Federal sage grouse listing may go to 2010

South-central grouse figures drop 6 percent

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service may not announce its decision on whether greater sage grouse should be listed as endangered until

Feb. 26, 2010, a delay negotiated with the plaintiff, Hailey-based Western Watersheds Project, in the court case that prompted the listing review.

Meanwhile, the birds' population across south-central Idaho declined 6 percent between 2008 and 2009, according to a spring count organized by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Fish and Wildlife had faced a May 2009 deadline to put out a listing decision, but long argued that it needed the new report to make a thorough decision. U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill on June 15 approved an amended stipulation allowing Fish and Wildlife to delay its listing decision until the 2010 date.

The delay is largely intended to give the agency time to review and digest a pending comprehensive report on sage grouse due out this year, said Sharon Rose in Fish and Wildlife's Denver office. The stipulation states the report should likely be available in July.

In Idaho, Fish and Game held this spring what was likely its biggest annual survey of sage grouse leks — their breeding grounds — with 61 total people involved, said Randy Smith, the department's regional wildlife manager. The group visited 395 leks, 38 percent of those known to the Charges against Traci Hadden stand

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Traci Hadden talks with her attorney, Mark Guerry, during a preliminary hearing Thursday at the Lincoln County Courthouse. She is charged in connection to the shooting of Shoshone businessman Craig Hadden. Traci Hadden, her son, Blue Hadden, 15, and Michael Cannon, 16, also allegedly tried to hire an undercover federal agent to kill a police officer.

SHOSHONE — Judge Mark Ingram called the whole case "crazy" after an undercover federal agent, a confidential informant and a shooting victim testified Thursday to allegations that a Shoshone mother plotted recently with her teenage son and another boy to kill both her former father-in-law and a police officer.

But the charges against Traci Hadden, 34, will stick for now Ingram decided Thursday and sent her case on to district court.

possessing stolen property. Her 15-year-old son, Blue Hadden, and another boy, Michael Cannon, 16, are also charged in the April shooting of Shoshone businessman Craig Hadden, as well as this month's alleged murder-for-hire of a Shoshone city police officer.

Blue Hadden is charged as a juvenile with accessory to commit a felony, criminal solicitation and grand theft.

Craig Hadden, 60, didn't see who shot him, he testified on Thursday, but the Shoshone businessman immediately suspected his former daughter-in-law.

Traci Hadden was found at her home in Shoshone shortly after the shooting, though, and was ruled out originally as a suspect, a Lincoln County sheriff's deputy testified on Thursday.

Blue Hadden was also initially ruled out as a suspect by Lincoln County investigators because he was locked up in juvenile jail when Hadden was shot.

But the mother and son became suspects for law enforcement when a new neighbor went to police and was hired as a confidential informant.

The informant, Jason Bowles, told the court Thursday he moved out of Shoshone about a week ago, after earning $1,600 from authorities to help build their case against the Haddens and Cannon.

Bowles said that he moved in May to a home located only 25 feet away from Traci Hadden's residence on C Street in Jerome.

He lent police his services on June 1, Bowles said, offering to glean information from the suspects.

"I was in fear for my family and the city of Shoshone," Bowles testified, saying he

Idaho Power warns public against using two boat ramps

By Nate Poppino

Idaho Power Co. officials warned the public on Thursday about possible hazard areas around boat ramps at Twin Falls and Shoshone Falls, caused by the swollen Snake River.

Fed by a rainy spring that also dampened irrigation demand, the river has already caused minor flooding along various upstream stretches, including near Heyburn and Blackfoot. High flows will continue until the weather dries out and irrigation demand picks up, said Mike Beus with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

TWIN FALLS COUNTY 150 take issue with their assessments

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

Dozens of Twin Falls County residents upset over their property assessments have appealed to the county commissioners. The deadline was Monday and 150 people — many with multiple parcels — are hoping to see their assessments change.

Hearings will be the week of July 6-10.

The county's taxable value increased since last year by nearly $118 million, or 2.93 percent, according to preliminary figures from the county assessor's office. The increase, which has not been equalized and is still fluid, is an overall number for the entire county.

Dave Lentz of Twin Falls wants to know why his property value increased by about $10,000. He went to the county assessor's office, where he said an employee told him the assessment was based on home sales. But when Lentz asked to see the figures, the

Blaine Co. prepares after two confirmed cases of H1N1

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Following confirmation from South Central Public Health District of two cases of H1N1 influenza in Blaine County, county authorities met Wednesday to discuss how to handle the potential spread of swine flu, which the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has identified as a pandemic. The two cases, in a 22-month-old and a 45-year-old, did not require hospitalization, said Cheryl Becker, epidemiologist with the public health district. "They have been mainly mild," Becker said, estimating that other local cases may be undiagnosed. "We have probably had more cases than the few that have tested positive."

Becker said there have been a large number of cases in Utah, and the Idaho cases are likely connected to these via visitors from or to that state. According to the Utah Department of Health Web site, the state has seen 210 hospitalizations and 10 fatalities from H1N1. The strain in Idaho is less deadly than standard seasonal influenza, Becker said, although the health district will continue to monitor it in case it changes. As summer is one of the busiest seasons in Blaine County, county officials plan to launch a heavier than usual awareness campaign about standard health practices. "The basic message is pretty simple, it's taking personal responsibility. Wash your hands, cover your cough and stay home if you're sick," said Commissioner Larry Schoen. "We want people to be educated about the steps to take to minimize their risk." The county has not yet decided what additional steps might be taken if the H1N1 strain spreads widely or becomes more deadly. "Any occurrences or change in status, such as increased virulence for example, would probably prompt another meeting ... Right now we're not planning for institutional closures," Schoen said. "We think it's important that people know that we're monitoring this situation, while there does not seem to be urgency." Ariel Hansen may be reached at ahansen@magicvalley.com or 208-788-3475.

Before long, the Midwest was festooned with promotional posters making Twin Falls, Idaho, look like the Garden of Eden, but with no snakes ...

That was the work of H.L. Hollister, who had sunk serious money into the Twin Falls Land Investment Co. ... Dispatching lecturers with lantern slide shows throughout Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin and sponsoring exhibitions of Idaho products in the Chicago Coliseum, Hollister made it his mission to send the Heartland's population marching westward ...

So our little corner of the world was built on marketing; this is, after all, a desert where the wind blows all the time ...

Notwithstanding, by 1905 Twin Falls had dubbed itself "Magic City" ... That title was a stretch ...

Then along came Roland Tofflemire, who with a partner owned both the evening Twin Falls Times and the morning Twin Falls News ... As the second wave of the Great Depression rolled over south-central Idaho in 1937, he was looking for ways to drum up business ...

By promotion, of course ... So Tofflemire convened a summit of five newspaperman — just about all

The rest of Idaho didn't feel the Magic, perhaps because this was home to only 20,000 of the state's 500,000 residents at the time ... But Tofflemire was relentless ... Yet it was years before folks who live west of Glens Ferry and east of Burley used the term ... This was "the Twin Falls area," much to Tofflemire's dismay ... Not until the 1970s did the National Weather Service use "Magic Valley" in its forecasts for south-central Idaho — the closest thing to official recognition we've ever received ...

Still, the Magic Valley is not the Wood River Valley, as residents of Blaine and Camas counties are quick to point out ... Tofflemire disagreed, but that's one of few things about which he didn't get his way ...

A HERO FOR ALL

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Vickie Kensington, a student at the College of Southern Idaho, shares a laugh with Joseph McNeil Thursday afternoon during a break at the Civil Liberties Symposium. McNeil was a member of the Greensboro Four, a group that started the 1960 Woolworth's sit-in civil rights protests at lunch counters in North Carolina. Kensington says she was a college student who was one of the many that participated in other sit-ins in California.

Civil rights hero McNeil visits Twin Falls

Introduced Thursday as a true American hero, Joseph McNeil spoke about his experiences as one of the famous Greensboro Four in the civil rights movement at the fourth annual College of Southern Idaho Civil Liberties Symposium.

McNeil was a 17-year-old college freshman at what is now North Carolina A&T State University when he participated in the 1960 protests that helped spark the desegregation of lunch counters across the South.

After realizing he was tired of sitting on the sideline, he said, McNeil and three other young, black men sat down at the Woolworth's "whites only" lunch counter in Greensboro N.C. on Feb. 1, 1960 and started a nonviolent protest movement that spread to 54 cities.

"These events are a part of history," McNeil said. "We must recognize them, move on, and make sure it never happens again."

Inspired by the "Little Rock Nine," a group of nine students who defied segregation in southern schools, and the lynching of Emmett Till in 1955, McNeil said of his participation in the protests, "I didn't want my kids to worry about which bathroom they could go into or which water fountain they were supposed to use."

McNeil spoke about the sacrifices made on behalf of the movement and described activism as "service before self."

"The sit-ins were an act of defiance," he said, and likened the events in the South during the 1960s to the events occurring presently in Iran.

McNeil advised the audience, largely composed of students from CSI as well as Treasure Valley Community College, to stop living in "polite, quiet timidity" and take a stand against the rise of hate groups that undercut the value of each person.

"We all benefit from awareness," McNeil said. "It is still a world where change will happen."

The symposium continues today with World War II Japanese internment as the main focus.

New non-universal immunization plan requires upfront payment

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

School registration fees may seem like a far off nuisance, but associated health care fees may require immediate planning.

After funding for the Idaho Immunization Program, sponsored by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, saw a $3 million cut in the recent legislative session, universal childhood immunization in Idaho is no longer a reality.

As of July 1, children with private insurance carriers, other than Blue Cross and Blue Shield, will have to make immunization appointments two weeks in advance and fees for the immunizations will be due at the time of service, leaving reimbursement up to parents. As reported earlier in the week, Blue Cross and Blue Shield will continue to be billed by most immunization providers.

Children who qualify for Vaccines for Children, including children who are uninsured, underinsured, enrolled in Medicaid, or Native American/Alaskan Native children, will still be able to receive their immunizations with no charge.

