... in Cassia County From May 29 police reports:

Information:

A 56-year-old Oakley man named Earl reported that he and a 31-yearold Oakley man named Nate have been arguing about water rights for the past few weeks. Nate drove both of them out to the site of a water pipe near Birch Creek - but on the way, according to the report, the argument escalated when Earl decided he wanted to go home.

"Earl stated that Nate spun the truck around quickly and it scared Earl," the report reads. "Earl stated that Nate had threatened to kill him a week ago and did not know what Nate was planning to do. Earl stated he opened the door as Nate swerved causing Earl to fall out of the pickup."

They had an argument the previous week about water that, according to the report, "ended good."

Nate told police that he never threatened Earl and that Earl jumped out of the truck.

"I asked Earl if he jumped out of the truck and he said yes because he thought Nate was going to hurt him," Deputy Doug Welch's report reads. "I advised Earl that if he jumps out of the truck while it is rolling there is a chance he could get ran over. Earl agreed."

No charges were filed. Both men said they just want to settle the water dispute.

Cassia County right to worry about proposed high-voltage power line

raw a straight line from Glenrock, Wyo., to Melba, Idaho, and it doesn't run through the agricultural heart of Cassia County.

So residents there are justified in asking if there isn't a better route for a proposed 230or 500-kilovolt electrical transmission line.

Rocky Mountain Power and Idaho Power plan to build a $2 billion highvoltage line from a substation near Glenrock, east of Casper, to another substation near Melba, west of Boise. Nearly 60 miles of transmission line would run through private property in Cassia County, and local folks aren't happy about it.

They've even organized a group, Move It!, to persuade the utilities to move the line north of the Snake River and run it across public Bureau of Land Management ground.

There's no doubt that the line must be built; it's absolutely essential to southern Idaho's economy to have access to more

Cassia County residents are justifiably concerned about a proposal to run a high-voltage power line through their land. Idaho Power owes them some answers.

Our view:

electricity. It's just a question of the route.

So Idaho Power and Rocky Mountain Power must at least answer two questions about the impact on those who live near the planned high-voltage line.

1. Is it safe? Most, but not all, the research says humans and animals are not adversely affected by electromagnetic radiation from proximity to highvoltage power lines. But there are studies that have implicated power lines in leukemia, neurogenerative diseases, miscarriage, birth defects and clinical depression.

No one would be allowed to build or live under the lines, but ground there would be farmed. It's indisputable that farmers who work around high-voltage lines are at greater risk of accidental electrocution.

2. Will it damage farm equipment? Electric and magnetic fields from power lines will induce a current in any conductor through which they pass, and they can overload and destroy nearby electrical equipment. That's a potential problem in heavily irrigated Cassia County, since the transmission lines would run above hundreds of pumps, sprinkler lines and farm implements, most of which use electronic components.

The two utilities do have a north-of-the-river, 00-kilovolt line planned from American Falls to Shoshone, so there's a potential alternate route for the main transmission line. It's unclear, though, whether that would be cost-effective. One way or another, the line will be built - by condemning private property as a last-resort. But it doesn't need to come to that. Cassia County farmers are just concerned about the health of their kids and protecting their ability to make a living. Idaho Power and Rocky Mountain Power must demonstrate they care about those things too.

the chatter goes, should Barack Obama be allowed to enjoy date night with Michelle in New York, sightseeing in Paris, golf outings in D.C., not to mention doing a promotion for Conan O'Brien and a video cameo for Stephen Colbert's first comedy show from Iraq?

With two wars and GM in bankruptcy proceedings, shouldn't the president be glued to the grindstone, emulating W's gravity when he sacrificed golf in 2003 as the Iraq insurgency spread?

"I don't want some mom whose son may have recently died to see the commander in chief playing golf," the former president explained later. "I think, you know, playing golf during a war just sends the wrong signal."

Actually, what sends the wrong signal is going to war with a phony justification, inadequate troop levels, insufficient armor, an inept Defense secretary and an inability to admit for years, deadly ones, that you needed counterinsurgency experts.

The right signal is Michelle and her daughters being charming ambassadors, "gobsmacking" the town, as a British tabloid put it, by scarfing down fish and chips at a London pub for 7.95 pounds (about $13), like regular tourists.

As a taxpayer, I am most happy to contribute to domestic and international date nights. As Arthur Schlesinger noted in his diaries, the White House tends to drive its occupants nuts. So some respite from the pressure is clearly a

> Some White House officials fretted that the Obamas' Marine One and Gulfstream magic-carpet ride to dinner in Greenwich Village and a play on Broadway was too showy. Others thought it helped show a softer side of the often dispassionate Obama.

> Interestingly, Dr. No, Dick Cheney, declined to tut-tut with other Republicans, saying "I don't know why not," when he was asked about the propriety of the president's getaway to Broadway. A far more mature response than Sen. Chuck Grassley's nittwit tweets grumbling about the president urging progress on health care "while u sightseeing in Paris."

I loved the "Pretty Woman" romance of the New York tableau, the president, who had not lived an entitled life where he could afford such lavish gestures, throwing off his tie and whisking his wife, in mixed feelings about her a flirty black cocktail dress,

What a relief to have an urbane, cultivated, curious president who's out and about, engaged in the world. Not dangerously detached, as W. was, or darkly stewing like Cheney. Not hanging with the Rat Pack like JFK or getting bored and up to mischief like Bill Clinton.

It was lame of critics on Capitol Hill to carp that the Obamas could have taken in a play in D.C. I'm a native, but it's not the same. And it's nice to see them tending to their marriage. According to Richard Wolffe in "Renegade," his new book about the Obama campaign, it has taken effort to get the relationship this strong.

"She hated the failed race for Congress in 2000, and their marriage was strained by the time their youngest daughter, Sasha, was born a year later," Wolffe writes. "There was little conversation and even less romance. She was angry at his selfishness and careerism; he thought she was cold and ungrateful. Even as he ran for the U.S. Senate in 2004, she still harbored very husband's love of politics.

tests and preferred to keep her distance."

Wolffe limns what those of us who traveled with Obama could see: He was often grumpy on the campaign. He missed his family. He disdained what he saw as superficial, pointscoring conventions of politics, like debates and macho put-downs and public noshing. The Chicago smarty-pants was a Michael Jordan clutch player who grew bored if he was not challenged.

Being president, by contrast, suits him much better. He has not lapsed into his old ambivalence. He is intellectually engaged by sculpting history. The trellis of hideous problems is a challenge that lures him to be powerfully concentrated. And, as his aides say, he loves living above the family store.

Mixing play with intense work is not only a good mental health strategy; it's a good way to show the world that American confidence and cool — and Cary Grant romantic flair — still thrive.

