T.F. County investigators say nabs meet sheriff's mandate

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office authorities say they are busting more drug delivery crimes around schools at the order of their new boss, Sheriff Tom Carter, who campaigned last fall on the pledge.

Since taking office this year, Carter has doubled the county's criminal investigation force from two to four. On Tuesday those undercover officers piled out from a room, off-limits to the public in their new basement bureau on Shoshone Avenue.

They asked that cameras be shut-off and their names not be disclosed, citing safety concerns.

"In the last four and a half months, we've approximately doubled the amount of cases that are drug related, than we had done the previous year," said an undercover senior investigator with the sheriff's office who handled the school area drug cases. "We have a mandate from the new sheriff to really attack the drug problem."

This week the sheriff's office gave the Times-News some numbers it says show how well Carter's administration is fighting a war on drugs — especially near the county's school zones.

Headstone found in Murtaugh

Evidence turned over to county prosecutor

HOW TO HELP

If you have pictures of the cemetery that might help authorities, call the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office at 208-736-4107.

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Not so long ago, the headstone was in its proper place at the Artesian City Cemetery on a patch of ground about two miles south of Murtaugh Lake.

Now the headstone along with its base is evidence in the custody of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. The headstone was located by sheriff's detectives on Tuesday afternoon as they were looking through debris removed from the cemetery, according to the sheriff's office.

The discovery of the headstone is the latest turn in a controversy that erupted in Murtaugh after workers uprooted trees and bulldozed weeds at the cemetery in late April. That work, led by a farmer named Darrell Funk, caused some residents to allege that gravestones were disturbed in the process.

As a result, deputies began investigating the Managers of closed car enterprises to pay their own lawyer fees

Two former general managers are off the hook in KeyBank's multi-million dollar lawsuit against a shuttered automotive enterprise in Twin Falls.

The bank in February took up suit against RLS Inc., or Hertz of Magic Valley, Robert Latham Sr., Robert Latham Jr., Tracy

Frank, Scott Reaves and local finance company 1-800 Finance Inc. The Lathams in Idaho operated Latham Motors in downtown Twin Falls, which closed in October, and Hertz of Magic Valley, which opened in 2000 under the franchise name RLS Inc.

Countdown for Canyon Ridge

Workers finishing work before school opens in August

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

At most schools, work slows down a bit during the summertime.

That's not the case for Canyon Ridge High School in Twin Falls, which will open for its first year of school this fall. There are still tasks left such as putting in seating in the auditorium, window trim and floor coverings in classrooms.

Semi-trucks are scheduled to begin arriving on July 13 with loads of furniture — desks, chairs and library books. More than 50 semi-trucks will be coming with loads of furniture and supplies for the school.

"At this point in time, unless something unforeseen happens, we should meet our schedule," said Dale Thornsberry, facilities manager for the school district.

He estimated that the construction work should be done in three to five weeks, with crews available for touch-up and repair work afterwards.

"It's really wrapping up the loose ends," Thornsberry said.

In 2006, the cost of Canyon Ridge was estimated at about $37.6 million. School district officials now put the cost at $47.4 million,

'Embarrassing' snafu puts list of U.S. nuclear sites online

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The government's inadvertent and red-faced Internet posting of a 266-page list of U.S. nuclear sites provided a one-step guide for anyone wanting details about such sensitive information.

Obama administration officials said Wednesday the document contained no classified material about nuclear weapons. They contended the locations and other details already were available from public sources.

Energy Secretary Steven Chu said "a snafu" led to the online posting. "A little embarrassing," he acknowledged.

The document, stamped "highly confidential safeguards sensitive," made it onto the Government Printing Office's Web site — and why that happened was not immediately clear. A newsletter that focuses on government secrecy quickly picked up on it. The printing office removed the document when informed "about the potential sensitive nature" of the list, the agency said.

By then it was too late.

The information, compiled for international nuclear inspectors, is a compilation of hundreds of civilian nuclear sites, along with maps and details of the facilities. The material includes sites for uranium storage, nuclear fuel fabrication plants and nuclear research facilities.

"It's an easy locator for civilian sites," Thomas D'Agostino, head of the National Nuclear Security Administration, told Sen. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., when questions about the disclosure came up at a Senate Armed Services subcommittee hearing.

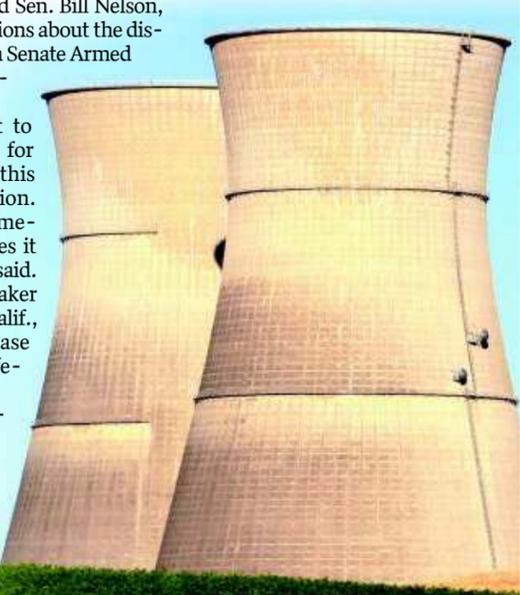

"We don't want to make this easier for people to get this kind of information. Unfortunately something like this makes it easier," D'Agostino said.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said the release exposed lax safeguards.

She asked congressional investigators to review the incident.

Chu said he was stepping up security at one of the sites, a storage facility for highly enriched uranium at the Y-12 Oak Ridge complex in Tennessee. "That's of great concern," he told a House Appropriations subcommittee when asked about the disclosure.

November victory over longstanding former sheriff Wayne Tousley.

Authorities this week declined to say the exact amount of methamphetamine involved in five arrests at four homes. Charging documents filed in court also don't say.

But last year, there was only one case by the sheriff's office where a sentencing enhancement was recommended to prosecutors for trafficking drugs within 1,000 feet of a school, said Lori Nebeker, spokeswoman for the office.

There are five cases so far this year under Carter, she said.

Punishment for trafficking drugs at a location up to about three football fields away from a school can mean a heftier prison term of at least five years under Idaho Code.

It is unclear how often people in Twin Falls County are charged and convicted of the trafficking enhancement in school areas.

The state's online court system does not log that, according to the Twin Falls 5th District Court Clerk's Office. Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs also did not provide those numbers Wednesday when requested by the Times-News.

According to court records, prosecutors are not using the enhancement against two of five people arrested this year by the sheriff's office for drug delivery crimes near schools. Here's a run-down:

• March 9: Jennifer

Smith, 33, arrested for two counts of delivery of a controlled substance at 320 Main St. in Buhl, near Popplewell Elementary. Prosecutors charged her with the enhancement and she has a July 13 pretrial set.

• March 24: Wendy Chandler, 49, arrested for delivery of a controlled substance and possession of a controlled substance at 608 Parnell St. in Buhl, across from Buhl High School. Prosecutors charged her with the enhancement and she has a June 16 plea hearing.

• March 24: Fred Grafee, 36, arrested for possession of a controlled substance and two counts of delivery of a controlled substance also at 608 Parnell St. in Buhl. He pleaded guilty to a count of delivery and prosecutors dropped the other charges against him including an enhancement, with a sentencing hearing set for July 6.

• May 7: Laura Maritt, 55, arrested for possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver and possession of a controlled substance at 628 8th Ave. in Buhl, also near the high school. Prosecutors did not charge her with the enhancement. She pleaded not guilty and has a June 5 preliminary hearing set.

• May 27: William Harvey, 31, arrested for possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver at 332 Jefferson St. in Kimberly, three blocks from the elementary school. He is accused of the enhancement and has a June 5 preliminary hearing scheduled.

Oak Ridge holds large quantities of highly enriched uranium, which can be used to fashion a nuclear weapon. The department plans to move the material into $549 million high-security warehouse to be competed next year.

"There's no secret or classified information that's been compromised. ... The sites and everything are public knowledge," Chu told reporters.

Steven Aftergood, director of the Federation of American Scientists' government secrecy project, which distributed the document, said he was perplexed about all the attention surrounding the disclosure.

"Some people are painting this as a road map for terrorists, which it is not," Aftergood said. "It is simply a listing of the numerous nuclear research sites and the programs that are under way. So it poses no security threat whatsoever."

In addition to the Y-12 facility, the document lists facilities at the Hanford nuclear site in Washington state and various civilian nuclear fuel processing sites, including one that produces nuclear fuel for the Navy.

Beth Hayden, a spokeswoman for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said the agency reviewed the document as it relates to civilian facilities with NRC licenses.

"We are confident that information of direct national security significance was not compromised," she said.

case to see if the work illegally desecrated the cemetery.

In a May 4 interview with the Times-News, Murtaugh Mayor Dee Hunsaker said he asked Funk to take trees out around the outside of the cemetery. At the time, Hunsaker had said trees were removed, but insisted that no headstones disappeared due to Funk's work and no graves were disturbed.

That assertion was contradicted after Tuesday's discovery by detectives, who looked through the debris with help from Funk.

The debris is away from the cemetery and east of Murtaugh Lake.

Hunsaker did not return two calls for comment on Wednesday, and neither did Funk.

Capt. Don Newman of the sheriff's office said that officers are done looking through debris, adding that it will be up to the prosecutor to review the case and make a decision. He said that anyone who has pictures of the cemetery would help authorities put the headstone back in its resting place.

"What we want to do is document where headstones are," he said.

For Mychel Matthews, a Murtaugh resident concerned about the issue, the discovery of the headstone is a confirmation of what she and others already believed.

"My reaction to it is we knew it had to be there," she said. "It either had to be there in the debris pile or it had to be buried in the cemetery. It just proves our allegation of desecration."

Matthews said that the community needs to focus on healing.

"The main thing now is getting the healing started because this has been a real thorn in the community," she said.

It's also been hard for the community to get much of an answer from their elected officials. Murtaugh city officials at a council meeting on May 13 didn't answer questions from the audience after the city attorney, Bill Hollifield, advised them not to, citing the ongoing investigation.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said he hasn't seen the evidence yet and hasn't made a decision about whether further investigation or charges are warranted. He did not have a timeline for when a decision will be made.

"Sometimes it's five minutes," he said. "Sometimes it's longer than that."

citing inflation and higher prices of construction materials that happened since that time.

On the administrative side, there are also school policies to develop such as the student handbook, grading and discipline procedures. There also is still one teacher to hire, along with cooks and custodians.

"We're really close on most of the staffing that needs to be done," Principal Brady Dickinson said.

The school's first staff meeting is Thursday, when employees will receive school maps. The public is invited to a grand opening on Aug. 14, with classes starting on Aug. 24.

"We're gearing up for the first day of school," Dickinson said.

Other construction projects in the works for the school district this summer:

• Bids will be gathered this month for a multipurpose room at Sawtooth Elementary School, with construction likely beginning in July.

• Construction crews are also finishing up work on the west entrance remodeling project at Twin Falls High School, which will provide a new concession area at the gymnasium lobby and add locker rooms and restrooms.

the defendants violated credit agreements by wholesaling cars, didn't repay the bank millions by "selling out of trust," denied inspections, and violated limits on older car sales.

But on Tuesday, allegations against Reaves, Frank and 1-800 Finance Inc. were dismissed and may not be re-filed. Reaves and Frank must pay their own lawyer costs, though, according to court records.

Their shared lawyer, John Fitzgerald of Twin Falls, e-mailed the Times-News a copy of the dismissal on Wednesday but did not respond to a request for comment.

Frank was a general manager of Hertz of Magic Valley. Reaves was general manager of Latham Motors, owned by RLS Inc., and a registered agent of 1-800 Finance Inc., according to court records.

Meanwhile, others named in the lawsuit appear to be fighting it.

Latham Sr.'s lawyer, Richard Greener, of Boise, requested a trial and slapped down counter-claims in court filings this week for the $6.4 million lawsuit from KeyBank.

County deputies recently went on a collection craze, rounding up dozens of vehicles on behalf of the bank. Greener says in court records that the bank went too far and destroyed a viable business — Hertz of Magic Valley.

"(KeyBank) repossessed all of the motor vehicles being used in that business, together with furniture, equipment, fixtures, and/or other assets necessary to the continued operation of the business," according to court records. "As a result of this conduct, RLS was required to close the Hertz of Magic Valley business."

Frank recently testified in the lawsuit on March 30 that KeyBank jeopardized the Latham's rental car business and he said the bank wrongly took 35 to 40 cars that the dealership owns.

"They obviously picked up all of the rental vehicles, and it, it seriously jeopardized an ongoing business of renting vehicles," Frank told the court. "It was a very valuable franchise that was going to go by the wayside."

A status hearing in the lawsuit is set for July 6 in Twin Falls.

North Elko gold mine closed due to mercury emissions

By Scott Somner
Associated Press writer

RENO, Nev. — State environmental regulators have ordered a northeast Nevada gold mine to shut down because it failed to meet a deadline to install equipment to reduce mercury emissions.

The Jerritt Canyon Mine, about 50 miles north of Elko, was directed to cease operations by midnight May 30, the Nevada Division of Environmental Protection confirmed Monday.

The Environmental Protection Division had issued an order in March 2008 requiring Queenstake Resources USA of Elko — a subsidiary of the Canada-based Yukon-Nevada Gold Corp. — to install new emission control systems by the end of that year at the mine.

The initial order had followed a yearlong investigation into mercury emissions. Mercury is a toxic metal that can damage the brain and nervous system.

Queenstake voluntarily stopped mining and processing ore in August 2008, and cited financial reasons.

State regulators issued a new order in March of this year that allowed the company to restart processing if it complied with most of the state's environmental requirements and pledged to install the mercury control system by May 30 on the so-called "roasters" that are used to superheat the gold-bearing ore.

As part of that process, naturally occurring mercury in the rock is converted into toxic vapor, which becomes airborne.

Company officials notified the state that they would not meet the deadline because of a delay in fabricating fiberglass ductwork.

Greg Remer, chief of the Nevada Bureau of Air Pollution Control, said in a letter to Queenstake chief operating officer Graham Dixon that approval of the mine's startup was based on assurances that the May 30 deadline would be met.

"Queenstake has not yet demonstrated compliance with the mercury emission limit specified by the order," he said.

Before its closure last August, the mine employed about 400 workers.

It was among a number in Nevada blamed by the Idaho Conservation League for contaminating Idaho water with mercury — leading to fish-consumption advisories in a number of reservoirs and lakes. Justin Hayes, ICL program director and the person who spearheaded the group's mercury work, in April questioned why Jerritt Canyon was allowed to restart without roasting controls in place.

Environmental Protection Division spokeswoman Jill Lufrano said the mine cannot reopen until the state-of-the-art emission controls are installed.

"As far as we know, there is no definite time line for that to be accomplished," Lufrano said.

Lufrano has said the new system will reduce mercury air emissions to 175 pounds per year from the 1,700 pounds reported in 2007.

Nicole Sanches, a spokeswoman for Yukon-Nevada Gold at its headquarters in Vancouver, British Columbia, said the company no longer was processing ore at Jerritt Canyon as a result of the state's order.

In April, Dixon said the company intended to produce roughly 2,000 ounces of gold a week for the next year, or roughly 90,000 ounces through the end of the year from 800,000 tons of stockpiled ore. Some of the ore is from Newmont Mining Corp.'s operations that Jerritt Canyon was under contract to mill.

Staff writer Nate Poppino contributed to this report.

Police searching for mother, daughter

Times-News

Twin Falls police said Wednesday they are searching for a mother and her 23-year-old daughter who have been missing for at least three days.

The women, Laura Michelle Carlson, 48, of Twin Falls and her daughter, Stephanie Erin Carlson, were last seen in Boise on May 31, city police said.

Laura Carlson Stephanie Carlson

Foul play is not suspected, but the women were supposed to arrive in Twin Falls on May 31 and never showed up, according to a press release Wednesday from police.

Police say Laura Carlson has arranged spontaneous camping trips before.

Authorities don't know where the women are or where they may be going, and want anyone with information on them to call police at 208-735-4357.

Laura Carlson is 5 feet 7 inches, 160 pounds, with brown hair and green eyes. Stephanie Carlson is 5 feet 3 inches, 140 pounds, with brown hair and brown eyes.

Police said they were driving a gray, 1997 Mitsubishi Montero, with license plate: 2TG6530.

Burley council won't pay for telephone pole shift

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A month ago, the Burley City Council voted to pay for the relocation of four poles at the entrance to the Hiland Heights subdivision. Tuesday night, the council unanimously voted against paying for the relocation of a pole in a man's driveway — even though he didn't ask the city to pay for it.

When Roger Hansen addressed the council two weeks ago, he appeared to be asking the city to pay for moving the pole in his driveway. He clarified his position Tuesday.

"I didn't want you to pay for it. I wanted it equitable," he said, referring to the disparity between the city's bid of $1,670 for his pole compared to $400 for each of the poles at the subdivision.

The subdivision poles had to be moved so that they wouldn't be sitting in the middle of a sidewalk, which planning and zoning required from developer Brent Mitchell in an area where utility poles existed. If he poured concrete around the poles, which he agreed to do at his own expense, a safety hazard would arise.

"Your circumstance in your driveway is quite a bit different than the right-of-way that we need to maintain for the public to use," Councilman Gordy Hansen said.

As for the disparity in cost, Councilman Hansen said, "They are different jobs." Dile Monson, head of Burley's electrical department, told Roger Hansen that if the city crew can move his pole for less than $1,670, the difference will be refunded.

Jerome adds city services for businesses at Crossroads Point

By John Plestina
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome City Council agreed Tuesday to provide water to the Flying J Travel Stop and other commercial property on the east side of U.S. Highway 93.

The council's affirmative vote also authorized the city to annex the site at Crossroads Point, but that might not happen for 10 years.

City Administrator Ben Marchant explained that Crossroads Point, which would be Jerome's first land actuation east of U.S. 93, must become adjacent to the city limits which are currently about five miles from the site.

"It could be 10 years or more," he said.

There is current city water and sewer service in close proximity to Flying J on the west side of U.S. 93.

Marchant called the waterline a natural corridor for development because residents and businesses could plug in to city services.

Urban Renewal Agency Executive Director Scott

Bybee told the council its affirmative vote will also turn a private water system and infrastructure into a public system, once a booster station and tank are installed.

The city's current bond bank funds would finance the booster station and tank.

In turn, the city will receive a deed to water rights and infrastructure providing a backup water supply for the city.

Developer Millard, Sligar and Stanley (MSS) had sought the agreement with the city. Flying J Inc., an international chain of fuel retailers and travel stops, owns and operates the Flying J at Crossroads Point.

In other business, Assistant City Administrator Micah Austin presented a five-year revenue and expenditure forecast to the council, adding that some spending must be cut as deficits start to exceed revenues.

Austin said he used a 10-year history of revenue and expenditures to make his forecast.

"Revenues will exceed expenditures for the next four years," he said, but in 2013, that will change with more money going out than is coming into city coffers unless the City Council makes some changes in its spending habits.

The bad news for the council was that governmental expenditures are now projected to exceed revenues in both 2013 and 2014 at current trends. Idaho Code limits the city to only spend from deficits if the funds were retained from prior fiscal years.

"There is no such thing as a forecast that is exactly right," Austin conceded.

He added that he was uncomfortable with forecasts for grant revenue. "I don't know how stable grants are," he said. "We don't know if those grants are going to be there."

Austin cautioned that deficits projected for 2013 and 2014 could be worse than projected if the current fiscal year's revenues are lower than anticipated due to the economic downturn.

Marchant called the forecast a "powerful planning tool. It's like a crystal ball we can look into for the next five years," he said.

He added that those forecasts could be beneficial when developing a capital improvement plan and a strategic plan.

Shoshone council OKs liquor license for Jerome caterer

By John Plestina
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — With a less than unanimous vote, the Shoshone City Council Tuesday authorized a beer and wine license for the Jerome Event Center to cater an event at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds.

The issue of debate was whether to allow a non-local business to obtain a license to sell alcoholic beverages in Shoshone. Jerome Event Center is a private catering business that sought the license for an event at the rodeo grounds this Sunday.

Approval came on a 3-1 vote with Dan Pierson casting the lone dissenting vote. Mayor J.R. Churchman was absent.

