A TROPICAL DREAM COMES TRUE

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Kim Knopp wipes away tears as her son, AJ Azevedo, reacts after receiving one of many presents Friday night from the Wishing Star Foundation and the Wood River Valley's Sober Riders motorcycle chapter. The groups are helping to make AJ's wish of visiting Hawaii come true. The Twin Falls boy is fighting terminal brain cancer. When asked, 'Why Hawaii?' he said, 'My mom went there when I was in her belly and I kind of missed out on it.'

AJ Azevedo, a 9-year-old from Twin Falls with an inoperable brain tumor, is having his wish come true.

On Friday, the Wishing Star Foundation, along with the Wood River Chapter Sober Riders Motorcycle

Club, granted AJ's wish by agreeing to send him and his mother, Kim Knopp, to Hawaii. Azevedo has been battling the tumor for more than a year and will travel to Boise next week for extensive treatment.

"Thank you," was all AJ could say when he saw 20 people outside his door with Hawaiian leis, but his face said much more.

AJ has always wanted to travel to Hawaii. "My mom went there when I was in her belly," said Azevedo "and so I kind of missed out on it."

"I am completely surprised," said Knopp.

At first, Allie

Vargas, Wishing Star Chapter president for the Magic Valley, said she didn't think the foundation would be able to grant AJ's wish due to its expense.

Twin Falls Council to vote on traffic, golf items

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council is scheduled to vote tonight on a request from city staff to minimize traffic problems on Pole Line Road between the Costco and Target parking lots.

Under a temporary setup, motorists would be prohibited from making left turns out of the parking lots and driving across Pole Line Road from one parking lot to the other — the two biggest problems.

The setup — a barrier of orange "candlesticks" — would cost $1,000 and its impact would be studied for a year before the city chooses a permanent solution. Police say the area is a source of growing concern because of vehicle collisions.

The City Council will also: Consider a proposal to increase play and revenue at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Under an idea from Mike

Hamblin, the course professional, the city would charge just $1 per hole after 6 p.m. Some courses in Boise take that approach.

There would also be a $25 summer special from 2 to 5 p.m.

Both ideas are designed to

Blue Lakes work ahead of schedule

Construction could be done by mid-September

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

Roadwork on Blue Lakes Boulevard is more than two months ahead of schedule, the Idaho Transportation Department said Friday.

Construction on the busiest road in Twin Falls should be complete by mid-September, well ahead of the original November target and the revised Oct. 26 date, said Kimbol Allen, the ITD resident engineer overseeing the project.

"It's excellent," said Allen. "A lot of it is because the public and businesses have worked with (the workers) so well because they've given them as much room to work as possible."

It's the most comprehensive work on the road in a quarter century. When finished, the road is expected to last 20 to 30 years without further major work.

On Friday, workers tested paving and they should know today whether the quality of the road is strong enough to keep going, Kimbol said. If so, Blue Lakes from Bridgeview Drive to Pole Line Road will be finished by week's end, he said. Both left-hand turn lanes from Pole Line Road on to Blue Lakes Boulevard would also open.

Allen said paving is on schedule even though the paver was also completing a project on Highway 75. Otherwise, the contractor's equipment would have been idle in Twin Falls until the road bed was ready, he said.

By next week paving on the western portion between Pole Line and Falls Avenue should begin. No work south of Falls Avenue is scheduled.

Traffic should shift to the new lanes by July 4, allowing workers to repave the east-side lanes.

Wendell condemns 235 acres of farmland

City plans to acquire land through eminent domain

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The Wendell City Council unanimously approved a resolution Thursday to condemn 235 acres of farmland south of the city, effectively beginning the process to acquire the property through eminent domain.

Obtaining the farmland, currently owned by Robert Meyers, Kathi Meyers, Joseph Hults and Kay Hults, is a critical step in moving forward with the city's planned wastewater system upgrade.

Eminent domain is the process by which a state can appropriate property for public use. Pursuant to the Idaho Constitution, cities have the right of eminent domain for any use necessary for the preservation of the health of its inhabitants. The wastewater system upgrade falls under this need.

City officials say they have contacted the joint owners of the property for purchase but no agreement could be made.

"We have attempted numerous times to work in an equitable manner and have not gotten the same back," said Mayor Rick Cowen.

While Kay Hults said she understands the city's predicament in bringing the sewer into compliance, as mandated by the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality, she said the owners have never received a written offer by the city for the land's purchase.

"We had two meetings with the city but never entered into written negotiations, Hults told the Times-News. "I don't even know what they are willing to offer us for the land. The only written correspondence I've ever had with the city was a letter from their attorney stating they were condemning it."

During Thursday's meeting residents expressed their concern over the city taking the farm.

"You need to look at their farm as a job ... and you are taking part of their livelihood," said resident Carl Sir.

Sir also pointed out that the city failed to notify owners of the surrounding property of the condemnation.

STUCK IN A FUNK Blaine Co. hit hard by economy, many are finding it tough to find or keep work

By Karen Bossick

SUN VALLEY — Visitors to Sun Valley often marvel that residents of the resort community seem happy pretty much all the time.

And why shouldn't they be? After all, the town at the foot of Bald Mountain is an escape for those ranging from ultra-rich ski professionals to anglers searching for a quiet eddy.

But that mood soured this year.

The valley seemed to settle into a funk in April as another weather-shortened ski season ended and tourism dwindled to a trickle.

A cool, gray spring didn't help. And each person who showed up at the local soup kitchen seemed to have a story about a second-home owner who had decided not to come to Sun Valley this summer, either because of the hit to their stock portfolio or because they didn't want to be seen as flaunting their wealth.

Yet their absence means less work for local chefs, maids, landscapers and others.

"The anxiety is definitely up," said Erin Hart, who heads up St. Luke's Center for Community Health. "We've been harder hit than many areas of Idaho because we're so dependent on the

"With the way the economy is going, our funds are also restricted," said Vargas.

After speaking with headquarters, Wishing Star decided that since it would only be AJ and his mother traveling, the foundation would be able to do it, said Vargas.

The Sober Riders MC sponsored the trip and was able to surprise AJ and his mother at their home.

AJ is also interested in locks and cabinets, so the Wishing Star foundation presented him with a lock that he originally had wished for, but nothing prepared him for this surprise.

When asked what he would do when he got to Hawaii, AJ said, "I don't know."

"I'm sure he will realize what's happened later," said Knopp.

the west side it'll be great. They'll have a lot to celebrate," Allen said.

But despite a shorter timetable, the state will see little savings: The contractor, Western Construction, will be paid the $4.7 million bid amount. The state will probably save less than 1 percent, said ITD spokesman Nathan Jerke.

"Our type of contract is all based on the final product," Allen said. "What it does on the contractor is it maximizes his profits and make the job more profitable for him."

Still, Allen acknowledged concerns from business owners on Blue Lakes who have had to deal with work that has prevented customers from reaching their businesses, or drivers cutting through corner parking lots to avoid traffic.

"We've tried to work with the businesses about how we can make things better," he said.

Allen said there was some discussion from a local ITD business advisory committee during design stages about businesses contributing more than $1 million to accelerate the project. Businesses, however, rejected that idea.

The committee meets again at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce offices.

Twin Falls City Councilman Will Kezele said he continues to hear concerns from businesses.

"ITD and those involved ought to be doing everything in their power to expedite this problem," he said. "It's incredibly difficult on business owners in their corridor. I hope (ITD will) reach out."

service industry.

"Our office is seeing a lot of frustration, a lot of people who don't know where to turn. We're seeing people who have never had to ask for help before—they've always been employed, they've always been able to care for themselves and their families. And now they're in a situation they've never found themselves in before — out of work or underemployed."

The freefall of the national economy was only the latest event to chip away at Sun Valley's traditionally vibrant persona.

The bombing of the World Trade Center in 2001 was the first, sending sales crashing by as much as 70 percent at some art galleries.

Business was just beginning to recover when the August 2007 Castle Rock Fire sent tourists and second-homeowners packing during what is normally the busiest time of the year.

The booming real estate market took a nosedive several months later. And a downtown fire last September left a gaping hole in Main Street, destroying Whiskey Jacques and with it the bulk of Ketchum's nightlife. And even the snow was stingy this winter, leaving snowplow drivers and rooftop shovelers without work.

But when the bottom fell out of the economy, waitress and construction jobs, which had always been plentiful, also dried up.

The area lost its lucrative 48Straight ski and snowboard competitions when title sponsor Jeep got a flat tire. Sun Valley lost several big conventions in the wake of the outcry over a Wells

Fargo meeting in Las Vegas.

Many local businesses are basically hanging by their fingernails, conceded Bob Rosso, who owns The Elephant's Perch.

"This is a hard place to live, even if you lose just a partial income. Some of the kids who come to our soup kitchen eat as if they're starving to death," said Chrissy Cheff, who owns The Rosebud Deli in Bellevue.

In response, some organizations have circled the wagons. Sun Valley Shakespeare Festival, for instance, cancelled its annual Renaissance Faire and Shakespeare Festival.

Other businesses have resorted to creative measures to generate business. Sun Valley Resort, for instance, has slashed lodging rates by up to half in some cases, while knocking a third off the price of meals and beverages at its properties, including the Lodge Dining Room's Sunday morning brunch.

And Tom Nickel avoided having to close The Sawtooth Club and The Roosevelt by offering diners two-for-one incentives.

But customers' almost vulture-like response to sales has left a bad taste in some businessmen's mouths.

"People come in and say, 'Gosh, we hope you're going to be able to survive.' Then they add, 'So, since you're hurting, what kind of deals have you got for me?'" said one shopkeeper.

To inject some good vibes into the atmosphere, two Ketchum businesses asked community members to nominate someone who was down on their luck last week to be Queen for the Day.

"This is a hard place to live, even if you lose just a partial income. Some of the kids who come to our soup kitchen eat as if they're starving to death."