"There is no statute that says you must immunize children," said Rene LeBlanc, director of the South Central Public Health District. LeBlanc said SCPHD has a moral and professional obligation to continue offering immunizations while other medical providers will not be providing private insurance immunizations.

Lisa Klumm, an immunization specialist for SCPHD, said that for the past 15 years people have been able to get immunizations, for a small fee, at most medical providers. As of July 1, according to Klumm, nearly 25 percent of area medical providers will change their immunization procedure, leaving fewer locations for immunization.

Klumm said not only will that cause appointment delays, costs are also going to increase significantly. Immunization providers will now order immunizations not covered by VFC as they are needed, increasing prices that were cheaper in larger quantities when funding was available. These higher prices will then fall on parents, who will have to seek reimbursement from their insurance company.

According to Klumm, in 1999 immunizations from birth until age 18 cost approximately $184. Now because of increases in the number and prices of vaccines that cost averages about $1,300. This could mean people may pick and choose some immunizations over others which "could be very scary times," said Klumm.

LeBlanc has received funding from local organizations, including Rotary International, Optimist International, and Kiwanis International, to initiate an educational campaign detailing the changes.

Pocatello hospital project breaks ground

POCATELLO (AP) — More than 150 people took part in a groundbreaking ceremony for a $200 million expansion project at Portneuf Medical Center's east campus.

Local officials joined Legacy Hospital Partners and the Portneuf Health Care Foundation for the event Wednesday.

In a deal reached in February, Plano, Texas-based Legacy Hospital Partners and the nonprofit foundation took ownership of the hospital from Bannock County. Legacy provided the money to allow the expansion, which had stalled two years ago. "The last two years, for me, have been an interesting time, a very emotional one for us who went through the process," said Mark Buckalew, the foundation's board chairman. "What this project ensures is that the legacy will live on for our children."

Senate finalizing $1 trillion health-care bill

By Shailagh Murray and Lori Montgomery
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Senate health-care negotiators said Thursday they were closing in on a $1 trillion health-care bill that would be fully funded by tax increases, Medicare cuts and new penalties for employers who do not offer health insurance.

Senate Finance Chairman Max Baucus, D-Mont., said members of the panel would consider a menu of policy and financing options over the upcoming July 4 recess, with the goal of producing a deficit-neutral 10-year bill shortly after Congress returns on July 6. "We're getting a lot closer to an agreement," Baucus told reporters after the committee reviewed new Congressional Budget Office cost estimates Thursday morning.

Sen. Charles Grassley, Iowa, the ranking GOP finance member, confirmed that talks were moving forward but added, "There's still a lot of decisions that have to be made."

Senate Budget Chairman Kent Conrad, D-N.D., said the Finance Committee had reduced the overall cost of its bill by cutting subsidy levels for uninsured people. He said members had not yet resolved the issue of the so-called "public option," a government alternative to private insurance, although he said discussions continued to focus on a member-owned cooperative model.

As the contours of a bill begin to take shape, Conrad said prospects for bipartisan support appear to have brightened. "We've narrowed the options and gotten a better sense of how this is going to all add up," said Conrad, who also sits on the finance panel.

The Senate health committee is considering a separate health-reform bill, but the finance version is crucial because it will include provisions to pay for the subsidies and tax incentives that Congress is seeking to expand. Lawmakers have been struggling for weeks to reach agreement on those issues and an array of contentious proposals remain on the table.

As described by aides and lawmakers on the committee, the financing package includes substantial reductions in future spending on Medicare and Medicaid, the primary federal health programs for elderly and low-income people.

In addition to trimming payments to hospitals and other providers, the panel is considering empowering an existing federal agency, known as MedPAC, to monitor Medicare costs and make adjustments unless Congress objects. The shift in authority is key, because it would shift much Medicare authority out of the political process, diminishing the health-care industry's lobbying power.

The package also is expected to include just over $300 billion in new taxes on health insurance benefits that millions get from their employers. The leading proposal would tax as income any premiums in excess of about $17,000 a year, starting in 2013. Currently, the average cost of family coverage provided by employers is around $12,500 a year, and premiums for employer-sponsored coverage — whether paid by the company or the worker — are tax-free.

Many Democrats oppose the new tax, and President Obama campaigned against the idea. But lawmakers said they could identify few acceptable alternatives.

A final major element of the financing package is a new penalty for employers who do not offer health insurance. One option under discussion is a so-called "free rider" provision that would require businesses to help finance coverage for workers who receive it elsewhere, such as through Medicaid or other government programs. Conrad said the free-rider provision would generate around $300 billion over the next decade.

Coverage provisions under committee consideration include an expansion of Medicaid; extensive insurance reforms, including a ban on denying coverage for pre-existing conditions; and a new national insurance entity, either co-op or government run. Senators also are weighing an individual mandate to induce people to buy insurance.

Blaine Co. OKs police deal with Ketchum

HAILEY — The Blaine County commissioners approved Thursday morning a 15-month contract with the city of Ketchum to provide law enforcement services in the city.

"(County administrator) Derek Voss and (city administrator) Gary Marks will continue to work on the terms of the contract to address some concerns that are outstanding, including typographical errors and minor text changes," said Commissioner Larry Schoen. "We will build trust, improve our communication, so if issues do arise, they can be addressed timely."

The contract is expected to save the city of Ketchum about $250,000 a year, while not affecting the county budget's bottom line. The contract will go into effect on July 1; there aren't any ceremonies planned to mark the changeover.

A Twin Falls man died Wednesday evening when his car left Idaho Highway 75 north of Shoshone, Idaho State Police announced Thursday morning.

ISP, along with Lincoln County sheriff's deputies and emergency medical workers, responded to the crash at milepost 76 just after 8:30 p.m.

Dwaine Mangum, 67, was driving north when his vehicle ran off the highway into lava rock. He was extricated from his vehicle and pronounced dead at the scene. Police said they're not sure why Mangum left the highway. He was not wearing a seat belt, according to the press release, and alcohol is not considered a factor.

Iranian president demands Obama apologize for criticism

By Thomas Erdbrink and William Branigan
The Washington Post

TEHRAN, Iran — Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad lashed out at President Obama Thursday, warning him against "interfering" in Iranian affairs and demanding an apology for criticism of a government crackdown on demonstrators protesting alleged electoral fraud.

Despite an increasingly harsh response to the protests, opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi pledged to continue challenging official results that showed a landslide victory for Ahmadinejad in Iran's June 12 presidential election. He vowed to resist growing pressure to end his campaign and said he remains determined to prove that those who rigged the election are also responsible for the violence unleashed on opposition protesters.

The two rivals issued their dueling statements — neither mentioning the other by name — a day after security forces broke up the latest demonstrations, then temporarily detained university professors who had met with Mousavi.

Two grand ayatollahs, leading figures in Iran's predominant Shiite Muslim faith, also waded into the fray Thursday, as did European foreign ministers from the Group of Eight world powers at a meeting in Italy.

In a speech at a petrochemical plant in southern Iran, Ahmadinejad said Obama was behaving like his predecessor, President George W. Bush, and suggested that talks with the United States on Iran's nuclear program would be pointless if Obama kept up his criticism. Obama, who has expressed interest in talking to the Iranian leadership about the nuclear issue, told a news conference Tuesday that he was "appalled and outraged" by recent violence against demonstrators, and he accused the Iranian government of trying to "distract people" by blaming the unrest on the United States and other Western nations.

"Do you want to speak with this tone?" Ahmadinejad responded Thursday, addressing Obama. "If that is your stance, then what is left to talk about?"

He added, "I hope you avoid interfering in Iran's affairs and express your regret in a way that the Iranian nation is informed of it." He asked why Obama "has fallen into this trap and repeated the comments that Bush used to make" and told the U.S. president that such an attitude "will only make you another Bush in the eyes of the people."

Ahmadinejad also praised Iran's election as demonstrating "the great capabilities and grandeur of the Iranian nation" and declared that his country is practicing true "freedom," as opposed to "this unpopular democracy which is governing America and Europe." Americans and Europeans "have no right to choose and are restricted to ... two or three parties" in voting for their leaders, he said.

In Washington, White House spokesman Robert Gibbs dismissed Ahmadinejad's criticism. Obama has said "that there are people in Iran who want to make this not about a debate among Iranians in Iran, but about the West and the United States," Gibbs said. "And I would add President Ahmadinejad to that list of people trying to make this about the United States?"

Iran's government has declared that Ahmadinejad decisively won the June 12 election with nearly 63 percent of the vote, while Mousavi received less than 34 percent and two other candidates trailed far behind. Mousavi immediately challenged the results, charging that massive fraud "reversed" the outcome and cheated him of victory.

The 67-year-old former prime minister posted a statement on his Web site Thursday saying he was being pressed to withdraw his challenge and had been severely restricted in his ability to communicate with supporters.

"However, I am not prepared to give up under the pressure of threats or personal interest," he said.

"The truth ... is that a major fraud has taken place in these elections, and the people who tried to show their dismay with this event were attacked, killed and arrested," Mousavi said. "Not only am I not scared of responding to their false accusations, but I'm ready to show how the people responsible for the presidential fraud" are also to blame for having "spilled the blood of the people."

Mousavi asked his followers to "continue your legal and responsible protest, which is born out of the Islamic revolution, with calm and by avoiding trouble."

His Web site also said that 70 academics were arrested Wednesday night and early Thursday after meeting with him. It said authorities subsequently released all but four and that those still detained included Mousavi's former campaign manager.

The pro-government Fars News Agency denied the account. Quoting an "informed source," it said prosecutors questioned "certain participants" after Mousavi's meeting with members of the Islamic Association of University Lecturers but that "none of the said people were arrested."

Canyon County hopes to skirt emission testing

CALDWELL (AP) — Canyon County commissioners in southwest Idaho say they will not create a vehicle emission testing program to clean up smoggy air in the region but instead will try to come up with an alternative that satisfies state officials.

