" Schmidt's tunnel. A desert lunatic, Schmidt spent most of his life digging this quarter-mile tunnel into the granite of the El Paso Mountains, by himself, to no apparent purpose. With the temperature in the high 90s, my fellow riders welcome the chance to spell awhile in the coolness of the tunnel.

By the time we reach Randsburg, a barely there desert town at the crossing of U.S. Highway 395, Group B has been waiting an hour, carbo-loading with malts from the General Store.

The next day's ride is far more challenging, a 250-mile enduro from the Pinnacles — extraordinary spires of calcium carbonate rising out of the badlands south of Trona — to Lake Isabella, a route that includes 10 miles of roller-coaster desert sand, which continues to terrify me.

The last off-road section of the day is also the most spectacular: a 30-mile traverse of the Piute Mountains, which takes us from the sere scrub of Jawbone Canyon to the lush, cool meadows of Kelso Valley and then up 5,000 feet to the Sequoia-lined ridge road over the mountains. It's steep and difficult terrain, with dangerous cliffs and sections of technical riding that test all the lessons learned at RawHyde. I fall only once; unfortunately, I fall on top of my Good Samaritan, Reilly, who has gone down just ahead of me.

The crest line of the Piutes is fantastic, a postcard view of a California only a few ever see, and best seen from the saddle. If eating a little gravel is the price to get here, well, I'm buying.

Area youth bring home fish from wildlife day camp

By Amanda Kumiko Kent
For the Times-News

Forty-one youth cast their lines and reeled in fish recently at the 4-H Wildlife Day Camp.

The camp, held May 16 at the Idaho State Fish Hatchery in Hagerman, hosted families from the Magic and Wood River valleys.

Youth ages 5-15, along with some parents, learned how to make a fishing pole from a recycled soda can. They tied flies, built spoons and tackle boxes and practiced casting.

Fishing rules and regulations were discussed by Joe Chapman of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. Kids climbed on the Gooding County Sheriff's safety boat as Deputy Justin Kimball spoke about water safety and laws.

Each participant was able to individually dissect and learn to clean fish with the help of aquaculture expert Gary Fornshell of the University of Idaho Extension Education program.

The angler with the catch of the day was Caliber Jensen-Haner, of Gooding County, who bagged a rainbow trout weighing more than 7 pounds, when he wasn't touring the facility, making shirts and identifying Idaho fish species along with the other youth.

Thanks to sponsors, youth returned home with a fish on a T-shirt, fishing tackle in their boxes, fish in their stomachs and, most importantly, their catch of the day.

Sponsors included Magic Valley Fly Fishers, Tamarack Sports, Fairfield Ranger District, United Dairymen of Idaho, Clear Springs Foods, Linda Lemmon, the Demaray family, and the Scheer family.

Off-road vehicle registration endorsed

CARSON CITY, Nev. — A state Assembly panel has voted for a bill requiring owners of off-road vehicles, or ORVs, to register their rigs with the Nevada Department of Motor Vehicles.

SB394, endorsed by the Assembly Transportation Committee, would mandate that ORVs, such as all-terrain vehicles, snowmobiles, dune buggies and all-terrain motorcycles, be registered at an annual cost of $20 to $30. A titling fee would run about $28.

Nearly $7 million could be generated over the next two years from the registration, titling and other fees for about 227,000 off-highway vehicles in Nevada, according to DMV figures.

The bill, proposed by Sen. Dean Rhoads, R-Tuscarora, would designate responsibility for title and registration processing to ORV dealers. Rhoads said the plan wouldn't take effect until it can be adequately funded. He added that efforts are under way to find grants.

Environmental groups challenge Canada lynx plan

MISSOULA, Mont. — A lawsuit by four environmental groups says the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service falls short in how much land it intends to designate as critical habitat for the Canada lynx, a cat protected under the Endangered Species Act.

The service proposes designating about 39,000 square miles in six states, up from 1,841 square miles in three states.

The suit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Missoula says protecting more habitat in western Montana and eastern Idaho is particularly important. The suit also says the Fish and Wildlife Service erred by not including part of Colorado in the proposed designation.

The Fish and Wildlife Service in Denver did not immediately return a call seeking comment Wednesday.

The suit by the Sierra Club and others seeks a court order requiring the service to reconsider its habitat designation.

Protecting property from wolves

Question: "What are the laws about what a citizen can do to protect themselves and their property from wolves?"

Answer: The answer to your question is spelled out in Idaho Code 36-1107(c).

In part, this law says: "Wolves may be disposed of without permit by livestock or domestic animal owners, their employees, agents and animal damage control personnel when they are molesting or attacking livestock or domestic animals."

The law requires those killing a wolf while protecting their property to report the incident to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game within 72 hours.

ASK THE OFFICER
Gary Hompland

All wolves killed remain property of the State of Idaho.

The public may take any non-lethal steps necessary to protect their property. If wolves are not attacking or molesting domestic animals a permit must be obtained in order to kill a wolf.

For the purposes of this law "molesting" means the "actions of a wolf that are annoying, disturbing, or persecuting, especially with hostile intent or injurious effect, or chasing, driving, flushing, worrying, following after or on the trail of, or stalking or lying in wait for, livestock or domestic animals."

The bottom-line is:

- Non-lethal measures such as scare guns are allowed any time to protect domestic animals.

- If domestic animals are being attacked, pursued, stalked, or if the domestic animals are responding to the presence of a wolf, such as running in flight or fight, lethal measures are allowed without a permit or authorization.

- If the wolf is not in hunting mode and the domestic animals show no concern by the presence of a wolf or if the wolves move off and run away, they cannot be pursued and shot without a permit or authorization from the Department.

- You can protect your property but once the immediate threat of injury is over you may no longer kill the wolf.

If you have any further questions you may call the Magic Valley Regional Office of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game at (208)324-4350 or e-mail us at the Fish and Game Web site at <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov>.

Question: I was seriously injured in a car wreck last year and because I haven't been able to work I have no choice but to file bankruptcy. I'm suing the other driver and my lawyer says I can expect a sizeable settlement. Will the settlement have any effect on my bankruptcy?

Answer: When you file a bankruptcy, all your assets become part of your bankruptcy estate. You can keep the assets if they are exempt under Idaho law. Your lawsuit and potential settlement would become part of your bankruptcy estate, and the bankruptcy trustee would take your place in prosecuting the lawsuit. From the settlement, you would be allowed to keep amounts necessary for continuing medical care and for medical appliances in addition to amounts reasonably necessary for your support and the support of your dependents. You would probably not get to keep amounts paid for pain & suffering and emotional distress. Worse yet, the trustee would probably settle for less than you would want. You AND your injury lawyer should consult with an experienced bankruptcy attorney before proceeding.

Jerome commissioners discuss concert liability

By John Plestina
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — For a third time this month, Jerome County commissioners scrutinized a proposed outdoor concert in the Judicial Annex parking lot. The issue is expected to come before them again next week.