"Do you think we can operate the Columbia up north in Blaine County?" said City Attorney E. Scott Paul. "The statute is silent as to whether or not you can take a license from one jurisdiction and move it to another jurisdiction."

He added that a bar doing business in Shoshone has to go through the process of obtaining a license locally. "So why should someone else be allowed to come in and sell alcohol," Paul said.

It comes down to local businesses being regulated by local people, he said.

Police Chief Jon Daubner said there were no fights or serious problems at the same event last year. There were, however, noise complaints.

In other business, the council revisited the proposed North Park Condominium Project after tabling the controversial development May 19.

The developer, Laurie Maher of Spokane, Wash., attended Tuesday's meeting to present plan changes intended to satisfy city concerns about infrastructure, including road access for fire trucks, water meters for each unit and the water bill going to a condominium association.

Maher proposes to build four condominium townhouse units at the north end of Shoshone. She has sought to amend an existing development agreement with the city that had been set to expire this week.

The council extended a development agreement 60 days and will hold a public hearing July 7 on issues related to the development and proposed rezoning to allow multi-family housing.

Maher told the council she wants to include a model home with a sales office.

She also said the multi-family condominium proposal came partly because the units could sell for between $120,000 and $140,000, a price range she said would attract buyers.

Road construction on U.S. 93 going 24 hours a day

Reconstruction of a portion of U.S. Highway 93 north of Richfield moved into overdrive this week with the start of a 24-hour work schedule.

U.S. 93 is reduced to one lane from the north end of Richfield to its intersection with Pagari Road (between mileposts 182 and 189) for road construction, the Idaho Transportation Department announced in a press release. Crews are blasting and excavating rock for realignment of the highway.

Drivers are asked to watch for flaggers. A pilot car will guide traffic through the construction zone, and a 45-mph speed limit is in effect.

Delays of 15 minutes can be expected, with longer delays possible during blasting operations. Drivers should be prepared for varied lane changes.

In addition, a 12-foot width restriction remains in effect throughout the construction zone.

Western Construction Inc. of Boise is the contractor for the $3.5 million project.

Because of the width restrictions on U.S. 20 west of Carey, any permitted over-legal loads should use U.S. 93.

Drivers are required give 24-hour notice to ITD in Shoshone (208-886-7800).

City of Rocks Backcountry Byway road work begins

Reconstruction of a 4.5-mile section of the City of Rocks Backcountry Byway near Malta began this week, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

The highway reconstruction will begin at Idaho Highway 77 at Connor Corner and extend south to Elba. It will include bridge work over Cassia Creek and realignment of a small stretch of the highway.

Drivers can expect short delays during working hours of 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. Drivers are reminded to use caution when traveling through the work zone and to follow all temporary traffic control signs. A pilot car will guide motorists through the project during working hours.

Work is expected to be complete by the end of September.

Jack B. Parsons Co. of Pocatello is the contractor for the $2.6 million project. ITD is administering the Federal Aid project that is sponsored by Cassia County. The byway is the primary route to Elba, Almo and the City of Rocks National Reserve.

Dietrich studies new water conservation policy

By John Plestina
Times-News correspondent

DIETRICH — As an incentive to make people think about water conservation, the Dietrich City Council wants to make it more expensive to dump city water on grass.

A new water rate structure is in the offing, but the city is not ready to hold a required public hearing yet.

The need to put a damper on drinking water going on lawns became acute when the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality found deficiencies in the well at Dietrich's K-12 school.

That part of the equation appears resolved. Councilman Daryl Ballard told the council Monday night that the school district is now using canal water to irrigate a majority of the football field.

With a need to disconnect the school well from the system, the city capped the line Saturday and installed two check valves to prevent back flow from the school.

"If you don't use water to irrigate, (the flat rate for water) is going to cost you $60," said Mayor Don Heiken.

The school district has been paying a flat rate of $92.50 monthly for water.

"Our well was running 18 to 19 hours a day to keep up," he said.

To help solve a need for a new well, the council heard a proposal from Keller Associates, an engineering firm that is vying for a contract to design a new well and secure financing for the city.

"What to do to find additional water for the city," said Engineer Charles Brockway, consulting with Keller Associates. "Rule No. 1 in terms of water supply, you never have enough."

The city has two existing water rights. The oldest dates to 1910 and a newer right was issued in 1992.

Irrigation is permitted with those water rights. Irrigation is not permitted with new water rights.

While there is a moratorium on new water rights, municipalities are exempt.

Brockway told the council that they would probably find water between 300 and 400 feet with 500 feet being a recommended depth.

"So the water is way down there, and you've got to go get it," he said.

Law & Disorder...

... in Cassia County

From selected May 24 police reports:

Resisting arrest:

While responding to a fight in Burley, police encountered two males — Francisco Arrevalos, 37, and David Arausa, 22 — who allegedly ran from Deputy Brice Nelson and Deputy Jarrod Thompson.

"They didn't stop. Both looked back at me while I was perusing (sic) them," Nelson's report reads. The suspects ran into a house, according to the report, and were eventually found. Nelson told Arrevalos to come outside.

"I told him he needed to come out on the lawn and talk to me and he said no. The male turned around and tried to close the door as he went back into the house. I pushed the door back open and told the male if he didn't stop I would Taser him. Frank didn't stop," the report reads.

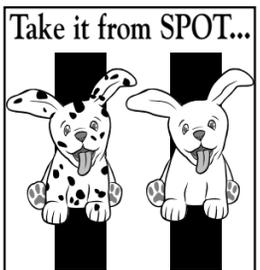

Nelson fired his Taser into Arrevalos' back. "Frank fell to the ground and landed on his back. I told Frank to turn over as soon as the current stopped ... I told Frank to place his hands behind his back and he put his hands behind his head," the report continues. Arrevalos was arrested for resistance and obstruction.

About an hour later, dispatch received a 911 call about a man hiding in a shed. Thompson responded to the location and found Arausa in the shed. "I could see two legs sticking out from under a bench," the report reads. "David was wearing blue denim pants and brown shoes with no shirt."

Otter cracks down on illegal workers — or looks like he is

Immigration reform, Idaho style? Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s last week ordered state agencies that receive federal stimulus dollars — and contractors with whom they do business — to prove they are employing only legally documented workers.

Sounds good, certainly. The specter of illegals competing with the state’s 53,000 unemployed citizens for scarce jobs should anger every Idahoan.

But we’d be surprised if there are more than a handful of illegals on the state payroll. Contractors are a different story — construction work, for example, attracts a significant number of undocumented workers — but the state Division of Human Resources simply doesn’t have the resources to make sure work papers submitted by the employees of state contractors aren’t forged.

The bigger question is whether the governor’s executive order brings Idaho closer to holding employers legally liable for hiring illegal employees.

State Sen. Mike Jorgensen, R-Coeur d’Alene, plans to introduce legislation in the next session of the Legislature requiring employers to check the legal status of every worker using a free Internet service run by federal agencies.

Which makes agriculture very nervous, and justifiably so.

Farmers and dairymen aren’t equipped to determine whether an immigration document or personal identification is authentic.

Yes, they should be required to use due diligence — and the Internet services available for verifying documents. But if the issue is fraud, employers are going to need more help from the government than they’re getting now.

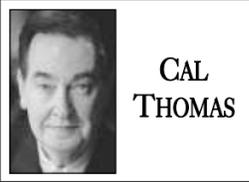

Maybe Otter’s executive order is the first step toward doing just that. But for the moment, it looks suspiciously like politics.

Our view: State agencies probably aren’t the first place Idaho should look for illegal workers.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

See the USA in your govt car

“See the USA in your Chevrolet
 America is asking you to call.
 Drive your Chevrolet through the USA
 America’s the greatest land of all.”

CAL THOMAS

Fifty years ago, those words set to music each week on television’s old “Dinah Shore Show” reflected an America and an automobile industry that is no more. That time and that industry were laid to rest this week when General Motors filed for bankruptcy and the government effectively nationalized GM and Chrysler after wasting billions of our tax dollars on a failed bailout.

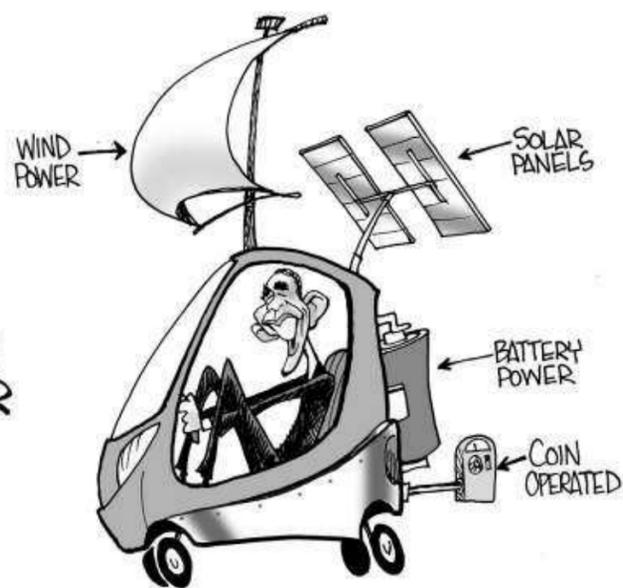

Despite disclaimers from President Obama that the government doesn’t want to be in the car business, it is hard to see what it has bought with our tax dollars other than two of what used to be known as “the big three.” Government by default or determination will choose the types of cars the companies it owns will make. Government will buy a lot of them because not enough customers will unless they are made offers they can’t refuse, not by a car salesman in a loud sport coat, but by a government bureaucrat in a suit.

It’s difficult to let go of an American dream. When I was growing up, every kid wanted to drive his own car. Our frugal parents (who had just one car) would let us drive it, but with restrictions, including a set time to bring the car back in the same pristine condition in which we found it.

A car was a right of passage. It conveyed independence and status. Each September we salivated at the prospect of new models.

There was always a big buildup and we’d go to the Chevy (or Ford) dealer early on the morning they were for sale. Sometimes they would be covered with sheets and a dramatic unveiling would take place.

TV commercials would show parts of new models in a kind of striptease before their debut. Some believe the models between 1955 and 1959, especially the 1957 Chevy Bel Air and the 1958 Impala, are unsurpassed, though Ford devotees have their Mustangs and T-Birds. Pontiac’s GTO and some Dodge and Plymouth models were also great.

Chrysler had the Imperial, which resembled a boat with running lights and The New Yorker for “old rich people.” And then there was the one beyond our reach, but not beyond our dreams: the Cadillac. The song “Pink Cadillac” became a hit, in part because we saw Elvis in one.

America’s relationship with its cars has rightly been called a love affair. Though some have tried to replicate the smell of a new car in spray cans, there is nothing quite like the feeling of sinking into new faux leather and later, if you could afford it, the real thing.

Much, if not all of those thrills will be gone, thanks to greed by the unions, government overregulation and bad management. The customers, who once were always right, have been cheated.

All one has to do is look at government-made cars to see they are about as attractive as government art, government architecture, or many other things government does poorly. The Skoda (when the Czechoslovakia communist party made them — they’re nice now thanks to free market capitalism) had its own jokes: “How much is a Skoda worth with a full tank of gas?” Answer: “Twice as much.” East Germany’s Trabant, a major polluter, was little more than a two-cycle engine encased in the thinnest veneer and the old Soviet Union cars were about as appealing as a Siberian winter. These are the kinds of cars governments have produced.

President Obama says all of those laid-off autoworkers will have to “sacrifice” for the sake of their children and grandchildren. So much for their American Dream. If a Republican president had said that, he would have been denounced as insensitive and uncaring.

“On a highway, or a road along the levee
 Performance is sweeter
 Nothing can beat her Life is completer in a Chevy.”

Not anymore.
 “Bye-bye Miss American Pie; drove my Chevy to the levee but the levee was dry.”

This is the day GM died.

Now’s the time to start work on Highway 93/30 bypass

As the legislative representatives for District 23, in which the Pole Line Alternate Route is to be located, we have followed with interest the arguments by some that the project should be delayed due to alleged inadequate notice and other considerations. We disagree, and believe the project should go forward this summer as planned.

The Pole Line Alternate Route for Highway 93 has been in the planning and development phase for more than two decades. The first phase, already completed, has improved traffic flow on the northwest side of Twin Falls and has positioned the city for further growth and expansion. A new hospital, high school, Wal-Mart and Walgreens are just a few of the commercial and public facilities under way in the area.

While future values are not easy to firmly predict, it is likely that development of the 4 square miles around the Grandview

READER COMMENT
 Bert Brackett, Stephen Hartgen and Jim Patrick

Avenue and Pole Line Road intersection could result in more than a billion dollars of development in the next decade on what is now mostly farm ground. It is apparent that the alternate route will bring further residential and commercial development in the northwest area, as well as provide an efficient transportation corridor to Filer, Buhl and beyond. As such, the bypass is an important piece of Twin Falls County’s future economic development.

The proposed route for the bypass will track the current Pole Line Road, west from the new hospital, across Rock Creek via a new bridge, and then to 2400 Road, where the route will swing south to connect with Highway 93 at the overpass of Highway 30. The new road will be what highway planners call a “super two” — that is a two-lane highway, but with limited access, wider shoulders, and allowing for higher vehicle volumes. A road of this size can easily carry up to 15,000 vehicles a day, way above the current vehicle volume.

At the intersection where the bypass turns south at 2400 Road, the highway will be engineered to allow for future development, including potentially a new bridge across the Snake River Canyon, two miles to the north. While not in the present project plan, such a bridge is likely in the future, although perhaps not for two decades or more.

Most of the controversy about the bypass involves the closure of the Pole Line Road at the “dip” over Rock Creek for 18 months to allow construction of a new bridge. While the closure is not ideal, alternatives are either too costly or not feasible.

We were not particularly keen on the Rock Creek bridge idea ourselves; we would have preferred to have seen the “dip” filled to the level of the canyon, which would have been cheaper than the bridge, which has an estimated cost of about $10 million. But federal restrictions precluded simply bringing the “dip” up to the grade level by adding more fill; indeed, the existing crossing will be scooped out and returned to its natural creek riparian habitat with a rim-to-rim bridge providing the crossing of Rock Creek.

The project is now scheduled for formal bid advertisement about June 15, with a start date planned for late summer or early fall. Also, it has been in the agenda at virtually every monthly meeting of the Twin Falls County Transportation Planning Committee for years. In short, it is “shovel ready” and about to start.

The money to do the project is coming from federal stimulus dollars. As reported recently by Darrell Manning, Idaho Transportation Board chairman, “any delays to this project would jeopardize the stimulus funding. No other funding is available for this project.”

We believe the project should now begin.

Sen. Bert Brackett (R-Three Creek) and Rep. Stephen Hartgen (R-Twin Falls) have represented legislative District 23 since last year. Rep. Jim Patrick (R-Twin Falls) has represented the district since 2007. District 23 covers Owyhee County and most of Twin Falls County.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... NIC's blunder

Coeur d'Alene Press

Let's say you're a retiree living in Kootenai County on a fixed income ...

You received a kick to the gut via the mail last week, when you learned that, in all likelihood, your most important investment — your home — is worth less today than it was a year ago. And it might have been worth less last year than it was the year before.

You then received another kick to the gut ... North Idaho College is raising its share of your property taxes by 3 percent. No big deal? Well, you thought about it and you remembered that NIC raised its portion of property taxes this time last year, then tacked on an additional $2.5 million in previously uncollected property taxes so it could purchase property, and now the college is taking another 3 percent property tax increase on top of that. For roughly one 12-month period, that's a lot of additional dollars you're being forced to pay your community college.

But don't feel too sorry for yourself; others have it worse. Pity the Kootenai County property owner who lost his job and scraped together what he could to attend NIC so he might eventually embark on a new career. That guy has been hit not just with the big property tax increases, but with a 10.9 percent tuition hike that goes into effect this fall, too.

If our local college is setting any kind of tax standard, we're all in trouble. At a time when so many residents have lost their jobs or taken serious pay cuts while their assets have lost considerable value, the one thing they cannot bear is the weight of a greater tax burden.

... we're disappointed in college trustees' decision not to make the cuts that would have spared taxpayers this latest tax increase, and we implore the area's other taxing entities to make the same difficult budget decisions that their constituents are facing every day.

... no good deed goes unpunished

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Two sitting members of the city councils in Ketchum and Sun Valley have declared that they will not run for re-election. The two were the point men for the idea of merging the cities of Ketchum and Sun Valley.

They argued that such a merger would streamline operations in the two cities, save a lot of money in the long run and unify the northern Blaine County geography for visitors and locals alike who know it simply as Sun Valley.

... The idea looked like something the two cities might want to take a look at over time, with thoughtful consideration about what the ramifications might be.

Yet, the public would need time to absorb the idea because it challenged local "tradition" and "culture." We put these words in quotes because it's quite remarkable that two cities separated by a short three miles, facing the same mountain, with identical tourist economies and similar demographics can be two entirely different worlds. But official reaction to the idea was immediate — and hard. The two council members, Charles Conn and David Chase, were vilified by one mayor and left to walk the political high wire by another.

In one public meeting, they were characterized as people who wanted to open the doors of the safe in Sun Valley to the looting of rubble from Ketchum and the rampages of barbarians.

Misstatement was heaped upon misunderstanding and soaked in vitriol, and the two councilmen dropped the whole idea.

Now the two are dropping out of local politics altogether. It's too bad they couldn't take the heat in the kitchen because as political kitchens go, this one wasn't really that hot, though it may have seemed so to political novices.

It's a shame they're bowing out. The idea they promoted may have been the right idea at the wrong time or the wrong idea altogether. But it was an idea at a time when the Sun Valley area, the state and the nation need to look at as many new ideas — or resurrect useful old ideas — as they can.

... NRA conquers all

Lewiston Tribune

... Rather than merely reject more restrictions on gun rights, the politicians on Capitol Hill last week actually expanded them. They passed a bill allowing people to carry concealed and loaded guns into the national parks.

This measure cleared the House 279-147 and the Senate 67-29.

And it represents far more than just tweaking a 1982 Reagan-era regulation mandating national park visitors to unload and store their weapons. Reagan's rule was a compromise. Our national parks started out in the 1890s banning weapons entirely.

... consider the list of Senate Democrats who lined up behind this idea: Montana's Max Baucus and Jon Tester, Colorado's Mark Udall and Michael Bennet, Nevada's Harry Reid, and Virginia's Mark Warner and Jim Webb.

If nothing else, that should tell you that future gun control laws are a non-starter.

So should last year's U.S. Supreme Court 5-4 ruling, which not only struck down a Washington, D.C., gun ordinance but also recognized an individual's right to keep and bear arms under the Second Amendment.

Advocates of reinstating the Clinton-era ban on many assault weapons know they lack the votes to prevail.

Even the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence is focusing its energies on the comparatively modest goal of extending the criminal background checks now imposed on people who purchase weapons at retail stores to those who buy them at gun shows.

So why do some gun dealers have empty shelves for ammunition? Why are ammo supplies so short that police officers in some jurisdictions around the country reportedly have cut back on training to save bullets?

You could blame groups like the National Rifle Association. They continue to market hyperbolic fear campaigns. But that's part of the game. Many lobbies and political campaigns trigger anxiety in order to round up members and contributions.

But how do you explain consumers falling for it?

Health-care reform? Not if industry can help it

That didn't take long. Less than two weeks have passed since much of the medical-industrial complex made a big show of working with President Barack Obama on health care reform — and the double-crossing is already well under way. Indeed, it's now clear that even as they met with the president, pretending to be cooperative, insurers were gearing up to play the same destructive role they did the last time health reform was on the agenda.

So here's the question: Will Obama gloss over the reality of what's happening, and try to preserve the appearance of cooperation? Or will he honor his own pledge, made back during the campaign, to go on the offensive against special interests if they stand in the way of reform?

The story so far: On May 11 the White House called a news conference to announce that major players in health care, including the American Hospital Association and the lobbying group America's Health Insurance Plans, had come together to support a national effort to control health care costs.

The fact sheet on the meeting, one has to say, was classic Obama in its message of post-partisan-ship and, um, hope. "For too long, politics and point-scoring have prevented our country from tackling this growing crisis," it said, adding, "The American people are eager to put the old Washington ways behind them."

But just three days later the hospital association insisted that it had not, in fact, promised what the president said it had promised — that it had made no commitment to the administration's goal of reducing the rate at which health care costs are rising by 1.5 percentage points a year. And the head of the insurance lobby said that the idea was merely to "ramp up" savings, whatever that means.