“The county doesn’t have a lot of money, and I know the cities don’t either, to implement new programs,” said Commissioner Steve Rule at a Wednesday public hearing, the Idaho Press-Tribune reported. “The county’s stance will not include vehicle emissions testing. We will be shooting for another way to reduce, to increase the air quality in the Treasure Valley?”

But commissioners gave no clear plan Wednesday on how to deal with a 2008 law passed by the Legislature to ease the county’s air pollution, which is approaching federal health limits and, experts say, causing greater health risks.

County officials previously rejected mandatory vehicle emission testing. Neighboring Ada County has a testing program in place.

Under the state law, individual governments in Canyon County can begin a vehicle emissions control program or can enter an agreement with the Department of Environmental Quality to start emissions testing.

They also can choose to do nothing, but that would allow the department set up an emission testing program.

The law calls for testing vehicles once every two years and charging $20 per vehicle.

Canyon County commissioners have not voted publicly on their decision.

“I’m not concerned that emission testing does anything for our air quality,” said Commissioner Kathy Alder. “They’ve got to have some real science behind it?”

EPA: Monsanto mine violates law

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Federal regulators say an Idaho mine that Monsanto Co. depends on to make its Roundup weed killer has violated federal and state water quality laws almost since it opened, sending selenium and other heavy metals into the region’s waterways.

The Environmental Protection Agency said problems at the St. Louis-based company’s South Rasmussen Mine near the Idaho-Wyoming border were documented first in April 2002. That’s just 15 months after it won Bureau of Land Management approval, according to documents released by the EPA to The Associated Press.

More recently, the mine has been unable to stop discharges of heavy metal-laden water from a waste dump, despite BLM conclusions nearly a decade ago that precautions wouldn’t “allow selenium or other contaminants to migrate from the lease.”

Monsanto takes phosphate ore from the mine and turns it into elemental phosphorous, a key Roundup ingredient. Toxic selenium and other heavy metals are also exposed during open pit mining and dumped in waste rock piles, where they can concentrate and be carried away by runoff or natural springs.

Disclosure of South Rasmussen’s problems comes at a sensitive time for Monsanto: It’s seeking federal approval for a new mine nearby, Blackfoot Bridge, to supply the Roundup component once Rasmussen is played out in 2011. But environmentalists contend the company’s assurances that cutting-edge measures will keep naturally occurring selenium from spreading remind them of earlier promises long since broken.

In 2007, the EPA ordered Monsanto to stop releasing selenium-tainted water from South Rasmussen’s

Horseshoe Dump. Though the company has tried to remedy the problem, it’s still violating the federal Clean Water Act, federal officials said.

“The measures they have implemented aren’t working,” said Eva DeMaria, an EPA enforcement official in Seattle. Monsanto “is aware of our concerns. They are trying to address it?”

Asked if EPA plans further action, DeMaria declined comment. “It’s under investigation,” she said.

In the 1990s, sheep and horses died from selenium poisoning related to mining elsewhere in southeastern Idaho’s rich phosphate belt. At least 17 phosphate mines here are now under federal Superfund authority.

Just this May, the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality added Sheep Creek, a Blackfoot River tributary being polluted by South Rasmussen, to its list of waterways that don’t meet state standards due to selemium contamination.

State scientists now say at least 15 streams in southeastern Idaho exceed selenium standards, up from six in 2002. Monsanto must satisfy the concerns of federal regulators — and eventually judges, in the event of lawsuits — that operations like Blackfoot Bridge won’t exacerbate pollution.

“You’re going to have to have assurances that there’s not going to be an increase,” said Greg Madenka, a DEQ water quality scientist in Pocatello.

Monsanto lobbyist Trent Clark in Soda Springs, Idaho, said the company has resolved issues raised by two EPA violation notices.

In the latest, from September 2007, EPA inspectors found water containing “very high levels of selenium” flowing from the mine’s Horseshoe Dump even in dry weather, “unlawful under the Clean Water Act,” the agency said.

EDITORIAL

Another PR disaster shows need for change at ITD

For years, this newspaper has been a vocal supporter of the independence of the Idaho Transportation Department — one of two major state agencies whose director is appointed by a board of directors, not the governor.

That may or may not still be the best arrangement, but the ITD simply can't continue doing business as it has.

The latest example came earlier this week, when The Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash., reported that the ITD discarded a 2007 study which found car and pickup owners are paying about 10 percent more than their share in Idaho and subsidizing heavy trucks.

A draft of the $20,000 study by Palouse Partners Inc. of Pullman, Wash., was given to the department in October 2007. But ITD Director Pam Lowe rejected it because of concerns about statements regarding possible glitches in Idaho's record-keeping and software used for the study.

Shawn Keough of Sandpoint, the second-ranking Republican on the Senate Transportation Committee, said lawmakers could have used that information.

"I was frustrated that they didn't finalize that cost allocation study, because it really would have been helpful in the debate," Keough said. "I have a lot of confidence in ITD's economists, and I didn't question the methodology or the work that had been done."

There's little doubt that the study's basic findings are correct. The Common Interest, a Boise-based, non-partisan public affairs organization, reached a similar conclusion earlier this year.

But in the process, it also discovered that ITD had made a $10 million error in estimating how much Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's plan to increase vehicle registration fees would generate.

None of which would matter much if ITD's credibility with the Legislature weren't dismal. Many legislators believe the agency grossly underestimated the cost of former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's Connecting Idaho initiative in 2003, and that ITD's numbers haven't added up since.

They felt so strongly that in 2008 lawmakers ordered an agency audit, which found that ITD is underfunded.

Last winter, the chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee, Republican John McGee of Caldwell, introduced legislation that would put the ITD under control of the governor — not the Idaho Transportation Board. The bill went nowhere, but that could change.

Closer to home, merchants on Blue Lakes Boulevard North are fuming that reconstruction of the Twin Falls arterial is taking so long, and don't believe ITD clearly communicated its intentions before work began.

Lowe is by all accounts a talented highway engineer, but her agency is adrift. ITD's message is muddled, which means its facts are challenged and its actions are endlessly second-guessed.

Somebody — the director or the board — must bring credibility back to ITD. If not, McGee's plan to dump the whole mess in Otter's lap will come true — and sooner rather than later.

Roads have so far defined the governor's administration, and not for the better. The Legislature adjourned in May, after 117 frustrating days, when Otter abandoned his plan to raise gas taxes to help pay for what he called a $240 million annual road maintenance and repair backlog. In 2008, the governor balked at a deal with lawmakers that would have diverted $68 million to highway repair, saying it was too little.

With a gubernatorial election year fast approaching, ITD is a political liability to Otter. One way or another, that will change.

Just when we needed it, S.C. delivers

On behalf of the people of Illinois and New York, I'd like to thank South Carolina for giving us Mark ("I've been unfaithful to my wife") Sanford. Finally, a governor who's weirder than Rod Blagojevich and less responsible than Eliot Spitzer.

Really, we're extremely relieved.

GAIL COLLINS

Sanford, as we all now know, went AWOL from his state last week, then re-emerged to admit that he had not been on the Appalachian Trail writing a book, as the chaotic explanations from his family and his staff had suggested, but in South America where he had gone to break up with his lover. "I spent the last five days crying in Argentina," he said, completely ignoring all we have learned from Andrew Lloyd Webber.

Sanford was widely regarded as a Republican presidential contender. Many of you may have forgotten this, but for a while in 2008 he was a serious candidate to be John McCain's running mate. Now, he's become the second GOP hopeful in a week to do a swan dive off the adultery cliff. Perhaps the party has been too strict about the no-girlfriends-while-running-for-president rule. If they don't drop it, pretty soon the youngest contender will be 75.

Until Wednesday's unpleasantness, Sanford was chairman of the Republican Governors Association, otherwise known as the Association of Possible Presidential Contenders Plus Arnold. Over the past few years, he has tried to woo the party's base with antics like bringing two piglets into the Capitol to protest political pork and refusing to accept $700 million in federal stimulus money aimed at preventing massive layoffs of public school teachers.

... the press conference made it clear that sexual indiscretion is less the big problem here than the fact that Mark Sanford is a complete loony.

For a state with an unemployment rate above 12 percent, that ranks 39th in public school performance, that last caper might not seem all that entertaining. But it did draw the attention and affection of right-wing commentators, who nudged Sanford right up the potential-contender ladder.

However, all that is in the past. Although his wife issued a statement holding out the possibility of reconciliation, the press conference made it clear that sexual indiscretion is less the big problem here than the fact that Mark Sanford is a complete loony. "I won't begin in any particular spot," he said, rambling on about his "love for the Appalachian Trail" (where he didn't go) and his fondness for "adventure trips" (clearly a personal specialty).

Then Sanford apologized to his wife, his sons, his friends, his staff, his in-laws, "anybody who lives in South Carolina" and people of faith "across the nation." At this point, I had the terrible feeling that I was the only person in the entire country to whom Sanford was not conveying his personal regrets.

The peculiar thing about the apologies was that Sanford seemed to be under the impression that his worst dereliction of duty involved womanizing. I think I speak for us all when I say that if a governor wants to fly off for a rendezvous with his mistress, the first rule should be: Leave a phone number. If you must flee to a love nest, make sure it's one with an Internet connection.

"It was interesting how this thing has gone down," Sanford told the assembled reporters, launching, with occasional teary asides, into an extremely boring story about how he and the unnamed Argentine had been good friends and then he tried to help her keep her marriage together, and then they started e-mailing and yadda yadda yadda. The whole confessional began to sound like an episode of one of those Finding Love reality shows, when the Bachelorette demands to know if her 25 suitors are all there for the right reasons.

There are some larger lessons here. I know you're relieved to hear that, since it is highly unlikely that anybody actually gives a fig about Mark Sanford.

First of all, we may want to consider the possibility that the governor's decision to reject the federal stimulus money was not a mighty stand against government spending but instead an early sign of total nuttiness.