When the commission revisited concerns about potential liability and conflicts with the county fair Tuesday, commissioners made it clear that they do not want any liability to fall on the county and they want assurance of immediate repairs of any damage to county property incurred during the concert.

They had approved the concert May 11, later learning that it would conflict with the fair's demolition derby, a sponsored event scheduled for the same time on a Saturday night.

When the commission discussed its approval of the event on May 18, fairgrounds Manager Kathleen Diederich and Fair Foundation Chairman Gary Warr told commissioners that the four-band concert and accompanying beer sales could result in alcohol-related trouble in the downtown area and would compete with the fair, possibly reducing fair proceeds.

At that time, Diederich asked the board to move the concert to the arena at the fairgrounds.

On Tuesday, promoters of the outdoor concert assured the commission that they could provide insurance or a bond to hold the county harmless.

Commissioner Joe Davidson said he doesn't want to have to address concert-related damages after the event.

Promoter and owner of Diamondz Bar Mark Gardoski, of Jerome, told the commission that he used information posted on a Web site that was actually a 2008 fair calendar, which resulted in the scheduling conflict.

Warr acknowledged that there was incorrect information on the Web site.

Commission Chairman Charlie Howell told Gardoski and his colleague, Jack Webster, of Events and Adventures of Twin Falls, that he wanted a guarantee that they would make up the difference if the demolition derby earns less than $2,000 profit. The Fair Foundation

Stimulus money saves Jerome school jobs

JEROME — Jerome school trustees learned Tuesday that teachers would keep their jobs with the district stimulated by a 36-percent federal funding increase.

District Business Manager Mike Gibson told the board that thanks to federal stimulus money, the budget crisis that appeared dismal a few months ago has shrunk substantially.

He said he had anticipated teacher layoffs when state funding appeared meager at best.

Since then, $1.68 million in additional federal money poured into the district.

"We have a presentable budget, Gibson told the board, noting that programs will continue but funding will not be at the highest levels.

The district has eliminated 1.75 administrative positions and teachers are facing 1.9 percent salary reductions.

"If it weren't for the federal dollars I would have a very different story to tell you tonight and it wouldn't be a pleasant one," Gibson said.

In other business, after six consecutive years of Jerome High School graduations being held at the College of Southern Idaho, a group of 2010 JHS graduates and several parents told the board they want graduation moved back to the school. They presented a petition with 130 signatures in support of their cause.

Graduation was moved from JHS to CSI a few years ago for adequate indoor accommodations in the event of rain and a better sound system at the college.

Student Brian Harper asked the board to allow

Jerome, other law enforcement cracking down on seat belt violators

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

Some Jerome residents haven't heard the news, while others are hearing it the hard way after being pulled over by a city police officer who cites them for not wearing a seat belt.

The Idaho State Police and 45 other Idaho law enforcement agencies, including those in Jerome, Rupert and across the Magic Valley, are participating in the nationwide "Click it or Ticket" seat belt enforcement mobilization, which runs through June 3.

The state funds two traffic safety mobilizations each year with voluntary participation by city and county law enforcement, and costs covered by Idaho Transportation Department grants. Jerome participates in both sessions with Patrol Officer Dennis Clark in charge of applying for the grants and heading the Jerome effort. The grant allows five patrol officers to cite violators for four hours each day.

Motorists and their passengers cannot be stopped for a seat belt violation alone, but can be ticketed for the infraction if they are pulled over for a different violation, according to an ITD release.

Idaho, along with Kansas, Missouri and Wisconsin, share the lowest seat belt fine in the country — $10, according to ITD.

Clark said Jerome drivers are not getting good grades for seat belt compliance.

"We conducted our own survey before this session and found that drivers were averaging 60 percent compliance as far as wearing their seat belts," he said. "We don't think even with the publicity the state puts out that Jerome drivers are improving much."

According to the ITD, more than half of last year's passenger vehicle occupants killed in crashes were not wearing seat belts. An additional 396 unbelted Idahoans were critically injured in traffic crashes.

Still, Clark said that sometimes it takes more than education to get people to buckle up. That's where the citations come in.

"It may be we will see an increase in compliance after this week and people deal with their citations," Clark added.

Mary Hanson may be reached at mhansonmbd@gmail.com.

Jerome Police Patrol Officer Dennis Clark stops a vehicle and issues a citation to the driver for not wearing a seat belt on Tuesday. The Jerome Police Department is participating in the national 'Click it or Ticket' program, which runs through June 3.

Cause of chronic fatigue can be difficult to diagnose

DEAR DR. GOTT: I like reading your column and seeing you help other people with their medical issues. However, I have yet to see anything published that might help me. I'm a 47-year-old female who has struggled with fatigue for years. I was worried about holding down my job because I was having a hard time getting up to go to work. While at work, I was falling asleep on my half-hour lunch break for two hours.

My primary-care physician couldn't figure out why I was so tired. He sent me to an endocrinologist who didn't discover anything. I've lost my job and insurance and am just as tired today. Breakfast acts as a tranquilizer and sends me off to sleep again. I battle taking naps all day. I had a heart attack at 44 and know I have had hepatitis C for at least 11 years. My doctor didn't see any connection. My quality of life is very poor, and I would appreciate as much insight as you might have.

ASK DR. GOTT

DEAR READER: I feel somewhat handicapped because I don't have a complete picture of what is going on.

Initially, while suffering from a heart attack at 44 is not unheard of, you are young and should be at the top of your game. I wonder what, if anything, preceded the attack. Do you have chronic fatigue syndrome? Do you have a family history of heart disease? Was your diet improper? Did you suffer from high-cholesterol levels? Do you have unrelated medical conditions? Were you inactive and/or overweight? Did you get regular medical checkups? If you can answer "yes" to any of my questions, were positive measures taken to work toward a healthier lifestyle?

If so, what was the outcome?

To lose a job, insurance and be unable to stay awake and alert is quite a lot for one individual to handle. We cannot be too quick to zero in on the basis for your fatigue, but must keep open minds that will cover many of the possibilities.

If you can pinpoint the initial stage for your symptoms, you might be headed in the right direction. For example, was the attack followed by the fatigue, or did the exhaustion precede it? Are you on any medication that could have an unwanted and uncommon side effect of fatigue? Do you have friends or family you can talk with to share your concerns? While many of us are private when it comes to our own lives, having someone to talk with can make an enormous difference. If you don't have anyone or don't feel comfortable, consider a therapist. This type of specialist will sift through the issues, dismissing some and addressing others.

It's time to wipe the slate clean and begin from scratch with a new physician, at least until things get sorted out. You will need blood work, follow-up on your hepatitis C, referral to a cardiologist and perhaps a referral to other specialists and thyroid testing. Even if you have to borrow the money, it will be well spent if it gets you back on your feet.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Thyroid Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

Ethel Marie Hazen

MARSING — Ethel Marie Hazen, 87, of Marsing, passed away Monday, May 25, 2009.