The Dollhouse offered fashion wear to the winner, while Jiva salon offered the person a haircut and color, manicure and massage.

"We just thought that there were so many people in town struggling—you can just feel it in the air," said Lara Spencer of The Dollhouse.

Claudia Aulum, who owns The Open Room furniture shop, says her business has actually done okay. But, still, she opened her shop during the Memorial Day Weekend Gallery Walk to feature artwork from Gilman Contemporary, hors d'oeuvres from CIRO and music by the Company of Fools, donating a percentage of the sales to that theater troupe.

She plans to do something similar for the Sun Valley Spiritual Film Festival later this summer.

"I think we've got to be creative about helping one another," she said.

Several other organizations are teaming up to offer a free event they've titled "Together We Can Blaine County: Surviving and Thriving in the Current Economy" from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday, at the Community Campus in Hailey.

The event, sponsored by The Advocates, the school district, Blaine County Sheriff's Office, Idaho Department of Labor, La Alianza multicultural center and others, will include a resource fair with free yoga and meditation classes and information on gardening, seeking government assistance, affordable family fun and ways to reduce household expenses.

Company of Fools artist R.L. Rowsey will give a keynote speech on "Keeping a Positive Outlook," Shelley Seibel will offer "Straight Talk About the Economy," and Blaine seniors will tell how they survived tough economic times in the past.

And participants can attend workshops on job search strategies, homeowner relief options, ways to reduce anxiety in tough times and financial housekeeping.

Attendees will get a free afternoon swim pass at Blaine County Aquatic Center.

"A bunch of us got together and said: What can we do to help? We have people who are struggling right now and their family's well-being has been impacted," said Hart. "We're a great community that helps each other out and cares for each other. And we just need to remind ourselves of that right now."

Hagerman IDEA seeks playground funding

By Kimberly Williams-Brckett
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman City Council will support Hagerman Improvement Development Education Appreciation, Inc.'s request to submit grant applications to fund a playground improvement project at Coltharp Park.

Street Superintendent Casey Kelley presented the proposal at Wednesday evening's meeting. Hagerman IDEA, Inc. proposes to apply for grants from the First Federal Foundation and the Idaho Community Foundation to fund safety improvement work needed at the existing playground.

"This project is part of an overall, ongoing program to upgrade the city park and is considered a high priority project by the city," said Hagerman IDEA's Executive Director James Scott. "The need was also identified numerous times by the public in a needs assessment survey sponsored by the city of Hagerman, the Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce, Hagerman IDEA, and Southern Idaho Tourism in May 2009."

The project calls for bounding the existing playground with a curb that will contain suitable fall zone cushioning material, and installation of a boundary fence to confine small children in the playground area.

The existing playground structure is made of iron pipe and set in concrete. Although it is functional and will be retained, there are improvements that must be made. Currently the play equipment foundations are exposed and the fall zone areas are hard and uneven.

Kelley said the playground area is 40 feet wide by 140 feet long.

Hagerman IDEA is the lead organization on the project, and has committed cash and in-kind services, and are applying for grant funds needed to augment local commitment. The City Council will collaborate by committing a minimum 40 hours of labor and eight hours of backhoe time toward completion of the work.

With grants of $5,000 from each foundation, and a local match of $3,280, the total cost of phase one is $13,280. A rough estimate of phase two will cost $26,536. Grant funding is to complete phase one of the project by the fall of 2010.

Phase two, a future project, will entail removal of the sod in the playground, placement of fall zone cushioning material, and installation of two benches for parents or guardians to use while supervising children. It will be completed in 2010 or 2011, depending on the availability of grant funding. Phase two will be funded by conducting local fundraising efforts, soliciting match commitments from local organizations and seeking grants from private and government funding sources.

Scott said, "The Hagerman City Park is a main focal point of the community and it is used by many locals and visitors alike."

Planned Parenthood teams up with Komen Race for the Cure to offer breast cancer exams

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

On Friday the Susan G. Komen Race for the Cure and Planned Parenthood of Idaho teamed up Friday to offer free breast cancer screenings in Twin Falls and offer information about the disease to those taking advantage of the event.

"This helped me to be more aware ...that I need to do more self-exams and do more to keep myself healthy," said Twin Falls resident Becky Torres.

Torres got a free exam at the urging of her mother. Breast cancer doesn't run in Torres' family but she feels better having gotten the screening.

"It does concern me. Now that I'm getting older I should be more aware," Torres said. "I'm glad I came."

About a dozen women scheduled appointments for the screenings offered from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Planned Parenthood facility in Twin Falls.

"The main goal is to provide clinical breast exams and mammography to women for free," said Suzanne Edelman, women's health nurse practitioner with Planned Parenthood.

Edelman conducted the brief physical examinations and provided educational materials that explained the how and why to self-examination and factors in developing breast cancer — both uncontrollable factors such as genetics and controllable factors including diet and exercise.

"Some women with insurance were referred on for mammography and others were given vouchers so they could obtain one at no cost," Edelman said. "We had a couple of younger women who came in who had a family history of breast cancer and those were more about getting information."

Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest Communications Director Brian Cutler said that without the partnership with Komen, exams would cost patients up to $70.

"Despite the excellent national education campaign produced by Komen and breast cancer organizations, many women still do not practice self-exams or see a health care professional annually to be screened," Cutler said. "Every woman should be screened at their annual gynecological exam. However, low-income and uninsured women are less likely to have annual exams, placing them at higher risk for undetected carcinoma."

Fifteen more bodies found in Atlantic Air France crash

By Marco Sibaja and Alan Clendenning
Associated Press writers

RECIFE, Brazil — Search ships methodically worked through a “sea of debris” from a doomed Air France jet Sunday, recovering 15 more bodies near the spot where the Airbus A330 is believed to have gone down a week ago.

Two bodies were recovered Saturday, and Brazilian and French ships picked up 15 more Sunday afternoon after pilots participating in a grid search reported additional sightings. The bodies have been found in an area about 45 miles from where the jet sent out messages signaling electrical failures and loss of cabin pressure.

“We’re navigating through a sea of debris,” Brazilian Navy Capt. Giucomar Tabosa Cardoso said.

Brazil’s military was not releasing detailed information about bodies or debris that have not been taken aboard ships, after sea trash was mistaken last week for a cargo pallet from the plane, prompting criticism.

In this photo released by Brazil’s Air Force, officers recover debris belonging to the Air France Flight 447 in the Atlantic Ocean, Sunday. Fifteen more bodies were found Sunday bobbing in the ocean near the spot where an Air France jet is believed to have crashed a week ago, bringing the total number of bodies plucked from the water to 17, Brazil’s military said.

Flight 447 disappeared and likely broke up in midair in turbulent weather May 31 during a flight from Rio de Janeiro to Paris with 228 people aboard — all now presumed dead.

The investigation is increasingly focused on whether external instruments on the Airbus A330 may have iced over, confusing speed sensors and leading computers to set the plane’s speed too fast or slow — a potentially deadly mistake.

The French agency investigating the disaster said airspeed instruments on the plane had not been replaced as the maker had recommended, but cautioned that it was too early to draw conclusions about what role that may have played in the crash.

The agency, BEA, said the plane received inconsistent airspeed readings from different instruments as it struggled in a massive thunderstorm.

France is leading the investigation into the cause of the crash, and will try to recover the plane’s black box data and voice recorders, which could reveal why the jet crashed. Brazilian officials are focusing solely on the recovery of victims and plane wreckage.

In Brazil, Air Force Col. Henry Munhoz said nine bodies have been recovered by Brazilian authorities: four men, four women and one that was impossible to identify by gender. He said he did not have information about the genders of the eight bodies recovered by French military helicopters that were transferred to a French ship.

The search is focusing on a zone of several hundred square miles roughly 400 miles northeast of the Fernando de Noronha islands off Brazil’s northern coast.

Munhoz and Cardoso declined comment on the condition of the recovered bodies, saying that information would be too emotionally painful for relatives.

Seized weapons sits on the floor of a home after a gunfight in Acapulco, Mexico, early Sunday. Soldiers fought for two hours with armed men apparently holding police hostage at a house in Acapulco, leaving one soldier and 15 gunmen dead, a military official said Sunday.

Shootout kills 16 in Mexico’s Acapulco resort

By Natalia Parra
Associated Press writer

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Mexican soldiers fought a two-hour battle with heavily armed men holed up at a house in an Acapulco hotel zone, killing 15 of the gunmen as Mexican tourists covered in their rooms nearby.

One soldier was killed and the wounded included three soldiers and three bystanders. Several Mexican tourists were evacuated from small hotels in a faded neighborhood once frequented by Hollywood stars.

When soldiers arrived at the house on a tip, the gunmen opened fire and hurled some 50 grenades, according to an Army colonel, who wore a ski mask to protect his identity as he led reporters on a tour of the scene Sunday. He spoke on condition of anonymity for security reasons.

Several gunmen tried to flee, but crashed their car into a military Hummer that was blocking the gate. At one point, more armed men with grenades arrived by car to reinforce the gunmen in the house, but they died in the shooting, the colonel said.

Soldiers found four Guerrero state police officers handcuffed inside the garage of the house, the colonel said. The officers, who were still bound and sitting the floor when reporters arrived, said they’d been held captive by the gunmen, the colonel said.

Soldiers did not know the police were inside when the shootout began late Friday night, and the colonel said their claims would be investigated.

“We found them like this, handcuffed, and they say they were kidnapped. So if they were kidnapped, as they say, then we rescued them,” he said.

Alternative medicine goes mainstream

But evidence shows many therapies, pills lack value

By Marilynn Marchione
Associated Press writer

BALTIMORE — At one of the nation’s top trauma hospitals, a nurse circles a patient’s bed, humming and waving her arms as if shooing evil spirits. Another woman rubs a quartz bowl with a wand, making tunes that mix with the beeping monitors and hissing respirator keeping the man alive.