Second, perhaps it is time to rethink the idea of constantly electing middle-aged heterosexual men to positions of high importance.

Third, although the governor-run-amok thing is worrisome, South Carolinians can take comfort in the fact their state gives its chief executive slightly less power than a game warden.

Fourth, before this search for a presidential nominee goes any further, I'm thinking it's time for the Republicans to apologize for putting us through the Clinton impeachment. We seem to have pretty well established that sexual stone-throwing is a dangerous sport.

Friedman airport can't stay where it is

The Times-News' Ariel Hansen's reporting style is clear and concise and her regular coverage of Blaine County issues is appreciated. She can be forgiven (in her Saturday, June 20, front-page piece) for misconstruing remarks made by Mark Perryman, consultant to the Federal Aviation Administration for the Friedman Memorial replacement airport study. Mr. Perryman did use the words, "we would return to Friedman," if replacement sites were found inadequate through analysis of them in the Environmental Impact Statement under way.

His words were figurative rather than literal, because, of course, we would have to come back to ask, "What next?" Perhaps the most salient point of the entire two-hour public meeting about which she writes, however, was FAA official Cayla Morgan's statement that, "The FAA

READER COMMENT
Lawrence Schoen

has discarded FMA as a viable alternative."

In other words, even contemplating those actions Ms. Hansen describes, such as relocating Highway 75 and condemning up to 600 acres of homes and land between Hailey and Bellevue, we still could not overcome two of the FAA's three core operational standards for airport viability: safety and reliability. Why? In a word, terrain, i.e., the surrounding mountains. The FAA made absolutely clear it would not invest public monies in such a scenario.

Often ignored, is the relevant land use authority implicit in reconfiguring and re-siting any airport. There is no land-use authority in Blaine County today that I know — city council or county commission — willing and able to support such changes at the current site.

So let's be clear. Friedman is not a viable site for commercial air service going forward. It is not viable even as a remnant general aviation facility, for a number of reasons. (Proponents of this option are pleading with the FAA at least to permit interim means to reduce approach minimums.)

Allow me to suggest the Times-News begin asking the opponents of relocation, including leading opponents and public officials, whether they understand and accept these simple facts. Once they do, the community's ability to collaborate to optimize all the outcomes in planning and construction and operation of a replacement airport serving Blaine County and the whole

Magic Valley region will be enhanced immediately.

Blaine County commissions do comprehend the significant cost challenges associated with relocation. We understand the complex, multi-track, time-consuming and independent EIS analysis being conducted by the FAA is essential to addressing those and it is incomplete. We are sensitive to the strong desire of north valley public officials who are not on the Friedman governing board to be engaged in replacement airport planning. County commissioners and the FMA authority will participate in a joint workshop July 1 to explore in more detail new governance models for the replacement process and airport.

Lawrence Schoen, a Democrat from Bellevue, is the chairman of the Blaine County Commission.

Set a deadline for the U.S. government to divest

Government programs don't believe in heaven, but many seem to have eternal life. That federal initiatives grow old but never die is particularly significant today.

Fueled by ideology and equipped with a large majority in Congress, President Obama and his allies on Capitol Hill are injecting steroids into Washington's normal propensity to expand.

But is there an exit strategy for the new largesse? The deck is normally stacked against government shrinking itself. Washington rarely takes steps to limit its own power. Ensuring that outmoded or ineffective programs don't live in perpetuity is a daunting task.

Sen. John Thune, R-S.D., recently proposed an idea that might help. He introduced The Government Ownership Exit Plan. It's a bill to unhinge a door that normally swings one way — toward more expansive government. The legislation requires the U.S. Treasury to sell any ownership stake in private entities by July 1, 2010. Without a deadline like this, government's grip on the economy will continue indefinitely, and economic growth will suffer. Thune's legislation deserves bipartisan support and quick consideration by the Congress. It's an important weapon to fight an array of incentives, momentum, and biases pointing in the other direction.

Examples of one-way government growth abound. Recently, word leaked out that the Obama administration had shifted its plans to streamline the nation's financial regulatory structure. Resistance from the Hill and other stakeholders meant Washington would likely add new powers without getting rid of the previous structures. The Washington Post wrote that the president's "proposals have fallen by the wayside . . . instead the administration increasingly is focused on adding new layers of regulation on top of old."

The National Journal's Jonathan Rausch documents this same propensity toward one-way growth in his 1999 book "Government's End." He argues that change is always easier in one direction — toward expanding government's reach rather than shrinking it. Not only do the administration and Congress historically heap layer upon layer of government programs and powers on top of each other, but outside stakeholders contribute to this growth as well. Rausch cites economist Mancur Olson, who finds "new interest groups form faster than the old ones go away."

And these interest groups become accomplices in bureaucratic growth. For example, congressional Republicans back in the 1990s sought to slow the rate of growth in the Medicare program. These changes were immediately attacked as "devastating cuts" that would "end Medicare as we know it." Hyperbole sells.

Taken together, all these factors pave a one-way street toward government without end.

Who will say, "Enough is enough?" Some, including Thune, have started that chorus. But given the propensity and ideology of the White House, Democrats in Congress, and interest groups to push for more, efforts without bipartisan support are dead.

Writing in the most recent Ripon Forum, Lou Zickar recalls that a little over 30 years ago, the U.S. Senate approved a bill 87-1 establishing a Federal Sunset Commission to recommend programs deserving termination. The legislation was bipartisan, with 59 cosponsors — 30 Democrats, 28 Republicans and 1 Independent. Its supporters ranged from liberals Ed Muskie and Ted Kennedy, to Barry Goldwater and Jesse Helms. But the legislation died in the House, where a large Democratic majority believed a one-way street of government expansion served their political interests.

Without an exit strategy, like the Thune bill, congressional, bureaucratic and stakeholder/interest group inertia will mean programs live and grow forever. Zickar also writes about an idea proposed by political scientist Theodore Lowi to curb this near unstoppable pattern of governmental growth.

In his book, "The End of Liberalism," Lowi recommends a "Tenure-of-Statute" act, requiring any law that created a federal agency to expire in five-to-10 years.

Thune's idea about the government divesting itself of private companies is a good start. But based on the rate at which Obama and Democrats in Congress are enlarging Washington's reach, the South Dakota senator may want to review Professor Lowi's book and expand the exit strategy.

What I'd give for the occasional bug in my salad

Growing up on a farm near Yamhill, Ore., I quickly learned to appreciate the difference between fresh, home-grown foods and the commercial versions in the supermarket.

Store-bought lettuce was always lush, green and pristine, and thus vastly preferable to lettuce from my Mom's vegetable garden. Her lettuce kept me on my toes, because a caterpillar might come crawling out of my salad.

We endured endless elk and venison — my Dad is still hunting at age 90 — or ate beef from steers raised on our own pasture, but "grass-fed" had no allure for me. I longed for delicious, wholesome food that my friends in town ate. Like hot dogs.

Over the years, though, I've become nostalgic for an occasional bug in my salad, for an apple that feels as if it were designed by God rather than by a committee. More broadly, it has become clear that the same factors that impelled me toward factory-produced meat and vegetables — cheap, predictable food — also resulted in a profoundly unhealthy American diet.

I've often criticized America's health care system, and I fervently hope that we're going to see a public insurance option this year. But one reason for our health problems is our industrialized agriculture system, and that should be under scrutiny as well.

A terrific new documentary, "Food, Inc.," playing in cinemas nationwide, offers a powerful and largely persuasive diagnosis of American agriculture. Go see it, but be warned that you may not want to eat for a week afterward.

(It was particularly unnerving to see leftover animal bits washed over with ammonia and ground into "hamburger filler." If you happen to be eating a hamburger as you read this, I apologize.)

"The way we eat has changed more in the last 50 years than in the previous 10,000," Michael Pollan,

the food writer, declares in the film.

What's even more eerie is the way animals are being re-engineered. For example, most Americans prefer light meat to dark, so chickens have been redesigned to produce more white meat by growing massive breasts that make them lopsided. Who knew that breast augmentation was so widespread in chicken barns?

"When they grow from a chick and in seven weeks you've got a 5 1/2-pound chicken, their bones and their internal organs can't keep up with the rapid growth," explained Carole Morison, a Maryland chicken farmer who allowed the film crew into her barns. "A lot of these chickens here, they can take a few steps and then they plop down. It's because they can't keep up with all the weight that they're carrying."

Huge confinement operations for livestock and poultry produce very cheap meat and eggs. But at what cost?

The documentary introduces us to Barbara Kowalczyk, whose 2 1/2-year-old child, Kevin, went from healthy to dead in 12 days, after he ate a hamburger tainted with E. coli bacteria. Even after his death, it took weeks for the tainted meat to be recalled.

"Sometimes it seems that industry was more protected than my son," Kowalczyk complains.

She has a point. Agribusiness companies exercise huge political influence, and industry leaders often fill regulatory posts. The Food and Drug Administration consequently dozed, and the number of food safety inspections plunged.

There is some evidence that pathogens, including E. coli, become much more common in factory farming operations. Move feedlot cattle out to a pasture for five days, and they will lose 80 percent of the E. coli in their gut, the film says. And the massive routine feeding of antibiotics to farm animals is a disgrace that reduces the effectiveness of antibiotics in treating sick humans.

Pathogens are now seeping into the unlikeliest foods. On Friday, the FDA advised consumers not to eat Nestle cookie dough — cookie dough! — because of concerns about E. coli contamination, after reports of illness in 28 states.

American agribusiness truly is wondrous. When I moved back to the United States after years of living in China, I remember visiting a supermarket and feeling a near-religious awe. Yet one consequence of this wondrous system is that unhealthy calories are cheaper than nutritious ones: Think of the relative prices of Twinkies and broccoli. We even inflict unhealthy food on children in the school lunch program, and one in three Americans born after 2000 is expected to develop diabetes.

The solutions aren't simple, and may involve paying more for what we eat, although we may save some of that in reduced health costs for diabetes and heart disease. In any case, "Food, Inc." notes that we as consumers do have power. "You can vote to change the system," it declares, "three times a day."