Meanwhile, the insurance industry is busily lobbying Congress to block one crucial element of health care reform, the public option — that is, offering Americans the right to buy insurance directly from the government as well as from private insurance companies. And at least some insurers are gearing up for a major smear campaign.

On Monday, just a week after the White House photo-op, The Washington Post reported that Blue Cross Blue Shield of North Carolina was preparing to run a series of ads attacking the public option. The planning for this ad campaign must have begun quite some time ago.

The Post has the storyboards for the ads, and they read just like the infamous Harry and Louise ads that helped kill health care reform in 1993. Troubled Americans are shown being denied their choice of doctor, or forced to wait months for appointments, by faceless government bureaucrats. It's a scary image that might make some sense if private health insurance — which these days comes primarily via HMOs — offered all of us free choice of doctors, with no wait for medical procedures. But my health plan isn't like that. Is yours? "We can do a lot better than a government-run health care system," says a voice-over in one of the ads. To which the obvious response is, if that's true, why don't you? Why deny Americans the chance to reject government insurance if it's really that bad?

... none of the reform proposals currently on the table would force people into a government-run insurance plan. At most they would offer Americans the choice of buying into such a plan. And the goal of the insurers is to deny Americans that choice.

For none of the reform proposals currently on the table would force people into a government-run insurance plan. At most they would offer Americans the choice of buying into such a plan.

And the goal of the insurers is to deny Americans that choice.

They fear that many people would prefer a government plan to dealing with private insurance companies that, in the real world as opposed to the world of their ads, are more bureaucratic than any government agency, routinely deny clients their choice of doctor, and often refuse to pay for care.

Which brings us back to Obama.

Back during the Democratic primary campaign, Obama argued that the Clintons had failed in their 1993 attempt to reform health care because they had been insufficiently inclusive. He promised instead to gather all the stakeholders, including the insurance companies, around a "big table."

But what if interest groups showed up at the big table, then blocked reform? Back then, Obama assured voters that he would get tough: "If those insurance companies and drug companies start trying to run ads with Harry and Louise, I'll run my own ads as president. I'll get on television and say 'Harry and Louise are lying.'"

The question now is whether he really meant it.

The medical-industrial complex has called the president's bluff. It polished its image by showing up at the big table and promising cooperation, then promptly went back to doing all it can to block real change. The insurers and the drug companies are, in effect, betting that Obama will be afraid to call them out on their duplicity.

It's up to Obama to prove them wrong.

Judge rules state not in contempt for crowding prison

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A federal judge has declined to hold the state in contempt of court for temporarily overcrowding the Idaho State Correctional Institution after a housing unit was destroyed in a January riot.

But U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill said inmates at the prison can ask the court to hold the state in contempt if prison leaders fail to comply with other long-standing rulings on medical care, diet, overcrowding and other living conditions at the prison.

The ruling issued Thursday is the latest in a lawsuit originally brought in 1984 by then-inmate Walter Balla against the Idaho Department of Correction. Balla alleged that overcrowding and other problems at the Boise prison were inhumane and violated inmates' constitutional rights.

Balla won the lawsuit. Prison officials were required to improve medical care, security, diet and other services for inmates, and implement a disciplinary procedure that insures due process protection.

Over the years, Balla and other inmates contested whether the state was following through with the orders, and in 1987 the court also capped the number of inmates that can be held in certain prison units.

Many subsequent rulings focused on overcrowding. In 2005, U.S. District Judge James Fitzgerald said conditions at the prison were worse than when the original injunction was put in place and ordered the state to remove nearly 200 beds from the facility. His order meant Idaho had to ship more inmates than planned to more expensive, out-of-state prisons.

Roughly 600 inmates were housed out of state at the start of 2009, but with budget cuts looming, Department of Correction officials decided to remodel a former prison warehouse into housing so that 300 inmates could be brought back to Idaho.

In January, inmates who were moved into the warehouse rioted, causing thousands of dollars in damage and leaving prison officials with no place to house the extra inmates without violating the court order. It took a few weeks for prison officials to find appropriate beds for the extra prisoners.

Winnmill said the Correction Department was ill-prepared to move the inmates into the warehouse, in part because work on the building's bathroom was not yet completed and construction materials were being stored in a day room, rendering it unusable.

"At each step in this process, defendants displayed a tendency to work exceptionally close to the margins," Winnmill said. "On the other hand, there are appropriate and lawful means by which inmates can see to vindicate their rights and rioting is not one of them."

After the riot, no good choices were open to the prison officials, Winnmill said, short of temporary overcrowding. County jails were full, the inmates couldn't be quickly shipped back out of state, and keeping them in overcrowded but heated buildings was more humane than housing them in large tents in the middle of winter, he wrote.

IDAHO Report: state improves but still lagging on hunger

BOISE — A new study ranks Idaho among the 10 worst states for the percentage of hungry kids younger than 5. But the study also says Idaho is among 10 states showing the most improvement in combating child hunger.

The study, "Feeding America: Child Food Insecurity in the United States," by the non-profit group Feeding America, found that 20.2 percent of Idaho children under 5 lived with hunger from 2005 to 2007.

That ranked Idaho 10th worst in the nation. The national average was 17.3 percent, the study said.

The study also compared the most recent results with 2003 to 2005 and found the number of Idaho children under 18 who lived with hunger dropped by 21.7 percent. That ranked Idaho fourth in showing improvement.

"We may have been a little behind the curve, and we're headed in the right direction now," Tom Shanahan, a spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare said.

UTAH No link found between skull, 1857 massacre

SALT LAKE CITY — Forensic tests have uncovered no link between a skull found in a Utah pawn shop and the brutal 1857 massacre of a wagon train party that crossed through the state.

The remains are those of an adult Asian male, possibly of Vietnamese ancestry, Idaho state archaeologist Ken Reid said Wednesday.

Sugar City, Idaho, resident Jeff Webb found the skull in 1982 on the shelves of a Salt Lake City pawn shop, which claimed to have acquired it from an estate sale. A note in the box said the artifact was from a female victim of the Mountain Meadows massacre, an 1857 attack by a Mormon militia and church members on an Arkansas wagon train that left 120 men, women and children dead.

Simplot to lay off 114 mine, plant workers

Company blames legal challenges by environmental groups

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — J.R. Simplot Co. plans to issue layoff notices to 114 employees at a phosphate mine and a fertilizer plant, blaming legal challenges from environmental groups trying to halt the agricultural conglomerate's proposed expansion of the mine near the Idaho-Wyoming border.

The 36 layoffs at the Smoky Canyon mine are set to take place Saturday, with 78 job reductions at the Don fertilizer plant near Pocatello slated for July 11.

In late May, a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stopped the company from preparing for the expansion, with the judges saying they needed more time to review all the issues.

Garrett Lofto, president of Simplot's AgriBusiness Group, said Monday the company could shutter Smoky Canyon and the fertilizer plant completely in 18 months if the situation isn't resolved. The mine is the only supplier of the Don plant, shipping phosphate beneath three counties in an underground pipeline.

"The delays caused by special interest groups over the past nine months have placed us in a no-win situation," said Lofto in a news release, adding Simplot has released 199 contracting company workers, and has not filled 22 vacant positions.

The mine employs 210 workers, while the plant has 350 employees. The company says it has less than a year of phosphate ore left; the proposed expansion would keep the mine and the plant operating through 2025.

"It is essential that the company complete expansion of the new sections simultaneously with exhausting existing sections in order to provide a steady and reliable supply of ore to our Pocatello plant," Lofto said.

Environmental groups including the Greater Yellowstone Coalition oppose the mine expansion, fearing it would further harm a region already polluted from past phosphate mining. Pollution from other mines in the 1990s resulted in the deaths of horses and hundreds of sheep grazing in areas tainted by selenium.

Marv Hoyt, director of the Greater Yellowstone Coalition's Idaho Falls office, said he suspects layoffs may also be a function of the economy, not just litigation, with rival fertilizer makers like Canada's Agrium Inc., warning phosphate production will operate significantly below capacity.

New owners of Sno Sensations hope for strong sales, good weather

Customers say snow cones a small summer splurge in tough times

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — More than 12 customers had visited the Sno Sensations shack on Main Street in Buhl in less than 15 minutes — their dollar bills traded for a disposable cup with shaved ice and a liquid sugary flavoring.

For the Gorrell family of Buhl, who just bought the portable business in March, keeping busy is a good thing.

Sno Sensations is doing about $600 in sales each week. That could go up once the family takes the shack on the road to attend city festivals like Dairy Days in Wendell and the Castleford Classic Car Show in August. The business also plans on attending sports tournaments in town and is open for weekend private parties.

"Right now it's the day to day operations that are our bread and butter but we'll make more at the shows," said Stacy Gorrell, who purchased the business with his wife Kristy Gorrell and operates it with the help of six children.

Soon there will be seven kids in the mix, he said, and they are who the business is really for.

Service sector pullback slows, factory orders up

By Tali Arbel
Associated Press writer

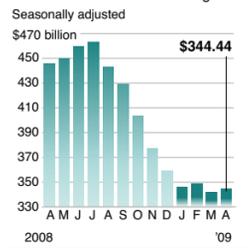

NEW YORK — The U.S. service sector shrank last month at the slowest pace since late last year and orders to U.S. factory orders rose in April, but the improvements were incremental and economists say a real recovery will be long and slow.

Service industries such as retailers, financial services, transportation and health care make up about 70 percent of the country's economic activity. Any turnaround in the sector rests on improved consumer spending.

Wednesday, the Institute for Supply Management said

Local option tax declines in Ketchum

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The city of Ketchum released its local option tax numbers for May on Wednesday, and as expected, they're not good news. However, with one exception, the trend is positive — the decline in May receipts is lower compared to the same month last year.

The category with the largest decline in May was building material receipts, which were down by 52 percent compared to last year. That was the worst showing this year, except for January, when those receipts were down 53 percent.

Retail receipts were down 36 percent, while room receipts declined 16 percent.

On the positive side, condominium receipts in May were up 21 percent compared to last year — a substantial increase, considering that receipts had been in negative territory this spring.

Overall, Ketchum's receipts are down 24 percent over 2008, a significant drop

More bang for the buck this Fourth of July

Bish's RV wants to put on a bigger fireworks show this Fourth of July, and they are asking for the community's help.

The recreational vehicle dealership and long-time co-sponsor of the annual fireworks show in Twin Falls has hired a new company to light up the night-time sky this year.

Troy Jenkins, owner and manager of Bish's RV, said the new fireworks company can provide a more unique fireworks display than has been seen in the past.

BIZ BITES

"This is stuff that we haven't seen before," Jenkins said. "The guys that we hired can do it for 10 years and never show the same fireworks — it's just really unique stuff."

He said the event, which is co-sponsored by the

Idaho Attorney General: New Chrysler will honor 'Lemon Law' obligations

Times-News staff

BOISE — Fiat and the new "Chrysler Group LLC" have agreed to honor the "Lemon Law" rights of Chrysler buyers when the new company takes control of the U.S. auto maker, Attorney General Lawrence Wasden said Wednesday.

Wasden said state Attorneys General reached agreement with the new Chrysler Group LLC, which will be owned by Fiat, the UAW, the U.S. and Canada.

"The continuation of consumers' rights under Idaho's Lemon Law is a significant issue that has arisen in the wake of the recent auto manufacturers' bankruptcies," Wasden said. "I commend Fiat and the new Chrysler Group for its willingness to protect the interests of Chrysler's customers, and I hope similar considerations will be extended to General Motors' customers."

Idaho's "Lemon Law" provides consumers with rights and procedures to obtain a refund or a replacement vehicle if a new vehicle develops a significant problem that can't be repaired after a certain number of repair attempts.

Attorney General Wasden said it was a very significant question whether the new company would be required to honor Lemon Law rights for vehicles sold or leased by the company prior to the upcoming closure of the "Old Chrysler" through the bankruptcy court.

Fiat and Chrysler Group

LLC negotiated with state attorneys general and agreed to honor all the rights consumers had under the "Old Chrysler" to seek and obtain a refund or replacement vehicle if their vehicle has a significant or recurring problem.

Detailed information about Idaho's Lemon Law is in the publication Idaho Lemon Law. The pamphlet is available in the Consumer Protection section of the Attorney General's website at www.ag.idaho.gov.

Orders

But it was the eighth straight monthly decline and was slightly below economists' expectations. Any reading below 50 indicates the services sector is shrinking. The last time the index was at 50 or higher was in September. Separately, the government reported Wednesday that orders to U.S. factories rose 0.7 percent in April, the second increase in three months. But the Commerce Department's report was below analysts' expectations, and the government also marked down the March figure to a 1.9 percent drop, from a 0.9 percent decline previously reported. The financial markets were disappointed by the reports. The Dow Jones industrial average dropped about 90 points in afternoon trading, while broader indices also declined. Federal Reserve Chair-man Ben Bernanke, meanwhile, said Wednesday that the economy will begin growing later this year, but the improvement will be slow. "We expect that the recovery will only gradually gain momentum," he told lawmakers. "Businesses are likely to be cautious about hiring, and the unemployment rate is likely to rise for a time, even after economic growth resumes." The ISM data signaled that conditions were "nowhere near as bad as late last year and earlier this year. While some further drift upward is likely as the rate of economic decline slows, we do not expect this indicator to flash a sustained 'all-clear' signal anytime soon," MFR's chief U.S. economist Joshua Shapiro wrote in a research note. The report from ISM, a Tempe, Ariz.-based trade group of purchasing executives in 18 industries, is based on a survey of the institute's members and covers indicators such as new orders, employment and inventories.

that reflects weakness in the local and national economies. The city has made budgetary adjustments to accommodate this decline in tourism-based income, including layoffs and salary freezes imposed in February. Sun Valley Company's resort director Wally Huffman said he expects the declines to continue through June, due partially to the cancellations of many spring conventions and other meetings at the resort. However, he added that the outlook for July and August should be much more positive, with many events in the works to draw both local tourists and those from farther afield. Ariel Hansen may be reached at ahansen@magicvalley.com or 208-788-3475.

Obama visits Saudi king before high-stakes speech

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Opening a mission to write a new chapter on Islam and the West, President Barack Obama consulted Wednesday with the Saudi king “in the place where Islam began,” prelude to a high-stakes speech in Egypt meant to ease long-held Muslim grievances against the United States.

The son of a Kenyan Muslim who lived part of his childhood in Muslim-majority Indonesia, Obama planned what aides called a “truth-telling” address on Thursday, aimed directly at the world’s 1.5 billion Muslims. Many harbor animosity toward the U.S. over its staunch support for Israel, its terrorist-fighting policies and the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. Many Americans, likewise, formed negative perceptions of the Muslim world after the 9/11 attacks.

In advance, Saudi King Abdullah staged a lavish welcome after Obama’s all-night flight to Riyadh.

“I thought it was very important to come to the place where Islam began and to seek his majesty’s counsel,” Obama said. The president and the king talked in the splendor of Abdullah’s sprawling retreat, a lush patch of searing desert. The king, who was hosting Obama for an overnight stay, called his guest “a distinguished man who deserves to be in this position.”

Birthplace of Islam, Saudi Arabia is still considered guardian of the faith as home to the holy cities of Medina and Mecca. The Sunni Arab powerhouse also sits on the world’s largest oil reserves, buys billions in U.S. military equipment and has cooperated extensively with the U.S. on anti-terrorist operations.

As such, Obama’s goals of opening what speechwriter Ben Rhodes called “a new chapter between the United States and the Muslim world” could hardly proceed without Saudi support. Obama also came asking for specific requests of help from Abdullah on a range of related issues, such as peace between the long-feuding Israelis and Palestinians, Iran’s suspected efforts to build a nuclear bomb, rising Taliban extremism in Pakistan and a destination for some 100 Yemeni detainees now in the U.S. at the Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, prison camp.

Denis McDonough, a deputy national security adviser to Obama, could not immediately say whether the president’s requests were successful after meetings between the two leaders and their delegations that stretched over nearly four hours.

Abdullah showered Obama with compliments in the welcoming ceremonies and presented him with the King Abdul Aziz Order of Merit, a large medallion with a thick gold chain that is the kingdom’s highest honor. “Those are only given to the very few friends of the king, and you are certainly one of those,” Abdullah said.

“Goodness gracious,” Obama said as an aide approached with the striking necklace. “That’s something there.” He said: “I consider the king’s friendship a great blessing, and I am very appreciative that he would bestow this honor on me during this visit.”

Obama had pledged during his presidential campaign to deliver a major address from an Islamic capital within 100 days of becoming president. He did so with a speech to the parliament in Turkey, a secular but overwhelmingly Muslim nation. The White House says his speech in Cairo, a center of Islamic thought and culture, is the one he had in mind in making that promise, and set high expectations for it.

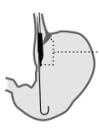

Al-Qaida countered Obama’s outreach. Osama bin Laden released an audio tape accusing Obama of inflaming hatred toward the U.S. by ordering Pakistan to crack down on militants in Swat Valley and block Islamic law there. His deputy, Ayman al-Zawahri, said “farcical visits or elegant words” in Cairo can’t disguise “bloody messages” the U.S. sends to Muslims with its prosecution of the Iraq and Afghanistan wars.

The message from bin Laden, the terrorist mastermind-in-hiding who was born in Saudi Arabia and directed the 2001 attacks that involved 15 hijackers from the desert monarchy, was broadcast by Al-Jazeera Television almost exactly as Obama’s plane touched down in Riyadh.

Incision-free surgery restricts stomach

Using the TOGA (transoral gastroplasty) procedure, doctors insert a thick tube down the throat of a sedated patient, allowing a device to place titanium staples into the upper stomach.

TOGA non-invasive procedure

Flexible stapling devices are introduced through the mouth into the stomach to create a restrictive pouch.

The pouch catches food as it enters the stomach, giving patients the feeling of fullness after eating less.

New obesity surgery goes through mouth, leaving no scars

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Doctors are testing a new kind of obesity surgery without any cuts through the abdomen, snaking a tube as thick as a garden hose down the throat to snap staples into the stomach.

The experimental, scar-free procedure creates a narrow passage that slows the food as it moves from the upper stomach into the lower stomach, helping patients feel full more quickly and eat less.

Doctors say preliminary results from about 200 U.S. patients and 100 in Europe look promising.

After about 18 months, obese European patients have lost an average of about 45 percent of their body weight, said Dr. Gregg Nishi, a surgeon at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles. He discussed the European and U.S. studies during a Chicago conference this week for digestive disease specialists.

The procedure is only being done in the studies, which recently ended enrollment. Makers of the device used in the operation plan to seek federal approval if the research continues to go as planned.

While the two studies are still under way and only brief details are being released, Nishi said results so far are slightly better than typical results from with conventional stomach stapling.

Risks include perforating the esophagus, as Nishi said happened to a patient at another center, but otherwise, he said, there have been no major complications.

Some study patients have lost weight after unknowingly undergoing fake procedures — sedation and the tube, but no stapling. Results comparing them with the real thing aren’t yet available.

After setbacks, gay marriage legalized in NH

By Norma Love
Associated Press writer

CONCORD, N.H. — The bill making New Hampshire the sixth state to allow gays to marry followed a tortuous path this spring — dying and rising to life twice and facing a veto threat — that ended in a room filled with cheering, clapping supporters Wednesday who witnessed the governor’s historic signing.

In its final version, the legislation passed in the House by its biggest margin yet — 22 votes. Gov. John Lynch, who personally opposes the unions, said the legislation struck the right balance.

“Today is a day to celebrate in New Hampshire. Today should not be considered a victory for some and a loss for others,” Lynch said before signing the law. “Today is a victory for all the people of New Hampshire, who I believe, in our own independent way, want tolerance for all.”

Legalizing gay marriage is a historic change for the once reliably Republican and conservative state but reflects New Hampshire’s changing demographics as younger and more liberal.

Still, the legislation faced several challenges.

Even before it was introduced, Democrats — in control since only 2006 — worried the state wasn’t ready for gay marriage, particularly since a civil unions law had only been in effect for little over a year.

In its first test in the House in March, gay marriage failed by one vote. The House revived it and sent it to an expected death in the Senate. But on the day of the Senate vote, Democrats surprised everyone by passing a revised bill — also by one vote.

But Lynch, a Democrat, promised a veto if the law didn’t clearly spell out that churches and religious groups would not be forced to officiate at gay marriages or provide other services. Legislators made the changes, but opponents defeated that revised bill by two votes just two weeks ago, hoping to force a veto.