Date on and tee it up, Mr. President. It's OK if they're teed off.

No need to waste farm water if dams breached

The Times-News published an opinion piece recently about Mike Crapo breaking ranks with the Idaho GOP and the party's years-long position best described by the Craig-Semanko mantra as "absolutely no breaching of the four lower Snake dams as an option to save Idaho salmon and steelhead."

Times-News went on to congratulate Crapo but made an inaccurate statement about the power produced by the dams. Times-News said breaching would eliminate enough power to light a town the size of Seattle.

Most of the year, after spring runoff, the dams produce little power, barely enough to light one town in the Seattle area. Perhaps enough is produced to light Twin Falls, but 96 percent of Idaho's power comes from other sources, not the four dams.

Electricity production was secondary. They are not reservoirs and can't store water for energy production releases when it's needed the most - late summer, fall and winter. They are run-of-the-river dams, a system of locks for barge traffic. What flows in flows out.

A puzzler is the resistance to breaching by the Idaho Water Users Association. As long as the dams remain, Idaho farm water must be released upstream to flush the young salmon to the ocean. No need to waste Idaho farm water if the dams are breached.

Rigorously enforce Eastland's speed limit

On June 5, you printed an article saying the city will reduce the speed limit on North Washington between North College Parkway and Pole Line Road to 35 mph. The article stated that the new lower limit will be rigorously enforced. Hooray and about time!

A few days ago, the city announced changes to traffic control in the area of Target and Winco. Again, hooray and about time! Among the changes is lowering the speed limit to 35 mph from Fillmore to where the 35 mph limit starts on Eastland Drive. Alas, there is no stated undertaking to rigorously enforce this speed limit. It should be just as rigorously enforced as the Washington Street limit and this enforcement should extend at least to the Falls Avenue intersection.

Other routes for power line must be explored

As a home and landowner along the proposed Idaho Power Gateway West Transmission Line project, a few questions have come to mind. While I understand and respect the needs of Idaho Power and Rocky Mountain Power to expand and construct new lines, I am concerned with the impact this project will have on us.

The most obvious question is "Why here?" Why has the proposed route been chosen? As I have studied the map provided to me by Idaho Power, it seems that there are several other options or alternate routes that could be used to serve the needs of the company's growth. It seems to me that the proposed route has been chosen simply because it is the path of least resistance, so to speak.

Other options are available and must be explored. The state of Idaho has lots of ground set aside as "public land." What does this mean and why can't this "public land" be used to serve the public and its growing needs? Wildlife and conservation concerns are valid but should not be the only reason to construct the new lines and relay stations along this new line. Simply changing the height of a tower or painting it a different color will not really make it less visible or less of a hassle to farm around.

This land is productive and beautiful, and we want to keep it that way. MIKE SEARLE

Here's what Idaho's newspapers are saying about ...

... which highways to close?

Lewiston Tribune

Idaho just has too many highways and too few people. On average, residents here spend as much on roads and bridges as anybody in Washington or Oregon. Our money is spread too thin along a 5,000-mile system.

Time to downsize, wouldn't vou sav? Seems like that's the message from Boise. Idaho lawmakers agreed to raise another $51 million much of it from the same source that supports Idaho's depleted schools, universities and social programs.

But that's well short of filling the $140 million to $240 million yearly transportation budget hole. No way were they going to accept Gov. Butch Otter's plan to raise fuel taxes and registration fees. Nor was there any signal of disagreement from the average Idaho motorist. Many of them protested just as harshly about Otter's plan.

Instead of falling 25 percent short of what's needed to repair and maintain the byways of this state, Idaho now is only 20 percent behind.

Here are your choices: • Do nothing. Instead of having every fifth mile in bad shape, it can be every third mile five years from now.

• Acceptable losses. A recent audit says 35 percent of Idaho's roads need immediate rehab and repair. Fixing them is six times more expensive than maintaining structures still in good condition. Ignore the stuff that's falling apart. Focus on the highways and bridges where maintenance costs are reasonable ...

• Dollars follow people, Part I. That's what

Missouri does. Eighty percent of its traffic is centralized on 20 percent of its highways. If Idaho took the same approach, the interstate highways from Burley to the Oregon border suck up most of the bucks. Not much help there for northern or eastern Idaho, is there?

 Dollars follow people, Part II. At least devote Idaho's resources to its share of the federal highway system. Doing so would leave the interstates and the U.S. highways, such as U.S. 95 and U.S. 12, in decent shape. You can get from city to city. But good luck traveling to some of Idaho's most scenic spots ...

Any one of these options leaves rural Idaho in a

Idaho invested in shoring up the economies of its smaller, isolated communities. No longer. Considering the hits this Legislature already has inflicted upon smaller towns, among them shrunken education and economic development budgets, what's one more?

... see no evil Idaho Statesman, Boise

Marie Bulgin doesn't hide her opinions. "I'm not against bighorn sheep," she told the Associated Press recently. "I'm just for agriculture." Unfortunately for tough spot. Time was when Bulgin, the head of the University of Idaho's Caine Veterinary Teaching and Research Center, science isn't supposed to pick sides. Science is supposed to gather evidence and let the facts serve as the guide.

Somehow, for 15 years, Bulgin seemed unaware of research within her own shop, which suggested that wild bighorn sheep can contract disease from domestic animals. While this evidence remained on file, Bulgin continued to discount the diseasetransmission theory.

This is an outrage of an oversight. Her explanation isn't exactly reassuring. "This kind of compromises me, because (of) what I've been saying ... Some things slip by you." Quite a slip.

Bulgin didn't merely compromise her own credibility; to their credit, U of I officials are looking into the issue.

... the overlooked research and Bulgin's unflinching pro-industry stance drive a deeper wedge between wool growers and bighorn sheep advocates.

A bighorn management law, passed in the final days of the 2009 legislative session, clearly put the wool growers' interests first.

The Department of Fish and Game is required to come up with plans that could involve killing or moving bighorns that stray too close to domestic sheep grazing allotments on federal land. The law is notably cavalier about killing sheep - and is conspicuously skeptical about the question of diseases. "The potential risk, if any, of disease transmission and loss of bighorn sheep when the same invade domestic livestock or sheep operations is accepted."

... Bad science has a way of spawning bad public policy ...

In this case, sound management must recognize disease as a potential factor in declining bighorn numbers - and a potential threat to the long-term health of the bighorn population.

Cold cash, hot Democratic mess

emember William "Cold Cash" Jefferson? House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and the Clean-Up Crew hope you've forgotten. Jefferson is the former Louisiana congressman caught with gobs of money in his freezer nearly four years ago in an FBI sting. He finally went on trial this week on a multitude of federal bribery and racketeering charges.