They are doing Reiki therapy, which claims to heal through invisible energy fields. The anesthesia chief, Dr. Richard Dutton, calls it “mystical mumbo jumbo.” Still, he’s a fan.

“It’s self-hypnosis” that can help patients relax, he said. “If you tell yourself you have less pain, you actually do have less pain.”

Alternative medicine has become mainstream. It is finding wider acceptance by doctors, insurers and hospitals like the shock trauma center at the University of Maryland Medical Center.

People turn to unconventional therapies and herbal remedies for everything from hot flashes and trouble sleeping to cancer and heart disease. They crave more “care” in their health care. They distrust drug companies and the government. They want natural, safer remedies.

But often, that is not what they get. Government actions and powerful interest groups have left consumers vulnerable to flawed products and misleading marketing.

Dietary supplements do not have to be proved safe or effective before they can be sold. Some contain natural things you might not want, such as lead and arsenic. Some interfere with other things you may be taking, such as birth control pills.

“Herbals are medicines,” with good and bad effects, said Bruce Silverglade of the consumer group Center for Science in the Public Interest.

Contrary to their little-guy image, many of these products are made by big businesses. Ingredients and their countries of origin are a mystery to consumers. They are marketed in ways that manipulate emotions, just like ads for hot cars and cool clothes.

Even therapies that may help certain conditions, such as acupuncture, are being touted for uses beyond their evidence.

An Associated Press review of dozens of studies and interviews with more than 100 sources found an underground medical system operating in plain sight, with a different standard than the rest of medical care, and millions of people using it on blind faith.

How did things get this way?

Fifteen years ago, Congress decided to allow dietary and herbal supplements to be sold without federal Food and Drug Administration approval. The number of products soared, from about 4,000 then to well over 40,000 now.

Ten years ago, Congress created a new federal agency to study supplements and unconventional therapies. But more than $2.5 billion of tax-financed research has not found any cures or major treatment advances, aside from certain uses for chemotherapy-related nausea. If anything, evidence has mounted that many of these pills and therapies lack value.

Yet they are finding ever-wider use:

- Big hospitals and clinics increasingly offer alternative therapies. Many just offer stress reducers like meditation, yoga and massage. But some offer treatments with little or no scientific basis, to patients who are emotionally vulnerable and gravely ill.

- Some medical schools are teaching future doctors about alternative medicine, sometimes with federal grants. The goal is to educate them about what patients are using so they can give evidence-based, nonjudgmental care. But some schools have ties to alternative medicine practitioners and advocates.

- Health insurers are cutting deals to let alternative medicine providers market supplements and services directly to members. Some insurers steer patients to Internet sellers of supplements, even though patients must pay for these out of pocket.

A few herbal supplements can directly threaten health. A surprising number do not supply what their labels claim, contain potentially harmful substances like lead, or are laced with hidden versions of prescription drugs.

“In testing, one out of four supplements has a problem,” said Dr. Tod Cooperman, president of ConsumerLab.com, an independent company that rates such products.

Even when the ingredients aren’t risky, spending money for a product with no proven benefit is no small harm.

But sometimes the cost is far greater. Cancer patients can lose their only chance of beating the disease. People with clogged arteries can suffer a heart attack. Children can be harmed by unproven therapies forced on them by parents who distrust conventional medicine.

Mainstream medicine and prescription drugs have problems, too. Popular drugs such as the painkillers Vioxx and Bextra were pulled from the market after serious side effects emerged once they were widely used by consumers. But at least there are regulatory systems, guideline-setting groups and watchdog agencies helping to keep traditional medicine in line.

McKean schools RMCS class at MVS

LINDA BRITTSAN/For the Times-News

Eddy McKean reeled in another win at Magic Valley Speedway, this time with the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series.

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Eddy McKean showed everyone who is boss by chalking up a main event win in the Rocky Mountain Challenge Series Pepsi 125 Sunday at Magic Valley Speedway.

John Newhouse captured the quick qualifying time at 14.680 seconds around the one-third mile track while McKean posted a time of 14.981 seconds. With the invert, McKean started the main event race lined up in the sixth position while Newhouse started 18th.

It wasn't long before McKean took control of the race from eventual third place finisher Dylan Caldwell. Despite several cautions and restarts just past the midway point of the race, McKean was able to hold on to the lead with what ended up to be a well set-up car for the race.

The events were postponed from the scheduled Saturday night event after a deluge of rain hit the Magic Valley.

"Well, we struggled in qualifying and it's still not right," McKean said of his car. "But we just weren't as bad as some of the other guys. With all the rubber that had been washed off the track, the track wasn't that great. It was a one groove track and we got to start up front. I think a couple of those other cars — Minegar and Newhouse were better than us, but we had track position."

Asked if he still had his mojo, McKean was humble in his reply. "No, not yet. When we start from the back and win it — that's when I've got it."

Local driver Newhouse wound up with a sixth place finish.

District VI get sights on state finals

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Saturday morning, the Minidoka County Fair Grounds Arena looked more favorable for mud wrestling or mud volleyball as the District VI cowboys and cowgirls gathered for the 9 a.m. slack for the rodeo district finals.

In fact after the slack and before the 1 p.m. performance was to begin, the arena was still too sloppy to be re-worked by a tractor.

After a winning 64-point ride by freshman Taylor Osterhout, the Declo rookie found the ground just wet and mushy enough for a rear flip dismount off the back of TJ in bareback riding. Osterhout landed with a splash in the mud and came up with a smile adding a little humor to the muddy mess. Osterhout was a double winner on Saturday turning in a solid 54-point saddle bronc ride.

Tanisha Adams of Declo, continued to be the most consistent and hottest competitor in the district. Adams and her 14-year old gelding, Diamond, have won 12-of-16 rodeos in barrel racing and Adams saw no reason to safety-up either Friday night or Saturday afternoon in winning both rodeos.

She credits the success of the team to a lot of hard work in the eight months the two have been working together.

This year's boy's all-around winner was Cody Wadsworth of Kimberly who came into the year as the reigning all-around champion. This was the third all-around win for the senior who is headed to Utah State in the fall. He entered four events: calf roping, steer wrestling, bull riding and team roping with Megan Crist. Wadsworth recorded three wins in bull riding and had a pair of wins in each of the other three events. These wins and other top finishes were enough to keep him ahead of the closest competitors. He finished the season in the top spot in calf roping, second in bulls, fourth in steer wrestling, and sixth in team roping.

The reigning girls all-around champion Kindee Wilson of Filer won the girl's all-around race but it

LAKERS HANG ON

Lakers top Magic 101-96 for overtime win in Game 2

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Lucky to have a second chance, the Los Angeles Lakers grabbed it.

Kobe Bryant and Co. held on and are in control of the NBA finals — just barely.

Orlando rookie Courtney Lee missed a potential winning layup as regulation ended, giving Los Angeles another shot it didn't waste. Pau Gasol scored seven points in overtime as the Lakers, so dominant in the series opener, survived with a 101-96 win over the Magic in Game 2 on Sunday night.

If Orlando doesn't come back and win a game in the series, Lee's miss may go down as one of the biggest gaffes in finals history.

He had a chance to give the Magic its first finals win, but misfired.