Ethel was born July 2, 1921, in Bonesteel, S.D., to William and Alice (Lunn) Spitzenberger. She was raised on a large farm in Bonesteel, where she attended the little white framed country school near the family farm. When her father became the county sheriff, they moved to Burke, S.D., where she attended high school, graduating in 1939. It was there that she met her future husband, Robert Hazen. While Bob was working in Idaho and off to fight in World War II, Ethel attended Southern State Normal School in Springfield, S.D. She attended college for two years and then taught school for four years. On June 28, 1945, Ethel and Robert were married in Nampa. They lived in Marsing for the first five years of their marriage. They then moved to Nebraska, where they farmed for five years. Ethel and Robert moved back to Idaho in 1956, living in Nampa for more than a year and back to Marsing, residing there for the next 51 years.

Bob preceded her in death on May 30, 2002. To this union there were seven children, Bill (Pat) Hazen of Gooding, Sharon Meyer and Dick Jenkins, both of McCall, Leanne (Robert) Petroch of Gooding, Don (Marilyn) Hazen of Cascade, Gene (Mandy) Hazen of Nampa, Dianne (Eric) Hancock of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Alyce (Scott) Were of Marsing. Ethel devoted her entire life to her family. She, like many of that generation, did home canning of fruits, vegetables and meats. She designed and sewed most of the girls' clothing until into their high school and college years. She loved making stuffed animals for all of her grandchildren. Ethel at one time or another was a room mother for each of her children. She was always there for concerts and sporting activities in which her children participated. Ethel said many times that her greatest accomplishment was her children. She dearly loved her grandchildren and great-grandchildren, often attending many of their activities. She loved watching their football, basketball and soccer games, as well as rodeos and concerts all this while helping her husband with their dairy and farm.

Ethel and Bob were able to travel after retirement. They loved their trips to Alaska, Death Valley and other parts of the country with Bob's brothers and sister. ## Furniture craftsman Maloof dies at 93

RANCHO CUCAMONGA, California — Sam Maloof, whose simple, practical handmade wooden furniture sits in leading museums and the White House, has died. He was 93.

Maloof, the son of Lebanese immigrants, died Thursday at his Southern California home, his business manager Boz Bock told the Los Angeles Times. No further details were given.

Maloof was praised for putting usefulness before artistry in the chairs, cradles, hutches and other pieces he designed and crafted by hand.

Maloof's signature piece was a rocking chair with elongated rockers jutting backward. The feature appeared sculptural, but was actually incorporated to keep the chair from tipping over.

Terrorist attack in Pakistan kills 30

By Alex Rodriguez
Los Angeles Times

LAHORE, Pakistan — Officers guarding buildings for some of the Pakistani heartland's top police and intelligence officials saw the gunmen jump out of a white van stopped at their gate.

The assailants wore white shirts and trousers, and sprayed gunfire in the air and at police. One tossed a grenade in the direction of officers who had begun firing back.

Then, on a bustling workday morning in the heart of Pakistan's second largest city, the explosives-laden van rammed the steel gate and exploded. The blast razed an emergency services building and sheared off a wall from the intelligence agency building next door. By Wednesday afternoon, authorities had put the death toll at 30, with more than 250 people injured.

It was one of the deadliest terrorist attacks in Pakistan this year. And it succeeded at again unsettling a nation that had begun to feel a renewed sense of confidence as Pakistani troops continued retaking parts of the country's northwest that had fallen into Taliban hands.

Although no group had claimed responsibility, Pakistani authorities and experts said the attack could have been a retaliatory strike resulting from the Pakistani military's ongoing offensive to regain control of the embattled Swat Valley and surrounding regions from Taliban militants.

The target was clear. The van, laden with what Lahore police official Suhail Sukhera said was 220 pounds of explosives, detonated just outside buildings that housed the headquarters for the Punjab provincial branch of Inter-Services Intelligence, Pakistan's intelligence agency, Lahore's police chief offices and emergency services headquarters, and several homes belonging to top local police officials.

"These buildings were sensitive" said Sukhera, as he visited injured police officers in a recovery ward at Ganga Ram Hospital. Some officers suffered gunshot wounds, while others had large head and chest gashes created by the blast.

"What are we going to do? We're in a state of war," Sukhera said. "They're trying to harass us, but I'll tell you what. They'll fail. You'll see us back at our offices tomorrow."

Authorities said they had suspects in custody, but there were varying reports of how many were arrested. Sukhera said two men were arrested. Pakistani television reported that as many as five people had been detained. Pakistan's Dawn channel reported that two of the suspects were connected to a group linked to Pakistani Taliban leader Baitullah Mehsud. The report, however, could not be verified.

Mehsud claimed responsibility for a daring daytime raid on a police academy on Lahore's outskirts that left about 20 people dead, including at least four assailants, March 30. Earlier in March, militants attacked the Sri Lankan national cricket team during its visit to Lahore, leaving seven people dead, including six police officers.

Since the offensive to oust the Taliban began about a month ago, Pakistani military leaders have been touting the gains that troops have made against militants they have described as "on the run." Military spokesmen have said that more than 1,100 militants have been killed in the fighting.

On Wednesday, military officials said 70 percent of Mingora, Swat's main city, had been cleared of Taliban militants. Those claims could not be independently verified because the government has greatly restricted journalists' access to the Swat region.

Roadside bomb kills U.S. soldier in Baghdad

BAGHDAD (AP) — A roadside bomb killed a U.S. soldier Wednesday in Baghdad, making May the deadliest month for the American military since September.

Also Wednesday, the government's watchdog agency announced that nearly 1,000 arrest warrants have been issued this year as part of a crackdown on corruption. They include warrants for nearly 50 senior civil servants, the agency said.

The fatal attack occurred two days after a blast struck a U.S. convoy west of the capital, killing three Americans, including two civilians and a soldier.

The spike in deaths comes as U.S. forces face a June 30 deadline to pull back from urban areas as part of a U.S. -Iraqi security pact that took effect this year.

At least 20 American service members have died so far this month, compared with 25 in September, according to an Associated Press tally.

The 20 deaths include five service members killed in a May 11 shooting at a mental health clinic in Baghdad. Sgt. John M. Russell has been charged with murder in the case.

April had at least 19 American troop deaths, more than double the nine killed in March, the lowest since the war began.

Lakers top Nuggets in Game 5

By Beth Harris
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — The Lakers owned the fourth quarter against Denver. Now they have a 3-2 lead in the Western Conference finals.

Kobe Bryant scored 22 points, Lamar Odom had 19 points and 14 rebounds and Pau Gasol added 14 points and 10 rebounds in Los Angeles' 103-94 victory Wednesday night.

Game 6 is Friday in Denver, where the Lakers lost Game 4 by 19 points.

"Got to come ready to play," Bryant said. "We made a lot of mistakes the last time, the mistakes that took place were execution, and we didn't do things at the defensive end.

"We'll come ready to play." Carmelo Anthony scored 31 points, hitting 12 of 13 free throws, and Kenyon Martin and Chauncey Billups added 12 points each for the Nuggets.

The teams were tied after the first, second and third quarters for just the fourth time in NBA playoff history.