Refresher: FBI agents confronted Jefferson with video showing him accepting $100,000 in marked bills from a government informant. Prosecutors say he took the money to bribe a Nigerian official in a business deal. "We got to motivate him real good," Jefferson told the informant, according to a Justice Department transcript. "He's got a lot of people to pay off."

Prosecutors also allege that Jefferson demanded or accepted many other payments to his family-prestige if Jefferson were just another citizen acting "privately." The New Orleans Times-Picayune's Stephanie Grace reported this week that "the tightknit clan with the damaged name includes several siblings who also benefited from Jefferson's power and prominence – and who stand accused in a newly revamped federal indictment of forming a criminal enterprise to steer an appalling amount of federal, state and city money into their own pockets.

"Last year, Jefferson's political operative brother Mose and his assessor sister Betty, along with Betty's daughter, were charged with systematically bilking governmentfunded social service programs. Another sister is cooperating with the feds." So, where is the congressional clean-up crew? Refresher: In January 2006, still basking in the glory of her ascension, Pelosi announced a "Clean House Team to Address (the) Republican Culture of Corruption." A press release trumpeted: "It is long past time for the Congress to address the systemic Republican culture of corruption that has undermined the American people's confidence in this institution," Pelosi said. "I am proud that some of the best minds in our Caucus will be leading the Democratic effort to clean up the corrupt Republican Congress. These great leaders will work to restore truth and trust to the People's House." The Jefferson case has all the Beltway business-asusual ingredients that Pelosi vowed to eliminate when she took power:

nepotism, abuse of power, corporate cronyism and gross violations of the public trust. But Jefferson is a black Democrat who has been fiercely defended by both the Congressional Black Caucus and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Democrats are all too willing to lambaste corruption among their political foes, but fear the wrath of racecard players in their own party. It has muted criticism of tax-cheating, selfdealing New York Rep. Charlie Rangel, under investigation for numerous ethical improprieties in his personal finances and fundraising activities; congressional sisters Loretta and Linda Sanchez, under investigation by the House ethics committee for a payroll mess; and crony of color Rep. Maxine Waters, who had a personal and financial stake in Boston-based bank that received $12 mil-

OneUnited, a minority lion in federal TARP bailout money.

Putting the Democratic culture of corruption front and center is not a headache Pelosi needs especially as a new Rasmussen poll shows her party now losing to Republicans on the core issue of governmental integrity. The Rasmussen Report reveals:

"Republicans also now hold a six-point lead on the issue of government ethics and corruption, the second most important issue to all voters and the top issue among unaffiliated voters. That shows a large shift from May, when Democrats held an 11point lead on the issue."

It's a sharp and timely reminder that while death, taxes and "temporary" bailouts are forever, political fortunes in Washington are never immutable.

Business owners, organizations launch bus system to revive Ketchum nightlife By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

The Wood River Valley has a new economic stimulus package.

It's called "The Party Bus" and it will be making the rounds between Bellevue and Ketchum on Friday and Saturday nights to rev up business.

It'll have a disco ball twirling and music blaringfrom 1950s bebop to Led Zeppelin. And a ticket to ride is good for a drink at a participating restaurant or bar.

"It helps business. It gets cars off the road so it's green. And it will allow people to get out and have a good time without worrying that they're going to get pulled over for driving under the influence or hurting someone," said Lara Spencer.

Spencer, who owns The Dollhouse – a recycled high-fashion boutique in Ketchum – conceived the idea of the party bus to reenergize the nightlife in Ketchum.

Others quickly got on board, including Neil Morrow, executive director of Ketchum's Community Development Corporation, Jason Miller of and Mountain Rides bus service.

People can buy a $10 bus ticket from the bus driver.

The ticket will be good for as many rides as they wish to make up and down the valley on the party bus that Friday or Saturday between 8 p.m. and 2 a.m. And the ticket will also be valid earlier in the

As the night winds down, bus riders can have the bus driver arrange to have a cab meet them at the bus stops

Roland Griffith, who owns The Cellar Pub and Sushi on Second, says he likes the idea of bringing the valley together through the bus. "And it keeps people from drinking and driving, which is good," he added.

"I think it's a great idea," said Amy Oles, of Hailey. "It's affordable for someone who might otherwise balk at spending the money to drive up to Ketchum. And people will feel as if they can relax and have a few drinks without worrving about having to drive home."

New company will focus on smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles

By Dan Strumpf Associated Press writer

DETROIT - Italy's Fiat is the new owner of most of Chrysler's assets, closing a deal Wednesday that saves the troubled U.S. automaker from liquidation and places a new company in the hands of Fiat's CEO.

The deal clears the way for a new, leaner Chrysler Group LLC to emerge from bankruptcy protection minus billions in debt, 789 underperforming dealerships and burdensome labor costs that nearly sank the storied automaker.

Fiat CEO Sergio Marchionne immediately was named CEO of the new company, which said in a statement that it would soon reopen Chrysler factories that were idled during the bankruptcy process, costing the automaker $100 million per day.

The new company will focus on smaller vehicles, areas in which Chrysler was weak.

"Work is already underway on developing new environmentally friendly, fuel-efficient, high-quality vehicles that we intend to become Chrysler's hallmark going forward," the new company said in a statement.

The Italian automaker won't put any money into the deal but will give Chrysler billions worth of small car and engine technology.

"It also means that Chrysler will be looking to end their franchise agreements with dealers in metropolitan areas where there are several dealerships competing with each other and driving down the value of the vehicles that Chrysler sells. But Lewis is concerned about the message his employees might take away from his trip, which might be seen as a luxury. "I have preached and pled the case that times are tight and we need to be as button-down as we can to ride it out," Lewis said.

That's a big reason why he'll be in close touch with his workers. "My biggest fear right now is this will be a far more active trip for me in terms of communication to the office," he said.

Betsy Storm is also taking a vacation, traveling to Spain for 10 days in September with her 26year-old son, who has never been to Europe. Storm isn't sure she'll have the chance again to share this kind of experience with him.

"I'm feeling like it's a big step to make right now, but my gut told me it was definitely the right thing to do," said Storm, who owns the Chicago-based public relations firm Top Drawer Communications.

Storm is preparing her company for the trip, giving clients advance notice so they won't be caught by surprise. That's someone a savvy small business owner does even in the best of times.

"We're just going to work around it," she said of her trip.

Some owners have had to cancel vacations because they need the money to run their companies.

Rachel Imison and her husband are forgoing their usual trip to Britain with their two children to see family. The couple, who own Graphic Imagery Inc., a printing company in South San Francisco, bought a building and a new printing press this year, and they are reducing all their expenses because they have mortgage and loan payments to make.

"When you're a small business owner, you cut everything back to the bone," Imison said.

She said the recession has hurt business, but also said, "we'll be OK."