Fed scales back emergency lending programs

Changes are first step to scale back efforts to prop up financial system

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve took the first step Thursday toward winding down the numerous emergency lending programs it launched last fall at the height of the financial crisis.

The Fed will allow one program intended to support money market mutual funds to lapse by Oct. 31, and is reducing the amount it will lend to banks under two others.

The Fed also is extending through Feb. 1, 2010, five other programs scheduled to expire Oct. 31. That includes swap lines with 14 central banks that enable them to provide dollars to their financial systems in exchange for giving the Fed foreign currencies.

The changes are the first by the central bank designed to scale back its efforts to support the financial system. The Fed pumped trillions of dollars into commercial and investment banks through an alphabet-soup of emergency programs as the banks hoarded cash and refused to lend to each other and consumers late last year.

At the same time, the Fed is moving cautiously. The program that will end in October hasn't actually been used, and the programs being scaled back have seen much less demand from banks in recent months.

The Fed says the moves reflect its view that "financial markets have improved in recent months, but market functioning in many areas remains impaired" and likely will be "strained for some time."

The Fed said it will allow the Money Market Investor Funding Facility to expire Oct. 31. The program was part of the government's efforts last fall to prevent a run on money market mutual funds, after one fund saw its shares fall below $1 in the wake of Lehman Brothers' collapse in September.

The Fed facility, which was never used, was intended to reassure investors that money funds would be able to fully redeem their investments, by allowing the funds to sell assets to the central bank.

The Fed also said it will reduce the maximum amount it will lend under the Term Auction Facility, which provides one-month loans to banks, to $500 billion from $600 billion.

The Fed has lent $336.6 billion under the TAF, down from a peak of $493.1 billion in March.

The Term Securities Lending Facility, which allows investment banks to borrow the Fed's Treasury securities in exchange for riskier mortgage-backed securities and corporate bonds, also is being scaled down.

The maximum amount outstanding under that program will drop to $75 billion from $200 billion. The use of that program has dropped to $15.75 billion from a peak of $233.6 billion in October.

Jobless claims rise, but economy shrinks at slower pace than expected

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Despite persistent layoffs, the economy seems to be faring better than it was at the start of the year.

The Labor Department said Thursday that new jobless claims jumped unexpectedly last week. And the number of people continuing to receive unemployment aid rose more than expected.

The figures indicate that jobs remain scarce even as the economy shows some signs of recovering from the longest recession since World War II.

A revised reading on gross domestic product — the broadest measure of the nation's output — said the economy posted a 5.5 percent annualized decline from January through March. That was slightly better than the 5.7 percent estimate made a month ago.

Economists generally think the economy is shrinking at a slower pace — about 2 percent — in the current quarter.

The main forces behind the small upgrade in the first quarter: Businesses didn't cut stockpiles of goods as much, and imports dropped more sharply than previously estimated.

On Wall Street, investors shrugged off the unexpected rise in jobless claims and focused on positive earnings reports from home-builder Lennar Corp. and home furnishings store Bed Bath & Beyond Inc. The Dow Jones industrial average added about 145 points in afternoon trading. Broader indices also rose more than 1 percent.

Initial claims for jobless benefits rose last week by 15,000 to a seasonally adjusted 627,000. Economists had expected a drop to 600,000.

Several states reported more claims than expected from teachers, cafeteria workers and other school employees, a Labor Department analyst said.

The number of people who are continuing to receive unemployment insurance rose by 29,000 to 6.74 million, slightly above analysts' estimates of 6.7 million. The four-week average of claims, which smooths out fluctuations,

ConAgra 4Q profit drops 13 percent

Excluding the sale of unit, company reports revenue growth

By Lauren Shepherd
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — ConAgra Foods Inc. said Thursday strong sales of Healthy Choice and Banquet frozen meals and Hebrew National hot dogs helped boost revenue in its fourth quarter, even as profit fell 13 percent due to the inclusion of a sold unit in last year's results.

After excluding those discontinued operations from last year's results, the company's adjusted profit soared.

"We told you we expected a strong finish for the fiscal year, and that's exactly what happened," said CEO Gary Rodkin on a conference call with investors.

Packaged-food makers like ConAgra have shown resilience during the recession despite price increases, but they face some risk from the growth of in-store labels as consumers trade down to save money. ConAgra has changed some its prices in the past year to compete more with private-label brands.

Still, competition with private label and with other food makers has been fierce since more consumers are heading to the store for dinner.

Rodkin said several new products in the company's consumer-foods division has rolled out to grocers led to a jump in revenue and profit. He called the company's new Healthy Choice All Natural line of entrees "a big win" with sales ahead of expectations.

Packaged-food makers like ConAgra have shown resilience during the recession despite price increases ...

Rodkin added that the company was also helped by cost savings, which offset rising commodity costs.

Still, investors weren't enthused with the results, likely hoping profit would best their expectations rather than just meet them. Shares fell $1.09, or 5.4 percent, to $18.94 in afternoon trading.

The maker of Chef Boyardee, Hunt's tomato sauce and Reddi-wip earned $174.7 million, or 39 cents per share for the three months ended May 31. That's down from $201.3 million, or 41 cents per share, a year ago.

Excluding one-time expenses and discontinued operations — which includes the company's now-sold commodity-trading unit — ConAgra's income from continuing operations was 41 cents per share, compared with 17 cents per share in the year-ago period.

Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters, whose estimates normally exclude one-time items, predicted profit of 41 cents per share.

Small firms need midyear checkups

Small business owners might want to put two important items at the top of their midyear to-do lists: get a financial checkup, and do more networking.

Early July is a good time for owners to plan for the rest of the year. But the recession has likely chilled many companies' plans to expand or make big capital expenditures. And many owners have already done as much cost-cutting as they could to help their companies weather the poor economy.

So, many of the savvy owners who schedule midyear financial checkup appointments with accountants or tax attorneys are likely to be seeking other kinds of guidance as well, such as finding ways to bring in more sales. Certainly, there are

Guns not coming up roses

Firearms makers got a boost in sales after the November elections based on fears that victorious Democrats would soon impose stricter gun control laws. But now, that burst threatens to turn into a bust as gun sales slow.

Both Sturm Ruger and Smith & Wesson have been expected to see decreased sales says Cai von Rumohr, an analyst with Cowen and Co. Despite the expected slowdown in handgun demand, von Rumohr says Smith & Wesson's prospects look promising.

He boosted his rating to "outperform" from "neutral," citing the company's strong cash flow, small inventory supply and its recent acquisition of security barrier manufacturer Universal Safety Response.

On Wednesday, shares of Smith & Wesson fell nearly 5 percent to $5.15 and Sturm Ruger slipped to $11.52.

Buhl pool gets colorful facelift

Buhl City Pool Lifeguard Quinton Owens, 16, paints his character, Sid the Squid, on the outside wall of the pool building two weeks ago. After the facility was struck by graffiti, pool officials decided to paint murals on the building instead of merely covering up the vandalism.

FUN IN THE SUN

The Buhl City Pool will hold a raft race Tuesday. Check-in begins at 5 p.m., with supplies to build rafts handed out at 6 p.m. and races to follow at 7:30 p.m. Cost is $15. Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Vinny Picard knows how to turn lemons into lemonade.

After a rash of graffiti left the Buhl City Pool building marked and in need of repainting, the newly hired assistant pool manager decided to update the building's appearance.

"If we're going to have to paint it anyway, I thought, let's do something fun," Picard said.

With less than $100 and a few lifeguards with a knack for mural painting, the pool's restroom walls and floors were brightened up.

"It's not so ghetto anymore," said Jenn Gray, 14, of Buhl, who was walking by the facility June 11 as lifeguards took turns keeping watch on swimmers and painting the outside wall.

Gray said she hopes the vandals — believed by local law enforcement to be members of a gang — leave the pool and other structures alone. Along with the pool, the skateboard park and outdoor band shell were also tagged during the last week of May and first week of June.

"When people come to Buhl I want them to think, 'what a nice town,'" Gray said, "not that we have a gang problem."

Lifeguard Quinton Owens, 16, said he's excited to see his character, Squid the Sid, come to life on the pool building wall where gang numbers once left their tags.

"This was a good idea. It brings a little life to the pool," Owens said.

Picard said the murals are an example of the many changes coming to the pool. Since being hired just weeks ago, Picard has planned a raft race and asked the Buhl City Council for permission to hold dances, movies and other events at the pool.

The raft race will pit teams against each other in building a "person-powered" raft made of 100 empty water bottles and a roll of duct tape.

He's also coordinating a paint-the-pool day when youngsters would be able to paint a picture on the kiddie pool's walls.

"I just want to bring more attention to the pool," said Picard.

Picard, 34, moved to Buhl from the Boise area to care for his aging father. To move, he closed his communications company, which focused on building theaters worldwide and was in business for 13 years.

He plans on bringing his entrepreneurial spirit to the table in order to assist the community.

"Wherever I see a need, I'm going to stick my head in the door and see how I can help," Picard said. "I'd like to be the community events coordinator for the city ... that's my passion."

He knows money isn't in the budget to hire the services he's offering.

"I plan to prove myself, just like you have to do in business," he said. "I want to help bring in money to fund the needs of the pool and other projects. I can pull my weight and bring in my share."

Pool Manager Corrine Bullock said she's impressed with Picard's drive and energy.

"He's been here for a short time but already getting things moving," she said. "All of the lifeguards are starting to bring in some really good ideas to get community involvement and bring money into the pool."

Wobbly walk is not related to Parkinson's disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: I injured my back in a fall on ice six years ago. I had surgery on my back in 2007, with three spacers inserted. I still have one disc that burst and bulged. Could this all cause Parkinson's disease? I ask because my walking is very unstable.

DEAR READER: Your back injury and subsequent surgery are completely unrelated to Parkinson's disease.