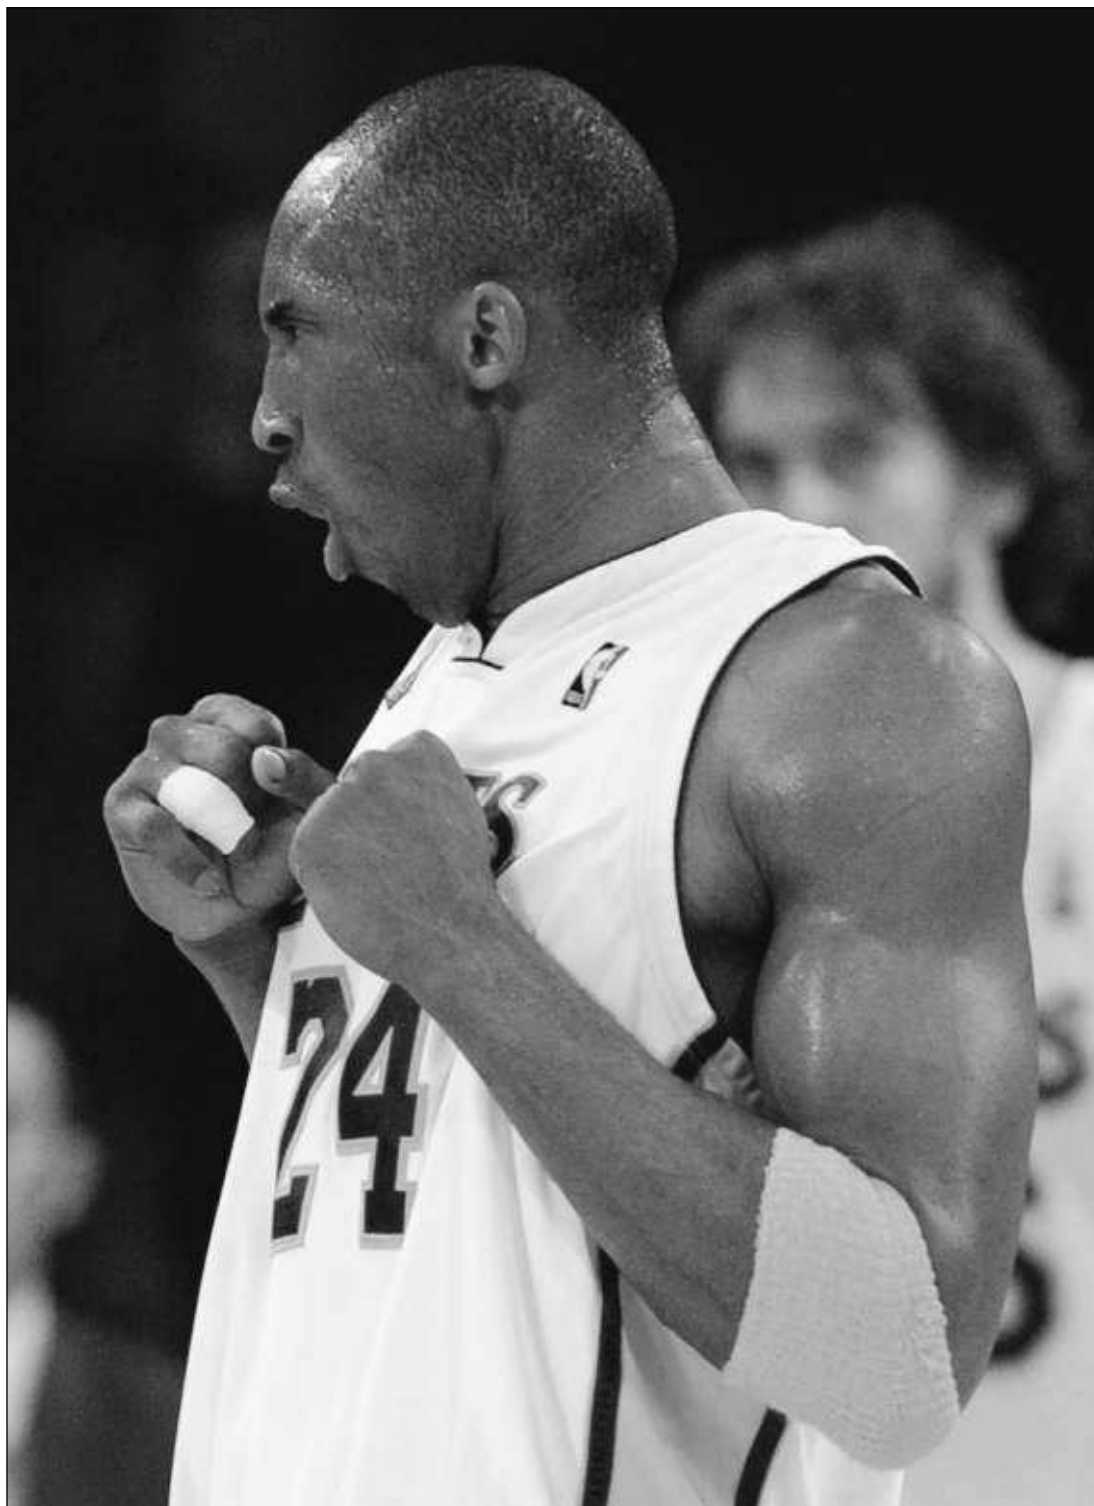

"We missed it. I don't know what else to say," Magic coach Stan Van Gundy said. "We executed well, Hedo made a great pass. I'm not trying to be a pain ... Hedo (Turkoglu) made a great pass and he just missed it."

Orlando may not get a better shot to beat the Lakers.

"We blew a lot of assignments tonight — a lot of assignments — and we still managed to get a win," Bryant said.

When it was finally over, Derek Fisher and the Lakers jogged to the locker room, smiling and high-fiving fans along the way.

PARIS — Oh, how Roger Federer savored every moment with his first French Open trophy.

He raised it overhead. He cradled it in the crook of his elbow. He closed his eyes and kissed it. He examined the names of other champions etched on its base. Even in a downpour on Court Philippe Chatrier, as heavy, gray clouds blocked any shred of sunlight Sunday, that silver trophy sure seemed to glisten.

Finally, the lone major championship that had eluded Federer was his. With his latest masterful performance, Federer tied Pete

TCU defeats Texas 3-2

Former Filer high pitcher Gerrish starts for Horned Frogs

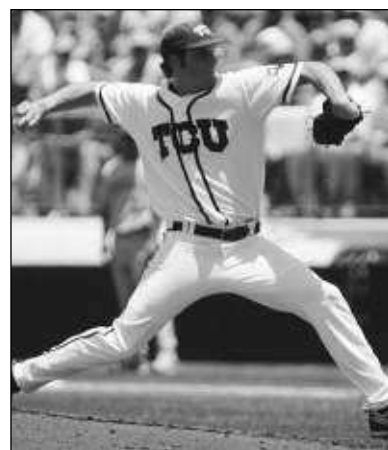

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Matt Vern and Matt Carpenter each hit home runs and TCU edged top national seed Texas 3-2 on Sunday to force a deciding third game in the super regional.

Former Filer high pitcher Paul Gerrish (7-2) allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings for the Horned Frogs.

Vern hit a two-run shot in the fourth inning off Texas starter Cole Green to give the Horned Frogs (40-17) a quick lead. Carpenter made it 3-0 with his solo homer off Green (5-3) in the sixth.

The teams meet again Monday night, with the winner advancing to the College World Series.

Texas (45-14-1) got within a run on Preston Clark's RBI single in the seventh and Brandon Belt's run-scoring single in the eighth.

NASCAR Stewart wins first Cup points race as team owner

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press writer

LONG POND, Pa. — Tony Stewart won his first Cup points race as a team owner, coming from the rear of the field and taking a late gamble on fuel to win at Pocono Raceway.

Stewart

The Sprint Cup points leader had to start at the back of Sunday's race because a practice accident forced him into his backup car.

Then Stewart figured he could drive the final 41 laps without a pit stop and it paid off, helping snap a 19-race winless streak dating to last season.

Stewart won the All-Star race last month for Stewart-Haas Racing, and this victory again stamped himself as a true threat to win his third Cup title.

"It's just a little different when you're the one that's got to be accountable," Stewart said.

Stewart is the first owner/driver to win a points race since Ricky Rudd at Martinsville in 1998. Carl Edwards was second, followed by David Reutimann, Jeff Gordon and Ryan Newman.

"I didn't think he was going to be a factor," Edwards said of Stewart. "I was sure he was going to run out."

The first Cup points race with double-file restarts finished without a problem. The drivers meeting lasted nearly 30 minutes as last-minute questions were answered on the new restart rules that line up the 43-car field following a yellow.

Tiger wins the Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio — No need to worry about Tiger Woods heading into the U.S. Open.

Woods broke away from a four-way tie for the lead Sunday at the Memorial with birdies on his final two holes, the last one a 7-iron that stopped a foot away from the cup for a 7-under 65 and a one-shot victory over Jim Furyk.

With a high-charged rally from a four-shot deficit, Woods revved up the crowd and silenced those who questioned his game heading into his title defense at Bethpage Black in two weeks.

He didn't miss a fairway in the final round, the first time he has done that in more than five years. He missed only five fairways all week, his most accurate tournament off the tee since the 1998 Masters.

Woods won the Memorial for a record fourth time, and tournament host Jack Nicklaus was there to greet him behind the 18th green. It was his second victory this year after missing eight months from knee surgery, and Woods figured he will only get better.

"I knew it was coming around," Woods said. "I just wasn't as consistent as I needed to be."

KIM GETS SECOND LPGA VICTORY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — In-Kyung Kim birdied two of the final three holes to beat Hall of Famer Se Ri Pak by a stroke in the State Farm Classic.

Kim shot a 7-under 65 to finish at 17-under 271 on the Panther Creek course, giving the 20-year-old South Korean player her second LPGA Tour victory along with a big boost heading into the LPGA Championship next week at Bulle Rock.

In the process, Kim denied Pak (66) her first win in two years.

Hee-Won Han (65), Jee Young Lee (66) and Angela Stanford (67) finished at 15 under, and Cristie Kerr (70) was 14 under along with Eun-Hee Ji (63), Paula Creamer (65), Suzann Pettersen (68), Ai Miyazato (68), Amy Hung (68) and Jiyai Shin (70).

Michelle Wie tied for 54th at 4 under.

LANGER WINS TRITON FINANCIAL CLASSIC

LAKEWAY, Texas — Bernhard Langer became the first three-time winner on the Champions Tour this season, closing with a 5-under 67 for a six-stroke victory over Mark O'Meara in the Triton Financial Classic.

The German star, a seven-time winner since joining the Champions Tour late in the 2007 season, finished at 15-under 201 on The Hills Country Club course, matching the tournament record set by Scott Hoch in 2007. Langer also became the first wire-to-wire winner this year on the 50-and-over tour.

O'Meara, winless on the Champions Tour, shot a 70 for his third runner-up finish of the year and sixth overall, while Dana Quigley shot a 69 to end up another shot back. Hoch (71), Larry Mize (69) and Gene Jones (74) tied for fourth.

win of the season.

MCKEAN WINS BUDWEISER SUPER STOCKS

After having mechanical issues with his own ride, Jerry McKean got behind the wheel of a Jonathon Gomez car. Allen Williams held the lead from laps four through 17 but McKean took over from there.

Kris McKean tried tirelessly to catch his uncle Jerry, but he ran out of laps and fell short by less than half a second at the finish line.

HENSLEE GETS FIRS WIN IN NAPA PONY STOCKS

Wade Henslee captured his first win of the season after maintaining the lead for the entire 15-lap main event race.

Henslee finished 3.74 seconds over Mike Greco and 5.92 seconds over third place finisher Ray Homolka.

RESULTS:

RMCS: 1. Eddy McKean, 2. John Dillon, 2. Dylan Caldwell, 4. Craig Bell, 5. Dave Minegar, 6. John Newhouse, 7. Jonathon Gomez, 8. Steve Jones, 9. Kenny Rich, Dan Buckley.

points and 16 rebounds for Orlando.

Game 3 is Tuesday night at Orlando's Amway Arena, which will be hosting a finals game for the first time since June 9, 1995.

With the score tied at 88-88 in regulation, Lee missed the first of two late-game shots when he drove the lane and missed a contested layup with 10.5 seconds remaining.

The Lakers called time with 9.1 seconds to play, and after Odom caught the inbound pass, he quickly gave it to Bryant, who drove into a crowd. Bryant attempted an off-balance 12-footer, but his shot was blocked from behind by Turkoglu with 1.8 seconds left.