"We're getting everything ready for the upturn," she said, explaining that the new printing press, which is digital, is expected to bring in new revenue.

Chrysler's culture of innovation and Fiat's complementary technology and expertise to expand Chrysler's product portfolio both in North America and overseas," Marchionne said in a statement.

The sale to Fiat SpA marks a victory for the Obama administration, which shepherded Chrysler into Chapter 11 protection on April 30 with the hope that the company would emerge in a matter of months with a new partner.

Marchionne immediately made management changes, including the appointment of Vice Chairman and President Jim Press as deputy CEO and adviser to help with the management transition.

Press, formerly Toyota Motor Corp.'s top U.S. executive, joined Chrysler shortly after it was taken over in 2007 by private equity firm Cerberus Capital Management LP.

In a statement, Marchionne said the organization will be designed to give leaders broad control and increase the speed of decision making.

On Tuesday, Judge Arthur Gonzales approved Chrysler's motion to terminate 789 of its dealer franchises, or about 25 percent of its dealer base.

Many of those dealers closed their doors for good on Tuesday, though some will continue to sell used cars or other brands.

FILER – Finding a place to break out your fishing pole and drop a line in the water might be as close as your own backvard.

Last November, in cooperation with the Twin Falls Canal Company, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game began stocking two urban trout ponds four miles north of Filer.

Joe Eldridge usually goes fishing in Hagerman, but appreciates having a place close to home where he can sit on the bank.

IF YOU GO

The Filer Fish Ponds are 4.5 miles north of Filer on the east side of 4350 North at the intersection of 2300 East. Other urban fisheries in the Magic Valley, stocked by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, include Emerald Lake in Burley, Oster Lake in Hagerman's Wildlife Management Area, and Gravel Pond in Rupert. All ponds are open year-round and require a fishing license.

"I live in Filer and have been out here to the ponds a couple of times." Eldridge said. "It's nice to have a place like this where you can just come and relax. I just gotta figure out what they're biting on."

The ponds, built and maintained by the canal company since 2006, are actually part of the LSLQ Coulee Drainage that allows topsoil solids to settle before irrigation water is eventually reintroduced into the Snake River.

"We originally built the ponds to help improve water quality," canal company Field Supervisor Jay Barlogi said.

"But we're working with Fish and Game on a one-year test basis to see how people respond. And if they respect the ponds it could become something more permanent."

Fish and Game officials recognized the added benefit of developing the location for recreational fishing and approached the canal company in the summer of 2008. Regional Fisheries Manager Doug Megargle says the plan to create local fish ponds was met with enthusiasm.

"I have to say that the canal company has been very cooperative," he said. "Initially we were looking at a small pond that the Magic Valley Fly Fisherman had developed in Centennial Park, but everything just seemed to Lava Hot Springs was a favorite recreational getaway for the Bannock and Shoshone Indians long before the trappers, traders and Oregon Trail pioneers arrived here in the early 1800s.

But the fun just got turned up a notch. Or, should we say, elevated to new heights?

The state-owned resort 35 miles southeast of Pocatello just opened two $1.65-million waterslides that tower five stories into the sky.

Easily the tallest thing in this town of 500, the skyway of these two skyscrapers spans the roadway leading off the highway into the resort community.

Stickers hope to prevent snail invasion

uestion: "What's the deal with this new sticker being required on boats? I heard it had something to do with snails, so I thought it would be a Fish and Game issue."

Answer: You are probably referring to the Idaho Invasive Species Fund sticker.

The Idaho Department of Agriculture proposed a state law in the 2009 legislature to develop a program to protect Idaho's rivers, lakes and streams from aquatic invasive species that have already caused significant damage across the country. These plants and animals pose a serious threat to Idaho waterways, fisheries, irrigation systems, and recreation and are transported between bodies of water inside boat live wells, bilges, on boating equipment and on boat trailers.

Invasive species issues involve several state agencies but the Idaho Department of Agriculture's Invasive Species Program manages the Fund. Since boats are involved with transport of the invasive organisms the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation - the agency that oversees boat registration – will issue the stickers and collect the fees.

A brochure from Parks and Rec was sent to all owners of boats registered in Idaho. The brochure informs boaters about the new laws, sticker requirements, and where they can be obtained. To date, the stickers must be obtained through Parks and Rec by mail or at www.parksandrecreation.idaho.gov.

The annual cost is $10 per boat for residents owning motor- or sail-powered vessels. $20 for nonresident motorized vessels, and $5 for non-motorized vessels exceeding 10 feet in length. Inflatable vessels less than 10 feet in length are exempt.

The "snail" you've heard about is a small bi-valve mollusk called the quagga or zebra muscle. This prolific mollusk has potential to wreak havoc in all of Idaho's fresh water lakes and streams. Other invasive species include Brazilian elodea, Parrotfeather milfoil, Water hyacinth, Eurasian watermilfoil, Hydrilla, New Zealand mudsnails, and Feathered mosquito fern.

To prevent the spread of these aquatic invasive species, thoroughly clean using hot water and pressure on boats, trailers, anchors, propellers, axles, rollers, trolling motors, livewells and bilges. Thoroughly dry all gear and watercraft for five days.

Gary Hompland, regional conservation officer for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, may be reached at 324-4350 or ghompland@idfg.idaho.gov.

Fly fishing school honors pipeline blast victim

By Kie Relyea The Bellingham Herald

BELLINGHAM, Wash. -Ten vears after his death. Liam Wood's spirit lives on honor his passion for fly fishing and his deep love of the natural world.

Since 2004, the Liam Wood Flyfishing and River School Guardian in Bellingham has used the art of fly fishing to connect students to the ecology of fish, rivers and watersheds in the hope that getting them outdoors will spawn a connection to nature and a desire to protect it. There's also a school in Missoula, Mont.

It's a legacy that grew from an idea by Montana Marlene were all for it," said writer David James Duncan, whose book "The River Why" - about fly fishing, the wildness of rivers and the mysticism of both - was a favorite of Liam's, whose love of fly fishing began when he was 9.

The 18-year-old Sehome High School graduate and budding writer drowned while fishing in a favorite anniversary of the pipeline rivers and other wild places watering hole at Whatcom Creek. Duncan, whose other books include "The Brothers K" and "River Teeth," proposed the idea to Liam's parents – his mother Marlene Robinson and stepfather Bruce Brabec – when he came to Bellingham in 2001 on a tour for his collection of essays, "My Story As Told by Water."

The hope was for "something positive to come out of the tragedy. Bruce and Bret Simmons, a family friend and one of a group of people who helped start the school.

Liam's parents no longer live in Bellingham. They have moved to Bonaire in the Caribbean. They declined to be interviewed for an article as part of The Bellingham Herald's coverage of the 10th explosion.