As the legislative session neared its end, supporters had considered Wednesday their last chance to pass a bill this year.

The day began with rallies outside the Statehouse by both sides in the morning. Then, the last of three bills in the package went to the Senate, which approved it 14-10 Wednesday afternoon.

The bill then went to the key vote — in the House, which passed it 198-176 as cheers rained down from the gallery. Finally, Lynch signed the bill about an hour later as gay marriage supporters surrounded him.

The Rt. Rev. V. Gene Robinson, elected by New Hampshire in 2003 as the first openly gay bishop in the Episcopal Church, was among those celebrating.

Nancy unveils Reagan statue in Capitol Rotunda ceremony

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A standing-room-only crowd filled the Capitol Rotunda on Wednesday for the unveiling of President Ronald Reagan's statue, representing California in Washington's version of a national hall of fame.

Nancy Reagan called it a "wonderful likeness of Ronnie," adding, "He would be so proud."

The former first lady, her voice choked with emotion, recalled her last visit to the rotunda, five years ago when Reagan lay in state. "It's nice to be back under happier circumstances," she said.

The ceremony came one day after President Barack Obama signed legislation creating the Ronald Reagan Centennial Commission to plan a celebration of the 100th anniversary of Reagan's birth in 2011.

The 500-pound bronze sculpture features a 7-foot-tall Reagan in a business suit, standing on a 3-foot-high marble pedestal that displays the presidential and California governor's seals and includes pieces of the Berlin Wall.

Among those attending the event were Reagan-era officials, congressional leaders past and present and members of California's congressional delegation. Republicans welcomed a rare moment to celebrate one of their heroes.

U.S. military: Mistakes were made in Afghanistan strikes

By Julian E. Barnes
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Military investigators have concluded that some air strikes that killed civilians during a battle in western Afghanistan last month were mistakes but are trying to determine whether the service members who called in the strikes could have known they were no longer in imminent danger when the bombs were dropped.

The investigation questioned the last two air strikes conducted during the 8 1/2-hour firefight, according to a military official familiar with the probe. The bombs used in those strikes were dropped by an Air Force B-1 bomber at night, when it was more difficult to determine whether civilians were present.

The investigation, conducted by Brig. Gen. Raymond A. Thomas III, concluded that by the end of the fight the ground forces were no longer under immediate threat of being overrun and probably should have disengaged.

Another defense official confirmed the outlines of the findings and said the report also concluded that dropping a 2,000-pound bomb was overkill.

U.S. officials have apologized for the civilian deaths, but they continue to be a source of anger and frustration in Afghanistan. The U.S. believes 26 civilians were mistakenly killed. The Afghan government puts the total at 140.

The report, which has not been finalized, found that the U.S. Marines who called in the air strikes initially urged the Afghan army unit they were with not to attack the Taliban in the village of Garani on May 4.

"Our guys said this was not the place to engage," said a military official familiar with the report's findings.

But when the Afghans rejected the advice and prepared to attack, the Marines decided to assist them to preserve "unit cohesion," according to the official.

The fight escalated, and the Afghans asked the Marines to call for an air strike to prevent their position from being overwhelmed. The initial strikes were carried out by a Navy F/A-18 armed with 500-pound bombs. The B-1 strikes came hours later.

The investigation's conclusion that some of the strikes were mistakes was first reported Wednesday in The New York Times.

The military official familiar with the report cautioned that the report was not complete. The findings and recommendations still must be endorsed by Gen. David H. Petraeus, the head of U.S. Central Command, and forwarded to the Pentagon.

Military officials reviewing Thomas' report are trying to determine whether the pilots and the Marines could have known that civilians were likely to be hit or that the ground forces were no longer under imminent threat when they called for the two final strikes.

First lady Michelle Obama joins push for Sotomayor

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The White House dispatched first lady Michelle Obama to defend Supreme Court nominee Sonia Sotomayor on Wednesday, part of a broad offensive to humanize the judge that came as former GOP House Speaker Newt Gingrich backed off his harsh criticism of her as a racist.

Mrs. Obama told students at a high school graduation that Sotomayor is "more than ready" to be a justice and compared the judge's life story of humble beginnings and high achievement to the paths taken by her husband and herself.

Sotomayor, who grew up in a New York City housing project and went on to Princeton and Yale universities, "says she still looks over her shoulder and wonders if she measures up," Mrs. Obama said at Howard University, chiming in on Sotomayor's behalf.

It was a subtle but pointed counter to Republicans who have cited Sotomayor's speeches and writings about how her background affects her work as a judge to question whether she would let her personal biases interfere with her judicial decisions.

Hours earlier, Gingrich told supporters in a letter that he shouldn't have called Sotomayor a racist, adding that the word had been "perhaps too strong and direct."

But he said the 2001 speech that prompted his remark, in which Sotomayor said she hoped the rulings of a "wise Latina" would be better than those of a white male without similar experiences, was still unacceptable. Gingrich conceded that Sotomayor's rulings have "shown more caution and moderation" than her speeches and writings, but he said the comments "reveal a betrayal of a fundamental principle of the American system — that everyone is equal before the law."

Sotomayor, 54, would be the first Hispanic and the third woman to serve on the high court.

After being advised that they were standing on a volcano, fourth-graders from Perrine Elementary School could not help but glance at the ground underneath their feet. Following a few surprised looks and comments, the group listened even more intently as their leader for the day, Bureau of Land Management's Dave Freiberg, elaborated on Snake River Plain geology and the network of caves and hollow lava tubes north of Shoshone.

As a part of BLM's Take It Outside program, the field trip was giving the 20 students a chance to disappear underground and explore Maze Cave. Before covering safety, etiquette and the logistics of group exploration, Freiberg stressed a key point regarding his agency's role with the surrounding public landscape.

"The BLM's job is to take care of this land for you," he said.

The Shoshone Field Office will have completed 10 field trips by the end of spring, along with a few more this fall while the grant money for the program remains available. Freiberg has given tours for five years, taking pleasure in seeing kids connect with the landscape and return home

Taxidermists from the West gather in Burley

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Taxidermy isn't just about mounting an animal head on a wall. There's a lot more to it these days — life-sized creations, more artistic bases that portray animal habitat, more scenes of animal-to-animal interaction.

Wildlife buffs will have the chance to see modern taxidermy — and professional taxidermists at work — Friday and Saturday at the 12th annual Idaho Taxidermist Association Show at the Best Western Burley Inn and Convention Center, 800 N. Overland Ave.

The event is a first-ever for Burley, and will feature taxidermists and their work from Oregon, Montana, Utah, Washington and, of course, Idaho.

"The stuff that comes to competitions, most of it, is very artistic," Wade Esplin, president of the Idaho Taxidermist Association, said.

The artists — as taxidermists like to be called, Esplin said — will compete in four divisions: youth novice, adult novice, open, and masters.

IF YOU GO

The Idaho Taxidermist Association Show will be 12-8 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday at the Best Western Burley Inn and Convention Center, 800 N. Overland Ave. Cost is $3, except for those 12 years and younger, who are admitted free. For more information: Wade Esplin at 208-249-1293 or the convention center at 208-678-3501.

'Run for Life'

If you want to stay fit for your whole life — even run into your 80s or 90s — Roy M. Wallack's book "Run for Life" (Skyhorse Publishing, $14.95) provides a blueprint to do just that.

Wallack, a fitness columnist for the Los Angeles Times and a former editor at Triathlete magazine, has subtitled the new book "the anti-aging, anti-injury, super fitness plan to keep you running to 100."

But don't dismiss the book as required reading only for grandpa. Runners of any age can benefit from this catalog of unorthodox advice.

In its 320 pages Wallack covers new medical research on running, alternative training techniques, product recommendations, and personal anecdotes that span from the Boston Marathon to the Rift Valley in Kenya.

As a runner — and a younger runner, at age 31 — what intrigued me most was the book's focus on alternative methods for improving strength and speed. Unlike many books about running, there are no training charts and little information on mileage recommendations or weekly plans. Instead, the book delves into unexpected information about human growth hormone, burst workouts, weight training, and ancillary fitness plans Wallack

California knife carver visits the Magic Valley

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Victor Smith has a sharp eye for wood.

He spends thousands of hours every year searching for and preparing wood that he uses to make custom hunting knives.

Smith of Northridge, Calif., visited south-central Idaho over Memorial Day weekend where he displayed his knives at the 20th Annual Western States Traditional Bowhunters at Magic Mountain Ski Resort south of Hansen. The public event featured bowhunters from at least five western states who came to share their passion for archery and hobnob with their peers as well as aspiring archers.

KNIFE CARVER

If you want to learn more about Victor Smith's handcrafted hunting knives: 818-349-7402 or e-mail to vsmitharcher@yahoo.com.

It also was a great way for Smith to show off his knives, which he often does elsewhere at similar events throughout the year. Pitching vendor booths at events is, in fact, Smith's primary way to market his wares. He doesn't operate a store.

His knives — each made with sub-zero quenched stainless steel and engraved with his signature emblem, an arrow with a "V" as the arrowhead — contain handcrafted wooden handles that Smith designs himself.

Because Smith is a hunter, he takes great care to ensure that his knives are made to fit comfortably in the hands of their users, fellow hunters — something that non-hunting artisans often fail to do, he said.

"About 90 percent of artisans are not hunters," he said, noting how some often overlook comfortability when crafting their knives.

Smith spends between 25 and 30 hours on each knife. "But," he said, "that doesn't include the millions of hours I spend looking for wood." Also, he dries the wood for about a year before its ready to use.

With a stewardship mentality.

"I'd like to work through a complete generation of the local kids," he said. "The BLM has five million acres in this districts and we don't have the staff to cover it all. The best way to protect it is by educating the public and getting them personally invested. And that starts with the youth."

Most of the 10- and 11-year olds exploring Maze Cave had not gone underground before, but all were more than willing.

After donning helmets and knee pads, along with head lamps or flashlights, the group filed into the cavity. Freiberg emphasized to the group that while the excitement might make some prone to hurry, the key for the day was "slow and steady."

At one point, the procession crowded against a wall, easing carefully around a hole in the floor plunging 30 feet below.

Later, the group gathered in a large "room" for a quick break and a challenge by Freiberg for everyone to turn their lights off and experience complete darkness.

Several routes branched off from this spot, including one passage that doubled back underneath the original lava tube, reaching the bottom of the crevice earlier circumvented. Another tunnel led to a series of smaller rooms with several connecting passageways.

A daring student, encouraged by classmates chanting her name, successfully squirmed through one very tight opening.

Throughout the journey, the students absorbed the caving environment via a sensory extravaganza. Silence was frequently punctuated by voices and footsteps echoing throughout the chamber. Multiple light sources painted mobile exposures on the cave's floor, wall and roof. The underground air even had an impact as it cooled exposed skin and produced an aroma that was slightly musty, but not unpleasant.

"They can't get this from a book," observed teacher Kaylyn VanOstran.

After exiting the cave, Freiberg and the students discussed having consideration for the land resource and its interdependent mammals, plants, insects and other life forms. He encouraged the group to extend that thoughtfulness to fellow recreationists and other resource users while treading lightly on the landscape, regardless of their position above or below ground.

VanOstran added that the students would follow up with the "leave no trace" concept by working on a poster project. This assignment would incorporate what they learned during the field trip along with literature provided by the BLM.

Before loading the bus to return home, the students took one last quiz: Which of their field trips — exploring Maze Cave or a popular snowshoe excursion — did they think was the most fun? The response, shouted in unison, was "The cave!"

"This really is a chance for people to see some of the top competitors in the nation and the world," Esplin, of Meridian, said.

The association is a non-profit group with volunteers from across the state. The convention center, he said, invited the association to Burley.

The two-day event, which will be held in Lewiston next year, aims to help educate the public about taxidermy.

"And it helps artists to think more creatively," Esplin said. "There's a lot more than just putting a skin on a form."

John Panter, of Boise, concurs. "When I first got into this, I had no idea the amount of work that goes into each piece," he said. "Each step of the way is critical to the next step. And if you screw up on one step, the other steps will be messed up too. It involves a lot of detail-oriented work."

Panter, who's been doing taxidermy for about three years, plans to submit to the competition a coyote on a base. "I can't even count how many hours I spent on it," he said, noting that taxidermy is "a fun way to spend some time."

Though he's fairly pleased with his coyote, Panter's a bit nervous about the judging.

"Everything gets nit-picked to death," he said.

Wood used to make the handles, which Smith fabricates to fit different hand sizes, comes from importers and private sellers. Wood used might be from Michigan blackberry, California buckeye, Ohio hackberry and spalted maple, to name a few. Some come from overseas.

Though they might look as if they've been dyed, Smith said the woods retain their natural colors. Polymers and monomers are used, though, to make them waterproof and to give them stability. Smith sends his knives out for this treatment, as well as for a heat treatment — the only two things Smith does not do himself.

The time he spends crafting the knives are part of the reason for their hefty price tag — about $340 apiece. He figures he makes about $200 profit on each sale.

It's a lifestyle he's come to enjoy, he said. A life-long fan of the outdoors, he views his knives as one way to contribute something positive for other outdoorsmen.

Smith said he enjoyed his visit to the Gen State's Magic Valley and was impressed with the outdoor opportunities it has to offer. It's much different than living in a big city like Los Angeles, he said.

"The pretty girls here will actually smile when they talk to you," he said, another thing he liked about Idaho.

To me, these sections — though potentially controversial — set "Run for Life" apart. Right, wrong, or somewhere in between, the techniques, regimens, and philosophies from Wallack and the world-class runners and researchers he includes opened my eyes as a distance runner currently stuck in a bit of a rut.

Overall, the book balances research, interviews, and

Weighing your gun's stock options

Back in the days of the automobile's infancy, Henry Ford was quoted as saying, "You can buy a Model T in any color ... as long as it's black!" For the longest time, this sentiment was echoed by gun manufacturers: "You can have your gun stocked in any material ... as long as it's wood!"

Depending on the manufacturer's locale, the wood most commonly sourced was walnut. In Europe that means English, French, Circassian or Bastogne, while on this side of the Pond native black walnut or a hardwood variety — typically birch — is favored.

While many of us drool over highly-figured and intricately-carved stocks of premium-burled walnut, practical and economic realities dictate that we head to the duck blind or deer woods with a factory firearm stocked in a utility-grade piece of walnut or some nondescript hardwood. This is not necessarily a bad thing, but there are some wonderful alternatives available in today's marketplace.

Today I'd like to talk to you about my favored optional stock material, the synthetics. These variants have become so popular that every major foreign and domestic firearms manufacturer catalogs rifle, shotgun or handgun models fitted with plastic stocks or grips.

So what advantages do

SHOOTING THE BULL

On the Web

Give the plastics a glance at your local gun shops or at www.bell&carlson.com, www.butlercreek.com, www.hogue.com, www.mcmfamily.com and www.stockystocks.com.

synthetics offer over conventional wooden stocks?

Weather-resistance/strength: Unlike wood, plastic/fiberglass is hydrophobic, meaning it will not absorb or lose moisture. This makes synthetic stocks inert and immune to the accuracy-robbing influence of humidity and moisture changes encountered in the field. Synthetic materials also boost greater strength and rigidity than their wooden counterparts, especially in the vulnerable wrist area of the stock. Pity the hunter that trips or drops his one-piece firearm, converting it into a two-piece model; not a good thing on a backcountry outing.

Weight savings: Though the lower cost injection-molded versions bolted onto most production firearms will usually weigh in right alongside their wooden counterparts, innumerable lightweight varieties are available. Bell & Carlson, H.S. Precision, Brown, and McMillan produce models that will convert your ponderous 8- to 9-pound rifle or shotgun into a 6- to 7-pound wand. This is a significant weight reduction for a firearm you'll be touting uphill and down throughout your hunt.

Comfort/shootability: The elastic nature of plastic/fiberglass allows the stock to flex slightly upon firing, more effectively absorbing and distributing the firearm's recoil for greater comfort. Factory and aftermarket suppliers offer a wide range of stock styles tailored to individual tastes, physique and intended usage.

Catalogs are ripe with classic, target, varmint, thumbhole and sporter models. There is certain to be a model you'll want to get your hands on.

My personal favorites (pictured above) are Hogue's OverMolded stocks and handgun grips. These affordable handles feature a rigid fiberglass-reinforced synthetic skeleton overmolded with a soft but durable rubber coating. Textured panels will not let them slip from wet or sweaty hands.

Good shooting!

Celebration marks creation of Ice Age Floods trail

By John Trumbo
Tri-City Herald

RICHLAND, Wash. — Some 12,000 years after the flood waters crashed over Dry Falls and carved through the Wallula Gap, about 40 people gathered at the base of Badger Mountain in Richland on Wednesday to celebrate the creation of the Ice Age Floods National Geologic Trail.

"This has been called the greatest story left untold," said Gary Kleinknecht, president of the Ice Ages Floods Institute.

The trail, which tracks the path of multiple massive floods dating from the end of the latest Ice Age, reaches 500 miles from Western Montana to the Pacific Ocean.

The hydraulic power was unleashed when a 1,000-foot-high ice dam on the Clark Fork River broke, sending 600 cubic miles of water in a pell-mell rush across Eastern and central Washington. Much of the dry landscape and scablands of today are what was left behind.

"The trail is a string of pearls," said Kevin Dunbar, chief of planning for the National Park Service's Seattle office, who was one of the speakers.

He said the Tri-Cities was on that string that reaches from Missoula to Astoria, Ore. Other pearls include Missoula, where the flood waters' source, glacial Lake Missoula, was held in by an ice dam; the 400-foot-high cataract called Dry Falls 20 miles southwest of Grand Coulee Dam; the Hanford Reach in the Tri-Cities; and the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry (OMSI) in Portland, which will have Ice Age Floods displays.

The Ice Age Floods trail becomes one of many other famous national trails in the National Park Service, such as the Santa Fe Trail, the Old Spanish Trail, and the Trail of Tears, Dunbar noted.

But it is the first of its kind, he said.

Wednesday's celebration paid homage to J. Harlen Bretz, a geologist who in the 1920s first observed that Eastern Washington's landscape looked like it was flood-formed.

Largely ridiculed for the idea, Bretz spent nearly half a century defending his theory, which eventually earned him geology's highest professional honor — the Penrose Medal of Honor.

Dunbar said the park service will spend two years developing a plan, working closely with the Ice Age Floods Institute, communities, geologists and interpretive specialists to design the trail's educational components.

In addition to interpretive centers, scenic overlooks, displays and roadside signs, the trail will use new communication technologies such as Web casting, iPods and global positioning satellites to enhance what will be available as people drive the trail and its many side loops.

"We will start the plan in earnest in 2010," Dunbar said. But the park service will begin immediately to establish an Ice Age Floods Trail office with a staff of four. It might be in the Tri-Cities, he said.

"We know this is a great day for the state of Washington," said Sen. Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., whose legislation creating the trail was passed by Congress on March 25.

Cantwell, who first introduced an Ice Age Floods trail bill in 2002, is on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

"Our region's ice age flood legacy is etched all over the Pacific Northwest, and this trail will serve as a valuable learning tool to educate Americans on our unique geological history as well as boost local tourism," the senator said in a prepared statement.

Rep. Doc Hastings, R-Wash., credited the Ice Age Floods Institute and Kleinknecht for working over nearly a decade to win congressional approval.

"This had broad support (in the Senate and House)," said Hastings, the ranking Republican member of the House Natural Resources Committee.

Congress authorized $12 million to get the trail established, and about $600,000 a year for operational expenses, Dunbar said.

Kris Watkins, president and CEO for the Tri-Cities Visitor and Convention Bureau, said the national trail will be an ecotourism magnet for the Northwest with potential for national and international play.

"It took true leadership to get this accomplished. It took a decade of work by the Ice Age Floods Institute. The 'floodies,' as we know them, put in countless hours," she said.

George Last, a geologist with the Pacific Northwest National Laboratory and president of the Tri-Cities chapter of the floods institute, and Bruce Bjornstad, a geologist at the Pacific Northwest National Lab who has written a book about the Ice Age floods, were all smiles at the press conference.

"It's been a long time. But there's still a lot of work to do," Bjornstad said.

Relax in grizzly country with a bear-tested cooler

By Susan Gallagher
Associated Press writer

HELENA, Mont. — Keeping cold ones cold when camping in grizzly bear country may be getting a bit easier.