The horn sounded, the clock expired to zeroes and Jack Nicholson and the star-studded Staples Center crowd braced for overtime.

But the officials huddled at the scorer's table and decided to put 0.6 seconds back on the clock because Turkoglu grabbed the ball land called timeout.

Turkoglu couldn't find anyone open and was forced to call a timeout. On the Magic's second attempt, Lee got free on a perfectly executed play and caught Turkoglu's long lob pass as he neared the left side of the basket. But with 7-foot Gasol closing in on him, Lee's shot caromed off the backboard and front of the rim.

Sampras' record of 14 major singles titles and became the sixth man to complete a career Grand Slam.

History was at stake, and Federer was at his best, completely outplaying No. 23-seeded Robin Soderling of Sweden en route to a 6-1, 7-6 (1), 6-4 victory in a French Open final that lacked suspense but not significance.

"Maybe my greatest victory — or certainly the one that takes the most pressure off my shoulders," Federer said in French, moments after dropping to his knees, caking them with clay, as his 127 mph service winner ended the match. "I think that now, and until the end of my career, I can really play with my mind at peace and no longer hear that I've never won at Roland Garros."

Federer came heart-breaking close in the past, losing the previous three French Open finals, so there certainly was something poetic about his tying Sampras' Grand Slam mark at this particular tournament, on this particular court.

"Now that he's won in Paris, I think it just more solidifies his place in history as the greatest player that played the game," Sampras told The Associated Press.

"If there's anyone that deserves it, it's Roger," Sampras said. "He's come so close — lost to one guy who's going to go down as probably the greatest clay-courter of all time."

certainly didn't come easy.

After leading the overall standings since the first of the season, suddenly Wilson found herself in third place entering the district finals. Katie Vierstra of Filer had emerged as the new leader with 293 points but was only two points ahead of Crist (291) and seven ahead of Wilson (286).

Wilson rose to the challenge picking up 59 points Friday and Saturday for a total of 345 putting a little distance between herself and the second place total of 330 by Crist. Vierstra finished third with 326 points.

Winning the all-around title was important to Vierstra but she said she would continue to try to be consistent when competing and go at her own speed and always try to improve on her personnel best.

"The all-around was so close and we still had to compete and go for it," Vierstra said.

Cody and Tyler Wadsworth's younger brother Jace was named the boys rookie and Kyndal Stradley of Filer the girls rookie.

The state qualifiers in each event have earned a trip to the state high school finals June 15-20 in Pocatello.

Twellman scores 100th as Revolution rout Red Bulls

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Taylor Twellman became the fifth player in MLS history with 100 goals, scoring a pair in the second half to lead the New England Revolution to a 4-0 victory over the New York Red Bulls on Sunday.

It was just the second match of the season for Twellman, who had been sidelined with a neck injury. He came on as a reserve to start the second half and didn't take long to reach the milestone, scoring his first goal of the year in the 57th minute with a header off a cross from Sharlie Joseph to give New England a 3-0 lead.

Seven minutes later, Twellman produced the 16th multigoal game of his career with a shot under Red Bulls goalkeeper Jon Conway off Steve Ralston's league-record 131st assist.

Ralston and Jay Heaps also scored for New England (4-3-4), which extended its unbeaten streak over the Red Bulls to 12 games (7-0-5).

New York (2-9-3) saw its winless streak on the road reach 19 matches (0-13-6), suffering its eighth shutout loss of the season.

Heaps, playing in his 300th match, gave the Revolution the lead in the second minute of stoppage time to end the first half, converting a cross from Joseph for his first goal.

Ketchum should seriously consider a city manager

Outside of Idaho, the mayor isn't such a big shot. A large majority of American cities with more than 12,000 people are run by a city manager, who serves at the pleasure of an elected council. The mayor may cut a lot of ribbons, but he's just another member of the council.

Yet in the Gem State, only three cities — Twin Falls, Lewiston and McCall — have council-manager-style government. But a fourth may be on the way.

Several members of the Ketchum City Council are gingerly pushing to dump the town's strong-mayor system and put a professional in City Hall.

"Personally, I'm in favor of going this direction," Councilman Larry Helzel said. But, he added, the firestorm that arose over a bid to merge Ketchum and Sun Valley showed that unattended consequences of moving too fast can take what might be a good idea off the agenda "perhaps forever."

"I would urge a calm and thorough debate, no matter how long it takes," he said. "This community is slow to embrace change. It would rather move in baby steps."

As it stands, Mayor Randy Hall runs day-to-day operations with the help of a hired city administrator whose duties are delegated by the mayor. Under a council-manager system, the city manager would have the administrative duties.

Former Ketchum Mayor Ed Simon believes the city manager form depoliticizes personnel issues, freeing the council to work on issues.

The evidence from Twin Falls suggests that's true. Folks who do business with the city know the rules in advance and deal with a professional hierarchy. The council legislates; it doesn't manage.

Most public administration academics and municipal-management specialists believe the council-manager system is more efficient because it's more professional and less prone to corruption. It's hard, after all, to run patronage government when the boss can't dispense political favors without the consent of the council.

The right city manager, however, can be hard to find. Because of the nature of their responsibilities, managers are lightning rods for anyone who's unhappy with municipal government. And since they serve at the pleasure of the council, job security is limited.

For those reasons, most city managers move on every five years or so. That can be an advantage to a community, since it regularly brings fresh perspective to City Hall.

A manager isn't right for every town, but he or she could be a good fit for Ketchum. It's a good-government community, whose citizens are intensely involved in the decision-making process and whose council is forever pushing the envelope to find ways to save money and run government better.

In short, a city manager would have to satisfy a tough audience in Ketchum. That, it seems to us, is exactly how it should be.

Our view:

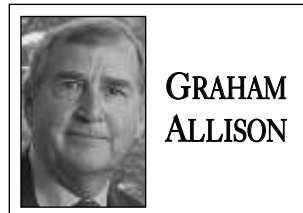

Bottom line: Council-manager government takes much of the politics out of the day-to-day operations of the city.

A new line in the sand for Iran

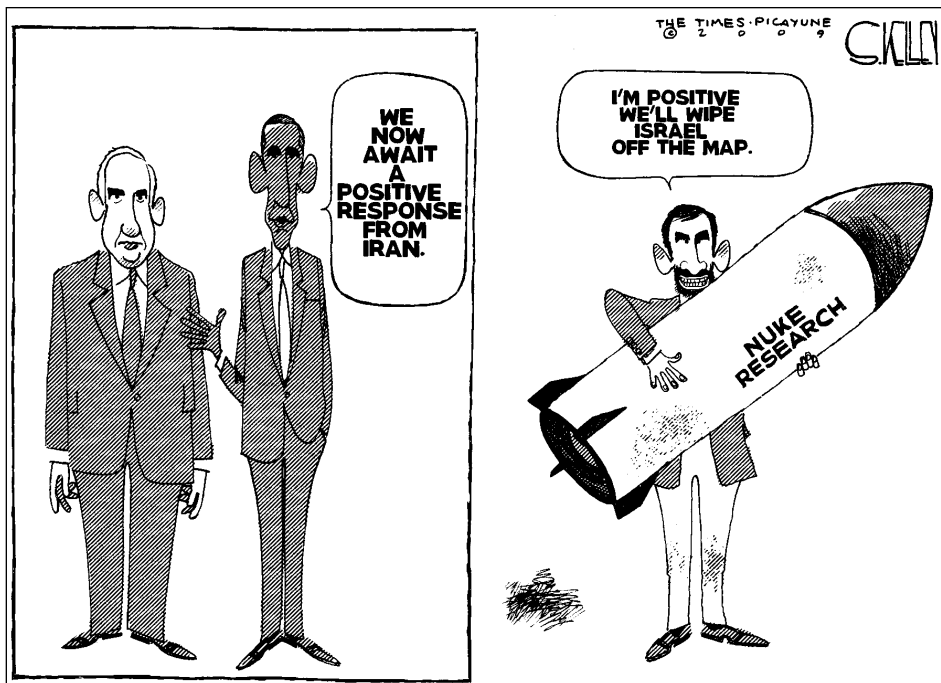

The Iranian nuclear challenge was transformed on President George W. Bush's watch. Events in Iran have advanced faster than the policy community's thinking about the problem. The brute fact is that Iran has crossed a threshold that is painful to acknowledge but impossible to ignore: It has lost its nuclear virginity.

GRAHAM ALLISON

Over the past eight years, the United States has insisted that Iran would never be allowed to develop the capability to enrich uranium, as that could be used to build a nuclear bomb. Three unanimous U.N. Security Council resolutions demanded that Iran "suspend all enrichment-related activities." That was a worthy aim. Technically, mastery of enrichment is the brightest red line short of nuclear weapons. Israelis have called it the "point of no return."

Bush chose the right operational objective when he declared, "We cannot allow the Iranians to have the capacity to enrich." Sadly, the strategy he pursued to prevent Iran from crossing that red line failed. One can debate whether a different strategy would have produced a different outcome. At this point, however, we must recognize the irreversible bottom line: Iran has demonstrably mastered the capability to manufacture and operate centrifuges to enrich uranium. The February report of the International Atomic Energy Agency documents the details: Iran is operating 4,000 centrifuges and has already produced more than a ton of low-enriched uranium — an amount sufficient, after further enrichment, to make its first nuclear bomb. The policy consequences of Iran having gotten this far down the road to a nuclear bomb are profound. These new facts require a fundamental reassessment not only of how we engage Iran but also of what we can realistically hope to achieve.

First, the long-held American objective to prevent Iran from acquiring the technical know-how to enrich uranium has been overtaken by events. While it was an appropriate goal at the time, Iran has acquired this capability. Its knowledge of how to enrich uranium cannot be erased. There is no realistic future in which Iran will not be "nuclear enrichment capable," that is, have the know-how to replicate its current enrichment facility at Natanz — either overtly or covertly.