> In an interview, Duncan said no one really knows what happened that day as Liam fly fished for trout in Whatcom Creek, which has been described as a favorite spot that was his home away from home.

> But he believed that Liam may have tried to figure out what was happening to the creek.

"When he first smelled the gas, he should have run like hell. Almost any fisherman, -woman, who loves their home stream would be divided between horror and curiosity," he said.

It is Liam's love for rivers that Simmons evokes when recalling the teen, with whom he went fly fishing.

"He cared deeply about and recognized our collective responsibility of protecting them," Simmons said.

Simmons also talked about the deep places of "He had perceptive eyes

Most of all, he was an excellent fisherman, Simmons said.

The Liam Wood Flyfishing and River Guardian School works to pass on Liam's love of fishing to youths, students and other members of the community through sestaught by Leo sions Bodensteiner, an associate professor in the Department of Environmental Sciences at WWU. Bodensteiner has studied fish, habitats and stream ecology for about 30 vears.

Liam's parents donate time and money to the school.

In addition to sessions through WWU, the school has taught younger students about fly fishing and river ecosystems in compressed versions of the college alternative courses at schools, Home Port Learning Center in Bellingham and Timber Ridge Center just north of Bellingham. This year, they'll do programs in Ferndale and Squalicum high schools.

Duncan, an advocate for fly fishing, fish and river ecosystems, also comes to the class from time to time, as does Brabec, who tells students about Liam.

"Every time, it's heartrending to hear him speak," Bodensteiner said.

"The company that built these slides builds white water parks around the world and they tell us this is the only one they've ever done that crosses over a public roadway," said Lowe. "It makes a great entry into the town. It really defines what Lava Hot Springs is all about."

Lowe grew up in Lava Hot Springs, splashing in its warm waters as a youngster and later taking his turn as a lifeguard. He got a Master's degree in political science at the University of Maryland. But he couldn't get the warm mineral waters out of his blood and so jumped at the opportunity to raise his family there when the state offered him the opportunity to run its swimming and hot pool complex.

The large Olympicsized pool outside-heated to a comfortable 88 to 90 degrees - sports 10-, 7and 5-meter diving platforms, two hydrotubes and a couple smaller slides for youngsters.

Basketball hoops line the edge of the pool and a sand volleyball court sits at one end of the complex amidst spacious lawns for picnicking and sunning. There's also a snack bar.

A second smaller pool offers diving boards, water basketball hoops and two climbing walls positioned on the edge of the pool so that climbers make little more than a big splash should they fall off the wall. The state recently enclosed the pool, opening it for year-round swimming. "My favorite saying is: You're either moving forward or backward," Lowe said. "You can't stay static. These improvements will benefit the town and the state of Idaho, as well, as Idahoans can recreate here and not break the bank."

Indeed, the prices are family friendly with individual swim tickets ranging from $1.50 for tiny tots to $7 for adults or $20 per family.

There are also combination passes for both the swimming pools and four nearby hot pools, which wit in a beautiful garden setting.

IF YOU GO...

Idaho's Olympic Swimming Complex is open from mid-May through Labor Day. The indoor pool and hot pools are open year round. Swimming hours are noon to 7 p.m. through mid-June and 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. from mid-June through Labor Day Weekend.

The hot springs are open 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. during summer and 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. the rest of the year. The pools are closed Thanksgiving and Christmas days. Hot springs prices are $5 for children and those 60 and older and $5.50 for adults. A family pass costs $15. There are more than 400 RV hookups along the river and 350 hotel beds in motels sporting fanciful names as Tumbling Waters. Fat Jack's Burgers and other burger joints boast a variety of milkshakes and other kid-friendly meals, while other restaurants, such as the Thai Restaurant offer other fare. Lava Hot Springs also features Bingo three times a week, golf, free historical museum, frisbee golf, hiking and fishing. Live bands perform at Lavapalooza Sept. 12 on the grass across from the swimming complex and Pebble Creek Ski Resort will present outdoor concerts on June 27 and July 20. Best of all, there's no rotten egg smell, despite the mineral content of the water.

Continued from Outdoors 1 with the Dagger Green Boat, which at almost 12feet long made for a speedy descent in the rapids.

But the Green Boat, which costs $1,085, was not the most maneuverable kayak I've ever paddled. The company built this boat for going fast and relatively straight. Making precise moves in swift water was more difficult than what I'm used to with my shorter whitewater boats.

The next stop in the Ultimate Mountain Challenge was the Sobe XC Mountain Bike race, which involved more than 10 miles of precipitous singletrack. The course was technical and tough, including huge climbs, rock gardens, drops, switchbacks, and make-it-or-crash stone staircases adjacent to the ski slopes.

I rode the Giant Anthem X2 mountain bike, a dualsuspension ride new for 2009. It was a nice balance between the beefy downhill bikes many competitors used and a lighter crosscountry model.

Still, the Anthem's suspension could not keep up. My hands went numb after gripping the vibrat ing handlebars on the first lap. The bike, which retails for $2,900, made up for some of the lack of damping with its speed, and I completed the course in a respectable 1 hour and 21 minutes to take 32nd place among a field of locals

Next week: The Gear Junkie competes in a 10K mountain footrace and a time trial bike race up Vail Pass.

This Utah trout farm is an 85-year-old family business

By Jeff DeMoss Standard-Examiner

NORTH OGDEN, Utah -Shaylie Stoker shrieked in delight as she struggled to grab the sleek, glistening creature flopping on the ground at her feet.

"It's really slippery," the 6-year-old kindergarten student said after she finally got a good enough grip on her first-ever trout to place it in a bucket along with her classmates' catches, many of which were also firsts for the young anglers.

Such experiences define the essence of Cold Springs Trout Farm, an 85-year-old family business that is thriving once again after some turbulent times in recent decades.

As the Top of Utah's only privately owned fish hatchery, Cold Springs serves as a and private customers trout meat directly to growelcome spring, summer and fall respite for families looking for a unique and relatively inexpensive way to get outdoors and get children excited about fishing.

colating underground down the hillside to the hatchery, so adequate snowfall is crucial to the health of his fish, just as it is to those in nature.

Barker said this year looks like it will be very successful, with plenty of water, but that hasn't always been the case.

Six years ago, the farm lost nearly 100,000 young trout following an unusually dry winter, which resulted in sparse spring flows and water too depleted of oxygen to support the fish.

"We thought that might be it," Barker said. "We put the place up for sale, but looking back today, thank goodness it didn't sell."

The fishery has since made a full recovery, he said. It also had a brief scare with whirling disease in the 1990s. After that incident, Barker covered up the spring to protect the water source from contamination, and has had no significant disease issues since.