New coolers from a Florida company and a business in Texas that have passed federal and state tests for resistance to grizzlies are the first to be mass-produced.

So, local officials willing, adventurers with a boat or a pack animal hefty enough to carry a cooler no longer must hang it 10 feet off the ground to comply with food-storage rules in the backcountry that grizzlies inhabit.

Wildlife managers have long required that campers in grizzly territory keep food and beverages out of bears' reach — either in a vehicle, building or special locker; or suspended from a tree or pole; or protected by portable electric fencing. The rule, which applies when campsites are unattended and in some places when campers are asleep, is intended to keep humans safe and bears healthy.

But it has frustrated many a camper who found herself repeatedly flinging ropes over branches to get her grub into a tree.

Small bear-resistant containers have been around for years, but the appeal of a larger one that also keeps things cold is clear.

Hanging a cooler is an especially "significant project" at the start of a trip, when it's full and can weigh 100 pounds, said outfitter Brett Todd, who puts clients on horses — and their gear on mules — for trips into Montana's Bob Marshall Wilderness Complex.

Five orphaned and nuisance bears who make their home at the Grizzly & Wolf Discovery Center in West Yellowstone tested the new coolers for a group called the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee, which includes representatives from U.S. and Canadian wildlife agencies and from the states of Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and Washington.

The bears beat and scratched at each cooler for an hour. Despite smelling the peanut butter and fish stored inside, they failed to break into the boxes, made of the same tough plastic used in kayaks. Even the 100-pound weights that human tormentors dropped on the boxes didn't crack them open.

Short term, this was bad news for the bears: No treats.

But in the long term, the test results were as important for grizzlies as for humans. Bears that grow accustomed to finding food and beverages at human encampments are often declared a nuisance and eventually moved or even killed.

The hope is bear-resistant coolers will prevent more bears from learning that coolers can be sources of food. Even if bears can detect the smell of food, they are unlikely to stay interested in a cooler if they cannot break into it quickly, said Jack Rich, another Bob Marshall outfitter.

"It's not about the smell, it's about the reward," Rich said of bears' motivation, noting that campsite food preparation areas and cooks' clothing have food odors. "We're not going to eliminate the smells associated with food. We have to make sure we don't have the bears associating that smell with a good reward."

Dick Karsky of the U.S. Forest Service's Missoula Technical Development Center in Montana said other coolers that have been certified as bear-resistant have only been custom-made; the lines from Yeti Coolers in Austin, Texas, and Engel USA in Jupiter, Fla., are the first available at retail.

Outfitter Rich said that if coolers are balanced side to side like saddlebags a mule can carry two 80-quart boxes. Whitewater rafts also can accommodate some of the larger sizes Engel and Yeti produce.

Engel say their bear-resistant boxes come with top-quality latches, hinges and seals. The smallest is about 2 feet by 1.5 feet with about a 35-quart capacity. The largest are about 5 feet long, weigh about 100 pounds empty and can cost more than $1,000.

And this summer at the hundreds of places where the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks allows camping, visitors with the new coolers will be allowed to leave them on the ground, Deputy Director Chris Smith said. Bear management biologist Kerry Gunther at Yellowstone National Park, who noted that federal rules never change quickly, said visitors there must abide the old rules, however. The same is true at Glacier National Park, which like Yellowstone supports hundreds of grizzlies.

Other products that have passed bear resistance tests include garbage containers, panniers, food lockers and food canisters, some small enough to fit in a backpack.

OUTDOORS BRIEFS

Free Fishing Day set

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has scheduled Free Fishing Day activities in the Magic Valley region on June 13. Events will be held at Riley Pond on the Hagerman State Fish Hatchery and Gaver's Lagoon at the Hayspur Fish Hatchery near Picabo.

"Free Fishing Day aims to teach people a lifetime sport, provide information, and teach the skills needed to catch fish," said Doug Megargle, regional fishery manager for Fish and Game.

Fish and Game and volunteer organizations will provide fishing poles, teach casting techniques, provide bait and show people how to clean their catch. Experts will be on hand to help first-time anglers. Visitors at both events will be provided a hot dog lunch, fishing poles to use for the day, tackle and bait. Fishing gear will be given away to several anglers.

The Picabo event runs from 8 a.m. to noon, and the Hagerman event will be from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

People can fish any open public water without a license for one day only, on June 13. All other rules and regulations apply.

For more information: 324-4359.

Bearded Ladies schedule fun shoot

The National Wild Turkey Federation's Bearded Ladies will hold its 3rd annual Ladies Sporting Clay Fun Shoot on June 14 at the Jerome Rod and Gun Club. Registration is at 8:30 a.m., instruction at 9 a.m., and the shoot begins at 10 a.m. Cost is $60 for 100 targets plus lunch. Awards will be given and raffle tickets sold at the event. Instructors available.

For more information: Patty Howard at 734-9116 or Kim Stoddard at 733-8337.

Get hooked on fly fishing

The College of Southern Idaho's North Side Center has scheduled a Fly Fishing Basics class from 6:30-8:30 p.m. June 25.

Instructor Scott Stanton will introduce participants to the types of rods, lines, flies and accessories needed to land the big one. After learning about knots, participants will use their own fly rod, reel and line to get step-by-step instruction on casting. Cost is $35.

For more information or to register: 934-8678 or 202 14th Ave. East in Gooding.

Gun club schedules clays shoot

The Jerome Gun Club will hold a free sporting clays shoot for youth on June 27.

Anyone under 18 years and has had hunter safety will be able to shoot 50 sporting clays. The club will supply the shotgun shells, clay targets, and lunch to all shooters. Sign up time is 9 a.m. and a shotgun start begins at 10 a.m.

For more information: Mike at 539-4814.

Baldy opens summer lift

Bald Mountain will open its summer lift operations at 9 a.m. June 27. Bikes will be allowed July 1. Lifts running daily will be River Run No. 1 and Lookout Express No. 5. Prices remain $15 for adults and $7 for children. All-day passes are $20 for adults and $10 for children.

For more information: 800-635-4150 or www.sunvalley.com.

Last chance to hunt bighorn sheep

Hunters who were unsuccessful in Idaho's 2009 bighorn sheep controlled permit drawing have one more chance to hunt bighorn sheep this year. Hunters can purchase Idaho 2009 bighorn sheep raffle tickets through the Idaho chapter of the Wild Sheep Foundation. Proceeds from the raffle are used by Fish and Game for the benefit and enhancement of bighorn sheep in Idaho. Hunters can purchase raffles at www.idahowildsheep.org.

This year's drawing will be at 2 p.m. July 29. Winners will be able to hunt in any unit open to sheep hunting for Rocky Mountain or California bighorn in 2009, pursuant to Fish and Game regulations — except Unit 11, Hells Canyon of the Snake River, which is available to a lottery winner on alternating years. Hunting license and permit will be provided to winner. Non-residents can apply.

Applicant must be 18 years of age to purchase a ticket. Once-in-a-lifetime rule is waived for this raffle tag, and participants need not be present to win.

The constellation Scorpius' brightest star hides behind the Moon

The Sun's path among the stars (an illusion resulting from our vantage point on a moving Earth) is the same from year to year. We call it the ecliptic, which threads the 12 zodiac constellations.

SKYWATCH
Chris Anderson

The Moon follows a path through the zodiac as well, but it varies throughout the year because the Moon's orbit is tilted a bit more than five degrees from the ecliptic. So, while the Sun passes invisibly over the same stars each year, the Moon does not.

On Saturday night the Moon will pass over one of the brightest stars in the zodiac, the brilliant red heart of Scorpius called Antares.

Astronomers make good use of such lunar occultations: The time required for the star to disappear behind (or appear from behind) the Moon's limb allows a straightforward calculation of the star's diameter, which otherwise can be quite difficult to measure due to stars' enormous distances.

If the (dis)appearance occurs in stepwise fashion, it reveals the presence of a companion star.

For non-astronomers, it's fun to watch a star wink out, then reappear on the other side of the Moon about an hour later. It's a great way to see the Moon orbiting right before your

The Moon will break the horizon at 10 minutes before 9 p.m., still 23 minutes before sunset. Antares will pop out from behind the Moon's upper right limb at one minute before 9 p.m., so binoculars or a telescope will be necessary to see it.

If you miss it, there's good news and bad news: It repeats next month (in the early hours of

When outdoors, leave baby animals alone

With campers and other outdoors enthusiasts heading out to the woods, well-meaning folks often find baby birds and other animals that seem to be abandoned. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is asking people to leave them alone.

"We have people calling us or bringing baby animals to the office every year," said Regan Berkley, Fish and Game regional wildlife biologist. "Even though their intentions are good, it isn't the best thing for the animals."

Mother animals often leave their young as they forage. If they return to their young to find people around, they will often leave the area and return later. Sometimes people take the baby animal.

If the animal is placed in a zoo, it means the animal is removed from the wild forever. If neither returning the animal to the wild nor sending it to a zoo are good options, biologists have to consider whether euthanasia is the most humane thing to do.

"Basically, the only really good option is for the baby to stay in the wild in the first place," Berkley said.

In addition, it is illegal for people to possess wild animals and can be issued a citation. Animals raised in confinement are often destroyed because of the possibility of disease and lack of ability to survive on their own.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: I'm 63 and retired with only Social Security and a small pension. I have about $45,000.00 in hospital bills and no insurance. I have heard that I can file a "medical" bankruptcy that would not involve my other creditors. True?

Answer: Unfortunately, there is no such thing as a "medical" bankruptcy. However, you probably qualify to be a debtor in a case under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code. In a Chapter 7 case, you would be required to schedule all your debts, but you could reaffirm your secured debts, such as your mortgage and car loan. Reaffirmation would have the effect of removing those loans from your bankruptcy, and they would not be included in your bankruptcy discharge. With regard to your non-medical unsecured debts, you may choose to voluntarily repay any debts you want. For example, if it were important to you to retain the good will of a particular lender, you might want to continue paying that lender. Credit card debts are another matter. Most credit card companies will close your account whether you continue to pay them or not. You should speak to an experienced bankruptcy attorney for more detailed information.

Northern Idaho man takes personal route to activism

By Becky Kramer
The Spokesman-Review

PRIEST LAKE — A clear-cut changed the course of Barry Rosenberg's life.

Rosenberg was living a "back to the land" dream on a 40-acre homestead near Priest Lake when the U.S. Forest Service proposed clear-cutting the hillside above his property. Rosenberg, a former logger, feared the timber sale would silt up the creek that supplied his drinking water. He hired an attorney to appeal it.

"Oh, I could do that," Rosenberg later thought as he read the attorney's written appeal. For nearly 30 years, he did.

Rosenberg, 66, retired earlier this month as one of the Inland Northwest's most prolific environmental activists. Through the 1980s and 1990s, he rallied residents to appeal what he believed was rampant over-cutting of federal forests east of the Cascade range.

A towering man with a jutting nose and a fondness for fiery rhetoric, Rosenberg earned a reputation as both principled and unbending.

"Stumps don't lie," reads a bumper sticker in his office. "If you aren't completely appalled, you haven't been paying attention," says another.

For the past seven years, Rosenberg worked as Kootenai Environmental Alliance's executive director. In that role, he fought plans for a Rathdrum Prairie power plant that would have sucked 7 million gallons of water daily from the aquifer. He also worked with local governments on water conservation and land-use planning.

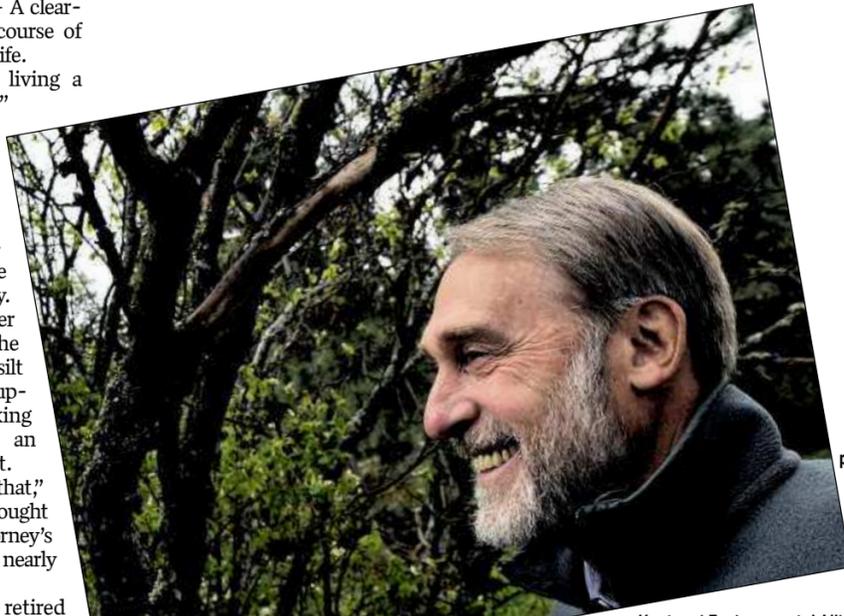

"We'll miss him on the front lines," said Mike Petersen, executive director of the Lands Council in Spokane.

"We're losing a real icon," said Janet Torline, Kootenai Environmental Alliance's board president.

The nonprofit grew to 600 members under Rosenberg's leadership while keeping its grass-roots character, she said. Terry Harris, an attorney who joined the alliance last year, is the new executive director.

"It's a privilege to find a job that fits your passion."

— Kootenai Environmental Alliance Executive Director Barry Rosenberg

"It's a privilege to find a job that fits your passion," said Rosenberg, who earned $36,000 a year. He's retiring to spend more time with his wife, Catherine, who lives at the couple's Priest Lake cabin. While he was working for environmental nonprofits, Rosenberg rented an apartment and drove home on weekends.

Rosenberg grew up in suburban New Jersey and graduated from Philadelphia's Temple University with an English degree. Both he and his wife felt the pull of the beatniks' counterculture message. They spent the 1960s in San Francisco, where Rosenberg worked as a construction laborer. Later, they bought a small acreage in Humboldt County.

The family which included Rosenberg's 15-year-old stepson, a dog, a cat and her two young kittens moved to the Priest Lake area in June 1975. The snow had just melted. Animals and humans shared a tent on the property while the Rosenbergs built a 12-by-16-foot cabin.

When the snow fell that winter, their son skied 2 1/2 miles to catch the school bus. Rosenberg found work in the woods.

He tried logging but didn't like cutting down old-growth cedars or hemlocks. He later ran a tree-planting business, contracting with the Forest Service to restock clear-cuts.

When the Forest Service proposed the timber sale adjacent to his property, Rosenberg said, he knew enough to be concerned. He appealed several versions of the sale. Eventually, it went through. Rosenberg missed the final appeal deadline. He'd been on the East Coast for his mother's funeral.

After the sale, the water from his faucet sometimes turned muddy. The neighbor's unfenced cattle used the new logging roads to venture deep into the national forest, tearing up the ground. "I will never again back away from a bad timber sale," Rosenberg pledged to himself.

Rosenberg's leadership came at a critical time in the Northwest's timber battles, said Dr. John Osborn, a Spokane physician who hired Rosenberg to run the Forest Watch program. During the 1980s and '90s, national forests faced tremendous political pressure to cut more trees. When spotted owl lawsuits shut down timber sales west of the Cascades, harvest pressures intensified on East Side forests.

"What turned the corner was the citizens Forest Watch program," Osborn said. "All over the Inland Northwest, they stopped the massive overcutting that was going on. That really came from Barry's figuring out how to protect his drinking water. His work became a model for citizen oversight of the forest."

"We couldn't be any more ideologically opposed, but he's a very nice person," said Serena Carlson, spokeswoman for the Intermountain Forestry Association, a timber industry group in Coeur d'Alene.

In the new era, Carlson said environmentalists need to work with the timber industry, sportsmen's groups and ATV riders.

Rosenberg remains distrustful of the Forest Service. The agency depends on logging revenue, and that perpetuates timber harvests, he said.

"They always wrap it in virtue," Rosenberg said. "They say, 'We're logging to pay for watershed restoration.'"

Jerome Co. holds on to backflow ordinance

By John Plestina
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — On the premise that what's good for the city might not be good for the county, the Jerome County Commission took no action Monday on proposed county wellhead protection that would mirror a Jerome city ordinance.

While the commission will revisit the issue at a future meeting, the mood of the board was that the Jerome City Council had adopted an ordinance that was tailored to the city's needs and was more protective than what the county needs.

Bob Muffley, executive director of the Mid-Snake Regional Water Resource Commission, told commissioners the MSRWC is seeking an ordinance that would be reflective of the county's plan to protect groundwater in the future.

"Our charge is to protect water resources," he said. The MSRWC makes recommendations to county commissions.

Muffley advised against adopting the city plan.

"I think we've got enough in our current plan that you could adopt it," he said.

Muffley added that the city plan addresses city needs and not the county's.

County Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman Jack Nelson expressed concerns that rigid regulation in a county ordinance could deter businesses that are interested in relocating to Jerome County.

"If this is worded too tightly a company is going to say this is going to add eight months to our permit process," Nelson said.

John Plestina may be reached at scribejp@yahoo.com.

Splash Dogs come to Jerome County Fair

By John Plestina
Times News correspondent

JEROME — Canine athletes will take the plunge at the Jerome County Fair when Splash Dogs brings a dock jumping competition to Idaho for the second time. Splash Dogs organizes and promotes dock jumping events across the nation. The only previous Idaho event was in Boise.

Anyone can enter their pooch in the event, in which dogs jump off the end of a dock after getting a running start. Overall event and individual rankings are determined by jump distance.

Fairgrounds Manager Kathleen Diederich said Splash Dogs will offer clinics and performances Aug. 5-8. The fair, with the theme Cattle-ac of County Fairs, opens Aug. 1 and continues through Aug. 8.

"Splash Dogs should be a great event," Diederich said. "They'll have classes and clinics during the day and they'll have a competition on Friday and Saturday."

"If your dog does well enough he can compete," she said.

However, she said, there will be canine athletes that follow the Splash Dogs circuit from event to event, state to state.

Staff from Splash Dogs will help local people train their dogs for events that include varying classes and categories.

"It might be entertaining," Diederich said.

"They say it's fun and they say it was a big hit when it was in Boise," she said.

Also new to the fair this year is the Battle of the Bands. There will be a $250 cash prize and all bands are eligible to enter but there is a limit of 10 entries.

"We're looking forward to a good fair," Diederich said.

SCCAP holds annual meeting

South Central Community Action Partnership will hold its annual meeting July 16 to seat its elected low-income representatives and selected private sector representatives to the SCCAP Board of Directors for the three regions of south-central Idaho.

Those three regions consist of Twin Falls County, Minidoka and Cassia counties, and Lincoln, Gooding, Jerome, Blaine and Camas counties.

The board of directors consists of three sectors of the community which represent the public sector (county commissioners), the private sector (civic groups, church, business, etc.) and the low-income sector, representing the needs of the low-income population of the community.

The low-income representative does not necessarily have to be low-income. However, he or she must be aware of the problems affecting low-income families, currently working with low-income residents and

Is EBV infection really cause of excessive fatigue?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been feeling very fatigued, so my doctor ran some blood tests. These came back showing that I have Epstein-Barr virus.

Would you please explain more about what this is? What other symptoms are there associated with this condition? Is there anything other than the special vitamins I was told to take that can help me?

ASK DR. GOTT

I am 73 years old and feel so tired. From what my doctor told me, I understand that this is like mononucleosis and that once you have it, you will always have it.

DEAR READER: The Epstein-Barr virus (EBV) can cause several different diseases. It is passed from person to person by kissing or other close contact.

In the United States, as many as 95 percent of adults have had EBV infections. Most cases produce symptoms similar to those of a cold or other mild infection. Sometimes teenagers and young adults develop different, more severe symptoms, indicating that the virus has caused infectious mononucleosis.

Your doctor was correct that, once infected, EBV stays in the body. It is carried primarily by white blood cells and periodically sheds into the saliva. Shedding usually causes no symptoms, so it is possible for an otherwise healthy carrier to infect another person.

With respect to your "special vitamins," I am unsure what you mean. There is no specific treatment for EBV. Acetaminophen, ibuprofen, naproxen and others can be used to relieve the pain and fever associated with infectious mononucleosis. Currently, antiviral medications have little to no effect on symptoms and, therefore, are not recommended.