So it all came down to the final 12 minutes.

Bryant, Odom and Gasol teamed for all but seven of the Lakers' points in the fourth. They opened on an 11-0 run for their first lead of the second half and it was capped by Shannon Brown's jumper that beat the shot clock.

The Nuggets used a 13-6 run to close to 93-89. Linas Kleiza scored seven straight and Anthony had six in the spurt.

But then the Lakers regained control and finished off the victory. They improved to 20-0 in Game 5s at home when a series is tied 2-2.

Bryant said he changed his role from the what it had been in the series.

"It was a big gamble for me coming in, but I wanted to change my approach this game and be more of a decoy," he said after adding eight assists, several out of double-teams in the fourth quarter. "The past couple games they really were loading to my side and I figured I could be a

2009 TIMES-NEWS BOYS TRACK ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

SPANISH EXCHANGE STUDENT IS ALL BUSINESS ON THE TRACK

DREW GODLESKI/For the Times-News

Buhl sprinter Bertrand Alcaraz Garcia is the 2009 Times-News boys track athlete of the year.

By David Bashore • Times-News writer

When I first saw Bertrand Alcaraz Garcia in athletic competition, it was a bitterly cold Saturday in Buhl, where the Indians were handling Declu in a boys soccer match. Bundled up with long-sleeves, long leggings, gloves and head-gear, Garcia scored a hat trick for Buhl.

The exchange student from Cartagena, Spain — a coastal city boasting a similar population to that found in Boise's city limits — cut a flighty, happy-go-lucky figure that fall day.

On the track, not so much: When it comes to sprinting, Garcia is all business.

He wants nothing more than to beat you when he gets into the blocks, and he'll let you know about it with a celebratory shout should he cross the finish line first. He did so four times at the Class 3A state meet, three times in individual races and once as the anchor of the 4x400 relay.

Garcia was always a talented runner, but he credited the coaching staff in Buhl for helping him to that next level.

"I kind of knew how to run, how to work my arms," Garcia said. "But when I got here, the coaches really helped me learn how to use strength and improve my technique. Coach (Andrew) Moretto showed me in the 400 to start fast, then take shorter steps in the curve and really work hard in the last 100 (meters)."

As one Buhl assistant coach told me at the district track meet: "We're sending him back with better times than he had coming here, so we must have done something right."

You can say that again. Garcia said he shaved six-tenths off his best 100 time in Spain, going under 11 seconds, and knocked about a full second off his 200 time.

Garcia said his best time at Buhl in the 400, an event he said he never ran until this season, is the best for all Spanish runners ages 15-17, and his 200 time is second best.

Tyson seems destined to live a tragic life

There's a picture stuck away in a box somewhere in my house of a younger Mike Tyson standing behind my son, his arms draped over him and a huge smile on his face.

The picture never made the family album, was never brought out to show around when friends came over. Brian never asked me to have it framed.

TIM DAHLBERG

It was taken at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas in 1990, and by that time Tyson's life had already spun far out of control and disintegrated into soap opera status. His wife at the time had accused him on national TV of abusing her, he had lost the only two father figures he had ever known, and, thanks to Buster Douglas, he was no longer the heavy-weight champion of the world.

Soon he was going to be charged with rape. It wasn't the time to be showing his picture around.

Not that I had any worries about letting my son hang briefly with the baddest man on the planet. With Tyson you got pretty much what you saw, with none of the phoniness or pretentiousness of most athletes.

A lot of times it wasn't pretty, and a lot of times the decisions he made were pretty bad. But there was always an underlying endearing quality to Tyson that was missed by those more interested in his left hook or his many problems.

You could see by the way he joked with my son and put his arm around him that he loved kids. That may have been because in many ways he was still a kid himself.

A kid who cried after failing to make the 1984 Olympic team. A kid who had no idea what to do when promoters and so-called friends were showing their hands in his suddenly deep pockets.

A kid who took an awfully long time to grow up.

Barcelona cruises to Champions League title

By Robert Millward
Associated Press writer

ROME — Barcelona beat Manchester United 2-0 on Wednesday night to win the European Champions League for the second time in four seasons, dominating behind goals from Samuel Eto'o and Lionel Messi.

Eto'o put the Spanish champions ahead in the 10th minute at the Stadio Olimpico. The three-time African player of the year from Cameroon took a pass from Andres Iniesta, cut around defender Nemanja Vidic and beat Edwin van der Sar. The goalkeeper got a touch on the right-footed shot but couldn't keep it from going in at the near post.

Messi, a 21-year-old star of Argentina's national team, easily won the glamour duel with reigning FIFA player of the year Cristiano Ronaldo. Messi scored on a header from about 6 yards in the 70th off a cross from Xavi Hernandez, his ninth goal of the tournament and his first in 11 games against English opponents.

Messi, who had 38 of Barcelona's 153 goals this season, set off colorful celebrations at one end of the stadium, filled with 62,467 fans, and left English fans in silence as Manchester United's European unbeaten streak ended at 25 games.

In its first season under coach Pep Guardiola, a former Barcelona star who began as a ball boy at Camp Nou, the Catalan power won Europe's top club competition for the third time following victories in 1992 and 2006. It also

Zambrano ejected for rant, but Cubs top Pirates

CHICAGO — Carlos Zambrano went wild in a ball-tossing, bat-swinging tirade after being ejected, and was gone when Reed Johnson hit a tiebreaking home run in the eighth inning that sent the Chicago Cubs over the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 Wednesday.

The Cubs ace was tossed by umpire Mark Carlson in the seventh after Nyjer Morgan scored the tying run on a wild pitch, beating catcher Geovany Soto's throw to Zambrano at the plate.

Zambrano jumped up, argued the call and appeared to nudge Carlson. The excitable right-hander then pointed in Carlson's face and gave him the ejection sign.

Zambrano wasn't finished, either. He threw a ball into left field, slammed his glove against a fence and grabbed a bat to whack a drink dispenser on his way to the clubhouse.

Johnson connected against Jesse Chavez (0-2) to give Chicago a 3-2 lead. The Cubs added two more runs in the inning on RBI doubles by Andres Blanco and Jake Fox, two players just called up from the minors on Wednesday.

REDS 6, ASTROS 1

CINCINNATI — Jay Bruce homered twice and Bronson Arroyo pitched a five-hitter Wednesday night, leading Cincinnati to a three-game sweep.

Bruce was in a 1-for-18 slump when he hit a solo shot off Felipe Paulino (1-4) in the fourth. His two-run homer off the right-hander made it 5-1 in the sixth and put the Reds in position for their first sweep of the Astros in Cincinnati since May 2004.

Murphy had a career-best five RBIs and Gary Sheffield hit an early two-run double off rookie Jordan Zimmermann (2-2), helping the injury-ravaged Mets finish a three-game sweep.

CARDINALS 3, BREWERS 2

MILWAUKEE — Nick Stavinoha had two RBIs and scored the go-ahead run, leading the Cardinals to the win.