Second, the predominant focus of U.S. and international policy on Iran's observable nuclear enrichment facility at Natanz is largely misplaced. Preoccupation with the "known" to the neglect of the "known unknown" is common in policy-making. But at this point, it has become a caricature of the story of the drunk looking for his car keys under the lamppost, even though he knows he dropped them a hundred yards away, because that is where the light is. If Iran detonates a nuclear bomb in the next four years, the likelihood that the highly enriched uranium for that bomb will have been produced at Natanz is less than 10 percent. Thus, erasing Natanz today, either by Israel's threatened military attack or through negotiations, addresses the smaller part of the threat.

Further, and third, the source of the highly enriched uranium for Iran's bomb — if Iran makes and tests a bomb during Obama's first term — will be a covert enrichment plant that we have not discovered. By definition, we don't know the location or status of secret, undiscovered facilities. But as an American intelligence officer quipped, if Iran's nuclear project manager has put all his eggs in the one basket that is under the spotlight of international inspection, he should be fired.

The bottom line for American policy is that the menu of feasible options has shrunk. Every option available at this point requires living with an Iran that knows how to enrich uranium. Continued denial of this truth is self-delusion.

The central policy question becomes: What combination of arrangements, inside and outside Iran, has the best chance of persuading it to stop short of a nuclear bomb? More important than how many centrifuges Iran continues operating at Natanz is how transparent it will be about all of its nuclear activities, including the manufacture of centrifuges. Maximizing the likelihood that covert enrichment will be discovered is the best way to minimize the likelihood that it will be pursued. The best hope for defining a meaningful red line is to enshrine the Iranian supreme leader's affirmations that Iran will never acquire nuclear weapons in a solemn international agreement that commits Russia and China to join the United States in specific, devastating penalties for violation of that pledge.

The Obama administration cannot restore Iran's nuclear innocence. Its challenge is to prevent the birth of the next nuclear-weapons state.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reality has a way of surfacing in tough times

American economists give the impression that as long as we shun the language and nomenclature of socialism we can somehow avoid the reality of it. If we keep calling it "market economy" or some other euphemism, we aren't socialist. As long as we, the mere laity of the diocese, accept the economic priesthood's words, sinful socialism doesn't exist here? These economic leaders, including the president, employ a new doublespeak, claiming that we are now "stockholders" in General Motors, a term not usually associated with socialism. For old GM, they have even assigned a new "but good old-fashioned-sounding" capitalistic name, "Newco." Will we, the stockholders that have willingly or grudgingly "bought" the stock, be paid regular "dividends"? Or, perhaps, is it just semantic game-playing? The Europeans appear to be more upfront about language and un-blushingly call it "socialism."

The foregoing notwithstanding, reality has a way of surfacing in spite of our human addiction to beguiling language. Our college textbooks on economics state the obvious: Three participants are mandatory under capitalism; and they are the sub-marginal, the marginal and the supra-marginal: the working poor, the middle class and the wealthy. It could be said that the working class must spend beyond their paycheck, the lower middle class is only a few paychecks from being part of the working class and the wealthy are the real beneficiaries of this structure. The lower classes tolerate this setup on the chance, however remote, that they too will somehow become wealthy. The guilt-ridden rich often excuse themselves by arguing that the opportunity is there for everyone if they're willing to "work hard" and take the risk. It happens, but the odds for it are infinite. Marxists say that the wealthy exploit the poor and bourgeoisie lackeys, thereby stealing unearned riches. Not true?

More coverage of Bulldawgs wanted

Regarding the Magic Valley Bulldawgs:

Your coverage of sports in the Magic Valley area is usually pretty thorough. However, in Sunday's paper (May 31), I saw nothing about the Magic Valley Bulldawgs, an awesome football team made up of former high school players.

Did you even know they are not paid? Their love for the sport is more important.

Let's see more coverage for the guys whose hearts are in the game.

Suspect in Kan. doctor's death warns of violence

By Roxana Hegeman
Associated Press writer

WICHITA, Kan. — The man charged with killing abortion provider Dr. George Tiller claimed Sunday that more violence is possible while the medical procedure is allowed to continue, giving his warning in calls that also focused on complaints about his treatment in jail.

Scott Roeder, being held on charges of first-degree murder and aggravated assault in Tiller's killing one week ago, called The Associated Press from the Sedgwick County jail.

Tiller, whose Wichita clinic was among only a few in the U.S. performing third-trimester abortions, was shot while serving as an usher at the Lutheran church he attended.

"I know there are many other similar events planned around the country as long as abortion remains legal," Roeder said.

He would not elaborate. Tiller's clinic in Wichita had been a target of regular demonstrations by abortion opponents. Most were peaceful, but his clinic was bombed in 1986 and he was shot in both arms in 1993. In 1991, a 45-day "Summer of Mercy" campaign organized by Operation Rescue drew thousands of abortion opponents to Wichita, and there were more than 2,700 arrests.

Jim Cross, a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office, did not have an immediate comment Sunday on Roeder's statement.

The Justice Department opened an investigation Friday to see if the gunman who killed Tiller had accomplices. The DOJ said its Civil Rights Division and the U.S. attorney's office in Kansas will seek to determine if the killing violated a 1994 law creating criminal penalties for violent or damaging conduct toward abortion providers and their patients.

An attorney for the Tiller family, Dan Monnat, said he wasn't sure they should be dignifying Roeder's actions and threats with a response "every time he makes a hare-brained phone call."

"I am hopeful that state and federal authorities, including homeland security, will give Mr. Roeder and his information a deserving response," Monnat said, declining to elaborate.

A funeral was held Saturday for Tiller. Most anti-abortion groups avoided the service, having denounced Tiller's shooting.

Roeder, a 51-year-old abortion opponent, was arrested a few hours after the shooting just outside Kansas City.

He told the AP he refused to talk to investigators when he was arrested, and has made no statements to police since then.

"I just told them I needed to talk to my lawyer," Roeder said.

Asked if he shot Tiller, Roeder replied that he could not comment about that and said he needed to clear everything with his lawyer.

Major problems found in war spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — This is one Christmas gift U.S. taxpayers don't need.

Construction of a $30 million dining facility at a U.S. base in Iraq is scheduled to be completed Dec. 25. But the decision to build it was based on bad planning and botched paperwork. The project is too far along to stop, making the mess hall a future monument to the waste and inefficiency plaguing the war effort, according to an independent panel investigating contracting in Iraq and Afghanistan.

In its first report to Congress, the Wartime Contracting Commission presents a bleak assessment of how tens of billions of dollars have been spent since 2001. The 111-page report, obtained by The Associated Press, documents poor management, weak oversight, and a failure to learn from past mistakes as recurring themes in wartime contracting.

The report is scheduled to be made public Wednesday at a hearing held by the House Oversight and Government Reform's national security subcommittee.

U.S. reliance on contractors has grown to "unprecedented proportions," says the bipartisan commission, established by Congress last year. More than 240,000 private sector employees are supporting military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. Thousands more work for the State

"As we look back on what we've done, we're real proud of being able to go into a war theater like that as a private contractor and support 200,000 troops."

— William P. Utt, chairman of the Houston-based KBR

Department and U.S. Agency for International Development.

But the government has no central data base of who all these contractors are, what services they provide, and how much they're paid. The Pentagon has failed to provide enough trained staff to watch over them, creating conditions for waste and corruption, the commission says.

In Iraq, the panel worries that as U.S. troops depart in larger numbers, there will be too few government eyes on the contractors left to oversee the closing of hundreds of bases and disposal of mountains of federal property.

At Rustamiyah, a seven-acre forward operating base turned over to the Iraqis in March, the military population plunged from 1,490 to 62 in just three months. During the same period, the contractor population dropped from 928 to 338, leaving more than five contractors for every service member.

In Afghanistan, where President Barack Obama has ordered a large increase of U.S. troops, existing bases will have to expand and new ones will be built — without proper oversight unless the Pentagon rapidly changes course.

One commander in Afghanistan told the commission he had no idea how many contractors were on and off his base on a daily basis. Another officer said he had property all over his installation but didn't know who owned it or what kind of shape it was in.

There are questionable construction projects in Afghanistan, too. The commission visited the New Kabul Compound, a building intended to serve as headquarters for U.S. forces in Afghanistan. But members saw cracks in the structure, broken and leaking pipes, sinking sidewalks and other defects.

"The Army should not have accepted a building in such condition," the report says.

The commission cites concerns with a massive support contract known as "LOGCAP" that provides troops with essential services, including housing, meals, mail delivery and laundry.

Despite the huge size and importance of the contract, the main program office managing the work for both Afghanistan and Iraq has only 13 government employees. For administrative help, it must rely on a contractor.

White House straddles health tax issue

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — When it comes to taxing health insurance benefits, President Obama hasn't said yes, and may never. But he and his top aides won't quite say no, either, to an idea he attacked sharply in his campaign for the White House.

Instead, they are in full straddle, a well-known Washington maneuver accompanied by a vocabulary designed to obscure.

"That was not in the president's plan. It was not in our budget," the administration's budget director, Peter Orszag, said Tuesday after the possibility of taxing benefits was raised — not for the first time — by Democratic Sen. Max Baucus of Montana, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Read literally, Orszag's response was a mere statement of fact, possibly meant to signal discouragement or administration disapproval, but far short of a flat rejection.

Obama's budget calls instead for hundreds of billions in savings from Medicare and a tax increase on upper-income wage earners to help finance his signature health care proposal. Democrats in Congress have been slow to warm to either. Baucus has said repeatedly he is looking at all possible alternatives to help pay for the president's goal of subsidizing health care for millions who now go without.

Analysis

Orszag's matter-of-fact response could be explained as simple courtesy to Baucus, a senior senator and a committee chairman with enormous influence health care matters.

Or he could have been opening the door to a tax increase, as he seemingly was several weeks ago when he said the administration was interested in hearing more from Congress on Baucus' idea.