The back is a complex structure. Pain often occurs from strained muscles and ligaments following heavy lifting or twisting the wrong way. Other common causes include arthritis, osteoporosis or sciatica. Unfortunately, as you have indicated, it can also arise from a bulging, ruptured or compressed disc, a condition that could definitely present as an instability when walking.

It is important that people lead a healthful lifestyle, as obesity, anxiety, depression and remaining sedentary increase the risk of developing lower-back pain. Exercise such as walking, yoga, mild aerobics and physical or hydrotherapy has been found helpful in strengthening the back.

Over-the-counter pain relievers provide temporary relief for the average person confronting back pain. If there's no noticeable improvement, a physician might prescribe muscle relaxants or pain relievers, depending on the circumstances. Short periods of bed rest may be recommended; however, longer episodes have been found to cause more harm than good. It appears the body prefers to be upright and in motion.

In your case, I would follow the recommendations of your orthopedic surgeon. Be sure to ask whether a few sessions at your local hospital's physical-therapy department

Sun Valley's skate show season opens Saturday

By Karen Bossick
 Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Jumping Joe Sabovcik, who astounded the world when he landed the first quadruple jump in 1986, will kick off Sun Valley's Ice Shows this Saturday in his normal high-jumping fashion.

Sabovcik, an Olympic bronze medalist for Czechoslovakia and two-time European champion, now lives in Sun Valley where he performs in the resort's summer ice shows. The shows will start at dusk every Saturday night through Sept. 5 on the outdoor ice rink outside the Sun Valley Lodge.

This year's show has a new choreographer: Doug Webster, a longtime choreographer for Disney on Ice, said Lana Breazeale, Sun Valley's director of recreation. But ice show fans can expect much of the same pizzazz they have come to know with flaming hula hoops and other flashy acts.

Esther Boyd, who now lives in Bellevue, said she and her husband Johnie used to drive from Jerome to Sun Valley to watch Sonja Henie skate at Sun Valley. The ice shows were simple then, she said.

"They just skated," she said. "I went last year and they're very elaborate now."

Andrea Nelson and her family go three or four times a summer, often taking visiting friends and family.

"We've probably seen 50 ice shows over the years and we love them. They're magical," said the Hailey woman. "And my daughter is mesmerized. I can look at her face and see she's imagining being one of the skaters."

This year the traditional dinner buffet is replaced by a gourmet dessert buffet.

With the desserts, the show costs $62 per person. Tickets are $32, $47 and $52 for the ice show only. Reservations: 1-888-622-2108, 622-2135 or seats.sunvalley.com.

Sun Valley has yet to schedule two of the shows, said Kate Randall, a public relations specialist for Sun Valley.

Karen Bossick may be reached at kbossick@cox-internet.com or 208-578-2111.

Sun Valley's Summer Ice Shows, paired with a new dessert buffet, will kick off their season Saturday.

Burley festival highlights Mini-Cassia musicians

By Judy Albertson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Mini-Cassia residents can support local talent at the first River Front Festival, beginning at 6 p.m. July 4 at Morey's Steak House Patio Event Center in Burley.

Performers include Eric Pena, Chris Anderson, Eric Livermore, Lindsay Razee, Laio and Aaron N. Golay.

Advance tickets may be purchased at any Mr. Gas station for $8. Tickets purchased at the door will be $10, and $3 for children 12 and younger. A portion of the proceeds will go to the Mini-Cassia Shelter for Women and Children and a hotline. Information: 650-8569.

Livermore graduated from Burley High School in 2007 and just finished his second year at College of Southern Idaho. He is majoring in general business management and hopes to open a coffee shop and venue to host acoustic shows. Livermore started playing guitar in eighth grade and is self-taught.

"I try to write things that make people think about who they are and things they have been through. It's never bad to think back on memories or past loves," he said.

Livermore said he's excited for the opportunity to share his music at the festival.

"It's going to be a great show, and there is no doubt in my mind that Morey's is the place to be on the Fourth," he said.

Razee, 23, has a unique vocal styling that is not mainstream. The singer-songwriter recently wrote two songs and is working on more.

She began singing and playing guitar at age 14 to impress boys. In 2002, she toured the southwestern U.S. with Continental Singers. By age 17 she was competing in karaoke and singing contests and performing at county fairs and weddings. Razee also recorded three songs with Ambiance Entertainment in Burley. More recently, she performed at Bent Bean in Burley.

Razee auditioned for American Idol in Seattle in 2006 and again in Salt Lake City in 2008. She currently sings at Warren House once a month.

Laio — who performs under a single name — was raised in Boise and moved to the Burley area in 2004. Music was a part of her family, and her mother and grandmother were influences in her singing career. She plays piano, guitar and bass. She has been singing on stage since age 5 and writing music since 14.

"I think that if it's possible, I have been a musician for the whole 25 years I have been alive," Laio said.

Laio is signed with Steel String Music Group, an independent label out of Nashville, Tenn. She will play July 16 at the BB King Blues Festival in Nashville.

"Everyone automatically thinks country music when they think Nashville; however, just to let you all know, I am a rocker through and through," Laio said.

The event is sponsored by Blue Link Entertainment, Ryan Thomas Photography and Morey's Steak House.

Fine tenors, innovative strings

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Eight very unusual violins will blend with three bold voices on Sunday when the Sun Valley Opera presents "Three Tenors Accompanied by Eight Strings."

The San Diego-based Hutchins Consort will perform on eight scaled violins ranging in size from a tiny treble to a 7-foot contrabass violin. And three tenors who were handpicked by the man who did the arranging for the original Three Tenors will add their voices.

"It should be a fun sound. It'll give more depth than we've had before," said Ketchum resident Frank Meyer, who co-founded the opera with Ketchum resident Marsha Ingham.

The concert, which will feature both operatic and Broadway favorites, will take place at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the new Sun Valley Pavilion. General admission tickets are $25, $45 and $75. Children under 18 are admitted free; students 18 and older receive a $10 discount.

And diva tickets — $125 and up — include a party in a private home on Fairway Road with the guest artists from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Saturday and front-center seating during the concert.

The Hutchins Consort musicians had to develop new techniques to play the instruments designed and built by famed stringed instrument maker and acoustical scientist Carleen Hutchins.

She was the first to successfully create an acoustically balanced set of instruments that sound like violins across the entire range of written music. The result: an astonishing palette of sounds as they play music ranging from that of the Middle Ages and Renaissance to the music of the modern masters.

For her effort, Hutchins received an Honorary Fellowship from the Acoustical Society of America, an award given only 17 times since it was first presented in 1929 to Thomas Alva Edison.

"This is an extraordinary group, I think, with quite a story about their instruments," said Sun Valley resident Rae DeVito.

The three international tenors — Dennis McNeil, Eduardo Villa and Jose Medina — are modeled after the original three tenors — Luciano Pavarotti, Placido Domingo and Jose Carreras — whose concert at Rome's Baths of Caracalla in 1990 was watched by more than 800 million viewers worldwide. A subsequent album became the biggest-selling classical album in history, setting a Guinness World Record as it outsold Elvis and The Rolling Stones.

Lalo Schifrin, the composer who arranged the music for that first concert and subsequent concerts by the original Three Tenors, hand-selected the three tenors who will perform Sunday evening to perform his works.

McNeil debuted with the New York City Opera in 1993, has performed for five U.S. presidents and is equally comfortable singing Irish folk music, Nikos and Broadway legend John Raitt's "Zorba." Medina also debuted with New York City Opera and has performed throughout Europe and Latin America where he is artistic director of Tijuana Opera. And Villa is one of the world's most sought-after tenors and a regular guest of the Metropolitan Opera.

Selections will include "Granada," "Besame Mucho" and "La Donna e Mobile" from "Rigoletto," as well as popular Broadway tunes such as Leonard Bernstein's "Maria" and "Tonight," Richard Rodgers' "Some Enchanted Evening," Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Memory," "Luck be a Lady," "Impossible Dream" and "Ozark Swamp Gas."

Ingham, who hosted the first Sun Valley Opera performance eight years ago in her living room, said she can't wait to hear what will be the premiere of an international tour by the two groups in the new 1,500-seat Sun Valley Pavilion.

"We'll have three of the finest tenors in the world with their amazing booming voices," she said. "Then to pair that with strings and a piano — it's all very exciting."

Smooth Caribbean reggae opens concert series in Ketchum

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The Ugandan Children's Choir will be among the acts helping to celebrate Ketch'em Alive's 10th year.

The free Tuesday-night concerts kick off at 7 p.m. Tuesday and run through Aug. 25 at Ketchum's Forest Service Park, First Street and Washington Avenue.

The Ugandan Children's Choir will appear Aug. 18.

"The children's choir brought out a big crowd last year. They were absolutely enchanting. And, of course, each of the orphans came with their own story," said organizer Will Caldwell.

The popular concert series put on by the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau will feature nine concerts, thanks to sponsorships from local businesses and donations to the newly formed Ketch'em Alive! Fan Club. The main sponsor is US Bank, which stepped in after FDIC regulators closed First Bank of Idaho, the original title sponsor.

"We met the funding issues caused by the economic downturn head on, and we'll be as good as ever," Caldwell said. "And I think people are so ready for it after the economic struggles and the rain the valley has been through."

Ketchum resident Jan Mason concurred. "It's so fun to see all the people come out and dance — from the children to the adults. Everyone, it seems, comes out."

The concert series kicks off Tuesday with the Culver City Dub Collectors — the "dub" referring to a smooth Caribbean type of reggae. The group plays a blend of Jamaican roots reggae, Afro-Cuban rhythms and cool, laid-back West Coast bossa beats.

The Ugandan Children's Choir drew a big Ketch'em Alive crowd at last year's event.

Johnson's drummer and the drummer for such soundtracks as "Curious George." The group's debut album, "Dos," features the work of some names that are huge in this particular music genre, including Johnson, snake charmer guitarist Ben Harper, Bedouin Soundclash singer Jay Malinowski and Money Mark, said J.P. Cutler, the band's press agent.