St. Louis has won seven of its last nine and hasn't allowed more than three runs in any game in the stretch.

DODGERS 8, ROCKIES 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Rookie Rick Porcello won his fifth straight start, and Placido Polanco homered and drove in three runs for Detroit.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jason Rosenberg was heading home and listening to satellite radio when he heard that Manny Ramirez was fourth among National League outfielders in initial All-Star voting. By the end of the night, a new Web site was born: Vote for Manny.

"I said it would be funny if Manny got elected, because he's coming off a suspension on July 3 and the All-Star game is a week later, so they don't even have that sort of built-in protection," the 39-year-old from suburban Ardsley said Wednesday. "So I got home, and just quickly threw a Web site together."

Rosenberg got voteformanny.blogspot.com up and running Tuesday night, designed to point out that MLB has no rule preventing players coming off drug suspensions from becoming All-Stars. It links to an online All-Star ballot and implores fans: "Remember, vote early and often!"

Brayan hit a go-ahead two-run homer in the sixth inning, Erik Bedard won for the first time in five starts and Seattle avoided a sweep.

Helm's OT goal puts Red Wings back in finals

DETROIT (AP) — Darren Helm scored 3:58 into overtime to give the defending champion Detroit Red Wings a 2-1 win over the Chicago Blackhawks on Wednesday night, setting up a Stanley Cup finals rematch with Pittsburgh.

Detroit won the Western Conference finals 4-1. The Red Wings and Penguins, coming off a four-game sweep over Carolina in the East, will open the championship series Saturday night in Detroit.

The series will start nearly a week ahead of schedule because NBC and the NHL didn't want a long layoff to stunt the excitement about the matchup.

Helm sent off a celebration after fanning with a shot attempt from the edge of the crease and having the puck go in off his skate.

"We squeaked one by him," Helm said.

Detroit's Dan Cleary opened the scoring 6:08 into the third period, and Chicago's Patrick Kane tied it with 7:07 left in regulation with his first goal of the series.

Cristobal Huet, playing for the injured Nikolai Khabibulin, made 44 saves for the Blackhawks. He forced overtime with a spectacular stop from his stomach, lifting his right leg to knock away Johan Franzen's shot in the closing seconds.

"He played great," Chicago coach Joel Quenneville said. "He is to be commended. The game he played kept us in it."

Detroit's Chris Osgood stopped 30 shots.

The Red Wings are matching up with Pittsburgh in what is the NHL's first Stanley Cup rematch since the Edmonton Oilers beat the New York Islanders in 1984 after losing to them the previous year.

"To have the opportunity against Pittsburgh should be a lot of fun," Detroit coach Mike Babcock said. "There will be a lot of hype."

The Red Wings, the first defending champion to get back to the finals since New Jersey in 2001, are trying to become the first team to repeat since winning the Cup in 1997 and '98.

In the Western Conference finale, both teams were missing key players.

Detroit was without six-time Norris Trophy-winning defenseman Nicklas Lidstrom; his replacement, Jonathan Ericsson; MVP finalist Pavel Datsyuk; and four-time Cup-winning forward Kris Draper. In addition to Khabibulin, Chicago faced elimination without star forward Martin Havlat.

The Red Wings looked motivated to get off to a good start.

Detroit had 21 shots in the first period, the most it has had in any period this season, and two power plays but started the second in a scoreless tie.

Anthony hit a jumper to get Denver to 96-91 with 1:24 remaining. But the Nuggets went cold from the field over the final 3:38, while the Lakers capitalized at the line. Los Angeles outscored Denver 10-5 in that span.

Denver returns home needing a victory to send the series back to LA for a Game 7 on Sunday. The Nuggets have never won a best-of-7 series after losing Game 1.

The good kind of history is seemingly on the Lakers' side. They haven't lost a best-of-7 series that was tied 2-2 after winning Game 5 since the 1969 NBA finals against Boston.

Denver twice led by seven points in the third quarter only to see the Lakers tie it at 76 on a 3-pointer by Bryant to end the period. Los Angeles never led, but managed the two ties.

Tyson

He's led his life under intense public scrutiny since he was a teen, and people were often as transfixed by him as they were repulsed by some of the things he did. At times it was comic, most times it was tragic, but all of the time people watched.

He's gone through enough highs and lows to last five lifetimes. But no parent should ever have to go through this.

The news Tuesday that Tyson's 4-year-old daughter died after a freak accident at home in Phoenix came as a jarring reminder of how things can go terribly wrong just as they finally seem to be going right.

Exodus Tyson died a day after her neck apparently got caught in the cord of a treadmill.

Tyson was in Las Vegas at the time of the accident, riding a wave of mostly favorable publicity since a documentary on his troubled life hit selected theaters earlier this month. Clean and sober for more than a year, he also has a part in the upcoming comedy "The Hangover," where he gets laughs singing a song and punching out one of the main characters.

He seemed to be finally putting at least some of his many demons behind him, much to the relief of those who never thought he would make it this far. He wasn't at strip clubs every night, and could go to a restaurant without having a drink. He was finding a new identity outside the ring.

And now he's faced with every parents' worst nightmare.

How he will handle the tragedy in the long run is anyone's guess, though there are probably some psychologists speculating about it already.

People will offer their sympathy, but not everyone will be so sympathetic. A changed man or not, he's still reviled by many as the fighter who once bit off a piece of Evander Holyfield's ear and threatened to eat Lennox Lewis' children.

But he's also a man who talked often about his own children, and how he wished he could have had a father when he was growing up. I remember watching him playfully nibble on his infant son's arm on the podium at a press conference days before his fight with Clifford Etienne, so engrossed with the baby that he seemed oblivious to everything else going on.

Indeed, Tyson has been a walking contradiction most of his life. I saw him bite Holyfield's ear and try to break Francois Botha's arm, but I also remember times he would knock someone senseless and then kiss him on top of the head and try to help him up.

Sadly, there's no kiss that can bring back his daughter.

He was once young and ferocious, hated by many and feared by all. But that was a lifetime ago.

Now he's simply Mike Tyson, grieving father.

Garcia

Those placements would almost certainly qualify him for July's IAAF World Youth Championships at Bressanone, Italy, if the Spanish federation accepted them. But the powers that be would rather see his blazing speed for themselves than rely on official times from little ol' Idaho, half a world away.

From Garcia's standpoint, four gold medals are hard to argue with, but it is what it is. If he can arrange to return to Spain in late June — he said his current schedule is to leave in late July — and try to qualify, he could yet compete.

The Olympics remain a dream, he says — too many hurdles to overcome before he can start to think of that as a reality.

Garcia's focus when he returns to Spain, where he runs for the Universidad Catolica de San Antonio Murcia track club, is to keep the balance between studies and track. That balance could lead him back to Idaho, a place about which he speaks with nothing short of the utmost regard.

"The weather is a little crazy (compared to Cartagena) but I love it here in Buhl," Garcia said. "I'd really like to come back, and maybe run at ISU in Pocatello. If I can get a scholarship, I'd love to come back here."