Hospice advocates meet with lawmakers

Registered Nurse Tami Slatter and Licensed Master Social Worker Karen Martinat, from Hospice Visions Inc. in Twin Falls, recently joined hospice advocates from across the country in urging Congress to protect access to quality end-of-life care for the 1.4 million patients and families who depend on hospice each year.

Slatter

Martinat

tives of Congressman Mike Simpson's office as part of the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization's annual Capitol Hill Day program. They discussed the value of hospice care in Idaho and urged Congress to support efforts to stop cuts in Medicare hospice funding.

Over the past year, NHPCO and hospice advocates nationwide have been working to overturn a 2008 regulation issued by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services that eliminates a key component of the Medicare hospice reimbursement formula known as the budget neutrality adjustment factor.

The hospice community secured a one-year moratorium on the funding cuts in the economic stimulus package signed into law earlier this year. However, the moratorium ends Sept. 30, with greater hospice funding cuts possibly starting Oct. 1. Slatter, Martinat and other Capitol Hill Day participants asked lawmakers to urge the administration to permanently rescind cuts in Medicare hospice funding.

Applications and letters of interest must be returned by June 10. Low-income participants may vote for their representative of choice from 8 to 11 a.m. and 12 to 4 p.m. June 22 at the aforementioned locations. Information: 733-9351.

Babysitting training comes to Twin Falls

Military youth development professionals, staff, volunteers, child care service providers and others who value babysitting skills and want to teach them to area teens are invited to a free Babysitting Train-the-Trainer Workshop on Aug. 2 in Twin Falls. Training for youth ages 12-16 can also be scheduled.

The workshops are sponsored by the University of Idaho Extension Office's 4-H Operation: Military Kids, and will provide participants with teaching resources.

Topics will include first aid, fire safety, child development and food and nutrition. The workshops will begin at 9 a.m. and conclude at 3 p.m. Participants should bring a brown-bag lunch. Certificates of completion are available from Army Child and Youth Services.

Participants should register before June 15 at 208-334-2328 or sphillee@uidaho.edu.

Refugee center seeks volunteers, donations

The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center continues to accept new residents from various parts of the world, each of whom face significant challenges upon their arrival in the Magic Valley.

Assistance in the form of donations or volunteer service is needed, especially during the first few months of transition for the families. Volunteers are needed to help befriend families and orient them to life in America.

Volunteers can also help with transportation for weekly grocery shopping and other errands. Donations of vacuums, televisions, computers, furniture, kitchen supplies, beds, washers, dryers and bicycles are especially welcome.

Whether your fatigue is truly related to a new Epstein-Barr virus infection or something different I can't say. Take your concerns back to your primary-care physician. He or she is best suited to answer your questions, since there is a familiarity with your medical history and current health status. You may also wish to ask for a referral to a specialist if your symptoms don't improve over time to rule out other causes, such as chronic fatigue syndrome or a poorly functioning heart.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had a problem with low potassium for 30 years. It gave me leg cramps, so my doctor told me that a glass of orange juice or tomato juice should help. The orange juice didn't, but eight ounces of tomato juice replenishes the potassium and stops the cramps.

DEAR READER: Many vegetables and fruits contain potassium (a mineral that is vital for normal metabolism). It can be dangerous if too high; however, too little can cause symptoms such as leg cramps.

Tomato juice is a good, safe option, although you might want to make sure that the brand you choose is not too high in sodium. For variety, you may wish to alternate with dried fruits, bananas or even mixed vegetable juices.

If your potassium is back within range but you are still having leg cramps, you may wish to try the remedies available in my Health Reports "Dr. Gott's Compelling Home Remedies" and "More Compelling Home Remedies." Readers who would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 per report to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title(s).

Peter Gott is a retired physician and the author of the book "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Diet," available at most chain and independent bookstores, and the recently published "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook."

Blues queen Koko Taylor dies at 80

By Caryn Rousseau
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Koko Taylor, a sharecropper's daughter whose regal bearing and powerful voice earned her the sobriquet "Queen of the Blues," has died after complications from surgery. She was 80.

Taylor died Wednesday at Northwestern Memorial Hospital about two weeks after having surgery for a gastrointestinal bleed, said Marc Lipkin, director of publicity for her record label, Alligator Records, which made the announcement.

"The passion that she brought and the fire and the growl in her voice when she sang was the truth," blues singer and musician Ronnie Baker Brooks said Wednesday. "The music will live on, but it's much better because of Koko. It's a huge loss."

Taylor's career stretched more than five decades. While she did not have widespread mainstream success, she was revered and beloved by blues aficionados, and earned worldwide acclaim for her work, which including the best-selling song "Wang Dang Doodle" and tunes such as "What Kind of Man is This" and "I Got What It Takes."

Taylor appeared on national television numerous times, and was the subject of a PBS documentary and had a small part in director David Lynch's "Wild at Heart."

"What a loss to the blues world," said Chicago blues legend Buddy Guy. "She was one of the last of the greats of Chicago and really did what she could to keep the blues alive here."

In the course of her career, Taylor was nominated seven times for Grammy awards and won in 1984.

Taylor last performed on May 7 in Memphis, Tenn., at the Blues Music Awards.

"She was still the best female blues singer in the world a month ago," said Jay Sieleman, executive director of The Blues Foundation based in Memphis. "In 1950s Chicago she was the woman singing the blues. At 80 years old she was still the queen of the blues."

Born Cora Walton just outside Memphis, Taylor said her dream to become a blues singer was nurtured in the cotton fields outside her family's sharecropper shack.

"I used to listen to the radio, and when I was about 18 years old, B.B. King was a disc jockey and he had a radio program, 15 minutes a day, over in West Memphis, Arkansas and he would play the blues," she said in a 1990 interview. "I would hear different records and things by Muddy Waters, Bessie Smith, Memphis Minnie, Sonnyboy Williams and all these people, you know, which I just loved."

Although her father encouraged her to sing only gospel music, Cora and her siblings would sneak out back with their homemade instruments and play the blues. With one brother accompanying on a guitar made out of bailing wire and nails and one brother on a fife made out of a corn-cob, she began on the path to blues woman.

Orphaned at 11, Koko — a nickname she earned because of an early love of chocolate — at age 18 moved to Chicago with her soon-to-be-husband, the late Robert "Pops" Taylor, in search for work.

Joe Mietzner

BUHL — Emmett "Joe" Hermon Mietzner, 82, of Buhl, passed away Monday, June 1, 2009, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center from complications of an infection with his loving family by his side.

Joe was born May 18, 1927, in Wilcox, Neb., to Louis and Louisa (Schmidt) Mietzner. In 1947, Joe moved with his family to the Magic Valley, where he lived and farmed until his death. On Sept. 4, 1953, in Jerome, Idaho, he married Vivian Griggs. Joe and Vivian were married for 50 years and raised five children. Joe served in the U.S. Army and was stationed in Germany during the Korean War.

Joe is survived by sons, Ken (Sandra) Mietzner of children; and six great-grandchildren. Joe is preceded in death by his wife, Vivian; one sister; two brothers; and one granddaughter.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 6, at St. John's Lutheran Church in Buhl, with interment to follow at the West End Cemetery in Buhl, Idaho. Memorial contributions may be made in Joe's name to St. John's Lutheran Church. Services have been entrusted to White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

Ruth 'Ruthie' Lattin

Ruth "Ruthie" Lattin, 88, passed away Tuesday, June 2, 2009, at the Twin Falls Care Center.

Ruth was born Sept. 29, 1920, to Clarence and Bessie (Sharp) Hayes in Osgood, Mo. Ruth married Eugene Lattin in Gooding, Idaho, on June 19, 1937. To this union, five children were born, LeRoy, Gerald, Wanda, Billy and Glen. Ruth and Eugene farmed in the Kimberly area for many years until Gene took a job as a truck driver and Ruth stayed home to tend the children. After Gene retired, Ruth and Gene loved to travel in their motor home to Arizona in the winter, Sligars and Featherville in the summer months. Ruth spent many hours at her home away from home, "The Depot Grill," visiting with friends and drinking coffee. If she wasn't home, you could always find her at the "Grill."

In the spring of 2005, Ruth sold her home and moved into Woodstone Retirement Center, where she enjoyed living and had many friends. Due to failing health, Ruth was moved to Twin Falls Care Center in the beginning of May 2009, where she remained until her death.

Ruth is survived by a daughter, Wanda (John) Ulrich of Kimberly, Idaho; and one son, Glen (Annette) Lattin of Pocatello, Idaho. She is also survived by 10 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren. Ruth is preceded in death by her husband, Gene; three sons, LeRoy Lattin, Gerald Lattin and Billy Lattin; four sisters and three brothers.

The funeral will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 6, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park," with interment to follow at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. A visitation for family and friends will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 5, at White Mortuary.

Debbie Horner

Debbie Denise Horner, beloved wife and mother, passed away Tuesday, May 26, 2009.

Debbie was born on June 1, 1961, to Lowell and Wonda Hammond in Caldwell, Idaho. Debbie graduated from high school in Twin Falls, Idaho, and then went on to receive a major of fine arts graphic design from Boise State University. Debbie began enchanting everyone she knew from a young age and could make a friend for life in minutes! Her social spirit carried over into everything she did, and she had the unique ability to make those around her smile and laugh abundantly!

Debbie met her husband, Scott Horner, in college, and they married in 1983. In 1985, they moved to Bainbridge Island, Wash., where Scott began working as an architect. Scott and Debbie have owned and operated BIOS LLC for 20 years, which is a planning, design and construction company specializing in nature center-related facilities — aquariums, zoos and nature centers. Debbie brought to the company her keen financial savvy and talented graphic background. Debbie was also extremely creative as a water-color painter and a talented illustrator. Boating, cooking and gardening were just a few of Debbie's other loves.

With extreme sadness Debbie leaves behind her husband, Scott; and son, Skylar Lee of Bainbridge Island, Wash.; parents-in-law, Max and Johnnie Horner of Kingston; brother, Rick (Julie) Hammond of Twin Falls, Idaho; sister, Danielle (Damon) Gardea of Lacey, Wash.; her grandmother, Myrtle Hammond of Caldwell, Idaho; and numerous nieces and nephews. Debbie also leaves behind a full array of close friends who will also miss her vivacious spirit.

At the request of the family, a private service was held at Kiana Lodge on Sunday, May 31. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Progressive Animal Welfare Society/PA WS, www.naws.org.

Ariz. suspect dies when car crashes into DPS cruiser

By Arthur H. Rotstein
Associated Press writer

TUCSON, Ariz. — A woman who had been arrested and placed in the back of a police cruiser was fatally burned Wednesday when another car slammed into the parked cruiser, igniting both vehicles and another cruiser in front, authorities said.

It was the latest death in the past decade attributed to a fuel tank rupture in a Ford Motor Co.-made Crown Victoria during a rear-end collision.

Lt. James Warriner, an Arizona Department of Public Safety spokesman, said investigators are looking into why the gas tank exploded this time since both Ford Crown Victoria Police Interceptors at the scene were equipped with fire suppression systems that deployed.

An officer stopped the 45-year-old motorist at about 1:15 a.m., arrested her and put her in the back of a cruiser along Interstate 10 northwest of Tucson, Warriner said.

Another westbound car traveling at least 65 mph then drifted into the emergency lane and plowed into the back of that vehicle, Warriner said.

He said the cruiser ignited instantly, and the officers were unable to rescue the woman inside because of the intensity and heat of the fire.

The impact pushed the first cruiser's trunk into its back seat, and rammed the car into the patrol cruiser in front, severely damaging its rear end as well. The second cruiser continued the chain reaction, striking the woman's parked vehicle.

The officers were able to remove the driver of the moving car, which vaulted over a guard rail and sustained fire and crash damage, Warriner said.

He said the 28-year-old driver was taken to a hospital with undetermined injuries.

There have been no charges, with the investigation continuing, Warriner said.

Over the past decade, Crown Victorias have been the subject of significant controversy and lawsuits over numerous rear-end collisions that ruptured fuel tanks and caused horrific fires, killing or disfiguring a number of police officers and others. Since 2005, Ford has installed a powder-emitting device designed to suppress fire in its Crown Victorias.

Air France jet likely broke up over ocean

By Federico Escher and Bradley Brooks
Associated Press writers

FERNANDO DE NORONHA, Brazil — Military planes found new debris from Air France Flight 447 Wednesday while investigators focused on a nightmarish ordeal in which the jetliner broke up over the Atlantic as it flew through a violent storm.

Heavy weather delayed until next week the arrival of deep-water submersibles considered key to finding the black box voice and data recorders that will help answer the question of what happened to the airliner, which disappeared Sunday with 228 people on board. But even with the equipment, the lead French investigator questioned whether the recorders would ever be found in such a deep and rugged part of the ocean.

As the first Brazilian military ships neared the search area, investigators were relying heavily on the plane's automated messages to help reconstruct what happened to the jet as it flew through towering thunderstorms. They detail a series of failures that end with its systems shutting down, suggesting the plane broke apart in the sky, according to an aviation industry official with knowledge of the investigation, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to discuss the crash.

Unidentified Air France employees react Wednesday outside Notre Dame cathedral in Paris, following an ecumenical church service for relatives and families of the passengers of Air France's Flight 447, which vanished Monday over the Atlantic ocean.

The pilot sent a manual signal at 11 p.m. local time saying he was flying through an area of "CBs" — black, electrically charged cumulonimbus clouds that come with violent winds and lightning. Satellite data has shown that towering thunderheads were sending 100 mph updraft winds into the jet's flight path at the time.

Ten minutes later, a cascade of problems began: Automatic messages indicate the autopilot had disengaged, a key computer system switched to alternative power, and controls needed to keep the plane stable had been damaged. An alarm sounded indicating the deterioration of flight systems.

Three minutes after that, more automatic messages reported the failure of systems to monitor air speed, altitude and direction. Control of the main flight computer and wing spoilers failed as well.

The last automatic message, at 11:14 p.m., signaled loss of cabin pressure and complete electrical failure — catastrophic events in a plane that was likely already plunging toward the ocean.

"This clearly looks like the story of the airplane coming apart," the airline industry official told The Associated Press. "We just don't know why it did, but that is what the investigation will show."

French and Brazilian officials had already announced some of these details, but the more complete chronology was published Wednesday by Brazil's O Estado de S. Paulo newspaper, citing an unidentified Air France source, and confirmed to the AP by the aviation industry source.

Air France spokesman Nicolas Petteau referred questions about the messages to the French accident investigation agency, BEA, whose spokesman Martine Del Bono said the agency won't comment. Brazil's Defense Minister Nelson Jobim also declined to comment, saying that the accident "investigation is being done by France; Brazil's only responsibility is to find and pick up the pieces."

Other experts agreed that the automatic reports of system failures on the plane strongly suggest it broke up in the air, perhaps due to fierce thunderstorms, turbulence, lightning or a catastrophic combination of events.

One fear — terrorism — was dismissed Wednesday by all three countries involved in the search and recovery effort. France's defense minister and the Pentagon said there were no signs that terrorism was involved, and Jobim said "that possibility hasn't even been considered."

A U.S. Navy P-3C Orion surveillance plane, a French AWACS radar plane and two other French military planes joined Brazil's Air Force in trying to spot debris and narrow the search zone.

Jobim said debris discovered so far was spread over a wide area, with some 140 miles separating pieces of wreckage they have spotted.

OAS votes to readmit Cuba after 47 years

SAN PEDRO SULA, Honduras (AP) — The Organization of American States voted by acclamation on Wednesday to revoke the 1962 measure suspending communist Cuba, overturning a landmark of the Cold War in the hemisphere.

"The Cold War has ended this day in San Pedro Sula," said Honduran President Manuel Zelaya following the announcement. "We begin a new era of fraternity and tolerance."

The action doesn't mean Cuba will return to the 34-member body that helps coordinate policies and mediates disputes throughout the Americas.

Cuban officials have repeatedly insisted they have no interest in returning to an organization they consider a tool of the United States.

However, if Cuba

changes its mind, the agreement calls for "a process of dialogue" in line with OAS "practices, proposals and principles" — a veiled allusion to agreements on human rights and democracy.

The decision was taken by consensus, meaning the United States accepted it, though Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton had lobbied personally for requiring Cuba to make democratic reforms and improve respect for human rights.

Serena loses at French Open

Federer nearing career Grand Slam

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

PARIS — Serena Williams, of all people, got a case of the jitters.

That was her explanation, anyway.

The 10-time Grand Slam champion kept finding herself in, then out of, trouble in the French Open quarterfinals Wednesday, until running out of stamina and strokes down the stretch of a 7-6 (3), 5-7, 7-5 loss to Svetlana Kuznetsova that ended Williams' 18-match winning streak at major tournaments.

"I had an opportunity, and I got really tight, and I pretty much gave it to her," said the second-seeded Williams, who blew a 3-1 lead in the third set. "It was like, 'Here. Do you want to go to the semis? Because I don't.' She was like, 'OK.'"

The seventh-seeded Kuznetsova's semifinal opponent Thursday is No. 30 Samantha Stosur of Australia, who defeated Sorana Cirstea of Romania 6-1, 6-3. The other women's semifinal is No. 1 Dinara Safina of Russia against No. 20 Dominika Cibulkova of Slovakia.

If Stosur-Cirstea was as one-sided as could be, Kuznetsova-Williams was hyper-competitive and superbly played. Until, at least, Kuznetsova (kooz-NET-so-vah) took eight of the last nine points, breaking Williams in the final game.

"Honestly, I think I lost because of me," Williams said, "and not because of anything she did."

Williams denied she felt fatigued, blaming nerves instead.

How could that be? "Maybe I put some expectations on myself that I didn't put on myself initially," she said.

Roger Federer spoke about dealing with nerves Wednesday, too, although his problems came before he began playing 11th-seeded Gael Monfils of France.

"We're all nervous at this stage of the competition. I felt it. Yesterday I felt it, and I felt it again today in the warmup," said Federer, who knows this might be his best chance

FILER — A new coach, a new facility, a new attitude. The Filer High School football program is ready to turn everything around in 2009, starting with a new home field and a new leader, Russ Burnum.

READY FOR CHANGE

BY BRADLEY GUIRE/TIMES-NEWS WRITER

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News
Russ Burnum, Filer High School's new varsity head football coach, stands on Filer's new football venue, which is located on the west side of the high school, as a crew works on a new field house Tuesday.

New Filer coach brings experience; new venue brings game closer to campus

Burnum, who teaches government at the high school, is the new head varsity football coach. His task: revitalize a program that finished with only one victory in 2008 and hasn't waded deeper than the quarterfinal round of the Class 3A state playoffs since 2004.

"We had a vibe two years ago and I feel like it's back," said Joe Taylor, who will be a senior center this fall at Filer. "I'm putting all my faith in (Burnum)."

Originally from Gardnerville, Nev., not far from Lake Tahoe, Burnum has coached every level from junior high to junior college. He served as defensive coordinator at Foothill College (Los Altos Hills, Calif.) and West Valley College (Saratoga, Calif.), and most recently coached in the Idaho Falls area. This is only his second head coaching position, and Filer is where he wants to be.

"I relish the idea of the challenge," Burnum said. "It's not a big football town, and I'd like to give it my shot of football, my style of coaching and change the culture of football."

Many players such as Ryan Orr are excited for the change and feel that Burnum is off to a good start with his program-building goals of holding spring camp, adding a junior varsity squad and working with players in the middle school, just to name a few.

Orr, who aims to play running back and receiver during his junior season this fall, said he appreciates the revival of the offense that helped put Filer on the path to the playoffs in 2007.

"He's bringing back what we ran two years ago, a spread offense," Orr said. "We ran something different last year, and it was a joke. A lot of the older guys know (the spread offense), and it's easy to catch on."

While Burnum can't promise a high number of victories or immediate championships, he is committed to making Filer football competitive.

"The kids are here," he said. "It's just a matter of coaching them up, and I feel like I can do that."

Field coming along

A Hail Mary pass north of U.S. Highway 30 — OK, a little farther — the new football venue is taking shape for this fall. Filer wanted to host its home football games at the high school as opposed to the current field off of Stevens Street.

The playing surface, like many around the valley, is enclosed by an 8-lane track, and Wildcat red landscaping flags dot the field, marking spots where it could use some work. Cement is set for the home- and visitor-side bleachers, and the field house — which will provide concessions, restrooms, team meeting rooms and equipment storage — is coming together at the north end zone.