The album was dubbed one of the best "lazy day" records ever by Air-Tran Airways "Inflight Magazine."

Kids from Music n' Me school in Hailey will warm up Tuesday's audience at 7 p.m. The Culver City band will play from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Other headliners:
July 7: Albino Afrobeat,

a 10-piece dance band that played Ketch'em

Alive two years ago.

July 14: Fareed Hague. This Indian master guitarist and his band played their jazz-influenced world beat from India and America at last year's Ketch'em Alive.

July 21: The Heaters, a local band featuring Ken Martin and Mary Poppin, plays classic rock from the 1970s and '80s.

July 28: J.H. Shannan Roots reggae band, a couple of white kids playing reggae.

Aug. 4: Cosmic Beans, a local funk band.

Aug. 11: Dikki Du and The Zydeco Krewe play innovative zydeco.

Aug. 18: The Ugandan Children's Choir sings and swings to a vivacious drumbeat.

Aug. 25: The Bobos, the oldest continuously playing band in the Wood River Valley, plays familiar cover tunes.

Local bands warm up the crowd at 7 p.m. The headliners start playing at 7:30 p.m.

Picnics, low-back chairs and blankets are welcome. Drinks are sold at the park.

Festival: Twin Falls Artist Coalition's Summer Solstice Art Festival

June 20 at Woody's in Twin Falls

I commend the coalition for holding its festival in an arguably culturally dry area, but low midday turnout was disheartening. Although people give the impression they are aware of enormously talented artists that reside here, the movement requires more support. The festival lacked a certain buzz, but talent was phenomenal.

— Nichole Carnell, Times-News reporting intern

Theater: August Wilson's 'Fences'

June 20 at the nexStage Theatre in Ketchum

That the play was a workshop reading was a little disappointing — the actors frequently referred to scripts onstage — but seeing these talented actors, most of them Los Angeles professionals, interpret Wilson's generational epic was thrilling. In the intense second act, Bernard Addison as Troy and Veralyn Jones as Rose particularly enthralled.

ANOTHER FREE SERIES

Thursday Plaza Nights — another free concert series — returns for its third year in Ketchum's Town Plaza across from Atkinsons' Market. And this time there's a small budget with which to pay the bands, thanks to a little seed money from Realtors John Sofro and Bob Kantor.

The weekly concerts will run 6 to 8 p.m. from July 2 through the first three weeks of September.

Up first is Molly Venter, who recently played to a standing-room-only crowd at Sun Valley's Boiler Room.

"She sings a lot of love songs. Her comments on life are kind of clever," said Plaza Nights organizer Will Caldwell.

On July 9, the Wood River Valley's Sheryl Mae Grace will perform her hip, current originals. Other bands slated to play include 4 Stroke Bus, Up a Creek (formerly known as In Search of a Red Headed Stranger), Piers Lamb, Ken Martin of The Heaters, Fletcher Brock, Jerrard Kelly and the Ketchum World Beat Street Band.

Ice cream and crepes will be for sale at Leroy's Ice Cream booth, with part of the profits going to Wood River Valley non-profit organizations.

A book lover's essential summer reading list

It may be one of the few locals who did not bemoan our wet June. After all, curling up on the couch with a good book while the rain watered my lawn for the 10th time was not a bad thing. But now, warm days are here and my reading is relegated to after sundown; already, I am beginning to see that my list is longer than my summer break. So many books, so little time. Here are a few I plan to savor:

One of the summer's most anticipated books will be released Aug. 11, and I, along with thousands of fans, will cheer that day. Pat Conroy's first novel in 14 years, "South of Broad" (Nan A. Talese Books, $29.95) promises to make up for the long wait. Conroy's storytelling talent is legendary, and I am betting this tale, which follows a group of friends growing up in Charleston in the '60s, will prove he has not lost his touch. "He treated the stars as if they were love songs to him created by God." This sentence from the book has me enthralled already.

"The Highest Tide" by Jim Lynch was one of my favorite books of 2005, so I was excited to put his newest, "Border Songs" (Knopf, $25.95) on my list. Set on the border of Washington and British Columbia, the story's main character, 6 foot 8, severely dyslexic Brandon Vanderkool, will undoubtedly become of one Northwest literature's most renowned characters.

Spanish writer Carlos Ruiz Zafon's "Shadow of the Wind" became a word-of-mouth bestseller four years ago, so he has a built-in audience for his just-released "Angel's Game" (Doubleday, $26.95). I was so enamored with the earlier book that if this new one is even half as good, I will not be disappointed. He is a wordsmith: "The whole of Barcelona stretched out at my feet and I wanted to believe that, when I opened those windows, its streets would whisper stories to me, secrets I could capture on paper and narrate to whomever cared to listen ..."

Two other fiction titles awaiting me: "The School of Essential Ingredients" by Erica Bauermeister (Putnam, $24.95). Described as a deliciously written novel about life, love and the magic of food. Yum!

"Selected Works of T.S. Spivet" by Reif Larsen (Penguin Press, $27.95). An off-beat character, a touch of magic, and a cross-country adventure, complete with sketches, unique notes and asides. Intriguing!

I don't usually read non-fiction in the summer, but there are just too many tempting titles to wait until winter.

For baby boomers, 2009 marks the 40th anniversary (yikes!) of Woodstock. There are at least a half-dozen new books marking the occasion of mud, mayhem and rock 'n' roll, but I am going to begin my walk down memory lane with Michael Lang's "The Road to Woodstock" (Ecco, $29.95). Lang was one of the show's organizers, so his account of how it all came to be will be especially fascinating. And the world of rock concerts would never be the same.

I was intrigued by this book's title: "Larry's Kidney: Being the True Story of How I Found Myself in China with My Black Sheep Cousin and His Mail-Order Bride, Skirting the Law to Get Him a Transplant — and Save His Life" (William Morrow, $25.99) by Daniel Asa Rose. A stranger-than-fiction memoir of helping family.

Another captivating title: "Wicked Plants: The Weed That Killed Lincoln's Mother and Other Botanical Atrocities" (Algonquin, $18.95) by Amy Stewart. My first quick perusal had me hooked. After all, learning about a tree that sheds poison daggers; a glistening red seed that stops the heart; a shrub that causes paralysis; a vine that strangles; and a leaf that triggered a war is just too amazing to pass up!

And "Narrow Dog to Indian River" by Terry Darlington (Delta, $15) delivers a hilarious travel memoir. Sounds good so far, but when I learned the "travel" was in an English narrowboat 1,100 miles through the Intracoastal Waterway from Virginia to Florida, I knew I had to step on board. I am a seasoned armchair traveler, after all.

Judi Baxter owned and operated Judi's Bookstore in Twin Falls from 1978 to 1992. From 2000 to 2004 she wrote a twice-weekly column for Publisher's Weekly's online edition called "Reviews in the News."

What happens when a fairy tale goes wrong?

By Judy Albertson
 Times-News writer

RUPERT — Once again the Wilson Theatre will kick off Rupert's Fourth of July celebration with the comedy vaudeville spoof "The Final Dress Rehearsal," by American playwright Jack Frakes. Performances will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday through July 3 at the renovated historical theater, at the intersection of F and Fremont streets in Rupert.

Due to construction under way on the stage, this year's performance will be upstairs in the refurbished conference room. Tickets are $5. Reserve at 436-1543.

"We're calling it the Theatre in the Round. And it will give people the chance to see the remodeled upstairs," said cast member Debra Condie.

Directed by Kent Evansen, the spoof on "Cinderella" is guaranteed to be a crowd pleaser.

"The Final Dress Rehearsal" is a light-hearted comedy about a community theater production of the classical servant-turned-princess story. Everything that can go wrong with a small, hometown production goes wrong at the final dress rehearsal: Cinderella arrives late, the prompter wants to play all the parts, the stage crew is noisy and the author feels her brainchild is being ruined. The stepsisters are late on cues, the sound effects are played at the wrong speed. The whole rehearsal is comical chaos.

Pre-show vaudeville entertainment will include great Broadway musical numbers.

The actors: Evansen, Rupert, plays Director; Tonya Ward, Almo, plays Cinderella; Condie, Rupert, plays Authoress; Dale Dayley, Rupert, plays Fairy Godmother; Jo Dayley, Declo, plays Step Mother; Tammy Barendregt, Heyburn, plays Elder Stepsister; Melissa Clark, Heyburn, plays Younger Stepsister; Jim Jolley, Rupert, plays Stage Manager; Levi Graham and Oliver Evansen play the stagehand; Rosemary Barfuss, Rupert, plays the messenger girl; Lynn Brisbin, Rupert, plays the prompter; and Mary Brisbin, Rupert, plays the utility girl.

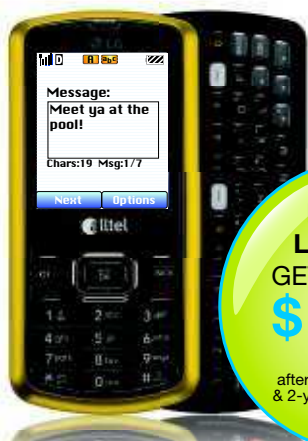

Laurie Jolley did set design.

2009 Idaho Regatta promises a 'magical weekend'

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Four course records were broken in 2007. Five more were broken in 2008.

What's in store for the 2009 Pepsi Idaho Regatta this weekend?

"There always seems to be a driver and a team that emerges out and this becomes their weekend of racing that they've been chasing for their whole career," said race announcer Larry Ambrose. "It never fails that every year at the Idaho Regatta that it happens. It's like a magical weekend."

Ambrose, who is announcing his ninth Idaho Regatta, has become one of the legendary fixtures of the event.

"Larry brings a lot to this event. He makes the races exciting, his historical knowledge is unbelievable, and it's nice to have an announcer that has that much insight to the sport," said Idaho Regatta committee chairman Mark Moyle.