Be it in the Olympic Games or the Big Sky Championships, or anywhere in between, this might not be the last we see of this Spanish phenom.

Sharapova joins Safina, Ivanovic in third round of French Open

PARIS (AP) — On a day of adieu at the French Open, Maria Sharapova managed to stick around.

Trailing through most of the third set in her toughest test since shoulder surgery, Sharapova pulled out a 6-2, 1-6, 8-6 victory over 11th-seeded Nadia Petrova on Wednesday to reach the third round at Roland Garros, her return to Grand Slam tennis.

"I kind of started stumbling away. Things went in the wrong direction," said Sharapova, who missed the U.S. Open and Australian Open. "I was just glad I could pick myself up and keep fighting."

That she did: Five times, Petrova was one point away from serving for the match. But Sharapova didn't allow her to convert those chances.

"She really showed, even though she has been out for a while, she's willing to compete till the end," Petrova acknowledged.

Sharapova's French Open continues, as does Rafael Nadal's winning streak at Roland Garros — which he extended to a tournament-record 30 matches — but there will be no more trips to the clay-court major for Marat Safin or Fabrice Santoro. Both are retiring at season's end, and both bowed out Wednesday, albeit in quite contrasting ways, which is fitting, given their polar-opposite styles of play and personalities.

The big-hitting, loud-talking Safin succumbed after a 4½-hour, five-set bit of theater; the spin-mixing, gentlemanly Santoro played all of 8 minutes to conclude his loss to Christophe Rochus in a match suspended the night before by darkness.

"My game style was out of date when I arrived on the tour. I got on the tour in the '90s, and my style dated back to the '70s," said Santoro, who tied a French Open record by playing in his 20th French Open. "So when I arrived, I was, you know, 20 years late already."

Safin, meanwhile, entertained as only he can, diving for shots, kicking at the clay in disgust, and gesturing at fans to make even more noise when they got on his case for arguing calls. The two-time major title winner eventually was beaten by 134th-ranked Josselin Ouanna of France 7-6 (2), 7-6 (4), 4-6, 3-6, 10-8.

"I played terrible," the 20th-seeded Safin said.

He was done as dusk fell, around the time Venus Williams lost the first set of her match against Lucie Safarova. They were told to pack up, because there wasn't enough light.

Winners included No. 3

Andy Murray, No. 7 Gilles Simon — who eliminated Robert Kendrick, making Andy Roddick the only U.S. man left — No. 8 Fernando Verdasco and Lleyton Hewitt, who faces Nadal next.

Safin's younger sister, No. 1-ranked Dinara Safina, won in straight sets, as did defending champion Ana Ivanovic and 16-year-old Michelle Larcher de Brito of Portugal, who upset No. 15 Zheng Jie of China.

Sharapova had a much longer day's work. But that's OK with her.

The Russian was so disappointed to miss the U.S. Open and Olympics last year, she couldn't bear to watch on TV. By the time the Australian Open came around in January, Sharapova found herself tuning in, then being inspired to head to the gym late at night.

"I know what I'm capable of out there. I know what I've done before. And I know I can do it again and even better," said Sharapova, once ranked No. 1 and now 102nd.

There were moments Wednesday when Sharapova looked as if she'd never been away, pushing Petrova this way and that — particularly while winning the first set's last five games.

There also were moments when Sharapova appeared a step slow — particularly while losing second set's last five games.

So Sharapova found herself playing her second straight three-setter, with rain falling and the temperature in the low 50s. Both women draped towels over their legs during changeovers, and Petrova donned a jacket.

But Sharapova saved six break points in the final set, serving well when absolutely necessary.

"She didn't give me any chance," said Petrova, twice a French Open semifinalist.

When Petrova sent a forehand wide to end the match, Sharapova covered her face with her fists. A moment later, she glanced at the players' guest seats, normally where her father sits. But he isn't at the French Open, because, as Sharapova put it: "After I won my third Grand Slam, he said, 'Look, I like hiking and skiing a lot,' and he kind of wanted to pursue that. So he's currently enjoying his life."

And his daughter is once again enjoying hers. She smiled as she looked up at her coach, Michael Joyce, who traveled back and forth weekly between Los Angeles and Phoenix with Sharapova when she was rehabilitating her shoulder. As Sharapova beamed, Joyce stood and pounded his right fist over his heart.

Magic one win from finals return

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Dressed in black, the imposing 7-footer sat near the floor for Game 4 like a casual NBA fan. He was hardly one.

Around here, Shaquille O'Neal means much more.

He represents the link to Orlando's glorious past, however brief it may be. Shaq, a basket-breaking behemoth with the power of several men, led the Magic to their only NBA finals appearance in 1995, a short visit that ended with an embarrassing sweep by Houston.

The Magic and their maniacal fans have longed for a second shot at a title. They can almost touch it.

Orlando moved within one win of ending its 14-year finals drought on Tuesday night as Dwight Howard, the Magic's present-day Diesel, scored 27 points — 10 in overtime — in a 116-114 win over the Cleveland Cavaliers to take a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Conference finals and shove LeBron James and his not-so-supportive cast to the edge of an early summer break.

A razor-thin series — two one-point games, and a two-pointer in OT — where the last team with the ball usually emerges victorious, could end Thursday night. Maybe.

"We're up 3-1, but we can't relax," said Rashard Lewis, whose catch-and-shoot 3-pointer with 4.1 seconds left in regulation was easily Game 4's most dramatic shot. "Anything can happen. We got to go to Cleveland looking to try and close these guys out."

The Magic got more good news Wednesday when the NBA rescinded Howard's Game 4 technical foul, his sixth of the playoffs. Under league rules, Howard would've been automatically suspended for one game had he received a seventh technical during the post-season.

Orlando heads into Game 5 with no fear of the road. They finished off the defending champion Boston Celtics on their famed parquet floor in a Game 7 in the previous and have a chance to end Cleveland's dream season on the court of King James.

The MVP, who scored 44 points in Game 4 and has done everything but drive the team bus in the series, won't go quietly.

Following Game 4, James, averaging 42.3 points, 7.3 rebound and 7.3 assists, said he's ready for his next shot at the impressive Magic.

"I'm up for the challenge," said James, who couldn't replicate his Game 2 heroics and missed a tough 3-pointer at the buzzer in Game 4. "And I think my play, my leadership has spoke for that. So I will be ready, and I think our guys will be ready also."

Orlando coach Stan Van Gundy, who doesn't sleep well even when things are going great, knows if anyone can turn this series around it's the magnificent James.

"This thing is a long, long way from over, just like the games in this series have been," he said. "When you've got a guy as great as him on the other side, you're a long way from done."

The odds are stacked against the Cavaliers.

Ex-Kentucky coach Gillispie sues over firing

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Former Kentucky men's basketball coach Billy Gillispie sued the school Wednesday, seeking at least $6 million he says he is owed on his deal for being fired without cause.

Gillispie, who was dismissed last spring, was working under a memorandum of understanding but hadn't signed a formal contract during the two years he coached at Kentucky.