Whatever it was, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid was equally noncommittal in his comments a few hours later at the Capitol. "At this point, nothing is off the table. Nothing is on the table," said Reid, D-Nev.

At this point, the White House isn't clarifying, either. After meeting with the president at the White House, Baucus told reporters: "It's on the table. It's an option."

It seemed anything but that last fall, when Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., proposed taxing health insurance benefits and Obama spent millions on campaign commercials attacking the idea.

One ad accused McCain of favoring "taxing health benefits for the first time ever ... taxing health care instead of fixing it. We can't afford John McCain."

A second Obama ad called McCain's approach "the largest middle-class tax increase in history." Driving the point home, it contended the "McCain tax could cost your family thousands. Can you afford it?"

Baucus first floated the idea months ago. The Senate Finance Committee recently circulated a list of financing options that included several variations.

"A number of options could be considered that would limit the value of employer-provided health coverage that is excludible from gross income," it says. "The limit could be based on the value of the plan or the income of the insured, or the limit could be a combination of both.

"Alternatively, the limit could be tied to a percentage of the value of the employer-provided health coverage."

Complete repeal of the current tax breaks on health benefits, which neither Baucus nor any other lawmaker has proposed, would bring the Treasury $132 billion a year, according to the committee.

But even changing the law for the wealthy, or for employees with the richest benefit plans, would amount to a new tax, bringing new questions for the White House.

In mid-April, on a day millions of people were filing income tax returns, White House press secretary Robert Gibbs noted Obama's campaign pledge not to raise taxes on wage-earners making less than $250,000 a year.

Asked if that applied to insurance premiums, he indicated it did, saying there were no caveats attached to the promise.

At the same time, he said, "the president has said that everybody involved — and Congress, the president, interest groups representing doctors and patients, hospitals, the pharmaceutical industry — should bring their ideas to the table."

Obama, he added, was open to "people bringing their ideas." Asked if that meant Obama was open to the ideas themselves, Gibbs hedged.

"I think we can discuss those ideas. The president isn't particularly supportive of" the tax proposal, he said. "That doesn't mean people shouldn't bring those ideas."

Asked whether Obama would veto a bill that included the tax proposal — an unlikely occurrence for a Democratic Congress and a president of the same party — Gibbs sidestepped. "I'm not going to get into — how about we get a bill through Congress before we get through particular veto scenarios about what may or may not be involved?"

Now, with Congress drawing closer to drafting legislation, the White House is straddling.

Top strategist David Axelrod, in a CNN interview broadcast Sunday, said he attended the recent meeting Obama held with Baucus and other Democrats.

"He saideverybody ought to put their ideas on the table. I'm not foreclosing anything. But I really think my idea is the best."

Pedestrians walk toward the Snake River at Centennial Park on May 30.

Snake River Canyon at Centennial Park

Why: Walking uphill burns more calories than walking on a flat surface, and really works the glutes and thigh muscles.

The road to Centennial Park, at the north end of Twin Falls, is a favorite for fitness walkers, so most drivers know to take it slow around the turns. Still, keep to the side of the road and don't blast your iPod too loud so you can listen for oncoming traffic.

For a great workout: Park at the canyon rim and trek down on the road to the park. Head back up to the top of the canyon at a brisk pace, engaging your arms and abs as you walk. The road averages a 10 degree grade, so make your steps shorter and quicker for a killer workout. The beautiful canyon and waterfall views will help keep your mind off the burn.

College of Southern Idaho Fitness Trail

Why: The fitness trail, which runs across the CSI campus in Twin Falls, is set up like a circuit workout. Circuit training incorporates both aerobic and anaerobic exercises to keep your heart rate up during the whole workout. According to Sparkpeople.com, a 150-pound person can burn as many as 264 calories during a circuit workout, so it's a great bang for your fitness buck. The trail of bark chips is best suited for runners and walkers, so leave the in-line skates, bicycles and sandals at home.

For a great workout: Take the trail at your pace. If you are a beginner, walk quickly from station to station. If you are already in good shape, jog or sprint. Stop at every station and follow the instructions at the posts. Examples include elevated push-ups, balance beams and stretching stations. The path starts behind the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, but there are several areas to hop onto the mile-long track. Some posts are designed for seniors, like high steps, while others, like neck stretches, can be utilized by everyone.

Heyburn Walking Trail

Why: The trail, which runs next to the Snake River in Heyburn, is paved and well-maintained. It's wide and mostly flat, which makes it ideal for wheelchairs or family bicycle trips with the little ones. The fish are usually jumping by the docks, so listen for the signature splash that adds character to this trail.

For a great workout: The trail is half a mile long, then loops back on itself. Sprint from the beginning of the trail, which starts behind the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce, to the picnic tables near the fishing docks. Do two sets of 10 elevated push-ups on the benches, then jog to the loop at the end of the trail. Do two sets of 10 lunges, then jog back to the picnic area. Once you're there, do 20 squats (if your legs can handle it), then cool down with a casual walk back to your car.

MELISSA DAVLIN/Times-News

Payton Weimer, left, rides with her brother, Brady, and father, Ryan, on the Heyburn Walking Trail on May 26. 'We will be here quite a bit this summer,' Ryan Weimer said, adding that the trail is well-maintained and perfect for bike rides.

RIGHT: On their way into Hailey, Jeannice Shiver and her two daughters use part of the bike path that runs from Bellevue to Ketchum on May 29. Shiver said either she or her husband — training for triathlons or getting to work in Ketchum on his bike — uses the path nearly every day. 'It keeps you off the highway, and it's long enough, mileage-wise, that you can go as far as you need to go,' she said. 'It's a community-friendly place where people can get out and walk their dogs.'

ARIEL HANSEN/Times-News

Why: The Wood River Valley is filled with hiking and biking trails, but the Wood River Trail is great for everyone from casual joggers and weekend in-line skaters to hard-core marathon trainers. The 20-mile trail follows old railroad tracks and runs alongside the Big

The risks of special-occasion tanning

STEPHEN DUNN/The Hartford Courant

Chelsea DiCicco, 18, undergoes a 10-minute session at a Tropical Sun salon in Middletown, Conn.

By Kathleen Megan
The Hartford Courant

Even though girls getting ready for their high school proms had heard about the risks associated with indoor tanning, they flocked to tanning salons this spring to get that baseline bronze.

“I think it makes you feel better about yourself when you look tanner,” says Kayla Adams, a senior at Manchester High School, a Connecticut campus near Hartford. “Celebrities, everybody, talk about being tanned. It’s also really relaxing.”

Says Alissa Ranno, a senior at nearby Rocky Hill High School: “Tanning does make you look more attractive. It brings out your features more: your eyes, your face, your hair.”

The risks of skin cancer concern her, she says, “but I take life day by day. ... I’m not trying to say I’m careless.”

Her parents tell her she should be “careful with all that kind of stuff,” but Ranno says she doesn’t do it all the time. “It’s not healthy to do it month after month after month.”

But is it OK to do it for a month or two before their prom or some other special occasion?

“We don’t know if there is any such thing as a safe use of the sun tanning bed,” says Dr. Philip Kerr, an assistant professor of dermatology at the University of Connecticut School of Medicine. “But certainly less is better.”

Tanning beds have been associated with an increased risk of melanoma and non-melanoma skin cancer, according to the American Academy of Dermatologists. Several studies have shown that tanning-bed use before age 35 is associated with an increased risk of melanoma, while excessive use of tanning beds is linked to skin aging, immune suppression and eye damage.

The association of tanning beds and skin cancer is strong, Kerr says. He expects that research eventually will confirm a cause-and-effect relationship between tanning beds and skin cancer — much the way smoking was eventually, definitively linked to cancer.

When he talks to young patients, Kerr emphasizes that tanning beds definitely cause “premature aging of the skin. ... That’s a message that seems to resonate with young women and girls: You don’t want to look old before your time.”

But it’s a message many young people ignore.

“Generally, there is still a perception that people look healthier and better when they are tanned,” says Dr. Arielle Kauvar, a dermatologist in New York. “It’s hard to convince young people that this is actually a dangerous behavior.”

Kauvar is also concerned that high school kids who just want to get tanned for the prom may wind up becoming regulars.

The “it’s bad for you” message is also clouded by arguments from the tanning industry that a “base” tan protects you from the ravages of sunburns. Advocates for indoor tanning also argue that many people are low in Vitamin D, which, they say, can be increased through tanning.

John Overstreet, executive director of the Indoor Tanning Association, says this of dermatologists who are critical of tanning beds: “They love to talk about skin cancer; they love to scare everyone to death.” But he says controlled indoor tanning helps to avoid sunburns that have been linked to skin cancer.

Debbie Spada, who, with her husband, Umberto, owns Tropical Sun tanning salon in Middletown, Conn., said the staff works closely with clients to ensure that they tan safely.

Dermatologists are critical of the “base tan” concept and say comparatively little vitamin D comes from tanning beds.

“A tan, just like a burn, is a sign of damage to the skin,” Kauvar says. “Both are forms of damage to the skin; both are risk factors for developing skin cancer.”

As for vitamin D, Kerr says that it is ultraviolet B rays that increase vitamin D levels, but tanning lightbulbs give off about 93 percent ultraviolet A rays.

If you must have a tan for a special occasion, dermatologists recommend spray-on or rub-on tanning solutions.

Need help getting medicines prescribed by your doctor?

Anyone who is uninsured and financially struggling may qualify for programs that provide free or nearly free prescription medicines. And there’s a fast and convenient way to see whether you qualify — The Partnership for Prescription Assistance’s “Help is Here Express.”

The mobile office is equipped with computer terminals and mobile phones so people can find out whether they may be eligible for help getting their prescription medicines. Specialists will be aboard to make sure the application process is quick and easy, organizers say.

A Help is Here Express event, sponsored by America’s Pharmaceutical Research Companies, will be from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Salvation Army, 348 Fourth Ave. N. in Twin Falls. Be sure to know the medicines you take when you visit the bus. Admission is free, and the public is invited. Information: 1-888-779-2527.