He said it's hard to tell whether the current state of the economy is having an impact on his business. While the number of visitors appears to be down slightly, more people seem to be raising their own fish as an economical food source, he said.

While he doesn't see explosive growth in the future, Barker believes he has a strong, steady business with the potential to last many more generations.

"We hope to stay here springs originating in another 85 years," Barker said.

There's much more to Virgo's brightest star than meets the eye

C pica, the brightest star in Virgo, currently sits due south about mid-way up from the southern horizon at nightfall. Its appearance as a bright, white star belies its complex nature.

Spica's appearance in telescopes is much the same as what greets the unaided eye. But precise brightness measurements show that Spica waxes and wanes slightly every four days. The graph of this variation is called a light curve.

The light curve reveals that Spica comprises two stars (A and B) orbiting a common center of gravity on elliptical paths. Each star's brightness is a combination of its own luminosity and reflected light from its companion illuminating the sides that face one another.

Spica A is the larger of the two, 11 times more massive than the Sun and more than 13,000 times brighter. Spica B weighs in at seven solar masses. and is "only" 1,700 times brighter.

The distance between A and B varies from seven to 10 times closer together than the Earth and Sun. Consequently, each star's tidal force distorts the other into an egg shape, which is also reflected in the light curve. This tidal distortion also causes the close point on the orbit to swing around every 139 years, a rate that is hard to reconcile with the theoretical understanding of the star's interior structures.

Furthermore, Spica A is a variable star. Unlike some variables that simply expand and contract, parts of Spica A expand while other parts contract, making it a socalled "non-radial pulsator."

Just last week, astronomers announced that they had discovered that A and B block a tiny fraction of each other's light once per orbit. This important finding will help narrow down the stars' diameters, and may help solve the mystery of the anomalous 139-year orbit swing.

Hematologist should be treating genetic blood disorder

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 70-year-old woman. My astute physician's assistant noticed I had a low redblood-cell count and referred me to a hematologist. I was subsequently diagnosed with hereditary stomatocytosis. Because there is no history of Mediterranean heritage, he enlisted the help of the renowned Stanford

Medical Center, so I don't doubt the diagnosis. I am writing to you because I am a die-hard fan and trust your opinion. Could you please tell me whether or not I should undertake any dietary changes, since I'm told that this condition causes deposits of iron in the primary organs?

DEAR READER: Hereditary stomatocytosis is a disorder that affects the permeability of red blood cells. There are several varieties of this disorder, with the two most common being overhydrated hereditary stomatocytosis (OHS or hydrocytosis) and dehydrated hereditary stomatocytosis (DHS or xerocytosis).

Both OHS and DHS cause the red blood cells to absorb and excrete abnormal amounts of sodium and potassium. OHS causes the absorption of too much sodium, which leads the cell to excrete too much potassium. DHS is the opposite with too much potassium taken in and too much sodium removed.

These lead to swelling (OHS) or shrinking (DHS) of the red blood cells that then causes the membrane to disintegrate, releasing hemoglobin. This process is known as hemolytic anemia.

These syndromes are extremely rare and usually occur in Caucasians of European descent. Both disorders are genetic, meaning they are caused by a mutated gene and usually run in families; however, and their accomplishments.

Our father and husband was a man who was loved by everyone he met. He touched many hearts because he was able to see past the person and into the heart. He was a wise counselor and confidante to many people, especially his "toots" Connie. Carl loved his family without reservation and without condition. If a man is measured not by the amount of people he loved but by the amount who loved him, then he was truly a great man among men.

Carl is survived by his wife, Minnie Kingsland; children, Pamela Blevins (Jim) of Missouri, Carl B., Deborah Briggs, Robert (Michelle) of Ohio, Karla Hardin (Sonny) of Idaho and Carl W., Andrew (Reagan) of Utah; grandchildren, Todd, Timothy, Joey, Jamie, Benjamin, Lauren, Michael, Heather, Kierynn, Nicole and Wyatt; and five greatgrandchildren; brothers, Joseph (Patricia) of New Mexico; sister, Margret (Bill) of Ohio; and foster brother, James Judge (Sandra) of Oklahoma; and many nieces and nephews.

He was preceded in death by his parents; brother, Clyde Arthur; daughter, Carla Marie; and son-in-law, Curtis Briggs.

The family and children would like to thank all those who helped care for Carl in his last years, especially his son-in-law, Sonny, and brother-in-law, Bill.

Carl's life will be celebrated at 2 p.m. Friday June 12, at Life Church of the Magic Valley, 425 E. Nez Perce in Jerome, Idaho, with Pastors Kevin Lindley and Steve Bartlett officiating.

Sacramento Kings choose Westphal to be next coach

The Sacramento Kings reached an agreement in principle with Paul Westphal late Tuesday night to be their fourth new coach in just over three years.

Westphal, a longtime NBA player and coach, went 267-159 during parts of seven seasons leading the Phoenix Suns and Seattle SuperSonics. He replaces interim coach Kenny Natt after the Kings finished 17-65, the worst record in the NBA and in franchise history.

"We set some parameters at the start of this coaching search to look for a successful, experienced leader, and Paul certainly meets those qualifications," said Geoff Petrie, the Kings' top basketball executive. "He has a wealth of experience in the NBA as both a coach and player."

Westphal is Sacramento's latest attempt to replace Rick Adelman, who was fired by owners Joe and Gavin Maloof in 2006 after eight straight playoff appearances and winning seasons.

The Kings fired Eric Musselman in 2007 after one tumultuous season, and NBA coaching newcomer Reggie Theus barely made it into his second campaign before being fired last December. Natt wasn't retained after finishing up a miserable season with Sacramento, which even slipped to the No. 4 draft slot in last month's lottery.

Decision on Coach K's USA return expected in July

ORLANDO, Fla. - Mike Krzyzewski's decision on his future as U.S. national team coach is expected to come next month.

Krzyzewski and USA Basketball chairman

Jerry Colangelo discussed the job over dinner this week. Colangelo previously had said he expected to announce the coach in the fall.

USA Basketball spokesman Craig Miller said Wednesday that the two men agreed a coaching decision would come before the Americans' minicamp for young players from July 22-25 in Las Vegas.

Krzyzewski likely wouldn't coach at the minicamp, but he might be there looking at players who could someday wear USA uniforms for him.

Krzyzewski revealed the change in plans Tuesday night during a press conference before Game 3 of the NBA finals, where the NBA and NCAA announced the name of their joint initiative, called iHoops, to support and improve youth basketball programs.

NBA FINALS GAME 4 LAKERS AT MAGIC 7 P.M., ABC LAKERS KNOW DEFENSIVE LAPSES MUST BE FIXED

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) -Lakers coach Phil Jackson delayed watching the entire tape of Game 3, preferring a few hours of sleep over reliving the misery of Tuesday night.