He contends that under that memorandum, he should be paid $1.5 million a year for four of the five years left on the deal. The suit also asks for an undisclosed amount of punitive damages, attorneys' fees, court costs and interest.

The lawsuit filed in federal court in Dallas contends the school's athletics association is in breach of contract and has committed fraud because the university never intended to honor the agreement.

"Rather than honor its written, signed deal with coach Gillispie, defendant prefers instead to pretend as though no deal was ever reached," the lawsuit says. "Unfortunately for defendant, its make-believe world is just that."

University attorneys expressed surprise over the lawsuit.

"The university was continuing to negotiate a separation in good faith and his counsel had asked for more time," they said in a statement.

Jimmy Stanton, a spokesman for University of Kentucky President Lee Todd, said there wouldn't be further comment because it now involves pending litigation. Athletics director Mitch Barnhart didn't immediately return a call seeking comment.

Much of the 24-page lawsuit highlights the 49-year-old Gillispie's biography, describing him as an up-and-coming coach who resurrected a Texas A&M program before leaving to lead Kentucky, the nation's all-time winningest college basketball program.

"He resigned a promising, successful position as head-coach with a rapidly ascending program at Texas A&M," it says. "He did so because he believed (the university's) false representations to him during his negotiations."

In three seasons with the Aggies, Gillispie was 70-26, making the NCAA tournament twice including the Sweet 16 in 2007. The previous three seasons before Gillispie came on board, A&M was 20-22.

Gillispie went 40-27 in two seasons with the Wildcats, including a 22-14 mark last season that tied for the second-most losses in the program's 106-year history.

swept Spain's La Liga and Copa del Rey.

"I've been waiting for so long to get this title," said Barcelona forward Thierry Henry, who played for the Arsenal team that lost to Barcelona in the 2006 final. "The last five minutes were the longest of my life."

Manchester United, which won the Premier League, English League Cup and Club World Cup, was trying to become the first team to win consecutive European titles since AC Milan in 1989-90. The Red Devils also won the tournament in 1968 and 1999.

United manager Alex Ferguson was trying to match the record of Liverpool's Bob Paisley, who coached three teams to European titles.

"We started the game brightly. We were confident and we could have been in front," Ferguson said. "We didn't play as well as we can, but they are a good team. We have to give them credit. Xavi and Iniesta can keep the ball all night. They made it very difficult."

United was thoroughly outplayed. South Korean winger Park Ji-sung became the first Asian to appear in a Champions League final and almost scored in the opening minute but his shot was deflected wide after Ronaldo's free kick was saved by goalkeeper Victor Valdes.

MANCHESTER UNITED FAN STABBED IN ROME; 15 PEOPLE ARRESTED

ROME (AP) — A Manchester United fan was hospitalized after being stabbed and 15 people, including United and Barcelona supporters, were arrested by police in separate incidents before the Champions League final Wednesday night in Rome. No violence was reported immediately after the match's end. Dizzy with joy over the 2-0 victory for Barcelona, the Spanish team's fans were celebrating in the ancient alleys and squares of the Italian capital. Barcelona supporters playfully dipped their team scarves into the waters of the city's monumental fountains. Disappointed British fans filed out of the packed stadium calmly, as police helicopters buzzed over the city on the watch for any pockets of violence.

In an effort to tie the score, Ferguson brought on Carlos Tevez for midfielder Anderson at the start of the second half, then added Berbatov for Park in the 66th. Ferguson's final move was to insert Paul Scholes for Ryan Giggs in the 75th.

United defender Rio Ferdinand, and Henry and Iniesta all started after overcoming injuries.

Couple arrested in central Florida steroid bust

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A central Florida man arrested with thousands of anabolic steroid pills told investigators he sold to professional athletes, including players on the Washington Nationals and Capitals, authorities said Wednesday.

Richard Thomas boasted about selling steroids to professional baseball, hockey and football players, saying, "You name the sport, and I've sold steroids to athletes who play it," the Polk County Sheriff's Office said.

Authorities said Thomas didn't name specific players, and they have no evidence he sold to members of those teams.

Investigators who searched Thomas' house in Lakeland on Tuesday recovered thousands of anabolic steroid pills, injectable liquids and syringes with an estimated wholesale value of $100,000, said Carrie Eleazer, a spokeswoman with the sheriff's office. They also found several weapons, including loaded semiautomatic handguns.

Thomas and his wife, Sandra, were charged Tuesday with several counts of possession of illegal steroids, firearms, and maintaining a dwelling for drug use. Thomas and his wife were booked into the Polk County Jail on $215,000 each. Sandra Thomas posted bond and was released on Wednesday. Richard Thomas remained in jail and was expected to appear in court Thursday. Sheriff's records did not list an attorney.

Capitals players passed three rounds of drug tests during each of the past two seasons, and neither the team nor officials from the National Hockey League had reason to believe Thomas' claims, the league and the team said in a joint release Wednesday.

A spokesman for Major League Baseball, which also randomly tests for steroids, said the organization is looking into the matter. Nationals president Stan Kasten said he had been in touch with MLB and didn't have any cause for concern.

"For now, the story is what it is," he said in a conference call. "I don't know anything more than that."

Local authorities executed search warrants in Lakeland, about 30 miles east of Tampa, after receiving information from agents with the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement in Philadelphia.

Thomas told detectives he imported steroids from all around the world, including Iran, Pakistan, Slovakia, Russia, China, Turkey, Spain, Mexico and Germany. The sheriff's office said both Thomas and his wife were semiprofessional body builders, and that he claimed to be the largest steroids dealer in central Florida.

"He was very boastful," Eleazer said.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Jerome County Commissioners will hold a Hearing on certain proposed amendments to Chapter 13, of the Jerome County Zoning Ordinance, on June 23, 2009, at 9:30 a.m. in the Commissioner's Room of the Jerome County Courthouse, 300 North Lincoln, Jerome, Idaho. The proposed amendments involve certain language being added to Chapter 13 that will require an applicant seeking a permit for a residential home or subdivision near and existing LCO, or an applicant for a new or expanding LCO permit near an existing residential home or subdivision, to construct one or more windbreaks and/or berms for the purpose of helping eliminate adverse impacts typically associated when residential and LCO type uses come in close proximity to one another. In summary, the amendments will require those constructing either a new residential home or subdivision near an existing LCO, or those constructing a new or expanding LCO near an existing residential home or subdivision, to include in such construction one or more windbreaks and/or berms as necessary to accomplish the stated purpose; require the location of such windbreak or berm be determined in respect to existing structures; require the type of applicant described above, and who feels that he or she should be exempt from having to construct such a windbreak or berm, to demonstrate to the governing board's satisfaction that such is not needed and should be exempt; gives the governing board the authority to waive the requirement of a windbreak or berm if it so in fact agrees that such is not needed; requires certain distances the windbreaks or berms will be from existing structures; requires certain material be used in constructing the windbreaks or berms; and requires the windbreaks and berms to be maintained in various manners. The proposed amendments to Chapter 13 also includes certain language being added to the chapter that will give the governing board the ability to attach conditions and/or safeguards to those types of permits described above. The purpose for adding this language is also to help eliminate adverse impacts typically associated when residential and LCO type uses come in close proximity to one another. These conditions and safeguards may be applied when the facts of a specific application demonstrate that such are warranted. # Wife frets her house doesn't measure up in tony suburb

DEAR ABBY: My husband is threatening to leave and my 9-year-old daughter is distraught because I am embarrassed about our home and our cars. We live in an affluent suburb, but we're not one of the rich families. My daughter wants to invite friends from school over, but I'm mortified about their parents seeing our home or cars.