Ambrose can see the magical moments materialize from his view in the booth, but that's one thing he doesn't share over the microphone.

"I don't say anything — it's like a pitcher in a baseball game pitching a no-hitter," Ambrose said. "You don't know when it's going to emerge, but you see it develop slowly as the weekend progresses. Then you get a sense Sunday that a driver is having a magical weekend."

Last year, it was driver

A BIG DAY FOR THE NBA

Clippers take Griffin with No. 1 pick in draft

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Blake Griffin was the consensus No. 1 pick. Shaq to the Cavs was the consensus blockbuster.

On a day of head-turning trades around the NBA, the Los Angeles Clippers started Thursday night's draft with the obvious choice: Griffin, the only player considered a sure thing in a class full of question marks.

Griffin was the consensus college player of the year after leading the nation with 14.4 rebounds per game while averaging 22.7 points last season for Oklahoma. The Clippers said they would take the forward with the top pick just hours after they won the draft lottery last month, and never considered changing their minds.

"The fact is we're getting an incredible player, incredible person, an impeccable work ethic and a guy that we plan on having in L.A. for many years to come," Clippers coach Mike Dunleavy said. "He's going to be a great, exciting fit for our ballclub."

Blockbuster: Cavaliers acquire Shaq from Suns

By Tom Withers

Shaquille O'Neal was traded to the Cleveland Cavaliers on Thursday in a deal that pairs him with MVP LeBron James.

CLEVELAND — One is the King, a reigning MVP who at age 24 needs only a championship to complete his resume. The other is a larger-than-life personality who may be past the prime of his career but remains an undeniable force and hungers for a fifth NBA title.

LeBron and Shaq. Teammates.

The Cleveland Cavaliers executed a monster trade Thursday to unite the superstars, acquiring Shaquille O'Neal from the Phoenix Suns in hopes he can help LeBron James deliver this seemingly sports-cursed city its first major pro championship in 45 years.

The deal creates a tandem that instantly rivals any in sports today and calls to mind some of the great duos in NBA history: Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen, Magic Johnson and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Bob Cousy and Bill Russell, Shaq himself and Kobe Bryant.

More important, if Cleveland's gamble works and the 37-year-old O'Neal delivers a title, it

Venus keeps knee status a mystery at Wimbledon

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Venus Williams ambled onto sun-splashed Court 1 at Wimbledon on Thursday, a slight hitch in her step and an odd-looking wrap around her left knee. White tape here, brown tape there.

Good thing the five-time Wimbledon champion didn't need to run to hit serves, huh? Powered in part by her big-as-can-be deliveries, Williams overwhelmed 73rd-ranked Kateryna Bondarenko of Ukraine 6-3, 6-2 in the second round to stretch her All England Club winning streaks to 16 matches and 27 sets.

Afterward, Williams was coy about the bandaging, saying it was "just for support."

"I really hate tape — like, hate. But I just needed it this time. I accepted that, and I realize that this is Wimbledon. So since it was Wimbledon, I taped," said the American, trying to become the first woman since Steffi Graf in 1991-93 to win three consecutive titles at the All England Club.

Burley's Donnelley Wood Bat tourney begins today

Times-News

BURLEY — Now at the midway point of their Class A American Legion Baseball season, the Burley Green Sox are entering the grind heading toward next month's district tournament. They will get a firm test this weekend as they host the 2009 Donnelley Wood Bat Tournament.

The tournament will be a good measuring stick to test Burley's mettle. Come Saturday night, the Green Sox will have played eight games in five days. In addition, Burley will only have 13 players available. Fonzie Sanchez and Alex Larson are out due to injuries.

"We've got some good teams in here and so I'm going to get a little second wind," said Burley coach Devin Kunz. "Kids are getting their innings. I mix my lineups up all the time, and I want everybody on their toes ready to play at all times."

The eight-game, four-team tourney will feature Class A squads Burley, Bear Lake, Blackfoot and Marsh Falls.

Each team will play two games today, and then will be seeded according to tournament records and tie-breakers for Saturday's games. The tournament championship is scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday.

Winners for championship, 7 p.m.

A perennial baseball power in both high school and legion ball, Bear Lake is considered the favorite this weekend. Like Bear Lake, Blackfoot has older players who are strong and athletic. Marsh Falls is a younger team, pulling players from Marsh Valley, American Falls, Rockland and Malad.

"It's wood bat, so the defense and pitching will dominate because it's harder to hit," Kunz said. "It will be fun, everybody gets their innings in and it's fun hanging out at the park."

Kunz, in his first season as the Green Sox coach, hopes to build the tournament to a three-day, eight-team tourney by next year.

Dad sells family heirlooms to impress new girlfriend

DEAR ABBY: My mother passed away last year, and my whole world has been rocked. To make it worse, my father has been acting like a little boy. Soon after Mom's death, he met a woman. Since then, he has not included me and my siblings in any decisions regarding Mom's belongings — including expensive and sentimental things that have been in our family for years.

When we ask Dad about the items, he says, "They're mine now," or, "You have nothing to do with them." Mom prided herself on these antiques that have stayed in the family. We would like to pass them on to our children and their cousins, but Dad has been selling them and using the money to pay for his lifestyle.

Am I wrong for feeling that Dad is acting like a spoiled brat? Talking to him is useless. He responds like a kid at the playground whose friends won't play the way he likes.

— LET DOWN BY DAD

IN N.Y.

DEAR LET DOWN: Although it may not seem like it, your mother's death may have rocked your father's world, too. It is regrettable that the "mechanism" he has chosen to help him through the grieving process is so expensive he must sell family assets to afford her. However, unless

IF JUNE 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: New friends or organizations could bring some sparkle into your life this summer, but your business decisions could be less than beneficial. Wait until October to look for a job or initiate a career change. In late January or early February, you may make some beneficial decisions or receive a lucky break. Take advantage of the wisdom of professional people, such as a doctor, lawyer or trusted friend, and you will be able to improve some segment of your life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If it seems too good to be true, it probably is. Avoid entering into a new relationship or forming new deals or agreements unless a sound friendship is at the base. A misunderstanding could occur otherwise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be proud of who you are, including all the warts and wrinkles. Conversely, accept others as they are, as well. Be aware that by overlooking certain flaws, you might be ignoring a growing misconception.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Let the naysayers go their separate ways and surround yourself with those who are upbeat. Those who seem to enjoy life and are happy to lend a helping hand are those who could best do you a good turn.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Outward appearances can be deceiving. If you strip away the pretty wallpaper, you could discover a hole in the wall. This is not a good time to go along with the crowd or take a chance on investments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The sea of romance is ever-changing. The waters can be calm, they can be stormy — and other times you simply drift along, unaware that the undertow is sending you in the wrong direction. Get your bearings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What might seem outwardly pleasing could be dull and boring inside. Be careful to verify that a budding attraction is more than just surface appeal. Avoid making crucial decisions or important purchases.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The more, the merrier. Your ability to work well with others could be the key to lasting success. Don't sweat the details, as your charming demeanor will cause people to overlook minor errors and mistakes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Setting the bar too high could be a recipe for failure. Stay within boundaries and don't take on more than you are capable of. A business situation or friendship could be building to a romantic crescendo.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find a lesson to be learned. You should jot down inspiring thoughts and ideas as you are at the peak of creativity and your ideas are likely to have future merit. You are able to get your way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There's more than meets the eye. You may find yourself tempted by an alluring business proposition. This is no time to gamble with your financial security but you could win the five-dollar lotto.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be approachable. A new special someone could be drawn by your magnetism, but be afraid that you are out of reach. Show a companion that you are not an idol to be worshiped, but a friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your head out of the clouds. Avoid flights of fancy and imagination and stick to business or the facts. Assess a new relationship carefully and avoid imagining that it is better, or worse, than it really is.

DEAR ABBY

your mother left a will specifying what items she wanted you and your siblings to have, then they are legally your father's to dispose of as he wishes. Please accept my heartfelt sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: I've been single for a year and a half, and have four children. After 14 miserable years, I finally left my father. He abused me in many ways, which is the reason I left.

He is now in a relationship — and I want him back. Is this normal? I thought I left for all the right reasons, and I never expected to feel this way. I can't understand why my feelings for him are starting to resurface. I thought that part of my life was over.

Is it because I'm alone? Is it because he has someone else? Am I jealous? Please give me some insight. I'm ...

DEAR DEBBIE: Wearing a military uniform to a wedding is "perfectly acceptable," but it would be wise to first ask the bride how she feels about it. She may object because there have been instances in which the serviceperson cut such a dashing figure in his uniform that he (almost) overshadowed the bride.

"Young ladies should take care of themselves. Young ladies are delicate plants. They should take care of their health and their complexion."

—Jane Austen

Alphonse "Sonny" Moyses was a great advocator of playing in 4-3 fits. He may have gone overboard in espousing it, but it is true that players tend to shy away automatically from such a fit without giving enough consideration to its merits.

This Moysian fit, from the 1972 Vanderbilt semifinal, demonstrates that the key is frequently the possession of good trump intermediates.

In one room South played the apparently normal contract of six no-trump. Even on a helpful club lead, declarer was not well placed. Because of the lack of entries to dummy, he could do little except pass the heart jack at trick two. When that lost and the spades were unfriendly, he had to go one down.

In the other room my teammate Jim Jacoby played six hearts on the lead of the diamond queen to his king. He took the spade ace-king and ruffed a spade low. Then came the diamond ace (on which a club was thrown), and the club ace-king. Now, when everyone followed, his slam was cold against any lie of the cards.

He played a third spade and could ruff with the heart king for safety if West followed suit. Then he could ruff a club with the trump ace and ruff another spade with the heart nine. Since he held the J-10-8 of trumps in hand, he was sure to take three of the last four tricks against any defense.

ANSWER: Although you have no serious prospects of buying the contract, the best thing to do is to raise to three diamonds. This is NOT a game-try. If you had extras, you would bid a new suit, so this is a bar bid, just trying to block the opponents and take away their bidding space.