When his players finally watched the film Wednesday morning of their 108-104 loss to the Orlando Magic, something immediately jumped out at them.

"The final score," guard Derek Fisher said.

Something else, too. A series of defensive lapses, mostly minor, some larger, but all correctable.

"There were some little things defensively, which every time you watch film, even when you win, there's just always some things you see that you can do better," Fisher said. "So there were iust small things ... a rotation off here or there, defensively letting guys get back to the middle when we try to keep everything out of the middle."

The Lakers better do something quickly to address those. They started to show some slippage on the defensive end in the second half of Game 2, then played some of the worst defense in NBA finals history Tuesday night.

Orlando shot 75 percent in the first half and 63 percent for the game, both finals records. All-Stars Dwight Howard and Rashard Lewis each scored 21 points and Hedo Turkoglu had 18, but Jackson seemed more concerned with the way the Lakers covered Rafer Alston (20) and Mickael Pietrus (18), who had struggled in the first two games.

"We have to defend those guys," Jackson said. "I thought that we were playing a little bit lax."

Those problems didn't just suddenly pop up in Game 3.

The Lakers seemed to have Orlando's offense completely solved through the first six quarters of the series. The Magic shot just 30 percent, barely above the finals low, while dropping

And Jackson had to be doing something right to get a $30 million contract to rejoin the Lakers even after writing a book admitting he lobbied to get Bryant traded during his first stint with

An emotional return to golf for Mickelson

The idea was for Phil U.S. Open and before Mickelson to return to a Amy's surgery. routine as best as possible in his world now shaken normal with fear.

It has been three turbulent weeks since he announced his wife, Amy, was diagnosed with breast cancer.

Mickelson has always felt like he was in control, even if his golf at times suggested otherwise. Now he feels helpless.

"I've never been this emotional, where if I'm driving alone or what have vou, I'll just start crying," he said Wednesday at the St. Jude Classic, his eyes tinged with streaks of pink, his voice no longer steady and sure.

"We're scared, yeah," he said. "I think a lot of it is the unknown."

Tests on his 38-year-old wife have provided enough optimism that surgery has been pushed back to the first week of July, allowing Mickelson to return to competition this week, then go to the U.S. Open in New York, where he is beloved even under normal circumstances.

His wife faces treatment for at least a year, so they normally would – play golf tournaments, take their three children to camps and activities. They plan a yet."

Even so, this was not a routine for Mickelson in Memphis.

Some 300 fans lined the walkway at the bottom of the stairs leading to the clubhouse where Mickelson had lunch, waiting for autographs or pictures, some wearing pink shirts in support.

however, Mickelson, went around the front of the clubhouse to avoid the crowd, setting up shop at the far end of the range that had been reserved for the amateurs before his proam round, far away from his peers. Woody Austin, his partner at the Presidents Cup last time, and defending champion Justin Leonard walked over to welcome him back with a handshake that turned into a hug.

He does not know what to expect from his game. Mickelson said he would hit balls for an hour while his wife was resting, and he feels he is not far off from earlier this year, when he won at Riviera and Doral.

"But certainly, I haven't played in a while," he said. "I had an emotional decided to do what they month, and I don't know where I will be on the golf course as far as being able to focus. I don't know that Game 1 by 25 points, then scored only 35 points on 32 percent shooting in the first half of Game 2.

Then Orlando made 11 of its 19 shots in the third quarter, and has hardly slowed down since.

"They just made adjustments to free guys up and they know their players that we're trying to lock in on, Hedo being one of them, Rashard being the other," Kobe Bryant said. "They're doing great things to free them up and put them in a position to score and be effective. We have to do a better job of trying to take them out of there."

The Lakers shut down the Magic in their 100-75 victory in Game 1 by forcing Howard to turn away from the middle of the lane, and double-teaming him when he was able to catch the ball in good position. That stratworked because egv Orlando's collection of 3point shooters mostly misfired when Howard kicked the ball out.

Those players are now hitting their shots, forcing the Lakers to decide if they're going to change the way they defend Howard.

"What they do is they execute well, and when they execute well, they give you an option," Jackson said. "You either have to jam up the middle and hold up Howard, or else you have to give up an outside shot. Those are things that you have to make a choice between.

"It's always about penetration, and if you get a team that's making penetration either off the dribble or the in the opener. Bryant pass, you'll be in jeopardy. We have to slow that down, at least limit it at some level."

Howard made 5-of-6 shots in Game 3 after hitting only one of his six attempts a team that can stay hot

They huddled in front of the Laker bench, eager for some words of wisdom from the Zen Master himself. While Stan Van Gundy was yelling and waving his arms in an apoplectic fit at the other end of the court, Jackson delivered in his usual calm way.

"Make some shots," he told Kobe Bryant and his supporting cast.

Make some shots? Come on, Phil, the Laker diehards in the upper regions of section 328 at Staples Center could have come up with that.

What was next? Grab some rebounds? Try guarding Turkoglu?

No sense in making things too terribly complicated.

Jackson himself said on the eve of the championship series that there wasn't much to do at this time of year other than name the starting lineup and tell the players what time tip-off is.

Then again, Jackson has made it look easy for a long time now. He sits courtside in these finals, poised on the brink of basketball history, all the while looking like he would rather be up at Malibu contemplating the meaning of ocean waves. Unlike Van Gundy, he doesn't yell, doesn't scream. Doesn't seem to be doing much of anything, really, other than watching Bryant take charge and tell his teammates what to do.

And he's surely the first coach who ever called out referees for not making a call that could have cost his team a win in Game 2.

With his Lakers up 2-1 and Jackson edging closer to a record tenth NBA title as a coach, maybe it's time to start thinking of Jackson in a different way. Maybe it's time to begin recognizing him for what he really is.

The greatest coach in NBA history. Perhaps the greatest coach ever in any sport.

Fans of Red Auerbach might recoil at the thought, even if Jackson passes the cigar-smoking one with a tenth title. They would say Auerbach helped change the way basketball is played and pave the way for new people to play it - with the Celtics, while all Jackson did was adopt someone else's triangle offense and get lucky with some of the greatest players to ever play the game.

It's a fair criticism, even when broached to Jackson himself. He had Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen, Shaquille O'Neal and Bryant.

Other coaches didn't. "I'll accept it," Jackson said. "You have to have the special players to make the finals. That's why they're special players - because they get to this position at the end of the season."

Although it's true Jordan might have won a few titles no matter who was on the bench in Chicago, someone had to keep Jordan happy, Pippen engaged and the rest of the team in synch for two the team and deriding his star's pettiness in wanting a bigger plane provided by the Lakers to take him to his sexual assault hearing in Colorado.