Trail

Wood River in some places, then connects to the Sun Valley Trail north of Ketchum for an additional 10 miles. It’s well maintained, paved and wide enough that passing on the left isn’t a problem. A bonus for Idaho history fans: Historical markets pepper the trail, explaining the significance of the Philadelphia Smelter and the Old Hailey Depot. Check it out if you’re not whizzing by too fast.

For a great workout: Bring your bike for this one, friend. The trail is mostly flat and is very bike friendly, so you don’t have to worry much about constantly changing gears. Because the trail is so long, don’t sprint — instead, work at a moderate pace, so you are slightly out of breath and it’s possible to have a conversation. You’re going for distance and endurance, not speed. Remember to pass joggers and slower bikers on the left and let people know you’re coming up to them.

Although the trail starts in Bellevue, hop on wherever you want. Parking isn’t an issue — there are several places near the trail to stash your car. A map of the trail can be found online at trailweb.net; Wood River Trail is highlighted in purple.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries and Regional fishery managers that, as of May 31, weekly angler surveys indicate that about 42 percent of the State's harvest share of hatchery Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length (adults) returning to the Clearwater River drainage had been harvested. Most of this harvest has occurred downstream of the Orofino Bridge. By June 7, anglers likely will have harvested about 65 percent of the non-tribal share of adult Chinook salmon, and the majority of that harvest will have occurred downstream of the Orofino Bridge.

To ensure opportunity for upstream communities, such as Orofino, Kamiah, Kooskia and Grangeville, to harvest adult Chinook salmon, the Bureau of Fisheries recommends prohibiting retention of adult Chinook salmon in Clearwater River fishery downstream of the Orofino Bridge effective the end of fishing on June 7.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the Clearwater River downstream of the Orofino Bridge to harvest of Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length, effective the close of fishing hours on June 7, 2009. Copies of Order 09-32 are available at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Headquarters, 600 South Walnut, PO Box 25, Boise, ID 83707.

Guilt haunts victim of rape following attacker's suicide

DEAR ABBY: When I was 15, I was raped by a family friend. I did what I thought was the right thing to do and told my parents. The man was arrested, and DNA tests proved everything. Charges were pressed.

DEAR ABBY Jeane Phillips

I thought everything was going to be OK, but a few days before the court proceedings were to begin, my rapist killed himself. Now his family harasses my family. They claim he was innocent and I was bent on ruining his life.

Abby, people often ask me if I am "relieved" that he committed suicide. I feel terrible about it, and I don't know how to respond to these comments.

- BLAMING MYSELF OUT WEST

DEAR BLAMING YOURSELF: When someone commits suicide, it is not unusual for the survivors to feel — among other things — overwhelming guilt. You did the right thing by telling your parents about the assault. Your family did the right thing in pressing charges. Obviously your rapist was very disturbed, and you are in no way responsible for his death. The police should be notified about the harassment from his family.

When someone asks if you are "relieved" that the rapist is dead, you are not obliged to answer. You can let the question hang in the air, or turn it back on the person by asking, "How would you feel?" and let him or her ramble on.

I hope you received psychological counseling after you were raped, because it should have helped you to recognize that you are not responsible for anything that has happened. However, because you are blaming yourself, it's time to schedule a few sessions with a therapist.

DEAR ABBY: I am 23 and being married in the fall. I couldn't be more excited. I have started shopping for a wedding dress, and I would like to wear a pure white one on my special day. However, I am not a virgin, and I know the original significance of brides wearing white was to declare their virginity.

Is this still true today, or is it not so important anymore? I don't want to offend anyone. (I think most of the guests we will be inviting know my fiance and I live together, so they can assume that I am not a virgin.) I could always wear an ivory dress, but I would really prefer a white one. What do you think?

- WONDERING IN WASHINGTON

IF JUNE 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may be blessed by plenty of chances for success in the year ahead and a permanent improvement in some sector of your life. Between now and the third week of July, however, you must keep your nose to the grindstone, be scrupulous about meeting obligations and avoid starting anything of major importance because the stars are currently stacked against you.

Launch your most crucial plans in September, when you will have heavenly protection, very good counsel and the best judgment to help you make a success of anything you begin. Although you may be on track for success with career and business, anyone be very good for you and help you improve your overall life path. ARIES (March 21-April 19): Actions speak so much louder than words. You can let physical activity perform its magic to banish worries or doubts. There may be a mix-up with any agreement or commitment that you begin now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may imagine that mental harmony with a certain someone exists, but the reality may not match your hopes. Your best bet is to pursue physical occupations or share a short trip with your mate.

Today is Monday, June 8, the 159th day of 2009. There are 206 days left in the year. Today's Highlight: On June 8, A.D. 632, the prophet Muhammad died in Medina.

On this date: In 1845, Andrew Jackson, seventh president of the United States, died in Nashville, Tenn. In 1861, Tennessee seceded from the Union.

In 1864, Abraham Lincoln was nominated for another term as president during the National Union (Republican) Party's convention in Baltimore. In 1905, President Theodore Roosevelt offered to act as a mediator in the Russo-Japanese War.

In 1915, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan resigned in a disagreement with President Woodrow Wilson over U.S. handling of the sinking of the Lusitania. In 1948, the "Texaco Star Theater" made its debut on NBC-TV with Milton Berle guest-hosting the first program. (Berle was later named

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go beachcombing. Something from the past might wash up on shore. You will never find a message in a bottle unless you take the time to walk on the sand and explore your options along with the seascapes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Just because you are a whiz kid at work doesn't mean you will receive the same appreciation at home. Don't try to persuade a significant other to make a change or decision that could affect your future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fun and games aren't what they used to be. You may find that it takes a lot of work and preparation to pack up a picnic lunch or get people together for a friendly game of cards. Pay now and play later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can't play hide and seek with the difficulties that pop into view today. You can conquer any problem if you can meet it head on and look it in the eye. Deal with issues before they get out of control.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may have to weigh whether an offer is meant as an incentive or bribery.

TODAY IN HISTORY

the show's permanent host.) In 1966, a merger was announced between the National and American Football Leagues, to take effect in 1970. In 1967, 34 U.S. servicemen were killed when Israeli forces raided the Liberty, a Navy ship stationed in the Mediterranean. (Israel called the attack a tragic mistake.) In 1978, a jury in Clark County, Nev., ruled the so-called "Mormon will," purportedly written by the late billionaire Howard Hughes, was a forgery.

Ten years ago: The United States, Russia and six leading democracies authorized a text calling for a peacekeeping force in Kosovo. President Bill Clinton announced new restrictions aimed at making it tougher for teens to sneak into R-

DEAR WONDERING: If your dream dress is white, then that's what you should wear.

According to Emily Post: "During the 20th century, white came to signify joy rather than virginity (though traditionalists may hold to the older symbolism) and is now considered appropriate for all brides, including those marrying again and those who are pregnant at the time of the wedding."

DEAR ABBY: I ride the bus to and from work every day, and I have had it "up to here" with people who conduct loud conversations on their cell phones. I have learned far more than I ever wanted to about medical problems, restraining orders, relationships that are falling apart, etc. I would love to make eye contact and give them "the look," but these folks are too absorbed in what they are saying to even glance in my direction.

What surprises me most is that the average age of a lot of them is in their 40s. I'm in my early 20s, but I know that not only is their behavior rude, but that sharing personal information with a group of strangers is potentially dangerous.

Can you suggest a way to deal with this problem without having to wear earplugs?

- MINNEAPOLIS COMMUTER

DEAR MINNEAPOLIS COMMUTER: Yes, get up and move your seat.

Don't let a desire for security make you timid when tough tactics are necessary. Changes of attitude won't cancel out obligations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money isn't everything. So many hands are out that you might feel like an ATM machine. It is important to remember that you are being judged by your generosity as well as for your efforts today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Bring your charm to bear. You may notice that certain factions are becoming more concerned with partisanship than with the issues. You might be able to intervene and save the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Step away from the fray. Remain objective when dealing with social issues. While you might take exception with someone's policies or actions remember that you don't have to condemn the person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This might be a good time to spend with family or trusted friends. There is a hint of romantic yearning nagging at you behind the scenes but you really shouldn't start a fling under these stars.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If your shadow box, your opponent may win. Vague fears or worries should be shoved out of sight. If you make a change, a commitment, or tweak a business matter it could cause unexpected distress.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"The quality of decision is like the well-timed swoop of a falcon which enables it to strike and destroy its victim." — Sun Tzu

Since the Open Trials take place this week, this week's deals all come from the USA Trials for Beijing of 2008. Today's deal sees a pair from the winning team bidding the cards up, and playing them well too.

Jeff Meckstroth's decision to raise three spades to game looks extremely aggressive.

How would you play the game on the lead of the club nine? The opening lead was covered by the 10, jack and ace. Only one card was good enough at the next trick and Eric Rodwell duly found it — the club five, to establish the club suit. East won with the club king and switched to the heart jack. What now?

If you win the first round of hearts with the ace, you will go down. You will have no way to avoid the loss of two hearts and a trump trick. Rodwell allowed the heart jack to win and that was the end of the road for the defense. East chose to play another heart, but now Rodwell could win, cash the diamond ace, ruff a diamond to hand, and then ruff a heart in dummy.

Suppose instead that East had played a trump (high or low) instead of switching to hearts. Declarer would then have been able to persist with the trump suit, eventually drawing trumps and discarding his heart losers on the established club suit. The key move was to duck the first round of hearts. Look out for that theme — it comes up surprisingly frequently.

ANSWER: On an auction of this sort, the opponents will have nothing to spare in the way of high cards, so you should be looking to defend passively — but you have no passive lead! That being so, you might as well lead your best suit, spades, hoping to find your partner with one of the two top honors in that suit plus a little more — the nine or extra length perhaps.