"Everything's going pretty good," athletic director LaRell Patterson said. "(The school board) approved the (public address) system, we picked out colors for the press box and the scoreboard is in."

The entire football stadium project was budgeted to use $800,000 of a voter-approved $15 million bond levy in May 2008.

Bryant focused on capturing fourth title

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — His smile has vanished, replaced by something closer to a scowl. His days of joking around are seemingly on hold.

Kobe Bryant has gotten deadly serious. He has that look, you've seen the one. It's the cold-blooded, get-out-of-my-way-or-pay-glare he'll shoot at a teammate who messes up or an opponent who dares to try and stop him.

The Black Mamba is poised to strike.

The NBA finals are in his sights.

After a humbling loss to the Boston Celtics in last year's finals, Bryant and the Los Angeles Lakers will be seeking atonement — and a 15th championship — when they face the resurrected Orlando Magic in Game 1 on Thursday night at the Staples Center.

For Bryant, the game's greatest late-game closer since Michael Jordan, it's a second opportunity at shutting up some of his loudest detractors. He has won three titles, but hasn't been able to get No. 4 since Shaquille O'Neal was traded after the 2004 season to Miami.

Bryant was asked Wednesday if he needed a post-Shaq championship to enhance his legacy.

"Not at all," Bryant said. "It means nothing. To me, it's about winning another one, just because I want to win another one."

Before catching his breath, Bryant, who had been loose and relaxed earlier this week, then took a verbal swipe worthy of a flagrant foul at O'Neal, his former teammate with whom he famously feuded.

"People think Shaq would have won a championship without me on that team," he said. "They're crazy."

This is Bryant's chance. He doesn't want to waste it.

And O'Neal, a 7-foot timeline connecting finals appearances by both franchises, posted a message on his Twitter.com site saying he was pulling for Bryant.

Tribe tramples Twin Falls

Times-News

A pair of run-rule victories marked the beginning of the Buhl American Legion Baseball Class A team's season Wednesday as the Tribe swept Twin Falls at Faux Field in Buhl.

Buhl won 11-1 in six innings and 15-0 in five for the nightcap.

Dylan Brooks gave up only two hits to the Cowboys in Game 2, while Markus Lively completed the shutout in relief, surrendering no hits.

The Hamiltons did the most damage at the plate for the Tribe. Jack belted three hits in Game 1 to go along with J.D. Leckenby's two-run homer, while Nick doubled and batted in two runs in Game 2. Matt hit 4-for-4 in the opener, then smacked a grand slam in the nightcap.

Twin Falls is back on the road today against the Green Sox of Burley, while the Tribe (2-0, 2-0 Area C) will travel to Hailey next Tuesday to face Wood River.

Tiger Woods, right, and Jack Nicklaus share a laugh on the No. 12 tee during the Memorial Skins Game Wednesday in Dublin, Ohio.

Tiger & Jack play again, with a familiar outcome

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Beneath a gray sky and dreary rain, thousands of colorful umbrellas framed both sides of every fairway at Muirfield Village. On a miserable day to watch golf, no one was about to miss a single shot.

Not with Jack Nicklaus in his familiar crouch, grinding over a birdie putt that everyone wanted him to make. Not with Tiger Woods, down to his last shot, delivering in the clutch with a 12-foot par everyone knew he was going to make.

The final cheer and the biggest prized belonged to Woods.

This might be Jack's course, but this is Tiger's era. In a closest-to-the-pin chipping contest on the 18th hole, Woods won the Memorial Skins Game on Wednesday by holing his chip from 25 yards in the rough.

"Didn't surprise me," Nicklaus said. "Didn't surprise him."

They first played with each other at Augusta National in a practice round before the 1996 Masters, after which Nicklaus predicted 10 green jackets or more for Woods. They last competed against each other in the opening two rounds of the 2000 PGA Championship, which Woods won in a playoff for his third straight major.

"Do you remember what I said that day?" Nicklaus recalled. "I said there is no more passing of the baton. It's been taken."

The record still belongs to Nicklaus, who set the standard in professional golf with 18 majors. Woods is closing in, capturing his 14th major last summer at the U.S. Open.

Nicklaus believes Woods will break his record in the next three years.

Wednesday was more about charity, and the rare occasion to bring together the best of their generations. The Skins Game replaced the traditional pro-am when sponsor Morgan Stanley withdrew its presence this year because of scrutiny over corporate entertainment.

"That's one of the great things about our sport," Woods said. "Guys from past generations — not just one generation removed, but a few — can still compete out here. Not at the highest level, but for nine holes. A few holes, they certainly can play with us, and even beat us."

Nicklaus did just that on the par-5 11th, hitting an 8-iron to 4 feet for a birdie to win two skins. Woods answered on the 13th hole with a 25-foot birdie putt to win two skins. Stewart Cink collected a skin with a birdie on the 14th. Kenny Perry, the defending champion at the Memorial, looked like he would take four skins on the 18th with a par save from the bunker until Woods made his 12-footer.

That's when the fun began.

Woods was the second to play, and his chip landed perfectly and began rolling toward the cup until it disappeared, a shot Nicklaus has seen him make before at the Memorial.

Nicklaus was next, and his chip looked good until the final few feet when it broke below the hole. Woods figured he would make it, just like Nicklaus made a birdie on his final hole at the PGA Championship nine years ago, just like the Golden Bear made birdie on his final hole in a major championship at St. Andrews in 2005.

"Oh, yeah. Are you kidding me?" Woods said. "He was eyeing it, too."

Perry, the only player without a skin, was last to hit and watched his chip burn the right edge of the cup. The other foursome included British Open and PGA champion Padraig Harrington, Jim Furyk, Vijay Singh and Camilo Villegas.

But as far as the fans were concerned, there really were only two players on the golf course.

Costa Rica thrashes U.S. in WCQ qualifier

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Alvaro Saborio scored 79 seconds in, the second-fastest goal against the United States in a World Cup qualifier, and Costa Rica coasted to a 3-1 victory Wednesday night.

Celso Borges added a goal in the 13th minute, and Pablo Herrera sealed the victory for 41st-ranked Costa Rica when he made it 3-0 in the 69th.

Landon Donovan scored the U.S. goal when he converted a penalty kick in the second minute of second-half stoppage time.

The Ticos shredded the defense of the region's top-ranked team on the artificial turf of Saprissa Stadium, and the United States stumbled for the second straight time in Central America.

It was a tough start to a difficult three-match stretch of qualifying for the No. 14 Americans, who dropped to 0-7-1 in qualifying at Costa Rica, including 0-7 at San Jose, where they've been outscored 16-5. Donovan's goal was the first for the Americans in Costa Rica since Earnie Stewart's in 2000.

The Americans now come home to Chicago, where on Saturday they'll host Honduras, the last team to beat them in a qualifier on U.S. soil. The United States is 15-0-1 at home since the 3-2 defeat at Washington's RFK Stadium in September 2001. Then, on Aug. 12, the Americans play at Mexico, where they are 0-22-1.

Jerome splits with Madison

Times-News

The Jerome Cyclones split with visiting Madison on Wednesday, winning 4-3 in eight innings before dropping a 10-1 decision in the nightcap of an American Legion Baseball Class AA doubleheader.

Nolan McDonald picked up the win in the opener for Jerome (2-2), going all eight innings on the mound and singling home the game-winning run in the bottom of the eighth.

"McDonald got it done for himself, and he was the story of the first game," said Jerome coach Kenneth James. "He breezed through the last four innings and really got stronger as the game went on."

The Cyclones let walks and errors thwart a decent pitching outing in Game 2, as Madison only got five hits to pile up its 10 runs.

James said that Monday's scheduled doubleheader at Idaho Falls was moved to June 27. The Cyclones host Twin Falls on Tuesday.

KIMBERLY SWEPT AT HOME

Walks and errors proved costly as the Kimberly Astros American Legion Baseball Class A team was swept at home by the Pocatello Razorbacks on Wednesday, 18-12 and 10-5. The second game was called after five innings due to darkness.

Kimberly (0-2) held a 9-1 lead after two innings of the first game, but it quickly unraveled, and the Astros couldn't recover.

"We came out of the gates and scored nine runs in the first two innings, and we just walked the game away. You have to give them credit. They hit the ball and put a hurting to us," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers.

"It was just one of those long games that you hate to be a fielder in. We booted a couple of balls ... it was just one of those days."

Kimberly visits Class A Jerome today.

Cubs deny second Braves comeback

ATLANTA — Pinch-hitter Micah Hoffpauir blooped an RBI single to left field in the 11th inning, and the Chicago Cubs beat the Atlanta Braves 3-2 Wednesday night.

Derrek Lee started the 11th by drawing a walk from Jeff Bennett (2-3), then pulled off a nifty bit of baserunning to reach second. On a routine fly to left, Lee caught Matt Diaz off guard by tagging up and just beating a delayed throw to the bag.

Lee stopped at third on a single by Reed Johnson but came home when Hoffpauir looped a single just over the head of third baseman Chipper Jones.

The Braves, who rallied from five runs down the previous night to win 6-5 in the 12th, couldn't pull off another comeback. Kevin Gregg bounced back from blowing that one to set down Atlanta in order, earning his ninth save in 11 chances.

Angel Guzman (2-0) earned the win with two scoreless innings. Both starters — Chicago's Ted Lilly and Atlanta's Derek Lowe — pitched seven strong innings.

BREWERS 9, MARLINS 6

MIAMI — Ryan Braun homered and Milwaukee scored three runs on walks to snap its five-game road losing streak.

The Brewers scored six runs in the fifth inning, three on bases-loaded walks by reliever Hayden Penn, who came in for rookie Sean West (0-3) with runners on first and second.

ASTROS 6, ROCKIES 4

HOUSTON — Hunter Pence had a solo homer and two RBI singles and Houston won its fourth straight.

Lance Berkman and Ivan Rodriguez also drove in runs for the Astros, who've won five of six overall and seven of their last eight games against Colorado.

Chris Sampson held the Rockies scoreless in the eighth and ninth to earn his third save in four chances. Tim Byrdak (1-1) pitched a perfect seventh inning in relief of starter Brian Moehler to get the win.

Ian Stewart hit a three-run homer off for the Rockies, who've lost four in a row.

REDS 9, CARDINALS 3

Chicago Cubs pinch hitter Micah Hoffpauir drives in the winning run with a base hit Wednesday in the 12th inning against the Atlanta Braves in Atlanta. Chicago won 3-2.

Cincinnati Reds' 9-3 victory on Wednesday night.

Cardinals starter Kyle Lohse (4-4) was taken out with none out in the third inning complaining of tightness in his right forearm, an injury from getting hit by a pitch that had forced him to skip a turn in the rotation.

Cueto (5-3) allowed one run on 6 1-3 innings, ending a string of eight straight starts with seven or more innings that included a seven-inning stint in which he gave up one run in a 6-4 victory over St. Louis on May 8 in Cincinnati.

AMERICAN LEAGUE RED SOX 10, TIGERS 5

DETROIT — Josh Beckett did not allow a hit until there were two outs in the seventh inning and David Ortiz hit a two-run double, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 10-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers on Wednesday night.

The Red Sox, though, lost Kevin Youkilis to a freak injury in the eighth inning. Youkilis was stretching for a throw at first when Josh Anderson appeared to step on the back of his right ankle.

Beckett (6-2) gave up a single to Curtis Granderson with two outs in the seventh to end the no-hit bid. Beckett retired 18 straight batters after walking Placido Polanco with one out in the first until he walked Magglio Ordonez with one out in the seventh. Miguel Cabrera ate a fly to the warning track in right-center before Granderson singled to right.

The Tigers broke up the shutout with five unearned runs in the eighth.

ANGELS 8, BLUE JAYS 1

TORONTO — Jered Weaver had a career-high 10 strikeouts, Bobby Abreu homered and Los Angeles beat Toronto.

Chone Figgins had three hits, drove in a run and scored twice for the Angels, who finished with seven extra-base hits.

Weaver (5-2) allowed one run and three hits in seven innings to win back-to-back starts for the first time this season. The right-hander has an ERA of 1.64 in his past six.

Casey Janssen (1-2) allowed five runs and seven hits in four innings.

Weaver didn't allow a hit through the first four innings but doubles by Adam Lind and Lyle Overbay gave Toronto a run in the fifth.

RAVS 9, ROYALS 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jeff Niemann took a perfect game into the fifth inning and wound up with a two-hitter, and Ben Zobrist hit a grand slam to help lead Tampa Bay.

Niemann (5-4) retired the first 14 batters before Mark Teahen lined a two-out single to center in the fifth. The right-hander struck out a career-high nine and walked one in his first complete game.

RANGERS 4, YANKEES 2

NEW YORK — Scott Feldman pitched into the seventh inning to win his third consecutive start and Texas leapfrogged New York

Storms postpone Johnson's bid for 300th win

WASHINGTON (AP) — Randy Johnson's bid to become the 24th pitcher to win 300 games has been postponed.

Wednesday night's game between the San Francisco Giants and Washington Nationals was called off because of an unplayable field. Thunderstorms delayed the 5:05 p.m., MDT start time, and Nationals Park was drenched by the time the rain started to subside around 8:45 p.m. The game will be made up as part of a doubleheader today starting at 2:35 p.m. Johnson is scheduled to pitch the first game for the Giants.

for the best record in the American League.

Feldman (5-0) allowed two runs, one earned, and five hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Jorge Posada homered for the second straight day for New York, which had won five of six and 16 of 20. Andy Pettitte (5-2), who left his previous start with a stiff back, looked shaky over five innings. The Yankees were without first baseman Mark Teixeira, scratched with a bruised right ankle.

ATHLETICS 5, WHITE SOX 3

CHICAGO — Bobby Crosby and Landon Powell hit back-to-back homers, Jason Giambi also connected for Oakland.

Joshua Outman (3-0) earned the win, allowing seven hits and three runs — two earned — over 6 2-3 innings. Andrew Bailey got five outs for his third save in six chances.

Chicago starter Clayton Richard (2-1) gave up seven hits and five runs and surrendered all three of Oakland's homers.

Chicago's Jermaine Dye lined his 14th homer, a two-run shot, over the center-field wall in the first.

INDIANS 10, TWINS 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Cliff Lee received some run support for a change and cruised through eight innings for Cleveland.

Lee (3-6) turned in his 10th straight quality start, six innings or more and three runs allowed or less, picking up only his second victory since April 16. The left-hander was handed just 30 runs over his first 11 appearances from the third-highest scoring team in the league.

He scattered seven hits, one walk and a hit batter, striking out five.

Jhonny Peralta's three-run homer against rookie Anthony Swarzak (1-2) was the big hit, part of a two-out, five-run surge in the third inning.

Patriot safety Harrison announces retirement

Will join Dungy on NBC studio show

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Two-time Pro Bowl safety Rodney Harrison announced his retirement on Wednesday, saying he is through hitting quarterbacks after a 15-year career for the New England Patriots and San Diego Chargers.

"I am done, and I am very much so at peace with that," he said in a conference call with reporters. "Football has been good to me. I've worked hard; I've played hard. I've done some things that I never dreamt I could do, and now it's time to move forward to the next phase of my life."

Later Wednesday, NBC announced that Harrison will join its Sunday night NFL studio show; he worked for the network during its Super Bowl coverage last year. The outspoken safety will be joined by an understated coach on "Football Night in America" as analysts.

Tony Dungy retired from the Indianapolis Colts after this past season, capping a career that included becoming the first black coach to win a Super Bowl.

Both men appeared on NBC's Super Bowl pregame coverage earlier this year.

Expect Harrison's frank speaking to continue.

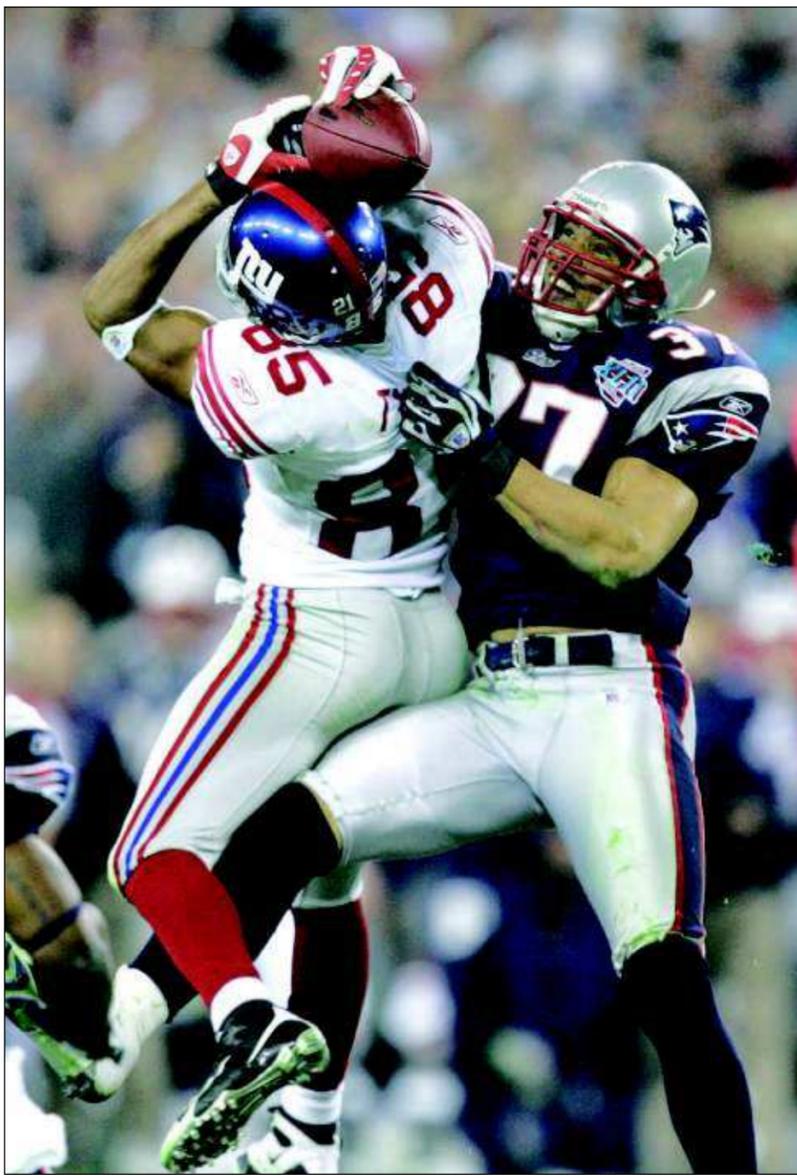

"When I played I didn't have many friends," he said on the network's conference call, "so I'm sure I'm not going to make friends now."

YAHOO SUES NFL PLAYERS ASSOCIATION

MINNEAPOLIS — Yahoo Inc. is suing the NFL Players Association to try to ensure it won't be sued for using player statistics, photos and other data for its popular online fantasy football game.

The lawsuit filed this week in federal court in Minneapolis alleges that a licensing arm of the players union has threatened to sue if Yahoo doesn't pay royalties for the use of publicly available player data.

Santa Clara, Calif.-based Yahoo says the last of its licensing agreements with NFL Players Inc. expired March 1. But it claims it doesn't need the authorization, citing a decision in a similar case between NFL Players Inc. and CBS Interactive Inc.

New York Giants receiver David Tyree (85) catching a 32-yard pass in the clutches of New England Patriots safety Rodney Harrison (37) during the fourth quarter of the Super Bowl XLIII at University of Phoenix in Glendale, Ariz., on Feb. 3, 2008. Harrison announced his retirement on Wednesday, saying he is through hitting quarterbacks after a 15-year career for the New England Patriots and San Diego Chargers.

IRVING OFFICIAL CONCERNED ABOUT COWBOYS FACILITY

IRVING, Texas — A series of text messages from city officials after the Dallas Cowboys practice facility collapsed reveal concerns about the structure's quality and suggest the team "pushes" things through and receives preferential treatment.

The day after the facility collapsed last month, Irving City Manager Tommy Gonzalez referred to it as "a big ole tent" that "probably never was structurally sound enough" to hold up against straight-line winds.

The Cowboys' tentlike practice facility collapsed on May 2, paralyzing scouting assistant Rich Behm and injuring 11 others.

Gonzalez characterized the Cowboys as a team that "pushes" its projects through the city bureaucracy. He wrote in a text to another city official that "it was for 'the Cowboys' ... that's just what my gut tells me."