I know these things shouldn't matter. I love my husband, but he says I'm ruining our daughter's self-esteem and disrespecting him by being embarrassed by a life he works hard to provide. What's wrong with me, and how can I get past this? I don't want to lose my family.

— EMBARRASSED IN OHIO

DEAR EMBARRASSED: What makes a home warm and welcoming isn't whether it has been professionally decorated. Your problem isn't that you're ashamed of your house or cars. It's that you lack confidence in who you are. Your feelings stem less from what material things you lack than misplaced priorities.

When your daughter's friends visit, cookies in the oven, a welcoming smile and a willing ear if one of them needs a trusted adult in whom to confide will be more appreciated than whether your couch is new or there's a late-model car in the driveway. Many children from families who supposedly "have everything" are starved for plain old-fashioned personal attention.

I often recommend psychological counseling, but in your case, perhaps you would be better served by talking to a spiritual adviser about the difficulty you're having with appreciating how much you have for which to be thankful.

DEAR ABBY: I met "Greta" when I was in the Army Reserves. We fell in love, despite the fact that her parents disapproved of me. I come from a working-class background and Greta's family was considerably more well-off. We didn't care — we wanted a future together.

Greta told me she had broken up with her former boyfriend because he was domineering. She assured me the relationship was over, and I believed her.

Shortly before I was discharged, Greta told me she was carrying my baby. I left for home with plans to send for her and marry her before our child was born. I lined up a job and a place to live. Several months later, Greta phoned to say she had had a baby girl. She said her parents had made her give our daughter up for adoption and asked me never to contact her again.

I honored her wishes, but I worried for years about Greta and our child. Eventually I married and had two daughters and a son. Five years ago, with the help of my children who are psychologically savvy, we located my lost daughter, "Lily," and welcomed her into the family.

To cement our relationship, I had a paternity test performed recently and was shocked to learn I am NOT Lily's father. Greta still insists that I am, but DNA doesn't lie. Greta put my name on Lily's birth certificate. Lily blames herself for this mess, which is unfounded, and now says it's too painful to see me and my family again. I am so sorry for Lily and her children, who thought they were my grandchildren. What can we do? — CRUSHED IN NEW YORK

DEAR CRUSHED: Write Lily and tell her that you were overjoyed when you found her, and that blood-related or not, you will always love her and her children. Perhaps if she reads it she will realize that in some cases we build families not just from DNA, but also from mutual need and caring. That's all you can do for now.

IF MAY 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Knowing exactly who has your best interests at heart may be a key consideration this year. Between now and mid-July, you could be easily led on a wild goose chase, particularly in business. Wait until August if you want to make an important improvement in your status by changing jobs, expanding your business or asking for a promotion. That is when you have your finger firmly on the pulse of the business world and can gauge your actions accordingly. October is both highly romantic and inspiring, so plan to spend quality time with a loved one, perhaps by escaping for a weekend getaway. Expect that November will bring new friends, new goals, and that you will develop a more tolerant and open-minded viewpoint.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are sharp as a tack and can handle mental work with ease. Be aware that pushiness, however, could backfire in a few days. Your warmth is an asset, but don't overstep the bounds of propriety.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Fairy tales can come true. Even picky little Goldilocks knew a thing or two. If you are thinking about a certain someone who is not too cold and not too hot, but just right, that phone is likely to ring.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may want you to share your deepest secrets and tell all. Intense ques-

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Smooth talkers eventually get their way. You may become aware of subtle warnings of trouble ahead. Take these to heart and try to do a bit more to please those whose opinions matter the most.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Defuse situations before they get out of hand. You may sense a building tension but hope that by crossing your fingers it will dissipate. It is best to head off any potential arguments before they occur.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Put your very best foot forward in public, as most people will be looking at your actions with cynical eyes. It is better to hang out on your own front porch and concentrate attention on those at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dispel gloom with a positive attitude. You may be inspired to spread sunshine when you go to work or a shopping trip. You can chase away unpleasant clouds that are lingering near a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may want you to share your deepest secrets and tell all. Intense questioning could make you uncomfortable. Shrug off pointed inquiries without rancor. The mood will improve quickly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Others look up to you as a role model. Maintain a wholesome family-oriented atmosphere at work as well as at home. Make sure all your efforts are labeled "PG" for the best success.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't let unexpected phone calls or a case of crossed signals throw you off balance. Act on intuitive knowledge rather than on superficial facts and challenges from opponents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Bring your magnifying glass. You may need to read between the lines. You could feel you are undergoing an emotional inkblot test in which your actions are interpreted differently by various people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pretend you can cure all the ills of the world and the necessary words of wisdom will leap to your lips. Others trust you and their confidence can turn into dollars to fatten your piggy bank.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Click your heels three times and say, "There's no place like home." Family members can throw you a lifesaver at a critical moment. The ingenious idea or help you need is right at home base.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"He hears
On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
A dismal universal hiss, the sound
Of public scorn."
— John Milton

The players at the Dyspeptics Club are united by a common lack of respect for one another's game. East in particular has been known to speculate that West got into the gene pool while the lifeguard was not watching. But he got his comeuppance in today's deal.

After East opened a tactical strong no-trump, South elected to overcall in spades, and subsequently was not going to let the chance of a vulnerable game escape him.

West led his singleton diamond, which East won with the ace to return the suit-preference two, ruffed by West. A club to East's ace saw the diamond queen ruffed by declarer's ace. What should West discard?

Had West discarded a club, declarer would have cashed the club queen, ruffed a club with the spade nine, played a spade back to his ace, and ruffed another club with the spade king. Now declarer would simply have had to cash the heart ace, ruff a heart back to hand, and draw trumps. The clubs would all be good.

It is no better if West discards a heart, because declarer changes tack and ruffs two hearts in hand to set up that suit.

However, West found the right defense when he underruffed the spade ace. (It spoiled the performance a little when he tried to gather in the trick, thinking South had ruffed low.) Declarer now did not have the entries to set up dummy's hearts, and he could not ruff three clubs in the dummy without letting East score his lowly spade five.

ANSWER: Your partner's call is encouraging but not forcing, and you have a minimum hand, but you should still raise to two spades. Since you have stronger bids available, this is more of a courtesy raise than a real game try, and its purpose is almost as much to keep the opponents out as it is to invite game.