In the end, the rings count more than anything, both to Jackson and the superstar who now professes, at least publicly, grudging respect for his coach.

At last count, Jackson had nine. Bryant had three.

"I'm just honored to be coached by the best coach of all time," Bryant said last week. "It would be a tremendous honor to be on the team that can get him that tenth championship."

That would move Jackson past Auerbach, but it's more than that. Although Auerbach won all his titles with Bill Russell dominating the middle, Jackson has won with different stars and different teams. He has been able to adapt to different changes, all during an era in which players had more autonomy and say than they ever did in the 1950s and 60s.

It may not look like he's doing much, but he's a winner. In a few short days he could become the biggest winner ever, with a ring for every finger and both thumbs.

That's assuming, of course, that he can get his team to make a few more shots.

Tim Dahlberg is a national sports columnist for The Associated Press. Write to him at tdahlberg@ap.org.

Fisher insists they can.

"What we saw were things that we can control," he said. "There wasn't anything that we saw where we feel like we can't do anything about it?"

Pens' way to Cup finals

PITTSBURGH (AP) - If not for a perfect five-game road trip in the dog days of the regular season, the Pittsburgh Penguins probably wouldn't be gearing up for Game 7 of the Stanley Cup finals.

They might not have even made the playoffs.

The trip started on Feb. 27, 11 days after Dan Bylsma replaced fired coach Michel Therrien, and it bridged the trade deadline when Pittsburgh acquired veteran forwards Bill Guerin and Craig Adams. An overtime victory over playoff-bound Chicago kicked it off. and a shootout win against Alex Ovechkin and the Washington Capitals wrapped it up.

The days of sitting below the playoff cutoff line in the Eastern Conference were over, and the Penguins could finally start thinking about repeating as Eastern Conference champions.

Starting with the trip, Pittsburgh went 15-2-3 in its final 20 games to grab the No. 4 seed in the East.

"We were in 10th or 11th place," Penguins defenseman Rob Scuderi said Wednesday, two days before Friday night's Game 7 against the defending Cup champion Detroit Red Wings. "We won the first three, and then we made a couple of trades after that, picked up Billy and Adams.

"After that, once you saw the team play we had a realistic chance of really turning this around. For me, that was a turning point in the season."

No matter what happens Friday in Detroit when the puck drops for Game 7, the Penguins can say they have gotten further than last year. In 2008, the season ended one game earlier against the Red Wings, who took Game 6 in Pittsburgh and paraded around the Mellon Arena ice with the Stanley Cup.

Not that the Penguins would feel any better to see the Red Wings celebrate again at home, but Pittsburgh at least knows it has a shot to win the Cup with one win in a place that hasn't produced many happy moments for them.

The Penguins are 1-5 at Joe Louis Arena in the past two finals, and have been outscored there 11-2 in this series. Pittsburgh captain Sidney Crosby hasn't scored a goal in any of those six games.

Pittsburgh was pushed to the brink of elimination Saturday night with a 5-0 loss in Detroit in Game 5. But the Penguins won Game 6 at home on Tuesday to keep the season alive. The Red Wings are 11-1 in their rink during this year's playoffs, and are one win away from matching the record for most victories at home in a postseason run.

Woman hides her body and feelings from her husband

DEAR ABBY: I am 43, the mother of four children and just celebrated my 20th anniversary. Is it normal for someone to be married all this time and still not want your husband to see you naked?

I do not reveal myself to him. The lights must always be off, and I keep a shirt on. It's not because I am ashamed of my body; it's that I'm not attracted to him. I never was.

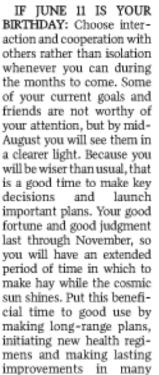

I married my husband for security and have learned to love him. But I love him like a way. I feel I owe him.

Should I tell my husband is an "arrangement." how I feel and risk losing my security after all this time? I had to talk to someone, so I confided in my best friend. She advised me to say nothing.

My husband had an affair a few years ago, and frankly, I both pursue your separate was Sometimes I wish he was still with her. Now that it's over, I'm back in hiding. Abby, please advise.

Frankly, it won't be much different than what you are already experiencing.

> DEAR ABBY: Mv boyfriend, "Will," recently let it slip that he thinks I'm less intelligent than he is. He said if we were to take an IQ test, he would score higher. I said it, especially because he truly believes it. He said the same thing to me five years

Now I find myself feeling extremely defensive. I am in the top third of my law school class but did poorly in engineering school. In contrast, Will has a Ph.D. in engineering.

Will assures me that being less intelligent doesn't diminish me, but I'm still upset. Now I'm thinking of ending the relationship. Do you think I'm being overly sensitive?

– AVERAGE IN MARYLAND MARYLAND:

DEAR Please allow me to enlighten you about something. Being in the top third of your class in law school already makes you above average, so please stop allowing your boyfriend's egotistical comment to undermine your self-esteem.

Will may or may not have is lacking in social intelligence and common sense. His superior attitude is obnoxious. Whether you keep him or dump him is up to you, but recognize that no one has everything. While Will may be brilliant in one area, he is deficient when it comes to sensitivity. Ask yourself why he needed to say what he did to you, and you may find that he's using his air of intellectual superiority to mask a lack of selfesteem.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"My dear old grandfather Litcock said, just before they sprung the trap, you can't cheat an honest man. Never give a sucker an even break or smarten up a chump."

— George Marshall and Eddie Cline

Today's deal, from the 2008 Open Trials, was a deathtrap for both sides. West might expect to make a large number of tricks in one minor or the other, but he can take only eight tricks in diamonds against best defense. Meanwhile, how does North-South do in the majors? Quite a few pairs attempted slam and were unsuccessful. Even the pair playing four spades could not quite bring that home.

But that contract is makable on best play. What might happen to declarer after two rounds of clubs?

Declarer trumps the second club, leads a spade to dummy's ace, and finds the exceptionally bad news. He follows up by finessing the heart queen. Now the heart ace is followed by a ruff with the trump king, establishing the hearts.

At this point, even though East has more trumps than South does, declarer simply draws three more rounds of trump and plays good hearts.

When East trumps in at his first opportunity, everyone is down to three cards. Declarer has eight tricks in the bag while the defenders have two tricks. East has only diamonds left, while dummy has the diamond K-J and a master club. East is forced to lead a diamond into North's tenace, and dummy will have the good club queen and diamond king for the last two tricks.

ANSWER: Some might try to persuade you to open this hand one diamond and rebid two clubs. Do NOT listen to them. Unless your four diamonds look like five (these do not) and your five clubs look like four (these do not, although it is close), open your long suit. Plan to raise a response in spades or rebid one no-trump over a one-heart response.