The Dallas Morning News reported the story in its Wednesday edition, using state open records laws to obtain the text messages. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones and a team spokesman declined to comment to the newspaper. The team did not immediately return a call to The Associated Press on Wednesday.

AGENT: VINCE YOUNG DOES NOT WANT TRADE

NASHVILLE, Tenn. —

Vince Young's agent says the quarterback does not want the Tennessee Titans to trade him, downplaying comments Young made to a Baltimore television station.

Major Adams said that Young's intends to remain in Tennessee and battle Kerry Collins for the No. 1 quarterback position. Adams' reaction was first reported in the City Paper in Nashville.

"Vince's desire has always been to compete for the starting quarterback job in Tennessee," Adams said late Tuesday night. "Even before they drafted him, they asked him if he thought he could compete for the starting role, and he said yes. He has always been a starter and that is his mindset."

Labor talks begin with early formalities

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL and its players' union opened talks Wednesday in a bid to avoid a work stoppage in 2011, when the current labor contract expires.

Commissioner Roger Goodell and DeMaurice Smith, the new executive director of the NFL Players Association, were both present at the meeting.

"We had a good meeting and agreed to meet again," the NFL said in a statement.

These meetings were mainly about procedural issues rather than substantive ones. One early subject of contention: the union's demand the NFL teams open their books and the league's position that the union already has all the relevant financial information.

"We are focused on getting an agreement that works for the long term," Goodell said Monday during a function at Giants Stadium.

"We're not specifically setting any deadlines or dates. Our issue is we know we have two more years of football. We would like to have an agreement that works for everybody in that period of time. If it takes up to the final moment, it takes up to the final moment."

The original agreement was to last through 2013, but the owners opted out in May 2008, citing economic problems that make the nearly 60 percent of revenues that go to the players excessive. Many teams as well as the league office have since laid off employees.

While there are indications that ticket sales for 2009 are off for some teams, the league recently signed a two-year television extension through 2013 that is reported to contain increases of from three to five percent.

If there is no agreement by March, the 2010 season will be the first without a salary cap since 1993, when the first deal containing free agency and the cap was signed. That followed more than five years without a contract following the 1987 strike, when the union decertified and took their case to federal court.

The late Gene Upshaw, the union's executive director, said before his unexpected death last August that if the cap went away, there would not be another. Smith has agreed with his predecessor's stand.

"If we move to an uncapped scenario, we will not go back," Smith said during a conference call with reporters in March, days after being elected as executive director.

If there is no cap, teams would spend as much as they want for star players. However, free agency would be extended from four to six years and there would be no minimum for spending, meaning some teams could spend far less on salaries than they are now.

"I don't think every team is going to start being like the Yankees and start throwing money around," Sean O'Hara, the New York Giants' player representative, said this week. "Some teams will do that, but on the flip side, others will say since we don't have to spend $102 million, we'll spend $80 million. The landscape will definitely change and it won't be a windfall for everybody."

Mine That Bird

2-1 favorite for Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) — What a perfect contrast in this soap opera of a Triple Crown season: The trainer hobbles up to the podium to talk about the horse who streaked to victory in the Kentucky Derby and is looking to add Saturday's Belmont Stakes to his record.

Still on crutches after breaking his right leg in a motorcycle crash before the Derby, Chip Woolley said his little gelding is ready for one more big run in the Belmont. A win, and Mine That Bird would become the 12th Derby-Belmont winner and first since Thunder Gulch in 1995.

And his rider, Calvin Borel, would be the first jockey to win the Triple Crown on different horses, having won the Derby aboard Mine That Bird and the Preakness aboard Rachel Alexandra.

"The horse is doing super," Woolley said. "He's gotten stronger every day since the Preakness, and we're tickled with where he is right now."

Mine That Bird arrived at Belmont Park on Wednesday after a plane ride from Louisville, hours after being made the 2-1 favorite in a field of 10 3-year-olds for the 1½-mile Belmont. The Derby winner drew the No. 7 post position for the longest and most grueling the Triple Crown races.

Charitable Man, who missed the Derby and the Preakness but won the Peter Pan Stakes at Belmont on May 9, was the second choice at 3-1. He drew the No. 6 post, and will be ridden by Alan Garcia, winner of last year's Belmont with 38-1 long shot Da' Tara.

Also entered, from the rail out, are: Chocolate Candy (10-1), Dunkirk (4-1), Mr. Hot Stuff (15-1), Summer Bird (12-1), Luv Gov (20-1), Flying Private (12-1), Miner's Escape (15-1) and Brave Victory (15-1).

Borel guided Mine That Bird to a breathtaking last-to-first run along the rail to win the Derby by 6¾ lengths on May 2, and the gelding finished a diminishing length behind the filly in the Preakness under Mike Smith with another come-from-behind run two weeks later.

In the Belmont, Mine That Bird may be closer to the leaders because the early pace usually is not as fast as in shorter races.

"That's what we're hoping for," Woolley said at the post position draw. "With his running style, we're going to have to let him run his race. When you start slowing the fractions down, if you let him run his same race, he's going to move way on up."

"If we can just be within 10 or 12 lengths of them, I feel comfortable he'll have enough kick left."

Finals

"I am saying it today and today only," Shaq tweeted. "I want kobe bryant to get number four, spread da word."

From the moment Bryant dejectedly walked off the floor in Boston last June following L.A.'s 39-point loss in Game 6, he has been focused on a return. He helped restore U.S. basketball's world supremacy by leading the Americans to an Olympic gold medal in China last summer.

That was the Redeem Team. He's on another one.

"My next goal is winning the NBA championship," he said. "We don't want to fall short of that."

The Lakers have won 14 titles. Orlando, 0.

The Lakers have won 61 finals games. Orlando, 0.

Los Angeles coach Phil Jackson has nine championship rings. Orlando's Stan Van Gundy 1 — but he got it as an assistant and doesn't know where it is.

Yet the Magic, making their first appearance in the finals since 1995, won both regular-season matchups against the Lakers and are capable of an upset.

"They've beaten us three of the last four times," Bryant said. "So we're very, very concerned."

They should be.

Dwight Howard, Orlando's fun-loving Superman of a center, is the league's latest incarnation of Shaq. He can bend backboards, take over a game at both ends and crack up his teammates with a killer impersonation of the frumpy and grumpy Van Gundy.

In Game 6 of the Eastern Conference finals, Howard scored 40 points with 14 rebounds as the Magic finished off Cleveland and sawed the Kobe Bryant-LeBron James dream finals matchup in half.

On their way to the finals, the 3-point-happy Magic (they made 62 3s against the Cavs and are averaging 8.6 per game in the postseason) have knocked off the favored Celtics, Cavaliers and can now dispatch the Lakers.

That would be quite a trifecta. No team has ever beaten three 60-win teams in the same postseason.

Superman doesn't mind his role as Underdog.

"We've always been overlooked," Howard said.

"We were overlooked in the first series against Philly. We were overlooked against Boston. We were overlooked against the Cavs, and we're still overlooked. We don't want to be a team that everybody picks to win, because I think as a young team, once everybody starts saying, 'OK, you're this or you're that,' sometimes you tend to forget what got you there."

"Everybody picking against us motivates us. It drives us to do something greater."

The Magic's season seemed doomed when All-Star point guard Jameer Nelson went down with a shoulder injury in February. The team survived the adversity and now may get a recovered Nelson back for the finals.

Van Gundy was still weighing whether to play Nelson, who averaged 27.5 points in the two wins over Los Angeles. He isn't worried about Nelson disrupting Orlando's chemistry, and Van Gundy is not convinced his return would provide any goose bumps.

"It's not like he hasn't played with our guys," Van Gundy said, "and I don't really think our guys need an emotional boost. I don't think it's going to be a Willis Reed moment or anything."

French

to win the only Grand Slam tournament missing from his resume. "I was tired, I was nervous, and I didn't feel really good. Then once out on court, you know, I get my act together."

There's an understatement.

Federer beat Monfils 7-6 (6), 6-2, 6-4 to close in on completing a career Grand Slam and earning a 14th major title to tie Pete Sampras' career record.

Next up for Federer is No. 5 Juan Martin del Potro of Argentina, who eliminated No. 16 Tommy Robredo in straight sets. Friday's other men's semifinal will be No. 23 Robin Soderling — the man who upset four-time defending champion Rafael Nadal in the fourth round — against No. 12 Fernando Gonzalez.

Federer is 26-1 against the other semifinalists, including 5-0 against del Potro.

"Doesn't mean because I have a great record against all the players left in the draw that, you know, I'm going to win this," Federer said, "but

He is into his 20th consecutive major semifinal, extending his own record; del Potro is in the first of his career.

"We all know how he plays," the 20-year-old del Potro said, "and we all know what he wants to achieve here now that Rafa is no longer here."

The women's semifinalists might very well be relieved to know that 2002 French Open champion Williams is gone, because she was by far the most accomplished of the remaining players.

Kuznetsova, the 2004 U.S. Open champion, is the only member of the remaining quartet to have won a major title. Neither Stosur nor Cibulkova has won any singles title on tour.

Still, Kuznetsova has something of a reputation as someone who is capable of folding at key moments of tense matches, including a loss to Williams at the Australian Open in January after serving for the match in the second set.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On September 22, 2009, at the hour of 11:00 o'clock AM of said day, at Land Title and Escrow, Inc., 706 Main Street, Gooding, Idaho, JUST LAW, INC., as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Gooding, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Lots 1, 2 and the South half of Lot 3, Block 127, Gooding 2nd Addition, according to the plat thereof filed May 22, 1909, in the office of the County Recorder, Gooding County, Idaho.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of: 434 13th Ave., West, Gooding, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, and the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Doris L. Leshner, a widow and Dee Anna Gaston, a single woman, as Grantor(s) with Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded January 7, 2003, as Instrument No. 198555, in the records of Gooding County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to Midfirst Bank, recorded May 13, 2009, as Instrument No. 230495, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows: Monthly payments in the amount of $656.25 for the months of November 2008 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $64,784.55 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 8.875% from October 1, 2008, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC COMMENT

Idaho Housing and Finance Association (IHFA) and the Idaho Department of Commerce (IDC) invite public comment on the State Of Idaho Program Year 2008 Consolidated Annual Performance Report (2008 CAPER) between June 4, 2009 and June 23, 2009. The 2008 CAPER is drafted to comply with federal requirements for housing and community development funding programs. Following the comment period, the CAPER will be amended to all reflect public input then submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for review and approval.

The CAPER addresses the federal block grant programs administered by IHFA and IDC. They are: The Emergency Shelter Grant (ESG) Program, the Home Investments Partnerships Program (HOME), the American Dream Down Payment Initiative (ADDI), and the Community Development Block Grant Program (CDBG). The reporting period is April 1, 2008 through March 31, 2009. The CAPER describes program activities outside of Idaho's seven entitlement communities: HOME/CDBG-Boise, CDBG-Lewiston, Nampa, Idaho Falls, Pocatello, Meridian, and Coeur d'Alene.

A Public Hearing for the 2008 CAPER is scheduled June 18, 2009 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. at Park Plaza- 565 West Myrtle, Boise, Idaho in the First Floor Conference Room. This hearing is held to obtain public comment from all interested individuals and/or organizations.

Participants may request reasonable accommodation up to three working days in advance of the hearing. Submit a request to Jerri Kirkpatrick at 1.877.438.4472 / TDD 1.800.545.1833 Ext. 400, by email to jerri@ihfa.org, by fax to 208.331.4808 or Idaho Housing and Finance Association, P.O. NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, the 22nd day of September, 2009, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m. of said day at Alliance Title & Escrow, 1411 Falls Ave. E., Suite 1315, Twin Falls, in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, Charles W. Fawcett, as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to-wit:

LOT 101 OF GOLDEN EAGLE SUBDIVISION NO. 2, TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO, RECORDED IN BOOK 20 OF PLATS, PAGE 7.

The Successor Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60 113, Idaho Code, the Successor Trustee has been informed that the street address of 1313 Valencia St., Twin Falls, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by ALEX VILLASENOR and NADINE VILLASENOR, Husband and Wife, Grantor, to Charles W. Fawcett, Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of FIRST FEDERAL SAVINGS BANK OF TWIN FALLS, recorded April 28, 2006, as Instrument No. 2006-010259, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho; and assigned to the Idaho Housing and Finance Association by Assignment of Deed of Trust recorded on October 13, 2006, as Instrument No. 2006-025854, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTOR IS NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45 1506 (4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, monthly installment payments under the Deed of Trust Note dated April 28, 2006, in the amount of $927.00 each, for the months of November, 2008, through April, 2009, inclusive; and for each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reimbursement. All delinquent payments are now due, plus accumulated late charges, plus any costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The accrued interest is at the rate of 5.70% per annum from October 1, 2008. The principal balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $123,050.49, plus accrued interest at the rate of 5.70% per annum from October 1, 2008.

DATED This 19th day of May, 2009.

CHARLES W. FAWCETT, a Member of the Idaho State Bar, SUCCESSOR TRUSTEE

Coupon clippers share their wealth with military families

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Thrifty Shopper in New Jersey" (Feb. 28) she can send coupons left over from her coupon swap to an overseas military base. Several organizations on base, including the Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society (www.nmcrrs.org) and the Fleet and Family Support Centers, collect and distribute coupons. Because of the costs of living overseas, coupons can be vital to military families. Thank you, Abby, for your support of us throughout the years.

DEAR ABBY

for people who want to learn how to use coupons to their fullest potential. That way, "Thrifty Shopper" can expand her swap and also find herself some great deals.

- JODY S. PENGILLY, MINN.

DEAR NAVY WIFE: No, thank you for the valuable information. Readers, the Defense Commissary Agency (DeCA) recommends that people not send coupons that are more than three months beyond their expiration date. Manufacturers require commissaries to return coupons within six months of expiration. Coupons older than six months by the time they make it to the manufacturer will not be honored. Therefore, the value of the coupon comes out of the commissary budget.

location of their choice, it's a very easy way to help military personnel and their families. For details, go to ocpnet.org.

DEAR NAVY WIFE: There's a wonderful Web site called the Overseas Coupon Program. On this site, people can adopt a military base in the branch of service and location of their choice, it's a very easy way to help military personnel and their families. For details, go to ocpnet.org.

Thanks for all the years of enjoyment, Abby. I am glad my first time writing to you isn't because I have a problem, but to help someone. God bless!

- L.B. IN NANUET, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: "Thrifty" should visit www.afullcup.com. It's a large group of online coupon swappers that lists hundreds of online coupons as well as runs swaps via "snail" mail. They also offer information

DEAR ABBY: Since military families overseas don't have much access to coupons like we do here and because prices are so high overseas, coupons are very much appreciated.

Many military groups such as the Marine Corps League, American Legion and VFW, and service organizations such as Kiwanis, Rotary and not to mention church groups, senior centers, etc. around the country have coupon projects in which they collect coupons from within the community and send them to military bases overseas.

"Thrifty Shopper" should inquire within her local community to see if there is a group involved in such a program. I am the coordinator for our local Marine Corps League coupon project. We have a Web site that gives more information, including how anyone can start a project in their own community. Visit www.couponproject.zoomshare.com for more information.

IF JUNE 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: It is important to get advice from trusted advisers in the next several weeks. You are feeling adventurous and flying high with a sense of cosmic purpose, but common sense could be lacking for the next few weeks. You will benefit from the guidance of those more grounded than you are. Some important issues that are ignored or misinterpreted may catch you unaware in late July or early August but by early September you can ask for a promotion, successfully apply for a new job, or make sound business decisions. If you work hard and don't give in to temptations you will sail past any trouble. Turn problems into assets in November by listening to inspiring words and acting on your dreams.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ble and reinforce positive behavior.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can't live with a grudge. Living with a grudge is like living with a goat that eats your book report right before class and wantonly breaks the alarm clock that should have gotten you up in time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): People, not houses, make a community great. Be a better person and you get a better community. Volunteer your time and get involved in community affairs. Your input can make a difference.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Start now, pay later. You are overly ambitious. You could be blind to hidden costs or drawbacks so should not begin anything of major consequence that involves a potential risk to your piggy bank.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Procrastination pays deep dividends. By holding off on major decisions and changes you will reap future benefits. Romantic yearnings and desires, if put into action, may prove disappointing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Like a true nature child, you were born to be wild. However, today the powers-that-be might frown on demonstrations of independence and originality. Keep your outrageous comments and antics hidden.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Chill out. You may feel warmed up and raring to go, but others prefer to keep calm, cool and collected. You may feel challenged to make changes that upset significant others who prefer the traditional.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Turn the other cheek. Anger and forgiveness are merely two sides of the same coin and you can have a choice. Control your reactions toward authority figures and prevent a tiresome disagreement.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Connect the dots. You may be presented with a puzzle, but the outline is clear. If you maintain a low profile and avoid making any major decisions, you will avoid certain pitfalls and potential reprisals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A wrinkle in time is much easier to accept than a wrinkle on your face. By temporarily putting your latest project on the back burner, you will avoid controversy, frustrations and sleepless nights.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fine in theory, hard in practice. You would love to be considered a perfectionist, but must admit the human condition often entails flaws. You may watch the pennies so closely that you lose sight of the dollars.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Let a dispute starve from lack of oxygen. If you don't air your grievances or voice your disapproval, you won't be tempted to begin an argument that will leave everyone a loser.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 4, the 155th day of 2009. There are 210 days left in the year.

Today's highlight: On June 4, 1942, the Pacific Battle of Midway began during World War II; three days later, American naval forces claimed a decisive victory over the Japanese.

In 1939, the German ocean liner St. Louis, carrying more than 900 Jewish refugees from Germany, was turned away from the Florida coast by U.S. officials.

In 1940, the Allied military evacuation from Dunkirk, France, ended.

In 1954, French Premier Joseph Laniel and Vietnamese Premier Bao Loc signed treaties in Paris according to "complete independence" to Vietnam.

In 1979, Joe Clark of the Progressive Conservatives became the 16th prime minister of Canada.

In 1989, Chinese army troops stormed Beijing to crush a pro-democracy movement, killing hundreds, possibly thousands, of people. "Jerome Robbins' Broadway" won best musical at the 43rd annual Tony Awards; "The Heidi Chronicles" by Wendy Wasserstein won best play.

Ten years ago: Using a provision of the Constitution allowing him to bypass the Senate, President Bill Clinton appointed openly gay San Francisco businessman James C. Hormel ambassador to Luxembourg while Congress was in recess. On the 10th anniversary of China's crackdown on the Tiananmen Square protests, tens of thousands of people in Hong Kong held a candle-light vigil.

Five years ago: A powerful bomb blast ripped through a crowded outdoor market in central Russia, killing at least 11 people. President George W. Bush nominated former Missouri Sen. John Danforth to be America's U.N. ambassador.

One year ago: Barack Obama, having clinched the Democratic presidential nomination, picked Caroline Kennedy to help him choose a running mate. Police in Hartford, Conn., released a surveillance video showing a 78-year-old man being struck by a hit-and-run driver on a busy city street and being ignored by most passers-by. (The victim, Angel Acree Torres, was removed from life support on May 11, 2009.)

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Man is still the most extraordinary computer of all."
— John F. Kennedy

People often complain about freakish computer-dealt hands. But those hands reflect the true odds, while the imperfect human method leads to unnaturally balanced hands. The following deal, though, from the National Women's Teams in the UK, would have added to such paranoia.

At one table South became declarer in four spades after North's Namyats opening bid to show a strong hand with spades. She received the opening lead of the heart 10. The two was played from the dummy, East began a high-low with the six, and Heather Dhondy won with the king. Dhondy next led the heart four from her hand. West discarded, as did dummy, and East had to follow with the three. When did you last win the second round of a suit with the four?

At another table North decided to start with her system's strong bid, two diamonds. South launched straight into Blackwood. North responded five diamonds to show one or four keycards with diamonds as trump, and South KNEW this must be four to justify the two-diamond opening. So she bid seven no-trump.

West first checked that she was on lead, then doubled and led the diamond ace. Seven no-trump was soon down 10 for a 2600 penalty.

Although North's opening bid was ill-judged, South's bidding was very wild. North might have shown three keycards, after which South would not have known if there was an ace missing. In addition, South should have bid seven hearts, not seven no-trump, because North might have had a heart void.

ANSWER: While it might be right to sit back and defend, my instincts with this pattern are to compete in a minor. The safest way to do this is to bid four no-trump for the minors. This way you rate to get to play in your longest combined minor-suit holding.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
